Cult children reported in 'good' condition

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

DALLAS — Bullets flew and the children huddled for cover. As agents with the bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms battled Sunday with members with the Branch Davidian sect, several children hid under beds. One, a 2-year-old girl, was mortally wounded; said sect leader David Koresh, who identified the child as his daughter. Four ATF agents and two cult members, including the child, were killed and 16 other agents wounded during the firefight on Sunday. Koresh said there were numerous children in the compound and he negotiated with agents to release the children if a message were broadcast on the radio. The message was broadcast repeatedly and children left the compound in pairs. By early today, 10 children had left the compound. "They all seem to be in pretty good condition," said ATF spokeswoman Franceska Perot. She said the children were handling the tense situation without undue distress. The children that were released were aged from "infant to around 11 to 12 years old," Ms. Perot said. One child was treated for about an hour at Hillcrest Baptist Medical Center before being dismissed. The hospital would give no details on the treatment for the child. Some of the children turned loose Sunday were carrying notes written by cult members, the Houston Chronicle reported today. They told social workers and therapists Monday that bullets were whizzing through windows and walls and they feared they would be killed with their families, the newspaper said. "When the children came out, parents sent with them grandparents' names and the names of the children, so we have some identifying information on the children that we have," said Karen Eells, regional director of the state's Child Protective Services. They were taken to a special shelter away from the area, she said. "They've been through a terrible crisis. They've all been real graphic about hearing the gunfire and hiding under the bed," said Eells. It was uncertain how many children

The Dallas Morning News/Via AP remained inside the compound. About one third of the approximately 75 people in the compound are children, authorities have said.

Construction has begun on two bridges northwest of Big Spring. The bridges comprise Interstate 20 as it crosses the Sulphur Draw area. Rebuilding the bridges, replacing deck plates and adding safety shoulders, should take about a year.

I-20 bridges scheduled for re-building

By GARY SHANKS
Staff Writer

Two Interstate 20 bridges between West Business Interstate 20 and Texas Highway 176 (Andrews Highway) will undergo a multi-million dollar rebuild as part of the Texas Department of Transportation's area construction package.

The two bridges, where Interstate 20 crosses the Sulphur Draw area, will have extensive repair and widening, said David Elmore, an engineer with the Big Spring DOT office.

Preparatory work began Monday. Crews will replace deck plates and add safety shoulders to the east-and-west bridges.

When actual dismantling and rebuilding begins, traffic will be detoured from the bridge under construction to the other bridge, he added. Therefore, all Interstate 20 traffic will be compressed to two lanes as it crosses the area.

Completion of the $2,855,857 project is expected in about a year, Elmore said.

The DOT granted the project to Strickland & Knight Inc., a Big Spring contracting firm.

Other projects in the local package include the extension of FM 700 from Texas Highway 350 (Snyder Highway) through to U.S. 87.

North of the city, U.S. 87 lanes are being resurfaced and shoulders widened. This is part of the ongoing Texas Highway Trunk System, creating a grid of four-lane or four-lane divided highways connecting each city of 20,000 or more population with interstate highways.

Part of this project, the widening of U.S. 87 South to Glasscock County, will be let for bid, ing sometime next year, officials said. The sections of highway will be widened to four-lane-divided status. The Howard County Commissioner's Court has agreed to purchase

NIE program adds new schools, boosting circulation to 5,000

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

In keeping with the observance of National Literacy Week, local Newspapers in Education (NIE) officials note their program battles illiteracy each school day, promoting reading among youth.

NIE, in its third year, has built a circulation of about 5,000 copies of the Big Spring Herald delivered to area schools for use as teaching tools.

"Teachers try to nurture a desire to read, ultimately, improving a student's reading skills," said Patricia Barr, Big Spring Herald NIE coordinator. "The more (students) read, the more likely they are to develop life-long reading habits."

"Newspapers can be a part of their daily ritual, increasing their desire to read," Barr added.

Most schools receive the paper once a week and teachers incorporate the paper into daily lessons.

The program also supports activities like printing annual curriculum guides for educators with tips on fighting illiteracy and publishing a weekly Mini Page in the Herald with activities targeting youth readers.

In 1992, NIE added four schools to its list of participants due to the program's success.

Stanton, Forsan, Grady, Greenwood and Glasscock schools joined the Big Spring ISD in adopting the program, bringing total circulation to about 5,000.

"The newspapers have become much like a textbook to (area teachers)," Barr said. "They are getting opinions from students on current and historical information in the newspapers."

Pleased officials already planning for Cranefest '94

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

The first Cranefest in Big Spring last weekend attracted about 100 enthusiasts for bus tours and is expected to draw more next year, especially out-of-town visitors.

"It was wonderful," said Marae Brooks, director of the Big Spring Convention and Visitors Bureau, which coordinated events that included two bus tours to observe thousands of migratory sandhill cranes that roost here during winter.

The 3/4-foot brown or gray birds have six-foot wingspans, eat seed from harvested crops during the day and rest in shallow lakes at night. The lakes, including One Mile Lake, provide protection from predators.

About half a dozen out-of-town visitors attended, a low number, Brooks said, because late planning didn't allow enough time to advertise the event outside the area.

"We'll have to start advertising early enough for them to plan trips," Brooks said. "But I think there'll be more (out-of-town guests next year)."

The festival is expected to break even on its $2,000 price tag.

"We're hoping it's a total break even this year and we feel it will be," Brooks said.

Events sparked talk of creating a local bird-watching club, Brooks said. About 10 interested people left their names with Brooks and more are being sought.

"There were a lot of people that said they were interested but didn't leave their names, so if they'll call me at the (Big Spring Area) Chamber of Commerce, we'll get this thing going," Brooks said.

Changes in Cranefest next year may include shorter tours. Planned as two-hour excursions this year, the tours instead lasted 3 1/2 hours.

"Everyone was so interested in everything we just stretched them out," Brooks said. "We might do our tours a little different so we can keep them shorter."

Next year's event won't be changed to late October or early November, as originally planned, Brooks said, even though officials believe Saturday's cold weather reduced participation.

Brooks explained officials fear not enough birds will have migrated south by late October, and thereby not

Pizza Hut changes policy on northside

Saturday, Big Spring's Pizza Hut changed its delivery policy that once excluded the northside.

The restaurant began delivery service in all areas within the city limits, going as far as the northern Interstate 20 boundary, last weekend. The policy change is permanent, Pizza Hut officials said.

Area manager John Solla and local Pizza Hut manager Robert Barton re-evaluated the policy during the weekend making the decision Saturday after driving the routes to the northside, Barton said.

Solla notified the Herald mid-morning Monday about the change. "I went to Big Spring Saturday and drove with Robert," Solla said. "With the changes made in the speed limit and other numbers we have, it was possible."

The corporate office conducts studies on driving times, Barton said. Recently, it has raised the average delivery driving time from four minutes to eight minutes, allowing restaurants to expand their delivery areas, he said.

Video may yield clues in NYC blast

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — A newly discovered videotape of cars coming and going at the World Trade Center parking garage could yield clues to who planted the bomb that rocked the twin towers.

"It's being reviewed and copied," James Fox, head of the FBI's New York office, said Monday. "We'll know soon."

Investigators said theories for the bombing range from a terrorist attack to revenge by a disgruntled employee, and they're still unsure what kind of explosive killed at least five people and injured more than 1,000.

But investigators got a break Monday when they found a security videotape of vehicles entering and exiting one of three entrances to the underground garage before the blast.

Fox did not explain why the existence of the tape emerged only Monday, after days of authorities saying the garage had no security camera.

But he said it could be important because experts believe the bomb was so large it would "test the springs of any car or any van," making it conspicuous on the tape. Investigators have pegged the bomb at up to 1,500 pounds, depending on what type of explosive was used.

The Port Authority of New York and New Jersey said police were also able to collect parking stubs from the garage with the plates of each car written on them, and Fox said the stubs have yielded leads.

The Port Authority operates the trade center. Also, Fox said, witnesses described a pattern of suspicious movements of vehicles near the center before the blast, "activity ... that we find very interesting and that we're following up on." He did not elaborate.

CBS quoted an anonymous source as saying witnesses spotted a truck racing out of the parking lot shortly before the blast. The truck was riding so high on its springs that it hit the garage's ceiling, suggesting it might have been rigged to carry a heavy load, CBS said. The FBI would not confirm the report.

The New York Times today quoted anonymous law-enforcement and intelligence officials as saying they had information suggesting a possible Serbian connection to the bombing, although no suspects have emerged. Fox said investigators haven't decided whether bomb was the work of terrorists. He said investigators were asking the Port Authority about disgruntled employees.

Meanwhile, the center's commodities markets reopened on an abbreviated schedule despite the damage inflicted Friday.

But hundreds of companies that will be shut out of the 110-story towers for at least a week struggled through their first work day since the disaster, scrambling to set up offices elsewhere. The shutdown at the nation's second-tallest buildings affects some 50,000 workers.

About 200 people lined up in the cold to be escorted into their offices to retrieve computer disks, files and the like.

In the bowels of the trade center, the blast area was too unstable to allow bomb experts full access. But they worked the edge of the blast, searching for fuses, wiring, bits of paper or carbon traces. A robot collected some evidence.

In addition, the search continued for two center workers reported missing.

Ali Kamber, executive vice president for a metals and minerals trading company with four employees, said his company lacked insurance for business interruptions and faces losses of $100,000 — "a lot of money for a company our size."

President Clinton declared the city an economic injury disaster area, opening the way for low-interest loans from the Small Business Administration.

The bombing has been a boon for corporate relocators, suppliers of office equipment and computer vendors.

"I'm burned out," said Randie Greenberg of Arenson Office Furnishings. "We're getting orders for everything from folding chairs and folding tables, to coat racks and refrigerators."

At the Empire State building — the target of bomb threats within hours of Friday's attack — some entrances were closed. Bags were searched. Similar procedures were in effect at the United Nations, Rockefeller Center and the Statue of Liberty.

Copycat callers continued to plague police with bomb threats: 95 came in on Monday — 10 times the normal number.

George Holliday, the man who videotaped the Rodney King beating, cradles his video camera after appearing at a news conference in Los Angeles on March 28, 1991. Holliday testified in federal court Monday that his nine-minute tape represents all but about the first minute of King's treatment at the hands of Los Angeles police.

U.S. troops kill Somali man, wound another

Rival clans continue move toward peace

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

KISMAYU, Somalia — U.S. soldiers shot and killed one Somali man and wounded another in the clan war-plagued port of Kismayu, but the violence did not stop rivals from taking another tentative step toward peace today.

Fifteen groups turned in lists of their heavy weapons to U.S.-led forces today, officials said. The submission of the lists and the expected transfer of the weapons to allied control was viewed as indicating the factions' willingness to work for peace in a country devastated by war.

Allied soldiers trying to halt clan warfare have at times found themselves caught in the crossfire. On Monday night, an Army foot patrol came under fire and shot back, killing one Somali, a U.S. military spokesman said.

While trying to retrieve the body, the patrol was fired on again and shot one Somali in the chest, the spokesman said. The condition of the wounded man was not known, and no U.S. soldiers were reported hurt.

Kismayu has been tense since supporters of Mohamed Said Hirsi, known as Gen. Morgan, launched a surprise attack last week that sent rival warlord Col. Omar Jess and hundreds of his fighters fleeing to the outskirts of town.

Morgan's supporters say they only want to regain homes taken when Jess forced them to escape in fighting last year.

An international coalition led by American troops arrived on Dec. 9 to end warfare in Somalia, where fighting and starvation claimed the lives of 350,000 people last year.

The allied military coalition in Somalia has forced Morgan, a son-in-law of ousted dictator Mohammed Siad Barre, to confine his fighters to an area near the Kenyan border and has seized some weapons.

It also has ordered Jess to take his fighters and weapons at least 50 miles outside the city by midnight today or risk attack.

A Somali man gestures toward a Belgian soldier Monday in the southern port city of Kismayu. Tensions in the area have been high over territorial disputes between supporters of Col. Omar Jess and Gen. Morgan with coalition forces caught in the middle.

But supporters of the two rivals clashed Sunday and Monday in Kismayu, leaving five people dead.

Relief agencies in Mogadishu said Monday that their workers in Kismayu were unable to distribute aid for a second straight day because of the unrest.

Previous fighting between Morgan and Jess scuttled preliminary peace talks in January but planning has started for a full peace conference to begin March 15 in Ethiopia.

At peace talks scheduled in Mogadishu today, representatives of Somalia's factions were to discuss a plan to disarm under U.N. supervision and 15 groups had turned in lists of their weapons to coalition leaders.

Marine Col. Peter Dotto, chairman of the cease-fire committee, said the factions are eager to comply in order to present themselves as political groups and not warlords at the peace talks in Ethiopia.

"Some of the lists are exaggerated to try to play up their importance," Dotto said. "But nobody wants to be the last guy."

A deadline for placing the weapons in monitored cantonment sites was likely to be determined today, Dotto said.

Officials said Mohamed Farrah Aidid and Ali Mahdi Mohamed, the two main warlords in Mogadishu, already had turned in their lists last month.

Officer testifies King looked 'crazed, hostile'

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — A policeman who witnessed the beating of Rodney King testified that the motorist seemed "crazed and hostile" but appeared to be obeying orders to lie face down on the ground.

Officer Rolando Solano also testified Monday that his partner, Theodore Briseno, was angry when he returned to their patrol car and that Briseno said of the beating, "The sergeant should have handled it better."

Briseno, Sgt. Stacey Koon and Officers Laurence Powell and Timothy Wind are accused of violating King's civil rights when he was clubbed, kicked and stomped after a car chase in 1991. Solano is not a defendant.

In other testimony Monday, George Holliday, whose nine-minute amateur video of the beating is at the center of the case, said that he missed about a minute of the confrontation while he put his pants on and got his camera.

He started filming from his balcony after he was awakened by a helicopter and sirens.

Holliday recalled that moments before he began shooting, he looked out his window and "saw a black man who was spread-eagled on the car ... his feet spread apart and his hands on top of the car." Solano, also testifying for the prosecution in the second week of the federal trial, said King was on the ground most of the time and more than once appeared to be attempting the face-to-ground position he had been ordered to assume.

As he had during the officers' earlier state trial on brutality charges, Solano testified that King appeared dangerous and confrontational.

"I interpreted the person was crazed and hostile," he said.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Steven Clymer tried to undermine the credibility of his own witness but was rebuffed by the judge.

The four officers were acquitted in state court last spring, touching off riots that left more than 50 people dead and caused $1 billion in damage.

They could get up to 10 years in prison and $250,000 in fines each.

Israelis seal off Gaza Strip

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM — Soldiers sealed off the occupied Gaza Strip today, barring some 35,000 laborers from reaching their jobs in Israel, after a Gaza man killed two Israelis in Tel Aviv in a stabbing spree.

It was not known how long Gaza would remain sealed. But Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said Monday that Israel did not plan a long closure, and the Haaretz daily said it was expected to be lifted in several days.

An army statement issued Monday said the territory was being closed to examine entry permits and prevent violence between Arabs and Jews.

Ziad Salameh, a 19-year-old from Gaza City's Zaitoun quarter, was wielding two knives when he ramaged through a commercial area near Tel Aviv's central bus station during morning rush hour Monday.

He fatally stabbed Natan Azariya, a 28-year-old barber, and a Russian immigrant, Gregory Abramov, 27. Both were to be buried today.

Nine other people were injured, one seriously, officials said.

The fundamentalist Islamic Jihad group claimed responsibility.

Let us pray

Students may initiate prayers at school

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

The school prayer issue has rekindled strong emotions among residents. Because the U.S. Supreme Court in the fall prohibited prayer at graduation ceremonies, local residents and students think they have found a way to pray at the event and avoid a legal problem.

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled in November to prohibit prayer at graduation ceremonies in Lee v. Weisman, stating school prayer violates the First Amendment's Freedom of Religion clause.

Groups like the American Civil Liberties Union have stated the ruling is a victory in separating religious practice from state-sponsored assemblies.

School boards statewide, including a reluctant Big Spring Independent School District in February, adopted the Lee ruling into local policy.

BSISD trustees, administrators and students, as well as area residents, have all voiced disfavor of the Lee ruling.

"Having a prayer at any school function has very little chance of an adverse affect on a person not believing in God," said Glynna Mouton, BSISD trustee and a local attorney. "A reasonable construction of the First Amendment would not enforce prohibiting prayer. It should allow people to exercise their religious freedom without forcing it on anyone else.

BSISD school leaders agree district officials should not initiate a prayer at the ceremony to avoid litigation, but didn't rule out the possibility that a student speaker might conduct one.

"I don't know whether we will have prayer. It's left up to the students," said Donnie Baker, school board president. "If we put prayer on the agenda, we're opening up the board and school district to a lawsuit."

Principal Kent Bowerman, who coordinates graduation ceremonies, said he disagrees with the ruling but will uphold the law.

"I'm in favor of prayer at graduation. It adds some dignity to a solemn occasion," Bowerman said. "I'm going to do what our lawyers tell us to do (and not initiate prayer), but if a kid got up there and (prayed), then it wouldn't necessarily be initiated by the school."

But Austin attorney Joe Cook disagreed. "The northern regional spokesperson for ACLU of Texas said, 'The adults in charge are the ones that have to allow students to carry forward with prayer at a school ceremony. If students were to use their freedom of religion to promote revolution, the school officials wouldn't allow that. " (Schools allowing graduation prayer) are not concerned with the rights of students that believe differently, but they are promoting their own religious agenda," he added.

Students gathered to pray around the flagpole at Big Spring High School in September. The "Prayer at the Pole" event was sponsored by local churches and took place before school began one morning.

A high school student leader said the majority of students favor prayer at graduation ceremonies.

"We're really upset and disappointed with (the Court)," said senior

Brian Brown. "The majority of students at BSHS want (prayer) during the graduation ceremony."

Some school officials and supporters agreed Business Manager Ron Logback expressed his feelings most clearly regarding prohibition of prayer at school ceremonies.

"It's like serving sweet potatoes at a meal," Logback said. "Not everyone has to take one."

Scouts honored at banquet

SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

Forty-two young men, including three area residents, were recognized as Class of '92 Eagles, the highest rank in Scouting, at the annual Buffalo Trail Council banquet Thursday.

The event, at First Methodist Church's Garrett Hall, drew more than 300 adult volunteers and Eagles from the Rio Grande to the Colorado rivers.

Eagles from Big Spring were Jason Helms, Troop 5, and William C. Woodall, Troop 401. From Colorado City, Fred A. Morris, Troop 100, was recognized as Eagle.

The Lone Star District (Howard-Glasscock) was one of only two in the council that earned the District Quality Award. Chairman Tom McCann, commissioner Eunice Thixton and Executive Warren Wallace accepted the award. "You are making a sure-thing investment when you invest in working with boys and girls in Scouting," said Joe Pickle, keynote speaker. "It is amazing that its values are so basic that in 82 years of U.S. Scouting, little has changed in goals of citizenship training and character building."

Pickle challenged adult workers to enlist at least one other adult during the coming year.

Student's art goes to New York

Big Spring High School art students took home awards from the Scholastic Art Awards in Lubbock recently.

Amanda Tijerina, senior, received a Gold Key Award for her sculpture, "Fish of the Nile." Her work now advances to national competition in New York City, with results to be released in May.

Christy Hull, senior, received four honorable mentions for her photography — titled "I'm Gonna Get Ya," "Moonlight Dancing," "No Turning Back," and "Push It."

and "Scottie and Jordan."

Paul McKinney, sophomore, received an honorable mention for his two-dimensional postage stamp designs of dinosaurs.

Works by these students, except Amanda's sculpture which is now in New York, will be on display April 3-10 at the Heritage Museum.

Bus safety contest winners advance to regional competition

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Two local students have advanced to regional competition with their artwork in a bus safety poster contest.

Amber Mayes, Kentwood Elementary, and Jourdan Shockey, Washington Elementary, won overall in their age divisions. The local contest was organized by Howard Stewart, BSISD director of transportation.

Division 1 covers students in grades 1-3. Division 2 was for grades 4-5.

Other winners, their schools and divisions were:

At Kentwood Elementary in division 1, Amber Mayes, first; Cammie Davis, second and Luke Martins, third. In division 2, Jilley Anderson, first and Phallon Crawford, second.

At Washington Elementary in division 1, Joseph E. Bumbulis, first; Laurie Flores, second; and Melissa Pearson, third. In division 2, Jourdan Shockey, first; Cynthia Shipman, second; and Kristi Nelson, third.

At Moss Elementary, in division 1, Tanner Honea, first; David Bledsoe, second; and Brandon Hernandez, third.

Local bus drivers chose the winners on the theme, "Safety is You and What You Do." Regional competition for the two overall winners will be March 10.

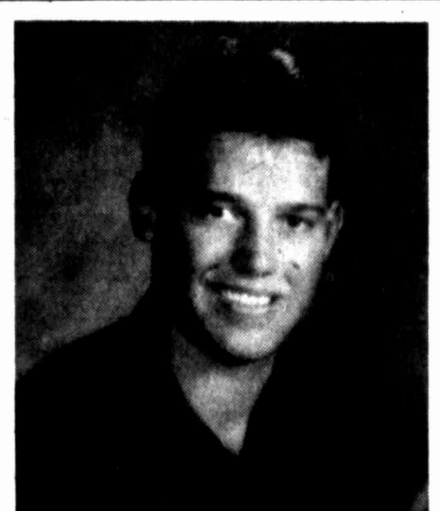

Who's who

Big Spring resident Kimberly Denise Locke was recently named to the Dean's Honor List at Baylor University. She is a sophomore.

J.P. Shanks of Big Spring was recently among a group of Angelo State University students honored at the Southwest Texas State University H.M. Green Forensic Tournament in San Marcos. Shanks, paired with another student, won third place for a dramatic performance.

Four Big Spring High School student council members attended the Texas Association of Student Councils Advanced Leadership Workshop in Hunt recently.

Attending leadership sessions were Betsy Murphy, vice president; Hillary Twining, recording secretary; Tony Taylor, parliamentarian; Shayne Kotara, corresponding secretary; and advisor Sharon Richardson.

RAYMOND JENKINS

Brent Nelson of Big Spring was recently listed on the Dean's Honor Roll at Texas State Technical College in Waco. He is the son of Hattie V. Williamson.

Westbrook High School students won sweepstakes at Robert Lee UIL Academic Contest Feb. 27. Winning students included:

Jay Browne, 2nd calculator, 2nd math, 4th number sense and 6th accounting; Greg Conway, 7th ready writing; Jeff Conway, 1st math, 1st calculator, 2nd number sense, 1st accounting and 3rd science; Mike Martin, 3rd calculator, 3rd number sense, 4th math.

events. Amanda Rich, 2nd spelling, 4th current events; Mayola Jaimes, 15th keyboarding; Shelia Hale, 3rd keyboarding.

Raymond Jenkins of Hobbs, N.M., has been selected to attend the National Young Leaders Conference March 2-7 in Washington, D.C. He will be among 350 high school students from across the nation to attend the event, sponsored by the Congressional Youth Leadership Council.

He is the son of Bill Jenkins of Big Spring and Beverly Doering Peterson of Hobbs.

Students at Tarleton State University named to the honor roll there recently include Big Spring residents Carrie M. Bruton, Lex L. Christie, Vance Christie and Joel Tucker; and Lamesa resident Steve Cope.

PHALLON CRAWFORD

Phallon wrote "The World's Beauty." "The world is a very beautiful place in its many ways. If you sit under a shady tree, you might end up in a daze.

The birds are like arrows Darting through the sky, And the sky is like a deep blue sea With clouds that are made of rye.

When you come to this beautiful place That looks like it's outlined with lace... Remember to love all that you see, Also remember it will always be.

Sarah wrote "An Indian's Thoughts." "I shed many tears for my generation, With all these greedy people in the nation, To think they could be bought with such a bribe.

Now, we shall move along From a place where we belong. We have to go With my soul filled with such woe. We shall now go different ways, Unlike Indians in the olden days. We will move and move 'til we move no more

For all our hearts are torn.

Meet the news hounds

Newspaper Jobs

Would you like to become a reporter someday? Are you curious about the world around you? Do you like to write? Do you enjoy reading?

In the United States and Canada, there are about

- 1,586 daily papers.
- 7,417 weekly papers.

These papers employ about 460,000 people!

Here are a few of the job choices in the newspaper business. We have turned the people into "news hounds" because that is what they are sometimes called.

Reporters

"I like my job because I am paid to talk to interesting people. All I have to do is write about it," one reporter told us.

Executive editors are in charge of the whole editorial or news staff.

Editorial writers give the newspaper's opinion on certain subjects.

Managing editors are in charge of the day-to-day operations of the news staff. They are the executive editors' top assistants.

Sports editors and reporters cover sporting events.

Metro editors assign reporters to cover local events.

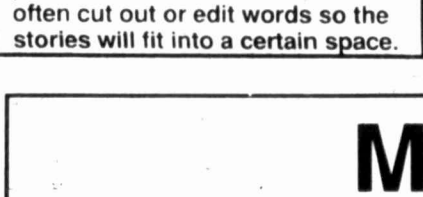

Graphic editors are in charge of the artists and photographers.

Copy editors proofread stories for mistakes and often cut out or edit words so the stories will fit into a certain space.

Photographers take and develop pictures.

News artists illustrate news stories.

Sports

Strike three the crowded goes wild Nolan Ryan got his 5,000 strike out. That's just some of the stuff they say after something happens that is good. For example, Reggie Jackson hit four home runs nobody done that in World Series history. But what I liked was when Babe Ruth pitched a no-hitter, the only one in history. If only Babe Ruth was alive he might do another no-hitter. If I was in the Major League someday I hope I'm like Nolan Ryan or Babe Ruth if I pitch and if I bat I hope I'm like Reggie Jackson.

More Newspaper Jobs

Maybe you would be interested in working for the other departments of a newspaper.

THAT'S A GOOD AD FOR MY STORE! IT WILL RUN WEDNESDAY.

Advertising
Ad salespeople call on businesses to sell ads. Ads that have pictures and prices and advertise such things as clothes, food and furniture are called display ads.

FOR SALE: Girl's bike, like new, 12 speeds, write P.O. Box 121 care this paper.

Classified, or want-ad, salespeople usually take ads over the phone. Classified ads are short ads that are bought by the word or by the line.

Graphic arts
Artists often use computers to create ads, diagrams, charts and maps.

COMPUTERS ARE FUN!

Circulation
The circulation department delivers the newspaper and collects the money.

I MUST DELIVER ON TIME!

Mechanical
Staffers who work in the pressroom must keep the presses rolling and get the papers out on time.

I LIKE WORKING ON BIG MACHINES.

Telecommunications
These experts know how to use the latest technology to move information from one place to another. They work with such things as computers, satellites and phones.

I KNOW HOW SATELLITES WORK.

Cartoonists
Cartoonists draw comic strips. A newspaper feature syndicate makes copies of that strip and sends it out to newspapers that have agreed to pay a fee for the right to run it.

THIS IS CALLED A BALLOON!

Wire service reporters
Many newspapers subscribe to news services that hire reporters to gather news around the world. Their reports are sent by satellite and phone wires to subscribing papers. These stories often have the initials AP or the words Associated Press at the beginning.

I LOVE PARIS.

Cartoonists
A syndicate is a company that sells stories, features, cartoons and comic strips to newspapers. Syndicate salespeople travel the country talking to newspaper editors.

I'LL TAKE IT!

Promotion
Staffers in the promotion department figure out how to promote the newspaper. They often do research to find out what their readers want and like.

WHAT'S YOUR FAVORITE PART OF THE PAPER? WE LOVE THE MINI PAGE!

Business
Business departments manage the paper's money.

PROFITS ARE UP!

Personnel
People who work in this department try to find the best workers for the paper.
