The Big Spring Police Department seized about 17 pounds of marijuana and more than $1,000 in cash Thursday afternoon at the Desert Sands Motel, officials reported. Officer

Police raid nets arrest, pot, cash

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

Big Spring police arrested one man and seized about 17 pounds of marijuana and more than $1,000 in cash Thursday, during a raid staged at the Desert Sands Motel.

Michael Lee Collins, 32, a Howard County resident, was arrested and charged with possession of marijuana with intent to deliver.

"This is the largest quantity we've gotten within the past five years," said Detective Sgt. Scott Griffin. "It's a significant impact for a community this size because we felt all the 'stuff' we seized was intended for sale and would have filtered down into the city."

The majority of the marijuana, seized shortly before 5 p.m., had been broken down into quarter-pound and half-pound packages. Griffin estimated the marijuana's street value was $17,000.

The operation, involving four police officials, was initiated by an anonymous caller.

"Basically, this came up through a tip. We were acting on information received in the last 24 hours," Griffin said. "We were told the general area, and the information was worked up by the narcotics unit which led to an arrest."

Collins, an unemployed oil field worker, is a parolee. He was convicted on burglary charges in September 1989 in Harris County, said District Parole Officer Ron Hensley.

He received seven years for each count to be served concurrently, Hensley added. Collins was released on parole about a year later.

"He is in violation of his parole," Hensley said.

"What they do about it is up to the parole board." Collins' bond was set this morning at $30,000 by Municipal Judge J.A. Marshall.

Chance to see infinity coming?

By MARTHA E. FLORES
Staff Writer

What's it like to see infinity? The Big Spring State Park, Heritage Museum with the South Plains Astronomy Club offer the opportunity to see infinity Saturday at the park's Star Party.

With at least five telescopes, stellar and planetary objects in the solar system and from distant galaxies will be viewed. Double stars, globular clusters, open clusters, the whirlpool galaxy, Jupiter, Venus, Mars and the moon will be in focus at 9 p.m.

In a good position for the party as it moves away from earth, Jupiter is the largest planet and fifth from the sun. Contours of the planet's mountain ranges, bands marking storms and about four moons will be visible. Jupiter is 4.2 astronomical units away from earth. A unit is equivalent to the average distance of the earth to the sun, which is about 193 million miles.

"We were looking into doing more children's projects and we felt this was a wonderful opportunity to involve children and adults in a park activity,"

With a new moon, topography of the earth's only satellite is well-defined, said Wesley Phillips, club president. "It is particularly good viewing at this time with the terminus, shadow-like definition of some of the mountain ranges, visible" he said.

Each club member will give presentations. Club member Elaine Conner will talk about constellation mythology and share native American folklore involving stars.

The event is free to Texas Conservation Passport and museum members. Membership cards must be presented. Park entrance fee is $3 for non-members. Upper picnic pavilion area is designated as the gathering point. Entrance will be closed at 9:15 p.m.

The Star Party is the first event the museum and park have coordinated together. "We were looking into doing more children's projects and we felt this was a wonderful opportunity to involve children and adults in a park activity," Angie Way, museum curator said. "We want to

Texas Legion commander tours VAMC

By GARY SHANKS
Staff Writer

The Texas commander of the American Legion, Ronald P. McCluskey, and other American Legion dignitaries visited the Veterans Administration Medical Center Thursday.

The American Legion is the largest veterans organization in the country, with Texas being the largest of its 50 state and eight foreign divisions, McCluskey said.

The organization, formed after World War I in 1919, has 1.9 million members in Texas alone. The organization is credited with writing the GI Bill of Rights, McCluskey added.

"One of our many duties is to visit the 10 VA hospitals in Texas, talk to administrators, talk to doctors... find out how we can help," McCluskey said.

The organization has powerful lobbies at both the state and national level. The organization pushes for legislation that helps veterans. This includes better funding for VA hospitals, he said.

One of the biggest problems the American Legion grapples with is understaffing in the VA hospital system, McCluskey said. "What good is it to have a $100 million facility if you don't have the staff to operate it?"

McCluskey praised the efforts of VAMC personnel, but said the Big Spring facility is designed to operate with a staff of 500, whereas it employs only 400. "That goes to show how much work these people do," he said.

If not for the VA's many volunteers, patient care could suffer because of this understaffing, he said. The American Legion in Washington is pushing to have the problem corrected.

Another primary area of concern to the American Legion is Multiple Chemical Sensitivity, a devastating and mysterious medical condition effecting some Desert Storm veterans.

Although seven national organizations have defined this condition, linking it to service in the Persian Gulf, the Department of Veterans Affairs has not.

McCluskey told the story of a Desert Storm veteran who sought assistance at the Fort Worth VA hospital when his teeth and hair began falling out. The VA did not offer appropriate care, he said, and the veteran lost his house, paying for treatment for multiple chemical sensitivity.

The man's condition is so severe he must live in a specially constructed "clean room," where the air is free of dust and chemicals.

"The American people, if it were brought to a vote, would not let these men and women who fought for this country receive poor medical treatment..." McCluskey said.

Of the Big Spring VA, McCluskey said the facility has made great strides forward in patient care during recent years. "That's a credit to the staff and volunteers of this hospital."

The Texas Department of the American Legion is preparing for its 75th "Diamond Jubilee" anniversary. At a convention in El Paso, scheduled for July 14-18, the Texas Department will host the Mexico Department in a joint convention. Presidents of the Mexico and National American Legion organizations are expected to attend.

Survivors describe final hours

Koresh sprang into action as walls crumbled

The Associated Press

WACO — As the walls came tumbling down and tear gas filled the air, cult leader David Koresh sprang into action.

He left his fancy third-floor bedroom with all the amenities and began looking around the more sparsely decorated house, making sure women and children were secure and checking that everyone had their gas masks on properly.

As he strode the halls, Koresh saw Steve Schneider, his right-hand man, sitting on the floor listening to a portable radio through headphones.

He was listening to his own impending death.

Within hours, the cult compound became an inferno. Only nine Branch Davidians escaped the pyre to tell how the 51-day standoff ended.

This is their story, gleaned from lawyers who spoke with six of them now jailed on charges that include conspiracy and murder.

Schneider was frustrated. The radio was his only contact with the outside world since he ripped out the compound's only phone line that morning in a tantrum after federal officials delivered an ultimatum.

FBI agents weary of waiting for Koresh, Schneider and the other 93 Branch Davidians called before dawn Monday saying this was the cult's last chance: come out or prepare to get forced out.

They kept their word. By dawn, tanks were battering the Mount Carmel compound, punching for hours at its walls again and again to break them open for the gas to come.

The Davidians, meanwhile, kept to their daily routines.

Strapped into gas masks, the women tended to laundry. Others read their Bibles in their rooms. The 17 children, all under 10 years old, remained on the second floor, by their mothers' sides.

Still, it was hard to ignore what was happening around them.

Each punch from a tank violently rattled the poorly constructed building. Cult members dodged falling sheet rock and doors. Nozzles on the tanks and hundreds of gas canisters hurled in from the armored vehicles were filling the air with noxious fumes.

The flying canisters were more frightening than the more visible tanks. At least one man was hit in the face.

The gas began filling the air, swirling from room to room and floor to floor, driven by heavy gusts of wind through the windows and holes the tanks made.

The currents created deceptively safe air pockets.

Thinking he was in a safe spot, one man slipped off his gas mask to drink a glass of water. In seconds his dry throat burned, his eyes watered and his skin crawled.

Staying where they were, scattered throughout the house they made no effort to gather. But they seemed to be thinking in concert: the government's action was infuriating them all and only strengthened their resolve.

They would never come out now.

Then the FBI sent in its biggest weapon — a massive armored vehicle larger than the others and headed for a chamber lined with cinder blocks where authorities hoped to find Koresh and Schneider and fire tear gas directly at them.

When the tank rumbled in, it produced such trembling it felt like an earthquake.

Derek Lloyd Lovelock (right) and Renos Avraam are escorted by a federal marshal into the Waco Federal Courthouse Thursday for a hearing. Lovelock and Avraam are two of nine Branch Davidians who survived the fatal fire Monday which destroyed their compound at Mount Carmel.

Medical examiner says victims show no signs of FBI gunfire reports

The Associated Press

WACO — A Texas medical examiner has dismissed Washington reports that bullets were found among the 47 bodies retrieved from the 77-acre funeral pyre that was once David Koresh's cult compound.

"There is absolutely no evidence of that as far as we are concerned at this stage," Dr. Nizam Peerwani, the Tarrant County medical examiner, said Thursday.

Peerwani's statement flew in the face of earlier claims by Carl Stern of the Justice Department in Washington that at least three bodies discovered so far suffered gunshot wounds.

On Wednesday, one body was shipped to Tarrant County. By last night 46 more were taken by refrigerator truck to the medical examiner's office in Fort Worth.

The Justice Department assertions raised speculation that some cult members may have murdered the others or the group committed suicide together before Monday's fire that ended the 51-day standoff.

Stern said it wasn't clear if they had committed suicide, were shot by fellow cultists or were hit by ammunition exploding in the fire.

"I am not sure where they received that information," Peerwani said.

Stern defended his statement Thursday, saying that Peerwani's medical team has only just started its investigation.

"They have completed the autopsy on one body," Stern said.

Department of Public Safety spokesman Mike Cox said the 46 bodies recovered had been found in the torched graveyard, included some children. Peerwani said most of the bodies were "soft and crumbling."

But, Peerwani said, none have been identified.

At least six victims were in black body bags by early Thursday afternoon. The ruined compound, as seen by a group of pool reporters from a site about 200 yards away, was a mass of ash, twisted metal and other blackened debris.

Several small, bright orange flags, flying stiffly in the wind marked where bodies have been found. At least nine flags are located on the remains of a concrete bunker, believed to be where Koresh kept "millions of rounds of ammunition" and his precious cache of weapons, according to investigators.

The chamber is also believed to be where Koresh and his top lieutenants were hiding after the FBI began punching holes in the compound and inserting tear gas to force an end to the standoff.

The 12-foot-high bunker, its door burned away, and a rusted water tower were the only two structures left intact by the devastating fire. A pile of gallon-sized food cans could also be seen near the bunker.

Underground fires continued to smolder and caused an explosion early Thursday that sent debris 10 feet into the air, according to Mike Cox, a spokesman for the Texas Department of Public Safety which is supervising the crime scene.

Peerwani said that the one body removed earlier from the site and examined was a man in his 50s who died from smoke inhalation.

Peerwani said many of the children killed in the blaze — there were believed to be 17 children aged 10 and under — may never be found because the blaze may have "literally incinerated their bodies."

Koresh and 85 followers are believed to have died in a fire Monday that broke out as the FBI attempted to force a surrender by using armored vehicles to punch holes and pump tear gas inside their compound. Nine survived, six of whom claim the FBI started the blaze.

ATF: Koresh seldom compared

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — David Koresh had no opportunity to speak to the compound, leader of the Branch Davidians, Thursday.

"Once we had arrested him, he would have been over government control not come off the compound," said C. Troy, chief of the FBI's 11th division, told a subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee.

Even if Koresh, who had ventured away from the compound near Waco, Texas, had been arrested, ATF would not have entered the compound to search for weapons (Koresh's birth name is Vernon Riffe).

Troy and Stephen J. Conroy, director of ATF's 11th division, Feb. 28, 1993, at the compound, which was used for illegal weapons training and storage. Four ATF agents and 16 wounded were followed by a fire that ended Monday's standoff with the death of 86 cult members.

At another hearing, General Janet Reno said the government in Waco standoff with future incidents.

"I think we're going to do something like this," Reno told a subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee. "I think we're going to do something like this," Reno told a subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee.

It has been generally thought that the government in Waco standoff with future incidents.

ATF began investigating the case after a deputy sheriff of the cult was arrested and converted into illegal activities eventually infiltrated the cult. Search warrants were issued, he said.

ATF: Koresh seldom left compound

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Federal agents had no opportunity to arrest David Koresh outside the Branch Davidian compound, leaders of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms said Thursday.

"Once we had probable cause (to arrest him), he was so kinked up over government ... that he would not come off the compound," David C. Troy, chief of ATF's intelligence division, told a House Ways and Means subcommittee.

Even if Koresh, leader of the cult, had ventured away from the compound near Waco, Texas, and had been arrested, ATF still would have had to serve a search warrant to enter the compound, Troy said. "And the people behind Vernon Howell (Koresh's birth name) were just as violent."

Troy and Stephen E. Higgins, director of ATF, defended the agency's Feb. 28 raid on the Waco complex, which was conducted to arrest Koresh and search the buildings for illegal weapons and explosives. Four ATF agents were killed and 16 wounded in the raid, which was followed by a 51-day standoff that ended Monday with the burning of the compound and the presumed death of 86 cult members and children.

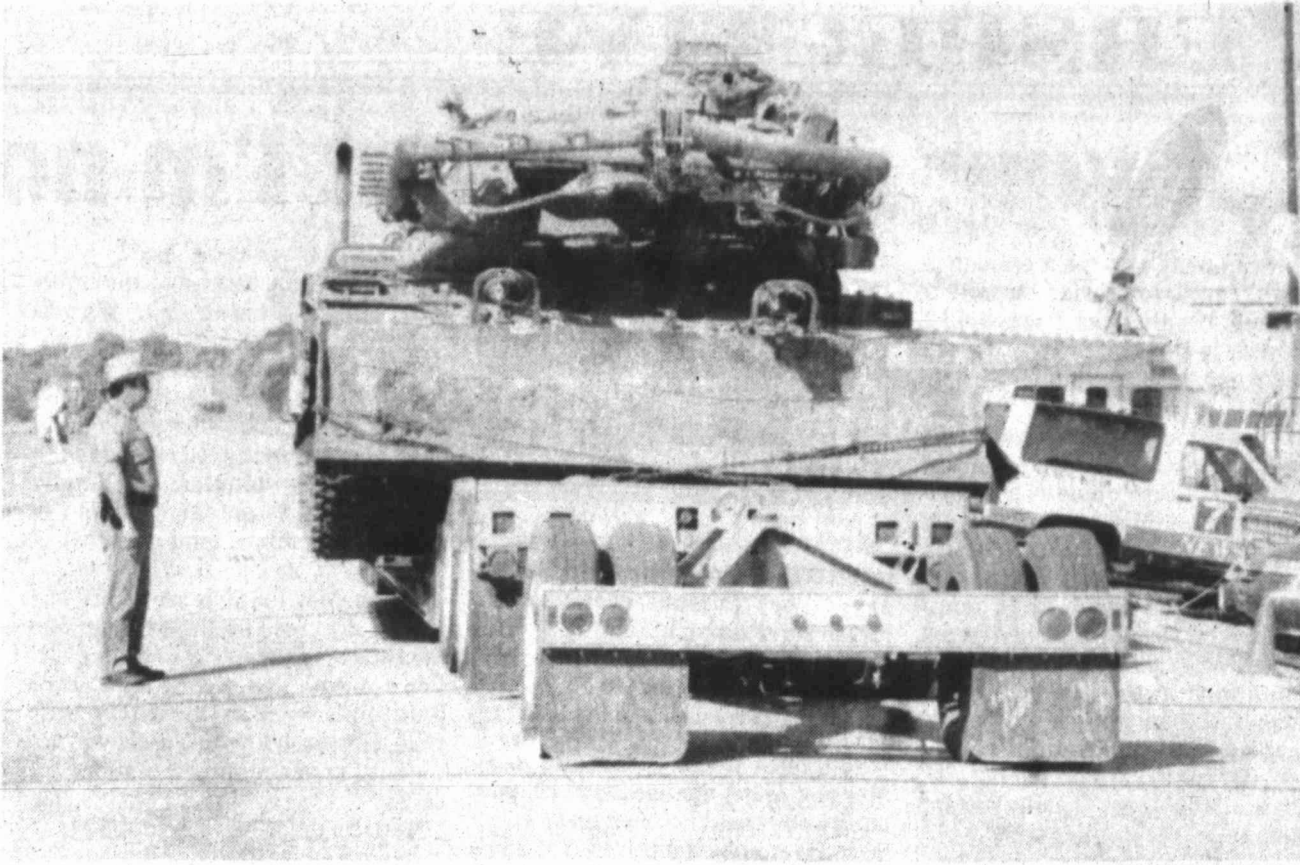

At another hearing today, Attorney General Janet Reno said she hopes the government investigation of the Waco standoff will help in dealing with future incidents.

"I think we're going to see something like this recur in the future," Ms. Reno told a Senate Appropriations subcommittee. "We're going to try to consult with the best experts ... on what could have been done." Ms. Reno said, adding that she will be seeking "an improved, non-lethal means of ending something like this."

In the wake of the fire, some people have suggested the violence could have been avoided if ATF agents had simply put Koresh under surveillance and arrested him once he stepped outside the compound.

"It has been greatly exaggerated how often he left the premises," Higgins said. In fact, he added, ATF never saw Koresh in public after it obtained a warrant for his arrest.

ATF began investigating last June, Higgins said, after receiving information from a deputy sheriff that members of the cult were hoarding explosives and converting legal weapons into illegal automatic weapons. ATF eventually infiltrated the cult but did not feel ready to serve the arrest and search warrants until the end of February, he said.

An armored vehicle loaded on a flatbed truck passes a checkpoint on a road near the destroyed Branch Davidian compound just outside Waco Thursday morning.

Cult member's sister suspicious of Koresh

The Associated Press

RALEIGH, N.C. — A woman whose brother is believed to have died in the Branch Davidian cult fire says most of her family was impressed by cult-leader David Koresh, but she was suspicious from the start.

"He had a very persuasive personality and a very convincing style about him," said Julie Rosa, who went to a Bible study at her sister's apartment about six years ago that was led by a young man named Vernon Howell.

Later, he would be known as David Koresh.

"I felt very strange the first time I ever met David Koresh," Ms. Rosa said. "I felt weird about it after David Koresh took over (the Branch Davidians). I sensed something. The material didn't make a lot of sense to me. And it just didn't seem to go along with what I was taught. And I felt a little strange about that."

Ms. Rosa's brother, 33-year-old James "Jimmy" Riddle, is thought to have died in the fire that consumed the Branch Davidian compound in Waco, Texas, on Monday. Her niece, 17-year-old Misty Ferguson, is in critical condition at a Dallas hospital after suffering burns over most of her body.

Other members of Ms. Rosa's family, including her mother and a sister, had spent time at the compound but left before Monday's tragedy.

"When I first saw it on the news, it totally devastated me. It was like the biggest shock in the world I've ever felt to see that compound in flames," Ms. Rosa said.

Until the siege in Texas, she did not know about the compound or the weapons cache, she said.

But as much as a year ago she believed that Koresh would try to take his followers with him in a massive suicide.

"I asked my mom ... why does everybody have to come out there?" Ms. Rosa said she was trying to get information about the cult and was told she would have to come to Waco. She said her mother replied: "Whenever the news breaks about this, it will go around the world."

Jimmy Riddle traveled with Koresh as he recruited followers from all over the world, Ms. Rosa said. "When the news broke, he (Koresh) wanted it to be international news, not just isolated to the United States."

Ms. Rosa's sister, Rita Riddle, left the Waco compound a few days after a raid by federal Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agents that began the 51-day standoff.

On Wednesday, she shouted to reporters as she left a federal courthouse that "there was no suicide pact." She was charged with conspiracy to murder federal agents.

Court documents allege she was one of five women who aimed rifles at the agents during the Feb. 28 raid.

Sister-in-law Ruth Ottman Riddle, 29, was released from the hospital where she had been treated for first- and second-degree burns and ankle surgery. She was taken by wheelchair into court Wednesday for an initial appearance and was ordered held without bond as a material witness until a detention hearing next week.

Ms. Rosa said that after Rita was released from the compound, she would call another sister, Myrna Riddle, once or twice a week. Rita Riddle eventually said Koresh had released her "because she was supposed to get on the phone and call the news reporters and get publicity and get the message out," Ms. Rosa said.

The Riddle family became involved with the Branch Davidians several years ago, Ms. Rosa said. A member of a Seventh-Day Adventist Church in the Fletcher area told Jimmy Riddle "about a prophet in Texas they should have Bible studies with." At the time, Koresh was a follower of the so-called prophet, which Ms. Rosa identified as Lois Roden.

"I sensed immediately that he was going to be claiming himself to be Christ," said Ms. Rosa, 37. "I sensed that within the first 10 to 20 minutes, even though he had not come out and said."

Rita Riddle eventually went to Waco to live, returning to Asheville to get her daughter, Misty. Jimmy Riddle left for Waco about eight to nine years ago, Ms. Rosa said. Another sister, Regina Goodman, 34, lived in Waco for about a year before coming home. And Myrna Riddle, 30, visited for about a week several years ago but didn't like the heat, Ms. Rosa said.

Chinese police arrest tomb robbing suspects

BEIJING (AP) — Police in one of China's richest antique-hunting grounds have arrested 1,580 people on suspicion of robbing tombs and smuggling antiques, an official newspaper said today.

The China Daily said more than 3,100 antiques have been recovered, including a bronze sword and a tripod from the third or fourth century B.C., and a jade spear that may be several centuries older.

The arrests took place over four months in northwest China's Shaanxi province in and around the city of Xian, a region regarded as the cradle of Chinese civilization. Thirteen dynasties had their capitals in Shaanxi beginning in the 11th century B.C., and the area is littered with the graves of important people who often were buried with much of their wealth.

Archaeologists are so overwhelmed excavating known sites that they don't have time to hunt for new ones. The peasants, however, often know about local sites and treat them like banks, withdrawing artifacts from time to time as needed to sell them on the black market.

The China Daily did not provide any information on those arrested in the recent crackdown.

Former German soldiers charged with murders

KOBLENZ, Germany (AP) — Prosecutors charged two former German soldiers with murder in the revenge killing of 15 Italian women and children during World War II.

The case had been thwarted for decades because a U.S. military officer misspelled the name of one of the suspects.

The two men, identified as Wolfgang Lehnigk-Emden, 70, and Kurt Schuster, 78, were accused Thursday of attacking a farmhouse full of civilians with hand grenades, guns and knives.

Six women and nine children ages 4 to 14 died in the attack on Oct. 13, 1943, in Caiazzo, Italy, said Norbert Weise, chief prosecutor in the Rhine River city of Koblenz.

Weise said the two men suspected civilians in the house tried to help approaching American forces. A third soldier was involved but has since died, he said.

The defendants have made no public comment about the case.

Weise said an American who interviewed Lehnigk-Emden shortly after the massacre misspelled his name as Lehnick. In late 1990, the Italians provided the correct name and investigators turned up Schuster while tracing Lehnigk-Emden, he said.

Cuban defense chief says Havana abandoned

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Gen. Raul Castro, Cuba's defense chief and brother of President Fidel Castro, says the Soviet Union told Havana in 1980 that it would not defend Cuba against U.S. attack.

He quoted the late Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev as telling him, "We can't go fight in Cuba ... do you think we're going to go there so they (the Americans) can break our faces?"

Brezhnev told him Cuba would stand alone in case of a U.S. attack, Castro said in an interview published Thursday in the Mexican newspaper El Sol.

The paper interviewed Castro in Havana this week.

Castro said the exchange took place in Moscow, where he met with Brezhnev after Ronald Reagan, a strong anti-Communist, was elected president in 1980. Cuba was worried about a possible invasion and wanted Moscow to send a message to the new administration.

Border agents seize 8 tons of cocaine

MEXICO CITY (AP) — More than eight tons of cocaine packed in cans marked "chili peppers" were seized from a tractor-trailer near the U.S.-Mexico border, the attorney general's office said.

The vehicle was searched Wednesday on the Tecate-La Rumorosa road in Baja California state, across the border from Baja California, according to a news release issued Thursday.

The haul was called the biggest of smuggled cocaine in Mexico, and slightly more than the total amount confiscated during all of last year, the release said.

The driver of the truck, not identified by name, was arrested. He told federal police the drug apparently was placed in cans with jalapeno chili labels at the Gulf Coast port of Veracruz and given to him to deliver in Tecate.

The news release said eight tons of cocaine would amount to 14 million doses on city streets in the United States, where the shipment apparently was to be smuggled.

"In this kind of weather, wouldn't a heat pump be the last thing I need?"

A name like "heat pump" might be a little confusing, but here in Texas it makes a lot of sense. In summer, the heat pump pumps heat out of your house and replaces it with cool air. In winter, it uses the solar heat trapped in the earth's atmosphere to keep your house warm and comfortable, even on the coldest days. Which means you save on energy, natural resources and your monthly bill. Any more questions? Your heat pump dealer has the answers.

We salute!

The Big Spring Herald, each week, recognizes local persons or groups who have been singled out for special honors or who have helped make a difference in the quality of life in and around our community:

Royce Walker, recognized by the Soil and Water Conservation District for his outstanding efforts in conservation.

Beatrice Morales and Melissa Williams, winners at the state FHA contest, earning a berth at the national competition.

All area volunteers, who give of their time and effort to make life better for everyone. April 19-23 has been set aside as Volunteer Week to honor these people.

By The Associated Press

Here are excerpts from recent editorials in newspapers in the United States and abroad.

April 18 Journal American, Bellevue, Wash., on the Rodney King case:

We're left with two thoughts following the verdict in the second Rodney King beating trial. First, due process thankfully has prevailed. Second, while the nation was convinced the videotape showed that King was beaten savagely and unnecessarily, two juries found the case to be a lot more difficult than it appeared.

The federal jury that handed down its conviction of two officers and the exoneration of two others demonstrated that they acted with care and deliberation in assessing the evidence. Sgt. Stacey Koon testified that he was the officer in charge at the scene of the beating — and the jury assigned him responsibility. Officer Laurence Powell administered most of the baton blows to King's body — and the jury found him to be culpable.

The two other officers played less of a role and the jury found the evidence against them less compelling.

More importantly, the jury appeared to consider just the evidence of the case rather than the implications their verdict might carry. They were not cowed by fear of what a second acquittal might mean to civil peace, nor were they put to undo the "travesty of justice" as the first trial was popularly believed to be.

What (the second) verdict demonstrates is that the infamous videotape of a black man being violently subdued by white police officers on a dark street in suburban Los Angeles in 1991 was more ambiguous than we all thought it was.

Which is why "street justice" and mob rule is no match for our American system of justice, as cumbersome and unwieldy as it sometimes seems.

April 19 The Orange County (Calif.) Register on the Rodney King case:

Yes, probably, a measure of justice was meted out. The Simi Valley jurors ... were under such pressure to return a politically correct verdict that just about the only way they could demonstrate their ownership of the verdict was to contrive one wildly at odds with the worldwide expectation. ... The original trial was televised, all of it, and any of the accused' peers, watching at home and also listening to the judge's instructions, concluded that excessive force was sure enough used.

The second jury, summoned by a politically worried President Bush (who apparently bought into the fashionable extra-constitutional arguments that the double-jeopardy prohibition no longer applies) agreed that two of the cops violated Rodney King's civil rights.

It is well to hope that the verdict represents a turning point in the long history of police brutality, and that racism might finally be expunged from the minds of zealous law officers. But it is ominously inappropriate to invest ... sums of political rectitude in the outcome of a trial as they have done. Indeed, minutes after the verdict was read a prayer of gratitude went up at the First A.M.E. Church (in South Central Los Angeles) wherein someone noted that the Lord "sometimes" does "the right thing." Such language amounts to spiritual surrealism, in which a capricious God, not a continuous source of righteousness, acts as a Supreme Politician. Such exultations of the moment may be excused, but President Clinton's more deliberate words in Pittsburgh, in which he praised the verdict, lent his support unforgetably to the politicization of the courts.

April 19 Augusta (Ga.) Herald on the justice system:

Many of the nation's legal and cultural elites are wringing their hands over the grass-roots support, not only in her community but all over the nation, for Ellie Nesler.

She's the California mother who gunned down an admitted sex abuser of children. Mrs. Nesler administered the five fatal shots while he was awaiting yet another court hearing on molestation charges — involving her own son.

Talking heads, know-it-all pundits and erudite lawyers are again, as they do whenever one of these cases arise (remember Bernie Goetz?), decrying "vigilantism."

The air is filled with pompous lectures on the constitutional protections guaranteed criminal suspects, the rule of law, and the sacredness of the judicial system.

To borrow a shopworn phrase, "They just don't get it." The elites are blathering on about process while ordinary Americans are concerned about justice. The former is fatally flawed when it doesn't produce the latter. ...

Why isn't securing domestic peace and tranquility as important to the ruling class as protecting criminals' rights?

Tens of millions of Americans don't feel safe anymore. Many are afraid to set foot outside their dwellings after dark. They are prisoners in their own homes — and they are fearful for their children's safety at school.

These are the kind of people who cheer the Ellie Neslers and Bernie Goetzes and shrug their shoulders at elitists' concerns about "vigilante justice." That kind of justice looks a lot better to them than what they're getting. ...

Grass-roots America is trying to send a very important message: The criminal justice system is broken. Fix it!

April 19 The New York Times on tax balloons and common sense:

President Clinton's agents have once again floated the notion of a national value-added tax to pay for universal health care. Until he broaches the health plan, though, it is idle to speculate about how he would finance it and senseless to let the financing divert everyone's attention.

As a seasoned politician, ... Clinton surely knows the risk of coupling two major controversies — over health care and a new system of taxation. Indeed, the talk of a value-added tax may be nothing more than the White House signaling that the health plan's cost will be formidable.

Whatever the merit of a value-added system, one thing is sure: If President Clinton proposes yet another new tax, the Republicans won't let him forget it. On this move, all the political signs flash caution. Moreover, the rules of common sense say that before floating trial balloons about taxes, the White House should consult the bipartisan Senate group that is studying consumption-based taxes. If a consumption tax is coming, it should fit in with a considered plan for tax reform.

Got your number, but I'm not calling

The company was nice enough a few years back to provide me with a telephone credit card. I was told I could use it any time, except to call bookies or phone sex numbers. Fair enough.

Having my own telephone credit card indicated to me that my employers thought I was doing a good job and weren't going to fire me any time soon.

The problem with my card, however, was I had to punch in 14 numbers after I'd already punched in the number I was calling.

You punch in the number you're calling, and then you get an electric "baaawg," which signals you to enter your credit card number.

Then a lady says, "Thank you for using AT&T."

I've always wanted to reply to her, "You're more than welcome, lady, but all I did was pick up the phone and start punching numbers. I didn't make any sort of choice here. You could have been Lucky Leroy's Telephone Service and I wouldn't have cared."

Of course, about half the time I punched in my credit card number incorrectly and that same lady would say, "Your number is not valid. Please enter it again."

Sometimes I'd foul it up a second time and she would say, "Please hang up and try your call again."

So it often would take me 15 minutes just to get the telephone ringing on the other end because there were 90 many numbers involved. I've simply never been good with numbers.

I attempted to call my secretary last week using my old credit card number. The phone lady, who must be the only person in the world working seven days a week, 24 hours a day, said, "Your number is invalid, etc." And after I tried it two more times, she still said it was invalid. Did this mean I was getting fired? So I called my secretary, the lovely and multi-talented Ms. Wanda Fribish, collect.

At first she wouldn't accept the call. "Tell Fish-face that I'm on my break," is what she said to the operator. I begged on the other end of the line for a few minutes, and finally she said, "I'll accept the call, but I'm putting him on hold until my break is over."

When Ms. Fribish went off her break, she came on the line and told me the company has a new long distance service and my old credit card wouldn't work anymore. I was relieved I wasn't getting canned.

"So give me the new number," I said.

And she did. Before, I had to remember 23 numbers to make a long distance telephone call. Under the new system I must remember 35.

Thirty-five numbers to make one lousy long distance call.

First, I dial an 800 number. Then, I dial the office number. After that I must dial 14 other numbers. God knows what any of those numbers are for. "This is insane," I said to Ms. Fribish. "I'll never remember all these numbers."

"I'll pin a note on your shirt, Four-eyes," she suggested. This is progress? Remember when you simply picked up the phone and said to the operator, "Hilda, get me the post office."

And if you asked her, Hilda would also give you the latest gossip she picked up listening in on other callers.

Today, I've got to remember 35 numbers to make a call and I've got to watch the Nightly News for 30 minutes to get the latest gossip.

Just to be certain this wasn't some sort of trick and I was really getting fired, I had Ms. Fribish switch me to personnel to see if I was still on the payroll.

The lady in personnel said she couldn't look it up with just my name. She had to have my employee number.

I hung up. If the check doesn't come in next week, I'll know my number is up.

Gary Shanks

Well, after a week of every Tom, Dick and Harry saying how the Waco standoff should have been handled, you'll be pleased to know — that's not what I'm going to write about.

Maybe it's something in the air, but everybody's got their backs up around this town. I had an 80-year-old, blue-haired lady flip me the finger in traffic. OK, maybe not.

But it seems like there's a lot of irritable people around these days.

The winds of spring have died down, we're getting some beautiful days — everybody take some time out and look around. It ain't all that bad.

Everyone do your relaxation breathing. Deep, slow breaths. In through the nose and out through the mouth. In through the nose and out through the mouth.

(Narrated by Mr. Rogers) It's a beautiful day in the neighborhood.

Hello boys and girls. Today, we're going to talk about relaxation. Can you say that? Relaxation.

I knew you could. One way to relax is to go to your doctor and get special medication. But if you take too many of these tablets, you'll go to the Magic Kingdom. Can you say tranquilizers?

I knew you could. The best way to relax is to visualize special places. Can you say visualize? Sure.

OK. Now we're going to visualize some rolling hills, covered with green, green grass. On the top of the hill closest to us is a big willow tree.

A gentle breeze is lightly blowing the willow tree's limbs back and forth. Can you say peaceful?

Sure you can. We move to the top of the hill and sit in the cool shade of the willow tree. There's a nest of young robins in the branches above us. You can hear them saying, "Cheep chirp — cheep chirp."

As we sit in the cool shade of the willow tree, we look out over a verdant meadow.

Can you say verdant? It means green with growing plants. Sure.

You can hear the call of a hawk in the distance. The sound doesn't bother the robins, though. They are safe here in the cool shade of the willow tree.

It's very pleasant here. You sit on the soft green grass and lean against the willow tree. It's bark feels good through your shirt.

This is a special place. Sure. To your right, you see a squirrel. He watches you closely as he gathers seeds from a small plant. You stay still and quiet because you don't want to frighten the little squirrel.

Slowly you turn your head to the right and you see six federal agents with guns aimed at you. You remember you cheated on your income tax return. You get up to run and realize scorpions have crawled all over you.

(Narrated by Rod Serling) Enter the nightmare world of a young writer.

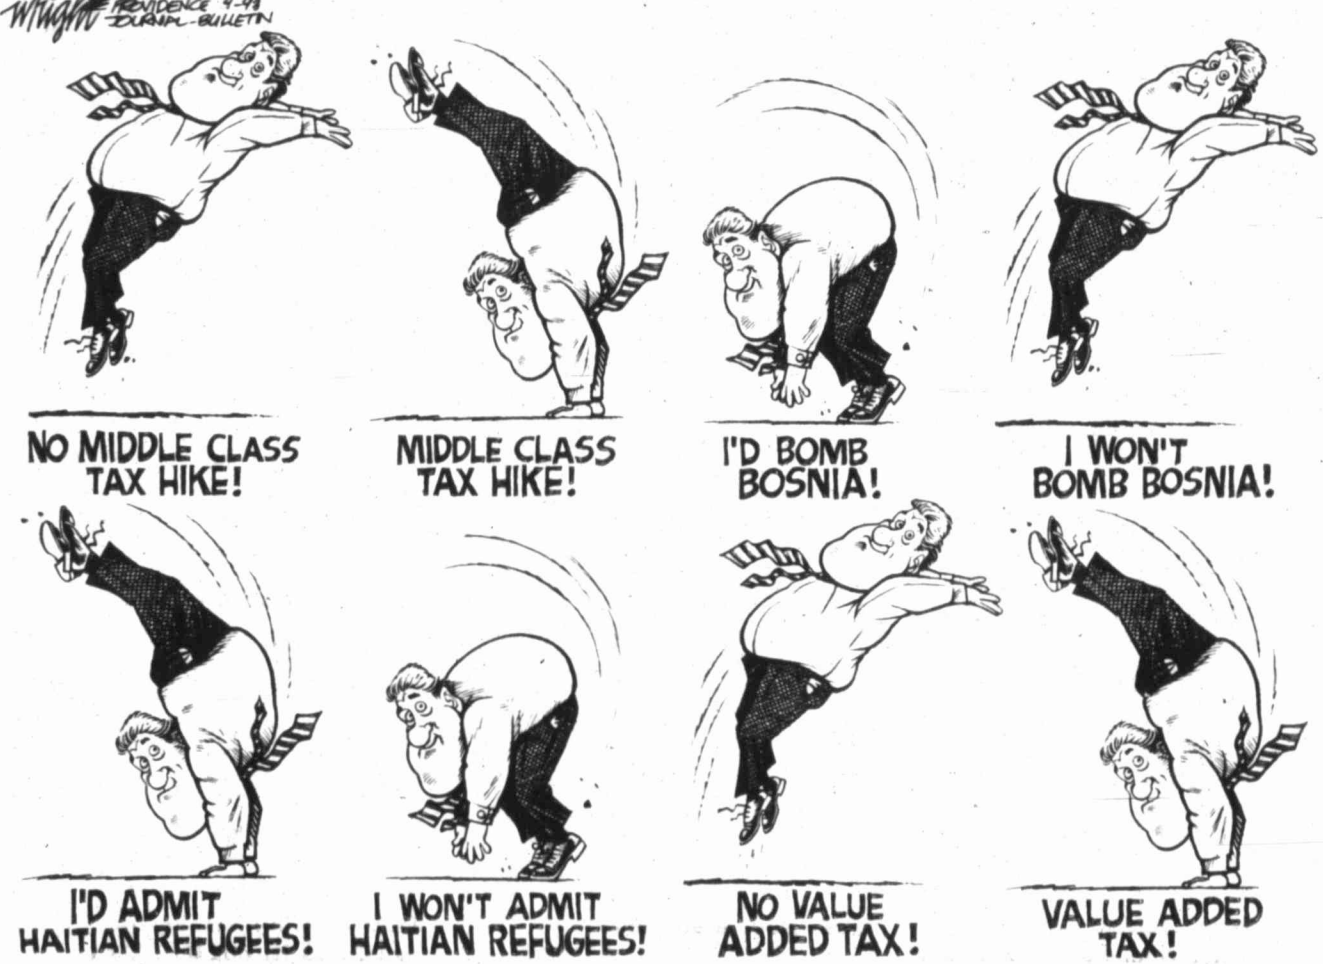

He has lost control of both his fingers and his mind. He is worried about things he cannot control, evils he has not committed and personality conflicts at work.

The stress of everyday life, has pushed him over the edge — into his own, personal, twilight zone. ... (Mr. Rogers punches Rod Serling in the eye and regains control of narration)

My! That was an unpleasant man. Can you say psychopath? Sure you can.

Well, it's going to be difficult to get back to our special place. I think I'll have a glass of warm milk and lay down.

Goodbye neighbor.

Question and answer about cliches

Question: Why do so many writers stick with cliches?

Answer: They're lazy. They lack the imagination to create fresh phrases, so they fall back on stale ones.

Question: Would you list a few stale ones?

Answer: Frances Peters of Franklin, N.C., has provided a basic list. It includes: Pleased as Punch, take the edge off, ace in the hole, ace up his sleeve, sowing his wild oats, her face would stop a clock, blind as a bat, caught with his pants down, put his foot in his mouth, has a yellow streak, chickens come home to roost, don't cry over spilt milk.

Also: at the drop of a hat, well-heeled, chip off the old block, two peas in a pod, pig in a poke, cat got his tongue, long in the tooth, nuttier than a fruitcake, skating on thin ice, eating humble pie, throwing in the towel.

Also: like a ton of bricks, sharp as a tack, in the catbird seat, put out his lights, her crowning glory, snug as a bug in a rug, it's for the birds, running on empty, hitting the nail on the head, hitting the books, cooking the books, lowering the boom, going down the tubes, having an ax to grind, and turning over a new leaf.

Mrs. Peters' list is only the tip of an iceberg. It barely scratches the surface. She did not mention the item that is selling like hotcakes. She did not give us a bottom line. At this point in time her list will do for starters, but you can bet your bottom dollar that she left out the most irritating of all cliches, which is: IT REMAINS TO BE SEEN.

Is there a more stupid phrase in the English language? None comes to mind. It is portentous. It is banal. It pretends to be a sage and measured conclusion. It is in fact silly. One moment's reflection will tell us that everything under moon or sun, from this split second until the end of time, "remains to be seen."

The phrase crops up everywhere. It appeared in a concurring opinion by Justice Clarence Thomas in June: "The consequences for defendants of our decision remain to be seen."

That's right, Mr. Justice, that's right. Newsweek gave us an incisive observation in November: "It remains to be seen which of his many good intentions Clinton plans to move on first." What a novel thought!

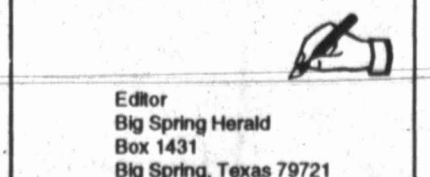

USA Today offered a piece of profound wisdom in December: "It remains to be seen if Clinton's appetite for mingling with the public remains strong should his popularity decline." What a stunning conclusion!

The Wall Street Journal fell from grace in February. You have to stand in awe of editorial writing at this level: "Whether the Democrats in Congress are universally operating out of such deep reservoirs of antipathy for every jot and tittle of the recent economic tradition remains to be seen." How about that! Every jot? And every tittle too!

Serbs unlikely to endorse plan

The Associated Press

BANJA LUKA, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Amid increasing calls for Western military intervention, Serb leaders were sending conflicting signals on the prospects for peace in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Top-ranking Bosnian Serb officials were to meet today to reconsider a peace plan that would strip them of a large chunk of the land they captured in the year-old Bosnian war and dash their dreams of a Greater Serbia.

Yugoslav leaders hinted at possible acceptance of the plan at the meeting today in Bosanski Novi, northwest of Banja Luka on the Bosnian-Croatian border. But hardliners in the self-proclaimed Bosnian Serb parliament are sticking to the firm "no" they delivered on April 3.

Another rejection of the proposal would lead to tough new sanctions against Yugoslavia, the Serbs' patrons, beginning Monday, and could provoke Western military intervention.

In Washington, 12 State Department specialists on Bosnia sent Secretary of State Warren Christopher a letter saying Western diplomacy had failed and suggesting the use of force. The New York Times reported today.

The U.S. envoy to the United Nations, Madeleine Albright, also urged the White House to approve air strikes — despite European opposition, the paper also reported. The paper did not say when the letters were sent.

Air strikes are a hotly contested issue both within the Clinton administration and among the allies right now.

While Serb leaders fought over whether to approve the peace plan, Muslims and Croats, nominal allies in the war, ignored a new truce and battled on across central Bosnia on Thursday. President Franjo Tudjman of Croatia appealed to the two sides Muslim refugee women from the Bosnian town of Vitez, 60 miles northwest of Sarajevo comfort each other Thursday. The UNHCR evacuated about 1,000 Muslims out of different towns in central Bosnia as fights between Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croat forces have been raging.

A young Muscovite campaign worker puts up posters supporting President Boris Yeltsin Friday in the street of downtown Moscow. On Sunday, 107 million eligible Russian voters will cast their ballots in the nationwide referendum to define the president's power and the popularity of his economic reforms.

Read Yeltsin's lips: U.S.-style campaign coming to Russia

The Associated Press

MOSCOW — With a catchy TV jingle, celebrity endorsements and 30 million leaflets, President Boris Yeltsin's quest for support in Sunday's referendum is the slickest, most American-style political campaign Russia has ever seen.

Still, it's a long way from the sound bites, attack ads and big money fund-raisers familiar to Western voters. Eventually, campaign workers of the world may unite — but for the moment, Russians have their own way of doing things.

Two American businessmen did try to organize a $1,000-a-plate dinner for Yeltsin today. The president's campaign organizers declined.

"We did not want to give the opposition a chance to throw mud at us. They would have said, 'Look, Yeltsin is selling out to foreign capitalists,'" said Oleg Novikov, chairman of the Public Committee of Russian Democratic Movements, an umbrella for 89 pro-Yeltsin groups.

Direct mail, a staple of the American political diet, also has taken a Russian twist.

The Russian Pilots Union, which has threatened to strike for higher wages but still staunchly supports Yeltsin, is helping to distribute 30 million leaflets across a country that covers 11 time zones.

"Our pilots carry our literature with their private things, so there's no charge," Novikov said.

Yeltsin's campaign is far larger and better organized than the opposition's. It dwarfs even his own presidential bid in 1991, which was the first political campaign in Russia to use Western-style TV advertising.

So far, the opposition has not run any television or radio ads. Vladimir Isakov, a leader of the hard-line National Salvation Front, accused Yeltsin on Thursday of using state-owned radio and television to put "psychological pressure" on the voters.

Slick pro-Yeltsin TV spots show various people — old, young, workers, intellectuals, kids and celebrities from the arts world — repeating the ungainly phrase "Da, Da, Nyet, Da" with so much bounce that it becomes a catchy jingle.

North Korea wavering on quitting nuclear pact

The Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — North Korea has decided not to pull out of an international nuclear-control treaty, South Korean news reports said today. But another report quoted a North Korean diplomat denying such a decision.

The Seoul government and the United States indicated that North Korea has shown no change in its position.

North Korea's decision to withdraw from the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty reinforced suspicion that it might be developing nuclear weapons, despite its denials.

South Korea's national Yonhap News Agency quoted a North Korean diplomat in Cairo, Egypt, as saying his government will rescind its March 12 decision to withdraw from the treaty. But the unidentified diplomat would not give details.

But South Korea's state-run KBS television quoted Ho Jung, a North Korean diplomat at the United Nations, as denying the report.

Peter Tarnoff, a U.S. undersecretary of state, told Korean reporters in Seoul today that North Korea could never hope to improve its relations with Washington unless it retracts its decision.

North Korea insists nuclear tensions can be resolved only through high-level bilateral talks with Washington, which has been reluctant to start such talks because it worries such a move could send the wrong signal to the North.

Eritreans voting on independence

The Associated Press

ASMARA, Eritrea — For the past four centuries, Eritreans have been ruled by Asians, Europeans and other Africans. Today, people in the northern Ethiopian province are expected to vote overwhelmingly to rule themselves.

At least 90 percent of the voters in a three-day referendum will choose independence from Addis Ababa and officially end three decades of a bloody insurgency in the impoverished province, according to Eritrean officials, foreign diplomats and observers.

"It's a joyous moment," said Girma Asmeron, 43, who fought in the bush for 15 years against the Ethiopian army and now is director of Eritrean Television, a government agency.

"I really can't express it in words," Asmeron said. "It's too gigantic. I can only say that in the hearts of every Eritrean there is a joy and happiness."

The ballot is the first free election in 20 centuries of recorded Eritrean history, and a 'yes' vote would grant sovereignty to a people ruled for the past 400 years by Turks, Egyptians, Italians, British and Ethiopians.

Election results will be announced after voting ends Sunday and ballots are tabulated. In all, 1.1 million people have registered to vote at home and abroad.

About 3.2 million people live in Eritrea, an arid land the size of Pennsylvania, and 70 percent are peasant farmers or herders. The average annual income is about $150, and three out of four people rely on food donated by Western nations.

The ballot is expected to formalize a de facto independence Eritreans have enjoyed since May 24, 1991, when the rebel Eritrean People's Liberation Front marched into the provincial capital of Asmara after a siege of more than a year.

The takeover ended a 30-year insurgency that killed up to 160,000 Eritrean and Ethiopian fighters and 40,000 civilians, and drove 750,000 people into exile.

Jacqueline Bigar - Horoscope

FOR SATURDAY, APRIL 24, 1993

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Be more open in discussions, and allow another to give you feedback. Your social life peaks. Relish your choices. Sweetness works. Tonight: You wild thing.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Watch a tendency to go overboard and lose the handle on your money. Do not be overly optimistic about funds coming in. Work with what you have. A vulnerable, loving expression of caring touches another. Tonight: Try a cheap indulgence.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Put your best foot forward and everything falls into place. The moon beams good vibes on you. Go for what makes you happy. Today's focus is on a special relationship. Tonight: You can't help but party.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Understand that you are not obliged to do as others desire. You can call the shots and be more creative in how you express yourself. However, you might need some time off from all the demands. Take time to visit with an older relative. Tonight: Take a low-key approach.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Hang out with friends and make the most of the day's party atmosphere. Catch up on some of the local gossip. A positive, outgoing approach gets you far. Make a point of stopping in on a fun event. Tonight: The more the merrier.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Others look to you to take the lead and make the right moves. Realize what a good position you are in. Be more aware of your image. Tonight: Make a must appearance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Use that old magic and charm of yours today. Remain confident about your goal. Another has a bad case of romantic spring fever when it comes to you. Tonight: Try something new.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Take some time off from the maddening crowds today. Get into a favorite, relaxing hobby. You recharge yourself and feel much better. Touch base with an old pal. Tonight: Keep it relaxing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Let others be dominant. You might be overwhelmed by all the good things another offers you. You get what you want and, perhaps, more of it than you originally desired. Make time for an important function. Tonight: Be the party.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Pace yourself as there might be much ground to cover today. The emphasis is on a better home life. Be extremely gentle when dealing with a family member. Tonight: Your home is your castle.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A special rendezvous seems to be in the cards today. Be more open to a light flirtation or to a freshly growing relationship. By connecting with a loved one on a deep level, you gain more trust and understanding. Tonight: We won't tell.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You might want to spend some money on your home today, adding some flowers or perhaps buying some furniture. Get into spring cleaning and really spruce up the place. A loved one wants to pitch in. Tonight: Cloak over your work.

IF APRIL 24 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Be clear about your goals this year, especially on the financial front. You demonstrate the capacity to add to your coffers and feel more secure than you have in many years. Do be careful about overindulging. A diet might be in order. Late fall could open a Pandora's box. If you are single. If you're attached, look to a further commitment. GEMINI helps you realize what you offer.

Dear Abby - Letters...

Reader says correct grammar better

DEAR ABBY: Shame on you! Your answer to "Bugged in St. Paul," the woman who corrected her husband's poor grammar, didn't help my cause one bit.

I make my living teaching college students. I teach them that using correct grammar can make all the difference in the world in determining how they are viewed by others. I am constantly reminding them to speak in a refined and educated manner. With the competitive job market we have today, speaking correctly is of the utmost importance. Let's face it — if you had to choose between two job applicants, and one said, "It don't matter," and the other one said, "It doesn't matter," which one would you hire?

Your reply indicated that because "Bugged's" husband was making a good living, he shouldn't be criticized for his grammar. Perhaps if he had spoken correctly, he would have made even a better living.

Abby, it does matter how we speak. You, of all people, should know better. — CATHERINE BEMBAS, ROCHESTER HILLS, MICH.

DEAR CATHERINE BEMBAS: Granted, it does matter how we speak in most instances, but this couple had been married for 20 years. He is an excellent provider and skilled in his work, and according to his wife, he doesn't take criticism very well, so in the interest of matrimonial harmony, I advised "Bugged" to stop bugging him. I operate on the "old dogs, new tricks" principle — so, no mea culpa on this one.

DEAR ABBY: The mother of a close friend passed away recently. I made several phone calls to offer support and condolences, and to inquire about arrangements. My friend is a sincere and loving person. I was told that the deceased didn't care much for flowers, but liked plants — so I sent a flowering plant. I was told that the funeral arrangements were for a graveside service, and would probably be for family members only (and not all of them) for personal reasons. Based upon this, I felt I shouldn't attend the funeral.

The day of the service, the funeral notice was in the newspaper, including the time and place of the service. Because of this, I went to the service.

Now a mutual friend is telling me that I should not have attended because I was not invited. I thought that since the newspaper notice didn't say "private service," I should show my respect for the family by attending. I'm very distressed that I did the wrong thing. How guilty am I, and what should I do or say to all involved? My friend called and thanked me for attending. I even felt guilty about the plant. — NO NAME OR ADDRESS, PLEASE

DEAR ABBY: In your column in the Greenville (Texas) Herald-Banner, I noticed that several people mentioned the signs they had on their front doors to discourage solicitors. I have one that is better than any you mentioned — and it works!

Waco cult just one among hundreds of dangerous sects

The Associated Press

BARRINGTON, Ill. — Cynthia Kissinger thumbs through a worn yellow binder fat with printouts of names: religious sects predicting the end of the world, self-improvement groups heavy on quirky psychology.

"Somewhere in here," says the thin, intense Kissinger, "is another Waco waiting to happen. What happened with the Branch Davidians is confirmation of what we know is going on out there."

Kissinger runs the Cult Awareness Network, a clearing house and information central about cult activities, from a cluttered suburban Chicago office.

She and other cult watchers see the tragedy in Waco, Texas, as more of a pointed warning than simply an isolated event that got out of hand. They say this week's deaths and the 1979 massacre in Jonestown, Guyana, reflect a vast problem simmering below the threshold of public awareness.

"The big explosions like Jonestown or Waco are more exception than the rule. The real concerns about destructive cults are the psychological and emotional wreckage they create," says Craig Branch of the Watchmen Fellowship, a ministry that tracks suspected cults from its base in Birmingham, Ala.

No one knows how many destructive cults and sects exist in the United States. Kissinger's binder holds 1,500 names gleaned from newspaper clippings, court documents and thousands of calls to the network's hotline.

Some of the groups have legitimate purposes, Kissinger says. But her group's efforts show that most, despite wildly diverse beliefs, share stunningly similar patterns of mind control, group domination, exploitation and physical and mental abuse.

Cults in the United States rarely receive official scrutiny; they are commonly written off as catchalls for society's outcasts, those not smart or stable enough to know they are being exploited.

Holocaust survivors:

They still live with nightmarish memories of Nazi camps

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Almost every day, George Schwab would pick a couple of lice off his body and crack them dead between his thumbnails. The lice, he said, were his only "constant companions" on a nightmarish five-year odyssey through Nazi concentration camps.

Schwab's childhood ended when he was 9 1/2 and the Nazis came to his town in Latvia. They killed his father and brother, and took him away from his mother to the first of three labor camps where he would spend World War II until American troops freed him in 1945.

On Thursday, Schwab joined thousands of Holocaust survivors at the dedication of a museum filled with the horrors of Nazi Germany's systematic extermination of 6 million European Jews.

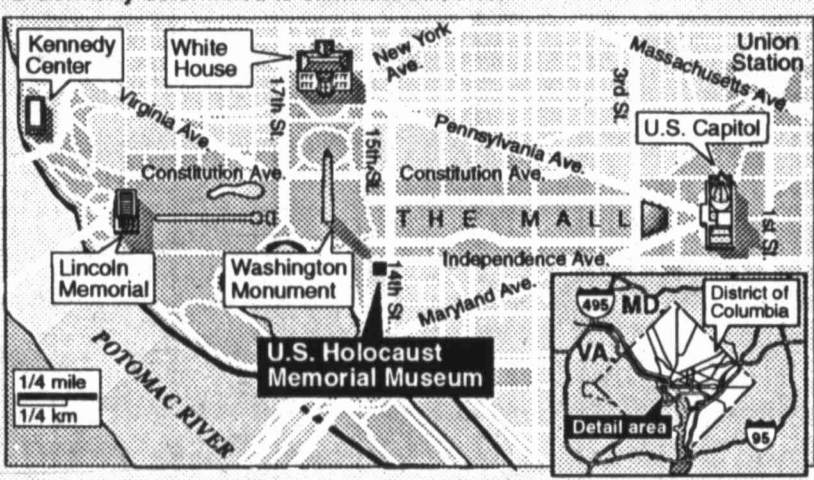

Elie Wiesel, a witness and survivor, described some of the atrocities for the crowd at the dedication ceremony of the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum.

"In Poland, SS officers used Jewish infants for target practice. The only emotion they ever showed was anger when they missed," the Nobel laureate said.

"In Kiev, an SS officer beheaded two Jewish children in front of their mother, who in her anguish, in prey of some mystical madness, held them close to her bosom and began to dance. In Romania, the Iron Guard hanged Jews on meat hooks and displayed them in butcher shops, with signs, 'Kosher Meat.'"

New Holocaust Museum

A museum of a different kind, stark and disturbing, is now opened to the public as a memorial to the millions slaughtered in World War II by a Germany determined to eliminate all Jews.

AP/Alan Basoden

Not all the survivors were as eloquent. But their tears, their silences, the faraway anguish in their eyes spoke volumes.

Sometimes, said Schwab, "I taste a potato and it all comes back" — the gnawing, relentless hunger of life in the ghettos and camps, the back-breaking work building roads and laying rail tracks at the age of 10, 11 and 12, the diarrhea he would get after eating the daily ration of a slice of moldy bread, some sugar and soup with half a potato in it.

After the war, Schwab was reunited with his mother, and the two of them came to New York. They were the only survivors from their family.

Jacob Kryszek of Portland, Ore., was the only survivor in his family of six brothers and sisters, parents, grandparents. The Nazis came to his town in Poland when he was 20. They told him that if he signed up to work for them, his family would get food. After the war, he found out their lie.

There was no food. Instead, his mother, a small sister and brother, were placed in a van, and its motor pumped in poisonous gas that choked them to death.

Kryszek was by then in the first of six labor camps. His wartime travelogue included Birkenau, Auschwitz, Buchenwald.

Fifty years later, the blue number tattooed on his left arm — 124142 — has faded with time. But the nightmares are vivid. "I'm running up a hill. I can't make it. They're after me. Someone's trying to hit me on the head with a shovel."

Regina Eber also remembers. She remembers going to work for the Nazis every morning in the Warsaw ghetto, walking around the bodies of dead children lying on the street.

"The Nazis were shooting people like dogs, even though we were already dying of hunger," she says, her voice breaking, tears running down her smooth cheeks.

One day, her mother went to get food for Regina and her two sisters. She never came back. Regina Eber was the family's only survivor.

So was Leonard Lan of Boston, formerly of Lithuania. The Nazis came when he was 14. He wound up doing forced labor at Bergen Belsen, where the Germans sometimes let him clean out the stables of the camp commandant's horses.

It was a perk, Lan said. It meant he could rummage around in the officers' garbage cans for potato peels, rotten apple cores. He remembers the taste. "Those who're dead are gone."

"This museum is not for the dead alone, nor even for the survivors who have been so beautifully represented," President Clinton told those gathered at the dedication ceremony, among them survivors, Cabinet officials and 12 presidents and prime ministers from Europe and Israel.

"It is perhaps most of all for those of us who were not there at all, to learn the lessons, to deepen our memories and our humanity and to transmit these lessons from generation to generation."

Argument led way to King verdict

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Drained and sick of each other after four days of deliberations, jurors in the Rodney King case slipped into name-calling and threats but cleared the air and reached a verdict the next day.

Three jurors, identified only by seat numbers, said in today's Los Angeles Times that half the panel was in tears April 14. One upset juror demanded to see his doctor, stopping deliberations for the day.

"But ironically, it settled everybody down," said Juror No. 6, a 30-year-old engineer.

The next afternoon, the jury convicted Officer Laurence Powell of violating King's civil rights. By Friday they had found Sgt. Stacey Koon guilty and acquitted Officers Theodore Briseno and Timothy Wind.

The verdicts were sealed by the judge until the following morning.

The eight men and four women were strangers when they were seated in U.S. District Judge John G. Davies' courtroom. For 52 days, they lived at a downtown hotel, eating, praying and exercising together under guard by U.S. marshals.

When they were handed the case April 10, "we didn't know how to start," said Juror No. 9, a 35-year-old jeweler.

The first day saw little substantive discussion after the jury selected Juror No. 5, a male engineer, as foreman, over No. 8, a woman. The voting broke down along gender lines.

The next few days, after the judge denied the jury a transcript of one witness' testimony, were spent reviewing the videotape of King's beating.

"We went through it frame by frame, slow-motion, fast-motion. God I don't know how many times we watched that thing," Juror No. 9 said.

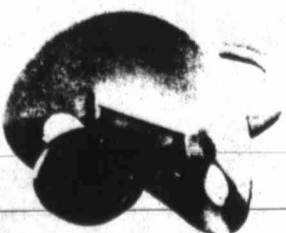

The tape's defining moment, they said, was when Powell gave King a powerful blow across the chest as King lay on his back.

"That chest blow was unreasonable and we felt it was not to effect an arrest but just to hurt the guy," No. 9 said. "That convinced about a third of us."

Alabama governor no stranger

The Associated Press

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Jim Folsom, the new governor of Alabama, is no stranger to the Governor's Mansion. He was practically born in it.

Folsom's father, the late Gov. James E. "Big Jim" Folsom, was in the first of his two terms when the heir to his name and political legacy was born May 14, 1949.

As a boy, the younger Folsom also lived in the mansion during his father's second term, 1954-58. And as an adult, he lived a few blocks up the street from it when he won state office and began raising his family in the capital in the 1980s. He was first elected lieutenant governor in 1986 and was re-elected in 1990.

Folsom became governor Thursday with the conviction of Gov. Guy Hunt on a felony ethics count. Folsom and Hunt, who had 20 months left in his term, are both from Cullman County in northern Alabama.

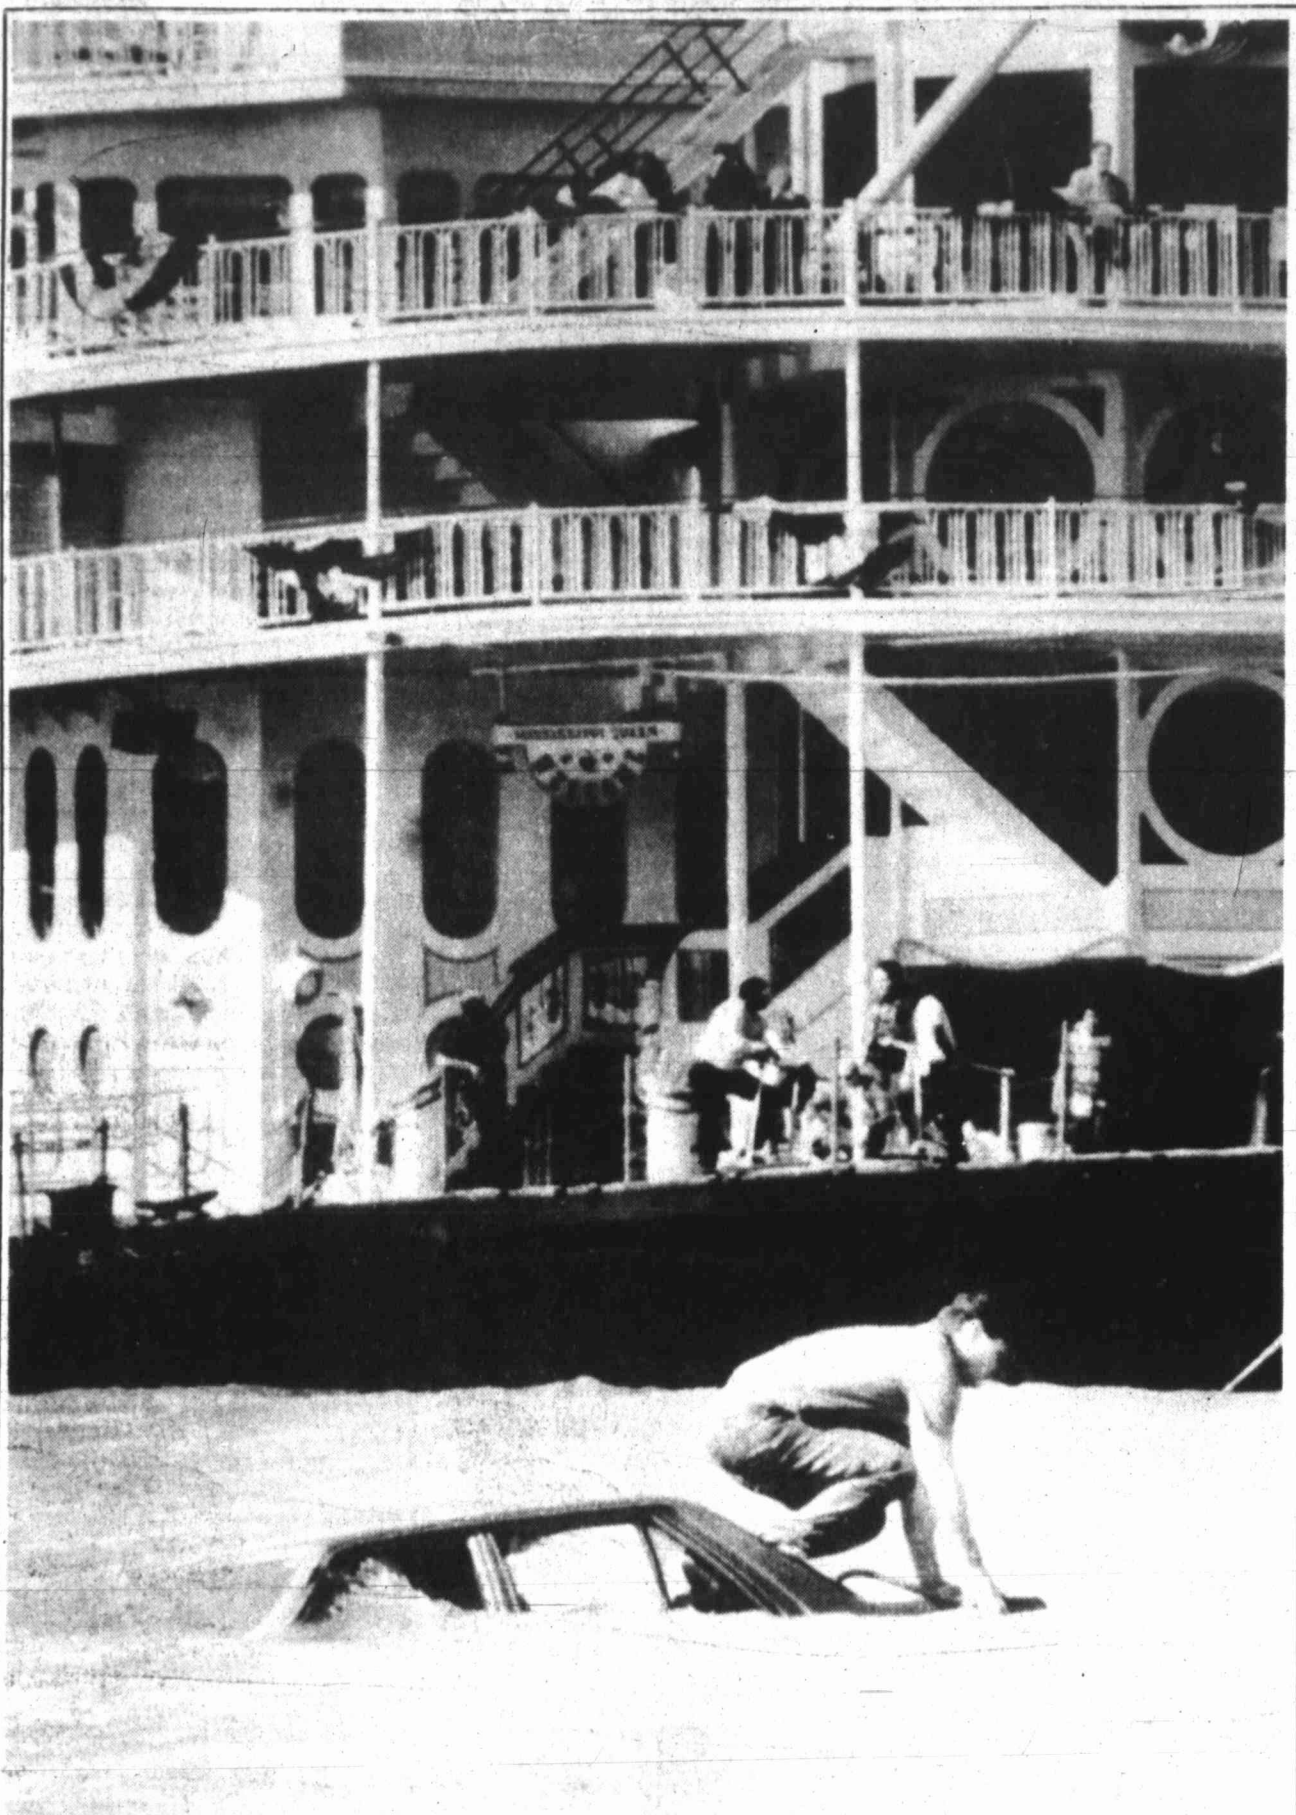

Folsom's wife, Marsha Guthrie Folsom, also is a Cullman native. The Folsoms and their two young children in recent years moved back to Cullman from Montgomery.

A conservative Democrat, Folsom already had begun raising money for a race for governor next year. No vocal critic of Hunt, who was Alabama's first Republican governor this century, Folsom isn't viewed with alarm by many in Hunt's camp.

"I don't think he's going to shake the political establishment," said Bill Barnard, chairman of the department of history at the University of Alabama and author of a book on Alabama politics, including the populist era of Big Jim.

Gerald Johnson, a political scientist at Auburn University, said Folsom is a lot like Hunt in that he gives the impression he will protect the status quo.

While leaning toward conservative politics generally, Folsom has supported more liberal national Democratic Party nominees, including Michael Dukakis in 1988.

Clinton proposing national standard for public schools

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration, seeking an increased federal role in public education, is proposing national standards for America's schools and certification for job training programs.

Education Secretary Richard Riley unveiled the proposals Wednesday, assuring doubters that under the administration's blueprint for upgrading America's troubled schools local districts would remain a powerful voice.

But Republican critics were skeptical. "This country had better be careful about the federal government taking over the education system and dictating the curriculum," South Carolina Gov. Carroll Campbell warned. Actually, the administration's $420 million plan relies heavily on Bush administration proposals, produced after a 1989 education summit between the Republican president and the governors.

Notably absent, though, was the Bush administration concept of vouchers that poor and middle-class parents could use to pay private school tuition.

Clinton's plan adopts six Bush administration goals ranging from ensuring that youngsters get off to a good start to raising the high school graduation rate to 90 percent by the year 2000.

The plan, titled "Goals 2000: Educate America Act," calls for a national council that would pass judgment on whether the states were meeting the standards. The idea is public opinion would put heavy pressure on state education officials to get a passing grade from the council.

And Clinton's plan envisions a national board to develop standards for job training programs. Riley told a news conference the package will focus on "improved professional development for teachers, increased parental and community involvement, increased flexibility from burdensome regulations, along with greater accountability for schools.

The Bush administration worked with private groups on developing standards in mathematics, science, English, history, civics and the arts. The National Association of Teachers of Mathematics completed its work in 1990 and an estimated 40 percent of the nation's schools have implemented at least part of its recommendations.

"I am pleased to see the Clinton administration continuing George Bush's efforts to undertake school reform by submitting a revised version of his America 2000 proposal," said Rep. William Goodling, R-Pa., ranking Republican on the House Education and Labor Committee.

Man gets one year, in old murder case

VENTURA, Calif. (AP) — A man who confessed to a 17-year-old murder was sentenced to a year in jail by a judge who said no one would have known about the crime if the guy hadn't turned himself in.

Superior Court Judge Charles Campbell Jr. handed out the sentence Wednesday to Richard Maytorena, 46, who pleaded guilty to murder in the death of Claude Bloomquist. The 24-year-old was found dead in his burning car outside a bar in 1976.

The cause of death had been ruled asphyxiation, and for years, police thought it was an accident.

But Maytorena turned himself in in February, telling authorities he believed Maytorena died after hitting his head during a fight. Maytorena said he panicked, put Bloomquist in the car and set it on fire.

Prosecutors argued for a prison sentence, saying Maytorena endangered others by burning the car.

With time off for good behavior, Maytorena could be out of jail in September.

Clinton names Baird to intelligence board

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Zoe Baird has been named to President Clinton's Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board.

The board meets bimonthly to assess U.S. intelligence activities, including the accuracy of information gathered.

Clinton nominated Baird to be attorney general in December, but she withdrew after it was learned

she had hired illegal aliens as household help and failed to pay Social Security taxes on their salaries.

She returned to her $507,000-a-year job as general counsel at Aetna Life & Casualty Co.

Aetna spokesman Mike Bazinet said Baird had no comment on her appointment. A call to her New Haven home Thursday wasn't returned.

Four prison officers disciplined for cake

MILTON, N.Y. (AP) — Four prison officers were disciplined for letting two inmates carry a cake baked in the shape of a penis into a employee birthday party.

Two of the officers, including the deputy superintendent of security, were transferred to other prisons, and the other two were fined $1,000 each, said James Plateau, spokesman for the state Department of Correctional Services.

The incident occurred at the Mount McGregor Correctional Facility, about 45 miles north of Albany. Plateau didn't say when.

"Allowing inmates to bring this cake into the room, that's failing to properly supervise inmates. Then there's the question of where'd the cake come from? Was it baked in the facility kitchen? If it was, it shouldn't have been," Plateau said in today's Times Union of Albany.

One of the transferred officers was also demoted from captain to lieutenant.

Guns in homes, Guard kept calm after Andrew

MIAMI (AP) — Guns in homes, plus the National Guard, helped keep South Florida calm and relatively crime-free after Hurricane Andrew, a federal study says.

"Even if a neighbor had a gun, it made people feel more secure," said Ronald Akers, a University Florida sociologist who worked on the study. "As one man said, 'My next door neighbor is watching out for me. He has a gun.'"

The National Guard also gave solace, even though the troops had no power to make arrests or fire their guns, Akers said.

Researchers at the University of Florida and the University of Miami interviewed 107 Dade County residents and 54 police officers for the $25,000 study, backed by the National Science Foundation. It was released Thursday.

Akers said no one reported buying a gun for protection, and there was little vigilantism in the aftermath of the Aug. 24 storm.

"One of the lessons of Hurricane Andrew may be that symbols of control are more important to maintaining order in disasters than actual control itself," he said.

Naval Academy moving to expel 6 midshipmen

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — The U.S. Naval Academy has moved to expel six midshipmen accused of cheating on an electrical engineering exam.

Twenty-two others were cleared in the scandal, in which midshipmen obtained an advance copy of the final, said Capt. Mike John, academy spokesman.

Rear Adm. Thomas C. Lynch, academy superintendent, recommended on Thursday that the Navy secretary dismiss the six students, who were not identified.

John said the academy does not know exactly how some midshipmen got a copy of the exam, which was given in December in a course taken by about 700 juniors. But he said a faculty member was disciplined for carelessness.

The investigation began after the exam was over, when it was learned that a copy was missing.

The last major cheating incident at the academy was in 1974, when seven midshipmen in a navigation course were expelled and 13 put on probation.

U.S. doctors performed unnecessary C-sections

ATLANTA (AP) — U.S. doctors performed 349,000 unnecessary Cesarean sections in 1991 at a cost of more than $1 billion, the government says.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention said Thursday that the United States had 23.5 Cesareans for every 100 births, unchanged from 1990.

Comparing the U.S. rate with 20 other countries and with Puerto Rico, which the CDC did not include in the U.S. calculation, only Brazil and Puerto Rico had higher C-section rates, 32 and 29 per 100 births, respectively. Japan and the former Czechoslovakia were lowest, at 7.

The CDC has deemed a rate of 15 Cesareans per 100 births to be medically appropriate for the United States. Thus, the U.S. rate in 1991 translates into 349,000 unnecessary Cesareans, the federal agency said.

The average Cesarean costs $7,826, compared with $4,720 for a vaginal delivery, the CDC said.

C-sections, in which the uterus is cut open to deliver the baby, are often undertaken when the baby is out of position or otherwise in danger.

Serbs defy threat of intervention

The Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Defying tougher sanctions and threats of military intervention, Serbs appear increasingly determined to fulfill their plan to build a Greater Serbia.

War and sanctions have made Serbia an economic ruin and a political pariah. But that matters little.

What does matter is that the dream of uniting all Serb lands in the Balkans — a vision first evoked during Serbs' 19th-century revolt against 500 years of Turkish rule — seems finally within their grasp.

And Serb leaders show no sign of giving up, no matter the cost.

After snubbing international mediator Lord Owen in Belgrade on Wednesday, Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic is gathering his self-proclaimed parliament Friday to offer a final decision on the international community's plan to divide Bosnia into 10 semi-autonomous provinces.

Bosnia's Croats and Muslims have accepted it, leaving Serbs as the only holdouts. The Serbs say it forces them to give back too much of the 70 percent of Bosnia they now hold and prevents them from uniting territories in Croatia, Bosnia, and Serbia proper.

They would be left with 43 percent of Bosnia.

An offer of compromise is possible in the face of sharply increased demands for Western military intervention, but probably only to gain more time.

There are two ways the Serbs can win:

—If the world community caves in and gives Serbs the vital corridors

A Bosnian Serb soldier mans a cannon near the besieged northeastern Bosnian town of Srebrenica Wednesday. The truce in Srebrenica appeared shaky

Thursday with the town's Serb besiegers showing no sign of leaving and U.N. officials admitting that Muslim defenders had turned in just a few weapons.

they need across northern and eastern Bosnia to connect the territory they hold.

—If the delay tactics they have mastered buy time for final military conquests.

Serbs say they feel the need to unite for self-protection and cannot afford to compromise. "The signing of the plan in the present form would be tantamount to suicide," Karadzic said.

Aleksa Buha, who serves as Karadzic's foreign minister, said the parliament might declare union with Croatian Serbs and Yugoslavia — creating Greater Serbia.

Bosnian Serbs apparently believe the world community does not have the resolve to use force to stop them.

Karadzic, in an interview Wednesday, acknowledged that Bosnian Serbs were risking American bombing. But, he said defiantly, "In case they strike we will have no choice but to defend ourselves."

The Bosnian Serbs have made it clear that cosmetic changes in the international plan are not enough. They rejected a proposal by Russian Deputy Foreign Minister Vitaly Churkin that Russians, traditionally sympathetic to Serbs, take control of the corridors.

Sanctions are not deterring the Serb drive, either. The United Nations imposed sanctions last May and tightened them this month, triggering only defiance.

A recent poll conducted in Yugoslavia, now comprising Serbia and tiny Montenegro, indicated nearly 70 percent of those questioned felt Serbs should not give in to international pressure.

Brazilians spellbound by Collor scandal

The Associated Press

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil — Only a few months after Fernando Collor de Mello resigned the presidency, Brazilians are being titillated by books that purport to describe his sexual escapades, corruption and voodoo rituals.

Collor has denied all the various allegations and described his younger brother Pedro, who's behind many of them, as "mentally unbalanced." Nine lawsuits are pending regarding the books.

For weeks, Collor's one-time cronies led by his brother have hurled damaging accusations against the former president in a flurry of tell-all memoirs and newspaper exposes.

Collor resigned in late December after being removed temporarily by Congress on corruption charges. The first directly elected president after more than two decades of military dictatorship, Collor was elected in 1989 on a platform promising free enterprise and clean government.

Few know what went on behind the Alvorada Palace doors, but the country's obsession with Collor's downfall and disgrace are troubling some Brazilians.

Critics say the sensationalistic barrage has diverted attention from bigger problems — corruption and turnstile justice — and allowed other politicians accused of corruption to duck the media spotlight.

"The Collor soap opera has become surreal," said Roberto Moreira, a Brasilia sociologist. "Soon people won't be able to discern fact from fiction, and forget why we impeached him at all."

It seems the only person who hasn't written a book about the scandal is Collor. Sixteen books are in print, with more on the way from colleagues, ex-ministers and enemies.

Claudio Humberto Rosa e Silva, Collor's former spokesman, took aim at the 43-year-old former president in early March.

In his book "One Thousand Days of Solitude," Rosa e Silva tells how Collor supporters allegedly tried — and failed — to buy congressional votes against impeachment on Sept. 29, hours before the Chamber of Deputies voted on whether the president should stand trial in the Senate.

He also writes how Collor cronies gave hush money to Juceneide Braz da Silva, the mother of the presidential candidate's secret, illegitimate son, and paid another woman to give a tearful confession on national TV that Collor's runoff opponent was the father of her illegitimate daughter.

Lottery adding six $1 million drawings

AUSTIN (AP) — Six more million-dollar prize drawings for players of the Texas Lottery's instant games will be added beginning in June.

Lottery officials said Thursday that the monthly drawings would run through November in San Angelo, Orange, Alice, Marshall, Dallas and wrapping up in the Rio Grande Valley.

Exact dates and locations will be announced later, said Comptroller John Sharp.

"When the lottery began last year, we originally scheduled 14 weekly grand prize drawings across Texas. Because the events were so popular, we then added eight more monthly drawings — the final one scheduled for May 13 in Galveston. And now, before the year is over, six more Texas Lottery players will join the circle of million-dollar winners," Sharp said.

Richards signs bill to relax truck regs

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards has signed into law a bill that will relax Texas intrastate trucking regulation.

The bill, signed Thursday, takes effect Sept. 1.

Sponsors said the measure was designed to heighten competition and help lower trucking rates. It also will make it easier for new applicants, particularly women and minorities, to get into the business.

Zaeske says charge against him dropped

AUSTIN (AP) — Independent U.S. Senate candidate Lou Zaeske says a charge against him of disrupting a public meeting has been dropped.

Zaeske, of Bryan, had called the charge frivolous. It stemmed from an April 14 candidate forum in San Antonio in which six of the 24 candidates on the ballot were invited to attend.

"Only three Democrats and three Republicans were invited to participate; the same six elitist, big-spending special interest candidates being promoted by the media," Zaeske said Thursday.

Morales says schools need bond plans now

AUSTIN (AP) — State Attorney General Dan Morales says he has advised school districts through their bond agents to submit proposals for bond issues for his approval by May 14.

He said a state judge has announced he will prohibit any school funding projects unless Texas has a constitutional public education finance plan by June 1.

State leaders anticipate lawmakers can draft such a plan if voters approve a proposed constitutional amendment on the May 1 ballot that will allow them to shift some local property tax money from wealthier, to poorer school districts.

Morales said Thursday he advised school districts that his office will not accept any bond issue proposals after May 14. The attorney general must review all bond issues for compliance with state law.

Winn-Dixie letting youth take charge

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

Any idea what goes on in your boss's head?

Youth ages 15-20 working part-time at 79 Winn-Dixie Texas Inc. supermarkets in Texas, including Big Spring, will get some insight Saturday when they become managers for a day.

Six youths will participate in Youth Management Day at the Winn-Dixie at FM 700 and Gregg Street. More than 10,000 will participate at stores throughout Texas.

"The purpose of the program is to show the youth what's on the other side," said local Winn-Dixie Manager Mike Seitz. "When they see that side, we're hoping we're looking at some young managers for us in the future."

Who will be doing what Saturday in Big Spring?

- Sacker Lance Acuff will be location manager.
- Bookkeeper Barbara Mitchell, co-manager.
- Cashier Kevin Stevens, junior assistant.
- Cashier Jason Price, produce manager.
- Cashier Edward Mendez, customer service manager.
- Cashier Jennifer Smith, head cashier.

Permanent managers will be close by to explain management jobs, Seitz said. Other employees will be scheduled to handle part-time jobs.

"This is an excellent opportunity for us to recognize the tremendous role our young part-time associates play in our daily store operations," said Winn-Dixie President L.J. Sadowski. "It is our hope that Youth Management Day will help develop pride and build self-esteem in our young associates."

"Since many of our current top and middle managers began their careers with Winn-Dixie as part-time associates, we see this as a chance to train and develop possible future managers," he continued. "They are allowed the chance to fully realize the responsibilities they may assume one day."

Winn-Dixie is the largest supermarket retailer in the Sunbelt, with 1,166 stores in 13 states, company officials say. There's 79 stores in Texas.

Stars

Alton arrived months after the closure possibility ended. His first official duty was making a public appearance at the West Texas AgExpo to promote park usage. Promotion is part of added responsibilities managers have acquired over the last year. Developing marketing strategies for the park is another added emphasis. Alton attends regular conferences with other managers concerning marketing and tourism at Texas A&M at College Station.

"The efforts are to reduce the net cost per visitor by increasing the number of visitors," Alton said. The local park's high net cost per visitor was the reason for making the closure list.

"The state is monitoring the number of visitors to determine the net cost per visitor," he said. For information about the party call 267-8255 or 263-4931.

Galveston puts lid on alcohol on West Beach

The Associated Press

GALVESTON, Texas — Galveston officials are banning all alcoholic beverages from most parts of the island's West Beach in a move to block a repeat of problems caused by rowdy beachgoers.

The city council voted 5-0 to ban alcohol consumption, including beer, from June 1 to Sept. 30. The ban was put in place for this year only.

Police

The Big Spring Police Department reported the following incident:

- About $225 in damage to a pane glass window was reported at the 3700 block of Connally.
- A microwave, turn table and utensils, valued at $600, were reportedly stolen on the 2300 block of Roberts.
- Assorted items, including shirts, suits, a hat and a pair of binoculars, valued at about $4,000, was reportedly stolen on the 2300 block of Brent.

Sheriff

The Howard County Sheriff's Office reported the following incidents:

- Freddie Buster Smith, 37, of Dallas was arrested on a warrant and charged with revocation of probation on a driving while intoxicated charge.
- Ronnie Lee Moncada (also known as Ron Love), 28, of Big Spring had been arrested and charged with parole violation; he pleaded guilty to burglary of a habitation and was sentenced to 35 years in prison.

'March for Jesus' set locally

By DEBBIE LINCEUM
Features Editor

Stephen Howard was so moved by a Christian experience he had in Austin, he decided to bring it home.

So the local man has begun organizing a March for Jesus in Big Spring. The event will take place all over the world June 12, including the local community for the first time.

"This is a way we can bring people together in the community," Howard said. "The march is not about any doctrine or issues, it's not a protest. It's a celebration of faith for an audience of one."

March for Jesus, which started in a small England town in 1987, brings together Christians of all denominations who march through the city streets, proclaiming their belief with songs and banners.

"We fight an enemy," Howard said. "We could be so much more proficient if we fight our battles together."

Howard said during the march, people gather in groups, not divided by which church they attend. They carry banners that proclaim their faith, but don't mention specific churches.

Already, 14 local churches have announced plans to join the march, but Howard wants more commitments. For a church to join, it needs to designate a contact person, preferably not the minister, who is often busy with other duties.

Howard and his wife discovered March for Jesus last year, on a trip to Austin with another couple. There, about 15,000 people walked through the streets, ending at the capitol, carrying banners and singing praise songs.

"It was amazing to be part of such a large group of Christians," Howard said. "I didn't grow up in the church, so this was something new for me."

In Austin, Howard says he had the opportunity to witness to a man who joined the march.

"He walked up, smelling of alcohol, and looked like he wondered what was going on," Howard said. "I asked him to join us and before long, he was singing along and holding a banner."

To Howard, that is a symbol of what the march is about.

"We're taking the walls off the church, going to the streets. This is something that really ministers to the city," he said. "I want people to see Christ is alive, not behind four walls. Being a Christian is a daily activity, how you live your life."

Howard said he became a Christian only a few years ago, but he is convinced the church can be a strong force in people's lives.

"People are looking for something to fulfill them. The church can do that," he said.

Financing for the local march will come from churches, as well as the sale of T-shirts and cassette tapes on the day of the march. Local support is needed to make the march a success and build a foundation for future events, Howard said.

For information about joining the march or supporting the event, call Howard at 264-7024 or Kathy Pickett at 457-2394. An information line has also been arranged at Sunshine Bookstore, 264-9901.

Recognizing history Commission wants local sites identified

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

Big Spring and Howard County may earn a place in national archives if memorials and sculptures are identified by area residents.

The Howard County Historical Commission and two local residents are requesting four local markers be included in the The National Museum of American Art at the Smithsonian Institution inventory of monuments.

"(Officials) are trying to get a national inventory of outdoor sculptures and memorials," said Josephine Dawes, secretary of the commission. "They may give suggestions or offer help as to restoration and upkeep of the outdoor memorials."

Promoted by The National Institute for the Conservation of Cultural Property, sponsoring SAVE OUTDOOR SCULPTURE! (SOS!), the project was started nationwide in February.

In April, local historical commission members identified the 12-foot Vietnam Memorial, located at the east end of Swords Street in the Big Spring Industrial Park; the Statue of Liberty replica, located on the northeast corner of the Municipal Auditorium; and the Big Spring-Howard County Centennial Time Capsule, located in a semi-circular plaza on the east side of the Howard County Courthouse.

Two local residents identified a marble memorial adjacent to the time capsule at the courthouse known as the Memorial for the Dead, with an inscription dedicated to those who died in major wars involving the United States.

"If our (outdoor monuments) are in the national inventory," Dawes said, "that's a life-long recognition for Big Spring to be mentioned in the national archives."

SOS! is a three-year national effort to call attention to public artworks and provide communities with information, helping to develop preservation and care steps.

Also involved in the identifying sculptures and memorials is the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission.

With more awareness of the need to preserve local monuments, a desire to erect more monuments could follow.

"Whether or not this effort will cause people to see a need for more monuments, I can't predict what might happen," Dawes said. "I know it might generate an interest in citizens to visit them and appreciate them."

Dawes added the commission has yet to identify any sculptures or memorials outside of Big Spring.

"We don't know of any in Coahoma or Sands Springs or any of the surrounding communities," she said. "But, we are open to suggestions from the community."

Recommended sites have recent histories, so their inclusion could update national archives with respect to the local area.

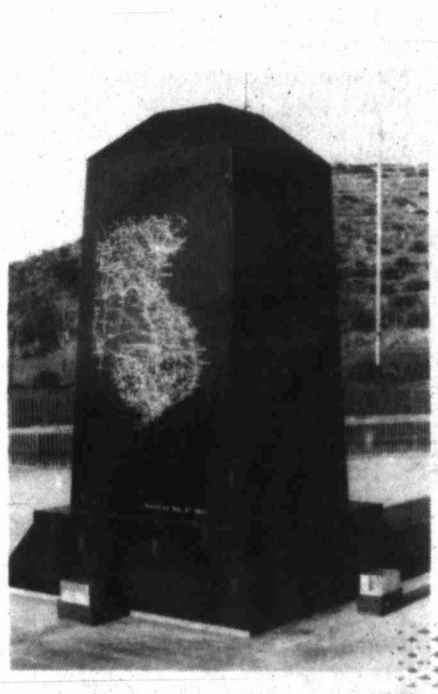

The Vietnam Memorial was dedicated May 1991, and bears a map of the location of U.S. troops during the war.

Several hundred names are inscribed in the Memorial to the Dead who served in the major wars. The marble marker reads, "Dedicated to God and to the Memory of Those Who Gave Their Lives in the Defense of Their Country in World War I, World War II, in Korea, and in Vietnam."

The time capsule, marked by a bronze plate set in a marble slab, was buried in May 1981 and is scheduled to be opened in May 2031.

The Vietnam Memorial, above, and the Statue of Liberty replica, left, are among the local sites the Historical Commission hopes will be recognized in a national program. They are seeking the help of local people in identifying the sites.

Busy Bees

Busy Bees met for a covered dish luncheon on Wednesday, April 13, 1993, with Francis Mason as hostess. We met at the fellowship hall, Presbyterian Church in Coahoma.

Roll call was answered with your favorite Country Western singer with nine members present. Craft for the day was making small wood ornaments to be used as magnets with Francis Mason as the instructor.

Our next meeting will be on May 12, 1993 with Montez Bunn and Shirley Cobb as hostess.

1970 Hyperion

Art and craft workers toiling over long tables, lines of school children following instructions, and row after row of tenement-like dwellings in the huge city of Shanghai. Those were some of the scenes of "China - Through My Eyes" as told to the 1970 Hyperion Club by fellow-member Maureen Haddad at the April 16 meeting.

Mrs. Haddad and her husband, Dr. Rudy Haddad, toured factories where beautiful silks, cloisonne jewelry and urns, and other exported goods are produced. They also visited Xein, and witnessed ongoing excavation of the ceramic army buried for the purpose of escorting an emperor of China. Their tour included the Great Wall, where those who wished to climb the steep stairway leading to the top were allowed to do so. In the Xein area they saw the rice fields and peasant workers. Tourists were overwhelmed by sellers of inexpensive merchandise and souvenirs.

Meals in China were served on the traditional round table, with men seated at one table and women at another. Rice was plentiful and other foods on the menu often identified with difficulty by the tourists. One disappointment on the trip was the denial of Dr. Haddad's request to visit a hospital. The guides explained that it was not possible unless pre-arrangements were made for this type of visit. Among their most pleasant memories of China are the beautiful Yu Garden and ballet performance.

During the business meeting, presided over by Sherri Key, officers for the 1993-94 club year were elected. A welcome was extended to guest Kathy Butler. Carolyn Freeman and Sue Haugh assisted hosting the meeting in the Haddad home. The next meeting will be a luncheon at the home of president Suzanne Haney on May 14, at which time new officers will be installed.

SMMC Volunteers

The SMMC volunteers met Monday, April 12 at 11:30 a.m. at the Golden Corral for a board and general meeting. Twenty-eight members attended. President Ethel Guthrie presided and Allan Guthrie gave the prayer. Forty-one volunteers worked 87 1/2 hours in March. The next blood drive will be May 17 11 a.m.- 5 p.m. Workers signed up to work April 26-30 for Kindergarten Days. Carroll Kohl of the Lutheran Church commended Virginia Davidson for taking keys to his wife at Wal-Mart so he could attend the Ministerial luncheon. Names were recommended for scholarships for RNs. May 4 will be the Awards Luncheon at the Greenhouse at noon. The state convention will be in Dallas June 6-9. Eight members plan to attend.

Big Spring Singles

Nineteen Big Spring Singles met Monday at West Texas Center for the Arts.

It was decided to set activities only until May 1, and wait until we have obtained a calendar of events from Big Spring and surrounding cities to set any activities in the future.

On Wednesday evening the club members will meet at the Elks club at 7 p.m. to take advantage of free dance lessons offered by Richard Dodds and his dancing partner Donna Jackson, who are members of the Crude Diamonds Dance Club. Friday night we will meet at the Brass Nail at 8:30 p.m. for dancing and socializing. Sunday evening we will meet at 5 p.m. at Furr's Cafeteria for dinner and will discuss what to do after dinner.

Putt-putt golf, board games at someone's house, and a walk around Scenic Mountain were all topics of discussion but it was decided to leave the decision to the dinner table conference. Please see Clubs, page 28

Fundamentalism

Scholars say growing movement sent shock waves around world

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Scholars say the world, previously presumed advancing into an enlightened age of sheer rationalism free of religious throwbacks, has instead encountered a global storm of religious fundamentalism.

It has shocked modern secular states, overturned prior analyses and sent splintering tremors through societies around the Earth, according to an international team of experts.

They say the unforeseen, religion-linked turmoil seems most everywhere — in biblical "inerrancy" and Operation Rescue crusades in this country, Christian violence in Ireland, West Bank Jewish expansionism, Buddhist militancy in Sri Lanka, Christian-Muslim battling in ex-communist states, Muslim absolutisms in Iran and Sudan and Hindu rampages in India.

"We have hurricane-force winds of the spirit, blowing in unpredictable places," says the Rev. Martin E. Marty, noted church historian and editor of a massive, multi-volume examination of the rash of modern fundamentalisms.

"No one ever foresaw this a few years ago," he added in an interview. "It inevitably will take down a lot of things in its path."

Although the study doesn't deal with the Branch Davidians who died in a fire at their compound outside Waco, they are among the many sometimes fanatic fundamentalisms current in the world.

Marty of the University of Chicago and historian-research associate R. Scott Appleby are directing a monumental fundamentalism project sponsored by the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

With more than 100 scholars of various specialties contributing to the undertaking, three large volumes so far have been issued by the University of Chicago Press, with three more due in the next 18 months.

"Fighting back" is what the various fundamentalisms are described as doing to resist the overwhelming, modern tide of secularizing influences seen as threatening ethnic-religious identities and beliefs.

"Traditional cultures, with values based in religious teachings, are finding that those values are undermined by the push to modernize societies according to the 'Western' model," Appleby said.

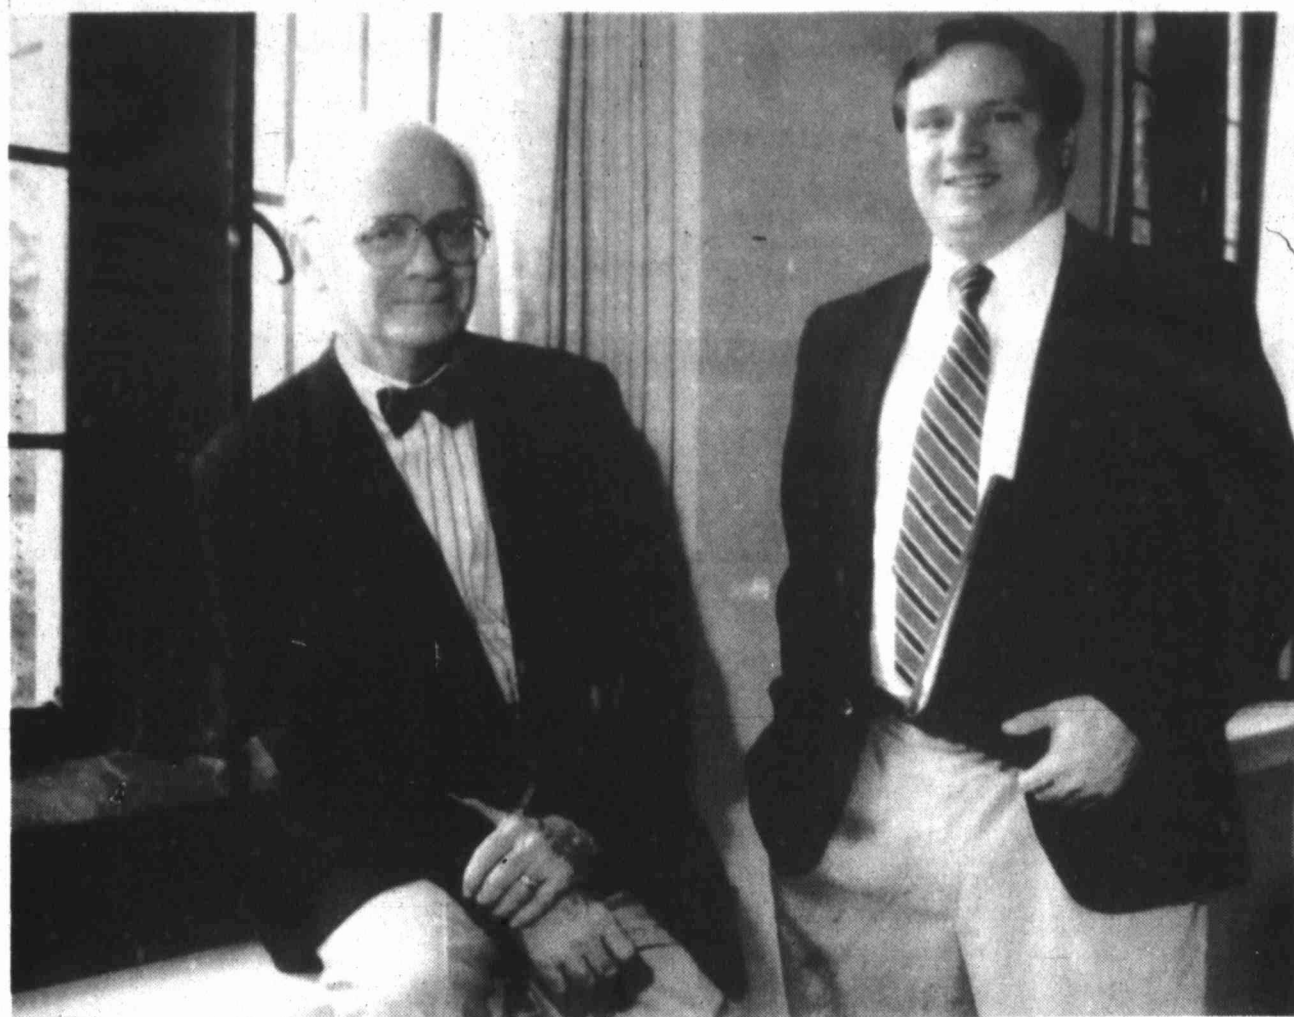

"It's not simply a revival of religion that was dead and is now coming back. Fundamentalists see it as a crisis in which normal procedure must be suspended and they must fight back or their tradition will be lost."

He said those behind some of the movements enlist religion as "a very vital and rich resource for mobilizing people," recognizing it as useful "for getting political goodies" and claiming "God's behind it."

However, motivations and methods of the various fundamentalisms differ widely. While some are seen as exploiting religion for power, most are considered committed to religion, yet distastefully narrowing it to defend it.

"We underestimated the attachment people have to religion," Marty said. "When you need an explanation for what's going wrong, or need a motivation for what you hope goes right, nothing beats calling your cause God's cause."

Not long ago, he said, the world was regarded as moving into ever more inclusive unity, characterized by such terms as "global village," "interfaith," "ecumenical" and "racial integration."

Clubs

Members will meet at 5 p.m. in the shopping center lobby so that we may all be seated together. The public is welcome.

Some of the suggestions made for future activities included trips to the Summer Mummies in Midland, trips to the play Texas in the Palo Duro Canyon, Singles Night at the super-market, game nights, pot luck dinners, barbecues, picnics, fishing trips and camping trips. Trips to Huidoso and Las Vegas were discussed as something to shoot for when we become better organized.

Members discussed community projects that could use their help, such as the Christmas in April and several other charitable organizations.

Doris Vieregge, founder and chairman of the Big Spring Center for the Arts, told the group what they could expect from the Art Center and what they offer in the way of a meeting place, as well as the youth programs, art lessons and their hopes to have a dinner theater in the near future.

The next meeting will be a chips and dips or snack foods affair at the Arts Center at 7:30 p.m., Monday.

Luther 42

The Luther "42" Club, hosted by Ida Underwood, met at Comanche Trail Nursing Center April 16.

Six members and four guests were entertained in the activity room with one 84 game and a 42 table.

Guests were Frances Miller of Big Spring and Comanche Trail residents Marie Stewart, Arlene Campay and Willie Scarbrough.

1905 Hyperion

The 1905 Hyperion Club met April 15 in the home of Joyce Bradley. Geraldine Johnson was co-hostess.

Doris Huijbregtse presided over a brief business meeting. A letter of thanks from Samaritan Counseling Center was read.

Bradley introduced Joe Dawes and Keith Ross. Dawes plays the recorder and gave a brief history. It preceded the horizontal flute and the recorder is made of wood. It began in the Renaissance period. It was admired for its sweetness and reedy tone. It gradually passed out of use but in the past 25 years has become popular. There are different types, including tenor, soprano, alto, etc. Dawes plays the alto recorder in the key of F.

Soprano is in the key of C, which calls for different fingerings. He demonstrated some baroque music by playing "Fantasia Allegro" by Telemann.

Baroque was a word used to ridicule the fantastic, extravagantly ornamental as to be in bad taste. The period was 1600-1750. Historians have re-evaluated the music.

Ross, a pianist, played "Minuet" by the French baroque composer Couperin. At the program's conclusion, Ross and Dawes played a duet, three movements of Bach "Sonata in A Minor."

Next meeting is May 20.

Pledge offered to teens as alternative to 'safe sex'

By The Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Southern Baptists teen-agers will be asked to sign a pledge they won't have sex until they're married, say religious leaders who suggest the best safe sex alternative may be patience.

The "True Love Waits" campaign will be launched this week by Southern Baptist who are afraid "safe sex" messages are sending the wrong message to teens.

"The unintended message that has been communicated through 'safe sex' campaigns has been that adults have given up on teen-agers and fully expect most of them to be promiscuous," said the Rev. Richard Ross.

Ross, who is a youth ministry consultant for the Nashville-based Baptist Sunday School Board, will coordinate a campaign involving 1,000 Southern Baptists youth ministers.

"We believe teen-agers are not receiving a clear message from adults that waiting until marriage for sex is the best alternative," Ross said in an interview with the Nashville Banner.

He gave 75 teen-agers at his Tulip Grove Baptist Church in suburban Nashville the first chance to sign his pledge.

Big Spring shot putter Syreeta Shellman is shown at a recent practice session. Shellman has one of the best recorded distances in the state this season, and is an overwhelming favorite to return to the state track meet.

Shellman aiming for gold at state

By STEVE REAGAN Sports Writer

When an athlete participates in a sport such as the shot put — and they're head and shoulders above everyone else in the area — personal motivation is a must.

For Syreeta Shellman, a return trip to the state track and field meet is all the motivation she needs.

Shellman, a senior at Big Spring High School, has dominated girls' shot put in this area for most of her high school career.

As a sophomore, she wanted to win the district track meet.

She did. As a junior, she wanted to qualify for the state track meet.

She did. Now, as a senior, she has her sights set firmly on a gold medal at the state meet, scheduled for May 14 and 15 in Austin.

Two down, one to go. The goal is definitely in reach. Shellman, who placed third last year at the state meet with a toss of 40 feet, six inches, has already surpassed that distance by almost two feet this year. Her 42-4 heave is the fifth best in the state among all classifications.

Shellman has almost been a force of nature this season. She's won her event in every meet she's entered this year, and has yet to be seriously challenged.

So, in the face of this dominance, how does Shellman remain focused? "You've got to set goals for yourself, and she's done that," Lady Steers track coach Jay Kennedy said. "Her goal this year is to go down there to Austin and win the gold ... She's been around long enough to know anybody can step up and beat you, so she's prepared herself to meet every challenge."

"I don't worry about what other people throw," Shellman said. "I just try to do my best at every meet."

Shellman began shot putting in the seventh grade.

"I couldn't run, so I might as well throw," is her explanation for taking up the event.

She was very disappointed not qualifying for the state meet her sophomore year. Kennedy said she responded to the adversity in a positive manner.

"We sat down and talked about it afterward," he said. "She was really dejected ... but she made a real commitment to come back and go to state the next year."

That goal was accomplished and, although Kennedy said Shellman walked around Memorial Stadium in Austin with "eyes this big," they both believe the experience was beneficial in preparing her for this year.

"It was very exciting," Shellman said of the experience. "It wasn't all that bad (although) I did have some nerves then ... This year, I feel confident that I can go down there and throw a personal best. If I get my technique down, I think I can get 43 feet."

"Unless somebody has just an outstanding day, Syreeta's going back to state," Kennedy said.

Bosio no-no

Seattle hurler tosses no-hitter at Bosox

By The Associated Press

Chris Bosio didn't even think about a no-hitter until the ninth inning. He didn't have to think about it for long, either.

The Seattle right-hander walked his first two batters Thursday night, but was perfect the rest of the way, sending the Mariners to a 7-0 victory over the Boston Red Sox at the Kingdome.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

In the ninth, he got three quick grounders to end the game and enter baseball history.

"To be honest with you, I just waited until the last inning," he said. "You know, after that last Detroit game (the Tigers won 8-7 Sunday on a two-run homer in the ninth), anything was possible and I just wanted to try to get that leadoff guy."

Bosio walked two and struck out four for his ninth career shutout. He threw 97 pitches, 60 for strikes, in beating the first-place Red Sox. Boston, which entered the game with a .285 team average, hit into 18 groundouts.

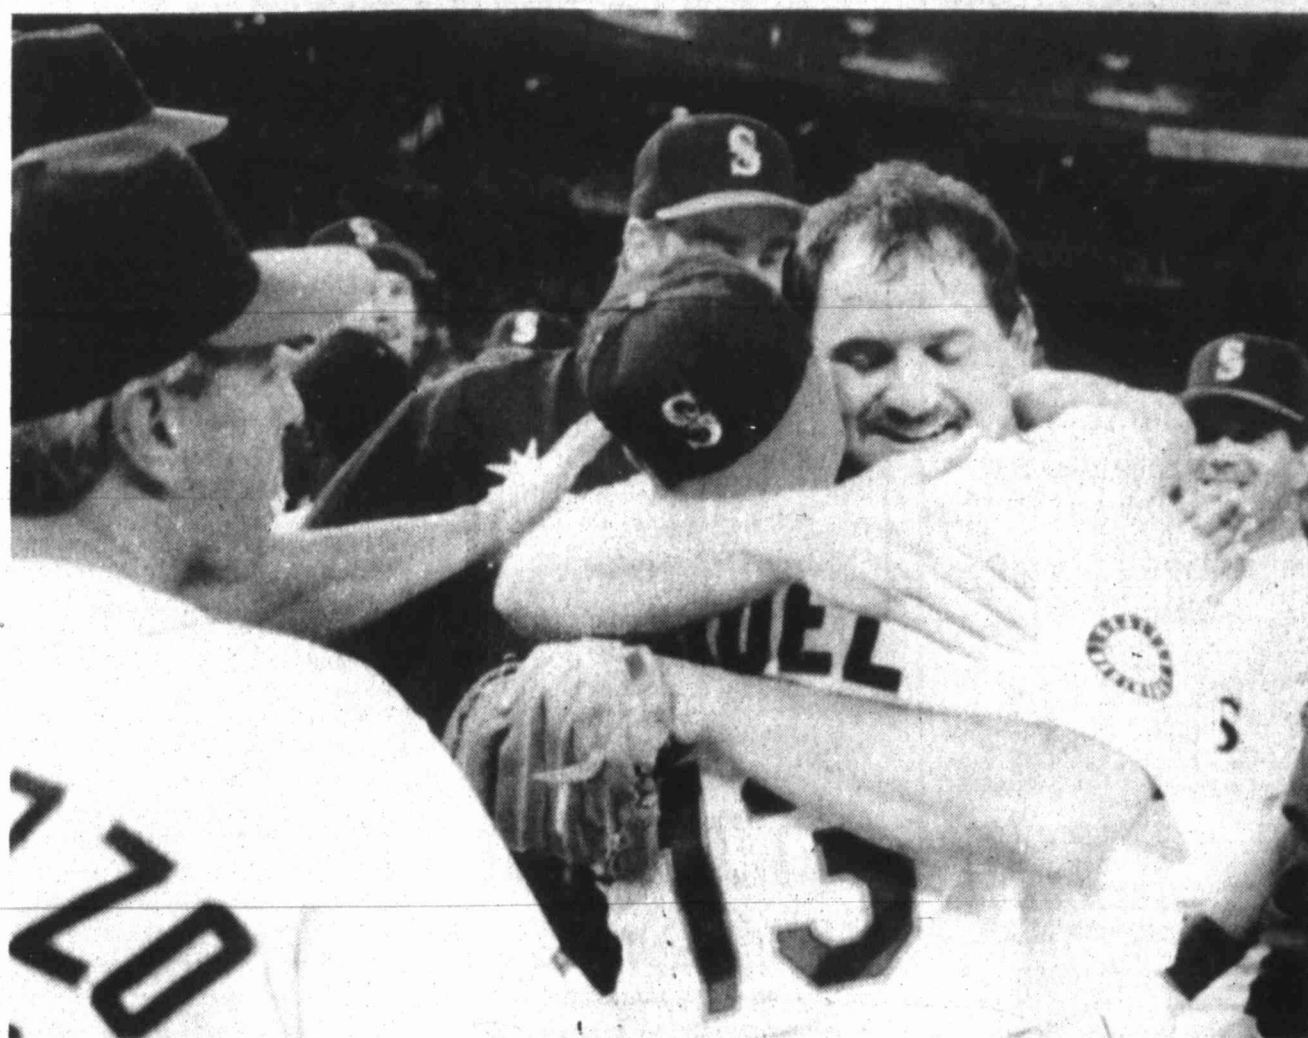

With a Kingdome crowd of 13,604 standing for the ninth inning, John Valentin led off with a routine grounder to shortstop and Tony Pena hit an easy grounder to third for the second out.

"It was kind of hard to concentrate after I got that first guy," Bosio said. "The crowd was just unbelievable, I mean it was just absolutely unbelievable."

On the last out, Riles hit a slow grounder to shortstop Omar Vizquel, who made a bare-handed pickup as the ball bounced off the turf. His running throw nipped Riles by two steps.

"It makes things more exciting that way," Vizquel said of the bare-handed play.

Elsewhere in the AL it was Minnesota 5, Milwaukee 4; New York 5, Oakland 1; Chicago 3, Baltimore 2;

Seattle pitcher Chris Bosio gets a big hug from Omar Vizquel (13) after throwing a no-hitter against Boston in Seattle Thursday. Seattle won the game, 7-0.

Toronto 6, Kansas City 3; and California 8, Cleveland 0.

TWINS 5, BREWERS 4

Jim Deshaies allowed five hits in 6 2-3 innings to improve to 4-0 as Minnesota beat Milwaukee at the Metrodome. Deshaies has already matched his big-league victory total of last season, when he went 4-7 in 15 starts for San Diego.

YANKEES 5, ATHLETICS 1

New York made Ron Darling pay for five third-inning walks, scoring five runs and going on to beat Oakland at the Coliseum. The A's, who have lost six of their last seven games, are three games under .500 (5-8) for the first time since May 1987.

ANGELS 8, INDIANS 0

Rookie J.T. Snow homered twice, giving him four in his last three games, and Chuck Finley (2-0) pitched a two-hitter as California beat visiting Cleveland to sweep the three-game series.

BLUE JAYS 6, ROYALS 3

David Cone, an $18 million free agent, dropped to 0-4 as rookie Pat Hentgen (2-1) pitched four-hit ball for eight innings to help visiting Toronto beat Kansas City. Cone, signed to a multiyear deal last December — including a $9 million signing bonus — gave up six hits in seven innings.

WHITE SOX 3, ORIOLES 2

Chicago scored two ninth-inning runs off Gregg Olson on an error by center fielder Mike Devereaux to beat Baltimore at Camden Yards.

The rally enabled Jack McDowell (4-0) to earn his 11th straight victory in April. McDowell gave up six hits, walked two and struck out five in eight innings.

Wakefield erratic, effective

By The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — He has managed for 19 years, 11 in the minors and eight in the majors, so he pretty much figured he had seen it all. Then Jim Leyland saw Tim Wakefield's knuckleball.

He knew right away he was wrong. He had never seen anything like this.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

"He defies all the rules, all logic," Leyland said after Wakefield broke virtually every existing rule of pitching in beating the Cincinnati Reds 5-4 Thursday. "He lives on the edge like no other pitcher I've ever seen."

Wakefield's darting, dipping, thrill-a-minute rollercoaster ride of a pitch is a contradiction in itself, the antithesis of the 95-mph fastballs and sharp-breaking curves that usually retire major-league hitters.

Elsewhere in the NL, it was Florida 4, Atlanta 3; St. Louis 5, Colorado 2; Montreal 3, Los Angeles 1; San Diego 2, Philadelphia 1; and San Francisco 13, New York 4.

EXPOS 3, DODGERS 1

Darrin Fletcher and Wil Cordero each hit run-scoring doubles in the eighth inning off Orel Hershiser (2-2) as Montreal beat Los Angeles to sweep the three-game series at Olympic Stadium. Jeff Fassero (1-0) pitched a perfect eighth inning for the victory. Mel Rojas got the last three outs for his fifth save.

PADRES 2, PHILLIES 1

Andy Benes (3-1) gave up one run in 8 2-3 innings for his third straight victory and Bob Geren homered, leading San Diego past Philadelphia at Veterans Stadium. GIANTS 13, METS 4

Robby Thompson had four of San Francisco's 19 hits and drove in four runs as the Giants routed New York at Shea Stadium. Former Mets player Mark Carreon drove in three runs, two on his first home run of the season.

CARDINALS 5, ROCKIES 2

Todd Zeile broke a 2-2 tie with an RBI single off Gary Wayne (0-2) to highlight a three-run eighth inning as St. Louis beat Colorado at Busch Stadium.

Mike Perez (2-1) struck out two of the three batters he faced in the eighth after the Rockies had tied it in the seventh. Lee Smith worked the ninth for his sixth save.

MARLINS 4, BRAVES 3

Catcher Benito Santiago retrieved a bouncing pitch and tagged Otis Nixon out at the plate as he tried to score the tying run with two outs in the ninth, preserving Florida's victory over Atlanta at Joe Robbie Stadium. Jack Armstrong (2-2) got the win after holding Atlanta to one unearned run in seven innings. Bryan Harvey picked up his fourth save.

Bulls outlast Pistons; Spurs clinch spot

By The Associated Press

Michael Jordan had a feeling the struggling Detroit Pistons wouldn't let the Chicago Bulls have anything easy.

"We never thought they'd give up, they always make it tough for us," Jordan said after the Bulls' 109-103 victory Thursday night. "We never underestimate them. Give them credit. They made some big shots in the fourth quarter and we went a little cold. I couldn't make a free throw."

NBA

Jordan missed five of his 11 free throws, but scored eight of his 36 points in overtime for Chicago.

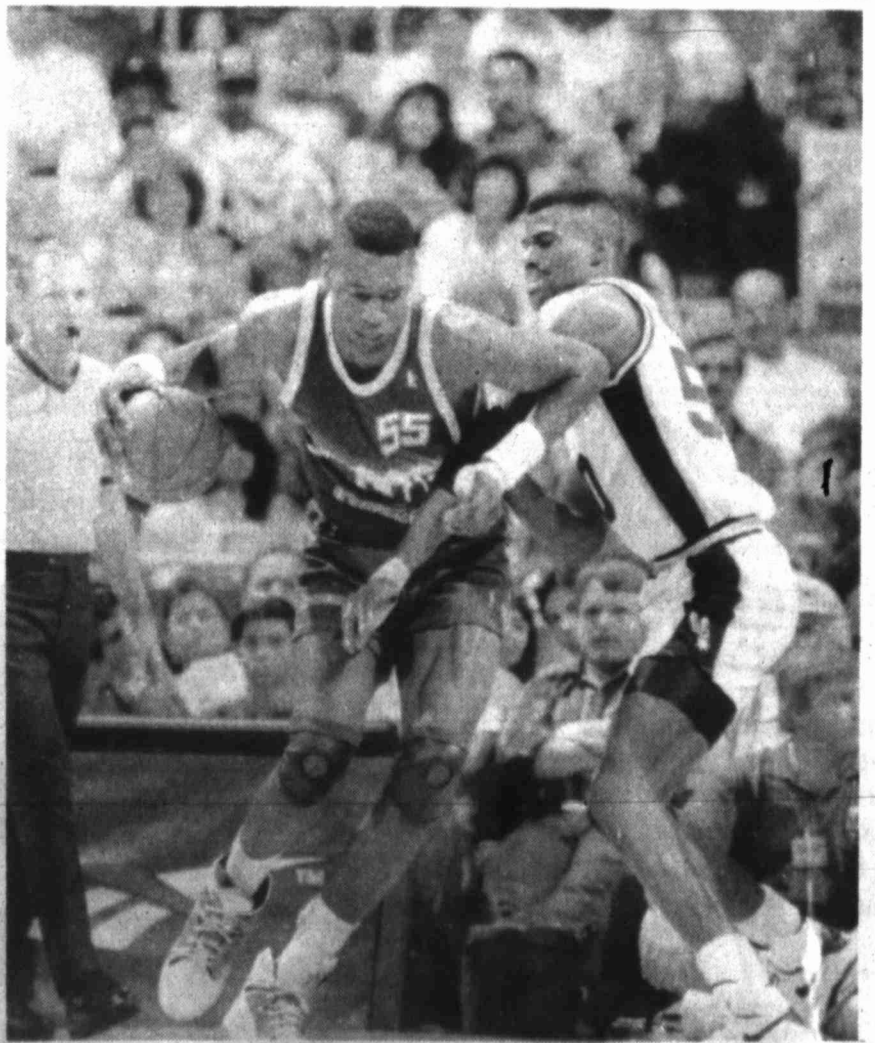

Despite trailing the first-place New York Knicks by a game in the Eastern Conference, the Bulls will win homecourt advantage in the conference playoffs with victories at Charlotte tonight and at New York on Sunday.

But Jordan isn't predicting a Madison Square Garden showdown just yet.

"Charlotte had the night off and they're waiting for us," Jordan said. Elsewhere in the NBA, it was Phoenix 115, Portland 114; Houston 112, Minnesota 110, in overtime; San Antonio 131, Denver 111; and Seattle 100, the Los Angeles Clippers 98.

The Pistons, who trailed 80-67 after three quarters, rallied in the fourth quarter and had a chance to win in the final seconds of regulation.

The loss moved Detroit, which has lost four consecutive games, a step closer to missing the playoffs for the first time in 10 years. The Pistons trail eighth-place Indiana by two games with two to play, including tonight against the Pacers. ROCKETS 112, TIMBERWOLVES 110, OT Houston won for the 31st time in 40 home games and extended its winning streak to 11 with a victory over Minnesota, which lost its 11th straight.

Matt Bullard's jumper with 1.2 seconds left in overtime broke a tie and gave him a career-high 28 points, including five 3-pointers.

Hakeem Olajuwon had 33 points, 13 rebounds, five steals and five blocked shots for the Rockets, who will play the Clippers in the first round of the playoffs. Doug West scored 29 points, Christian Laettner 23 and Chuck Person 22 for the Wolves.

SPURS 131, NUGGETS 111

San Antonio clinched fifth place in the Western Conference and a first-round date against Portland after Dale Ellis scored 18 of his 30 points in a 47-point first quarter against Denver.

David Robinson and Sean Elliott had 21 points each for the Spurs, who snapped a three-game losing streak. The Nuggets, who lost their 13th straight game in San Antonio, got 20 points from Chris Jackson and 19 by LaPhonso Ellis.

SUNS 115, TRAIL BLAZERS 114

Phoenix won at Portland on Charles Barkley's buzzer-beating bank shot in his first game since coming off the injured list. The lead changed hands three times in the final 3.7 seconds. Tom Chambers converted a three-point play for a 113-112 Suns lead and Cliff Robinson's 20-footer put the Trail Blazers ahead 114-113 with 0.5 seconds left.

SUPERSONICS 100, CLIPPERS 98

Seattle won at Los Angeles as reserve forward Eddie Johnson scored 23 points and Shawn Kemp had 20 points and five blocked shots. The Sonics stayed within a game of Houston for second place in the Western Conference despite Stanley Roberts' career-high 27 points and 13 rebounds for the Clippers.

THE HOME FRONT

By Kay Moore

Redoing the kitchen? One idea is to stick to classic white for appliances and black-and-white for permanent installations like tile. Then you can have fun changing the room's color accents frequently and inexpensively with paint and accessories.

It's not hard to change windowshade rollers or put a new fabric shade on an old roller. Lay the shade on the floor, unroll it and remove staples. Line up square edge of fabric to the line on the roller, so it will roll straight, and restaple.

They say it happens at the end of every century: designers see a return to classicism in furniture and wall coverings, utilizing patterns from Ancient Greece and Rome.

Looking for a bigger house? One family in New York City is offering a 24,000-square-foot mansion, set on 3.5 acres, with sweeping views of the Hudson River. The secluded, 26-room villa is less than 15 miles from Manhattan and features a huge living room with a gilded ceiling.

Whether selling a big house or a small one, you'll get first-class marketing skills and service when you list at Home Realtors, 110 W. Marcy, 263-1284.

Home Real Estate
110 W. Marcy or call 263-1284

Double Your Pleasure! 2 changes make this home even more appealing, a brand new 3/4 bath and a price reduction! 3 large bedrooms, plenty of space for garden, Forsan schools but in town. 20's.

You'll feel like you're on vacation when you sit on the patio and look out over the wooded, private canyon view of this 3 bedroom Parkhill home. Fireplace, ceramic tile floors. Price reduced!! 50's.
