Tornado rips through Wylie

Storm kills one, puts 60 others in the hospital

Staff and Wire Reports

WYLIE — A swarm of tornadoes skipped through northeast Texas on Mother's Day, killing one person and sending more than 60 people to area hospitals while causing millions of dollars of damage to homes and businesses.

Cathy Henson comforts her son Kyle, 7, after a tornado hit Wylie Sunday. The family was closed after it suffered extensive damage, said spokeswoman Kathie Sukkar. None of the 19 patients at the 34-bed hospital were injured, but they were being moved to other facilities, she said.

Chief Executive Officer Larry Wedekind said the hospital treated at least 30 minor injuries before shutting down.

Most of the injuries occurred at the town's major intersection, where a collection of businesses were heavily damaged.

Please see STORMS, page 6A

Wylie, a town of about 8,600 people 22 miles northeast of Dallas, was the hardest hit.

Wylie City Manager Steve Norwood said that one person was found dead at a mobile home park. Norwood said no further details were immediately available.

Physicians Regional Hospital, the small community's only hospital, hit Wylie Sunday. The family was closed after it suffered extensive damage, said spokeswoman Kathie Sukkar. None of the 19 patients at the 34-bed hospital were injured, but they were being moved to other facilities, she said.

Chief Executive Officer Larry Wedekind said the hospital treated at least 30 minor injuries before shutting down.

Most of the injuries occurred at the town's major intersection, where a collection of businesses were heavily damaged.

Unidentified Wylie residents assess damage to their businesses after a tornado touched down in their city Sunday. One person was killed and at least 60 others were injured in the storm. Wylie was one of the hardest hit towns in northeastern Texas and Oklahoma in which tornadoes touched down Sunday.

Mysterious ailments affect oil cleanup crews

Former resident, who helped with cleanup, suffering from multiple chemical sensitivity

By GARY SHANKS
Staff Writer

A former Big Spring resident is suffering from a mysterious ailment, devastating the lives of two different groups of people, who served on opposite sides of the globe.

Multiple chemical sensitivity is the current term for a bizarre group of symptoms affecting some Persian Gulf veterans and volunteers at the Exxon Valdez disaster in Prince William Sound, Alaska.

Jacqueline Payne and her 20-year-old son, formerly of Big Spring, have been fishing the Alaska coastline for a number of years. When the Exxon Valdez ran aground, spilling millions of gallons of crude oil in the narrow channel of Prince William Sound, the Paynes joined 11,000 other volunteers for the massive cleanup effort.

Multiple chemical sensitivity also has been found in veterans who served near the hundreds of oil-well fires that raged throughout Kuwait in the final days of Operation Desert Storm. "They have hydrocarbons in them — it's the same thing," Payne said of the veterans' problems.

Payne and others effected with the disease suffer groups of symptoms including cancers, joint pain, rashes, and other inflammatory symptoms. Many report losing hair and even tooth enamel.

In addition to absorbing hydrocarbons, workers at the Exxon Valdez disaster were exposed to a number of experimental chemicals used to disperse oil in the water, Payne said.

Among these was a chemical called hexane, which is known to cause heart problems and cancer, including leukemia and lymphoma, Payne said.

Another experimental chemical, inopol, caused some workers to have blood in their urine within an hour of exposure, she said.

Most of the cases in the Alaskan group are people who were actively involved with steaming crude oil from the area's beaches. This constitutes about 3,000 to 3,500 of the total number of volunteers. Payne and her son were among these people, who found they had absorbed 200 times as many hydrocarbons as the level physicians refer to as overexposure, according to Payne.

The cardinal symptom of multiple chemical sensitivity is sudden and severe allergies to a number of substances.

Dr. William J. Rea, of the Environmental Health Center in Dallas, was named to the world's first professorial chair of environmental medicine at the Robens Institute of Toxicology at the University of Surrey in Guildford, England.

Rea has published more than 80 research papers relating to environmental health and currently is treating Payne and her son.

In his medical findings, Payne wrote, "Exposure to the smallest amount of incitant can cause a very harsh enhancement of her illness. Severe aggravation of the illness can result from even incidental or trace exposures to ambient, often airborne, residues of common waxes, cleaners, pesticides and other compounds. She must rigidly avoid public buildings or any physical environment where exposure would occur."

"Once a patient has become highly susceptible, such as this patient, it is necessary to take great care to minimize incriminated environmental exposures. Avoidance is the most important aspect in the treatment of a patient who has been made susceptible," Rea wrote.

In a recent visit to Big Spring, Texas commander of the American Legion — the largest veterans organization in the world — Ronald P. McCluskey told a story of a Texas Desert Storm veteran with multiple chemical sensitivity who has lost his teeth and hair, and almost died.

The man was refused adequate treatment at a Fort Worth veterans hospital, as the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs has yet to recognize multiple chemical sensitivity as being related to service in the Gulf.

The man has lost his home and all that he owns, now lives in a totally isolated clean room near Waco.

Payne and many others involved in the Exxon Valdez cleanup with the disease have filed suit against companies involved. Several of these cases have been settled out of court, Payne said, but only the future will tell if these victims will be compensated better than the Desert Storm veterans.

Horton joins council Tuesday

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

Stephanie Horton on Tuesday will be the first black, and the fourth woman, sworn in as a Big Spring City Council member, as far as city officials are concerned.

Also, early voting begins today for the District 3 runoff between Vicki Cole and Charles "Chuck" Cawthon. Voting will take place through May 21 at city hall at Nolan and Fourth streets from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Polls will be open 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. election day May 25.

Horton, who beat incumbent Pat DeAnda 118-117 May 1 for the District 1 seat, doesn't expect to push any heavy agenda Tuesday.

"I've got to wait and see, I've got a few things I've got to get done," she said early this morning.

Among her top goals are cleaning up the city and providing activities for youth.

Meanwhile, DeAnda said Friday she retained a lawyer to file suit in 118th District Court because of reports that one woman had two ballots cast in her behalf and another report that one woman voted that's not in the district.

"I'm wondering how many voted that shouldn't have and how many didn't vote that should've," DeAnda said last week following a recount that showed identical results.

Questions of voting irregularities or fraud is not the jurisdiction of city governments.

Light voting is expected in the runoff, said City Secretary Tom Ferguson. A turnout May 1 of 22.3 percent of 13,045 registered voters in District 3 is average.

"The turnout is usually light in runoff elections," Ferguson said.

The Howard County Tax Assessor-Collector's Office is determining number of eligible voters for the runoff election. City officials are working on a map to publish boundaries of District 3, which is in the city's Southwest.

Other business by the council Tuesday includes consideration of several bids, including re-roofing the new fire station at Big Spring McMahon/Wrinkle Airpark, repairs to overhead doors on Building 1101 and a street sweeper.

Among several ordinances being considered is changing zoning on Lots 7, 8, S, 10-feet of 9, Block 48, College Heights Addition for the purpose of building a new office for the Colorado River Municipal Water District.

The council meets at 5:30 p.m. in Building 1109 at the airpark.

Corpus Christi to get Columbus replicas

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Christopher Columbus never quite made it to the Gulf Coast of Texas, but replicas of his three ships did, and soon they'll return.

Under an agreement signed Saturday, Spain will be paid $1.6 million for the replicas of the Nina, Pinta and Santa Maria, which will remain on display in Corpus Christi for at least 50 years.

The ships will leave New York on May 15 and are expected to arrive June 11 for a special public welcoming ceremony.

The three replicas were built in Spain in 1990 with the same materials carpenters used to build the original vessels. The hulls are oak and pine from Spanish forests.

HUD officials may have stopped probe

HOUSTON (AP) — A newspaper reports that top housing officials may have pressured Texas officials to halt a probe into a Woodlands-based company accused of misusing or diverting nearly $20 million in tax money.

A March 1 memorandum claims some of the probe's findings were either ignored or watered down because of political concerns. The Houston Post reported in Sunday editions.

The memo, written by a senior U.S. Housing and Urban Development auditor in the agency's Fort Worth office, claims auditors were under political pressure from Washington officials to find a quick solution to problems discovered in the audit of J&B Management Co.

J&B was accused in a March 1992 audit of misusing or diverting $19.6 million in HUD money. Despite the allegation, HUD officials gave J&B what amounted to an administrative slap on the wrist, the paper reported.

Blaze consumes 5,000 acres of national park

GUADALUPE MOUNTAINS NATIONAL PARK (AP) — More than 5,000 acres have been burned at the Guadalupe Mountains National Park, possibly the result of a discarded match.

Officials believe the blaze was caused by man.

"We think somebody dropped a match, but we're still investigating," fire information officer Rich McCamant said.

The blaze had burned up to the edge of U.S. 62-180 on Sunday, the highway that connects El Paso and Carlsbad, N.M.

The fire started about 2 p.m. Saturday near the Pine Springs Campground, and was pushed through desert brush and forest by winds reaching 65 mph.

Winds died down to 5 to 10 mph Sunday, and cooler temperatures overnight aided the battle, but the fire did continue to burn.

The blaze was burning entirely on the Texas side of the park, in far West Texas about 100 miles east of El Paso.

Critics: Investigation of child abuses flawed

The Associated Press

February 1992 after allegations were brought to its attention, local director Bob Boyd told the Waco Tribune-Herald.

Investigators made three visits to the Mount Carmel site. Also, leader David Koresh's wife, Rachel, brought their children to the agency's local office.

The inquiry ended with no action taken in April 1992 after officials spoke with 10 to 15 children, Boyd said.

The doctor now working with 21 children who lived in the compound said he doubts investigators received accurate information from the children because they were interviewed in their home.

"My sense is that there was a lot of censoring," said Dr. Bruce Perry of the Baylor College of Medicine. "It's clear these kids knew that they were being evaluated by outsiders. I'm sure that if there were things to disclose, they were not going to be in a position to do that."

Perry said the children he's spoken with recently have made "clear acknowledgement" of the charge that Koresh had sex with girls as young as 11.

"I believe if someone is having sex with someone who is 12, that's abuse," Perry said. "Absolutely. It's abusive and emotionally destructive."

The state agency has reported there were no signs of sexual abuse in the 21 children that left the Branch Davidian compound before it burned to the ground April 19.

About two months after the state agency dropped its investigation, the cult came under scrutiny by the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

Their work led to a Feb. 28 raid on the compound that turned into a fire-fight, killing four agents and six cultists. A 51-day stalemate ensued, ending in the April fire that killed 72 Davidians, including possibly 17 children.

One reason they may have come up empty in their search is because they phoned the cult and said they were on their way before at least two visits, the Tribune-Herald reported in its Sunday editions.

"If that's the case, it is not unreasonable to assume that they would not have been given access to anyone who could have provided them with damaging information," said David Jewell, whose daughter Kiri lived in the compound with her mother until a Michigan court gave him custody of her.

Persian Gulf vets join ranks of Houston's homeless

The Associated Press

HOUSTON — Officials say as many as 300 Gulf War veterans are now among the Houston's homeless.

"The Vietnam vet seems to draw the most attention, which they deserve, but that just makes it harder for me," said a former Desert Storm Marine, who would be identified only as 40-year-old B.B. He served in the Persian Gulf for nine months and saw extensive combat action with one of the first battalions that entered Kuwait, he said.

Since his return to Houston in August 1991, B.B. said he's been unable to find a fulltime job. He has temporary shelter in a relative's home, but the house is for sale and once it's sold, he and his dog Brownie will be out on the streets. He said he's prepared to live in his car.

"I don't think the government is doing enough to help me readjust," B.B. told The Houston Post. "They make it look like they're helping but they really aren't. There is a lot of runaround and a lot of red tape and I never seem to be able to talk to the right people."

B.B. receives counseling, employment and medical services and a monthly disability check. But none of those have pushed him back into society.

"We have no idea how severe the situation is, but I think we're falling behind," said George Castillo, coordinator for the Veteran's Administration Medical Center's homeless health care program. "We need to do more."

County attorney looking to clear DWI backlog

The Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — Drunken driving cases — some backlogged for 13 years — may soon see their day in court.

After Duval County Attorney Jose Ramon Falcon took office in January, he found four cardboard storage boxes stuffed with 445 pending cases of driving while intoxicated or DWI.

"There's a very lax attitude among the public with regard to drinking and driving and this attitude has been exacerbated by the lack of prosecution," Falcon told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times.

That will soon change, Falcon said. Falcon said he has recognized some defendants' names as felony DWI offenders prosecuted by the district attorney's office, where he worked before being elected county attorney last year.

San Diego attorney Abelardo Garza, Falcon's predecessor, said some of the cases were there when he took office in 1980. He served as county attorney 12 years. The main reason for the backlog was out-of-town defendants who didn't show up for court, Garza said.

He said he chose not to dismiss the cases because he hoped the defendants eventually would be picked up on an arrest warrant.

Falcon said he at first considered a wholesale dismissal of all but the most recent cases, but changed his mind. He has since begun to tackle them, a few at a time, onto his twice-monthly court docket.

Falcon said that since he has begun targeting some of the 2- or 3-year-old cases, most of the defendants involved have pleaded guilty to driving while intoxicated or to reduced charges such as public intoxication or reckless conduct.

Tornados rip Texas; Oklahoma flooded

The Associated Press

WYLIE, Texas — Tornados smashed into northeast Texas on Sunday, striking and shutting down a hospital, destroying homes and killing at least one person. More than 60 others were injured.

In Oklahoma, about 340 families were forced from their homes as storms continued to soak rain-swollen rivers.

Tornados touched down in northeast Texas in Wylie, Sachse, Terrell, Forney and Lake Lavon, the National Weather Service said. Tornados also were reported near Covington, Woodbury, Maypearl, Rice and Italy.

Hardest-hit was Wylie, 25 miles northeast of Dallas, where the tornado cut through the town's business center and hit Physicians Regional Hospital.

One person was found dead at a mobile home park, said City Manager Steve Norwood. No further details were available.

The hospital treated at least 30 people with minor injuries before shutting down because of damage, said hospital chief executive Larry Wedekind.

None of the hospital's 19 patients was injured when the hospital was struck, and they were moved to other facilities, said spokeswoman Kathie Sukkar.

Other hospitals near Wylie said 34 people sought treatment, many for cuts caused by flying debris. Wylie has about 8,600 residents.

None of the injuries were life-threatening, hospital officials said.

Sarah Nicholson said she sought shelter in a McDonald's restaurant

Unidentified residents of Shiitook, Okla., wade through flooded Highway 20 after checking the downtown area as flood waters reached depths of five feet in some areas.

after the storm blew out her van's windows. She said the McDonald's lost power and a window in the storm and a nearby Subway sandwich restaurant was destroyed.

"The Subway is totally gone. It's on top of the bank," she said.

Jerry Johns of the Southwestern Insurance Information Service said damage totals would reach into the tens of millions of dollars, if not more.

Electricity was knocked out to about 8,000 customers, said Patsy Miller of TU Electric. Gas was shut off to the area because some lines were broken, Lone Star Gas spokesman Bob Jett said.

In the neighboring state of Oklahoma, Gov. David Walters declared a statewide emergency Sunday because of the flooding and storms and asked for federal disaster relief.

High water hindered the search for an adult, a child and a baby missing after two cars were washed off the road in a flash flood Saturday in Oklahoma City, where more than 7 inches of rain fell, most within three hours.

One woman's body was recovered Saturday.

"She had her window down and was trying to grab trees going by, but they kept breaking off in her hand," said one witness, Tanya Ahtone.

Since Friday, there have been five confirmed storm-related fatalities, one in Texas, two in Kansas and one each in South Dakota and Oklahoma. On Wednesday, three people died in San Antonio when 8 inches of rain flooded streets.

The flooding continued Sunday, causing 250 home evacuations in the town of Kingfisher, 50 in Guthrie and 40 in Skiatook. People in Bixby were asked to leave their homes.

Yeltsin's confidence growing despite hard-line predictions

The Associated Press

MOSCOW — Displaying growing political confidence, President Boris Yeltsin let Communist protesters march across Red Square on the anniversary of Russia's World War II defeat of Nazi Germany.

Eight days earlier, violence broke out when police blocked anti-Yeltsin demonstrators from leaving their authorized May Day parade route and marching toward Red Square. One policeman was killed and hundreds of people were injured.

But Sunday passed peacefully, defying predictions by hard-liners after the May 1 melee that Russia was on the brink of civil war.

"Chauvinist and pro-Bolshevik forces have extremely little impact on society," Yeltsin told reporters near the Kremlin walls. "They aren't a real force equal to that of the people."

The ranks of marchers Sunday were bolstered by thousands of ordinary Russian veterans and citizens, many holding red tulips and yellow daffodils and walking with small children in the warm, sunny weather.

Many in the crowd of more than 10,000 complained about efforts by the Communists to exploit the Victory Day holiday, a rite of spring that has come to symbolize the Russian will to survive.

Yeltsin prevented his political opponents from upstaging him during the celebrations.

With a populist touch, he hugged World War II veterans after laying a wreath in the presence of his government at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Pro-Soviet and Communist groups had threatened to disrupt the celebrations on the 48th anniversary of the defeat of Germany. Authorities wavered, first banning hard-liners from rallying but finally allowing them to lay flowers at the tomb.

The mix of Communist and nationalist protesters got far more than they asked for: Officials even let them march past Lenin's Mausoleum across Red Square.

Apart from shouting anti-Yeltsin, anti-Semitic and old Soviet slogans, the demonstrators had little to say.

Whaling commission opens meetings

The Associated Press

KYOTO, Japan — Supporters and opponents of whaling squared off today as the International Whaling Commission opened its general meeting, and both sides claimed the latest scientific findings bolstered their positions.

Japan and Norway pushed for a resumption of commercial whaling, saying the minke whale, the small species they want to hunt, is not endangered. The commission endorsed the ban in 1982, but it was not fully effective until 1988.

Environmentalists and anti-whaling nations, including the United States, say the moratorium has not been in force long enough to get an adequate reading on whale populations, and that scientific figures reflect that uncertainty.

Whaling opponents, meanwhile, were divided over whether to push for a vote on a French proposal to establish a whale sanctuary in the waters south of 40 degrees south latitude.

Japan and Norway say they have the votes to block adoption of the plan, and some of its backers fear that a decisive loss could hurt plans to revive the sanctuary proposal next year.

The United States supports the creation of a sanctuary but members of the U.S. delegation indicated they thought it might not be the right time to push the issue. The French, however, were said to be determined to bring it to a vote.

The scientific committee was divided on the sanctuary plan and did not make a recommendation regarding it.

Deputy killed answering domestic dispute

FEMECULA, Calif. (AP) — A sheriff's deputy called to a domestic dispute was shot to death Sunday by a man who fled with his 12-year-old son and later killed himself, police said.

The man's girlfriend, Allison Jacobs, 22, was found dead in her apartment, while a 6-year-old girl also found in the apartment was unharmed, authorities said.

Mark John Kamaka, 37, was in the building parking lot with his son when he fatally shot the police officer and fled, Riverside County Sheriff's Detective Henry Sawicki said. The deputy, Kent Hintergardt, 33, a two-year department veteran, apparently did not draw his gun, authorities said.

Kamaka was found dead in his car after his son was dropped off on an interstate highway and used a roadside phone to call the California Highway Patrol, Sawicki said.

Kamaka had what appeared to be a self-inflicted gunshot wound, he said.

Paper rolls stall Tokyo traffic

TOKYO (AP) — Four people were killed and four seriously injured on a Tokyo highway when 46 huge paper rolls fell off a truck and slammed into traffic, police said today.

The accident occurred Sunday night as a 12.8-ton truck carrying the paper rolls, each weighing about a third of a ton, ran into the median strip when its driver lost control at 60 mph, the Metropolitan Police Department said.

All 46 paper rolls — which are about 3 feet in diameter — came off the truck and flew into oncoming traffic, police said.

They arrested the truck's driver on suspicion of professional negligence.

Boat explosion kills three, injures nine

CLEVELAND (AP) — A motorboat exploded into flames near a riverfront restaurant Sunday, blowing two people into the water, witnesses and fire officials said. At least three people were killed and nine were injured.

Three off-duty firefighters who were on the restaurant patio when the explosion occurred pulled a baby from the boat just before it was engulfed in flames.

"It was heroic," said Dwayne Salls, vice president of Shooters Restaurant.

The boat was docked in front of Shooters on the Cuyahoga River with at least five people aboard, including the 18-month-old child, Detective Jack Bornfeld said.

The cause of the explosion wasn't immediately known. Salls said the 30-foot motorboat exploded after a man started the engine.

Clinton takes economic package to heartland

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton, moving to refocus his presidency on the economy, looked to the heartland today to remind himself and others that he views his No. 1 job as creating jobs for workers.

Hounded in Washington by questions about his plans for war-torn Bosnia and other issues that intrude on the White House, Clinton was flying to Cleveland to campaign for his domestic programs — with a swing through a shopping mall and a speech to business leaders.

Chicago was on Tuesday's agenda, New York City on Wednesday's.

"He's going to talk about a couple of things he's talked about in Washington over the last couple of weeks, but he hasn't had an opportunity to tell the rest of the country," White House spokeswoman Lorraine Voles said Sunday.

The Chicago stop Tuesday is to feature a visit to a school, but details of the New York visit had not been completed Sunday.

Clinton's efforts last week to marshal allied support for military action in Bosnia not only were unsuccessful, they also were a distraction for a president that wants to focus on his domestic agenda.

"That is my frustration," Clinton told "NBC Nightly News" last week. "What I got elected to do was let America look at our own problems and our own challenges and deal with those things."

No new ground was likely to be broken during the three-day trip, but Clinton planned to stress that his economic proposals, include many spending cuts and would reduce the nation's deficit. He also planned to attempt to justify his request for major tax increase and spending increases, called "investments" by the White House.

The non-binding budget resolution passed by Congress would hold the budget deficit $496 billion below what it would be over five years without legislation. Clinton's original proposal would have reduced the deficit by $448 billion, with more than half of that money coming from new taxes.

Aides said Clinton also would use the three-day trip to highlight his proposal to allow students to borrow money directly from the federal government and pay it back based on a fraction of their income.

The trip evokes memories of his presidential campaign, when Clinton argued that investing in the American people and the U.S. economy, coupled with health care reforms, would create a stronger nation.

He began to return to domestic campaign themes recently — announcing his campaign finance proposal last week. However, Bosnia has captured most of the headlines and much of his time.

CINDY TURNER WYNONA PAYTE ELFI TUCKER TAYDE ALCARAZ

Should the U.S. get involved in the Bosnian situation?

Cindy Turner: "I don't think they should, but I really don't know enough about it. I'm just tired of war. Look at how many (are) going off here and there. No more war."

Wynona Payte: "I have kind of mixed feelings because my son is in the military. I'd hate for us to get in something else like Vietnam. But I think something needs to be done. We just can't sit back and let those people get annihilated."

Elfi Tucker: "I'm not sure about it. I mean, we've already got troops in Somalia, but I can see a need to send troops over there."

Tayde Alcaraz: "It kind of depends. Everybody wants to fix the problems here instead of elsewhere, but they're not looking at the big picture. I think there would be more of a problem if we tried to fix it later than now. If we try to fix the problem now when it's small, later on, it wouldn't have such a crucial effect on other nations."

Even after — indeed, especially after — time goes by, fundamental things apply. Alas, that apparently is not how the litigants in a French court case see things in a dispute involving a famous photograph . . . showing a couple kissing, oblivious to the other characters in a street scene, that would be unremarkable but for their youthful passion. . . . Whatever burned in them 43 years ago seems to have been replaced by an overheated desire to get what they think is overdue: cash, recognition, both. Now that the photo "The Kiss at City Hall" has been reproduced in magazines and on postcards, posters, T-shirts, etc., a husband and wife from Paris have come forward to claim it was their young selves photographer Robert Doisneau froze on film. But Doisneau's lawyer told a court the two were . . . hired actors. Although the court is expected to render a decision in a month, people who appreciated "The Kiss" . . . could declare (all) the principals guilty of spoiling a captivating image of romantic love . . .

Despite the enormous cost of gun violence to this state, some jurisdictions here in Southern California encourage their police departments to raise money by selling confiscated firearms rather than destroying them. Motivated by the pressing need for funds, these jurisdictions . . . together have accounted for an average of 126,000 transactions a year since 1985. Local officials extol the marginal financial benefits . . . But consider the staggering risk . . . (when compared) to what must be spent for police resources and hospital treatment related to gun violence. (And) the specter of police departments peddling pieces is simply unacceptable. Adhering to such a policy can be compared to putting money in a pocket with a hole in it. As much change is dropping out as is going in.

I found my old high school letter jacket the other day. I was looking for something else in the back of a closet at my mother's house and came upon it — blue with off-white leather sleeves and a block "N" sewn on the front.

I had forgotten it even existed. I suppose that 24 years ago when I graduated from high school I simply cast it aside as I leapt into the more material collegiate world.

"I put it up for you and kept it," my mother said, "in case you ever wanted it again."

I played basketball and baseball at Newnan High School. I lettered in both sports, which is how I got the jacket in the first place. My number, "12," is stitched on one of the sleeves. The face of a tiger—our mascot—is on the other.

Lewis Grizzard

Enough years have passed now that I probably could lie about my high school athletic career and get away with most of it.

I know guys who barely made the varsity who've managed to move up to all-state status with the passing of enough years.

But I'll be honest. I was an average athlete, if that. I averaged maybe 10 points a game in basketball, and shot the thing on every opportunity that came to me.

"Grizzard is the only person who never had a single assist in his entire basketball career," an ex-teammate was telling someone in my presence. "That's because he never passed the ball."

I hit over .300 my senior year in baseball, but they were all bloop singles, except for one of those bloopers that rolled in some high weeds in right field. By the time the ball was found, I was on third base with a triple.

"Why don't you take it home with you," my mother suggested after I had pulled the jacket out of the closet. "Maybe you'll have some children one day and they might like to see it."

I reminded my mother I was 41 and down three marriages, and the future didn't look that bright for offspring. But I suppose a mother can dream.

I did bring the jacket home with me. Alone, up in my bedroom, in front of a mirror, I pulled it over me for the first time in a long time.

A lot of names came back with the jacket. Clay, John, Buddy, Russell, Richard, Al. And Dudley and The Hound, who's still looking for his first base hit since he was 15.

And then there was Wingo, of course, the best high school short-stop I ever saw until a ground ball hit a pebble one day and bounced up and broke his jaw.

Ever hear that haunting song, "Where Are the Men I Used to Sport With?"

They've all got kids, I guess, and their mothers are happy.

It's funny about my jacket. It still fits well on my arms and shoulders, but I couldn't get it to button anymore.

I guess some shrinkage can be expected after all those years of neglect in the closet.

No rules for ex-presidents

He's tanned, he's rested, he's receiving . . .

In a classic what's-wrong-with-this-picture? appears the original preppy, former President Bush, wearing the conservative dark suit and striped tie Barbara has dry cleaned.

To his left, Sheik Jaber al-Sabah, the Kuwaiti emir, sits resplendent and exotic in flowing burnoose.

A coolie hunkers behind, awaiting instruction. All three are smiling like mules in a briar patch.

In his first major public appearance since leaving the White House, Bush has flown to Kuwait (in a Kuwaiti jet) to accept kudos for liberating the emir's personal gold fountains and public oil fields.

They say Kuwait children got the day off from school and rushed out to touch Bush's limo, treating him like a rock star, which once again proves that money cannot buy even amoeba-level awareness.

And Bush must have felt right at home at the all-male banquet the Kuwaitis threw to toast him. Why clutter a special occasion with women?

They owed him this party, a consolation prize. Americans fought and died to keep oil prices low, which would keep Bush in the White House. But it didn't work.

There is precedent for a retired president cashing in on the Oval Office abroad: Ronald Reagan picked up his cool million from the grateful Japanese, laughing all the way through the flak to the bank. Will George follow in the Gipper's footsteps, or refrain from selling his prestige?

There were reports that Kuwaiti officials wanted to organize a "gift room" in which grateful citizens could place baubles for George and Barbara. Who knows? Such a room might have made the Japanese honorary for the Great Communicator's speech paltry in comparison. To have a gaggle of billionaire sheiks beholden to you gives new meaning to the old phrase "debt of gratitude."

There's been a lot of water under the infrastructure since another former president, Harry Truman, refused a brand-new automobile import, the Toyota, as a post-presidency gift. He called it inappropriate. (This was, of course, long before imported automobiles were a threat to the domestic kind.)

But then, Truman spent his retirement going to the library and friends' funerals, not to sheik's shindigs.

There are no rules for ex-presidents. They can spend time building housing for poor people, or teeing off at celebrity golf tournaments, whichever turns them on after we, the people, turn them out. They can keep a high profile, a low profile, or find their profile on a penny.

Nobody expects that much from an ex. really, except that he dictate a few dignified memoirs and refrain from frequenting strip joints, activity reserved for former congressmen.

One of the most successful ex-presidents has been Richard Nixon, who retired to keep from being fired but excelled at that greatest of American political past times — staying out of jail. Nobody has ever worked harder at being a former anything, much less a former president.

Not only has Nixon maintained a kind of stoic dignity typical of his Quaker roots, he's actually improved his reputation in the years since Watergate.

By counseling anyone in power who will listen and condemning those who won't, he's anointed himself as a sort of Lean Cuisine Churchill, never mind pesky details like true wisdom and morality, traits required of most elder statesmen.

One can imagine Tricky Dick — as he was called long, long ago — sitting with a red dog at his feet, penning an entire library of flattering autobiographies. Maybe Pat needlepointed a watchword to keep him optimistic and on track: It's improved relations with Red China, stupid.

Nixon, too, is one of our more economical exes, the only past president to refuse the Secret Service protection that he's entitled to.

They say you can tell the most about a person's character by what he does when nobody's looking. The same goes for politicians, especially ex-presidents. No longer hounded by the press or bound by historical ethics, their characters become clearer than ever.

That Bush has chosen to revel in an exorbitant remembrance of his military moment should not surprise anyone. If he accepts showers of gifts, it will be a matter of personal conscience and taste.

We once chose him, and now he can choose to do as he wishes.

Maine doctors take on malpractice suits

Up in Maine, Yankee practicality is slugging it out with rising health-care costs. This hot deserves America's attention.

All told, malpractice suits and the defensive medicine practiced to blunt them add perhaps $30 billion annually to the nation's health tab. To reduce their malpractice insurance premiums, most Maine doctors in four fields — radiology, obstetrics and gynecology, emergency medicine, and anesthesiology — have joined a 1990 state program that shields them from many patient suits if they follow "checklists," or treatment guidelines, for various illnesses and injuries.

Under the Maine law, doctors who heed the checklists and render otherwise competent care are almost immune from suits. M.D.s may even "reasonably" veer from the guidelines without liability. The hope is that, with fewer X-rays and MRIs being prescribed solely to foil trial lawyers, medical bills will shrink. Doctors' insurance costs likewise should tumble as malpractice suits become harder to engineer.

It will be objected that "Jiffy Lube doctoring" — healing by checklist — poses risks. One is that politicians, not physicians, set treatment standards. Another: The system belittles the diagnostic "sixth sense" of many gifted doctors. But under Maine's program — and others being considered in Vermont, Minnesota and Florida — M.D. participation is voluntary, and physicians with a hunch can order tests not on the legislative to-do list.

Besides, more precise standards are needed throughout the health-care pasture to dissuade the heavy milkers. These include not only patients and tortsmen out to make a killing, but also insurers who exaggerate malpractice risks (many injuries are in fact loath to string up Doc Adams) and physicians who send their clients for needless tests to clinics that the physicians own.

On the health-care fight card, of course, the main event is in Washington, where President Clinton is pondering national treatment checklists. Alas, Maine's bold plan is too new to emulate. The only sure way to curb outlandish malpractice costs is to cap jury awards. We hope Sluggo Bill will step into the ring with the trial lawyers.

Opportunities abound local Hispanics to become involved in shaping the future for their community.

Several committees and councils have formed recently with the primary focus to increased involvement and participation of the Hispanic community in the areas of business and education.

The Howard College Minority and Small Business Breakfasts each month brings together small business owners, such as Jimmy Marin, owner of an Exxon station on Fourth Street, with corporations such as TU Electric and Fina Oil & Chemical.

The breakfast is sponsored and coordinated by the Howard College Small Business Center. A minority business directory compiled by the center will be published this spring.

The Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce established the Chamber's Minority Involvement Committee in January. Spearheaded by chamber president-elect Kent Newson, the committee's purpose is to devise a long term plan to increase the involvement of minority business owners and professionals in chamber activities.

After a series of meetings and conducting a survey of the minority business atmosphere, the committee co-leaders are formulating long and short term plans.

The committee anticipates unveiling new programs inviting minority-business owners to partake in more business-oriented and chamber activities.

First National Bank of Big Spring, Howard County Extension Agent office and Hispanic Women for Progress have teamed up to conduct a seminar, scheduled for the fall, to provide information to college-bound students about financial aid, applications and deadlines, as well as giving a brief presentation on the role a financial institution plays in the college education funding.

Since its formation in 1988, HWP has had a strong commitment to education. It has coordinated parenting skills classes, tutoring sessions, college-bound student workshops and mini-bilingual classes for Big Spring Independent School District teachers.

The bank and extension office conducted banking seminars last year at the Sacred Heart Catholic Church and Lakeview Headstart Center.

The Hispanic population in Howard County is 39 percent. But Hispanic enrollment at the Howard College, the only institution of higher in the county, sat at 19.6 in the 1992-1993 school year. The college's administration concerned with the wide gap are taking steps to inform and attraction students.

A newly established minority council with its first meeting May 25 brings together college administrators and minority leaders together to discuss the strides made and to outline future programs.

Other steps taken by the college include having a non-traditional student recruiter and working with HWP on a mentor program.

Construction of the bridge bringing the diverse people in the community together to build a better Big Spring is well underway.

Recordatorio - Hispanic Women for Progress will meet Tuesday at the Howard College library at 6:30 p.m. For more information call Diolanda Perez at 264-5000.

League of United Latin American Citizens chapter 4495 meets the second Wednesday of the month at the Sparenberg Building, 309 S. Main St., at 7 p.m. For more information contact Melinda Marquez at 267-1173.

Dear Abby - Letters... Reactions varied to 'Vacillating'

DEAR READERS: "Vacillating in California" — a 76-year-old woman — wrote to say that she had been married to a practicing alcoholic for 42 years, and stayed with him because she wanted their two daughters to finish college. Their father died at home from cancer. During his long illness, his daughters refused to help their mother, saying, "He did it to himself," and they could never forgive him.
Mother was left with a $400,000 estate, and asked: "Shall I leave it to my daughters, or to the organization that cares for battered women in our community?"
My reply: "The battered women's organization gets my vote," and I asked my readers for their input.
I received an avalanche of mail (mostly negative). Read on:
DEAR ABBY: I am writing as the former wife of an alcoholic and an active member of Al-Anon. One letter cannot possibly describe the hellish lives those daughters must have led and the sort of abuse they had to endure. I think they deserve the $400,000 inheritance — which can't make up for what they've been through, but it might make a dent in their psychiatrists' bills.
I hope those daughters find their way to Al-Anon and Adult Children of Alcoholics. I don't blame them for turning their backs on their father after all he put them through. — BEEN THERE
DEAR ABBY: I'm with you 100 percent. Why should "Vacillating" leave her $400,000 to those two ungrateful daughters who refused to help their mother with their father's care when he was dying? I'm for helping battered women — not rewarding selfish brats. — WILLIE LEE CRADER, CHOWCHILLA, CALIF.

ily damaged. "We think that the damage is probably going to be in the tens of millions of dollars, if not in the hundreds of millions" said Jerry Johns, with the Southwestern Insurance Information Service.

Outside the city limits of Wylie, in Hunt-Collin County, residents are served by Cap Rock Electric Cooperative.

These areas received only minor damage, compared to that sustained in Wylie, according to Cap Rock spokesperson Teresa Kelly.

Three Cap Rock power lines were downed in one location and a barn was blown through power lines at another location. Crews had power restored within two hours, however.

Cap Rock acquired this service area when they merged the Hunt-Collin Electric Cooperative in 1992.

Eighteen people were taken to HCA Medical Center of Plano, said spokeswoman Sally Boesdorfer. Most of the patients had sustained cuts from flying glass, although one person had an injured leg. There were no life-threatening injuries and all of the patients were treated and released.

Eight people were taken to Baylor Medical Center at Garland, and three were admitted. All were in fair condition, a hospital spokeswoman said. Five people were taken to Richardson Medical Center and three to North Texas Medical Center in McKinney. They all had minor injuries, according to the hospitals.

At least 12 separate tornado warnings were issued over a 2 1/2-hour period covering all or parts of 14 counties on the south, east and northeast of Dallas.

Electricity was knocked out to about 8,000 customers in the storm area, said Patsy Miller of TU Electric. Gas lines had been broken at some of the damaged residents and businesses, according to Lone Star Gas spokesman Bob Jett. The gas was shut off to the area, he said.

A tornado passing over Lake Lavon, just northeast of Wylie, damaging more than three dozen boats, said Collin County Sheriff's Sgt. John Norton. There were also reports of two minor injuries there, he said.

Sarah Nicholson of Wylie had just made a withdrawal from an automatic teller machine at a bank when the storm hit. "All the windows in our van blew in," she said.

Ms. Nicholson took cover on the floor of the van and then sought shelter in a McDonald's restaurant that lost power and a window in the storm.

Ronnie Gold was in the McDonald's with his 6-year-old daughter and wife.

"My wife said, 'My God, Look!' and there was just tons of debris in the air just circling around," Gold said.

He herded patrons into the rear corner of the restaurant before the windows shattered. There were no serious injuries in the restaurant other than those caused by flying glass, Gold said.

A sandwich restaurant also was destroyed.

"The Subway is totally gone. It's on top of the bank," Ms. Nicholson said.

Bill Kunstmann was not at home when the storm hit, but he returned immediately to check on his three dogs.

His dogs were fine but he found his possessions ruined and his roof gone. He said he nearly passed by his house on his return.

"It was a lot shorter than I remembered it," Kunstmann said.

The twister hit Wylie, including a trailer park, after carving a path about 150 feet wide through the Hunters Ridge area of Sachse.

The police department in Sachse reported moderate to severe damage to 30 to 40 residences, although there were no reports of injuries.

A feed store in Kaufman was reported destroyed as the powerful storms pounded the Dallas area.

The storms extended into Central Texas, producing mostly heavy rains and flooding in several low-lying areas.

The Temple airport stopped service for about an hour Sunday afternoon as winds gusted at 55 mph and quarter-inch hail fell, said airport employee Pete Rodriguez.

Several roads were closed in Temple and Belton due to high water. "We've had your basic flooding that we get whenever we have heavy rain," said Temple police officer Dan Kallus.

Colleen Owings, a Bell County sheriff's dispatcher in Belton, said "parts of some major roads are flooded, but they're not shut down yet."

The system had stalled Saturday night to the north and west of Fort Worth, dumping enough rain to close U.S. 287 between Bowie and Henrietta and lashing out with tornadoes that sent residents ducking for cover.

Flash flooding was still reported Sunday afternoon as the system slowly progressed eastward. Up to 4 inches of rain had fallen in the Denison Dam area since Saturday night and street flooding was reported in parts of Grayson County.

Gene Baugh, who lives north of Gainesville on Moss Lake near the Texas-Oklahoma border, said Sunday morning the water had been rising for a couple of hours.

"It is pretty flooded," he said. "There's some people already stranded across the lake that can't get out."

Baugh said his mother called him to come over and help her neighbors. "They said her house is standing in water and for me to get over there and help get stuff moved out."

YOU CAN by JOK CHURCH

Dear Beakman,
How does a mirror work?
Dear Luke,
A mirror works a lot like the bumpers on a pool table: like a bank shot with lightwaves, like a cueball bounces when it hits the edge of a pool table.
Mirrors bounce out light in uniform lines. For that to happen, mirrors have to be very smooth with no roughness larger than 1/25,000 of an inch. Rough stuff scatters light in all different directions.

Beakman & Jax
Send your question to: Beakman or Jax, P.O. Box 30177, Kansas City, MO 64112

WALLS & MIRRORS

How A Wall Works:
Even though a wall looks smooth, up close it's very rough. That means light won't bounce off in straight lines. The light scatters in different directions.

How A Mirror Works:
Light comes into the mirror, goes through the glass and is bounced off a thin layer of aluminum or silver. The angle that light enters a flat mirror (angle A) always equals the angle it bounces out (angle B).

If this angle stuff is confusing, just think of a rearview mirror. The image you see is light bouncing out of the mirror at the opposite angle it entered from. It's also how a periscope works, and You Can build one of those.

experiment #1
Up Periscope!
WHAT YOU NEED: Shoe box - 2 pocket mirrors - tape - scissors
WHAT TO DO:
Look at the diagram and copy it with your box. You Can use your periscope to spy on people or to look around corners. Look in one flap to see out of the other. Light bounces off the top mirror and sends it to the second mirror, which bounces the light into your eyes.

Use tape to hold the flaps at a 45° angle. It may take a while.

Devoted to her community

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

Big Spring resident Joyce Crooker and her husband, Bill, had been on their way to Maine on their honeymoon in 1945 and decided to join the V-J Day celebration in New York City's Times Square.

Crooker said she realized the magnitude of the event amid multi-colored confetti, streamers and hundreds of thousands of cheering people.

"All the celebration was going on, and we were right in the middle of Times Square," she said. "We were so happy. You just felt the victory."

Like the Allies in WW II, Crooker celebrates daily her own victories in family, local civic activities and community development projects.

By junior high school, the Breckenridge native was attending school in Big Spring.

After graduating from Big Spring High School, she started attending Texas Tech University in 1941.

"I didn't finish school because the war was going on," said Crooker, the daughter of a local refinery credit manager and a homemaker.

"The young men were going into the service, and everyone felt they should be doing something," she added. "I became so patriotic, so I went to work at Webb Air Force Base at the Big Spring Bombardier School."

As a secretary and finally a court reporter at the base, which was closed in the mid 1970s, Crooker met Bill, a cadet at the Bombardier School.

"We were engaged before he left the states (as a bombardier)," she said. "He was shot down and taken prisoner by the Germans, and I found out about it when his parents sent me a wire on Dec. 6, 1944, stating that he had been taken prisoner."

"I was scared, but I had a positive feeling that he had survived," she added.

finally settling back in Big Spring in 1955.

As her husband worked at the local refinery, Crooker was starting their family, which now consists of: Billy, 38; Karen 43; and Dori, 34. The Crookers also have five grandchildren.

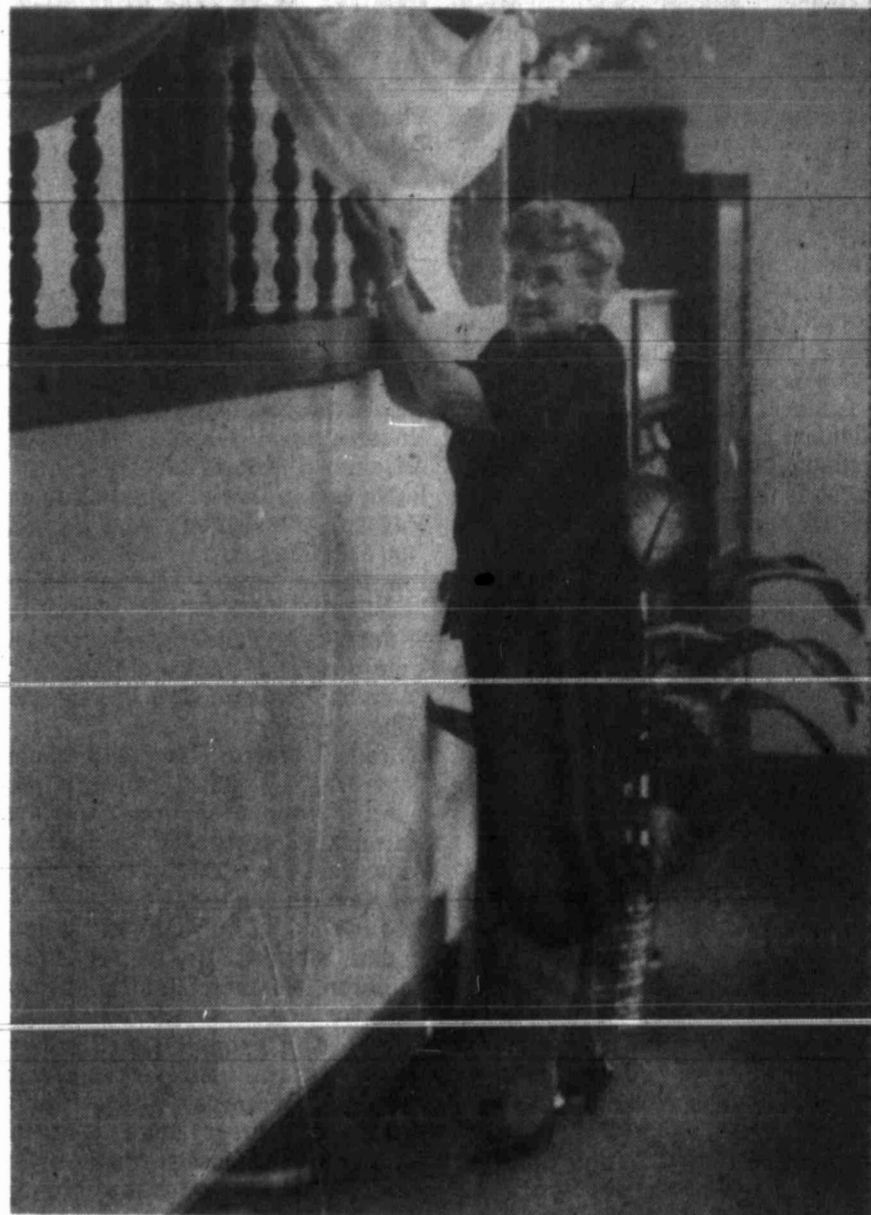

"I'm very thankful for my family; they mean everything to me," she said. "We're thankful we have not had a lot of problems. Both Bill and I have always had strong family connections."

"It was also a part of family to participate in church," added Crooker, who attends St. Mary's Episcopal Church. "That was part of the training of family background."

An important part of Crooker's background includes her involvement in community organizations like the Conventions and Visitors Bureau, Volunteer Services Council, Planning and Zoning Commission, Big Spring Citizens Advisory Board, Air Park Development Board and the Senior Citizen Center.

"I feel that Big Spring is very important in my life," she said. "If each person would work or participate in some way in their community, more good things would get going like the economy."

Although Crooker feels more participation is needed citywide, groups

like the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce and the Moore Development Board have been instrumental in improving the local economic climate.

"Industry is coming in. People are beginning to act on the importance of keeping our city beautiful," said Crooker, a former Clean Committee chairperson. "The more we try to improve the look of the city, the more attractive it becomes to those passing through on the foreside of Big Spring, and the more residents will have a sense of pride."

Crooker's sense of pride has been enhanced through her own accomplishments, while remembering a very important lesson she learned as a child.

"My grandmother told me something when I was very young. I woke up on the grouchy side one day, and she told me to be thankful that God gave me one more day to live," she said. "Life is really short, so you should try to get everything you can out of life."

Artist Hurd painted frescoes in West Texas

My father told me of meeting a famous artist in Lubbock many years back. The man and his wife were friendly even though my Okie dad had to be corrected in the pronunciation of her name. Henriette (drop the "H" and pretend you're French) and Peter Hurd were showing their works of art with fellow artist John Meigs who had worked with Peter Hurd on his famous mural at Texas Tech.

Angie Way

Born near Roswell, Peter Hurd studied art back East at Chadd's Ford, Penn., under N.C. Wyeth, and at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts. He married Wyeth's daughter and eventually returned to New Mexico where he established himself as a Regionalist specializing in painting in tempera. Tempera is paint in which the color pigment is mixed with egg yolk.

Peter Hurd is especially well known for his work on murals called frescoes. He used the same techniques of painting a "true" fresco as the great artists of the Renaissance (Michelangelo's ceiling of the Sistine Chapel, Leonardo's Last Supper). Lime plaster is coated onto a wall, and mineral pigments, mixed in pure water, are painted onto the wet plaster. The effect is slightly luminescent, very long-lasting and can be as monumental as the wall upon which it is painted.

In 1950 a mural committee was formed by the Board of Trustees of the West Texas Museum Association in Lubbock to "determine the nature and size of the painting" to go in the rotunda at Texas Tech, and, "to select an artist." Naturally the artist chosen was Peter Hurd. He loved the Southwest and understood the pioneer spirit in each of its residents.

Peter Hurd and members of the committee searched for pioneering individuals to be depicted in the many figures of the mural. From Big Spring, the likeness of the Pioneer Woman was found in Dora Nunn Roberts. The fresco shows her standing in a blue bonnet, hoe in hand before her wood house.

Hurd made sketches of the people which would eventually be enlarged to full size on paper. The full size drawing called a cartoon would act as a pattern for the mural. Only as much wet plaster would be applied each day as could be painted by the artist.

The fresco was completed in 1954 and dedicated on November 18. Novelist Paul Horgan was featured speaker. He spoke to the gathered crowd of the great impressions the mural created for him. "In the simplest material sense ... the artist worked for posterity ... The media that sustain human life — air, moisture, light — are limited upon these walls in magic essence ... what more full of wonder?"

Perhaps reading this you may feel compelled to go to Lubbock and view the mural. But, surely everyone in Big Spring knows of our very own Peter Hurd fresco mural? A work of art done about fifteen years earlier. And surely everyone knows where this mural is located? A contest then! Call the museum at 267-8255 today.

Tell us where Big Spring's Peter Hurd Mural is located and leave your name and phone number on the answering machine. We will award the first five correct answers with an H.W. Caylor: Frontier Artist book.

If you would like to know more about the mural and Peter Hurd's time in Big Spring, look for the next issue of the Heritage Museum's membership newsletter, The Historian.

World-class woodchopper

Dad proud of lumberjack

By JOHN MCCOY
Thomson News Service

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. — Jamie Cogar's father didn't want his son to become a lumberjack. Dad won — sort of.

Jamie decided to become a full-time lawyer AND a world-class woodchopper. His law degree is still four years away; his first world woodchopping title could come as early as this summer.

"There are a handful of elite axmen in the United States," says the 23-year-old West Virginia University graduate student. "I've been in that circle since last year."

That's when he won his third world handicap title. This year, though, Cogar loses his handicap advantage. He won't get a 3- or 4-second head start when he pairs up against Melvin Lentz, Rolin Eslinger, Rick Halverson, Matt Bush and other elite choppers. He'll have to match them swing-for-swing and cut-for-cut.

That suits him just fine.

"I'm determined to be one of the top axmen in the United States," he says. "I'd like to do it for my father. He's left me quite a legacy."

Jamie's father is Arden Cogar, Sr., the Webster Springs, Va., woodchopper who won 46 world woodchopping titles between 1961 and 1985 and is still competitive in many of today's events.

"Dad only went to school through the third grade, and he wanted me to get a better education than he had," Jamie says. "He was determined that I wasn't going to go into the timber business."

So Jamie hit the books. When he was 12, his father introduced him to competitive woodchopping. Though reluctant at first, the young man soon grew to love the sport.

"I found out how much fun it was, and I set out to become good at it," Cogar says. "I decided I had to get stronger, so I started powerlifting. I got a lot stronger, but it didn't do much for my chopping technique."

"Dad kept telling me that the weightlifting was messing me up. A couple of years ago, I started listening to him. I changed my workouts, and I immediately started getting better."

of Cogar switched from weightlifting to "plyometrics," exercises that emphasize speed and explosive action.

"I work out harder than anyone," he says. "I do a lot of jumping exercises, Marine-style push-ups and a tremendous amount of speed-bag work. Then, for strength, I'll swing a 16-pound hammer mounted on an ax handle. I swing it until my arms go numb, then I switch to a 10-pound hammer and swing that until I can't do it anymore."

And, for technique, he consults his father.

"Dad's technique is flawless," Cogar says. "At 59, he's still one of the top axmen in the United States. All along, he's been telling me how I should do things. I finally started listening to him."

For proof, one only has to watch as Jamie polishes his form. An oak of a man — 230 pounds packed into a 5-foot, 10-inch frame — he attacks the wood with frightening ferocity and power. A foot-thick log flies apart after half a dozen roundhouse swings. Chips the size of dictionaries scatter in all directions.

"Dad says I'm one of the hardest hitters he's ever seen," Cogar says. "I've got the power. Now all I need to do is work on the fine points."

Suns oust Lakers

By The Associated Press

The Los Angeles Lakers were one shot away from a third shocking victory at Phoenix and the biggest playoff upset in NBA history.

That shot in the final seconds of regulation came with the score tied 95-95 and the series tied 2-2. But Byron Scott's desperation 3-point attempt just before the buzzer missed and the Suns avoided first-round embarrassment by outscoring the Lakers 17-9 in overtime for a 112-104 victory.

NBA PLAYOFFS

"They were fantastic and they just showed what they were made of," Suns coach Paul Westphal said of the Lakers. "We are very fortunate to get past them."

Westphal put further pressure on himself when he guaranteed that the Suns would win the series after they trailed 2-0.

"I'm not gloating at all," he said. "I feel very humble to be able to escape with this win. The reason I said it (the guarantee) was because I believed we had a better team. They didn't make it easy."

Charles Barkley had 31 points and 14 rebounds for the Suns, who also got a sparkling overtime performance from Oliver Miller, the heavy-set rookie who lost 40 pounds during the season. Miller had 17 points, 14 rebounds and seven blocked shots, including nine points and five rebounds in the five-minute extra period.

"The team was worried about Miller's weight problems during the season," Barkley said. "There were a lot of times he wanted to give up, but we stayed on him. All the anxiety he caused us, he's making up for now."

In other playoffs Sunday, Cleveland ousted New Jersey 99-89 in another first-round fifth game and New York defeated Charlotte 111-95 in the opener of the second-round series.

The Hornets led by as many as 12 points, even though All-Star Larry Johnson sprained his right leg above the ankle a minute into the game, forcing him to the sidelines after he hit two jumpers in the first 46 seconds.

Building better bodies is Burk's main mission

By MIKE BUTTS
Sports Editor

For over two years now Dan Burk has been strengthening Big Spring High School athletics. Literally.

Burk is the school's strength coach. His efforts have recently won him a finalist spot for National High School Strength and Conditioning Professional of the Year.

"He's done an excellent job with our kids - both male and female - in the weight room," Big Spring Athletic Director Dwight Butler says. "One thing about weightlifting is it's not a fun thing to do at first. An attribute that (coach Burk) has is he's made it so the kids want to be in there (the weight room). They want to improve."

Burk, a Rotan native, worked with 19 different sports as the full-time strength coach for the University of Arizona before coming to Big Spring in March of 1991. He utilized different programs for different sports.

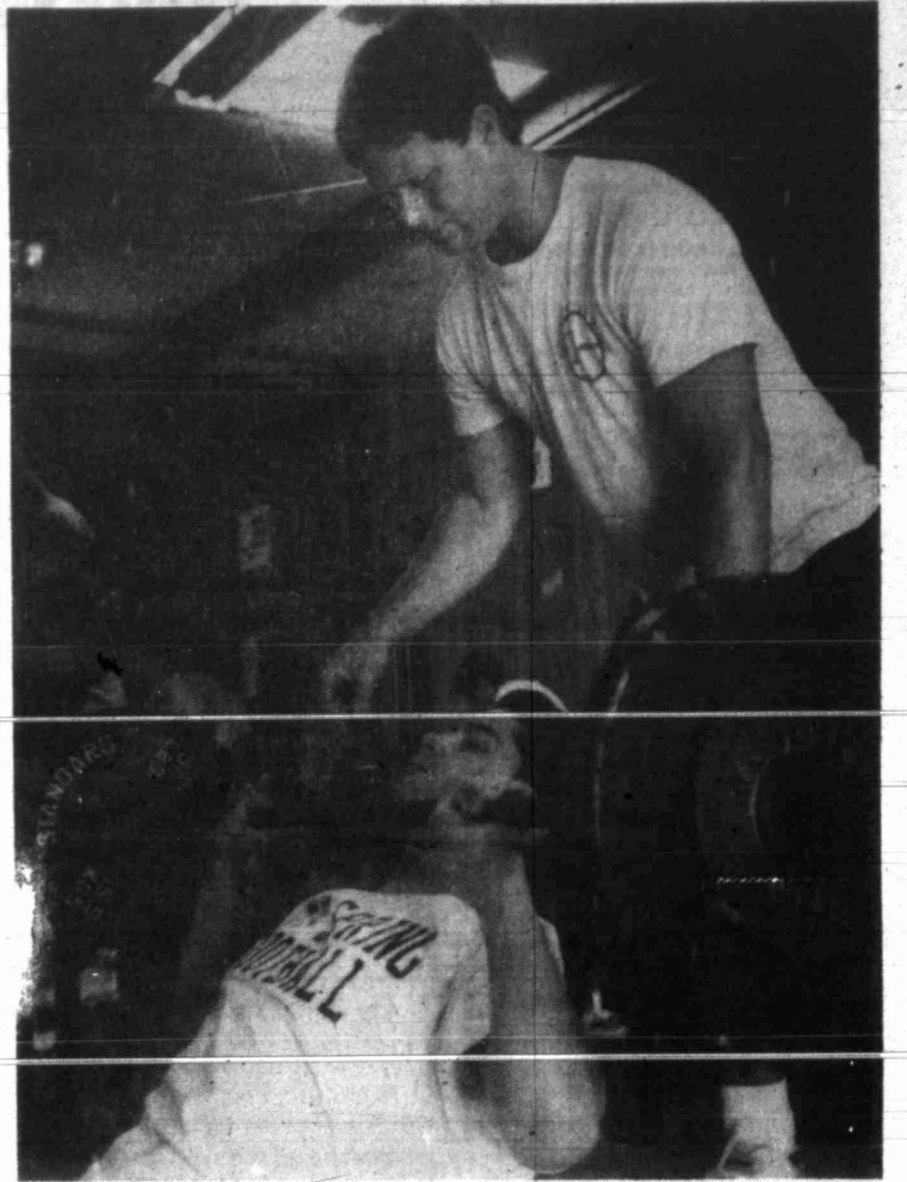

"You don't want to just train for strength," Burk says. "You want to develop better athletes."

Burk's nomination comes from the National Strength and Conditioning Association, of which he has been a member for 12 years. The organization has 14,000 members.

Burk has spoken at the association's national convention four times - in New Orleans, San Diego, Denver and Philadelphia. He also has published five articles on strength training - most of which have been about strength training for football. He spent two years on the NSCA board of directors.

"I think what's impressive is he's been able to take a bunch of small or smaller athletes and make them extremely strong," Butler says. "We don't have a bunch of really large athletes, (but for their size) our kids are probably as strong as anybody's."

Burk, 34, also coaches the offensive line and linebackers on the football team and the throwers on the track team. He finds out if he wins the national award at this year's NSCA conference in June in Las Vegas.

Burk says strength coaching can be as rewarding as coaching an athlete to perform a particular skill.

"What makes the strength part fun is when you see that strength transferred on the field," Burk says.

And he says strength alone won't make a star football player, but ...

"It doesn't make you a better football player, but it gives you more to work with," Burk says.

Philadelphia continues winning ways; Astros collar Cincinnati

By The Associated Press

Just about everything is going right for the Philadelphia Phillies.

Mariano Duncan hit a grand slam in the eighth inning off all-time saves leader Lee Smith Sunday to give the Phillies a 6-5 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals and a three-game series sweep at Veterans Stadium.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Duncan was the perfect batter to face Smith. He's now 8-for-15 lifetime against the hard-throwing right-hander.

"I know I hit him well, but I didn't know my average was that good," Duncan said. "After he walked Milt Thompson, I knew I didn't want to take a pitch. I wanted to swing the bat. I figured it would be a fastball. I just looked for my pitch and got it. As soon as I hit it, I knew it was out of the ballpark."

The victory improved Philadelphia's record to 22-7, tops in the majors. It tied the Phillies' best record ever after 29 games as they were 22-7 in both 1911 and 1913. Philadelphia has won 12 of its last 15 games.

Elsewhere in the NL it was Florida 6, New York 4; San Diego 5, Chicago 4; Pittsburgh 6, Montreal 5 in 11 innings; Atlanta 12, Colorado 7; Los Angeles 6, San Francisco 4; and Houston 6, Cincinnati 3.

ASTROS 6, REDS 3

At Houston, Pete Harnisch struck out 10 and scattered six hits over seven innings as Houston salvaged a split of the four-game series.

Houston got to Cincinnati starter Tim Lincecum (2-3) right away, scoring five runs in the first inning.

Harnisch (3-1), who walked only one, did not allow a base runner during the first three innings.

Doug Jones pitched a 1-2-3 ninth for his sixth save.

MARLINS 6, METS 4

The Mets lost for the 11th time in their last 13 games as Walt Weiss had three hits and drove in two runs to help Florida beat New York at Shea Stadium.

The loss dropped the last-place Mets 11 1/2 games behind first-place Philadelphia in the NL East and three games in back of the expansion Marlins. Florida (14-16) has won two of three in the four-game series against New York and seven of its last 11 overall.

Chris Hammond (2-3) gave up one run in seven innings for the victory and Bryan Harvey got the last three outs for his 10th save in 11 opportunities.

Mets starter Frank Tanana (2-2) was hit hard, allowing six runs and nine hits in three-plus innings.

PIRATES 6, EXPOS 5 (11 INNINGS)

Andy Van Slyke, who hit a two-run homer earlier for Pittsburgh, singled in the winning run in the 11th inning as Montreal closer John Wetteland blew a ninth-inning lead for the second straight game at Three Rivers Stadium.

Montreal took a 5-3 lead into the ninth before rookie Al Martin hit a two-out pinch homer off Jeff Shaw and Jay Bell doubled in the tying run against Wetteland.

Blas Minor (4-0) worked out of a bases-loaded, two-out jam in the top of the 11th. Brian Barnes fell to 1-1.

PADRES 5, CUBS 4

Mark Grace hit for the cycle, but it wasn't enough as San Diego held on to beat Chicago at Wrigley Field. Bob Geren and Fred McGriff hit solo homers for the Padres.

Grace hit a three-run homer off reliever Rich Rodriguez with two outs in the ninth inning to complete the cycle. He also doubled in the first, singled in the third and tripled in the seventh. The first baseman became the first Cubs player to hit for the cycle since Andre Dawson on April 29, 1987, against San Francisco.

Greg Harris (2-5) broke a personal three-game losing streak and Gene Harris got the final out for his seventh save. Jose Guzman dropped to 3-3.

BRAVES 12, ROCKIES 7

David Justice homered twice and drove in a career-high five runs, and Atlanta disappointed Colorado's one millionth fan by roughing up the Rockies for a four-game sweep. The Rockies became the fastest team to draw one million, doing it in 17 dates and surpassing Toronto's mark of 21 dates last year. A crowd of 70,786 gave the Rockies an average attendance of 59,863.

Greg McMichael (1-1) pitched three innings for his first major-league victory. Steve Reed (1-2) allowed five runs in one-plus inning.

DODGERS 6, GIANTS 4

Consecutive home runs by Darryl Strawberry and Tim Wallach in the sixth inning rallied Los Angeles past San Francisco at Candlestick Park.

The Dodgers got three homers off Jeff Brantley (2-2), and Orel Hershiser (4-3) struck out a season-high eight in seven innings to give LA a 2-1 series victory. The right-hander improved to 18-6 lifetime against the Giants.

O's rally to win; Brown, Texas subdue KC

By The Associated Press

Without Baltimore teammate Harold Reynolds, rookie Damon Buford would have been nothing in the ninth inning. With him, he was a hero.

Buford got the game-winning hit with two outs only because Reynolds kept it alive with an RBI single with the Orioles down to their final strike Sunday against the Toronto Blue Jays. A walk, or anything that didn't produce a run - and Tim Lincecum would have been a pinch-hitter against reliever Duane Ward.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

"I wanted to get an experienced guy out there who's faced Ward before," Baltimore manager Johnny Oates said after the 4-3 victory at Toronto. "But when Harold tied it, I went with my best defense."

Ironically, Buford has not made his mark in the majors with his glove. The 22-year-old son of former Oriole Don Buford is batting .500 (8-for-16) in six games since his recall from the minors. In the four-game series against the Blue Jays, he went 7-for-13 with two homers and six RBIs.

Elsewhere in the American League, it was New York 11, Detroit 2; Milwaukee 6, Boston 0; Chicago 6, Cleveland 5; Seattle 6, Minnesota 4; Texas 2, Kansas City 1, and California 7, Oakland 6 in 10 innings.

BREWERS 6, RED SOX 0
Milwaukee's Mike Boddicker used an assortment of off-speed pitches to keep Boston off balance, giving up four hits in 7 2/3 innings.

Texas Rangers Julio Franco, left, and Juan Gonzalez celebrate at home plate after Gonzalez hit a two-run home run in the fourth inning of their game with Kansas City Sunday in Kansas City. Texas won, 2-1.

Boddicker (2-1) allowed a double to Ernest Riles and infield single to Carlos Quintana in the first. The visiting Red Sox didn't get another hit until Mike Greenwell's two-out single in the sixth.

NEW YORK'S SPIKE OWEN had a three-run homer, drove in four runs and scored three, and Bob Wickman won his seventh straight decision.

Wickman (4-0), who allowed two runs on 12 hits in eight innings plus, is 10-1 in his career. The start is second-best in team history behind Whitey Ford's 16-1 beginning.

WHITE SOX 6, INDIANS 5

George Bell singled home Ozzie Guillen in the ninth inning, giving surging Chicago a three-game sweep. Guillen opened with a bloop single off reliever Derek Lilliquist (1-1). Joey Cora sacrificed and Guillen took third when first baseman Paul Sorrento booted Lance Johnson's grounder.

MARINERS 6, TWINS 4

Seattle continued its early-season power binge, getting home runs and three RBIs apiece from Tino Martinez and Ken Griffey Jr.

Public Notice

On April 16, 1993, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company (SWBT) filed an application with the Public Utility Commission of Texas (Commission) for approval of a new optional service, Network Subscriber Information Interface (NSII). NSII is a new service feature developed primarily for the provision of Voice Messaging Service (VMS). It will give a VMS provider (as SWBT's customer) the ability to receive originating call information from SWBT's central office and to activate and deactivate a Message Waiting Indicator (MWI) on the line of the VMS provider's patron. NSII also gives the VMS provider the ability to activate and deactivate an intermittent dial tone on a patron's line in multiple offices. The VMS provider will be able to perform these functions in multiple offices through a connection to a single Message Node office. The Message Node will be a pre-designated central office and will interconnect with all central offices within the Message Node Service Area. Upon approval of this application, NSII will be available to customers where facilities are available. Available facilities are not currently deployed statewide. The proposed effective date of this service is June 20, 1993.

SWBT estimates these new services will increase its annual revenues during the first year by approximately $2.4 million. VMS providers and Telephone Answering Services and their subscribers are the types of customers likely to be affected by approval of these services.

The proposed recurring monthly rate and nonrecurring installation charge is as follows:

Rate Element	Recurring	Nonrecurring
NSII	$6,000.00	$2,000.00

Persons who wish to comment on this application should notify the Commission by June 10, 1993. Requests for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd., Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757, or you may call the Public Utility Commission Public Information Office at 512-458-0256, or 512-458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.
