Man crosses Atlantic in bathtub-sized boat

The Associated Press

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — A 50-year-old Briton has completed an Atlantic crossing in a bathtub-sized sailboat shorter than he is tall.

Tom McNally of Liverpool, England, docked Monday morning in San Juan's harbor, his first port of call since leaving the Portuguese island of Madeira, off the African coast, on Feb. 13.

"No one believed you could navigate such a small, round boat," he told the Associated Press. "I made it to my planned destination. I'm quite proud of that."

McNally said his voyage sets records for the smallest vessel used in an ocean crossing, and the first crossing in a vessel smaller than its occupant.

McNally is 6 feet tall. The boat, which resembles an amusement park bumper car with a clear bubble top and a sail, is 5 feet, 4 1/2 inches long.

"It's a good strong form. The smaller the vessel, the stronger it is," he said in a telephone interview. "The problem is living in the thing for a few months."

He described his living space as "about as much space as under the kitchen counter, beneath the sink. To lift one leg, you have to move the other over."

The boat cost at least $15,000 to construct, he said. "Please don't call it a bathtub. I hate it when people call it a bathtub."

He added: "Actually, it's smaller than most bathtubs."

McNally originally set sail Dec. 28 from Sagres, Portugal, and was just three days into his voyage when he bumped into a deep sea ferry.

"I was sucked into the side (of the ferry) and rolled along the side," he recounted. "I fell out of the boat but held on to the mast. It was a bit of a nightmare."

His boat was damaged, leaking beneath the water line.

City-county jail facility an answer?

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

Construction of a 200-bed city-county jail, requiring no tax increase and covering costs by renting space for area prisoners, may be recommended to the city council and county commissioners within the next two weeks.

"From there they're going to let them decide if they're going to take our recommendation or deviate from that," said Danny Weir, co-chairman of a city-county jail committee of about a dozen people that studied the issue six months. "I don't know what will happen but we kind of feel it will be acceptable to everyone."

A new county jail is needed because the current facility lacks enough space to handle a growing jail population and is unable to meet updated state standards. For example, there's no outside recreation area. The city wants to close its facility to cut costs and liability.

Details are still being worked on, but a preliminary report last week from the committee proposes:

- No tax increase, and therefore, no bonds to be approved by voters. Interest rates for certificates of obligation are low. A $3.8 million construction cost would be paid out at $300,000 a year for 20 years.
- Renting beds to the state and other counties with overcrowded facilities to defray costs and possibly allow a profit. Only 74 beds are needed for local use, a consultant projected last year. The committee figures as much as $2.1 million can be collected in revenue annually, compared to a $1.5 million operating cost.
- Operation by the Howard County Sheriff's Office with the city contracting for space and services. City payment could be a set monthly or annual fee.
- A centralized dispatch system for sheriff, city police and 911 emergency system will be included and operated by sheriff's office personnel. The city and 911 would contract for the service.

Among the committee's findings is that a prison of 75 beds or less would be a money loser. A 75-bed facility would lose $52,000 a year, a 50-bed unit would lose $347,500.

"We felt that it was a good possibility to make some money from this to carry itself," Weir said of recommending 200 beds.

One issue still being discussed is whether the city should contract on a $22.50 per prisoner per day charge or just pay a set monthly or annual fee. Some county commissioners said they would rather see a set fee.

"I think it'll be a set fee," Weir said. "All the city's trying to do is get out of the jail business. I don't think there'll be any problem in coming to terms on something like that."

Firm's expansion provides winning proposition for city

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

It's a win-win situation as a private company expands into a larger building, freeing up space taken from a state truck inspection operation which caused a loss of revenue to the county.

When city officials in October rented half of a building in Big Spring McMahon-Wrinkle Airpark to American Limestone Co. of Dallas, creating six jobs, it was unknown it would reduce inspections by the Texas Department of Public Safety, also using the building. Lost in county ticket revenues was an estimated $50,000 in six months.

City officials say county and DPS officials agreed to the arrangement beforehand but county officials say they were not informed. Nevertheless, following complaints last month, city officials worked a new deal with American Limestone that benefits all and may result in 14 more jobs added by the stone-cutting company.

"American Limestone is doing very well and they needed to expand their operation so we approached them about expanding into another building," said Big Spring City Manager Lanny Lambert. "They saw it, they liked it, we made a deal and here we are."

"We appreciate it," said Howard County Judge Ben Lockhart.

The county will now try to bring back a state and region-wide annual truck inspection operation that last year brought in an estimated $8,000 in ticket fines. Other losses from reduced ongoing inspections are expected to stop.

"Hopefully, in the future we can bring the region-wide truck inspection through DPS back to Big Spring," said Precinct 3 Commissioner Bill Crooker.

American Limestone began moving this weekend, with help from the city, from Building 1101 to Building 75 in the airpark. The move is expected to take three weeks, with only one week of operation lost, Lambert said.

The company's moving from 12,000-square-foot of space to 32,000-square-foot, Lambert said. More jobs may be added as a result.

"I think he might go up to 20 at the new location," he said. "That's what they told us."

The new building recently became available because IBI, a drilling rig company renting it, went into bankruptcy proceedings. The city is cleaning the building used by IBI.

Arrest expected in Cinco de Mayo shooting

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

More selectiveness in attendees and tightened security next year could be a deterrent to violence such as a shooting that occurred near the Cinco De Mayo celebration during the weekend, Hispanic leaders said.

Ernesto Gomez, 31, of Big Spring was shot in the thigh with a .22 or .25 caliber weapon on 2nd and Main Street, a lot outside of the festival, at 12:39 a.m. Sunday following the second festival night, police reported.

Gomez' assailant remained at-large this morning, said Detective Sgt. Scott Griffin, who expects to see an arrest today.

The man is to be charged with aggravated assault with a deadly weapon, he said.

Gomez has been treated and released from Scenic Mountain Medical Center.

Local officials, as well as Hispanic leaders, agreed occurrences such as the shooting, the first near the festival, are unfortunate but inevitable.

Some disagree on catalysts for such violence, as well as ways to avoid its association with future festivals.

"There's going to be a bad element, whether there's alcohol or not," said Raul Marquez, organizer of the festival and president of LULAC Chapter 4495.

"Usually, when there's a fight, it's usually the same people, and for the same things — a long-standing family dispute or involving a girl and boyfriend." He added there were about 10 "scuffles" involving attendees, compared to about 40 reported last year.

Howard County Sheriff's deputies patrolled the downtown festival grounds, located in the 100 block of Third Street, to act as a deterrent to violence, Reserve Deputy Willie Rengel said.

"(The shooting) is the first one there has ever been, if I'm not mistaken," Rengel said. "There were more problems last year, but other than that, there weren't that many other problems." There were no festival-related arrests reported by the sheriff's office.

"You get any group together in a confined space with alcohol, you're going to have fights," a police department spokesperson said.

Hispanic leader Pat Deanda added, "Once you have a crowd and any drinking involved, the potential for violence is there. We need a confined area where we can monitor who comes in and who goes out."

Marquez agreed about stepping up monitoring efforts, adding that a potential site for the festival next year is the McMahon-Wrinkle Airpark.

"If we move to the air park, we can have a better security process — a place like the old golf course with one way in and one way out," Marquez said. "If we have to search people, I'm for it, because my interest is in the security and safety of the families that are there to have a good time."

Another report included an out-of-town vendor selling novelties which included an assortment of knives.

"The deputies put a stop to it ... like the smoke bombs, they had to quit selling them," Marquez said. "We really had more positive things than negative things happen."

"Some would say, 'Don't have the festival,' but that would be a big mistake," he added. "It would be like taking away the Fourth of July, and not acknowledging the Hispanic community."

Clinton targets lobbyists, says he'll travel more

The Associated Press

CHICAGO — One minute President Clinton was shaking hands and holding babies, the next he was bashing lobbyists and "preachers of pessimism" who oppose his programs. There's little doubt he'll be back for more.

"I think I stayed in Washington too much," Clinton said Monday in blaming himself for letting public support of his economic package slide. "I need to be out here with the people."

For all his problems back in Washington, from negotiating his budget package with Congress to the crisis in Bosnia, Clinton had a candidate's spring in his step as he promoted his programs in Ohio and Illinois, predicting his troubles soon would pass.

"All I have to do, I think, is go out here and ask them to help me sell it because the American people want something done about the deficit," he said. "They want something done about the economy."

As he made his pitch, the president took a populist tone, telling middle-class families he was fighting their fight and saying the great enemy was lobbyists. "people in Washington who believe the most important thing we can do is to avoid change at all cost."

After a day in Cleveland, Clinton was traveling today to a high school in suburban Chicago, where aides said he would promote his national service program while making a renewed pitch for his overall economic package.

Freeing Clinton from the confines of Washington is a major element of the new White House sales strategy. The president's clear goal on his two-day Midwest swing was to regain the upper hand, and public backing, in the economic debate just as Congress begins to turn his February budget outline into legislation.

"This is where he strength comes from," said Clinton adviser Paul Begala. "This is where his roots are."

The president acknowledged there was something in his package for everyone to hate. But more importantly, he argued, the full package would reduce the deficit and begin strategic "investments" in education, children, welfare reform and his new national service program, something he said the public would support again once reminded of the reach of his plans.

"I need to get the public focused back on the big issues," he said.

Clinton delivered a mild rebuke to Republicans who have tried to block him, but he also held out an olive branch of bipartisanship and cast lobbyists as his plan's greatest enemy.

"There are 80,000 lobbyists in Washington making sure that I can't take care of your interests," Clinton told one audience in Cleveland.

"Let's get everyone involved in taking on the lobbyists," he told reporters at another point. "That's what we're trying to do here."

Critics see more to Clinton's attacks on lobbyists and special interests than populist assaults on forces the public views with at least as much disdain as politicians.

Europe wants U.S. to defend Bosnian zones

The Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Cool to President Clinton's call for military action against the Bosnian Serbs, the European Community is suggesting Washington send ground troops to protect "safe havens" like Zepa.

on the ground in Bosnia the EC ministers were seeking to neutralize Washington's call for air strikes. In their opposition to air strikes, the Europeans have long cited the safety of their soldiers working on U.N. humanitarian and monitoring missions.

A burned out and nearly deserted Muslim enclave, Zepa had been ravaged by Serb attackers.

EC foreign ministers made the request for American troops during a meeting Monday in Brussels, apparently in response to U.S. attempts to drum up European support for a plan to bomb Serb positions and exempt the outgunned forces of the Muslim-led Bosnian government from a U.N. arms embargo.

France has about 5,000 troops in the former Yugoslavia, and Britain has about 2,500.

The Danish minister said the EC proposal would involve "a low level" of U.S. troops. He said no figures were discussed.

Clinton has ruled out committing U.S. ground forces to the Bosnian conflict unless there is a peace plan in operation. He also has backed off in recent days from his military plans, acknowledging opposition at home and abroad.

In another alternative to military action, the European ministers offered to send monitors to the border between Serbia and Bosnia to help Serb President Slobodan Milosevic enforce a blockade on Bosnia's Serbs.

The European Community also asked Russia to send troops, which would be used to monitor six "safe areas" declared by the United Nations last week.

Small detachments of U.N. troops are already moving to demilitarize two of the areas — Srebrenica and Zepa — both Muslim enclaves besieged by Serbs.

Milosevic, the rebels' chief patron, promised last Thursday to cut off all military aid.

EC peace mediator Lord David Owen said he was confident pressure from fellow Serbs could sway the Bosnian Serbs to accept the U.N. peace plan their self-styled parliament rejected last week — for a third time.

Canadian troops have reported success in demilitarizing Srebrenica, but U.N. forces that arrived Monday in Zepa found the town almost deserted after several days of Serb shelling.

About 40,000 people lived in Zepa and surrounding villages, including 6,000 in the town itself, before fleeing last week's Serb siege.

"More and more this is becoming a debate among the Serbian people," Owen told reporters after meeting the ministers. "And more and more they are coming down in favor of peace."

Danish Foreign Minister Niels Helveg Petersen denied that by suggesting the United States put troops

Bodies were lying around town, including 10 in a mosque, and 200 wounded people needed to be evacuated by helicopter, U.N. officials said.

Zepa is 45 miles northeast of Sarajevo and in a rugged mountain valley.

"If the situation report in Zepa is correct, then it is a humanitarian catastrophe of tremendous magnitude if there are 50 people wandering around a city that was at least 6,000 before the shelling," said John McMillan, a U.N. aid official in Sarajevo.

South Korean clashes leave about 80 hurt

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — About 80 people were injured in clashes between militant students and riot police in Kwangju, a southern city preparing to mark the 13th anniversary of a bloody anti-government uprising.

Students hurling rocks and wielding steel and wooden sticks fought Monday night with about 1,500 riot police, who fired tear gas canisters, police said.

Three hours later, about 2,000 students assembled near central Kwangju, about 150 miles south of Seoul, to confront a roughly equal number of riot police, officers said.

Dozens of police and students were injured in each clash, police said.

There were no immediate reports of arrests.

Anti-government tension in Kwangju has increased as the anniversary of a May 18, 1980, pro-democracy demonstration approached. About 200 people were killed and more than 1,800 wounded.

French government to increase taxes

PARIS (AP) — France's conservative government has announced stiff tax increases intended to cut the deficit and stimulate the economy.

Prime Minister Edouard Balladur's budget proposal, unveiled Monday after a Cabinet meeting, includes a 16 percent increase in the tax on liquor and a 16-cent boost per gallon in the gasoline tax.

The increase would give France the highest gas tax in Europe. Gas already costs $4 and more a gallon.

Balladur also will double social security taxes — paid by workers, retirees and the jobless — that cover medical care, pensions and aid to families. During the campaign, he promised not to raise the tax.

Government ministers will have their salaries cut 10 percent under the plan, which is expected to be approved by the National Assembly.

Though polls show Balladur is highly popular after six weeks in office, the plan is likely to be his first major challenge. But he is betting his cuts in business taxes and funding for jobs and housing will stimulate the economy.

Somali warlord claims U.N. playing favorites

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — Warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid is accusing the U.N.-led coalition of playing favorites in Somalia's clan disputes, saying foreign troops have killed, tortured, robbed and harassed Somali citizens.

But he is refusing to provide specifics.

Aidid's allegations Monday focused on Kismayu, the southern port city.

Supporters of Col. Omar Jess, an Aidid ally, were forced out of Kismayu in March by backers of Mohamed Said Hirsi, known as Gen. Morgan. They have been living north of the city waiting for a chance to return.

About 100-200 of them tried last Friday, marching south before dawn with their light arms, when Belgian troops met them. The ensuing firefight left one Belgian soldier wounded and an unknown number of Somalis dead or wounded.

Meanwhile, the Republican National Senatorial Committee, headed by Texas Sen. Phil Gramm, issued a statement saying "Bill Clinton's White House has concluded that interim Democrat Sen. Bob Krueger cannot win the Senate race and will not come to Texas to campaign for him."

The statement cited reports in two national newsmagazines for its assessment.

Krueger scoffed at the suggestion.

Spanish U.N. soldiers stand on an armored vehicle watching the fighting between Muslims and Croats from a hill overlooking the city of Mostar Monday. Fighting between Muslims and Croats in Bosnia-Herzegovina shows that Western military intervention directed against Serbs alone will not end the carnage in the former Yugoslav republic.

Krueger gets endorsement in Senate runoff campaign

The Associated Press

AUSTIN — While interim Sen. Bob Krueger has won the endorsement of a defeated rival, Republicans are suggesting that President Clinton has given up hope that Democrats will hang onto the Texas Senate seat.

Krueger on Monday picked up the backing of Richard Fisher, the Dallas investor and former Ross Perot adviser who received 8 percent of the May 1 vote.

ready but devoid of character," he said.

"There is no doubt in my mind that Bob is a man of honor, a man of character and a man of deep integrity. He may not be as video-ready as his opponent, but he is a man of great character depth and that's what this campaign is all about," Fisher said.

Krueger's campaign is heavily bankrolled by the very special interests that Mr. Fisher has said he deplores.

Mrs. Hutchison, the state treasurer, earlier picked up the endorsements of Republican U.S. Reps. Joe Barton of Ennis and Jack Fields of Humble, who finished third and fourth in the race.

Responding, Republican Kay Bailey Hutchison's campaign said Fisher was being hypocritical in backing Krueger.

"Mr. Fisher has clearly decided his future political aspirations outweigh his nominal interest in changing the way business is done in Washington," said David Beckwith, Mrs. Hutchison's communications director.

He said Fisher, who spent $2 million of his own money, had criticized political action committees but "Mr.

Our political process has been hijacked by people who are video-

DEAR ABBY: Three cheers for the father who slapped his son because the lad called him a filthy name! And a pox on you, the boy's mother, and Children's Protective Services, which denied the father custodial privileges.

I raised seven children of my own without any advice from Dear Abby. When my oldest son was 16, he called me a filthy name in front of his peers, and not only did I slap him, I banged his head against the wall while a policeman stood by with a smile on his face. Then I dragged my 6-foot tax deduction home for a stimulating father and son chat, and politely informed him that if he ever talked like that to me again, he had better find another world to live in. Case closed.

This oldest son is now a father, and he thinks that instead of giving advice, you should hang it up and string beads.

Abby, you said that a father's slapping his son was "the ultimate humiliation"; my son feels it was an act of love. — DON GAUTREAUX, HICKORY HILLS, ILL.

DEAR DON: A father who boasts that he banged his son's head against the wall — and refers to him as a "tax deduction" — could hardly qualify for Father of the Year.

And the son who calls that kind of barbaric behavior "an act of love" is as sick and misguided as his father. I recommend a psychiatrist with two couches.

DEAR ABBY: The other night, I had a first date with an attractive, well-educated, young professional woman. During dinner, she casually wove several foul-mouthed remarks into an otherwise interesting and enjoyable evening.

I cannot understand why so many women these days go in for crude language. Maybe they think it makes them sound sophisticated. To me, it is extremely unrefined and a big turnoff. I suppose some men like tough-talking women, but I am not one of them.

I would appreciate your thoughts on this as well as the opinions of some of your male readers. — GROSSED OUT IN ATLANTA

DEAR GROSSED OUT: I find vulgar language from women or men equally offensive. Since you found the young woman attractive and interesting — except for her foul language — why don't you let her know that you were turned off, and why? You could be doing her an enormous favor.

DEAR ABBY: You recently published a letter from a reader who requested that her obituary include the fact that she had been a heavy smoker. Perhaps that started a new trend, because I read the following obituary in The New York Times on Feb. 25, 1993:

"Jane Doe, R.N., died after a long illness ... Daughter of ... sister of ... cousin of ... A brilliant person, iconoclast and achiever. She smoked two packs of cigarettes daily for 40 years. In addition to her family and friends, the tobacco industry will miss her. Graveside service Feb. 28 at 1 p.m." — NAOMI SCHLESSEL, GREAT NECK, N.Y.

DEAR NAOMI SCHLESSEL: Thank you. This will go into my "Now I've Seen Everything" file.

Is it fair when adult disagreements hurt children?

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

Some local youth are talking about two events, one in Texas and one in a country far away, where children have been killed or are still being killed because of some confusing adult problems.

13-year-old Jacob Strain and 12-year-old Heath Heath said they feel very sad when they think about 17 children who died in Waco in April because government agents were trying to catch someone they thought was a very bad person.

The agents suspected that David Koresh, a religious leader, had a large amount of weapons where he lived, so they wanted to arrest him.

Instead of leaving, Koresh and his followers were in a shoot-out with the agents, and some agents and Koresh followers were killed.

"It is all David Koresh's fault," Jacob said.

Heath added, "I think he was crazy. Anyone who would do that is crazy."

He was a member of a group of religious people, called the Branch Davidians. They believed they should live close together and avoid people outside of their building.

At left, a family in Bosnia-Herzegovina tries to make the best of life in a refugee camp. They were one of many families forced out of their homes because of the war. At right, one of the child survivors of Branch Davidian tragedy in Waco drew this picture of herself after she was taken out of the building at put in a safe place.

The group also followed some very strict rules about things like drinking, smoking and marriage.

Adults had different opinions about what happened the day the fire killed the people in the building, called a compound.

After 51 days of waiting for a surrender, FBI agents began to try harder, using tear gas and smashing walls of the compound.

Some believed that maybe the FBI accidentally caused the fire that killed everyone, and others said Koresh would rather die than surrender, so he told his people to start the fire that eventually killed them.

"He could have turned himself in if he really cared about the people that were in there," Heath said. "All those kids wouldn't be dead."

Some people said Koresh kept the other people like prisoners, and others said the people feared the government agents might hurt them, or they did not want to leave their leader.

Both boys agreed that the event was tragic and the deaths of the children was the saddest part.

"It makes me feel sick when I think about it," Heath said.

Jacob added, "I just hope something like that won't happen again."

One event that happens again and again all over the world is fighting amongst people of different ethnic groups — groups that are different because of religion, skin color or national background.

Countries known as Bosnia and Serbia were once a part of a larger country known as Yugoslavia. Recently people there have been fighting all the time because of their differences.

A tragic result of this civil war is the death of children, some so young they do not understand what is happening.

"I think all people are equal, and they shouldn't be fighting against each other," Jacob said.

Heath added, "It shouldn't be going on because all those children are being hurt the most."

The boys were not sure whether the United States, which is trying to send food and other help to the people, should make the countries stop fighting.

"I don't know," Heath said. "I really don't think we should, though, because it's not one of our problems."

Jacob added, "I really don't know if we should fight there. Well, maybe, but it really depends on how bad it gets."

Never missed

13 years perfect attendance

By The Associated Press

SCOTIA, Neb. — High school senior Rhonda Barnes wasn't in school one day this week, but that won't affect her perfect attendance record — set over 13 years.

She missed classes Wednesday because she was on the senior class trip to Lincoln.

The 18-year-old North Loup-Scotia High School student has one week to go to finish her school career without an absence.

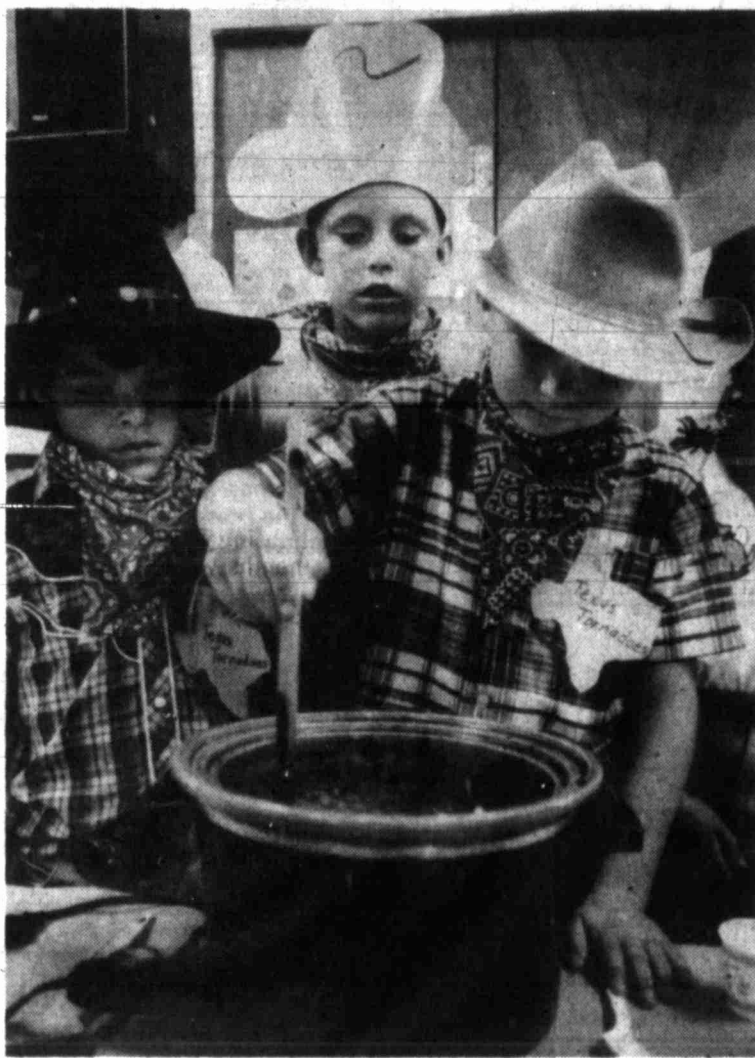

"That should look good on a resume," said Barnes, who graduates May 14 and hopes to go a vocational school and eventually work in business.

Several times she was tempted to skip out with friends, but refrained.

"After you've done it so long you don't want to screw it up," Barnes said. "Plus my mom wouldn't be too happy with me."

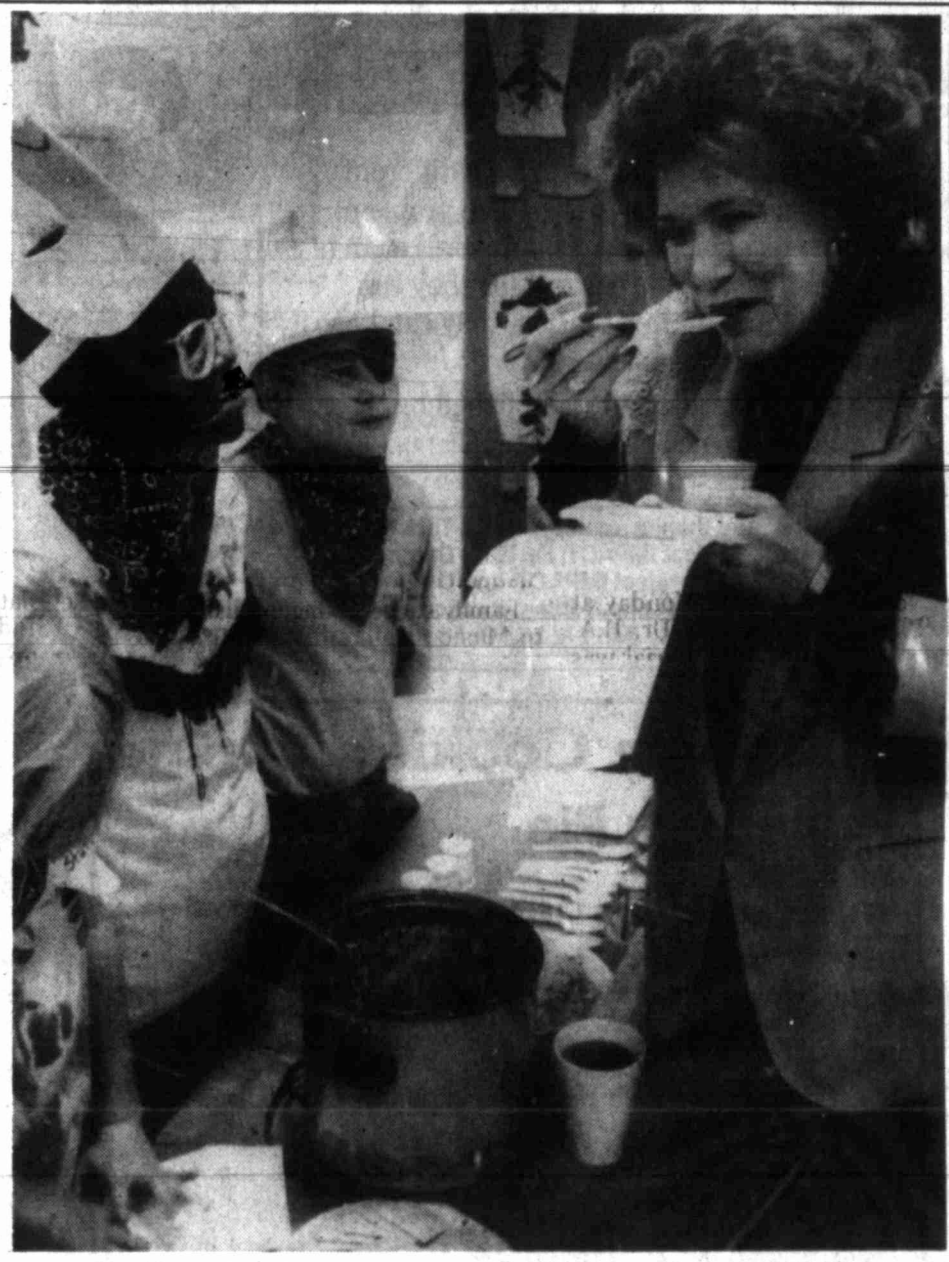

Barnes' report cards reflect her love for school. She received A's and B's and is a member of the honor society. She also works one period a day in the principal's office doing clerical work.

Many teens don't get enough sleep

By LORI DARVAS
Scripps Howard News Service

When you're a little kid, sleep isn't much of a problem. Children don't have the combination of schedules, homework and favorite television shows that tend to cut into valuable sleep time.

"Young children ... when they sleep, they sleep," says Dr. Martin Cohn, director of the Sleep Disorders Center of Southwest Florida in Naples. "When they're awake, they're awake. If their brain doesn't want to sleep, they don't sleep."

But then, as you get to be an adolescent, you get the pressure to stay up later and cut down on sleep. Your friends want to go to a late movie. You put off homework until the last minute. You start watching "The Amy Fisher Story" on television and, of course, you have to stay up for the conclusion.

Basically, sleep is the thing that cuts into more important activities.

"I think sleep's a waste of time," says Jay Farnham, a high school junior, putting words to a common attitude among her peers.

Teens, as a group, tend to need more sleep than other age groups, says Dr. Marcel Deray, director of the Sleep Disorders Center at Miami Children's Hospital.

Studies also have shown that teens tend to have what is called a "delayed sleep phase syndrome." In layman's terms, teens like to stay up late and sleep in late. That doesn't mesh with the school's schedule. "The fact is that the students are going to school at the wrong time"

Tips to help you get more ZZZZZs

Scripps Howard News Service

- Use your bed for sleeping only. If you use it for studying or reading, you'll associate it with those activities. Use it for sleeping only, and you'll associate it with sleeping.
- Listen to your body clock. Go to bed when you're tired.
- Determine how much sleep you need, and try to stay within an - hour of it.

- If you're in a noisy area and you can't sleep, try white noise. White noise is continual noise, like the hum of a fan.
- Have a snack before bed. Hunger can keep you awake.
- Drink milk. It has a natural substance in it that helps you sleep.
- Exercise during the day, but not right before bedtime. Exercise before bedtime will wake you up later in the night.
- Stay away from caffeine.

What I live for:

Confessions of a sports fanatic

By DAN BREWSTER
Runnels Newspaper Staff

I play all kinds of sports. I'm always at a practice. I play football, basketball, track and baseball. My best sport is baseball. My positions are catcher, pitcher and first base. I've made all-stars two years in a row. I've played for five years.

In football I played center on the A-team. I also played tight end. In basketball it was a guard and post. I averaged two points a game. I've played for two years in track. I throw the discus and shot. I threw about 120 ft. in discus. In shot I threw about 38 ft. I've been throwing for two years. My coach is Coach Benner. He teaches me how to throw discus and shot. Sometimes I throw 136 ft. and sometimes I throw 110 ft. Other times I have bad days and I can't throw the way Coach Benner wants me to so I work on it as long as I can.

I've played sports since I was seven years old. I live to play sports.

A Way of Understanding Math

What Math Thinkers Do

Your grandfather has a surprise for you. He will give you the four coins he is holding if you will tell him what they are. The total value is 17 cents.

Math thinkers often work in groups so they learn both cooperation and math.

Math thinkers often use objects to help them understand the strategies they are using.

Can you name the coins?

All around the country, people are thinking hard about math and how and what is being taught.

We all realize that in today's world, we all need to understand a lot more about math.

Because of new information about how students learn, many kids are studying different math strategies.

Much of what they are doing is based on a set of standards, or guides, set up by math teachers.

These experts feel students should learn math facts, but they also should learn strategies to help them think through problems.

Some kids even come up with different but correct answers to the same problem!

New technology makes our world change quickly. When kids learn skills they can apply to any math situation, they can keep up with these changes.

The standards were established by the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics.

The Mini Page thanks consultant Dr. Tom Rowan, co-director, project IMPACT; Dr. Honi Bamberger, math specialist, project IMPACT; and Dr. Brenda Hammond and Josepha Robles, math specialists, Montgomery County (Md.) Public Schools.

Gus Goodsport's Report Supersport: Tim Hardaway

Height: 6-0 Birthdate: 9-1-66
Weight: 195 College: Texas-El Paso

Tim Hardaway is in his fourth season as guard with the Golden State Warriors. He was drafted by the team in the first round in 1989.

Last season Tim was named to the All-NBA Team. He got the most votes of any guard.

He averaged 10 assists, third in the league, and 23.4 points per game.

He played in the 1991 and 1992 All-Star Games. He was the youngest player both years.

Tim's nickname is Tim Bug. He has been in several commercials. He raises money for the American Cancer Society.

Rookie Cookie's Recipe

Buttermilk Pie

You'll need:

- 1/2 cup butter or margarine, melted
- 1/2 cup buttermilk
- 1 2/3 cups sugar
- 1 unbaked pie shell
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 3 eggs, beaten

What to do:

- Combine butter or margarine and sugar in a large bowl. Mix well.
- Stir in eggs and vanilla. Mix well.
- Stir in buttermilk. Mix well.
- Pour mixture into pie shell.
- Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven for 1 hour and 20 minutes. Serves 6.

Rookie Cookie is expecting more guests. Can you double the recipe?

What Math Thinkers Do

Solve problems

Math thinkers think solving problems is fun.

- Fill in the pattern using numbers cut from your newspaper.

4 7 10

- How many different number sentences can you make using three 4's?

$4 \times 4 - 4 = 12$

- The answer is 15. What is the problem? Make up six number sentences with that answer.

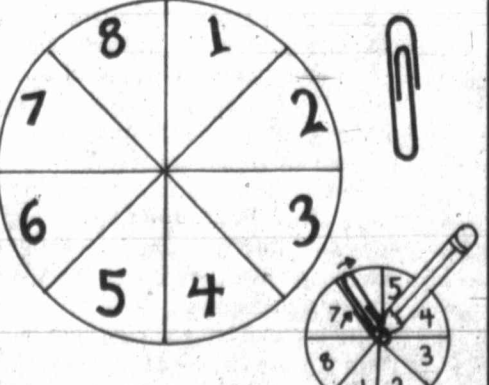

- What different designs can you make using triangles and squares?

- Count the number of windows and doors in your house. Which is more?

- If you measure with your feet (heel to toe), how many steps is it from your front door to your bed?

Number generator

Make your own generator to help you come up with numbers for your problems.

Stick the pencil through the paperclip in the center of the wheel. Twirl the clip. Where it stops is your number.

With a partner, after three spins, try to see who can get:

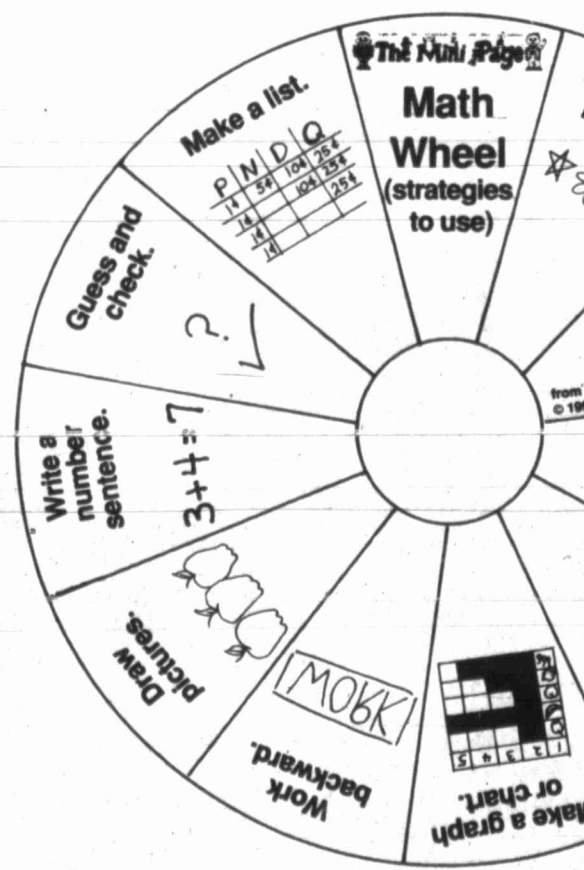

- the highest total.
- the lowest total.
- the greatest number.

1. Understand the problem.

- Decide what the question is.

- Get the facts.

2. Use strategies.

Make a math wheel. Cut out the wheel below and mount it on cardboard. Use it as a guide to finding the best strategy.

USE LOGIC - DOES THIS MAKE SENSE?

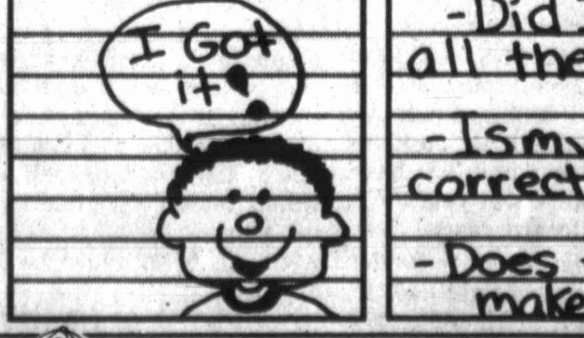

Cut out this pointer and paste on cardboard and add a brad. Use it to point to the strategy you are using.

Think ... Does this make sense?

Use these problem-solving strategies. With all of these strategies, you have to use logic. Think: Does this make sense?

MATH THINKERS ARE ON THE BALL.

3. Solve the problem.

4. Check yourself.

Ask:

- Did I check all the facts?

- Is my math correct?

- Does this make sense?
