WASP commemorated at Sweetwater

U.S. Attorney General Janet Reno speaker at 50th anniversary event

MARTHA E. FLORES
Regional Editor

SWEETWATER - At the age of 7 living in Miami, Fla., Attorney General Janet Reno welcomed home Aunt Winnie, who was returning from the war.

Fifty years later, she welcomed her home again. This time at the Women Airforce Service Pilots 50th anniversary in Sweetwater, where Aunt Winnie trained with more than 1,000 women pilots.

Anniversary events Saturday in Sweetwater commemorated the women who flew during World War II. Reno and Gov. Ann Richards unveiled a statue, sculpted by WASP Dot Swain Lewis, dedicated to the women. In attendance were more than 400 WASPs and their families.

To supplement state-side pilot crews, the U.S. Army Airforce WASP program was established in Feb. 20, 1943. Their training base - the only all-woman military flight school - was Avenger Field at Sweetwater. More than 25,000 women applied with 1,830 accepted and 1,074 graduating. Women with pilots licenses paid their way to Avenger Field and forging their way in history.

"We had the time of our lives," said Dawn Seymour, graduating in 1943 in the fifth class. "We did it for two reasons - to serve our country and to fly beautiful planes."

Winifred Wood, Aunt Winnie, graduated in 1943 in the seventh class. She authored a book "We were the One," about the class.

Wood and the other pilots flew more than 60 million miles, hauling cargo and personnel, delivering aircraft and towing targets for aerial gunnery. The women flew bombers and fighter planes, like men, except in combat and not as commissioned officers. They did not receive veterans' benefits. They all chipped in for burials of 38 women who died in service.

Attorney Janet Reno speaks to Nolan County Coliseum crowd Saturday with Rep. Charles Stenholm and Texas Attorney General Dan Morales looking on. Reno was in Sweetwater for the commemoration of the 50th anniversary of the Women in Airforce Service Pilots program. Avenger Field, now a private airport, was the location where more than 1,000 women trained.

"At 7-years-old, the WASPs were my heroines," Reno said at the Nolan County Coliseum Annex banquet. "They were women who served their country in every aspect of their capabilities."

Wood and a group of WASPs lived in Miami for a year after the war. Reno's first plane ride was piloted by WASP Catherine "Catty" Landry. She had teachers in high school and at Cornell who were WASPs.

"They were extraordinary," Reno said. "They influenced me greatly by setting examples. They became school teachers, artists and made a difference. From them I learned you can do anything if you really want it and if it is the right thing to do.

"To women between the ages of 25 to 30 I say a 7-year-old about 48 years ago was touched by women between 25 to 30 years old. They gave me strength as a child, a teenager, a college student, a young woman and in the last two months.

"WASPs have been there every step of the way."

Reno closed her tribute with, "WASPs helped weave the fabric of society around me, my brothers and sisters.

"In a world of poverty where children have mothers who are not there, fathers who they have never seen, or parents with plenty of money who care only about material wealth, we must make a difference.

"All of America has to join together to reweave our society."

At the end of the banquet, Reno rolled in a birthday cake with 50 candles as the packed coliseum crowd sang "Happy Birthday."

Texas Attorney General Dan Morales and Rep. Charles Stenholm also attended the day-long activities.

Council to review drug testing facility at Tuesday meeting

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

The facility handling city drug testing is scheduled to be reviewed Tuesday by the Big Spring City Council.

Concerns include whether Scenic Mountain Medical Center, handling tests for the city, will follow federally recommended procedures and maintain confidentiality, said City Personnel Director Emma Bogard in a memorandum given to council members this weekend.

Bids were accepted as part of the review and the hospital was lowest of two received. The hospital bid $45 per test while American Medical Enterprises bid $55.

"If the council prefers to award the contract to Scenic Mountain we will outline our concerns to make sure they can work within our requirements to ensure the credibility of test results," Bogard said in the memo.

Test handling was questioned earlier this year in connection with testing of two city fire fighters, including Jimmy Bertran who was fired in September after testing positive for cocaine following a minor accident with a fire truck. Bertran argued at an arbitration hearing in January that correct testing procedures were not followed by the city and hospital.

A ruling on the case is expected this week. "We're hoping to get something today," Fire Chief Frank Anderson said this morning. "We were expecting it on the 15th (this month) and it didn't show. We're anxious to get a ruling on this."

Bogard, who did not refer to particular cases, says in her memo, "Although Scenic Mountain has stated their personnel does know how to use the (federal) collection procedures we have found this is not always the case. Especially after hours when regular lab personnel are not available. There have been situations when our supervisors had to tell the medical staff how to perform the collection."

Bogard also stated that city employee test results at times were discussed with unauthorized personnel. "Both forementioned problems endangers pending cases on positive readings," she said.

In related business, the council will consider approving a new drug policy that city employees helped write. Eliminated would be cumbersome actions - not followed in Bertran's case - such as notification of the personnel director before a test is ordered.

Also, employees would be ordered tested for all accidents instead of just accidents requiring medical treatment. In addition, a drug assessment and referral program for drug rehabilitation would be added. Drug users that come forward will be helped but those caught using drugs face termination, Bogard said.

The council meets at 5:30 p.m. in Building 1106 in Big Spring McMahon Wrinkle Airpark.

Jury clears man in shooting of Japanese exchange student

The Associated Press

BATON ROUGE, La. — A man who mistook a lost Japanese exchange student for a burglar and shot him dead was acquitted of manslaughter in a case that stoked Japan's image of the United States as a violent nation rife with guns.

A jury deliberated about three hours Sunday before finding Rodney Pears, 31, acted reasonably in firing his .44-caliber Magnum revolver at 16-year-old Yoshi Hattori. The teenager mistakenly went to Pears' door Oct. 17 while looking for a Halloween party.

Pears acknowledged firing the gun but said he had no choice because he feared for his family. Under Louisiana's "shoot the burglar" law, a person is allowed to use deadly force to protect himself from an intruder. Hattori had entered the Pears' carport when he was shot.

Prosecutors argued that Pears was criminally negligent and could have avoided any danger just by staying inside.

The case caused outrage in Japan, where owning a gun is against the law, with a few limited exceptions. The verdict led the morning news in Tokyo.

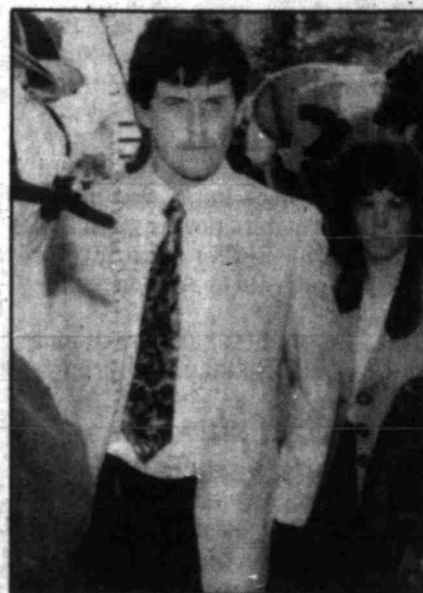

"The trial made clear how different Japan's common sense is... from the United States," correspondent Nobuo Tomimaga wrote in the nationally circulated Asahi newspaper.

The student's father, Masaichi Hattori, attended the seven-day trial but missed the verdict's reading when he went out for a walk. Through an interpreter, he called the jury's decision "incredible... unbelievable."

"He was appalled," the interpreter said. "He does not want to go home with a bad impression of the United States. But as a result of everything, he can't help having a bad impression."

Defense attorney Lewis Unglesby said jurors apparently accepted the tearful and contrite testimony of Pears, a soft-spoken minister's son who has worked in the same grocery store since he was in junior high school.

"This was not a criminal event or a criminal act or a criminal person,"

Rodney Pears leaves the East Baton Rouge Parish Courthouse in Baton Rouge, La., where he was found not guilty on manslaughter charges.

Unglesby said after the verdict.

Pears, who faced up to 40 years in prison if convicted, stood to hear the verdict, his attorney holding him by the arm. Spectators applauded when the decision was announced, but bailiffs quickly quieted them. Pears bounced into his chair and wiped away tears.

Outside the courtroom, Pears said he would no longer use guns and, in remarks intended for Hattori's father, said, "I'm very sorry that any of this ever happened."

The events that led to the shooting were hardly disputed during the trial.

Yoshi Hattori and his American host were invited to a party, but got lost. They went to Pears' door because the address was similar and the house was decorated for Halloween.

They rang the front bell twice, but Pears' wife, Bonnie, opened a door off the carport. Hattori came around from the front — quickly, she said — and frightened her, so she slammed the door and yelled for her husband to get his gun.

Pears came to the door with his revolver. When he saw the teen-ager, Pears yelled "Freeze!" — maybe also "Stop!" — but Hattori kept coming. Hattori was not wearing his con-

Texas not alone in searching for way to pay for schools

The Associated Press

AUSTIN — Texas is hardly alone in its struggle to find a way to pay for public schools.

The Lone Star State is one of 25 states embroiled in lawsuits over funding public education. Lawsuits filed against six other states were dismissed.

Kevin O'Hanlon, general counsel for the Texas Education Agency, said all the lawsuits are similar.

There are "great pockets of poverty and great pockets of wealth" in each state, O'Hanlon said.

The disparities have spawned differences in funding among school districts — which, in turn, have spawned the battles in state courts.

The first legal challenge to Texas' school finance system came in the late 1960s. The U.S. Supreme Court ruled in 1973 that the educational funding was a state, not a federal, issue.

By the late 1980s, Texas was caught up in a wave of school finance litigation, said Mary Fulton, a policy analyst for the Education Commission of the States.

Between 1989 and 1991, the funding systems in Texas, Kentucky, Montana and New Jersey were declared unconstitutional. All but Kentucky still are groping for a remedy.

Those cases, meanwhile, prompted residents of poor communities in other states to file similar suits.

The Texas Supreme Court struck down the state's school finance systems three times in the past four years. Legislators are rushing to devise a new system by the court-ordered June 1 deadline.

After that, state funds and some local funds could be cut off.

"One of the trends we are seeing is, it is becoming more difficult for a legislative remedy to solve it," Fulton said.

That's because many states have economic problems — and can't afford to bring property-poor school districts up to the spending levels of property-rich districts.

Like Texas, many states entangled in education funding lawsuits rely on state aid and property taxes to fund public schools.

The Texas Supreme Court said the crux of the problem is relying too much on local property taxes.

In such cases, districts with vast amounts of taxable property per student can use a low rate and still generate more money than property-poor districts.

To reduce the tax-base disparities, the Texas Senate has passed a plan that would transfer $60 billion in commercial property from 109 property-rich to property-poor school districts.

The Texas House has taken a different approach. It would give property-rich districts options for sharing their wealth.

The options include the commercial-property transfer as well as consolidating tax bases or operations with other districts, educating students from other districts or sending money to the state.

In Missouri, a state judge gave lawmakers until 90 days after the close of their regular legislative session to enact a finance plan.

The legislators, hoping to avoid a special session, passed the funding bill May 14, the last day of the regular session, "with no seconds to spare," said Chris Sifford, press secretary to Missouri Gov. Mel Carnahan.

Missouri's plan relies even more heavily on property taxes than do the plans proposed by the Texas Legislature.

Marching in honor

Members and supporters of the UTAF farm worker's union marched through El Paso in sight of the U.S.-Mexico border holding the image of deceased union leader Cesar Chavez Sunday. About 1,000 people carried signs and union flags and chanted slogans to honor the late labor leader who died April 23. Chavez was best known for founding the United Farm Workers union and leading the California grape boycott.

Whitewash claimed in nuke plant inspection

The Associated Press

HOUSTON — A consultant and whistle-blowers who made some 700 allegations about the South Texas nuclear plant in 1987 say a "whitewash" by the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission may have contributed to problems at the plant.

Consultant Edna Ottney was hired to investigate a rash of whistle-blower allegations at the plant in early 1987 by the Washington-based Government Accountability Project. The plant then was nearing completion in Matagorda County.

"The credibility and the qualifications of the whistle-blowers were the best I had seen anywhere," Ms. Ottney, who had experience at three other nuclear utilities, said recently from her home in Sierra Vista, Ariz.

"Almost everyone had all kinds of documents supporting their allegations. There was not an anti-nuclear bone in their bodies."

The workers' charges ran from construction flaws and contractor fraud to falsification of documents and intimidation of workers.

Ms. Ottney and the Government Accountability Project, which provides legal help to whistle-blowers, presented a list of some 700 allegations to the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission in late 1987.

responsibility for those allegations, the plant is in indeterminate condition."

Graham Painter, a spokesman for Houston Lighting & Power Co., managing owner of South Texas, said GAP was merely "an anti-nuclear group" that wanted to block licensing.

The 1987 allegations were found to be groundless by both Houston Lighting & Power and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, Painter said.

"The NRC issued a report and concluded that the allegations were resolved," he said. "This plant is the most exhaustively examined nuclear plant in the country."

Jose Calvo, who led the special NRC team that investigated the GAP allegations, said some of the 71 allegations on which the team followed up "were 100 percent correct at the time they were brought up."

However, he said, they were corrected by the time the team did its investigation.

In March 1988, days before South Texas Light received its license, the NRC team reported that its "review of all the GAP allegations has identified no substantive safety issue that would warrant delay in the NRC's consideration of a full-power license."

Texas lake levels high

AUSTIN (AP) — Fall and spring rains should keep Texas lakes at high levels even if the weather is dry this summer, water officials say.

"We should be in good shape through the summer," said Dave Morris, hydrologist with the National Weather Service River Forecast Center in Fort Worth. "Most of the Texas lakes have a generous supply of water."

"We're not looking at a stream-flow deficit in the foreseeable future. I'm hoping we're in a drying trend over the state. We don't need any more floods," he said.

Aside from the rain, a 15 percent to 20 percent drop in acreage planted by rice irrigators downstream has caused to the higher lake levels, Lower Colorado River Authority officials said.

The LCRA predicts Lake Travis and Lake Buchanan to stay full through June.

New judicial plan under consideration

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals is scheduled to begin considering Monday the legality of a judicial election system aimed at increasing the number of minority judges in nine Texas counties.

The plan would divide the counties into smaller voting districts consisting of higher concentrations of minorities, making it easier for non-whites to become state district court judges.

The counties — Bexar, Dallas, Ector, Harris, Jefferson, Lubbock, Midland, Tarrant and Travis — represent many of the state's largest cities.

resent many of the state's largest cities.

Texas Attorney General Dan Morales says he expects the appellate court to approve the plan, which would settle a five-year-old lawsuit that claims the current countywide system is discriminatory and that it violates the Federal Voting Rights Act.

Morales said he hopes the new system can be in place by 1994.

No lotto winner

AUSTIN (AP) — No Texas Lotto tickets matched all six numbers in Saturday night's $3 million drawing, raising the jackpot to an estimated $9 million for Wednesday's drawing, lottery officials say.

The winning numbers Saturday were 10, 16, 22, 24, 41 and 47.

Forty-nine tickets matched five of six numbers for $3,786. Another 4,570 tickets matched four numbers for $146.

Misunderstanding brings the kids home

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A group of Texas schoolchildren are headed home after a misunderstanding between trip supervisors and a charter bus driver had some in the part fearing they had been stranded in Maryville.

After months of exchanging letters with elementary students at Maryville's Sam Houston School, 41 students, five teachers and a group of parents from San Augustine Elementary School decided to travel to Tennessee to help celebrate the 200th birthday of Sam Houston.

Houston, born March 2, 1793, was a Tennessee teacher and statesman who helped Texas win its independence from Mexico.

The group feared it had been abandoned on Friday by their charter bus driver.

Discharge recommended for gay guardsman

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — An Army National Guard captain who disclosed her homosexuality to her commanding officer last year should be honorably discharged, an Army panel recommended.

The panel ordered the discharge for Capt. Pam Mindt after eight hours of closed-door testimony and discussion on Sunday. She is the first Minnesota guard member recommended for discharge because of her sexual orientation.

Mindt, 33, said the panel "missed an opportunity to do the right thing" by recommending against her while a federal decision is pending on whether to lift the ban on gays in the military.

National Guard spokesman Lt. Kevin Gutknecht confirmed the board's decision but said he could not comment on it.

Mindt will continue her regular duties as a mental health officer until a final decision is made in Washington.

State selling wildlife

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — The state is selling two mountain lions and a gray wolf, but there's a catch: The buyer has to high-tail it out of West Virginia.

Ray Knotts of the West Virginia Wildlife Center in Upshur County said the wild animals have been in captivity at the center. They are being sold to make room for new acquisitions, he said.

"As a condition of sale, the person must remove them from West Virginia within 24 hours of taking possession," Knotts said. "They can't release them in West Virginia and they must accept full responsibility for them while they're in the state."

The state will take sealed bids on the animals through Tuesday. The most likely buyer would be a zoo, Knotts said.

Message was an accident

NEW LONDON, Conn. (AP) — An emergency message accidentally broadcast on a radio station frightened listeners in southeastern Connecticut.

The National Emergency Broadcast Center's message, which announces instructions for citizens in the event of a disaster, was aired Sunday afternoon on WTYD-FM, state police said.

Mike Zito, an operator at WTYD, made an announcement shortly after the message was played to assure listeners there was no national emergency.

"We're trying to figure out what happened ourselves," he said.

Zito said the station is automated much of the time because a computer program plays the music. The station has tapes of local, state, and national emergency broadcast messages.

He said he was working on the station's AM signal when he got nearly simultaneous calls from the station's general manager and the state police about the errant message.

7,000 participate in AIDS vigil

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — More than 7,000 people marched in an annual candlelight vigil to remember people killed by AIDS.

The marchers started in the largely gay Castro District and covered 10 blocks to City Hall. Police estimated the number of participants at 7,000, but organizers put the number at 20,000.

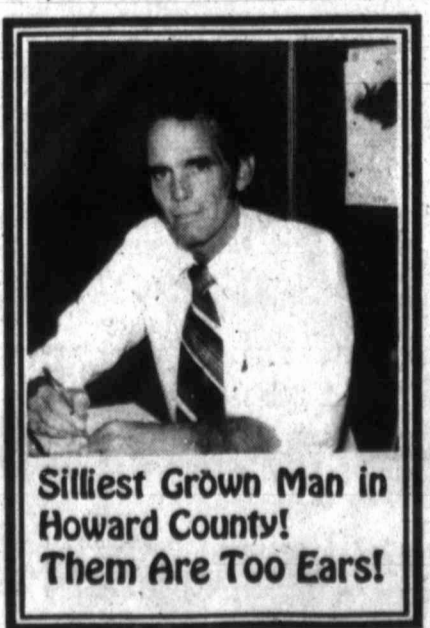

"I figured in people along the route of march, many who were too sick to take part," said Paul Boneberg, who helped found the event in 1983.

Leading marchers carried a banner proclaiming "Red Ribbons Won't Save Lives," and placards bobbed in the crowd that said "10,000 San Francisco AIDS Deaths and Rising."

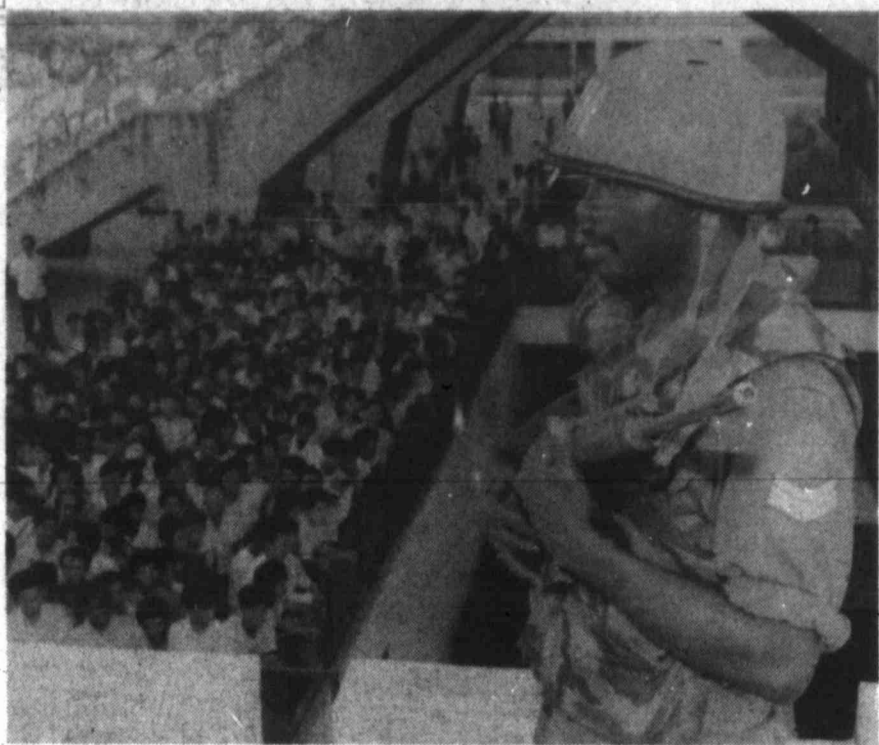

The Sunday night march was one of scores of observances throughout the United States and 49 other countries, according to Mobilization Against AIDS, the San Francisco-based group that organized the event.

During a speech to the crowd, Boneberg said the government should admit 170 HIV-infected Haitian refugees confined at a camp at the U.S. Naval Base at Guantanamo Bay in Cuba.

"It is not a crime to be HIV positive," he said.

Prince begs rebels to help save Cambodia

The Associated Press

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia — Prince Norodom Sihanouk appealed to the Khmer Rouge today to end its violence and help "save Cambodia" through the U.N.-organized elections.

The Khmer Rouge guerrillas boycotted the elections, which they fear will only strengthen the Vietnam-backed government, and threatened to kill voters.

Shelling shut some polling stations in the countryside this morning, but no major violence was reported in Cambodia's first multiparty vote in 21 years. It was not clear if the shells were aimed at the stations or resulted from the frequent government-Khmer Rouge skirmishes.

In the weeks before the election, the guerrillas struck government and U.N. targets in an apparent attempt to frighten people from voting. At least a dozen U.N. peacekeepers were killed in the lead-up to the balloting.

But Cambodians ignored the threats. They braved nearby shelling, waited hours outside U.N.-guarded polling stations in monsoon rains, and pushed their way inside to cast ballots.

One-third of the country's 4.7 million registered voters cast ballots Sunday, and more streamed to the polls today in a vote that continues until Friday. Voters in Phnom Penh this morning included many who had been too afraid to vote the first day.

"I listened to the radio but nothing happened in the city," Van Nak, a 35-year-old tobacco seller, said in explaining why he voted a day later.

Sihanouk, the country's most prominent national reconciliation leader, spoke in front of the Royal Palace before thousands of people, including a long procession of Buddhist monks and nuns whose hands were folded in prayer.

If the guerrillas continue violence, he said, "What would be the use of the elections? The elections must ... not just implement democracy, but save Cambodia."

Sihanouk is widely revered by citizens and is the only leader accepted by all Cambodian factions including the Khmer Rouge. The prince ruled the country for three decades before the carnage began in 1970. After five weeks abroad, he returned home Saturday to support the elections.

Sihanouk will talk with the Khmer Rouge after the election, his son Prince Norodom Ranariddh has said.

The Khmer Rouge defeated the U.S.-backed Lon Nol government to take power in 1975.

Perhaps 1.5 million people were executed or died of starvation or disease as the Khmer Rouge tried to create a communal, peasant state. Vietnam invaded in 1979 and replaced the Khmer Rouge with another Communist government, sparking a civil war.

The Khmer Rouge signed a 1991 accord to end the war with the government, but then refused to cooperate with the U.N. peacekeeping mission.

U.N. analysts say the Khmer Rouge had expected the U.N. mission to weaken the government, and abandoned the process when that did not happen. Now the guerrillas fear the government will win the election and gain a stamp of legitimacy.

20,000 flock to Rushstock '93

The Associated Press

FORT COLLINS, Colo. — The bake sale billed as Rushstock '93 became a mass right-wing happening Saturday when thousands gathered to honor radio gadfly Rush Limbaugh and to buy a cookie for conservatism.

At least 20,000 people packed Old Town Square, standing shoulder-to-shoulder across the brick street and outlasting a brief hailstorm to cheer Limbaugh's arrival.

"I'm sorry I kept you waiting," said Limbaugh, the nation's most listened-to radio talk show host. "But my barber was late."

"This is exactly how I thought it would be. I see happy people." The gathering grew out of Dan Kay's desire for a subscription to a newsletter put out by Limbaugh, who regularly bashes "feminazis," Hillary Clinton, Teddy Kennedy, "environmental wackos," homeless advocates and the liberal media in his nationwide syndicated talk show. "The Rush Limbaugh Show" has with 18 million listeners nationwide.

It escalated into a carnival that featured more than 80 booths where vendors hawked T-shirts, buttons, mugs, bumper stickers and newsletters, all in a conservative vein.

"I think this has replaced Disneyland as the happiest place in the world today," said Steve Mallison of Carson City, Nev.

Fans proudly wore "ditto-head" T-shirts. Ditto-head refers to a fan of Limbaugh's, ditto meaning they believe the things he does. Others wore buttons, saying "politically incorrect and proud of it," or "Impeach Hillary."

Parking lots were packed with out-of-state vehicles, many bore handmade signs reading "Dan's Bake Sale or Bust," and "Follow Us to Dan's Bake Sale."

Energy tax compromise expected

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Despite continued public optimism from the Clinton administration that it can hang tough, there are growing indications the president's broad-based energy tax faces more revisions if it is to make it through Congress as part of his deficit-reduction package.

Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan, D-N.Y., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, conceded Sunday that changes in the energy tax proposal likely will be made, although some version will survive.

Three Democratic senators from energy states — Bennett Johnston and John Breaux of Louisiana, and David Boren of Oklahoma — all made clear they would not be satisfied unless the energy tax is scaled back, perhaps limited to a higher tax only on gasoline.

President Clinton has proposed a much broader tax that would affect almost every form of energy from oil and natural gas to coal and nuclear. It would be pegged to the heat content of specific fuels, based on the Btu, or British Thermal Unit.

Appearing on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley," Boren said he's ready to accept some energy tax, but "not this Btu tax that falls on every industry. ... I'll have to vote 'no' because I think it's wrong for the country."

Likewise, Breaux said he planned to propose as a substitute an increase in the tax on gasoline — perhaps by eight cents a gallon — as well as steeper spending cuts this week.

Clinton's energy tax "cannot pass the Senate as it's written now," Breaux said on CBS' "Face the Nation."

The Democrats hold only an 11-9 edge on the Finance panel and with Republicans opposed to the Clinton package, Moynihan needs the votes of Breaux and Boren.

Moynihan said as much Sunday. "We have not lost David Boren," he insisted on NBC's "Meet the Press" program. He said Boren had pledged to stay with the president.

But a short time later Boren said the only way he'll come on board is if the Btu tax is scuttled and a package is worked out that includes more cuts in spending. He criticized the Clinton energy tax as a drain on the economy and jobs.

Johnson is not a member of the Finance Committee, but carries considerable clout among colleagues as chairman of the Energy Committee.

The turmoil among Senate Democrats, meanwhile, has caused some House members — even some liberals who have staunchly supported the president's tax proposals — to worry as they prepare for a floor vote on the legislation, now scheduled for Thursday.

"Members of the House are not willing to fall on a sword again if there's going to be a deal cut in the Senate," said Rep. Craig Washington, D-Texas, a strong supporter of Clinton's package.

He and Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Texas, a critic of Clinton's tax proposal, agreed on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley" that lawmakers will not want to make a politically dangerous vote on taxes unless they can be assured it will not be dismantled in the Senate.

House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., insisted he was optimistic the Clinton tax package, including the broad-based energy tax, will clear the House this week.

However, The Washington Post quoted an aid to the House Democratic leadership, who was not identified by name, as saying "our people will not allow us to go into a vote on Thursday without some idea of what the Senate is likely to do."

Administration officials expressed confidence their tax plan will survive. "When the dust settles, it's the president's plan that will prevail," predicted Roger Altman, deputy Treasury secretary.

Altman discounted a gasoline tax as a viable substitute, saying such a tax would have to go up 25 cents a gallon to generate the $70 billion in additional revenue anticipated from Clinton's broad-based tax over the next five years.

And unlike the Clinton proposal, which would affect all regions roughly equally, a gasoline tax would hit some regions, especially the large western states, much harder, said Altman, appearing on "Face the Nation."

Boren suggested that a middle-ground can be reached.

And Moynihan left the door ajar for possible compromise as well. While a tax on energy must be included, it may not be "precisely the one that's there now," he said.

"Something similar will come out of the Senate" but it might no longer be called a "Btu" tax, he said. "We're going to call it an energy tax. Haven't you seen that semantic shift take place right before your eyes?"

Johnson, who is chairman of the Energy Committee, was more blunt about the Btu tax. "I don't think there's any way to dress that up," he said, also on "Meet the Press." He said he could live with a gasoline tax similar to what Breaux intends to offer.

Settlement ends Mexican wolf controversy

The Associated Press

SANTA FE, N.M. — The federal government has agreed to reintroduce the endangered Mexican wolf into the wild as part of a settlement of a lawsuit filed by environmentalists, a lawyer said Friday.

The settlement filed in U.S. District Court "brings the species back from the brink of extinction," said Grove Burnett, a lawyer representing the Wolf Action Group, the Sierra Club and other environmental groups.

Burnett said the Interior Department's U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service was already working on plans to reintroduce the wolf, which is extinct in the wild. He said the settlement is a legally binding agreement that they will follow through.

Wildlife groups filed the lawsuit in 1990, saying only 43 Mexican wolves were in captivity and none roamed freely in the United States.

The lawsuit argued that the longer the wolves were kept in captivity, the greater the chance that their reintroduction would be unsuccessful.

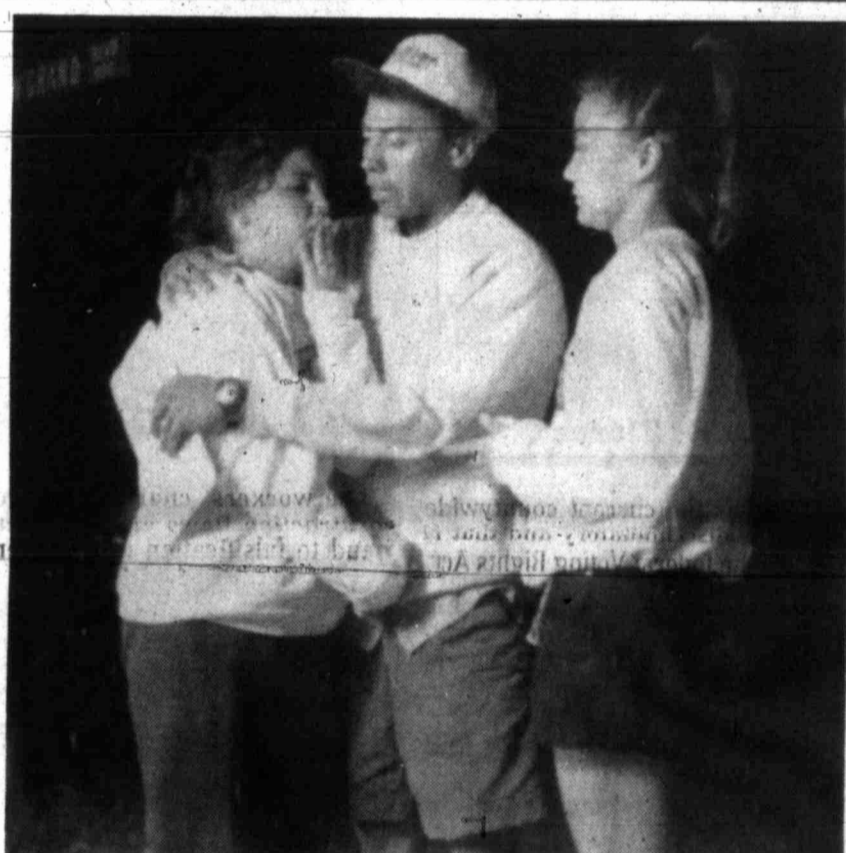

The Mexican wolf is native to the Southwest and northern Mexico and is the southernmost extension of the gray wolf. In contrast to the generally gray coloring of its northern cousin, the Mexican wolf is often tinged with brown in distinctive patterns.

The Fish and Wildlife Service had identified White Sands Missile Range in southern New Mexico as the most suitable site for the release.

But the Army in 1987 vetoed the range, and the Fish and Wildlife Service suspended its plans. Environmental groups sued as a result.

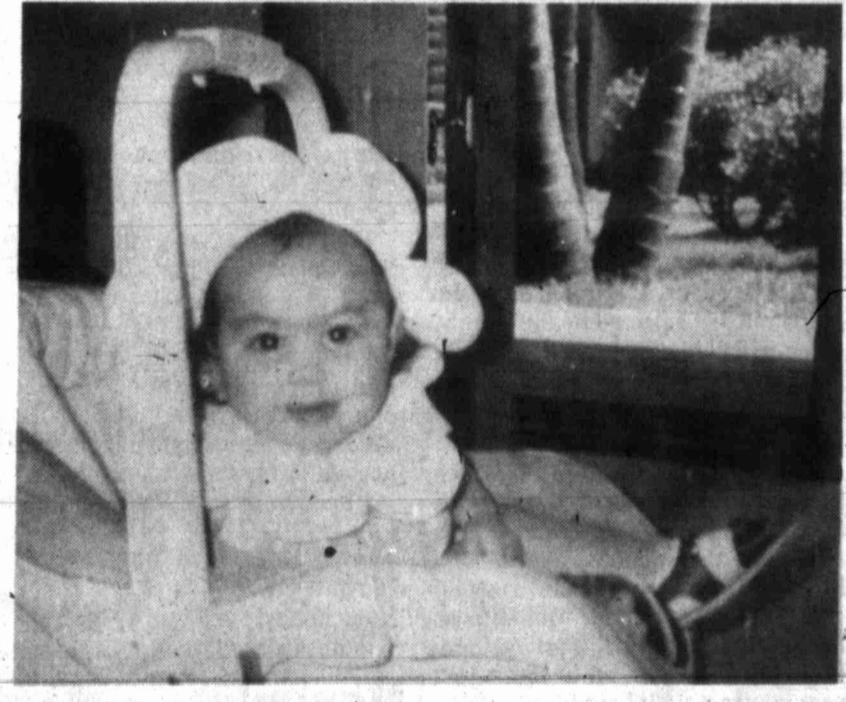

The settlement requires the Fish and Wildlife Service to make a final decision by May 1994, Burnett said.

Tom Smylie, assistant regional director of the Fish and Wildlife Service in Albuquerque, said he hadn't seen the settlement. Interior Department officials in Washington were not available for comment late Friday.

Some of us left in spirit, but remained as peripheral Catholics. We may have joined other churches. We may have ignored our spiritual dimension. We may have felt nature, friends or solitude met our spiritual needs. But at some point, we began to miss the sense of church we once enjoyed as Roman Catholics. We miss the Holy Mass and the Sacraments, the presence and the peace of God in our lives. We may feel a need for His peace. Yet, returning after many years can be difficult. We may be offended, or embarrassed about some aspects of Catholicism. We may feel awkward at church. We may be concerned about how our "conversion" will affect our personal relationship. We asked:

What do you think of the proposal to burn the vacant area near Moss Elementary School to lessen the rattlesnake problem?

"I think they ought to. It's dangerous. Particularly if the children play in the area, which they do I'm sure. A snake's a snake as far as I'm concerned. They all ought to go."

Dolores Jones

"I don't like them, but will burning do it? Can't you kill them by finding the dens and gassing them? I don't think the burning will get rid of them as good as gassing them."

Maxine Anderson

"They need to do something about the rattlesnakes, but there are a lot of older people in the area along with the kids, and what is the snake going to do to them. If there is some way to talk to the residents to get their input."

Twila Wegner

"Well, if it's going to protect the citizens in the area, it's a good idea. With all the children around here, it's too dangerous. As long as they go collect the snakes, I think it's a good idea."

Dreaming with eyes closed, and thinking wide awake

"Modern man likes to pretend that his thinking is wide-awake. But this wide-awake thinking has led us into the mazes of a nightmare in which torture chambers are endlessly repeated in the mirrors of reason. When we emerge, perhaps we will realize that we have been dreaming with our eyes open, and that the dreams of reason are intolerable. And then, perhaps we will begin to dream once more with our eyes closed."

The Labyrinth of Solitude
 Octavio Paz, 1961

Dreaming with his eyes open, El Mariachi, the lead character in Robert Rodriguez's first film, takes us by the hand through a maze immersed in the Mexican American angst - tormented by the past, burdened with the present and fearful of the future.

The film's opening scene depicts the realities plaguing much of today's Mexican-American community - drugs. It zeros in on two men, one who dresses in black, one who dresses in white and both evil, fighting over lost money and lost integrity.

As El Mariachi walks alone toward the war-torn buildings of a new city, he outlines the pathos of his human existence - yearning to be like his forefathers but not wanting to forfeit the opportunities afforded to him in a modern world. He says he wishes to be a mariachi like his father, his grandfather and his great grandfather, but time will not grant him his wish as his path crosses with the men in black and white.

In a series of misfortune and mistaken identity, the wandering, romantic guitarist realizes his fate.

His future changes and he does not meet his own aspirations. His soul is wounded by the knowledge of the rich heritage taken away by thieves not caring for its value.

In the end, El Mariachi walks away from the worn-torn town thinking wide awake.

Rodriguez's work is an extension of his own hopes, aspirations, disappointments, disillusionments and triumphs.

Like his character, Rodriguez - the director-writer-producer-camera-man - is coming to terms with his past, his present and his future.

The 24-year old San Antonio native is the third of 10 children. He attended an all-boys Catholic school and says his heroes are his parents.

Coming from a family of modest means, Rodriguez entertained himself by creating flip cartoons, using every book in the family library. The illustration told tales of gun-toting stick-figure bandits engaged in battle.

He began making home movies at the age of 12 when his father purchased a early-model video camera. Soon the Rodriguez family were cast in the early endeavors of the aspiring director.

While studying film at the University of Texas at Austin, Rodriguez and a friend developed the idea of making a series of movies for the Spanish home-video market, using the profit to make legitimate movies.

With this idea El Mariachi was born.

Rodriguez raised money for the film by becoming a human "lab rat". He was paid $100 a day by a research hospital, conducting pharmaceutical tests. During his 30-day hospital stay, he developed the idea "about this cool dude who has a guitar-case full of weapons and wanders from town to town dressed in a beat-up mariachi outfit."

When he checked out he had hammered out his script and raised $3,000 for the project.

Two weeks, later Rodriguez and his friend and star of the film were shooting in the border town of Acuna. The entire cast consisted of locals, whose pay was lunch each day of the two-week shoot.

The entire film cost $7,000 to complete.

With a twist of fate, Rodriguez found himself rejected by the Spanish video-market, becoming the "golden child" of the major motion picture studios.

Hollywood was calling. Paramount, Columbia, Tri-Star, Oliver Stone, Michael Mann, ABC, NBC and International Creative Management, the agency representing Richard Gere, Arnold Schwarzenegger, Susan Sarandon, Mel Gibson, Eddie Murphy and Robert Anthony Rodriguez. He went on to sign a two-year contract with Columbia.

Rodriguez says his best day was Feb. 26, 1993. He was in New York City for the film's nationwide opening. He was on the TODAY show, taped ABC's "Person of the Week," David Letterman, and Siskel and Ebert gave El Mariachi two thumbs up.

But with the overwhelming media attention, Rodriguez prefers Austin to Hollywood, saying "he was not going to pick up and go to a crazy town where they treat you funny."

At his modest apartment, he sits reading scripts from big name talent, finding them unacceptable.

Dreaming with his eyes closed and thinking wide awake, Rodriguez will scratch the face of eternity.

Welcome to American's murder mill

A 19-year-old man is in his home one night last week with his mother and somebody is trying to kick in their door.

He and his mother had been the victims of breakers-and-enterers before. That's why he went out and bought a gun.

He goes and gets his gun and shoots and kills the person who is trying to break into his house.

I'm sitting there watching a television report about the incident, and the reporter tells me the district attorney is saying, "Not so fast here, we could have a homicide on our hands."

Want to hear something that should make your blood boil? You're supposed to be absolutely certain your life is in danger or you can be charged with murder for blowing away somebody trying to break into your home.

The TV reporter said, "No gun was found on the deceased."

Lewis Grizzard

It's dark. You're frightened. You've got your mother to protect. The punks have tried all this before.

But the crack cocaine addict (according to the dead man's mother) who is attempting to kick your door down has his rights. The 19-year-old resident can't attempt to protect himself, his mother, or his home until he's sure this creep is packing.

"Hey, Mr. Burglar, Sir, are you carrying a weapon?"
 "Who, me? Certainly not."
 "OK, then. I won't shoot you."

The next TV report you see is about the burglar blowing the insides out of the careful resident.

No charges were filed against the resident, but I don't believe the possibility should have even been brought up.

I've watched a lot of television in the past seven weeks. When you're recovering from heart surgery, it's one of the few things you can do without causing yourself any pain.

Every day, a news report has murder in it. A 25-year-old former Georgia Tech honor student is dead after a shotgun blast to the head.

Three little boys are brutally murdered in Arkansas. A disgruntled ex-worker shoots up his former place of employment and kills two. Stain human beings are found on train tracks, in the woods, in their own apartments and homes, victims of animals who force their way in.

But before you try to protect yourself from being shot, having your throat cut, or being raped and then killed, give it a moment and make sure what you see in your attacker's hands is a gun or a butcher knife, not a harmonica or a garden weasel.

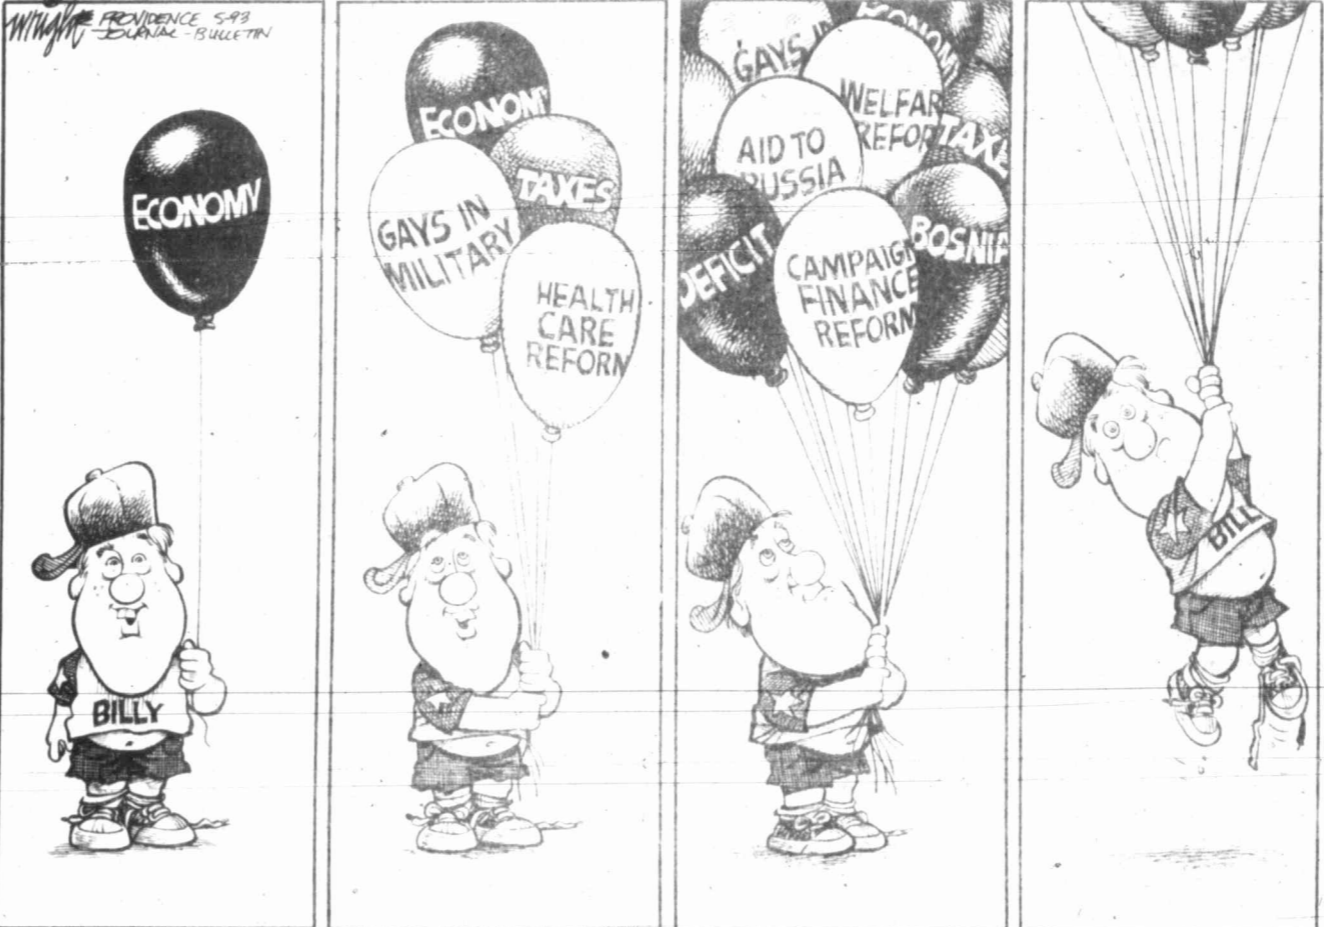

The story I just related hit me as hard as it did, and seemed as absolutely asinine as it did, because of all the TV news I watched and my subsequent awareness I'm living in a country that's become a murder mill.

They'll shoot you down on the street, kill you in your bed as you sleep.

Don't make it more difficult to defend ourselves. Somebody breaking into a house in the middle of the night isn't there to ask for a dance. I'm going to assume in that instance my life is in danger, and there should be no law that won't allow me to make that assumption and take steps to protect myself. If a few unarmed burglars get it, that's baseball.

I presently do not own a gun. I have never liked guns. I've never wanted to be around guns. I think gun control is a great idea.

I'm thinking of buying a gun. A big one.

On the IRS and Jerry Lee Lewis

My brother-in-law, whose name shall remain Bill King, bought wholesale that infamous and malicious "Rolling Stone" article about Jerry Lee Lewis that ran a few years back.

Bill walked out on The Killer's portion of a vintage rock and roll concert in a Denver amphitheater because he didn't want to patronize a wife-beater.

I tried to disabuse Bill and my impressionable sister of the notion that Jerry Lee is evil. Oh, he may be evil in the same way white bread is bad for you. But a tomato sandwich never killed anybody, either.

And if the reporter who wrote the piece was as careless with his facts as he was his dialect - using "y'all" in the singular supposedly in direct quotes from the mouths of Southerners - then he should have stayed in Philadelphia and written about mob bosses and gangland shootings. Jerry Lee on his jet ski drunk is pretty mild stuff.

Let me say at the outset that all IRS musical persecution cases are different. Each one deserves its own scrutiny.

I felt one way when the IRS gutted the living legend that is Willie Nelson. I felt like shooting someone, only I don't own a gun.

Willie Nelson is kind and beautiful and innocent, an angel flying too close to the ground. If he says an accountant gave him bad advice, an accountant gave him bad advice.

I believe there should be another box on the 1040, next to the one where you can donate $1 to the blasted politicians to try and keep them honest, as if that's possible.

"Check here if you want to donate

Rheta Grimsley Johnson

$1 to help erase Willie's tax debt."

That way when Willie plays at the Tupelo Furniture Market at the end of the month, he could keep some of the gate receipts. And the IRS might stay the hell away from his unpublished songs about an old love, the ones he keeps in a safe, according to "Vanity Fair," which wrote a sad and fair account of Willie's woes.

The Jerry Lee tax debacle is something else again. Jerry Lee probably should never handle any money, for any reason.

He should get a small allowance, like a child, and somebody responsible should pay his bills, including taxes.

But I hate it with all my heart that he has flown the coop to Ireland, where artists are prized and not taxed. The South will never be the same without Jerry Lee Lewis, and that's a crying shame. The Mid-South without Jerry Lee is like a pine thicket without seed ticks. It ain't fit!

The IRS claims Jerry Lee Lewis is not a special case, and to that I say, "Well, you try playing the piano with YOUR feet."

The IRS is this country's ultimate bureaucracy, and I guess that's why it's so ceaselessly irritating. Agents don't believe in writing at tax debts, no matter how special the case, and neither do they believe in apologizing when they've been wrong.

When wronged by the IRS, you get a stiff letter in the mail saying, "Oh, yes, you didn't owe that money after all, so we're applying your payments in blood to next year's taxes. If you have questions, call this number and talk to one of our robots ..."

If Jerry Lee has been stuffing money in his boot for decades, he's no different from every Jakeleg carpenter, mason, painter and mechanic I've dealt with all my adult life.

Except that Jerry Lee has the thing the IRS henchmen want and will never have, and I'm not talking about a red tuxedo wardrobe. He has imagination.

Jerry Lee Lewis won't be able to stay in Ireland, of course, and the IRS knows it. How could he stay in Ireland when the glories of Nesbit, Miss, beckon?

If ever anyone was born to boogie in down-at-the-mouth joints off gravel roads, it was Jerry Lee. He was born to play for tips at a motel lounge, and the trouble started when the till grew.

The last laugh will be on the IRS. Jerry Lee will get more of his peculiar brand of inspiration from this exile in Ireland, and he'll return to the Motherland, sooner or later. Probably sooner.

After all, his wives are buried here.

New plan not answer to the college loan program

The Associated Press

At a time when public officials are trying to cut costs and privatize services, the Clinton administration seems to be moving in the opposite direction by making the federal government the primary lender in college loan programs.

Under the Student Loan Reform Act of 1993, banks would be phased out of the loan program, with 4 percent of loans coming directly from the government by the end of 1994, 25 percent by the end of 1995, 60 percent by the end of 1996 and all loans by the end of 1997.

The switch from bank to federal lending, even though it requires more government borrowing, is touted as a way to save $4.3 billion in tax money through 1998. How? By eliminating the profits and interest subsidies earned by banks and middlemen such as the Student Loan Marketing Association (Sallie Mae), a federally chartered corporation that buys and services student loans.

No one defends the present program as a paragon of efficiency. Banks make loans. The government guarantees the loans and pays the banks to keep interest rates low.

When borrowers default, taxpayers are stuck with the bill, about $3 billion a year.

It's a system in need of repair - not just to curb profiteering but to stop making loans at schools with high default rates.

But if the U.S. Department of Education has been slow to correct abuses in the past, how could it run a program calling for $15 billion in lending to 5 million students each year?

And how many colleges have the personnel and know-how to deal with loan applications now being processed by commercial banks?

This date in history

The Associated Press

Today is Monday, May 24, the 144th day of 1993. There are 221 days left in the year. This is Victoria Day in Canada.

Today's Highlight in History:

On May 24, 1844, Samuel F.B. Morse transmitted the message, "What hath God wrought!" from Washington to Baltimore as he formally opened America's first telegraph line.

On this date:
 - In 1819, Queen Victoria was born in London.

In 1830, the first passenger railroad service in the United States began service between Baltimore and Elliott's Mills, Md.

In 1881, some 200 people died when the Canadian ferry Princess Victoria sank near London, Ontario.

In 1883, the Brooklyn Bridge, linking Brooklyn and Manhattan, was opened to traffic.

In 1935, the first major baseball game played at night took place in Cincinnati as the Reds beat the Philadelphia Phillies, 2-1.

In 1941, the German battleship Bismarck sank the British dreadnought Hood in the North Atlantic.

In 1958, United Press International was formed through a merger of the United Press and the International News Service.

In 1962, astronaut Scott Carpenter became the second American to orbit the Earth as he flew aboard Aurora 7.

In 1976, Britain and France opened transatlantic Concorde service to Washington.

In 1977, in a surprise move, the Kremlin ousted Soviet President Nikolai Podgorny from the Communist Party's ruling Politburo.

In 1984, a court in El Salvador found five former national guardsmen guilty of murdering four American churchwomen in December 1980.

In 1987, an estimated 250,000 crowded onto the Golden Gate Bridge to celebrate the structure's 50th birthday a few days before the actual anniversary.

Ten years ago: New Yorkers marked the 100th birthday of the Brooklyn Bridge with a parade and a massive fireworks display. The U.S. Supreme Court ruled the federal government was right to deny tax breaks to racially discriminatory schools.

Five years ago: President Reagan vetoed legislation that would have strengthened the nation's ability to defend itself and its industries against trading practices of other nations that were deemed unfair.

Vice President George Bush and Michael Dukakis won the Idaho presidential primaries.

One year ago: President Bush authorized the Coast Guard to return directly home all Haitian refugees picked up at sea. Al Unser Jr. became the first second-generation winner of the Indianapolis 500; his father, four-time winner Al Unser, finished third.

Today's Birthdays: Singer Bob Dylan is 52. Actor Gary Burghoff is 50. Actress Priscilla Presley is 48. Singer Rosanne Cash is 38.

Thought for Today: "It is the weakness and danger of republics, that the vices as well as virtues of the people are represented in their legislation."

Indictments returned

DALLAS — A 10-month investigation has led to federal indictments against 24 people for what authorities say is Mafia-related activity.

But a defense attorney calls the charges nothing but smoke and mirrors.

According to federal officials, the Texas-Mexican Mafia is a well-organized group that conducts drug deals, extortion and cold-blooded executions from a network that began in the state's prison system.

The gang — known as Mexikanemi and El Eme, Spanish for the letter M — is described by the FBI as "extremely violent and destructive." "El Eme is the most dominant of the prison-spawned gangs operating in Texas, and there are still nearly 100 members operating in San Antonio, its headquarters," said Jeff Jamar, special agent in charge of the FBI's San Antonio office.

Jamar added that significant numbers of El Eme also are in Corpus Christi, El Paso, Houston, California and the Midwest.

Driver apologizes

WOOSTER, Ohio (AP) — A driver charged with killing five Amish children cried and apologized during his court appearance on five felony counts of aggravated vehicular homicide.

"I'm sorry. I didn't mean to do it," Eric Bache, 18, said tearfully Friday when Municipal Judge Stuart K. Miller asked him if he had anything to say.

He remained jailed in lieu of $25,000 bond and could face a maximum of 10 years in prison on each count. The judge sent his case to a grand jury for review.

Police said Bache lost control of his car as he tried to pass a truck on a country road about 60 miles northeast of Cleveland. The car plowed into 10 children who were walking off to the side of the road, returning from a birthday party.

Of the five injured children, two were still hospitalized Friday in fair condition.

Man crucified

AMIENS, France (AP) — The naked body of a man was found strung up crucifixion style in an abandoned restaurant, police said Sunday.

The body, discovered by a passer-by Saturday, was bound to wood beams with wire.

The victim apparently died of strangulation from a wire around his neck. But it was unclear whether he was killed before being tied to the wall, police said.

Police said the victim was apparently one of the homeless people who sometimes take shelter in the building north of Paris.

His was preceded in death by his parents, one son, and one daughter.

Stephen Lewis

Stephen Clark Lewis, 42, Big Spring, died Friday, May 21, 1993, in a local hospital.

Services were 4:30 p.m., today, at First Christian Church with the Rev. Alan Abraham, pastor, officiating. Burial was in Trinity Memorial Park under the direction of Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home.

Lewis was born June 2, 1950 in Big Spring. He was employed with Safeway Food Stores for 13 years and then owned and operated the Rainbarrel Gift Shop and Gold Mine Restaurant for 10 years.

He graduated in 1989 from Howard College with an associate's in nursing. He worked as a registered nurse at Hall-Bennet Memorial Hospital and Scenic Mountain Medical Center and was employed by Big Spring State Hospital, during his death.

Survivors include his wife, Amy Lewis, Big Spring; one son, Cliff Lewis, Big Spring; two daughters: Lacey Lewis, Big Spring, and Angela Armstrong, Denton; his father, O.C. Lewis, Big Spring; two sisters: Sharon Waechter, Citrus Heights, Calif., and Shelby Halskov, Grass Valley, Calif.; one brother, David Lewis, Bacliff; his grandmother, Jewell Underwood, Big Spring; and several nieces and nephews.

He was preceded in death by his mother.

tact lenses and with his limited English may have misunderstood the word as "Please," according to testimony.

When Hattori was 4-to-8 feet away, Peairs fired, hitting him in the chest. According to Peairs' testimony, Hattori, who was wearing a ruffled shirt and white tuxedo jacket like John Travolta in "Saturday Night Fever," was running at the door waving something above his head. It turned out to be a camera.

"Why'd you shoot?" Peairs was asked during testimony Saturday.

"Fear of my life and my family's life. Protection of my family. I felt I had no other choice," he replied.

District Attorney Doug Moreau said in closing arguments the question was not what Peairs knew, but "what he could have known, what he should have known."

Had Peairs inquired, Moreau said, he might have discovered there was no threat at all.

"He was intentionally ignorant of facts," Moreau said. "That does not give you a right to kill people."

Hattori, of Nagoya, said he will continue to work for gun control. He and his wife collected more than 1.6 million petition signatures in Japan urging Congress to adopt stricter gun laws.

YOU CAN by Jax Church

Dear Readers, Today, I thought you might enjoy explanations to lots of quick queries.

Jax Place San Rafael, California

Dear Colleen, When we say that glass can be cut, we're really talking about breaking glass on purpose, where we want it to break. A diamond is harder than glass. That means when you move one against the other, the diamond will leave a scratch on the glass. That scratch is a flaw in the structure of the glass. Someone who is skilled in glass cutting can break the glass along that scratch. You should not try this for 2 reasons--1. Using a diamond means using someone else's property -- unless you have your own diamond. 2. Cutting glass is breaking glass, and broken glass is very dangerous to be around. You know: bleeding. Broken glass can also be very expensive.

Dear Jax, How can diamonds cut glass? Colleen Webb Indian River, Michigan

Dear Jax, Why do cats' eyes glow in the dark? Sherri Fletcher Don Mills, Ontario

Dear Jax, Why does water disappear? Amanda Felt Angola, New York

Dear Amanda, There is a basic law of the universe that you cannot break. Here it is: Nothing disappears. Nothing. Not ever. What happens to things is that they change form. Things never disappear. Water seems to disappear because it changes into a gas -- water vapor -- and drifts up into the sky, where it changes back into liquid as a cloud. The water we drink is millions and millions of years old. It's been recycled as water vapor and rain billions of times.

Dear Christy, A quarter is not an amount. A quarter is a portion of an amount. It's 1/4 of something. One-fourth of an hour is 15 minutes. One-fourth of a dollar is 25 cents.

Dear Jax, How come in time a quarter is 15 minutes and in money a quarter is 25 cents? Christy Cook Macomb, Illinois

P.S.: Take the er off the word quarter and you'll end up with something that is 1/4 of a gallon.

Dear Bobby, You do have a right to get an answer to your question. But I have the right to say it we'll be me who shows you how to make a toxic substance. I just wouldn't feel good about it. All alcohol is poisonous. To be intoxicated means to be poisoned.

Dear Jax, Will you show us how to make moonshine? Bobby Wilson Baltimore, Maryland

P.S. from Beakman: I know that people don't want to believe that all alcohol is poison. But it is. When people are drunk, their bodies are fighting the effects of a poison -- one that kills in larger amounts.

Deaths

 CHUCK
 CAWTHON
 Dist. 3, May 25
 Marcy School

For the past 18 years I have stayed current and been involved in many aspects of city government. I was directly involved in the widening and repaving of Wasson Road, instrumental in receiving grant money for paving many streets on the West end, extremely involved in the Beals Creek project. This involvement qualifies me to make immediate decisions about issues concerning Big Spring. I live in District 3 where my opponent does not. I will work to develop all of Big Spring. I am available now and will be when elected to the City Council.
 Your Vote Counts. I would appreciate it.

Never a day without learning

By CONNIE SWINNEY Staff Writer

Nelda Colclazer, First National Bank's customer service officer, believes that a day a person does not learn is a day that has been wasted.

"Learning has kept my mind clear. It is easy to become stale," she said. "If I don't learn something new, I feel like I lost a day."

Her job duties, co-workers, hobbies, family and customers keep each day as fresh as it is new, she said.

"I'm a crafter, involved in a lot of crafts shows. I enjoy making stuffed animals like bunnies, elephants, dinosaurs, and dressing them," she said. "I also enjoy oil painting."

Regarding her job, she said, "I'm not ready to give up the public. My co-workers are attentive, bright people and we are just like a family."

She comes from a family that made its living on a small farm in Fisher County, located in north Texas.

"My mother made a homemaker of me; she taught good basic cooking," said Colclazer, the oldest of two. "My father always taught me that 'honesty is the best policy,' and I've always tried to pass that along to my own kids."

"He taught us to be good Christian people, and he taught us hard work," she added. "He said we should keep ourselves strong for other things in life."

After Colclazer graduated as valedictorian of her high school, she married her husband, R.V., now a retired trucker, and relocated to Snyder. The couple is celebrating their 47th wedding anniversary this year.

In Snyder, she started her first job doing clerical work in land leasing for oil exploration.

By 1961, she and her budding family had moved to Big Spring.

Before settling at the local bank in 1966, Colclazer, over the years, extended her clerical and bookkeeping talents to a dentists' office, a drug store and a certified public accountant.

"I felt like I had a future in the bank; a place for advancement," she said. "There were so many things to learn."

And learn she did, mastering the duties of all departments, from bookkeeping and auditing to installment loans and new accounts.

"During my years in auditing, I would fill in anywhere," she said. "I worked every place in the bank. It was a great experience to be able to learn so much."

New accounts supervisor since 1976, Colclazer said her job allows her to see people everyday.

"It makes my day when they open the door because I love my customers. Some I've known for years and years, so it's like a family," she said. "It's challenging because I have to abide by bank policies and make the customers happy."

Another activity that makes Colclazer happy is her craft hobby. In her family, crafts are a significant part of life.

Her sister-in-law, Betty Lee, is a crafter and a painter, who inspired Colclazer to make stuffed animals. Of her children, Virginia Hedges, Cheryl Sandlin and Mike Colclazer, one is a crafter and painter. Of her six grandchildren, a grandson is a sculptor. "It relaxes me," said Colclazer, who has been a crafts enthusiast for about 10 years. "I don't listen so attentively to all the bad stuff on television when I'm doing (the crafts)."

Colclazer is involved in and coordinates some local arts and crafts events as well as those in the area.

"I make the animals from four inches to three feet tall," she said. "Some I exhibit and sale, but I do give away some."

Much of her time during the 1970s and 1980s in Big Spring was spent helping young women win money for college by competing in pageants.

For 15 years, Colclazer coordinated the events for the local chapter of the American Business Women's Association.

Eligible participants could advance to state and national competitions for more scholarship money.

"There wasn't so much emphasis on beauty but more on personality," she said.

It is her own positive personality that Colclazer nurtures, enabling her to enjoy life.

"You've got to like people, love your family and learn something new everyday," she said. "When some people retire, all they ever learn is what's on TV, and that's not good."

"As long as my health is good, and I feel I can do a good job, I will continue to work," she added. "What you have to do is keep on learning."

Nelda Colclazer depends on learning something each day to keep life interesting. She enjoys her job, which requires meeting people every day.

Exhibit explores historic quest

On the island of Crete, King Minos sheltered the fugitive Daedalus, a distinguished artist. Minos commissioned Daedalus to build a home for the Minotaur, an evil monster, half man with a head and shoulders like a bull. The artist built an elaborate labyrinth and the Minotaur was sent to dwell in the center.

King Minos was so impressed with Daedalus' talents that he vowed to never allow him to leave the island. Eventually Daedalus grew to miss his homeland. He began to dream of a way off the island, finally deciding that his only escape was by air. He arranged bird feathers in the shape of a wing, binding them with linen threads and fastening the ends with wax. His son Icarus eagerly watched, and upon completion of his own wings, Daedalus began to work on a smaller pair for the boy.

As he finished the second pair, he warned the boy not to fly too low over the sea as the wings would become waterlogged and too heavy, and not to fly too high as the sun would melt the wax holding the feathers.

But, with boyhood curiosity, Icarus flew higher and higher, forgetting his father's words. The wings melted and the boy fell to his death into the sea. Daedalus found his son's body and buried him on the closest island that came to be known as the Island of Icarus.

The myth of Daedalus and Icarus demonstrates the strong desire of we earthly beings to fly, to seek freedom, and to search the heavens for wonders and knowledge, ever on the peril of death.

These young visitors enjoyed playing pretend in an airplane at the Heritage Museum's flight exhibit. The show chronicles man's long-time fascination with taking wing.

"It is difficult to say what is impossible, for the dream of yesterday is the hope of today and the reality of tomorrow." So said Robert Goddard, known in every high schooler's heart as the Father of Rocketry.

It was the development of the rocket, along with a healthy dose of nationalism, that gave rise to the United States efforts at manned space flight beyond earth's atmosphere.

where.

According to NASA panels currently on exhibit at the Heritage Museum, the criteria for selection of potential astronauts was a seven-item formula:

- 1. Age - less than 40.
- 2. Height - less than 5'11".
- 3. Excellent physical condition.
- 4. Bachelor's degree or equivalent.
- 5. Graduate of test pilot school.
- 6. Qualified jet pilot.
- 7. 1500 hours total flying time.

Of 110 men who met these requirements, only seven were chosen to be the first American astronauts. Scott Carpenter, Gordon Cooper, John Glenn, Virgil Grissom, Donald Slayton, Alan Shepard, and Walter Schirra were those men.

In 1961, President Kennedy put into words the goal of the U.S. space effort. "I believe this nation should commit itself to achieving the goal, before this decade is out, of landing a man on the Moon and returning him safely to the Earth."

The success of NASA's efforts is a matter of historical record, and what better way to view this record than at the Heritage Museum's special summer exhibit, "Flight and the Big Spring Bombardier School."

Out on a limb

Treed attorney phones for help from perch

MILL VALLEY, Calif. — How many lawyers does it take to get down from a tree?

One, if she doesn't drop her phone. As lawyer jokes go, that's lame. Then again, it's not a joke.

Betsy Keys, a 38-year-old attorney, pulled her telephone from her fanny pack one recent afternoon and placed a call from a tree limb high above her back yard.

Her message was simple: "Help."

"Our report just says she got herself stuck in a tree while trimming the branches," said Capt. Jeff Allen of the Alto-Richardson Bay Fire Department, which came to the rescue. "We do get people stuck in all kinds of positions and ways and we are still a full service department."

Keys said her foray into the branches went well until "I cut the limb off and then it fell and hit a swing and that hit the ladder" and suddenly she was alone in the leaves with no visible means of descent.

Fortunately, she was able to reach out and touch emergency services.

"I'm a sailor, so I try to prepare myself for situations," she said. "Before I went up I got my little fanny pack and stuck the phone in it. I called information and got the police and kind of calmly described" her situation.

The cops passed the word to the firefighters. Three of them showed up. They replaced Keys' ladder and she clambered to the ground.

"I'm feeling really silly right now," Keys said on Monday. "My mother always told me never to do anything stupid in public."

Scrapbook is sad chronicle of urban crime nightmare

By The Associated Press

BOSTON — Sixteen-year-old Nicole Richardson's scrapbook is full of newspaper clippings about the kind of horrors most people living in the inner city try to forget.

"Hub Teen Slain In Tragic Mother's Day Shooting," reads one. "Teen Dies After Home Invasion." "Gang Attack Shatters Wake."

But Nicole doesn't want to forget these victims. They were all her friends, killed or hurt on the streets outside her window.

"I just wanted to keep things of them," she says. "I just started putting them in the book. I look at this almost every day, to remember."

In the past two years, Nicole has cut out and pasted stories on 10 of her friends in the sad chronicle. Seven are dead.

"I don't want more people in here," she says.

The first clipping recounts the August 1990 drive-by shooting of Marvin O'Brien, just a few blocks from Nicole's home in Dorchester, a working-class enclave south of Boston's downtown.

Nicole mainly remembers O'Brien smiling, always cracking jokes.

The night he was killed, she was walking with her aunt when they heard gunfire. "When we got to the top of the street over there we saw them," she says.

"When I saw him I didn't really believe it. I just walked by, started crying."

The boy apparently had been in a street gang. Nicole didn't attend the funeral because she worried gang members might show up.

O'Brien was the first person she had ever known who was killed on the streets, and she saved the stories about him.

When several friends were killed within the space of a few months last spring, she began assembling the scrapbook.

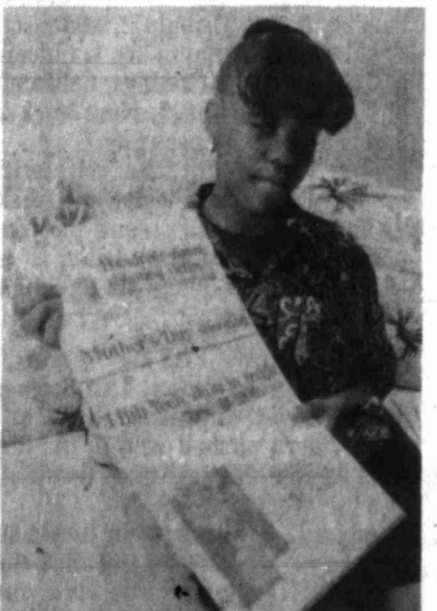

Nicole, a quiet girl who wants to be a carpenter and build low-income housing, put great care into making the book. On its opening pages are copies of the Lord's Prayer, a poem, and the lyrics of the song "It's So Hard to Say Goodbye," by Boyz II Men, one of her favorite groups.

Nicole had never known such bloodshed until her family came to Boston from Charleston, S.C. Her father died when she was young, and Nicole's mother, Vicki, moved north eight years ago to be near her mother. Vicki Richardson had six children to raise, as well as a niece and nephew she took in after her sister succumbed to a drug habit.

Mrs. Richardson keeps Nicole inside often, keeps track of her friends, and worries.

Nicole is quick to defend her friends. Most were "trying to get out of this, get away from all this violence," she says.

Knicks' defense keys Game 1 win

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The New York Knicks' checklist for beating the Chicago Bulls goes something like this:

- Don't let Michael Jordan and Scottie Pippen go crazy. Check.
- Stop their reserves. Check.
- Rebound. Check.
- Play tough defense. Check.

New York captured the opener of the Eastern Conference finals 98-90 Sunday, keeping the homecourt advantage it protected so doggedly during the regular season.

Jordan scored 27 points and Pippen 24 for the Bulls, but Jordan missed 10 of 13 shots in the second half and 17 of 27 for the game, while Pippen missed 11 of 19. The Knicks' top scorers, John Starks and Patrick Ewing, scored 25 points each to offset Jordan and Pippen.

From the bench, the Knicks got 20 points from three reserves, while the Bulls got eight points from five substitutes.

"Michael and Scottie played well, but not a lot of other players were involved," Knicks coach Pat Riley said.

New York outrebounded the Bulls 48-28, led by Ewing with 17 and Charles Oakley with 14.

"We're the No. 1 rebounding team in the league and I think we did a great job keeping them off the boards," Ewing said. "Being at home was a big factor, too. We worked hard all year to get homecourt advantage."

The victory gave New York, 37-4 at home during the regular season, a 26-game winning streak at Madison Square Garden.

"The story of the game is rebounding," Riley said. "We had a sloppy game from a ballhandling standpoint, but our rebounding overcame that."

The Knicks' status as the NBA's best defensive team was tarnished somewhat by high-scoring Indiana and Charlotte in the first two rounds of the playoffs. But they held the Bulls to 90 points on 43 percent shooting. It was the first loss by the two-time defending NBA champions in eight playoff games this season, and snapped Chicago's nine-game winning streak, dating back to last year.

In addition to scoring 13 points and hitting four 3-pointers in the fourth quarter, Starks led the defensive charge against Jordan.

"I just tried to play Michael as hard as I could," Starks said. "There's no time to take a break. You can't stop Michael Jordan. That's a given. All I can do is play as hard as I can."

Neither team led by more than six points until the fourth quarter, when Starks hit three 3-pointers in the first 4 1/2 minutes to give the Knicks an 83-73 lead.

"Patrick set up the 3s with pick and rolls," Starks said. "The Bulls did all they could to force me out, but I was able to get the shots off."

The Bulls pulled within six three times midway through the fourth quarter, but a 3-pointer by Starks and a three-point play by Anthony Mason blunted the rally.

"I don't remember him when he was in the CBA and I don't remember him when he first came into the league, but I know who he is now," Jordan said.

Chicago made one last run, closing to 91-87 on Scott Williams' tip-in with 1:34 left. But two free throws and a layup by Mason boosted the lead to 95-88 with 59 seconds remaining.

Chicago's Michael Jordan wipes his forehead as he sits on the bench in the second quarter of Sunday's NBA Eastern Conference Final playoff game against the New York Knicks. New York won, 98-90.

Phils maintain pace; Astros edge Padres

By The Associated Press

The Philadelphia Phillies have the best record in the majors for several reasons, including their ability to win when they don't play particularly well.

Take Sunday's 14-7 victory over Montreal. After blowing the lead in a loss to the Expos on Saturday night, the Phillies played another sloppy game. Still, they won.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

"I don't know what I can say about that game," manager Jim Fregosi said. "It wasn't very well played by either team. The offense carried us today."

It had to. In the last two games, for instance, Phillies shortstops Mariano Duncan and Juan Bell each made three errors.

Darren Daulton drove in four runs and Lenny Dykstra had three doubles to help the Phillies gain a split in the four-game series at Veterans Stadium.

The Phillies improved their record to 29-13, tops in the major leagues, and have won 17 of 23 home games. But Philadelphia dropped the previous two games of the series to second-place Montreal — losing ugly each time.

Elsewhere in the NL it was Florida 4, Chicago 2; St. Louis 4, Pittsburgh 3, in 10 innings; Atlanta 2, New York 1; Los Angeles 4, Colorado 0; Houston 9, San Diego 7; and San Francisco 3, Cincinnati 2.

ASTROS 9, PADRES 7
Craig Biggio had two homers among his four hits and drove in three runs as visiting Houston beat San Diego to end a five-game losing streak.

Jeff Bagwell added three hits and two RBIs, raising his average to .379.

Friends, foes roast Dallas coach

By The Associated Press

PORT ARTHUR — Jimmy Johnson returned home with the Super Bowl championship and finally let his hair down.

The mood was festive Saturday at the sixth annual Port Arthur News Homecoming Roast, which raised a record $172,133 for the city's historical society.

Still, the sentiment brought tears to Johnson's eyes.

"This is truly a special moment," the Cowboys' coach, this year's roastee, said during his emotional speech. "My mood is not to be roasting or to be countering back at someone who would be roasting me."

"I'm very proud to be here and if I was to say anything to all of you tonight, it would be 'Live your life to the fullest and have one helluva time.'"

Johnson, a local high school football star who also was roasted in 1988, took verbal shots from several coaching peers, a few players, Cowboys owner Jerry Jones and members of the sports media.

Many of their jabs centered on the city's renaming of 75th street to "Jimmy Johnson Boulevard" at a ceremony earlier Saturday.

"Jimmy, I looked at a lot of streets named after you — they were all called 'One Way,'" said Houston Oilers defensive coordinator Buddy Ryan, who when he was the Philadelphia Eagles' head coach feuded often with Johnson.

Critics sometimes have described Johnson's coaching style as "my way or the highway."

The 3 1/2-hour banquet, attended by about 1,500 people, included a video presentation of highlights from the Cowboys' 52-17 Super Bowl victory over the Buffalo Bills, pictures of Johnson as a child, and pictures of his earlier coaching days.

Lottery losers angry

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — First came amazement. Then resentment.

The Orlando Magic, a 1-in-66 longshot, won the NBA draft lottery for the second year in a row Sunday. The Magic's incredible good fortune evoked jealous reactions from most teams, but the Minnesota Timberwolves were just plain mad.

"It's a joke, a complete joke," general manager Jack McCloskey said in an unusually bold fit of public anger. "Orlando getting the number one pick is not what this draft — or any draft — is meant to be."

The 11 team representatives present for the lottery were absolutely shocked when commissioner David Stern opened an envelope with the logo of the No. 2 choice (Philadelphia), leaving Orlando the winner.

"There was total silence, absolute dead silence for about three seconds," Golden State assistant GM Gregg Popovich said.

Orlando had only one of 66 ping pong balls in a cylinder from which balls were plucked one at a time to determine the draft order.

Magic general manager Pat Williams, who won the lottery last year and chose eventual rookie of the year Shaquille O'Neal, said he hadn't even considered the possibility of choosing No. 1 overall.

"I can't believe it," was the first thing he said. "What can I say — it's magic. Suddenly, we went from No. 11 to No. 1."

The other end of the spectrum featured McCloskey and Dallas Mavericks general manager Norm Sonju lamenting their luck.

"It kind of defeats the purpose of using the draft to build the weaker teams," Sonju said. "There was enough discussion among the guys up there that I'm sure they'll do something. I'd be very surprised if there wasn't some groundswell (for changing the lottery system)."

The NBA adjusted the lottery in 1990, switching to a weighted formula to give the teams with the worst records a better chance at getting the best players.

Now that Orlando has bucked the long odds, it could be changed again.

"Aside from us and Orlando, I'd say it was a real downer for all the other lottery teams," Warriors coach Don Nelson said. "I think the league has to take a hard look at this lottery system. It wouldn't surprise me ... if there would be some changes in order."

First, however, the draft has to take place June 30 at Auburn Hills, Mich. Speculation abounds on what Orlando will do.

Will the Magic choose Shawn Bradley, a 7-foot-6 center from Brigham Young who hasn't played for two years.

Tigers increase lead; Salmon slaps Rangers

By The Associated Press

Ever so gradually, the Detroit Tigers are increasing their lead in the American League East.

The gap between the Tigers and second place reached a season-high 3 1/2 games Sunday as Detroit beat Cleveland 4-2 to take the deciding game of a three-game series with the Indians. Detroit has been in first place since April 23.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Elsewhere in the American League, it was Toronto 2, Minnesota 1; Milwaukee 9, Baltimore 1; Chicago 5, Oakland 4 in 10 innings; California 6, Texas 2; Boston 5, New York 2; and Seattle 10, Kansas City 7.

The Tigers got the win with homers from Cecil Fielder and Mickey Tettleton and a strong pitching performance from Mark Leiter (3-1). Detroit has won five of six and 10 of 13.

ANGELS 6, RANGERS 2

At Arlington, Texas, Tim Salmon had a career-high four RBIs and Julio Valera pitched well in his first start as California salvaged the finale of a three-game series.

Valera (2-3) allowed four hits in six innings in his 12th appearance this season. He struck out five and walked none in his first start since Sept. 30.

Chili Davis had an RBI single. Salmon a two-run double and Torey Lovullo a run-scoring hit off Todd Burns (0-1) in a four-run third. Salmon had his seventh homer in the fifth and added an RBI single in the seventh.

WHITE SOX 5, ATHLETICS 4, 10 INNINGS

At Chicago, George Bell, whose two-run homer put Chicago back in the game, added a decisive triple in the 10th inning as the White Sox averted a weekend sweep.

Bell's one-out hit off reliever Rich Gossage (3-1) scored Joey Cora, who walked to start the inning. The White Sox trailed 4-1 when Bell homered in the eighth off reliever Joe Boever. A sacrifice fly by Ozzie Guillen off reliever Rick Honeycutt tied the game in the ninth.

MARINERS 10, ROYALS 7

Rich Amaral singled home the lead run in the ninth and Ken Griffey Jr. tripled in two more as the Mariners won the topsy-turvy game. Russ Swan (2-2) was the winner and Jeff Montgomery (2-2) took the loss.

BLUE JAYS 2, TWINS 1

At Toronto, Pat Hentgen pitched well and got offensive help from Alfredo Griffin as Toronto completed a weekend sweep that stretched Minnesota's winless streak to seven games.

BREWERS 9, ORIOLES 1

Kevin Reimer's bases-loaded single keyed a three-run third inning against Fernando Valenzuela, and Milwaukee won its first road series of the year.

Reimer went 3 for 3 with the bases loaded and drove in eight runs during the three-game series.

RED SOX 5, YANKEES 2

At Boston, Mo Vaughn hit two home runs off Jimmy Key (4-2), raising his average against lefties to .395.

Cheever's dramatic run bumps Rahal from 500

By The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Front row to last row in one chaotic year, Eddie Cheever again showed his flair for the dramatic.

Unable to find the speed in his own car and already bumped from the Indianapolis 500 lineup, Cheever survived a potentially disastrous blunder and requalified Sunday in the final 15 minutes of time trials.

He knocked defending Indy-car national champion Bobby Rahal from the 33-car lineup and earned a start from the outside of the 11th and final row for the May 30 race.

"I'm making a big deal out of being last on the grid, but it was a very exciting moment for me. I would say it's even more exciting than being on the front row last year," said Cheever, one of only two qualifiers on Sunday, the last of the four days of time trials.

"Last year, I had a perfect month. I peaked in qualifying. Here, I had a very difficult month, but I'm very proud of what we accomplished."

Cheever started second last year and finished fourth. He was fired by car owner Chip Ganassi at the end of the season, but landed a ride with Turley Motorsports. A last-minute deal with John Menard gave Cheever another car and another chance to qualify, but after three laps fast enough to bump Rahal, he unexpectedly was waved off the track.

"We had it under 218, and we decided if the last lap wasn't a 218 it wasn't quite fast enough, so we pulled the yellow ... to try it again," said Menard, who avoided a lot of second-guessing when Cheever went back out and qualified even faster, at 217.599 mph, in the closing minutes.

Belgian Didier Theys then bumped rookie Mark Smith, leaving Rahal the last driver with a chance to get into the lineup. As the gun ending qualifications went off, Rahal began his final attempt in his backup car, but he managed only 216.342. It wasn't enough.

"It's very embarrassing, because I race to win, not just qualify. It's pretty humbling. ... We have no one to blame but ourselves," Rahal said.

Rahal was the first reigning Indy-car champion in 44 years to fail to qualify for the 500 and only the fourth 500 winner to subsequently fail in a qualifying attempt.

Cheever was at the opposite end of the emotional spectrum.

"I wanted to get in the show more than anything in the world," he said. "I never thought I'd have to work that hard to qualify a car to get in the race, but the downside of not qualifying was horrific, so it wasn't that hard to get psyched up about it."

With Theys the final qualifier at 217.752, the field average was 219.692 mph, well below last year's record 223.479. Arie Luyendyk will start from the pole on Sunday after qualifying at 223.967, with Mario Andretti and Raul Boesel beside him on the front row.

Jim Crawford, who qualified on Saturday, will start on the inside of the 11th row, next to Theys and Cheever. The slowest qualifier, and the one on the bubble as Rahal made his final attempt, was Kevin Cogan, who is attempting a comeback after being out of racing since he was seriously injured at Indy in 1991.

"It's been the longest month of my life," said Cheever, who now has veterans Gary Bettenhausen and Geoff Brabham and rookie Nelson Piquet as his new Menard teammates.

"I would have been very sad more than angry, if I hadn't made the show. But I knew after about five laps in the car, it had a lot of downforce and the engine's got a lot of power. And if I could make the two things meet, I would go out."

"I got stuck for a while, I did two laps at 212. And Gary stuck his head in the car and said just go down the straightaway, crack the throttle back a little bit, put it back in and it'll do it. I looked him in the eye ... and he looked pretty sincere, so I went out and did it and he was right."

Rahal, the 1986 winner who now is co-owner of his own race team, will miss the 500 for the first time since he came to Indianapolis in 1982. He never was able to find the necessary speed in his Rahal-Hogan chassis, which is still in development. "It's been tough all month. But I can't fault our crew," Rahal said. "We just missed it with the car. We'll go get 'em next year. I've never not qualified for an Indy car race."

Theys' bump of Smith left five rookies in the lineup and continued a jinx for the most common name in the telephone book: In the 77-year history of the Indianapolis 500, there still never has been a Smith in the lineup.

The fastest of the newcomers was Stephan Gregoire of France, who also is the youngest driver in the lineup at age 24. Gregoire qualified at 220.851 mph, barely edging Stefan Johansson of Sweden and Nigel Mansell of England, last year's Formula One champion.
