DeAnda suing to void council election

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

Former District 1 Big Spring city councilwoman Pat DeAnda filed suit Friday in district court asking that she be declared the winner of the May 1 election or a new election be called.

DeAnda, who lost the election to Stephanie Horton by one vote, 118-117, alleges voting irregularities in seven areas of the Texas Election Code. The suit asks that DeAnda's costs for a new election and attorney fees be charged to Horton.

"The fairness and purity of this election was materially interfered with and therefore the canvass does not reflect the true result of the voters," states the suit, prepared by San Antonio attorney Albert Garcia and filed in 118th District Court here.

"I'm really appalled at Mrs. DeAnda's statement," said Horton, who pointed out that a recount showed identical results.

"I have not been informed of what seven irregularities she's talking about. I am the city council person for District 1 and intend to give good service to the people in my district and the city of Big Spring."

Questioned shortly after votes were counted May 1 were two incidents, one in which two votes were cast in behalf of a woman, and another in which a woman was allowed to vote but her husband, who's lived in the same house with her 30 years, was not allowed to. The city does not have jurisdiction to investigate voting irregularities or voting fraud.

Among charges listed in the suit:

- Qualified voters were not allowed to vote and unqualified voters were.

- Illegal votes were counted and legal votes excluded.

- A poll list was not kept as required by the Texas Election Code, which prevents accurately verifying qualified voters. It also cites six other areas of the Election Code that were violated by election officials.

"Contestant will show that she was the true winner of the election," states the suit. But if the true outcome cannot be determined, "contestant requests that the election results be declared void and a new election be held."

It also requests that any new election be held under supervision of the court. District Judge Bob Moore must recuse himself from the case to avoid any possible conflicts of interest, according to state law. A visiting judge would preside.

Questioned last month was a report to city officials that a woman voter reportedly told an election official her ballot was marked for the wrong candidate so she received another ballot. The official reportedly put the first ballot in the box for counting, as well as the second but the first should have been discarded in the spoiled ballot box.

Matching number of signatures of registered voters to ballots cast does not necessarily give an indication of whether two ballots were put in the voting box for one person, according to city officials.

There were 215 signatures and 216 ballots — not including early voting — but two ballots were discarded. One was discarded because both candidates were marked, the other has only Horton marked and could have been discarded only if the voter said they mistakenly marked Horton, said City Secretary Tom Ferguson.

However, without sworn statements it's not known if voters who marked the discarded ballots also cast ballots in the box for counting. The discarded ballots could have been removed from the box for counting and discarded during counting.

In an unrelated incident, a woman who lives in the 1000 block of North Runnels, now part of District 2 following redistricting, said she was allowed to vote in the District 1 race but her husband, a registered voter at the same address as his wife, was not allowed to.

Police fine tuning method in getting search warrants

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

The Big Spring Police Department will fine tune its search warrant procedures with more outside legal training and signatures from judges other than the municipal magistrate, in keeping with recommendations made by the city council, Police Chief Joe Cook said today.

"In response to recommendations by the council, the department admitted room for improvement in its warrant procedures.

"We're going to increase the quality of (preparing search warrants). Out of necessity, we've resorted to self education," Cook said. "Search warrant (procedures) are in a constant state of change because we are constantly receiving case law updating the parameters of search warrants."

"We have a consensus that we need more outside professional training," he added.

The council made its recommendations May 25 after reviewing complaints put forth by the Police Citizens Advisory Board.

The board reviewed a complaint regarding a February search of a business in the 1700 block of West Third Street.

Council members concluded, "no evidence was seen for any charges of illegal or improper behavior by the police officers who conducted the raid."

"While legal, the search warrant was incomplete," the statement continued.

Due to those discrepancies, the council recommended the department, "establish regular and thorough police officer training for warrant preparation and procedure."

It concluded its recommendation by noting, "To avoid the 'appearance' of warrant monopoly, all warrants prepared by the Big Spring Police Department are to be signed by authorized judges outside the municipal organization."

Cook said council members "wanted to eliminate the appearance of any collusion. We wanted to avoid any connotation of impropriety."

Department officials are advised to seek warrant signatures first from the district or county judges before obtaining a municipal judge's signature.

Local business' benefit helping keep park open

MARTHA E. FLORES

A local business owner is providing a benefit to his employees and assisting in keeping the Big Spring State Park open at the same time.

Warren Chiropractic Center owner J.Wray Warren recently purchased Texas Conservation Passports for the clinic's 15 employees. The passports provide unlimited entrance to the local state park, as well as any state park. Passport holders also receive a discount on overnight facility fees.

"We did it to promote exercise,"

Warren said. "The passport was a way the employees could benefit and so could the park."

Last summer, the park was one of 11 slated to be closed. A public outcry with a 13,000-signature petition saved the park, but park manager Ron Alton said keeping it open is an ongoing process.

Alton promotes the local facility at fairs and expos. Marketing and tourism strategies are developed at conferences Alton attends with other park managers.

Legislators, others look back at session

The Associated Press

AUSTIN — "As we come to the end of the session, let us be remembered more for the good we did by mistake than the harm we did on purpose."

That message, delivered in the House prayer to open the final day of the 1993 Legislature, was etched in the grins of lawmakers who Monday reviewed the 140-day session.

Most legislators gave the session above average marks, calling it fair for Republicans and Democrats, conservatives and liberals.

Gov. Ann Richards said the session was "one of the most productive we have had." She touted bills addressing health insurance, the penal code and school finance.

Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock said the Senate tackled the state's problems in a business-like manner.

"They came to town with a determination of making Texas better. They did it. In every field of endeavor, this Senate approached it with a determination to get the job done, and they did it," he said.

House Speaker Pete Laney, D-Hale Center, who completed his first session in the chamber's top job, praised House members for a successful session.

"We've proven that we can get together to solve different issues facing our state. We kept the schools open, we passed a budget without raising any taxes, and ... rewrote the penal code," he said.

Conservatives and Republicans also seemed fairly pleased with the process.

"The conservatives won a lot of issues this year," said Rep. Warren Chisum, D-Pampa, head of the House Conservative Coalition. "We were able to fight (for) some family issues ... I think it's been a good session for us."

Early voting for Senate runoff race ends today

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

Today's the last day of early voting at the courthouse for Saturday's U.S. Senate seat runoff election.

The runoff, so far, is more popular in Howard County than the May 1 election when 27 competed for the seat.

"We could go over what we voted the first time if we have heavy traffic today," said County Clerk Margaret Ray. "We've had a good turnout for early voting."

As of this morning, 807 cast votes and another 61 mail-in ballots were requested. That's a total of 868, just 220 less than early votes for May 1, in which more than 400 ballots were cast the last day of early voting. Registered countywide for Saturday's election are 15,874, up 38 from May 1.

Numbers are unusually high for a runoff, Ray said. But some may be voting early because they're leaving on vacations, she said. "It's kind of hard to tell."

The candidates are Robert "Bob" Krueger, D-Austin, former Texas railroad commissioner appointed by Gov. Ann Richards as interim senator after Lloyd Bentsen was appointed U.S. treasury secretary, and Kay Bailey Hutchison, R-Austin, currently serving as state treasurer. The election is nonpartisan.

Early voting closes at 5 p.m. at Ray's office in the courthouse at Fourth and Scurry. On Saturday, nine polls, consolidated from 22 precincts, will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. Polling places will be published in the Big Spring Herald.

Consolidation of precincts, approved by county commissioners to cut the costs that ran about $9,000 for the May 1 election, could further boost early voting in efforts to avoid confusion, Ray said, noting that it's confusing for many to have to vote at a different polling location.

"It's hard for a lot of people ... and we hate it," she said. "But you have to look at the budget, too."

In the May 1 election, Hutchison finished first, edging Krueger by 497 votes statewide, 593,479 to 592,982. In Howard County, Hutchison received 989 votes to Krueger's 901.

The End:

Shooting, schooling, smelling ... 140 days, it's over

The Associated Press

AUSTIN — It's over. After 140 days of lawmaking, the 1993 Legislature's regular session came to an end Monday.

During that stretch, lawmakers voted to allow hunting in parks but not carrying of handguns. They adopted a bigger budget but approved no tax increase.

They wrote a school finance reform plan. Twice. And they debated that age-old question: does a hog farm smell like money or, well, just pigs?

From her perspective, Gov. Ann Richards was pleased with the outcome. "I think we've had an extraordinarily successful session," she said.

"I don't think anyone can doubt that." Here's a look at some of the major and minor actions of the 1993 Texas Legislature:

SCHOOL FINANCE For a third time, Texas Supreme Court had ruled against the school funding system. So lawmakers early in the session approved a third school finance proposal, the now-infamous "Robin Hood" share-the-wealth plan to shift $400 million from rich to poor school districts.

On May 1, voters gave their opinion — No way.

In a matter of days, the Legislature came up with a new idea. A multiple-choice plan gives 109 rich districts five options for sharing — from consolidation to writing checks to the state.

Sen. Bill Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant, helped write it and concluded: "This comes as close as humanly possible to meeting the (court's) test."

BUDGET After suffering through repeated massive shortfalls and prolonged tax-and-spend battles, state leaders this year issued a pre-session decree: no new taxes.

The Legislature then wrote a two-year budget that boosts spending by 11.4 percent — $7.18 billion — for a 1994-95 total of $70.1 billion. Only a few fees went up.

Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, a key budget writer, said the spending plan isn't lavish. "A Chevrolet with no white walls," he called it.

Added Richards: "We held the line on money; and yet we have been able to fund all of these essentials."

GUN BATTLES Echoing the state's Wild West image, lawmakers exchanged fire — over and over — over guns.

Lawmakers took a shot at legalizing the carrying of handguns. Calling it an invitation for more violence, the governor fired back with a veto threat.

Lawmakers reloaded, saying they would settle for giving voters a shot at the question. Their final plan: a non-binding referendum on Nov. 2 in which voters could express their opinions.

But Richards still pledged a veto, calling the referendum bill "nothing more than game playing by a few legislators who appear intent on embarrassing this great state as a place where gun-toting vigilantes roam the streets."

Legislative gunfire wasn't confined to that issue. Lawmakers also endorsed expanding hunting in state parks. "There are thousands and thousands of people in this state, fathers and sons, that do not have a place to hunt," said Rep. Allen Hightower, D-Huntsville.

Richards, an avid hunter, said that bill would become law.

ENVIRONMENT Big battles were fought over the environment. Under one bill, pumping from the Edwards Aquifer would be regulated by a permit system to protect endangered species. The underground aquifer, which extends for 176 miles under Central Texas counties, is the sole source of drinking water for San Antonio.

Lawmakers endorsed a compact with two New England states for disposal of their low-level radioactive waste. Vermont and Maine must pay Texas $25 million each to use the Hudspeth County dump, and backers said the deal will keep bigger states from horning in.

Another bill would allow the Railroad Commission to regulate storage of hazardous materials in salt domes.

Hours were spent debating a bill to exempt agricultural operations from most air pollution control requirements, unless it was shown that odors caused injuries or a public health hazard.

Backers said the bill was needed because livestock operations are naturally smelly and air control regulations of agriculture do little to protect the environment. Opponents said it would encourage large dairy operators and feedlots to enter Texas without regard to location.

The bill died after senators added a provision that would have allowed lawsuits if the "quality of life" were damaged.

CRIME A major anti-crime push was a centerpiece of the session. Lawmakers voted to create a system of 22,000 new "state jail" beds for nonviolent offenders, build 10,000 new prison beds and fund 7,000 prison beds for substance abuse treatment.

They overhauled the state's code of criminal laws, voting to double the prison time of violent criminals. Gay rights activists urged a gubernatorial veto, however, because the bill keeps the state's century-old law banning socialism between same-sex couples. Also approved was anti-stalking legislation and 40-year minimum sentences for capital murderers who don't receive the death penalty.

Lawmakers passed a hate crimes measure to toughen penalties in offenses motivated by prejudice and abolish probation in hate-motivated murders.

Under a drunken driving measure, motorists who refuse or fail a breath or blood test could have their drivers' licenses revoked.

And lawmakers decided to extend the death penalty to those who murder children under the age of six and to double penalties for drug offenses committed near children.

ETHICS The current state ethics law was passed only minutes before the clock struck midnight and ended the 1991 Legislature. That sparked criticism that lawmakers hadn't even gotten a chance to read the bill.

They had a full 140 days this year to make changes. But while they debated proposals to limit campaign contributions, limit terms for officeholders and prohibit legislators from becoming lobbyists, the clock won again. An ethics reform bill died without a final vote when the Legislature adjourned.

HIGHER EDUCATION The South Texas Initiative was adopted, aimed at increasing higher education opportunities and improving colleges and universities in the region.

A $460 million package was approved for expanding undergraduate, graduate and doctoral programs, and for building and expanding campuses and facilities.

The initiative is a response to a 1987 lawsuit that contends border area residents have been denied equal access to higher education. Lawmakers said South Texas has been receiving about $43 per person for higher education, compared with $103 per person for other parts of the state.

BUSINESS Business bills were a booming business. Passed early in the session and signed by Richards into law were two bills making it harder for consumers to recover damages from companies by taking them to court.

National Guard general confirmed by lawmakers

AUSTIN (AP) — Brig. Gen. Sam Turk's appointment to lead the Texas National Guard was confirmed by the state Senate despite opposition from Hispanic lawmakers.

Sen. Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin, said Monday he didn't believe Turk would be able to correct allegations of racism and fraud that have plagued the Guard.

"I did not see in General Turk a man who would change direction at the Guard," Barrientos said.

Barrientos said there are federal investigations into fraud and corruption at the Guard. A federal grand jury has subpoenaed records of 22 Guard soldiers, including those of Turk and other top brass, Barrientos said.

In addition, there is a probe into allegations that minorities have been passed over for promotions.

Turk, 56, is a 38-year veteran of the Texas Army National Guard. He was appointed adjutant general by Gov. Ann Richards in January.

The Senate confirmed Turk's nomination 23-7. All six Hispanic senators, and Sen. Peggy Rosson, D-El Paso, voted against him.

Weatherford doctor gets Physician of Year honor

FORT WORTH (AP) — A 70-year-old doctor who has seen the medical field evolve over the last four decades into a highly specialized career has been named the state's Family Physician of the Year.

Jack Eidson, who has been honored by the Texas Academy of Family Physicians, recalls that when he opened his office in Weatherford 43 years ago there was no time to concentrate on just one thing.

"I remember doing surgery on a child one time, an appendectomy, and I gave the spinal myself, then ran around and did the surgery," Eidson said. "All the doctors were out, and I just had nurses to help me. It came out all right, but of course doing something like that is frowned on nowadays."

One of the biggest changes Eidson has seen is the skyrocketing cost of medical care.

"When I first started practice, my insurance cost $25 a year, and we just charged $2 for office calls," said Eidson, who now pays around $3,000 per year for malpractice coverage and charges established patients $25 per visit and new patients $55.

"I can recall that a bed at the hospital, in a ward room which was four beds to a room, cost $4 a day, and that included clean sheets, nursing care, three meals a day, and aspirin. They didn't charge for aspirin."

Dallas, Ft. Worth join forces in bid for tourists

ARLINGTON (AP) — For the first time, Dallas and Fort Worth are joining forces to rope in the tourism bucks this summer.

The two cities have an elaborate $2 million advertising campaign called "The Texas Metroplex: One Exciting Place."

Only New York outranks Dallas in popularity as a meeting place, and Dallas-Fort Worth is already Texas' leading tourist destination, with 29.4 million visitors last year. About two-thirds of those visitors were leisure travelers; the remainder came on business and convention trips.

So far, 31,500 people from Texas and neighboring states have called a special number to order a package of brochures and discount coupons, officials say.

The campaign seeks also to convince tourists "they can stay a whole week in the area and not run out of fun, exciting things to do."

Among the drawing cards is the newest addition of the Palace of Wax in Grand Prairie. On June 10, the museum will unveil a wax statue of Elvis Presley. An earlier version of Elvis had a meltdown during a 1988 electrical fire.

Clinton stirs emotions at Wall

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — As President Clinton stood to speak before the Vietnam Veterans Memorial, the wall regarded by vets as hallowed ground, Dave Price turned his chair and showed his back to the commander in chief who never served.

"There's no place at this memorial" for Clinton, said the Vietnam veteran who said the names of about 25 friends were etched onto the black granite panels. "He has trashed the memory of all my fallen comrades."

Price did not hold the dominant view toward Clinton's Memorial Day appearance, judging by the applause that overshadowed the catcalls and jeers. But his silent protest showed just how emotional the day had become.

Clinton's decision to speak at the wall generated such strong feelings because he avoided the draft and protested against the Vietnam War.

But for 12 years, presidents declined invitations to speak at the Memorial Day observances at the wall. Clinton came.

"I'm sick and tired of hearing all the people badmouthing our president," said Vietnam veteran Steve Falkenthal of Woodbridge, Va. "The tone is to forgive and forget."

Clinton didn't apologize for his failure to serve in the military, and his speech appeared to change few opinions.

But the president captured the solemnity of the occasion when, after speaking, he paused before the wall and traced the name of a deceased high school classmate.

Earlier, speaking in front of wreaths, flowers and pictures of fallen soldiers that lined the base of the wall, Clinton asked those who were jeering to hear him out. He told them, "Disagreement is freedom's privilege."

"Let us continue to disagree if we must about the war. But let us not let it divide us as a people any longer," Clinton said.

"I ask you at this monument, can any American be out of place? And can any commander-in-chief be in any other place but here on this day? I think not."

Clinton drew the loudest applause when he announced he was ordering nearly all U.S. military records pertaining to missing Americans from the war in Southeast Asia be declassified and made public by Nov. 11, Veterans Day.

President Clinton, accompanied by Jan Scruggs, president of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund, pauses at the Vietnam Memorial after giving a Memorial Day speech Monday in Washington.

Clinton said only "a tiny fraction" of the documents would remain classified and not available for public scrutiny because of national security or privacy-protection concerns.

As Clinton spoke, there were shouts from the crowd of "shame," "draft dodger" and "coward."

Those comments angered David Castillo, a Vietnam veteran from Los Angeles, who said, "You boo an umpire. You don't boo the president of the United States."

Bill Morey of Manchester, N.H., who rode to Washington as part of a motorcycle group of Vietnam vets, said he strongly opposed Clinton's avoiding the draft, but credited the president with "a lot of guts" for appearing. His fellow bikers, he said, couldn't forgive Clinton and went home early as a protest.

William Malhorn of York, Pa., said of Clinton, "What he learned from other speakers may have touched him more than he touched us."

One Vietnam veteran, John Reichenberg, said Clinton needed to come "for a little forgiveness," but suggested that he "now let it go" and not return to the memorial for awhile.

He said a woman sitting next to him, who lost her son in Vietnam, was the only spectator he saw who might have changed her mind about Clinton during his speech.

"She booed at the beginning," he said, but changed her mind when Clinton announced he would declassify records on missing Americans. "By the end of the speech, she was cheering," he said.

Drinking orange juice costs Fittipaldi $5,000

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Drinking orange juice cost Indianapolis 500 champion Emerson Fittipaldi $5,000.

Tradition at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway calls for the winner to take a swig from a bottle of milk after finishing. But Fittipaldi, whose holdings include a 500,000-acre orange grove in Brazil, gulped a glass of juice first after winning Sunday's race.

That led the American Dairy Association of Indiana to withdraw the $5,000 prize it usually presents to the winner.

The 46-year-old Fittipaldi could afford it. He won $1,155,304 for his first-place finish.

Activist postpones Florida-Cuba swim

MIAMI (AP) — Stormy weather forced an environmental activist to postpone his bid to swim a record 177 miles from Cuba to the Florida Keys in a shark cage.

Skip Storch, a 35-year-old park recreation director from Spring Valley, N.Y., had planned to set out from Havana for Islamorada, Fla., early today.

But a tropical depression formed Monday in the northwestern Caribbean.

"The water is too turbulent," said Gene Chillemi, Storch's spokesman. "They are hoping the storm will move out and they will be able to go in the water Wednesday at dawn."

Storch said he wants to heighten awareness of the danger to the world's coral reefs. He has swum across New York's Hudson River and around the Statue of Liberty.

The distance record for an ocean swim is held by Walter Poesch, who swam 128.8 miles from Havana to Little Duck Key in 1978.

Marijuana festival needed more grass

MOUNT HOREB, Wis. (AP) — A marijuana festival called Weedstock could have used a little more grass.

About 1,000 cars got stuck in the mud in the fields where they were parked during the four-day pro-pot celebration, which drew about 3,500 people. Tow trucks and tractors were used to free many of the vehicles.

Police broke up a few fights among bummed-out festivalgoers.

"Everybody's kind of getting ornery with all the mud," sheriff's dispatcher Tom Prochaska said.

Six people were arrested on drug and weapons charges. Sheriff's deputies issued nearly 200 citations for other offenses ranging from drug use to trying to sneak into the festival without paying the $25 admission fee.

One man who tried to swallow a plastic bag full of marijuana during a traffic stop choked, and an officer had to perform the Heimlich maneuver on him, authorities said.

Navy flier claiming sexual harassment

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — A Navy ensign says she was dismissed from an advanced flight training program for accusing an instructor of sexually harassing her while they were in the air.

The secretary of the Navy is reviewing the complaint from 27-year-old Rebecca Hansen.

In an interview in Sunday's Saint Paul Pioneer Press, Hansen said she complained that Lt. Larry Meyer, during a flight, called her a "wench," told her she would look "really hot" if she got blue contact lenses and dyed her hair auburn, and said "he'd like to see me in a black bikini."

Officials at the Naval Air Station in Corpus Christi, Texas, ruled Meyer was guilty of inappropriate conduct but not sexual harassment, Hansen said.

Meyer, who retired from the Navy last month, said he did nothing wrong.

Hansen, whose parents live in Shoreview, was dismissed March 19 from the advanced program at her next base, the Naval Air Station in Milton, Fla.

An instructor reported that she seemed paranoid and that her flight skills were marginal.

Ring makes a difference

To whom it may concern: You took something belonging to a friend of mine. I've heard your side of the story, and I want you to hear his.

It was a hot summer day in 1966. You were driving down Main Street in Snyder, N.Y., suburban Buffalo. You were in deep despair. You had flunked out of college. Your parents had given up on you. You had a miserable summertime job digging swimming pools and you hated it.

At lunchtime there was a Howard Johnson's at Main and Kensington.

In the washroom, still wallowing in self-pity, you approached the sink. On the flat lip of the sink was a ring. A large college ring. A St. Bonaventure College ring.

There was nobody else in the washroom. You pocketed the ring.

At the counter and in the dining room there was nobody the right age to wear a college ring. Maybe whatever gods there be were trying to help you feel better about being a flunk-out and a failure. Besides — the ring fit your finger precisely.

In the days that followed you considered calling St. Bonaventure to try to trace the ring's owner, but the draft board was breathing down your neck and, thus preoccupied, you postponed the call.

Gradually your conscience took a back seat to your covetousness until you went into the Marine Corps and off to boot camp and on to Vietnam — still wearing that ring.

Life expectancy for a Marine in 'Nam was 60 days. But with that ring constantly reminding you of all you were not, you vowed that "if" you should come home alive, you would no longer waste your life. You'd stop feeling sorry for yourself. You would call a halt to the partying and goofing off and go back to school, and this time you would graduate and make something of yourself.

With that vow on your lips you kissed that ring and shipped out overseas.

Not a day went by in Southeast Asia that you failed to fondle that ring. Especially after it suffered that nick in the stone that you don't want to talk about or even think about anymore.

Gradually you dismissed any guilt relating to the fact that it rightly belonged to someone else. It was your ring now. It was your symbol of your resolve.

When midway in your tour you got that "Dear John" letter from the girl back home, you still had — the ring.

You weathered the storm. You came home from 'Nam in 1969.

You did return to school with that ring each hour of each day reminding you of your goal.

The ring went with you to Woodstock in '69 and through the riots and tear-gassing of students in '70, but you did graduate.

And now you have another graduation ring, one that is all yours.

This year, 1993, your BA and MBA degrees have propelled you up the corporate ladder to a six-digit income and you decided it's time to contact St. Bonaventure and trace the name inside that ring and return it to somebody named J.J. Arcara.

For you — it had served its purpose.

The ring has been returned to Joe Arcara.

From your unsigned letter I have no way to know who you are but I do know him.

He's a St. Bonaventure graduate, class of '66, now a stockbroker in Buffalo.

Paul Harvey is an honorary alumnus of St. Bonaventure, Patron Saint of Scholars, class of '53. I know personally something of the inspiration that derives from identification with that historic campus in the shadow of Seven Story Mountain.

I have no way to know if it was from here that you graduated, but your conspicuous allegiance to your God, your country and your demonstrated self-discipline have honored the traditions of the school, and Joe Arcara and St. Bonaventure and I would like you to wear our ring the rest of the way, if you want to.

Soccer field shelling by Serbians kills 11 in Sarajevo suburb

The Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — At least 11 people were killed and 40 wounded today when two shells slammed into a crowd watching a soccer match in a Sarajevo suburb, hospital officials said.

The attack appeared to be one of the worst on civilians in the besieged Bosnian capital since the so-called "bread-line massacre" one year ago, when 16 people were killed in the center of Sarajevo while waiting in line for bread.

Sarajevo has been under relentless assault by Serbian rebel forces for nearly 14 months.

The war has left more than 138,000 people dead or missing since Bosnia-Herzegovina seceded from Yugoslavia in February 1992. Rebel Serbs have taken control of 70 percent of Bosnia, Croats about 20 percent and the Muslim-controlled government rules the remainder.

About 60 people were watching the soccer match in the government-held suburb of Dobrinja next to the Sarajevo airport when the shells struck today at 11 a.m.

An Associated Press photographer who visited Dobrinja hospital said a hospital official told him at least 11 people were killed, including four children. At least 40 were injured, the photographer was told.

"God knows how many wounded there were, I just fell, but I saw my friend Sherbo dead," said Adnan Suljagic, 19, who had been playing soccer when the attack happened and suffered a leg wound.

The attack came as a relentless assault by Bosnian Serbs continued on one town and officials described as "appalling" deprivation one of the government's last few pockets it holds in eastern Bosnia.

While government soldiers were digging in to consolidate a surprising gain south of Sarajevo, the news for the Muslim-led government from eastern Bosnia was bad.

—U.N. officials said food supplies, crowding and sanitation in one U.N.-declared safe area, Srebrenica, were so bad that some refugees were risking a 50-mile walk across Serb-controlled territory to the government town of Tuzla.

—U.N. officials said monitors were unable to reach a second enclave, Gorazde, attacked by Bosnian Serbs on Friday. Heavy casualties were reported in the fighting.

—Serb-dominated Yugoslav President Dobrica Cosic was ousted early today in Belgrade by ultranationalists in parliament who perceived him as too moderate.

Cosic's ouster makes clear that hard-line Serbs are becoming increasingly powerful in Serbia, and will support their brethren in Bosnia in continuing the war.

A top Bosnian army commander blamed the international community's indecisiveness for the attack on Gorazde.

"The Serbian units are encouraged by the passivity of the world," said Mustafa Hajrulabovic, commander of the army's First Corps. "These events are a direct result of the decision on 'safe zones.'"

The world community has been unable to force Bosnia Serbs through diplomacy to give up large swaths of territory they have captured and is unwilling to use military force. The United States, Britain, France, Spain and Russia instead settled on a plan to protect civilians in government-controlled safe areas.

The Bosnian government and many outside critics have charged that the plan amounts to ratifying Bosnian Serb military gains and establishing reservations for the Muslims.

Hajrulabovic said U.N. agreements struck with the Serbs to disarm two of the safe areas in eastern Bosnia, Srebrenica and Zepa, have resulted in government soldiers being disarmed.

That allowed Serbs to concentrate their firepower on Gorazde, he said.

"Now the enemy has soldiers free to move from the Srebrenica and Zepa front lines and to concentrate them around Gorazde," he said. "If they had disarmed both sides, this never would have happened. This mistake will be paid for with a lot of civilian lives."

Sarajevo radio reported that thousands of artillery and mortar rounds landed Monday in Gorazde, home to 70,000 residents and refugees, killing at least 30 civilians and wounding dozens more. The reports said that Serbs backed by armored vehicles had breached defense lines around the town.

Remember, take time and vote

Today's the day and it is time to exercise your constitutional right to vote. It doesn't take that long to go to the polls and mark the ballot. The decision, though, may take a little longer.

It all falls under the same rights

Another Memorial Day has come and gone.

Most of us, I'm sure, spent at least some time Monday paying our respects in some way to those who have given their lives in defense of our country.

It was, after all, not your average day. If for some reason, any of us had only been taught the Memorial Day weekend marked the annual arrival of the Indy 500, there were any number of television stations that spent the entire day running one war movie after another.

Granted, there were some rather strange offerings. Let's see, if memory serves correctly, a portion of the USA Channel offering was a double feature of Arnold Swartzenwhatever in "Conan the Barbarian" and "Conan the Destroyer," the latter of which also featured Wilt Chamberlin and Grace Slick.

And while "Kelly's Heroes" has always been one of my favorites, it didn't seem to be the sort of fare warranted on Memorial Day. WTBS' presentation of "Midway" seemed more in keeping with the occasion, as did "Objective Burma" and "They Were Expendable" which were part of the all-day Operation TNT offering on that cable network.

"Patton," of course, had run the day before, and I was only mildly surprised some of John Wayne's more famous films went wanting, as did "The Big Red One," "The Longest Day," and "Platoon."

Perhaps expecting to see "Platoon" was a bit much, since the powers that be seem much more interested in reminding us of World War II on Memorial Day than any of our nation's other wars.

I guess it had something to do with playing up our last grand victory rather than openly pondering what many consider our worst mistake.

And I am still somewhat troubled at this writing by the scenes afforded from President Clinton's appearance at the Wall (the Vietnam Veterans Memorial) yesterday.

Our president was met with cat calls, boos and placards labeling him a draft dodger and worse.

Although not entirely unexpected, it does, to me, seem unfortunate. Those who would label Clinton as

John A. Moseley

"Slick Willie" and criticize his opposition to the Vietnam War, to my mind at least, do our president an injustice.

They apparently forget that Clinton's opposition to the war and active participation in anti-war protests was nothing more than exercising the same constitutional rights to free speech and assembly that they, themselves, took advantage of yesterday.

And as far as the "Slick Willie" label is concerned, it's still a matter that infuriates me.

Before writing any more, be it known that I consider my love for this country no less than any man's. From my earliest memory, my parents instilled a patriotic fervor in me, and it is something of which I am very proud.

That said, however, I will also point out that I also opposed the war in Vietnam... perhaps not initially, but long before it came time for me to register for the draft, it was clear that our involvement in that war was a travesty.

And, yes, had I been presented with the choices our president faced at the time, I'd have done virtually anything short of renouncing my citizenship to keep from being drafted.

We were, without question, supporting an unjust government and only partially waging war on a people our military experts had warned us against fighting even before the French Foreign Legion was defeated at Dien Bien Phu.

It was a political war, waged under the directives of Robert McNamara and Lyndon Johnson, not the best military minds this nation had to offer.

Vietnam was, if nothing else, a lesson. A painful one, to be sure, and one we can only hope we never make again.

Then again, Sadaam still wields power in Baghdad, doesn't he?

Future of 'Cheers' not a pretty one

While visiting Boston, I took a stroll around town and found myself in front of a bar that looked familiar.

I went in and saw that it was the famous saloon called "Cheers."

But something had changed. It was almost empty and the bartender was a bald, stout fellow with broken red veins on his nose.

Taking a seat, I asked where Sam Malone, the legendary owner, was.

He peered at me through bloodshot eyes and mumbled: "I'm Sam Malone."

I looked closely at him and, by golly, he was right. Pudgy, bald and dissipated, yes, but it was Sam Malone.

Trying to be tactful, I said that it must be the lighting, but he looked different.

He shrugged and said: "No, it isn't the light. As you can see, the hair-piece is gone."

Ah, you decided to go (ital) au naturel (end ital), huh?

"No. As a matter of fact, I was having my way with a young lady, as my manly nature used to require. And she ran her hands through my hair. The damn thing came off and scared her half to death. She thought it was a rodent and flung it out the window before she dashed out the door. So I haven't gotten around to buying a replacement. Probably won't. Time to act my age."

He paused to pour himself a double 86-proof Genuine Skullpopper and downed it in one gulp.

I voiced my surprise, since he had been off the stuff for years.

Mike Royko

"Yeah, I fell off the wagon. But being here alone so much of the time, I find that a few nips help me cope with the solitude."

I notice that business seems to be off. Where's the old "Cheers" gang? Isn't Woody the bartender around?

He shook his head. "As you probably remember, Woody somehow was elected a city councilman. Got in on a few kinky deals and the feds nailed him for misfeasance, malfeasance, nonfeasance, and mopey with intent to gawk. The last I heard, he was with Alan Dershowitz filing an appeal."

And he used to be such a nice kid. What about Cliff, the postman?

"Doesn't come around. Hangs out in a gay bar. Didn't you ever wonder why he never had a date and still lived with his mom?"

I suppose it crossed my mind. And his fat, beer-drinking buddy Norm?

"Fat? He's down to 120 pounds. All that beer and weight got to him and he had a triple bypass. The doc made him quit drinking, put him on a veggie diet, he power walks five miles a day, and his wife watches him like a hawk. He came in here one day, had a Perrier, and started nagging me about my drinking and how fiber would cleanse my inner organs, so I tried to punch him and he power-walked out of here real fast and hasn't been back since."

Clean living will do it every time. And Carla? What time does her shift begin?

"Gone. She had two more kids, which made 10, and figured out she could earn more on welfare. Last I saw of her, she was on TV, lying down in front of an abortion clinic."

Always was feisty. How about Rebecca? Is she still married to that sewer worker?

"After one week of marriage, he went down in a sewer and didn't come out."

The poor guy drowned? "No, he's still down there. He sends up notes saying there are worse things than living in a sewer."

There is some truth to that. And Frasier the shrink?

"You can find him at a maximum security institution for the criminally insane."

When did he go to work there? "He's not working. He's an inmate. They locked him up when he started to nibble a female patient's ear."

Sexual harassment? "No, he thought he was Hannibal Lecter. They subdued him before he got the other ear."

Gosh, that must have been a shock to his wife.

"Nobody knows. She hasn't been seen. The police went to their house but all they found were some leftover fava beans and some empty Chianti bottles."

That is sad. So the old gang is gone.

"People change," said Sam, pouring himself another double.

Not to pry, but do you ever hear from Diane?

At the mention of her name, a tear trickled down his cheek, and he said: "She calls once in a while. Just for old time's sake. To make me feel inferior. I should have married her so I could have cheated on her and made her feel inferior. We were really made for each other."

Then she's still in California?

He shook his head. "She went for a while, and she wrote a big smash hit TV sitcom and made a lot of money. Then she formed her own production company and made even more money. But now she spends most of her time in Washington."

What is she doing there? "She's in and out of the White House. Part of the Hollywood political crowd. Kind of an unofficial adviser to the president."

On the arts and culture, I would imagine.

"As a matter of fact, no. She's advising him on Bosnia."

Now that you mention it, I can see the influence. Well, Sam, it was good seeing you. Lots of luck.

As I was going out the door, he said, "Drop in again sometime." And poured another Skullpopper.

Maybe. But I think I'd rather catch you on the reruns.

"Me, too," he said. "Me, too."

AN INVARIABLE RECORD THE 'STAR WARS' SYSTEM, IN ITS 10-YEAR CAREER, OBLITERATED MORE THAN 32 BILLION TARGETS WITH UNCANNY PRECISION...

President needs to get out of Washington

President Clinton seems tense and beleaguered these days. All around him, he faces critics who are pummeling him on issues ranging from the global to the petty. He may have had the shortest political honeymoon in recent American history.

Apparently he and his closest advisers agree on one thing: If it weren't for the political power structure in Washington — the so-called permanent government, the men and women who remain in Washington decade after decade, who set the political agenda that all presidents must deal with — Clinton would probably be doing much better. You may or may not agree with that, but the Clinton people do.

As Paul Begalia, one of Clinton's closest advisers, put it recently: "The worst day in America is better than the best day in Washington."

Well... Clinton could easily have avoided this.

I don't think we can be accused of second-guessing here, because we said it before the election. Not only this election, but the one before that, and the one before that, and, if memory serves, the one before that. This suggestion has been ignored by virtually every presidential candidate in recent years, because they all most likely think it is stupid.

But once you get past how stupid it initially sounds, it begins to make perfect sense.

The idea is this: A presidential candidate ought to campaign on the promise that, if elected, he or she will not live in Washington.

Just about every presidential candidate runs against the idea of Washington, anyway — even incumbent presidents have been known to denounce the Washington power elite, which is a little odd considering that a president is the most elite of the elite in Washington. But politicians correctly sense that the concept of Washington is something most American voters don't like. Thus, the candidates say they don't like Washington, either, although they probably love it.

So if a candidate was to pledge to the voters that, if they made him president, he would refuse to move into the White House and instead find a nice house somewhere out in the nation itself, that pledge alone might be enough to assure victory.

There is nothing at all in the constitution that mandates the president live in Washington. The White House is available to the first family, and the presidential staff works there — but that's merely by custom, not by law.

It's funny — with all the gimmicks that candidates have used to make the point that they don't like Washington, no major presidential candidate has ever simply declared that Washington isn't the best place for him, and thus he will not live there.

Is such a plan workable? Without question. The days of the president and the Congress and the Cabinet having to be within motorcar distance of each other are long gone. With video and computer technology, with cellular phones and faxes, distance doesn't mean a thing. There's no overriding reason for the president to live in Washington, other than that's the way it's always been done.

So where should the president live? Up to him or her. In Clinton's case, Little Rock would have been the wrong answer — a president shouldn't live in a place he or she has lived and worked before. The idea — for both real and symbolic reasons — is to find a nice town, buy a nice house and get to know the people. Read the local paper, walk the local streets, talk to men and women who have nothing to do with the nation's capital.

The town I have long suggested for a president to live in is Tulsa, Okla. No particular reason — it's just a nice town in the middle of the country, the kind of town most presidents pass in and out of on campaign stops without taking away much of a memory of anything. It wouldn't have to be Tulsa — a presidential candidate would do well to select the town he has liked best during his campaign, a town that has felt friendly and genuine and decent, and then lay down roots there.

The president could have part of his staff there and part of his staff back in D.C. The professional politicians would howl at first — when the president moved out of Washington, it would take away much of the haughtiness that so many other political men and women get from living there — and it would be delicious to see everyone in Washington suddenly finding themselves out of the so-called loop.

It's too late for Clinton — he should have done this while there was still time, because now it would be seen only as a desperate and weird trick. But in 1996 — or 2000, or 2004 — some candidate would be well advised to try this. But no one will.

Today is Tuesday, June 1, the 152nd day of 1993. There are 213 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On June 1, 1813, the U.S. Navy gained its motto as the mortally wounded commander of the U.S. frigate Chesapeake, Capt. James Lawrence, was heard to say, "Don't give up the ship!" during a losing battle with a British frigate.

On this date: In 1792, Kentucky became the 15th state of the union.

In 1796, Tennessee became the 16th state.

In 1801, Mormon leader Brigham Young was born in Whitingham, Vt.

In 1868, James Buchanan, the 15th president of the United States, died near Lancaster, Pa.

In 1888, California got its first seismographs as three of the devices were installed at the Lick Observatory.

In 1926, Marilyn Monroe was born in Los Angeles.

In 1943, 50 years ago, a civilian flight from Lisbon to London was shot down by the Germans during World War II, killing all those aboard, including actor Leslie Howard.

In 1958, Charles de Gaulle became premier of France.

In 1967, the Beatles released their album, "Sergeant Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band."

In 1968, 25 years ago, Helen Keller, who received a college degree and became an author and lecturer despite being blind and deaf most of her life, died in Westport, Conn.

In 1977, the Soviet Union formally charged Jewish human rights activist Anatoly Shcharansky with treason. (Shcharansky was convicted, imprisoned, then finally released to the West in 1986.)

In 1979, the nation of Zimbabwe Rhodesia came into existence.

In 1980, Cable News Network, providing round-the-clock TV news-casts, made its debut.

Ten years ago: Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, in a speech to the Knesset, gave assurances his country would not attack Syrian forces in Lebanon.

Five years ago: President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev concluded their Moscow summit by exchanging the documents of ratification of the intermediate-range nuclear arms treaty they'd signed the previous December.

One year ago: The U.S. Treasury Department, responding to U.N. sanctions imposed on Yugoslavia, froze an estimated $200 million in assets of the Serb-led Yugoslav government. The Pittsburgh Penguins completed a four-game sweep of the Chicago Blackhawks to win hockey's Stanley Cup for the second straight year.

Today's Birthdays: Actor Andy Griffith is 67. Singer Pat Boone is 59. Actor Rene Auberjonois is 53. Opera singer Frederica von Stade is 48. Rock guitarist Ron Wood is 46.

Hearing scheduled on school finance

The Associated Press

AUSTIN — Legislative leaders say they hold great hope that their latest school funding plan will have better luck passing court muster than previous efforts.

"I am convinced that this is by far the most equalizing system that the state has even considered, much less passed," said Senate Education Committee Chairman Bill Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant.

State lawyers were scheduled to present the brand-new law today to State District Judge F. Scott McCown, who presides over the long-running case in which the Texas Supreme Court has three times ruled against school funding laws.

The Supreme Court after its last ruling, in 1992, set today as the deadline for lawmakers to come up with a plan to even out funding available to school districts with differing property wealth.

Missing it would have meant a court-ordered cutoff of state education aid. Leaders warned that would have started the process of school closings as funds ran out, because school districts rely on state money and local property tax revenue.

Attorneys for school districts who have successfully sued over previous finance laws also were to attend today's hearing.

A lawyer for about 60 property-poor school districts said Monday although a final decision hadn't been made, there were concerns about the plan's equity. "My guess is that we will be filing some degree of challenge," said lawyer Rick Gray.

"Given our past experience, we're always afraid" of what state courts ultimately will rule, Gov. Ann Richards said Monday after signing into law the bill to give property-rich school districts options for sharing some wealth with poorer ones. "We pray that this fourth try will produce the charm."

The plan was designed in the last month, after voters on May 1 soundly rejected a share-the-wealth proposal that would have authorized the state to redistribute some local property tax money from richer to poorer school districts.

Asked if the new plan — which didn't require a statewide vote — is a better one, Richards said, "I think that this bill will have the support of the people, and therefore, it has to be better."

The Democratic governor praised the bipartisan effort that led to the new law, which is meant to ensure that none of Texas' 1,048 school districts has more than $280,000 in property wealth per weighted student. Students with special needs are counted as more than one pupil in the weighted system, to make up for the extra cost of educating them.

The 109 districts that exceed the maximum level can choose among several options for giving away some wealth: Merging tax bases with one or more poorer districts; sending money to the state; contracting to educate students in other districts; consolidating voluntarily with one or more districts; or moving some property to another district's tax rolls.

If school districts don't choose an option under the plan, the state education commissioner will order commercial taxable property to be moved. If that's not enough, there will be forced consolidation.

The bill anticipates a $1.1 billion state spending increase for public education over the next two-year budget period, but leaders have said that's still not enough to continue current per-pupil spending with growing enrollment.

Session

Rep. Tom Craddick, head of the House Republican Caucus, praised Laney for allowing both parties to bring their issues to the floor.

"I think the speaker was really fair. I think everybody got an equal opportunity to get their bills out of committee and get them passed," said Craddick, R-Midland. "For the first time, we didn't have a lot of griping because (lawmakers) felt like they weren't getting a fair shake."

"There were a lot of important things, things that we haven't been able to do for years, that we were able to get done."

Not all involved in the legislative process were complimentary of the session.

"It's been a disaster for consumers," said Tom Smith of the group Public Citizen. "In bill after bill, issue after issue, critical consumer protections have been gutted."

Smith cited such bills as the sunset legislation for the Public Utility Commission and the Department of Insurance as having been stripped of consumer protections.

"We hope the governor has a very big pen because we're going to be asking her to veto a lot of bad legislation," he said.

John Hildreth, of Consumers Union, said extensive reforms made during the 1991 session in insurance, utilities and health care were "outmuscled this year by lobbyists who were able to write a great deal of very important legislation related to pocketbook issues."

"You are going to pay more for health care, more for insurance and more for utilities, and that hits a consumer's pocket just as much as if the Legislature passes a tax increase," Hildreth said.

Ken Kramer, state director for the Sierra Club, which has been critical of environmental legislation, summed up his opinions of the session in a statement released Monday.

"The 73rd Texas Legislature has finally done something good for the environment. They quit and went home."

Sen. Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin, also spoke harshly of some of the bills that popped up this session.

"I can only hope that bad and evil legislation did not make it through. But I wouldn't be surprised," he said.

"Considering what we had to face with a number of important issues, including school finance, the criminal justice overhaul, and a $5 billion shortfall, the state will survive. Keep your fingers crossed."

Doctors search for mystery illness cause

The Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE — A virus seems the most likely explanation for a mystery illness that has killed 11 people in New Mexico and Arizona, say doctors and public health officials who met over the Memorial Day weekend.

But a military doctor in Washington, D.C., and another physician in neighboring Bethesda, Md., say they suspect bacteria in the illness called "unexplained adult respiratory distress syndrome."

Both sets of researchers say the illness doesn't appear to be passed along readily from person to person.

A military physician in Washington, D.C., told the Albuquerque Journal late Monday he suspects it may be caused by bacteria linked to mysterious respiratory failures and deaths in Ottawa, Canada, in 1986-87, to military deaths around the world and to other cases since 1989.

"They (victims) have flu-like symptoms and very quickly go downhill," the newspaper today quoted Dr. Shyh-Ching Lo as saying. Lo is a molecular biologist and mycoplasma expert at the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology.

Lo noted the similarity of mycoplasma fermentans bacteria to viruses

Dr. Gary Simpson of the New Mexico team said mycoplasma fermentans was "way down the list" of medical phenomena the team was studying but said victim tissue samples would be sent to Lo for study.

Another doctor familiar with Lo's work said when he heard about the illness he also thought first of mycoplasma fermentans.

"I said, 'My God, those are the same symptoms Shyh saw,'" said Dr. Joseph Tully, chief of the mycoplasma section at the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases in Bethesda, Md.

The Associated Press left a message in Washington seeking elaboration from Lo on the microbe-caused deaths.

The New Mexico team includes nearly three dozen lab specialists, epidemiologists and others.

Their clues have so far been the symptoms of the illness itself — a fever and muscle aches, plus one or more ancillary signs: a cough, red eyes or a headache.

The weapons are antibiotics, ventilators, tissue and other lab specimens and interviews with victims or their families.

The illness, first investigated in mid-May, has stricken 18 people, mostly in the Four Corners area of New Mexico and Arizona. It has killed 11 within hours or at most a few days of their becoming ill.

"Whatever it is, it isn't subtle," said Dr. Gary Simpson, medical director of infectious diseases for the state Department of Health in Santa Fe.

The team reviewing the illness has refined the diagnosis, reducing the number of cases from 25 to 18 — 14 in New Mexico and four in Arizona.

Annie Olson, spokeswoman for University Hospital in Albuquerque, said a possible 19th case was brought in late Monday from northwestern New Mexico and placed in a special unit for possible victims of the illness. The woman was listed in satisfactory condition, Olson said.

"We now have four in that unit — two critical and two satisfactory," she said.

Five others are possibly linked, and four are "questionably related" but don't meet the entire definition, said Dr. Ron Voorhees, deputy state epidemiologist.

Doctors also announced an 11th death. The patient died in Arizona in mid-May but only now is being included.

Cases include 12 Indians, five Anglos and one Hispanic. Eight Indians, two Anglos and the Hispanic died.

The first case was March 8, although doctors didn't pick up on the illness until two people from a New Mexico family died in mid-May.

The illness isn't believed to be highly infectious, since no health workers who treated patients and no relatives — outside the one family — caught it, Voorhees said.

Although the investigation pinpointed no cause, Voorhees and Simpson said researchers believe it's possibly a viral infection.

"We've excluded the usual bacterial, fungal and parasitic infections. It's not anthrax, it's not the plague, it's not Legionnaires," and it's not related to the virus that causes AIDS, Voorhees said.

"Since we don't know the agent, we don't know the incubation period, we can't rule anything out," Voorhees said.

Other clusters of unexplained illnesses in young adults have occurred in the past, but this outbreak does not match any of them, Simpson said.

"It's particularly anguishing to have young people healthy and active and die in a short period of time and not know why," he said.

The youngest and most recent person to die was a 13-year-old girl who collapsed at a party Friday night and died the next day.

Dr. Toby Merlin of Lovelace Medical Center in Albuquerque said some past viruses have seemed to target young people.

cost per visitor by increasing the number of visitors," Alton said. The park's high net cost per visitor was one reason it made the closure list last July, he said.

"So many residents enjoy walking and picnicking on Scenic Mountain and ideas like Warren's will help keep us on the map," Alton said.

The center is in its 44th year of operation with J. Wray continuing his father's practice. Warren said, "As part of the community for 44 years, we like to support it in whatever way we can."

"I encourage other business to do also purchase passports for their employees," he said. "It helps make a healthy, happy and productive employee."

Office manager Lana East said many of the employees take advantage of the passports by walking the mountain two or three times a week. "We were walking the mountain before Dr. Warren purchased the passports, but we are very appreciative to Dr. Warren," she said.

The passports are $25. For more information, contact Alton or his staff at 263-4931.

Growing things

Students plant trees to improve the earth

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

Bauer Magnet students didn't just talk about saving the environment this school year, they did some things to help make the earth a healthier place to live.

Right now, freshly planted bushes are soaking up sun in front of Bauer and can be seen by kids who may visit the playground this summer.

Students planted the bushes, using special soil. They learned important lessons about how the earth needs to stay healthy for plants to live, because plants help make oxygen for people.

"Before you start collecting cans, you have to know why you are collecting them," said 10-year-old Ian Wilson. "We take them to the recycling center, so they can be used again."

More than 22,000 cans can be used again because Bauer students collected them.

Using recycling bins, containers where a person can drop off cans, and the "Recycling Patrol," students collected, crushed and carried (with trucks, of course) about 785 pounds of aluminum cans to the center.

The class received money for the cans. With $150 profit, they bought special soil and brush, so it could be planted in front of the school.

"(The plants) clear out the air," said 11-year-old Jordan Partee. "It's kind of like giving back to the earth."

The students learned about the earth in fun ways, using skits, school game shows, singing and class lessons.

They were even visited by "Captain Recycle."

11-year-old Monica Gonzalez said recycling and planting not only taught the students about the environment, but gave them "a feeling of accomplishment."

"We can go on to another school and come back to see them," the fifth-grader said.

11-year-old Ashley Rains said more kids, teachers and parents are starting to recycle more to keep from "poisoning" the earth.

"I talk to my parents about it," she said. "More and more people are recycling at home all the time."

Michelle Stokes, who is 11, said, "It keeps from having so many landfills."

People worry that there are too many landfills that are becoming full too fast, leaving us no place to put our trash.

The kids are happy they made a difference in saving the earth.

Ashley said, "The kids that come here in the future, they'll see what the class of 2000 did to help the environment and how great we are."

Teen loves volunteering

By LAURA MALT
Thomson News Service

ALTOONA, Pa. — A small girl with her arm in a sling whimpered in Mercy Hospital's emergency room.

Medical workers tried to reassure her as they slid her arm out of her shirt. Off to one side, so quiet that one might have overlooked her, volunteer Amy Robertson, 16, made up a bed for the youngster.

Amy has been making beds, running errands and comforting patients at Mercy's emergency room for three years. The difference this year is she's getting high school credit for her efforts.

"I really like it — the satisfaction that you can help somebody," she said.

Amy is one of 20 students from Hollidaysburg Area High School south of Altoona piloting the new Learning Through Service class. The other students' volunteer jobs include swimming teacher, Special Olympics aide, firefighter, emergency medical worker, nursing home volunteer and worker for a local county AIDS Intervention Project.

"This (Learning Through Service class) is something I've believed in for a long time," said Principal Gary Robinson. He and guidance counselor Teresa Crawford are spearheading the program.

"There isn't any kind of textbook that's going to teach these kids what they're going to learn on these sites," Robinson said.

Amy and two other students noted for their community service helped shape the class's direction before funding was sought.

Once the program secured a three-year $22,500 state grant, $1,000 from a private trust and a three-year $4,500 contribution from a local service club, it kicked off in January.

In the class, students get several hours' training before they start their new work. While on-site, they keep logs of their hours and experiences, and at the end of the semester, they are supposed to give a report on what they did and how it helped them and the community.

Students trying volunteer work for the first time may have mixed feelings about their jobs, Amy said. "They learn it can be frustrating, but it's really rewarding in the end. Sometimes just talking to someone helps, let's them know someone cares."

As for her friends who don't do any volunteer work, "They wonder why you would do all the work and not get paid for it. It's just something I like to do."

Amanda Hirt, 6, reads a book at the Howard County Library recently. If reading's your thing, the library has a bunch of fun planned this summer.

Love to read?

Library has fun activities for youth

Howard County Library has plans for kids this summer. The Read-To-Me Club and Summer Reading Program are set to go.

Both programs take place June 1-July 10, so it pretty well covers the first part of your summer vacation.

Read-to-Me club members are kids in first grade or younger (maybe your brother or sister). They should read 10 books by themselves or with an adult's help.

Certificates will be awarded July 14. Sign up now at the library.

For older kids, the summer reading program has a travel and adventure theme this year. It is for those who have finished first grade or older.

Members of the club read as many books as they can, and the library helps them keep track of how many.

Activity day will be Thursday from 10-11 a.m. with speakers, arts and crafts and movies. You can learn about Germany, see a puppet show and find out about a real llama. A clown just might make an appearance, too.

Shrink yourself with Harley

By The Associated Press

Harley's in trouble.

He's a slick teen-age scientist who's outsmarted himself. During an experiment in miniaturization — he was trying to shrink a rat — he managed to reduce himself to about the size of a hefty bug while blowing up the machine he must have to get back to normal size.

Now what?

Well, in Harley's Humongous Adventure ($59.95 for SNES from Hi Tech Expressions), he has to make his way past hordes of mutant insects and fish, menacing toys and common household items to collect the parts, reassemble the machine and get on with his life.

And that's not all. He also has to deal with one angry rat, who wants revenge for being Harley's designated shrinkee.

Hi Tech, which also is responsible for the highly entertaining Tom & Jerry, is on a roll. This is one great game.

Stereo sound. One-or-two player capability. Great graphics. Excellent control.

And it's a lot of fun. In fact, the only drawback is a lack of continues. You get three lives and one continue, then it's back to the beginning. You can get extra lives with one-ups and by collecting 99 nuts (as in nuts and bolts) that are scattered throughout the game and appear when you kill bugs.

This could get frustrating for little kids, but tell them to keep at it. The game is definitely worth it.

Harley must make it safely through his house while on his quest for parts. The game starts in the lab, where you have 45 seconds to collect weapons and other material.

Then it's on to the kitchen, where floating plates provide an avenue across dangerous areas, bugs are legion and the tops of tin cans chase you up and down shelves.

Then you ride a toy tank through the playroom, visit a closet crowded with boxes, tour the drainpipes in the bathroom, visit the library and stop off in Harley's room. You also tour the attic and the roof before returning to the lab for the climactic battle with Mr. Rat.

Of course, Harley doesn't go into this conflict unarmed. Along the way, he collects weapons, which he throws at enemy creatures. Nails are the most common, but he also will have thumbtacks, rubber bands, marbles and even firecrackers.

He also has some helpful equipment, including a parachute, a jet pack and bug spray.

Pigs scream

By The Associated Press

I scream, you scream, we all scream for ice cream!

And now it seems that pigs do, too. At least the ones living in Waterbury, Vt. That's where ice cream maker Ben & Jerry's has a factory. It's also where 550 pigs snarf up the flavor of the day.

The ice cream company founded an Earth-friendly way to get rid of the plant's waste. It serves the pigs "ice cream slop" — the same goop that used to go down the sewers.

Each porker "pigs out" on two gallons of ice cream slop a day. And they love it, according to Ben & Jerry's, especially Chocolate-Chip Cookie Dough.

But no pig licks its chops if Mint Chocolate Chunk is dished out. Why? Ben & Jerry's says: "We think it's the mint." Oink!

Praying for food

Is a praying mantis praying for a good meal to walk by?

Actually, the insect folds its front legs together when it's resting. Interlocking spines zip its front legs together in a "praying" position.

But maybe the praying mantis should be called a "preying" mantis. It's a fierce killer. Its front legs swiftly grab and stab its dinner.

Especially for kids and their families

Fun Family To-Dos

FAMILY LEARNING IS COOL AND FUN!

Here are some activities to do with your family this summer. Keeping sharp is fun when families make learning a part of their everyday lives! Practicing will help you keep the skills you learned during the school year.

Do read, write and discuss!
Do keep a family journal

Here is your 1993 summer calendar. Paste it on the front of a notebook.

JUNE							JULY							AUGUST
S	M	T	W	T	F	S	S	M	T	W	T	F	S	S	M	T	W	T	F	S
1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	12	13	14	15	16	17	18	19	20	21	22	23	24	25	26	27	28	29	30	31

Each day, put the date at the top of the page.

Each night, hold a family meeting. Ask family members to take turns writing the most interesting thing they:

- did
 - saw
 - learned
- (Younger kids can dictate their interesting things.)

Scan through your newspaper. After a family discussion, cut out and paste in the most interesting headline.

Do a family newspaper

Include news of the family and neighborhood, jokes and puzzles.

Do family interviews

Interview your grandparents and parents about what being a kid was like when they were growing up. Write down or tape their answers.

Do family letters

Each family member adds his or her part to a letter to a friend, a relative or a business.

Do make lists of grocery shopping needs. Check your newspaper to see if what you need is advertised.

of worthwhile TV shows. Check your paper for times.

Do set aside a family reading time

Visit your library often.

Set aside a reading time for the entire family. Use books, magazines or newspapers.

Talk about what you read and how you will use it in your everyday life.

Ask a family member to read a short book or story from the newspaper. Tape-record it and play it again later.

Rookie Cookie's Recipe

Chock-Full-of-Chips Brownies

You'll need:

- 1/3 cup butter or margarine, melted
- 2 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted
- 1 cup sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon vanilla
- 2 eggs, beaten
- 3/4 cup all-purpose flour
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 cup peanut butter chips

What to do:

1. In a large bowl, combine butter or margarine, chocolate, sugar and vanilla. Mix well.
2. Stir in eggs. Mix well.
3. Stir in flour, salt and peanut butter chips. Mix well.
4. Spread mixture evenly in a greased, 8-by-8-inch baking dish.
5. Bake in a preheated, 350-degree oven for 25-30 minutes. Makes about 16.

Fun Family To-Dos

Do keep family reading records!

Newspaper records:

Each family member puts a check when he or she has read the paper for at least 20 minutes that day.

Book records:

Draw a line in a box each time you read a book of that type. Use a different color mark for each member of the family.

Give awards for who reads the most!

June	1	2	3	4	5	6	7
Mom	✓	✓
Dad	✓
Bill	✓	✓
Liz	✓	✓

Do know where you go!

Do keep a scrapbook of places you visit. Share it with your class next year.

Do write for information, and also read books on places you are planning to visit.

Do plant a family garden. Keep records in your journal. Measure the growth. Find out about soil and growing conditions.

Do study the weather page of your paper. Keep a record of daily highs and lows.

Do count your parents' change each night. Keep a record.

Do learn your number facts. Have fun with flash cards.

Do get exercise!

Keep in shape and remember your safety rules. Every family member has on a helmet. Good for them!

Do play along the way! Have fun on trips! Play Scout: Study the map and take turns being the navigator.

Do play Alice from Arkansas: The first player says: "My name is Alice. I am from Arkansas, and I like arithmetic." The next player says: "My name is Barbara, I am from Brazil, and I like baseball." And so on from A to Z. To make it harder, each player can try to repeat what the other players said before taking his or her turn.

Do play Spot the Plates: The first person to spot a license plate from out of state writes it down and gets a point.

Do play Rhyme Time: Make up rhymes based on signs you see.

The Mini Page Teacher's Guide

For use by teachers and parents at home and at school.
For use with issue: Fun Family To-Dos

Main idea: This issue is about things families can do together. The following is a list of activities to be used with this issue. They are listed in order of difficulty, with the easier pre-reader assignments listed first. Ask the children to do the following:

1. Find the following pictures in your newspaper: a politician, a sporting event, a happy person, an animal, a vehicle, an outdoor scene.
2. Make up your own captions for the pictures on the front page.
3. Create a cartoon you would like to see published in the newspaper.
4. Look in the weather section for the following: the forecast for tomorrow, the hottest place in the country, the coolest place in the country, a place with rain.
5. Look in the sports section for the following: the baseball team with the best and worst record, the baseball score with the highest number of runs scored, the baseball player with the best batting average.
6. Pretend you are making dinner for your family. Look in the food ads for things you would like to serve at the meal. Figure out how much you would need to spend.
7. Write a pretend letter to the editor about something that concerns you.

Jordan's 54 evens series with Knicks

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan took matters into his own hands and shifted the growing pressure in this dynamic Eastern Conference final onto the muscular shoulders of the New York Knicks.

Firing mostly from long range, Jordan scored 54 points to lead the two-time champion Chicago Bulls to a 105-95 victory Monday that evened the best-of-7 series at two games each.

Now the scene shifts to New York, where the Knicks are faced with a must-win situation in Wednesday's game — just as the Bulls were after losing the first two games at Madison Square Garden.

Knicks coach Pat Riley was asked if the pressure is now on his team. "Definitely," was his answer.

The crowd in Chicago Stadium was roaring with every shot as Jordan hit on 18-of-30 from the field — including six three-pointers — after going 3-for-18 Saturday in one of his poorest performances.

"He was in a zone," said Riley. "He had everything going for him."

"Michael Jordan had an outrageous day," Bulls coach Phil Jackson said. "He bailed us out with a number of shots. It was a dog fight but we came out on top."

Jordan continued his boycott of the media and did not speak after Game 4.

Despite Jordan's superb effort, the game was hanging in the balance with 2:09 remaining and the Knicks trailing 94-90.

Scottie Pippen made a basket while getting hammered by Anthony Mason and completed the three-point play for 97-90 lead. Another basket by Jordan sealed the decision. "That put us in a comfort zone," said Jackson. "A five-point or even a six-point lead is still the danger zone. Scottie was met, checked and out of rhythm but he made the big play."

Patrick Ewing, who scored 24 points to share team-high honors with John Starks, called Pippen's shot "Miraculous. Michael had a great game. But even though he scored 54 points, we were still in the game."

Ewing said the Knicks had come to Chicago looking for a sweep. "We were not overconfident but taking one game at a time. They're a good team but they can be beaten," he said.

It was the sixth time Jordan had scored 50 or more points in a playoff game. He holds the all-time playoff high of 63 against Boston in double overtime in 1986.

"Michael had a hot hand and a big game for us," said Pippen, who, like Jackson, doesn't like to see Jordan take over a game. "It's not that we don't want M.J. to get his points, but it makes it tough for others to get into the game and step it up when they have to."

Jackson made a concession to Jordan, who had 11 assists when he hit only three shots from the field Saturday.

Chicago's Michael Jordan shoots over a crowd of players during Monday's Game 4 of the NBA Eastern Conference finals against the New York Knicks in Chicago.

Ranger shutout ends 4-game losing streak

By The Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — The last time Charlie Leibrandt pitched in the Metrodome was in 1991, when Minnesota's Kirby Puckett hit a game-winning homer in the 11th inning of World Series 6.

Back then, Leibrandt was with the Atlanta Braves. On Monday, he returned with Texas and allowed six hits in 7 2-3 innings as the Rangers beat the Twins 1-0 and stopped a four-game losing streak.

"I'd like to see some of our other guys go to school on Charlie," Kennedy said. "We've given in to some hitters this year and Charlie doesn't do that. He makes them hit his pitches."

Leibrandt (6-2) struck out five against Minnesota and walked none. Texas manager Kevin Kennedy praised him, saying he wished his other pitchers would emulate the 36-year old left-hander.

"That may be the slowest I've ever seen a guy throw the baseball, but he made us look bad," Twins manager Tom Kelly said. "Leibrandt pitched a fabulous game. He's had some bad luck in this ballpark. You've got to tip your hat to the guy."

After Leibrandt left, Matt White-side got three outs, and Tom Henke finished the seven-hitter for his ninth save in 12 chances. Pinch-hitter Kent Hrbek and Larkin walked with two outs in the ninth before pinch-hitter Randy Bush popped out to short left field.

An RBI groundout by Gary Redus in the second drove in the only run off Kevin Tapani (2-6), who is 0-3 with a no-decision since May 12. Tapani allowed four hits in seven innings, struck out six and walked one as Minnesota's four-game winning streak ended.

Dean Palmer doubled to left opening the second, the first of his two doubles in the game. Geno Petralli walked, Doug Strange sacrificed and Palmer scored as Redus grounded to shortstop and Petralli got hung up in a rundown.

Notes: Rangers pitching coach Claude Osteen was hospitalized just before the game with internal bleeding. He was taken to Hennepin County Hospital for tests to determine the cause. Leibrandt is 5-0 in six road starts this season. He has worked into the sixth inning in all 11 of his starts. Jose Canseco was 0 for 4, extending his hitless string to 16 at-bats with eight strikeouts over the past five games. Chuck Knoblauch had three singles, including two infield hits.

Biggio's bat lifts Astros over Montreal, 2-1

By The Associated Press

HOUSTON — Craig Biggio doubled twice and scored the go-ahead run in the eighth inning on Steve Finley's sacrifice fly as the Houston Astros beat the Montreal Expos 2-1 Monday for their third victory in a row.

Reliever Doug Jones (2-4) worked two innings for the victory.

Biggio, whose fifth-inning double drove in the Astros' first run, doubled to start the eighth off reliever Mel Rojas (1-3) and moved to third on a passed ball.

Montreal tied the score in the sixth off Brian Williams when Marquis Grissom walked, stole second and scored on Matt Stairs' single.

Williams, making his first start of the season, struck out seven, tying his career high, and walked three in seven innings.

Brian Barnes allowed one hit and faced 10 batters over the first three innings. He escaped a no-out jam in the fourth when Steve Finley singled and Jeff Bagwell and Chris James each walked.

But Ken Caminiti popped out to shortstop and second baseman Delino DeShields leaped high to snap Luis Gonzalez's line drive and stepped on second base for an unassisted double play to end the inning.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Notes: The Expos escaped the first inning without allowing the Astros a run. They've allowed 53 first-inning runs in 50 games. ... Doug Drabek, Houston's starter on Tuesday, has a 13-8 lifetime record against the Expos, including 3-1 last season.

REDS 6, PHILLIES 4

A balk call by plate umpire Bob Davidson touched off an eighth-inning rally that sent the Cincinnati Reds over Philadelphia 6-4, setting off a war of words.

"Bob is one of those impact umpires. It was an ESPN game and he couldn't wait to suit up. He was going to make an impact on the game one way or another," Phillies catcher Darren Daulton charged.

Daulton threw his mask after the balk call and was ejected. Manager Jim Fregosi also was tossed during the dispute.

Phillies pitching Johnny Podres was ejected earlier in the game for arguing balls-and-strikes.

"To blatantly make calls because you're mad at somebody, that's way out of line," Daulton said. "That should never happen."

Phillies pitcher Curt Schilling claimed that during an at-bat in the third inning, Davidson told him balls-and-strike calls were going against him because Daulton had been complaining. Davidson denied saying such a thing.

"I would never do that," Davidson said. "I've never ever done that, and I never will. I'm disappointed he would say something like that."

ROCKIES 6, PIRATES 2

Armando Reynoso stopped Colorado's latest losing streak at four, pitching the Rockies past Pittsburgh at Mile High Stadium.

The Rockies had been outscored 47-10 in their last four games, and were routed 18-1 by Philadelphia on Sunday. Colorado won its first-ever meeting with the Pirates.

Reynoso (3-2) gave up nine hits and no earned runs in his third complete game. He struck out five and walked two. Tim Wakefield (3-5) gave up 10 hits and five runs in five innings.

Andres Galarraga, who went 3-for-4, and Alex Cole each drove in two runs.

BRVES 2, PADRES 1

Greg Maddux got his 100th career victory when Damon Berryhill doubled home the winning run in the ninth inning at Atlanta.

Maddux (5-4) pitched a five-hitter, struck out seven and walked four. He is 100-78 in his seventh major league season.

San Diego starter Wally Whitehurst allowed one run in six innings. In the ninth, Sid Bream led off with a double against Roger Mason (0-2) and Berryhill followed with a double to the wall in right-center. The Braves had seven hits, six of them doubles. DODGERS 5, CARDINALS 1

Tom Candiotti pitched a four-hitter and Los Angeles won in St. Louis for its 12th victory in 13 games.

Candiotti (3-4) struck out six and walked three. The Cardinals spoiled his shutout in the ninth on Ray Lankford's sacrifice fly.

Sampras, Courier win way to French Open quarters

By The Associated Press

PARIS — Top seeds Pete Sampras and Jim Courier powered their way into the French Open quarterfinals today, each overcoming one difficult stretch in impressive fourth-round victories.

Sampras, the No. 1 seed, defeated fellow American MaliVai Washington, the 16th seed, 6-3, 7-6 (8-6), 6-1. Washington battled to 6-6 in the tiebreak, but hit a lob and then a forehand long.

Sampras hit 10 aces in the match and never lost his serve.

Courier, the two-time defending champion, outslugged 15th-seeded Thomas Muster to win 6-3, 2-6, 6-4, 6-2. Though seeded second to Sampras on the basis of computer rankings, Courier is a consensus favorite to win the title again.

Also moving into the quarterfinals was 11th-seeded Andrei Medvedev of Ukraine, who slammed 14 aces in a 6-4, 6-4, 4-6, 6-3 victory over Marc Goellner of Germany. It's the best Grand Slam showing yet for Medvedev, 18, one of the brightest young prospects in tennis.

In the quarterfinals, Courier will play unseeded Goran Prpic of Croatia and Sampras will play 10th-seeded Sergi Bruguera of Spain, who ousted Fernando Meligeni of Brazil, 6-3, 6-1, 7-5.

Bruguera is the only man who has won every set in the tournament. This was the first pro tour event of the year for Meligeni, ranked 167th and usually forced to play satellite events.

Muster, along with Courier one of the hardest hitters on the tour, got hot in the second set, but seemed to lose momentum at 3-3 in third when he blew four game points on his serve, allowing Courier to break for a 4-3 lead.

Courier then held serve at love, ending a string of five straight breaks.

"I picked my game up a level when I needed to," Courier said. "That was a big momentum switch, for sure... I kind of turned the corner there."

Muster agreed that was the decisive stretch.

"I had many chances to go ahead," he said. "I played the important points too emotionally."

Courier, who now has 18 straight French Open victories, had played Muster five times previously, winning the last three, including a second-round match here a year ago in straight sets.

"I played much better than last year... I made him miss some shots," Muster said.

Courier said beforehand that playing against Muster would be like looking in a mirror, because of their Defending champion Jim Courier stretches to return the ball to Austria's Thomas Muster during French Open play Monday. Courier won, 6-3, 2-6, 6-4, 6-2.

similar styles. Asked if he'd broken the mirror, Courier said, "I hope I don't get seven years bad luck."

"After I won the second set, I wanted to stay focused. I got an early break and he lost a little energy there," Sampras said. "Even at 5-0 (in the third set) I wanted to stay concentrated. I didn't fool around."

Washington, serving at 5-0, saved three match points and won the game with an ace to avoid a shutout.

Sampras, seeking to raise his clay-court game to the level of his play on fast courts, said his effort to sweep the last set illustrated a more businesslike attitude on the court.

"I'm not quite as casual," he said. "I'm getting a little more mature with my tennis, with everything."

"Can I win this tournament? I'm going to try. This is the biggest challenge as far as my career, winning the French Open. The expectations are probably not very high from a lot of people. I'm going to try to prove those people wrong."

In late fourth-round matches, No. 3 Stefan Edberg played unseeded Paul Haarhuis of the Netherlands.

Texas gains another trip to College World Series

By The Associated Press

AUSTIN, Texas — The Texas Longhorns showed Monday why they've been to the College World Series more times than anyone else.

Down by one run entering their last at-bat, the Longhorns scored twice then sent ace Brooks Kieschnick to the mound to save the 3-2 victory over Southern California for a record 24th berth to the national championship.

"Great baseball — I don't know how you can ask for anything more," said Texas coach Cliff Gustafson, who will be returning to Omaha, Neb., for the 17th time in his career.

Trojans coach Mike Gillespie called the loss "mighty frustrating."

"I'm very, very, very disappointed. You have to attribute it to bad luck for us," Gillespie said.

USC's misery began with one out in the ninth when Trojans starter Tony Nieto (8-5) hit Jerry Taylor with a pitch.

Jeff Conway, pinch-hitting for Joel Williamson, followed with an RBI double to tie the game at 2-2. Tim Harkrider followed with a single to put runners at first and third.

After a flyout, Mark Prather singled to right field to drive in the winning run.

Brooks Kieschnick, the NCAA Central II tournament Most Valuable Player, retired the Trojans in order in the ninth for his third save. Chad Smith (8-2) was the winner, giving up no runs on no hits in 1 2-3 innings.

Fifth-ranked Texas (50-14) won all four of its games at the regional. USC, second to the Longhorns with 17 CWS appearances, finished its season 35-29.

Nieto went 8 1-3 innings, allowing all three Texas runs, all of them earned, on just four hits. He walked four, struck out one and hit two batters.

Aaron Boone gave USC the lead in the seventh with a double off Texas starter Ryan Kjos, scoring Casey Burrill, who had singled. That made it 2-1.

Texas went up 1-0 in the second when Nieto walked Marcus Hendry with the bases loaded.

USC tied the game in the bottom of the inning on Kurt Bierek's home run.

Olerud nears .400 as Jays win

By The Associated Press

The John Olerud watch is on. Olerud enters June batting a major league-high .395 after hitting three homers and driving in three runs to help the Toronto Blue Jays beat California 10-5 Monday at Anaheim. Olerud and Barry Bonds flirted with the .400 mark for part of May, and now they're close again. Bonds enters the new month batting .394. "He's given a lot of people hard times," said California's John Farrell, who gave up both of Olerud's homers. "Olerud swung the bat three times today and hit the ball a total of about 1,200 feet." The last two players to really get serious about hitting .400 were Rod Carew (.388) in 1977 and George Brett (.390) in 1980. ROYALS 5, RED SOX 3. David Cone pitched Kansas City past Boston at Fenway Park for his third straight victory. Cone (3-5) gave up seven hits and struck out seven in seven-plus innings. The Royals backed him with more than four runs for the first time in his 11 starts.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

YANKEES 8, INDIANS 2. Melido Perez allowed seven hits in eight innings as New York beat visiting Cleveland for its fourth consecutive victory. The Indians have lost four in a row. Perez (3-4) struck out four and walked one before rookie Bobby Munoz finished in his second major-league appearance. Loser Dennis Cook (3-3) gave up six runs and eight hits in 4 1-3 innings. Paul O'Neill and Hensley Meulens hit consecutive home runs in the Yankees seventh. OROLES 3, ATHLETICS 1. Mike Mussina (7-2) checked Oakland on six hits, helping visiting Baltimore break a three-game losing streak. Mussina struck out five and walked one en route to his third complete game. Ron Darling (0-3) allowed three runs on four hits in 6 2-3 innings, striking out a season-high seven.

Ryan hurts foot in boating accident

By The Associated Press

ARLINGTON, Texas — Nolan Ryan, already on the disabled list for the second time during his final season, cut his left foot in a boating accident Monday and will be forced to keep stay off it for about two weeks, the Texas Rangers said. The gash, which required seven stitches to close, did not damage any ligaments or tendons. It is located under the big toe on the ball of his left foot. Ryan, baseball's career strikeout and no-hitter leader, was hurt while spending Memorial Day with his family on the Guadalupe River near his ranch in Gonzales, Texas. The injury occurred when Ryan stepped out of a motorboat he had been driving while his children were water skiing. As he exited the boat, he slipped and cut himself on the fin of a water ski.
