Glasscock centennial shared with Hillgers

MARTHA E. FLORES
Regional Editor

GARDEN CITY - In the spring of 1893, Louis Henry Hillger traveled to a community southwest of Big Spring. Later that year, the community became Glasscock County. This coming weekend Hillger's descendants will celebrate 100 years in the county, as the community celebrates its Glasscock County Centennial 1893-1993.

Like other Glasscock County residents preparing for the celebration, the Hillgers' roots in the county began three generations ago with men, women and children traveling to unknown and untamed land looking for opportunity.

At the age of 17, Hillger and his brother, Jim Gustav Hillger, crossed the Atlantic, leaving their homeland of Germany to avoid conscription, a mandatory three years of military service. "Europe was in turmoil," explains Jo Ann Hillger, the wife of Louis Henry's great-grandson, Dale Roy Hillger. "When the sons of Father Hillger turned 17, he sent them to the United States."

By the mid-1960s, three other brothers, two sisters and the Hillgers' parents followed.

Louis Henry and Jim Gustav came to Texas in the 1880s, arriving first in Abilene and Paris. In Abilene, Louis Henry opened a boot and shoe shop. Jim Gustav began cultivating his craft as a cotton farmer in Paris.

Louis Henry then went further west settling in the area soon to be established as Glasscock County. He first leased land, slowly and steadily accruing five to six sections. He was primarily a cattle and sheep rancher until Jim Gustav arrived near the turn of the century.

"Jim Gustav planted the first cotton in Glasscock County," Jo Ann said. "He brought the cotton seed from Paris, and the brothers carried the first cotton bale to Big Spring in 1905."

For three generations, the Hillgers have been cotton farmers in the county. Today, see FAMILY, page 6A

Parker named Lions 'Man of Year'

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

Stan Parker, surprised Monday night with the Lions Club Citizen of the Year Award, suspected something beforehand when he saw his mom, dad, grandmother and aunt in the dinner audience.

"I knew something was going on, but I wasn't exactly for sure," said the eight-year veteran of the Big Spring Police Department with the easy, familiar grin known to associates and hundreds of school children he assists in the local D-FY-IT program.

The student drug club started with police help more than two years ago to provide peer pressure to students who don't want to do drugs. Students are tested for drugs upon joining and later randomly tested. They get discounts from participating merchants and counseling if needed. The club boasts membership of about 1,000 high school and junior high students, some 70 percent of the two school's students.

"He sets examples for students that we think has the same values as Lions do," said Lions member Bob Noyes.

The award, given annually by the Lions Club for two decades, puts Parker in the ranks of other winners such as Joe Pickle, Dorothy Garrett, Johnnie Lou Avery, Dr. P.W. Malone, Clyde McMahon Sr., Jimmy Taylor, Hal Boyd and Al Valdez.

"I don't think they could have picked a more deserving individual for this award," said Parker's boss, Police Chief Joe Cook. "We're always proud when one of our officers is recognized for his work."

But Parker, who was accompanied by his wife Shelley and their two-year-old son Kade, has other awards for his work, as well.

"It's a job you can always wake up in the morning and look forward to going to work," said the 29-year-old officer. "You can see the results of it."

He initially thought he was invited to the award dinner, held at the Lions Club meeting room at 1607 E. Third, just to give an update on D-FY-IT. During his report, he told the audience he figured something was up because his parents and other relatives were in the audience.

"I didn't expect anything like this," he said afterward. "It's kind of a shock."

Teen-ager held in connection with tot death

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

A 14-year-old Big Spring youth is being held in the Howard County Juvenile Detention Center in connection with Monday's death of a two-year-old boy who died Monday in a Lubbock hospital.

The juvenile is currently charged with injury to a child, pending an autopsy today in Lubbock, said Police Chief Joe Cook.

"We're going to be attending the autopsy, and we will be getting the results from that," Cook said. "Based on what those findings are, we'll decide which charge we feel is most important to assess."

After police responded to a 9-1-1 call at 1:30 p.m. Monday in the 1500 block of Tucson, the two-year-old was taken to Scenic Mountain Medical Center, with severe trauma to the abdomen.

Police officials said they are releasing limited information due to the sensitive nature of the case.

"We have to be more protective of a juvenile in every way," Cook said. "There will be other investigation beyond just the autopsy."

Cook added the youth could face charges ranging from involuntary manslaughter to murder, depending on results from the autopsy.

"It depends on what the investigation reveals," Cook said.

Violent behavior traditionally increases in warmer weather, Cook said. However, he said local cases resulting in death involving individuals as young as those in this case are unusual.

"I don't really ever expect his type of crime," Cook said. "I hope it's not a trend."

Hutchison's win impacts key projects

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Kay Bailey Hutchison hasn't even set foot on Capitol Hill yet since her commanding Senate victory and already Congress is trying to assess what her election means.

While pundits are spinning their conclusions on whether her victory was a referendum on President Clinton or a sign that Texas voters are becoming more Republican, lawmakers are using the GOP victory to jockey for position in the upcoming floor fights on the super collider and Space Station Freedom.

For opponents, Mrs. Hutchison's message of spending cuts over tax increases fits right in with their campaign to kill both programs. They also contend that with two Texas Republicans in the Senate, Democrats have little need to support high-visibility, high-dollar projects in an era of tight budgets.

For supporters, however, both projects were going to have a tough fight anyway regardless of who was elected.

"I think that Sen.-elect Hutchison is right," said Rep. Jim Slattery, D-Kan., a leading collider opponent. "We need to cut some of this unnecessary spending." Please see Hutchison, page 6A.

Homeowners facing higher school costs

The Associated Press

AUSTIN — Many school districts may offer smaller homestead exemptions for 1993-94, causing their homeowners to pick up a bigger share of property taxes, officials say.

The reason: Homestead exemptions approved by Texas voters in 1991 applied to a school funding law that has been declared unconstitutional by the state Supreme Court. Those exemptions affected a big portion of school district property taxes.

Lawmakers have passed a new school funding measure for the 1993-94 school year, so tax breaks for homeowners can't continue at the same level unless school boards adopted them by April 30.

Under the old law, homeowners in most school districts saw 20 percent of their homestead's value exempted from school district property taxes, up to a tax rate of 82 cents per $100 property valuation in 1992-93.

That law also allowed school districts to tax higher than 82 cents — up to $1.50 — and impose a different tax exemption for the additional levy.

The maximum exemption still is the 20-percent level. The minimum is a $5,000 basic exemption, plus $10,000 for those who are elderly or disabled, said Dan Wilson of the state comptroller's property tax division. School property taxes also are frozen for homeowners at age 65.

Under the new law, the tax exemption that school districts had been applying to the amount over 82 cents now will apply to homeowners' entire tax bill — unless school boards changed the exemption by April 30. School districts that consolidate operations or tax bases also can set a new exemption.

"A lot of districts don't have anywhere near that" 20 percent exemption, said Tom Anderson, executive deputy commissioner of school support services at the Texas Education Agency.

Of the state's 1,048 school districts, 270 offered more than the minimum exemptions in the 1992-93 school year, Wilson said. The state doesn't yet have figures on which school districts may have changed those exemptions by April 30, he said.

TEA general counsel Kevin O'Hanlon said school boards that didn't realize they had to act by April 30 still could lower tax rates to help make up for smaller exemptions "so their citizens don't kill 'em."

School districts also are subject to an automatic rollback election if they raise taxes more than 6 cents over the amount needed to recoup their 1992-93 revenue per student.

This graphic released by NASA Monday shows option "A" of the redesign of the U.S. space station. NASA was to announce Monday the results of the redesign which President Clinton ordered in March.

NASA engineers unable to meet spending limits

The Associated Press

NASA engineers on a crash program to redesign the space station failed to come up with a version within spending limits set by the White House, and a congressman said he would try to kill the program.

The engineers concluded a feverish 90-day effort to redesign the space station by announcing Monday they had four options, with the cheapest costing $11.9 billion over five years.

White House officials had directed the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to redesign Space Station Freedom and find options that would cost $5 billion, $7 billion and $9 billion.

Although the new design failed to meet the White House financial target, NASA Administrator Daniel Goldin said the cost estimates for the four options include for the first time the true cost of the project.

Earlier estimates had left out some costs and the new numbers realistically and truly reflect what it would cost to build an American space station, he said.

"We perfected the numbers to the best of our ability," Goldin told reporters. "We did not try to squeeze them into some fiscal target."

Rep. Dick Zimmer, R-N.J., a critic of the program, said he had predicted ed that NASA would be unable to meet President Clinton's spending goal.

"NASA said it couldn't be done and, sure enough, it couldn't," the congressman said in a statement. "We simply cannot produce an adequate space station for the amount we can afford to spend."

"I hope the president will stick to his convictions and pull the plug on the space station before it sucks any more of the financial lifeblood from our space program," Zimmer said.

A presidential commission headed by Charles Vest, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, received a briefing on the NASA study Monday and has until Thursday to make its own report to the White House.

Deputy White House press secretary Lorraine Voles said "we're going to wait until then" to comment on the NASA and commission reports.

NASA's redesign effort for the space station began in March after the White House told the agency that cost estimates for the orbiting laboratory were too high.

In an around-the-clock effort that saw engineers sleeping in their offices, NASA teams came up four options, two of them variations on one theme.

Three of the options, called A1, A2 and B, are closely related and similar in appearance to the original design of the space station. They achieved savings through reductions in hardware, a scale-down in size, changes in management and changes in power generation.

The cheapest option, called Option C, is a single module based on the use of a space shuttle fuel tank. The tank would be outfitted as a crew compartment and laboratory with solar panels added to provide power.

All the space station designs would use two Russian Soyuz spacecraft as emergency rescue vehicles. The Russian craft would be carried into orbit by the space shuttle and then linked up with the space station. There is a possibility that the Soyuz would be delivered to orbit by the Russians.

The space station was first proposed by President Reagan in 1984. At that time, it was estimated to have a total cost of about $8 billion. Since then, NASA has spent more than $8 billion on design and test work.

The full-scale station project, the agency said Monday, would cost an estimated $15.8 billion over five years and more than $51 billion through 2010.

Church finds home in what was once pub

BEAUMONT (AP) — A former pub now features Bibles — not beer — with the "living waters" that are a non-denominational church's namesake as the only refreshment flowing inside.

The Church of Living Waters was in search of larger quarters for its congregation of about 100 when it found space in the Esplanade Market Center, under a canopy that once read: "O'Neal's Pub."

"We loved this place. It had character. There used to be a dance floor over there," said the Rev. Benny Thomas, pointing to a back corner that now is filled with pews. "And the bar was there where the platform (and speaker's podium) is."

Congregants now flock for prayer where patrons used to belly up to the bar. But the 51-year-old church pastor hasn't had a problem adjusting to the surroundings, and neither has his congregation.

"There's just something so challenging, something so like God to take something that was so worldly and turn it around," said longtime church member LaRue Nance, 44, of Winnie.

"I heard, too, that when it was a pub, it had a family-type of atmosphere. ... It blessed me that we took over a place that had a family-type atmosphere, and now the church is taking that over to redeem it for the Lord."

North Texas man held in fraud investigation

DALLAS (AP) — The FBI arrested a North Texas man Monday on charges stemming from a scheme to defraud a Fort Worth insurance company, agents said.

A federal grand jury indictment that named Rolf Walter Starke of Roanoke was unsealed this week. Special agents from the FBI's Fort Worth office arrested Starke Monday morning at his home northeast of the city near Denton.

U.S. Magistrate Alex H. McGlinchey ordered Starke held without bail pending outcome of a detention hearing, scheduled at 9:30 a.m. Thursday.

The 38-count indictment last Thursday charged Starke with 35 counts of mail fraud, two counts of money laundering and one count of falsely representing a Social Security number.

Starke, if convicted, faces a maximum sentence of 215 years' imprisonment and fines of $1,035,000.

Investigators accuse Starke, an insurance adjuster for Houston General Insurance Co. of Fort Worth, of submitting false and fraudulent claims and invoices in the names of non-existent therapy clinics and patients.

Starke was accused of cashing the checks he received or depositing them into bank accounts he had opened under other fictitious names.

Topless woman bursts into airliner cockpit

FORT WORTH (AP) — As an American Airlines flight was preparing to land at Chicago O'Hare International Airport on Sunday, a woman passenger pulled off her blouse and forced her way into the cockpit, officials said.

The woman, whose name wasn't divulged, was subdued by a flight attendant and a pilot who was riding in a cockpit jump seat of the Boeing 757 but wasn't a crew member, company officials said.

The plane's pilot and co-pilot landed the plane without difficulty, American spokesman John Hotard said Monday.

The pilot "was not distracted" by the topless woman, Hotard said.

Flight 784 left Dallas-Fort Worth Airport at 10:50 a.m. Sunday and the woman ran topless into the cockpit as the flight approached O'Hare about 1:30 p.m., Hotard said.

The cockpit door was locked, but the woman hit it forcefully and knocked it open, Hotard said.

After the plane landed, the woman was released to security and medical personnel, Hotard said. The airline does not intend to pursue the incident, he said.

No report was made to the Federal Aviation Administration, said Tanya Christopherson, an FAA spokeswoman.

Kroger workers trade wages for benefits?

DALLAS (AP) — Union employees of Kroger Co. have begun voting on a 3-year contract that provides better health care and pension benefits in exchange for a cut in pay.

Rank-and-file workers began voting Monday and will continue throughout the week, but the tally so far shows ratification for the three-year contract, said Gene Burris, president of the United Food and Commercial Workers International Union Local 1000.

With about 80 percent of the votes in by Monday afternoon, the new contract was passing by more than a 70 percent approval rate, Burris said.

Hourly employees are agreeing to give up between 5 cents and 35 cents an hour, while department heads will accept wage cuts of 45 cents an hour, to pay for higher health insurance costs and benefits, Burris said.

Koresh 'hit list' included Madonna?

The Associated Press

HOUSTON — Branch Davidian leader David Koresh had a passing obsession with rock star Madonna and once expressed the thought that if he couldn't have her, nobody could, according to a published report.

Koresh, dozens of his followers and his 17 children died in fire and gun-fire April 19 in the blaze that leveled his rural compound and ended a 51-day standoff with federal authorities. The standoff began with a bungled raid on Feb. 28 that left four federal agents and six Branch Davidians dead.

At one time, Koresh wanted to kill Madonna, and he also had vague plans to assassinate the president or some other major political figure, the Houston Chronicle reported in a copyright story today, quoting various sources close to the sect.

Koresh also had a so-called "hit list" of 10 or more people who had defected from the cult and would "be taken away," the newspaper reported.

"I remember when he talked about Madonna and how she was the 'ultimate woman' and created for him," said Robyn Bunds, one of Koresh's several "wives" who has a child by him and now lives in California.

Geoffrey Hossack, a private investigator who was hired by former cult members to investigate Koresh, said those who had been in the sect told him Koresh had a fixation on Madonna, graduating from obsessive desire for the rock star to wanting to kill her.

Hossack, who took affidavits from a number of cult members and compiled data on Koresh for several months, said he learned that Koresh had decided that "if he couldn't have Madonna, no man would."

"I contacted lawyers who'd represented (Madonna) in Australia and told them she should upgrade her security, particularly when she appeared in the United States," Hossack said.

A representative of the singer said she would have no comment on whether she was told of Koresh's interest in her.

"If you followed this man's actions, you could see how he became gradually more aggressive," said Hossack. "It went from telling his followers, 'Do this, because it is God's way,' to 'Do this, or I'll kick your ass.'"

"At one point, he was telling them that if authorities became too interested in him, he could stop that by killing the president or some other political figure as a diversion," Hossack said.

sack told the newspaper.

The investigator said he mentioned the list when he attempted to alert U.S. authorities to Koresh in 1990. He said he did not stress it because the most pressing issue was the Koresh's repeated assertions, made during 1989, that he intended to sacrifice a child at some point.

No children are known to have died at the hands of the Branch Davidians until the fatal fire.

"Of course, I could never convince them that (Koresh) was dangerous, no matter what he was threatening," said Hossack.

Smuggler charged with mutiny

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The man hired by an Asian gangster to watch over nearly 300 Chinese being smuggled to the United States on a rusty freighter overpowered the captain and took the ship to sea, prosecutors charged.

The crime boss' agent then ordered the ship to steam toward shore, where it ran aground early Sunday. Eight people died after jumping into the cold, pounding surf in a scramble to reach land. Six others remained hospitalized Monday. All but five others — who escaped — were sent to detention centers to await hearings.

The captain, Amir Humuntal Lumban Tobing, 10 crew members and the smuggler's alleged contact, Kin Sin Lee, were charged Monday with conspiring to smuggle aliens.

In a federal complaint based on Immigration and Naturalization Service interviews with the 12 men charged, prosecutors said Lee, 24, of Canton, China — a would-be immigrant himself — was the captain's link to the man behind the smuggling, a crime boss in China.

Two newspapers, quoting anonymous sources, identified him today as Ah Kay, 28, from Fujian Province in China.

Sources told one paper, New York Newsday, that Kay, who has made millions smuggling Chinese into the United States, won the freighter and its crew in a card game 18 months ago in Taiwan.

According to the complaint, the smuggler also hired Lee to arrange for food and sleeping arrangements for the Chinese in return for a discount in Lee's cost for passage to America.

Lee resorted to mutiny when the captain failed twice to rendezvous with smaller boats in the North Atlantic to ferry the human cargo to America, prosecutors said.

Lee held Tobing beneath deck and ordered the ship to America's shore so the refugees could end their three-month journey aboard the filthy, dank ship, prosecutors said.

Tobing, 44, of Indonesia, was heard in court Monday telling his lawyer he was tortured. The lawyer, Alan Drezin, refused to comment on the allegation.

Lee was the only non-member of the crew charged. His lawyer, Michael Hurwitz, told U.S. Magistrate Judge Marilyn Go that Lee was no more to blame than the hundreds of other Chinese on board who longed for a better life in America.

"He translated for them and things like that," Hurwitz said.

But the judge said that whatever Lee's motives, he had no right to bring hundreds of illegal aliens into the country.

The defendants were ordered held pending a June 21 court appearance.

The passengers were parceled out to detention sites as far away as Virginia. Most expressed hope of gaining political asylum — a process than can take up to 18 months.

They may have a good chance. Many Chinese who seek asylum are coached to say they are trying to escape their country's strict birth-control policy, which can lead to forced sterilizations and abortions. U.S. courts have granted asylum on those grounds, based on a policy established by the Reagan administration.

The ship was confiscated and towed to a terminal in Bayonne, N.J.

Clinton now agrees to less energy tax, more spending cuts

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The White House said today it will accept "additional spending cuts" and is agreeing to scale back the proposed energy tax in an effort to breathe new life into President Clinton's endangered economic program.

Clinton says the concession will produce a bill "that can pass the Senate, pass the Congress."

The president agreed in a meeting with Senate Democratic leaders Monday to accept changes in the energy proposal — one of the most controversial portions of his $500 billion, five-year deficit reduction plan — in hopes of winning moderate and conservative support.

White House Communications Director Mark Gearan said on NBC today that "we're open (to) and welcoming additional spending cuts. ... The president has always said that he expects when this bill got to the Senate, there very well could be more spending cuts." "There will be less in the way of taxes. ... There will be more in the way of spending cuts," Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, said following the meeting that included Clinton and his top aides and Senate Finance Committee Chairman Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y.

The president summoned congressional leaders to the White House today to further explore the possibility of a compromise.

Neither the administration nor Democratic leaders said how much a cut in the energy tax — designed in its original form to raise $72 billion over five years — would be acceptable to the administration.

But administration officials, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said Clinton could live with scaling back the tax back by about $20 billion.

The officials said Clinton at this point did not want to abandon a broad-based energy tax — based on the heat content as measured in British thermal units — entirely.

However, Clinton himself seemed less than adamant when asked about the tax at a picture-taking session at the start of Monday's meeting.

He said only that he wanted the final bill to have "an energy component" that would promote energy conservation and clean fuels.

When jurors are afraid

What happens to constitutional guarantees of a fair trial when the jurors are afraid?

When verdicts were expected in the two recent race-related trials in Los Angeles and Orlando, governors alerted the National Guard and extra police were deployed. Both cities prepared for the worst.

Jurors in such cases cannot be immune to the implied duress.

When the April verdict in the Rodney King beating trial was history and what remains of South Los Angeles was quiet, U.S. News and World Report offered a perspective on the case which the media had largely ignored.

For one thing, since long before the riots of April a year ago, South Central Los Angeles was "highly flammable."

The area had a staggering 128 licensed liquor outlets — 13 per square mile.

South Central Los Angeles had more stores selling hard liquor than there are in 13 of our states, with at least one liquor outlet at every major intersection.

When the riots erupted, those stores were prime targets. Alcohol fed the fury and fed the flames and left a limitless number of broken-bottle weapons.

This in no way justifies or excuses or blames anybody, but it does help explain the volatility of an area that any spark could ignite.

About the night when King was arrested, television showed none of what went before the final minutes of the beating.

What you saw was the truth, but was it "the whole truth"?

U.S. News, in its "Untold Story," includes a chronology of what went on earlier that night.

King and two buddies had spent hours in a local park sipping malt liquor. After midnight they were driving 80 mph down the highway, radio blaring, singing.

Paul Harvey

King, by now had consumed the equivalent of a case of 12-ounce beers. His blood alcohol level was "drunk times two."

Yet, he was on his way to another liquor store when the highway patrol undertook pursuit.

Seeking to outdistance the police car, King drove through red lights, ignored the shouted appeals of his friend to "pull over."

Eight miles later, amid a fleet of cop cars, the chase ended.

The jury says nothing King did justifies his manhandling by police, but even witnesses who testified against the police conceded that King's drunkenness complicated things. King, a big man — 6-foot-3 and 225 pounds — at one point threw four male officers off his back when they tried to handcuff him.

This portion of the arrest was not televised.

So the "whole truth" relating to Rodney King's beating was distorted by half-truths and misconceptions. King was not just "a speeding motorist beaten after a routine traffic stop."

In retrospect, it becomes apparent that the worst riot in U.S. history, which left nearly 50 dead and 2,300 injured, resulted less from one unfair verdict and more from factors we can do something about: An accumulation of years of race-hate, police brutality and ghetto conditions that made rioting, sooner or later, almost inevitable.

Muslims take strategic Bosnian town

The Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Muslim forces have won control of the strategic central Bosnian town of Travnik, driving out thousands of Croats who sought refuge with Bosnian Serbs, U.N. officials and media reports said today.

Croats and Muslims were allied against the Serbs when the Bosnian war began 14 months ago, but the allegiance has broken down on various occasions as the factions seek control of important positions.

The Muslim victory came the day after Bosnian leaders, in a desperate attempt to end the war, reluctantly accepted a U.N. peace plan they said would force Muslims into ghettos and reward Serb aggression.

Travnik is a mixed Muslim-Croat town, where tensions have been exacerbated by the arrival over past months of thousands of Muslim refugees from other war zones in Bosnia.

Croat forces driven out of Travnik in fierce weekend fighting attacked Muslim positions there early today, shelling it from the area of Vitez, 10 miles south, said Cmdr. Barry Frewer, spokesman for U.N. peacekeepers in Sarajevo. But Muslim forces beat them back and drove them out, said Lesley Burgess, a spokesman for U.N. peacekeepers in Split, Croatia.

"The city is controlled by Muslim forces now, and HVO (Croat forces) headquarters is demolished," Burgess said. "Croat forces went northwest out of the town, and exited through Serbian lines."

Some Croat soldiers apparently fled in civilian clothes, he said.

Houses were burning in at least one deserted Croat village outside Travnik, Frewer said. Sporadic fighting also continued in outlying villages, U.N. officials said.

A Croat military spokesman said hundreds of people had died in the battle for Travnik, but Frewer said that report was unconfirmed.

Bosnian Croat leader Mate Boban, in a letter to Bosnia's president, Alija Izetbegovic, and international mediators, charged that 350 Croats were held in Travnik in some kind of camp, exposed to every torture, massacre and shooting.

"The Croat population in that area is in danger of total destruction," the letter said.

Thousands of Croats were so terrified by the weekend fighting that they fled across Bosnian Serb lines on Mount Vlasic above Travnik, according to U.N. and Croat officials and media reports.

Belgrade television, apparently anxious to emphasize that Bosnian Serbs were aiding fellow Christian Croats against Muslim forces, showed hundreds of Croats jammed into buses, trucks and tractors arriving on Mount Vlasic.

More than 138,000 people are dead or missing and 2 million others have been driven from their homes in a war that broke out after Muslims and Croats voted to secede from Serb-dominated Yugoslavia. Muslims have been the big losers, now controlling just a few pockets in a country occupied mostly by Serb forces.

The government on Monday unconditionally accepted a U.N. plan that would commit up to 10,000 additional troops to guard civilians in six mainly Muslim towns that were declared "safe zones."

Top Bosnian leaders had rejected the safe zones plan, saying it would herd Muslims onto "reservations" and reward Serbs, who now hold more than 70 percent of Bosnia.

Two Bosnian Croat boys with their dog aboard a truck flee from Travnik in Central Bosnia Monday. They were among several thousand Bosnian Croats who were leaving Travnik which was badly hit due to heavy fighting between Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats. The refugees were heading to Vlasic Mountain, a mountainous area above Travnik.

Gunmen open fire on U.N. forces as fighting builds in Mogadishu

The Associated Press

MOGADISHU, Somalia — Gunmen opened fire on the U.N. military headquarters today and met with a machine-gun barrage as clashes with Somali street fighters kept the city on edge.

Two Somalis died Monday in battles outside Pakistani military headquarters, and before dawn today snipers using machine guns and small arms began firing at U.N. military headquarters in the old U.S. Embassy compound, said U.S. Army Major David Stockwell.

Helicopters took to the skies and swooped low over the city with searchlights while troops fired in the direction of the snipers. There were no reports of casualties. Stockwell said the gunmen apparently were firing from two locations.

The helicopters continued to patrol after sunrise today but there were virtually no military vehicles on the crowded streets. Stockwell described the city as "tense" and said soldiers on foot or in armored personnel carriers could aggravate the situation.

Barricades and burned-out cars littered the streets and foreign relief workers were nowhere to be seen, most having been evacuated after Saturday's firefight that killed 23 Pakistani soldiers. The bodies of the victims were to be flown out of Mogadishu today.

Pakistan has complained its soldiers were left to fend for themselves for hours after being ambushed Saturday, but Stockwell defended the response of the United States' elite Quick Reaction Force, an 1,100-man team specially trained to deal with such uprisings.

Most of the force was on training missions outside Mogadishu. Immediately after word of the ambushes came in, a helicopter was sent to pick up the Pakistani military commander and fly him over the areas of fighting, Stockwell said. It was then up to the Pakistani commander to request Quick Reaction Forces where he deemed them necessary, according to Stockwell.

"Before you ask for help, you try to do it yourself," he said. "We let the commander on site make his decision."

Stockwell also said it was not unusual for most of the Quick Reaction Force to be out of Mogadishu on training missions. "Their job is not to sit in Mogadishu and wait for something to happen," he said.

A sixth Pakistani apparently died at the hospital and his body was turned over to U.N. officials on Monday.

Littering destroys

Littering strikes anger in a person very quickly because of the simple fact that it is unnecessary.

We don't have to litter our campgrounds, our parks, parking lots of our businesses. We can make an effort to keep this town clean and nice looking. It is good for us and good for people coming to visit our town.

There can be nothing worse than leaving a restaurant and nearly stepping on a used diaper.

Or walking along the lake and seeing garbage floating in the lake, on the banks.

This shouldn't be. We should know better and, even if that is how we live at home, it gives us no right to destroy what belongs to everyone in this town.

We have a beautiful park, state park, a nice lake where ducks can be fed. But all of that can be ruined by a single piece of litter.

And, when there is a litter barrel near by, there is no excuse for even contemplating throwing garbage anywhere but where it belongs.

Littering costs us not only in the lost beauty of our areas but in lost revenue spent on cleanup.

It can also cost us visitors coming back to our town to spend money. No one wants to come to a place where the residents don't care enough to keep it clean.

This is our home, we need to take care of it!

'Twilight Zone' revisited

Imagine yourself standing at the edge of reality and fantasy ... a land of unbelievable sight and sound.

No, it's not the Twilight Zone. It's simply Texas ... a Texas with two Republicans sitting in its U.S. Senate seats.

Scary, isn't it?

Not since Reconstruction has this state been so represented in Washington. Of course, back then, most of us Texans weren't allowed to vote.

Now, before some of my more conservative West Texas brethren call in an air strike, let me explain that I have relatively few major differences in political belief with Kay Bailey Hutchison, our newest U.S. Senator.

She is, of course, a pro-lifer. I on the other hand, since the powers that be in this country don't agree that no man should be empowered to express an opinion on the issue, consistently find myself siding with the pro-choice camp.

Too, a major portion of her campaign was to express her plan to oppose most of President Clinton's economic package.

From this corner, too much of her thinking on the economy coincides with the national GOP's "leave business alone and all will be well" mantra.

My question for the Phil Gramm devotees of this world remains unchanged: What, given that almost seven out of 10 people in this nation live in one way or another off the government dole, are we supposed to do when we make all these federal spending cuts they propose?

Sure, the fiscal conservative in my makeup says we need to cut entitlement programs. And yes, I believe that we as taxpayers are having to take care of some people that really don't need to be taken care of.

At the same time, a sense of fair play says the wealthy of this nation should be forced to sacrifice a little.

After all, they just got through enjoying 12 years of virtual free reign under the Reagan-Bush regime.

I'm really not bitter after those 12 years. I'm just still waiting for "trickle down" to reach even the middle class!

It hasn't, and, I believe, we all know in our heart of hearts that it won't.

John A. Moseley

All that said, I'm really not a dyed-in-the-wool Democrat. Yes, I usually vote for Democratic candidates. But not always. From the time I could vote, I always supported John Tower.

In fact, I was always pretty comfortable with having one Republican and one Democrat from Texas in the Senate. As wild as it sometimes seemed, Ralph Yarborough and Tower truly did provide accurate representation of this state's sentiments. I am also convinced that Gramm and Lloyd Bentsen did the same.

I cannot, for the life of me, believe that will be said of Gramm and Hutchison.

So, you ask, what's my real problem with Hutchison?

Well, if you must ask, and you have every right to do so, it really boils down to her having served as state treasurer.

It always seemed that Hutchison was taking credit for things her office was accomplishing, as if she'd made major changes in the way it conducted business.

Now I could be mistaken ... it has happened on occasion, even in this space ... but memory keeps telling me most of these "nifty" accomplishments Hutchison and her aides were making seemed to be innovations made under the leadership of the previous treasurer.

That previous treasurer was another woman ... the one we now call governor, Ann Richards.

And, yes, I still think very highly of Madam Governor, even though I never did like her appointment of Bob Krueger as interim senator.

Maybe, just maybe, the rest of this state's Democratic henchos will accept the fact that Krueger is a really nice guy, but he almost always finishes last.

There were no losers in this election. Anyone who offers to represent the voter are winners. I look forward to working with the council and would appreciate the input from the candidates Dub Clinton, Vicky Cole, Stacy Rawls and Kathy Vanslack who participated in this election. I would appreciate the input from all voters regardless of whom you voted for. To Mr. Berry Watson, who voted from a hospital bed I salute you sir.

To Vicky Cole who was my opponent in the runoff election I have nothing but admiration. There was no mud slinging in this campaign. It was a pleasure and I hope you and the other candidates stay active in your pursuit to be a positive voice in our great city. I look forward to working with everyone in the future. Thanks again, Big Spring.

Booing not as bad as in the 60s

Mike Royko

The booing of President Clinton when he showed up for a Memorial Day ceremony at the Vietnam War Wall has upset many commentators.

They say that the hostile Vietnam veterans demonstrated poor judgment and a lack of respect for the man who is now president of this country. Or if not for the man, for the office he holds.

After so many years have passed, they say, it would be better to let bygones be bygones and forget that Clinton did everything he legally could to dodge the draft.

And they remind us that Clinton was not any different than countless other young men who resisted military service out of conscience or because they wanted to preserve their hides.

I can't argue with that position. I've never heard any similar booing for former professional sports stars who were pushed to the head of the long enlistment line to sign up for stay-at-home reserve units. That was the standard dodge of franchise owners, who wanted to keep their valuable physical specimens out of harm's way.

Nor did they boo the many highly placed members of the Ronald Reagan and George Bush administrations who combined draft dodging with being military hawks. At least Clinton was on record as being against the war. These "war wimps," as someone dubbed them, thought our Vietnam involvement was a terrific idea. They just preferred that someone else do the fighting and dying.

Just about every senator and other influential politician from that era who had a draft-age son used clout to make sure the offspring was protected by getting him into a reserve unit, keeping him in college, or finding a deferred job, such as teaching in an inner-city school. It was remarkable how many well-born young men suddenly felt a calling to teach the three R's to little black children. And how quickly their career goals shifted to selling stocks and bonds once the war ended.

So when it comes to the Vietnam War, there is more than enough hypocrisy to spread around.

And that applies to some of the commentators who have scolded those unforbearing veterans who booed Clinton.

Some were members or supporters of the anti-war movement, and there is nothing wrong with that.

But let me jog their memories. When it came to booing, jeering, insulting and all-around verbal abuse, there haven't been many groups that could compete with the anti-war crowd.

By the standards of those days, the booing of Clinton would be considered little more than a mild rebuke.

As far as I know, none of the Vietnam vets were shouting the old f-word, which was a standard part of the anti-war vocabulary. There must have been nights when President Lyndon Johnson, Vice President Hubert Humphrey and other Democrats heard it in their sleep.

When the war protests exploded at the 1968 Democratic Convention, a popular chant was: "Hey, Hey, LBJ, how many kids did you kill today?" But it wasn't long before it evolved, for purposes of emphasis, into: "F--- you, LBJ, how many kids did you kill today?" Although Johnson wasn't our first war president, he was probably the first to be accused of making the killing of children and other innocents his main priority.

You didn't have to be a president, a politician or even a supporter of the war to become an object of scorn. Any cop, regardless of his political views, was a "f--- pig."

I remember being told by a befuddled meter maid, a woman whose job was to trudge around writing parking tickets, how a group of passing protesters had hurled the f-pig epithet at her. "And I hadn't even given them a ticket," she said.

Many a mild-mannered college dean showed up at his office to find that it had been seized by protesters and that he had suddenly been transformed from a softhearted liberal into a bloodthirsty, colonialist, imperialist, capitalist, fascist pig. Or maybe a tool of the CIA.

And there was the barber on Clark Street in Chicago, who looked at his shattered window after rampaging demonstrators caved in. "What did my window do to cause this war?" he asked.

Sometimes all it took was a short haircut, a suit, a shirt and a tie to be suspected of having f-word imperialistic, fascist, capitalist, baby-killing tendencies.

For example, I once went to a protest newspaper office — the kind of publication that always spelled it Amerika — to ask a few innocuous questions about some planned marches.

Suddenly, the young editor was leaping about yelling to his staff: "Don't talk to him. He's part of the (f-word) capitalist, imperialist press."

I tried to explain that the paper I was working on wasn't a very successful capitalist enterprise since it was losing money by the buckets, and that I, too, was against the war.

He could not be persuaded, so I retreated with the accusation of being a f-word imperialist ringing in my ears.

Oddly enough, after the war ended, that hysterical young man went to work for the same f-word capitalist newspaper and is now a journalism professor at Northwestern University.

Which shows how the passage of time can change people. He has gone from a young goofball to a middle-aged goofball.

So, yes, it might have been poor form for those veterans to boo President Clinton, and we probably should put the Vietnam era behind us.

Not all villains on the screen

"We've all begun to pay the price for the violence that is passed off as entertainment in this country. The people who run the movie studios and TV networks are always saying that they're not responsible for the growth in the violence in our society."

"But they're wrong, and I think they know they're wrong."

Those are not the words of a conservative activist, or of a member of the clergy. The speaker is Barbara McDermott, a 45-year-old Midwestern mother of two who also works as a tutor for boys and girls who are unable to go to school. She is reflecting a growing sentiment among many Americans: that after all the years of entertainment executives protesting that they are only reflecting the violence in society, not promoting it, the time has come to understand that the entertainment executives are liars.

"If you show people something over and over, they're going to absorb it," McDermott said. "If a child has a working brain, and he or she sees terrible violence day after day, hour after hour, that child is going to pick up on it. Violence becomes accepted once you've seen it enough from the safe distance of a movie screen or a TV set. Violence becomes an option."

No wonder the entertainment executives are nervous these days. The American people have finally caught on that the purveyors of television and movie violence are not operating from some moral high ground of freedom of expression. They are actively harming the quality of life in our country by sending the worst kind of inhuman behavior into millions of homes, and they're doing it because it's an easy way to make money.

"They're just selling it," Barbara McDermott said. "That's all they're interested in."

The old argument that ours is a violent society, and that the movie and television producers are simply mirroring what goes on around us anyway, does not work. The American Psychological Association has estimated that the average child in the U.S. sees on TV 8,000 murders and 100,000 acts of violence before finishing elementary school.

Regardless of how rough a neighborhood a child lives in, no neighborhood in America is as rough as the neighborhood of television. Commentators have pointed out that TV sometimes depicts an unrealistically happy and affluent world that many frustrated children will never be able to visit. That's true. But the converse is that the horrific violence that is being peddled via television and the movies is more, in quantity, than any child will ever see in real life. And there are consequences to this.

"All of these news stories about children killing other children — how do you think that happened?" Barbara McDermott said. "There are generations of children who have grown up seeing ever-increasing violence delivered into their homes on television programs. Shootings and beatings and murders are right in their homes, and they see it day after day, night after night, and after a while it seems exciting and even logical. If you get angry enough, you grab your gun and shoot. Before all of this, you never saw children bringing guns to school. You do now."

Is it unfair to blame the entertainment executives for this? No. Television is still such a new phenomenon that we have yet to learn everything about how it has changed our world. It has changed it in good ways and bad, but maybe the worst is that it has enabled people you would never allow into your house to come in all the time, showing and doing things you would never permit if you had a choice. Before TV arrived, you could slam the door in the face of a stranger who wanted to come in and talk about killings and brutality. Of course you wouldn't let such a person in.

Now you have no choice — not unless you make the drastic decision to have no television set at all. It does no good to watch only programs you know to be violence-free; the networks and local stations are constantly promoting their more lurid fare during commercial breaks all day and all evening, and families with children are especially appalled when a promo for something vicious and base comes on and off their screen before they can do anything about it.

People who complained about this used to be accused of having a far-right political agenda. That is changing rapidly. "Even if it were to stop completely right now, it might be too late," Barbara McDermott said. "We have seen these constant violent images for so long, maybe it can't be fixed. Most families have rules about what is acceptable behavior, but what comes into the house on TV violates those rules all the time."

The people who peddle this violent and harmful programming categorize themselves with such names as creators and directors and executive producers.

Jacqueline Bigar - Horoscope

FOR WEDNESDAY, JUNE 9, 1993

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You land on your feet despite pressures from many directions. Don't lose sight of your goals. A friend is right there for you. Be your dynamic self, and refuse to get caught up in a power play. Tonight: Try a competitive sport. ***

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): As you accept more responsibility, don't permit a co-worker to upset you. Current pressure could cause tempers to boil. Even a good friend seems ready to give in to anger. Be gentle as you try to determine the reason. Tonight: Stop at an art show or other gathering on the way home. ***

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Fatigue might be getting the best of you, so consider a change in plans. Recognize that you have been under enormous pressure. Lighten up and consider taking off early. Tonight: Be a passive observer - go to the movies. ***

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Build on the strengths of a partnership and refuse to let irritation with a loved one ruin your day. Remain focused, as money matters are up for grabs. Reveal more of your long-term desires. Tonight: Have a discussion over dinner. ***

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): This will be an easy day if you agree to defer to others. Don't kid yourself about what is happening with another. Go with your creativity and look to new solutions to old problems. Tonight: Whatever makes it easy. ***

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Fatigue might be stopping you from making the best of a difficult situation. Lighten up about changes and be willing to go with the flow. Confirm any plans, as misunderstandings are likely. If you know what's good for you, you'll tame your harsh words: Tonight: Crash early. **

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your creativity flows today, but only between set parameters, so refuse to take any risks. Be more in sync with your needs, especially financial ones. A friend is there both to help you and - if needed - tell you off. Tonight: Ask. ***

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A family matter is up for grabs, as long as you don't push too hard. Be willing to go the extra mile. Express goodwill toward another, even if it makes you feel awkward. Work is a juggling act, but stay hard and you'll be rewarded. Tonight: Vanish behind your front door. **

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Watch both what you say and how you say it, because feelings are running high and overreaction is possible. Seek out new solutions and be willing to explore new ideas. Make a call to get more information. Tonight: Catch up on news with a neighbor. ***

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Watch spending, as you could go overboard inadvertently and end up postponing a long-term goal. A partner wants to get down to the nitty-gritty and make things work, so be less combative and more open. Tonight: Draw up a new budget. ***

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be more connected with your immediate goals. Tension is high at work and with an associate. A smile wins the day. You radiate and barriers melt. Let your playful side emerge as you make time for a loved one. Tonight: Exercise the tension away. ***

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your instincts seem off today, and confusion over plans could have you singing the blues. Try to lighten up about your choices and stay focused on one task at a time. Don't let a co-worker get the best of you. Consider taking the afternoon off. Tonight: Play ostrich. ***

IF JUNE 9 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You need to look to distant horizons for the answers you are seeking. Prepare to take a risk and open up to change. You might need a new attitude at work - or an entirely new job. Your creativity will be virtually endless this year, but your energy won't. Pace yourself. Travel, higher education and romance are favored. If single, hold on tight. If attached, you'll reconnect in a more intense way. AQUARIUS opens doors.

Dear Abby - Letters...

Father's Day event helpful for vets

DEAR ABBY: Last year you printed the letter I wrote as a daughter of an American who was killed during the Vietnam War. The publicity it generated about our support network for the children of casualties of the Vietnam War, Sons and Daughters In Touch (SDIT), made our first Father's Day gathering in Washington, D.C., a powerfully patriotic and poignant outpouring of love and affection.

The response to my letter was wonderful. I heard from several veterans who had served with my father, and I learned more about the circumstances of his death. My mother and I were visited by a couple who had been close friends, but had lost contact after my father died.

Equally as important as our personal responses were those of other sons and daughters who had lost family members in that war. Many felt as alone as I did, and it meant so much to learn that we were not alone.

Last Father's Day, hundreds of us met at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial. It was the first time in more than 20 years that most of us had even acknowledged Father's Day, and it was wonderful to begin the healing that came from bonding with each other and expressing love for our fathers.

Following Father's Day, I received a letter that said, "I felt my father's arms around me all (Father's Day) weekend. ... I never really mourned when my father died because I was only 7, and couldn't comprehend what had happened. And I never talked about it until now. If you hadn't written to Dear Abby, I might have spent Father's Day feeling terribly alone."

We've heard from many other sons and daughters who were unable to attend our gathering and who have asked that we observe this Father's Day with the same type of event. We've recently incorporated as Sons and Daughters In Touch, and plan to have an even bigger and better "Proud to Remember" weekend in Washington, D.C., on June 18-20.

Abby, please help us reach others who need to know about our organization and the upcoming Father's Day gathering. Being able to reach out to each other can make such a difference to the more than 50,000 sons and daughters who lost their fathers in Vietnam.

Abby, thank you for realizing the importance of our group and helping us to find each other. — PATTY CRAWFORD, SONS AND DAUGHTERS IN TOUCH, WASHINGTON, D.C., COORDINATOR

DEAR PATTY AND READERS: It's heartwarming to know that the event was so successful. And for those who are interested in attending the next "Proud to Remember" weekend or who would like information about it, the organization, please send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Corky Condon, Sons and Daughters In Touch, 2030 Clarendon Blvd. No. 412, Arlington, Va. 22201, or phone (703) 525-1107.

For everything you need to know about wedding planning, order "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Hutchison

"As far as I'm concerned, the election in Texas has strengthened the hand of the group in the Congress that has been trying to kill the super collider," Slatery said Monday.

"That's something Mrs. Hutchison is unlikely to do, since she voiced support for both projects during the campaign."

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, heretofore a collider and space station supporter, hinted Sunday that Mrs. Hutchison's victory could endanger them.

The New York Democrat, who chairs the Senate Finance Committee, said the nation "can't afford" the super collider.

"It's a great idea for the next century," he said on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley."

"And space station never was a great idea in the first place," Moynihan added.

A Moynihan spokesman didn't respond Monday when asked whether the senator will vote against both projects later this month.

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, called Moynihan's comments "typically partisan bravado." He also sought to minimize the impact of Mrs. Hutchison's victory on the future of both projects.

"It would have been a problem no matter what happened in the election," Gramm said Monday, noting that the House voted last year to kill the collider. The Senate later reversed the action.

The collider, now pegged at $10 billion, appears to be in greater peril because it is more closely linked to Texas in the minds of lawmakers — a belief Mrs. Hutchison already is working to counter.

"This is very important for the whole world. It's not just a Texas project," she said Monday in an interview on the Fox "Morning News."

As the senator-elect made the round of network morning news shows, she was repeatedly asked whether Democrats in the White

Kay Bailey Hutchison and her husband, Ray, greet supporters after voting in Saturday's runoff election in Dallas. Sen. Hutchison hasn't yet arrived in Washington, and already Capitol Hill is plotting the effect she'll have on projects like the super collider and space station.

House and on Capitol Hill would seek to kill either project in retaliation for her victory.

"No, I don't think so," Mrs. Hutchison said on NBC's "Today" show. "I think everyone in Washington, members of Congress as well as the president, understands elections. And I don't think there's going to be petty partisan politics."

Concerned that reporters would link Mrs. Hutchison's victory to the collider's defeat, supporters called a news conference Monday to dispel the notion. "I think as far as the SSC is concerned there is minimal damage from this election," said Rep. Martin Frost, D-Dallas, whose district includes much of the collider.

"The fight was going to be waged regardless of the outcome of this election."

Frost also sought to allay speculation that President Clinton's support for the collider will vanish now that interim Democratic Sen. Bob Krueger is out. "My sense is the White House is fully committed to this project," Frost said.

And, said Jerry Staub, executive director of the National Association for the Superconducting Super Collider: "I don't talk regularly to Bill Clinton, but I've just got to believe that just because he's got another Republican senator from Texas doesn't mean he can afford to turn his back on Texas."

"He obviously has to work with the Texas (congressional) delegation, which is a major delegation, to get his legislation through."

Gun shop settles Jersey trooper's suit

(shooting), I was in great shape. I was training for a biathlon. That's one reason I think I survived."

His lawsuit contended a Dallas woman purchased the 9mm semiautomatic pistol at Shooting Sports in July 1989 and turned it over to members of a New York drug gang.

Papers filed in the lawsuit accused the store of negligently causing the trooper's injuries by selling the weapon to an unqualified buyer.

A man opened fire with the pistol when the 29-year-old DiSalvatore stopped suspected cocaine drug dealers on the New Jersey Turnpike on Aug. 22, 1989.

DiSalvatore later sued the Shooting Sports gun store and its then-owner, Gary Straach of Dallas.

Only Texas residents can buy guns here by state law — and only for personal use. The woman who supplied the weapon to a third party in New York, therefore, was an unqualified buyer.

The gun store and Straach, who was sentenced to a year in prison after his 1990 federal conviction on charges of selling guns to unqualified buyers, agreed to pay $100,000 to settle the case last week.

A woman who said she now owns Shooting Sports but refused to give her name blamed the lawsuit for ruining her business.

"Don't believe what you hear and don't believe what you read," the woman said Monday before hanging up on a reporter. She refused to discuss the lawsuit specifically.

Straach said his insurance company agreed to the settlement because court and attorney costs were quickly adding up. He added that gun dealers can't foresee how weapons will be used.

"You tell me how they can tell," Straach, who sold the shop in June 1990, said Monday. "Nobody knows what you're going to do with the gun."

Straw buyers purchased dozens of guns at Shooting Sports on behalf of drug pushers, who in turn distributed them to members of their gangs, according to evidence at Straach's criminal trial.

DiSalvatore contended that's how the gun ended up in the hands of Stanley Rogers, who is serving a 40-year prison term in New Jersey after pleading guilty in the attempted murder of the trooper.

The officer said the attack has reinforced his belief that gun laws should be tougher.

"When people in states with strict gun laws want guns, they just go to states with more lenient laws," DiSalvatore said.

Richard Gardiner, a National Rifle Association spokesman, said gun dealers should be held responsible for selling weapons later used in crimes, but only if their negligence is proven.

"It's very rare that you're going to be able to show that a dealer knowingly made such a sale," he said.

Clinton near decision on court nominee who is nominated. Breyer would have the easiest time of the three," the Utah Republican said. He called the trio "moderate to liberal."

The Washington Times said today that Babbitt also could face questioning about what it called alleged ties to organized crime. The newspaper cited a 1977 federal investigation into whether Babbitt had amassed Las Vegas gambling debts that were settled by mob payoffs, although the newspaper said the FBI concluded that its investigation "failed to substantiate the allegations."

Babbitt has vigorously denied the charges, saying they are "nonsense" and "ruthless attempts to destroy my reputation."

White House Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers said Clinton would not make his choice before the end of the week.

"Stay tuned," the president said Monday. "I have not made a decision yet, but I'm working on it."

He could still turn to federal judges Ruth Bader Ginsburg of Washington or Stephanie Seymour of Tulsa, Okla., to replace retiring Justice Byron White. Other possibilities include federal judges Jon O. Newman and Jose Cabranes, both of Connecticut.

But officials believe Babbitt, Merritt or Breyer will get the nod.

Babbitt, 54, is a former two-term governor and attorney general in Arizona, where he made his mark by finding the middle ground in deep disputes between interests.

Babbitt, a 1988 presidential candidate, is not known as a scholarly lawyer, although he is a Harvard Law School graduate whose intellect has long impressed Clinton.

As governor of Arizona, Babbitt favored capital punishment but no death row inmates came up for execution during his term. He supports abortion rights, although he said in 1987 that he opposes federal funding except in cases of rape, incest or when the mother's life is in danger.

Babbitt has three things working against him: appointment of a non-judge may be seen as too political; administration officials worry about having to replace him at Interior; and environmentalists don't want to lose an advocate.

Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas, asked about the possibility of Babbitt's nomination, noted that would give Arizona three of the court's nine seats. He also mentioned that Babbitt has no judicial experience.

"As far as I know he's a good person, but we haven't checked if there's a paper trail," Dole told reporters.

Merritt, who would be the only Southerner on the court, was in Washington on Monday but did not interview with Clinton. Aides said Merritt was at the Robert Kennedy memorial and reception Sunday, and may have chatted informally with the president, who attended both events.

Clinton has known Merritt since both worked on George McGovern's 1972 presidential campaign.

Other Saturday events include a Glasscock County Courthouse and Old Jail dedication, musical entertainment, barbecue lunch, historical pageant and children's contest.

Local kids academically fit

MARTHA E. FLORES
Regional Editor

Area fifth graders received a letter from President Bill Clinton in recognition of academic achievement.

"Congratulations to the winners of the 1993 Presidential Academic Fitness Award," Clinton's letter stated. "The pursuit of knowledge and academic excellence must always be the highest priority for America's students."

"As representatives of a promising future, young people must use every resource available to face the challenges that lie ahead. With your help in exercising civic responsibility, our communities can be stronger, and our national education goals realized. As we approach the 21st century, I am counting on your commitment to the development of a better nation," the letter continued.

All six Big Spring Independent School District elementary schools participated. Students received awards, as well as a lapel pin from the National Association of Elementary School Principals.

Awards were received by 19 Bauer Magnet Elementary students, 10 Moss Elementary students, three College Heights Elementary students, 13 Kentwood Elementary students, 21 Marcy Elementary students and eight Washington Elementary students. Four students, two from Marcy and two from Kentwood, received Silver Awards.

"It is the extra effort award (given when a student is not quite up to the standards," said Marcy principal Rey Villarreal. "He may have fallen short in one area."

The students maintained an overall 85 GPA in fourth and fifth grade and scored in the 80th percentile or above on standardized achievement tests in both verbal and mathematical skills.

"We emphasize the importance of academic excellence from the first grade on, teaching toward that goal," said Bauer Magnet principal Andrea Clark. "The program is not emphasized until the end of the school year at the (awards) program. It is very dramatic. The students receive lapel pins that they wear proudly."

The program was established in 1983 to honor students for their academic achievement. Awards are given to students graduating from elementary, middle or junior high and senior high school.

Middle, junior and senior high schools did not participate in the program.

Eggs-cellent Eggs-periment

It sounds like a joke: In Seattle, a helicopter dumped dozens of eggs on a schoolyard. But it was no yolk, er, joke. The helicopter was invited to egg Graham Hill Elementary School.

As part of a science experiment, the helicopter dumped a load of packages, each containing an egg. Kids at school had designed the packages to see if they could keep the eggs from breaking. To cushion the eggs, the students used popcorn, tissue paper, cardboard — even gelatin.

Out of 155 eggs, 65 survived the 200-foot drop. Fourth-grader Devin O'Reilly's egg, "Eggbert," was among them. Devin packed Eggbert in a plastic foam box.

What's the secret of his success? "If the egg doesn't shake in the package," he says, "it survives."

Weather Forecasting

Can people predict bad weather by the pain they feel?

Some folks say they can "feel it in their bones" when a storm's coming — especially if they have arthritis.

(Arthritis is a disease that makes the tissue around the joints stiff and swollen.) People with arthritis can often tell a storm is coming by the pain in their joints.

Why?

Because right before a storm, the air pressure often drops. Healthy tissue adjusts to any drop in air pressure. But swollen tissue holds in fluid, which causes pressure.

It's said that Christopher Columbus depended on his arthritis to predict stormy weather. In 1502, the story goes, he felt a twinge and warned a fleet not to set sail for Spain. No one listened, and all but one ship sunk.

Why you wear what your parents hate

By BOB LOWE
Thomson News Service

Looking to assert their own individuality and independence, teenagers are quick to adopt clothing, makeup and hairstyles that are different and at times outlandish.

The results don't always sit well with uptight parents, even when the parents are '60s-generation baby boomers who irked their own parents in much the same way two decades earlier.

Today's teens and psychologists offer this message: chill out.

"That is an outward pattern of their individualization and parents have to be respectful of that," Angelica Haas, a psychotherapist with Family Services Association-Fox Valley in Menasha, Wis., says of teen fashion.

Jean Holtz, a psychotherapist with the Center for Women's Counseling in Neenah, Wis., says this kind of expression is an attempt by kids to detach themselves from the parental umbilical cord.

"It is just a statement of their identity," says Holtz, who herself has three teen-agers. "We all need to decide who we want to be and teenagers haven't quite figured out who they want to be. So they are trying various alternatives."

"Lots of kids who come in for counseling basically feel that their parents don't understand their need to be independent and to relate to their peer group," says Paula De Grace, a psychotherapist with Counseling Resource Center in Menasha.

Rick Moncher, 20, Menasha, says he remembers all too well some of the battles he had with his mom over clothes.

"I wanted the more expensive clothes and my mom wanted to go to K-mart," says Moncher, a natural resources and police science major at Fox Valley Technical College in Appleton. "Even now, she still wants to buy the cheap stuff she thinks looks good but I don't."

Many baby boomers who outraged their parents by wearing torn jeans, tie-dyed T-shirts and peace sign necklaces are surprised to find that they are objecting to the attire that their own children are wearing today.

Today's teen fashions include baggy clothes (sometimes with the waistline hanging on the hips and the crotch down to the knees); fitted body suits; bell bottoms and platform shoes; skull caps; African print patterns in bright yellow, red and green colors; skimpy shorts and midriff-bearing tops and black outfits or black-on-white combinations.

Any visitor to a mall these days can observe teen fashions on display: baseball caps worn in reverse; combat boots, chunky athletic shoes and sandals (few kids wear regular shoes today and when they do it's without socks).

Music makers

Choosing an instrument

By FLORENCE SHINKLE
St. Louis Post-Dispatch

Dozens of variables can influence a student's choice of a musical instrument.

Buck teeth, for example. Having braces is a big barrier to playing the trumpet. It's hard to connect comfortably with that cupped mouth-piece with metalworks in one's mouth.

Other reasons for choosing one instrument over another:

— The amount of air time it gets. "Everybody likes to play melody," says Barbara Paule, director of the string orchestra at Marquette Middle School for the Visual and Performing Arts in St. Louis.

— Family preference. "My mom played the trumpet, so did my dad; so does an aunt. And so do I," declared Lindsey Best, first trumpet with a junior high band.

— Current fashionablefness. Does Bill Clinton play it?

— Size. Is the thing so big it looks as if it ought to be test-driven instead of played? "I'm going to tell you the band director's greatest challenge," confided Bob Tobler of Lindbergh High School in St. Louis. "It's getting someone — anyone, boy or girl, earthling or martian — to start on the tuba. Once they get started, they love it; it's their own pet tuba; but you have to be a super salesman to get them to try it."

What is not a ruling consideration, students and teachers insist, is the sexist mumbo-jumbo about how girls ought to be size 6 and play the flute and boys ought to dominate on brass.

"It just seems to me that there's less and less gender stereotyping," says Brian Curtis, a junior high school band director. "This is my 20th year. When I started, the groupings were automatic: girls on the oboes and flutes and boys on the drums and brass. It's a personal decision now."

Bill Habletter another music director, sees the same individual inclinations at work. Habletter's semi-serious hypothesis on the dynamics of instrument selection posits that instruments such as the trumpet, which were originally characterized as male because of their aggressive sound, are now being perceived as suited to a particular temperament instead of a particular sex.

Tornado Tally

A tornado is a violent, swirling column of air that touches the ground. It is usually in the shape of a funnel.

The United States has more tornadoes than any place on Earth.

The Far West and some Northern states have very few tornadoes. In these areas, there is not the warm, moist air that can trigger thunderstorms.

Look at the list of tornadoes. Write the average number in each state. We have done the top three for you. Notice that some of the Midwestern states had a lot of tornadoes.

Tornadoes can move in any direction. However, they often travel from southwest to northeast.

The funnel of a tornado forms in storm clouds and descends down.

When cold air from Canada meets warm air from the Gulf of Mexico, thunderstorms form. If conditions are just right, strong thunderstorms can create tornadoes. Sometimes hurricanes create thunderstorms and tornadoes.

Tornado time
Tornadoes can occur at any time of year. In the Southern states, the peak season is March through May. The summer is the peak season in the North. Some areas have peak seasons in the fall.

For use by teachers and parents at home and at school. For use with issue: Tornado Tally

Main idea: This issue is about tornadoes. The following is a list of activities to be used with this issue. They are listed in order of difficulty, with the easier pre-reader assignments listed first. Ask the children to do the following:

- Discuss the following: Do you live in an area where tornadoes can occur? How would you feel if a tornado was forecast for your area? What would you do to prepare for the tornado? How do you like thunderstorms?
- Practice some of the safety tips from this issue. Find a place that would be safe to go to if there were a tornado in your area.
- Create a tornado safety poster.
- Make a bar graph of the top 10 states with the most tornadoes.
- Look through the weather section of your newspaper for any areas of the country that are expecting storms today.
- Which state had the most tornadoes last year? Why do you think that state had so many? How many had fewer than five? How many had more than 15?
- Pretend you are a reporter writing about a tornado that hit your area. Describe what happened.

Rookie Cookie's Recipe

Chocolate Chunk Cookies

You'll need:

- 1 cup semisweet chocolate chips
- 1/2 cup butter or margarine
- 1 10 1/2-ounce package miniature marshmallows
- 4 cups crisp rice cereal
- 2 cups peanuts
- 1 cup raisins
- 2 cups broken pretzel sticks

What to do:

- Place chocolate chips, butter or margarine and marshmallows in a large, microwave-safe bowl. Microwave on HIGH for 2 minutes or until melted.
- Place remaining ingredients in a large bowl. Mix well.
- Pour melted mixture over dry mixture in bowl. Stir until well-coated.
- Drop by tablespoonfuls on a greased cookie sheet or waxed paper. Refrigerate until firm. Makes about 7 dozen.

Tornado Safety

A true tornado story

APRIL 26 The date was April 26, 1991. The place was Andover, Kan. The time was the afternoon.

A father working at his office was concerned about the weather. The morning forecast had warned of thunderstorms.

To check, he turned on the radio. He heard a tornado watch message from the National Weather Service. This meant that conditions were right for a tornado.

He worried about his children, who were at home alone.

Two hours later, he became even more concerned when skies outside his window became darker and darker.

Again, he turned on his radio and learned that a tornado warning had been issued. This meant that a tornado had been sighted.

He could hear the shrill sound of the sirens. Many cities in parts of the country have tornado warning sirens to alert citizens.

At that very moment, over his house a few miles away there were the signs of a tornado:

- Lightning, thunder, rain and strong winds.
- A funnel that dipped down from a dark cloud.
- Large hail from a dark, cloudy sky.
- A loud sound, like many trains roaring by.

When the weather had cleared, the father rushed home. The tornado had roared over his house and completely destroyed it. But his kids were safe. They knew what to do. The family had held many tornado safety drills. They were ready. They were tornado-aware. Are you?

Tornadoes can:

- move very slowly or as fast as 70 miles an hour. The average speed is about 35 miles per hour.
- be over a mile wide.
- travel for a few yards or more than 200 miles. The average path is about 2 miles long.
- last up to one hour, with winds greater than 200 miles per hour.

People used to think it best to open windows when tornadoes approached. Today, experts say this is not necessary. Most of the damage and injuries from tornadoes come from flying debris.

At home

- Go to the basement. Many homes in Kansas and other areas in the Midwest have basements for shelter in tornadoes.
- This is where the children in the story had gone. They hid under heavy furniture.
- If there is no basement, go to an inside closet, bath or hallway on the lowest level. Protect yourself. Get under a mattress.

At a shopping mall or downtown:

- Go into buildings and stay away from windows and doors.

Outside

- Get out of your car and go into a building or house.
- If you are caught outside, lie in a ditch. Cover your head with your hands.

At school

- Go to an inside hall on the lowest floor. Crouch near a wall. Put your hands on the back of your head. Stay out of big rooms such as cafeterias.

Mobile homes

Get out! Go to a safer place. Some mobile homes have safer buildings nearby.

Texas error climaxes Wichita St. comeback

By The Associated Press
OMAHA, Neb. — Wichita State coach Gene Stephenson has told anyone willing to listen that his Shockers can keep a game interesting. "I told you guys this the other night. Don't you guys ever leave a game we're involved in," Stephenson said. "My hat goes off to all my players."
Casey Blake's two-run single in the eighth tied the game, and Blake then scored on an infield error to lift Wichita State to a 7-6 victory over Texas in the College World Series Monday night.
"The third inning we were down a little bit but the coach told us it was still early and we could come back," said Wichita State designated hitter Darren Dreifort, whose 11th-inning home run gave the Shockers to a 4-3 win over top-ranked Arizona State in Saturday's first round.
"It was a great ball game, a tough one to lose," Texas coach Cliff Gustafson said. "We couldn't hold onto it. They're the kind of team that you feel you have to stay ahead of late because of their bullpen. They have lots of heart."

Shockers relief ace Jamie Bluma (8-2) gave up one hit in 2 1-3 innings, retiring Texas in order in the ninth.
Wichita State (57-16) moved into Thursday's semifinal against the survivor of Tuesday's elimination game between Texas (51-15) and Oklahoma State (44-16). The Cowboys eliminated Arizona State 5-4 earlier Monday.
The Shockers came up with four runs on two hits, four walks and an error in the eighth to overcome a 6-3 Texas lead.
Texas starter Ryan Kjos gave up his sixth hit as Richie Taylor singled leading off the eighth. After throwing two balls to Toby Smith, Kjos was relieved by freshman J.D. Smart, who completed the walk. Darren Dreifort and Joey Jackson also drew walks to force in a run and Blake followed with a two-run single past first baseman Braxton Hickman to tie the game.

Blake scored two outs later when shortstop Tim Harkrider couldn't come up with Carl Hall's grounder up the middle.
Stephenson said Kjos' motion gave his team fits.
"This guy was difficult to get adjusted to," Stephenson said. "He was a little unorthodox."
"I thought he pitched well but he didn't have much good stuff left," Gustafson said of the pitching change. "I didn't want him throwing breaking pitches to Dreifort. So I brought in J.D."
"J.D., who has been great, hadn't pitched for eight or nine days," Gustafson said in defense of his young reliever.
Smart (6-1) suffered his first loss and saw a 10-inning scoreless streak come to an end.

Wichita State's Darren Dreifort (37) is welcomed at home plate by teammates Shane Dennis, left, and Mike Drumright after hitting a fifth-inning, two-run home run against Texas at the College World Series in Omaha, Neb. Monday night.

Pavlik pitches Texas to 8-2 win over Twins

By The Associated Press
ARLINGTON, Texas — Last week, the Minnesota Twins roughed up Roger Pavlik. On Monday night, he got his revenge.
Pavlik stopped the Twins on seven hits, pitching the Texas Rangers to an 8-2 victory.
On Wednesday, Pavlik gave up six runs and eight hits in 5 1-3 innings in a 6-3 loss. This time, Pavlik (2-2) gave up seven hits in his first complete game of the season and second of his career. He struck out seven and walked four.
"My last outing, I was sure shaky," Pavlik said. "Since then I worked on my mechanics and that helped. Last time I couldn't hit the outside of the plate."
AMERICAN LEAGUE

Said Kennedy: "I felt he was capable of getting him out. I had (Todd) Burns up, but I was going to let Roger handle Puckett no matter what."
Rafael Palmeiro's eighth homer of the season, a two-run shot, put Texas ahead 2-1 in the first inning. Dean Palmer's 15th home run, another two-run drive, was hit into a 25 mph wind and made it 7-2 in the fifth.
The Rangers tagged Pat Mahomes (1-5) for five runs and eight hits in 3 2-3 innings.
"Pavlik did a fabulous job," Twins manager Tom Kelly said. "Last week when he pitched against us, he didn't make the pitches. Tonight he pitched like he wanted to win the game."
He wasn't as happy with his pitching staff.
"We managed to give guys a nice fastball at every at-bat," Kelly said. "Our guys have to learn how to pitch and they're learning on the job."

Minnesota's Randy Bush reacts after striking out for the final out against Texas pitcher Roger Pavlik in the ninth inning of their game in Arlington Monday.

Longhorns top Cards in Little League play

By STEVE REAGAN
Sports Writer
The worst thing that could have happened to the American Little League Cardinals was for Dennis Brady to get hurt.
Brady, the starting pitcher for the International Little League Longhorns, surrendered two runs in the first inning. But, after pulling a rib muscle in the second inning, pitched no-hit ball the rest of the way, leading the Longhorns to a 8-2 victory in the first round of the City Little League Tournament at Lawson Field Monday night.
The Longhorns (8-9) advance in the winners bracket of the tournament to face the National League Cardinals today at 5:45 p.m. in the National League park. The Cardinals drop to the losers bracket and will play against an opponent to be determined at 7:30 p.m. Thursday. (Complete bracket page B6.)
A run in the second inning and two runs in the third gave Brady all the offensive help he needed, but Aaron Langford kept the Cards close until the Longhorns sealed matters with five runs in the fifth.
"When they start making blooper mistakes like that, it's usually a disaster," Longhorns manager Manuel Baeza said, referring to the Cardinals' two runs, both of which were unearned. "But my guys are pretty good at coming back if they can stop the mistakes early."
The Cardinals began the scoring in the first when, with one out, Ben Kelton reached on an error, went to third on J.T. Lorg's single and scored on a single by Andrew Martinez. Long later scored on a wild pitch.

The Longhorns cut the deficit to one in the second when Anthony Hernandez scored on a fielder's choice, then took the lead for good with two runs in the third.
With one out, Seth Newell singled to left and scored on a double by Rene Heriera. Heriera, who took third on the throw home, scored when Hernandez singled to left.
Brady, meanwhile, was handcuffing the Cardinals, not allowing a hit after the second inning. For the game, he allowed two hits, struck out six and walked two.
"He chose to pitch (after pulling the muscle), which saved us the game," Baeza said of his pitcher. "The game must have been important for him to be hurt and still pitch."
The Longhorns added five insurance runs in the fifth on a hit, three walks and an error.
In Monday's other game, the Coahoma Reds routed the National League Royals, 17-5. The Reds host the International League Royals at 5:45 p.m. today, while the Yankees play in the losers' bracket Thursday.

Phillies Duncan dooms Astros

By The Associated Press
PHILADELPHIA — The Philadelphia Phillies never expected Mariano Duncan to play so well when they signed him as a free agent before the 1992 season.
"He's done everything we've asked," Phillies manager Jim Fregosi said Monday night after Duncan extended his hitting streak to 12 games with two triples, a single and three RBIs in a 7-5 victory over the Houston Astros.
NATIONAL LEAGUE
"He's played every position on the field," Fregosi said. "He's been very valuable to us. He can hit in any part of the lineup."
Duncan played sick against the Astros. He had a sore throat, a runny nose and a headache. He chewed on aspirin and drowned himself in liquids.
But he didn't let that affect his performance.
"I'm not surprised," Duncan said of his achievements since Saturday night, when he replaced an injured Kim Batiste in the second inning against Colorado.

"No matter if you're sick, you have to do the job," Duncan said.
Duncan is 9 for 12 with three triples and a home run in his past three games. He has raised his batting average from .212 to .265 during the 12 games spanning his hitting streak. He is .406, or 26 for 64, in his last 14 games, playing shortstop or platooning with Mickey Morandini at second.
The Astros had a four-game winning streak snapped, while the Phillies won for the 11th time in their last 14 games.
Danny Jackson (5-2) pitched 6 2-3 innings, giving up six hits and one run for the win. Mitch Williams, who entered after the Astros scored four runs in the ninth, got the final out for his 17th save.
Loser Greg Swindell (5-5) worked six innings before leaving for a pinch hitter. He allowed three runs and eight hits.
The Phillies took a 3-1 lead in the sixth, Duncan driving in one run with a triple and scoring on Dave Hollins' sacrifice fly. Pete Incaviglia singled home Darren Daulton, who had doubled.

BRAVES 4, PADRES 0
Steve Avery pitched a four-hitter Monday night for Atlanta's second straight shutout as the Braves beat San Diego at Jack Murphy Stadium. On Sunday, John Smoltz blanked Los Angeles 2-0 with a five-hitter.
Led by a starting rotation of Tom Glavine, Greg Maddux, Smoltz, Avery and Pete Smith, the Braves were expected to dominate the NL West this season. But the hitting has been inconsistent and the Braves trail first-place San Francisco by 5 1/2 games.
METS 7, CUBS 2
Dwight Gooden improved his lifetime record against Chicago to 26-4 with a seven-hitter, and New York scored six runs in the second inning. Gooden is 15-1 lifetime at Shea Stadium versus the Cubs.
The right-hander gave up solo homers to Rick Wilkins and Mark Grace.
MARLINS 5, DODGERS 3
Florida won its club record fourth straight game as Walt Weiss singled in the go-ahead run in a three-run ninth inning to lead the Marlins past

Houston catcher Scott Servais tags out Philadelphia's Lenny Dykstra in the third inning of their game Monday in Philadelphia.

Los Angeles.
REDS 12, EXPOS 3
John Smiley went 4 for 4 with three RBIs and pitched an eight-hitter, leading Cincinnati past Montreal at Olympic Stadium.
Smiley (3-7) had a run-scoring single in the second inning and a two-run single in the fifth to give him five RBIs this season. He also had singles in the eighth and ninth.
The Reds had 18 hits off four Montreal pitchers. Starter Gil Heredia (1-2) gave up 10 hits and five runs in 4 1-3 innings.

Montreal nips Kings on OT

The ASSOCIATED PRESS
INGLEWOOD, Calif. — John LeClair and the rest of the overtime kings are simply too much for the Los Angeles Kings.
LeClair scored his second overtime winner in as many games, banking the puck off two Los Angeles players 14:37 into OT Monday night, as the Montreal Canadiens won 3-2 to go up three games to one in the Stanley Cup finals.
Montreal has won a record 10 straight overtime games in these playoffs — including three in a row over the Kings after dropping the series opener in regulation. Dating back to 1979, Montreal's last six OT games in the finals have been victories.
"Without being cocky and trying to be very modest, we believed we would win," Canadiens coach Jacques Demers said. "It's just a feeling you have when you go 10 straight (overtime games) without losing."
He then looked at LeClair, who scored the winner 34 seconds into Game 3.

"The big man here did it again," Demers said. "He's unstoppable."
LeClair, who was benched midway through the season before rebounding to be one of Montreal's toughest, most consistent players, was having difficulty comprehending the magnitude of his feat.
"I don't think anybody would see themselves scoring back-to-back overtime goals," he said. "It's just been incredible."
Game 5 is Wednesday night at Montreal, where the Canadiens could wrap up their first NHL championship since 1986. The most successful franchise in professional sports, the Canadiens are seeking their 24th Stanley Cup.
The Kings know they are in trouble. Only one of 23 teams to fall behind 3-1 in the finals has come back to win — Toronto in 1942 against Detroit. And only 11 teams in the history of NHL postseason play have rallied from 3-1 series deficits.
"They've won three in a row and now we have to win three in a row," Kings coach Barry Melrose said.

Nets' Petrovic killed in auto crash
FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — Drazen Petrovic, a raw European talent who developed into one of the NBA's top shooting guards in two-plus seasons with the New Jersey Nets, died in an automobile accident. He was 28.
Police said Petrovic was killed at the scene about 5:20 p.m. German time, about 15 miles north of Ingolstadt, on the highway going to Munich. He was traveling in a Volkswagen Golf with two women and was sitting in the front passenger seat.
In heavy rain, the Golf slammed into a trailer truck that had skidded on the slippery road. The 23-year-old driver of the Golf apparently had to break suddenly and lost control, hitting the rail separating lanes headed in the opposite direction and then hitting the truck.

The driver and 53-year-old female passenger sustained serious injuries.
Brown to coach Indiana Pacers
INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Larry Brown, who has coached five professional teams and two colleges in his 21-year career, was named coach of the Indiana Pacers.
Brown, 52, resigned as coach of the Los Angeles Clippers on May 20 with two years left on his contract. He also coached Carolina in the ABA, Denver in the ABA and NBA and New Jersey and San Antonio in the NBA and along with college stints at UCLA and Kansas. He led Kansas to the 1988 NCAA title.

He replaces Bob Hill, who was fired three weeks ago.
TCB wins UGSA tourney
Takin' Care of Business of Big Spring won the Alberto's Crystal Cafe Invitational UGSA Division II softball tournament, held this past weekend at Roy Anderson Complex.
After dropping the first game of a double-elimination championship series to Odessa's Creative Impressions, TCB came back to win the tournament with a 9-8 victory. Third place in the tourney went to Odessa's Wylie Brown.
All-tournament selections were Misty Baker, Candice Cerda, Kelly Buchanan, Sherri Glasscock, Kristi Thomas, Chris Worthy, Lacey Moore, Jessica Canales, Miriam Cisneros, Lindsey Marino and Beverly Dawson.

Tournament MVP was Amanda Alvarez, pitcher for TCB.

AL GAMES

 recently announced he has bone cancer.
 "I am honored by it. It couldn't happen at a better time, when the team's playing the way it is," he said.
ORIOLES 3, ATHLETICS 2
 Baltimore extended its longest winning streak of the season to five, beating Oakland on David Segui's sacrifice fly in the eighth inning.
 Harold Baines, who had not homered all season, connected for the second straight day for the host Orioles. The A's have lost four of five.
BLUE JAYS 4, ANGELS 2
 Roberto Alomar homered and drove in three runs as Toronto beat California at the SkyDome. The Blue Jays won for the 18th time in 24 games.

 Alomar put Toronto ahead for good at 3-2 with an RBI grounder in the fifth inning and hit his seventh home run in the eighth. Toronto leads the majors with 70 home runs.
WHITE SOX 7, TIGERS 3
 Dan Pasqua hit a three-run homer, Frank Thomas hit a two-run drive and Ellis Burks had a solo shot, powering Chicago past Detroit at Comiskey Park.
 Rookie Jason Bere (2-1) beat Mike Moore (3-3) for the second time in a week. Bere defeated Detroit last Wednesday for his first major league victory. Moore has lost eight straight decisions to Chicago.

BREWERS 5, MARINERS 3
 B.J. Surhoff hit a bases-loaded triple in the third inning, sending Milwaukee past Seattle at County Stadium.
 Surhoff, batting .207, tripled with two outs after an intentional walk. He extended his hitting streak to a career-high 12 games.
 Cal Eldred (7-6) was the winner and Doug Henry, the fourth Brewers pitcher, got his 10th save. Dave Fleming (0-1) lost in his fourth start since coming off the disabled list.
 Seattle dropped its fourth straight decision.

BRIEFS

Girls hoops camp slated at HC

The 1993 Howard College Girls Basketball Camp will be held June 28-July 1 at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

Cost of the camp is $85 for day campers and $175 for overnight camp. A $25 deposit is required by June 21.

Campers will be separated according to age and expertise. Competitions will be categorized as follows: seniors; juniors; mid level; and Little Dribblers.

For more information, contact either Royce Chadwick or Terry Gray at the college, 264-5040.

O's Davis breaks jaw off field

BALTIMORE (AP) — Just hours after his Baltimore Orioles teammates were involved in a brawl with the Seattle Mariners, first baseman Glenn Davis sustained a broken jaw in a scuffle outside a Norfolk, Va., bar.

Davis, who accepted assignment to Triple-A Rochester on May 27, was hit Sunday night when he came to the defense of teammate Randy Ready outside a bar, Orioles general manager Roland Hemond said.

Morrison ends Foreman's career

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Tommy Morrison outpointed George Foreman in a 12-round unanimous decision that likely ended the 44-year-old former heavyweight champion's career.

Morrison was guaranteed $1 million, while Foreman made at least $7 million for the fight, which dropped his record to 72-4 and 27-2 since he began his comeback six years ago. The 24-year-old Morrison captured the WBO heavyweight title, the same crown he fought Ray Mercer for when he suffered his only loss in 37 career fights.
