Homeless duo leads deputies to missing man

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

A missing man, diagnosed as schizophrenic, lived two weeks on the streets here before a street companion recognized his picture in Sunday's Big Spring Herald and flagged down a sheriff's deputy.

CULVER

"He was well and good, just a little hungry," said Howard County Sheriff Deputy Barney Edens.

George Culver, 47, of Breckenridge, gobbled a box of donuts Sunday afternoon at the sheriff's office before being transported back to the VA Medical Center. He'd walked off from the hospital on June 4. He had been admitted there two weeks earlier for medication adjustment. He was diagnosed in 1969, which led to his discharge from the Navy.

"They just fed him all the donuts they could," said Culver's mother, Margie Smith of Breckenridge.

Smith was in Big Spring last weekend to get help in searching for her son. She visited the media and local law enforcement agencies.

"I felt wonderful," she said of him being found. "I broke down and just let it all out."

Culver said he lived by rummaging for food at stores and garbage cans, his mother said. At night he slept in a vacant building by the railroad tracks with other street people. Sometime during the two weeks he donned a new hat and clothes.

"He said, 'Well, I've just been roaming the streets ... I couldn't get out of town,'" Smith said. "But, he said, 'I'll tell you what, you can take me back to Breckenridge right now.'"

He left the medical center because he thought he was going home that day, Smith said. When no one from his family showed to pick him up, he walked off.

"He just walked off, that's how he described it," Smith said. "He said he didn't like it there."

When Culver was found by Deputy Tony Chavez, he was leaning against the Permian Building at Third and Scurry Streets, not more than a block from the courthouse where the sheriff's office is. One of two men with Culver flagged Chavez down and told him Culver looked like a missing man's picture in the Herald, although when the picture was taken, Culver was several years younger and clean shaven.

More miraculous than that, Smith said, "Those guys got a paper somehow and they didn't have a nickel between them."

Chavez found Culver about 10:30 a.m., about 45 minutes after Smith left for a road trip back to Breckenridge, about 150 miles northeast of Big Spring. She got news of her son being found upon arrival at 1 p.m.

Senate nearing passage of bill trimming deficit

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Republicans were waging a last-gasp attack on the proposed increase in the gasoline tax as the Senate prepared today for likely passage of the Democrats' deficit-reduction package. Amid partisan friction, the White House budget director predicted "a tough vote," and victory.

The Democratic bill largely follows President Clinton's economic plan, including tax increases as part of a package to reduce the deficit. A Republican bill that included only spending cuts was defeated Wednesday.

The House approved legislation that was much closer to Clinton's original proposal, and so following Senate passage a compromise will have to be written.

White House Budget Director Leon Panetta said on ABC today, "It's going to be a tough vote, a close vote. But I think in the end we'll have the votes because the members (of the Senate) understand that there is no other alternative but to put this plan in place."

Asked this morning if the bill would pass, Clinton crossed his fingers and said, "We're working on it."

His spokeswoman, Dee Dee Myers, said the bill did not have enough votes going into today, but "by the end of the day we will have them."

Several lawmakers are holding out over various concerns, she said. "Some say there are too many spending cuts, some say there's not enough spending cuts," she said.

The White House expects the bill to pass late tonight. Clinton planned to call lawmakers "as needed," but had not scheduled personal meetings. A series of calls by Clinton and his senior aides sealed last-minute deals to barely pass the House bill.

The Democratic plan is aimed at paring $516 billion from federal deficits by 1998, but depends upon a series of future actions to meet that goal, and has attracted no support from the Republicans.

The GOP alternative was dispatched on a near party-line 55-43 vote.

Republicans said their alternative and its spending limits on Medicare and other programs would have driven budget deficits even lower than the Democratic measure.

"Unless we get a grip on the (benefits programs) ... of this United States, in the year 2030 your grandchildren will be picking grit with the chickens," warned Senate Whip Alan Simpson, R-Wyo.

They also said the $249 billion in new taxes in the Democratic bill would do little more than hinder the economy and cost jobs.

"The employees of small businesses are going to suffer the most," said Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan.

Democrats chided Republicans for offering a package that would have killed one of the keystones of Clinton's deficit-reduction plan: higher taxes on the best-off Americans and on business.

"Those who make more than $200,000 a year — we wish them the see TAX BILL, page 8A

Authorities seek hot check artist

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

Merchants should beware of a 36-year-old Hispanic man, writing hot checks at outlets throughout the area, and especially at local businesses, Howard County sheriff's deputies say.

About 20 bad checks have been written since the weekend, and officials believe the suspect, who is 5-foot-7 and 190 pounds, may continue to write as many as 180 more checks.

"We believe he has every intention of passing the rest," said Deputy Sheriff Woodie Howell. "He's hitting a lot of convenience stores and grocery stores; places where he can write checks for cash over (the amount)."

Howell added the checks are from an account at Coahoma State Bank. The checks are numbers 1000-1200.

"What we suspect is that he stole checks which he forged and then opened a bogus account," Howell said.

The yet unidentified man is described as a "well dressed, clean and in work-style attire."

Howell added the suspect might have traces of a beard.

The suspect, a former Midland resident, has been wanted by law enforcement authorities for the past year, he said.

"He has a history of this same type of offense in Texas," he added. Officials expect an arrest and a felony charge soon.

"We're attempting to catch him as soon as possible to decrease the losses to our local merchants," Howell said. "It would be perfect, if (merchants) could discreetly call when he's in the store."

"But, if a merchant realizes a subject fitting the description, and can't safely call, then get a description of the car or a license plate number if possible," he added.

To make a report related to this case to Crimestoppers, contact Howell or George Quintero at 264-2242.

Those able to give information leading to the arrest of the suspect will be eligible for a reward.

Collider foes, supporters squaring off

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The super collider's powers of survival will be tested to the hilt today when a budget-conscious House spars over funding for the giant atom smasher.

The collider dodged a bullet just a year ago when the House voted 232-181 to kill it but later saw its action reversed in the Senate. When House members today consider the $620 million appropriations request for the collider, that vote will be on their minds.

Undoubtedly the knowledge that the House on Wednesday narrowly missed killing a sister big-ticket science project, Space Station Freedom, will also be a consideration.

"It is clear the House is looking for places to save money," a leading collider supporter, Rep. Jim Chapman, said Wednesday. "I don't think we have anything but a battle royal on our hands tomorrow," the Sulphur Springs Democrat said.

Asked what impact the space station vote might have on the super collider, Chapman joked: "With that kind of smashing victory, how can we lose?"

Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, who took the unusual step of going to the House floor Wednesday to lobby for both science projects, said she "felt good" about the space station vote. "The super collider is another issue," the Texas Republican said. "But I visited with a number of people and just talked about the merits, and I think the merits should sell it."

"But it's tough and I understand people looking for ways to cut (spending)," said Mrs. Hutchison, whose recent campaign was based almost exclusively on finding spending cuts instead of tax increases.

Collider opponents have framed the collider vote as a referendum on Congress' courage to tackle spending issues — a message that's finding resonance with budget-conscious lawmakers skittish about the Clinton administration's proposed tax hikes.

Supporters said they were going into today's House fight a few votes behind, but wouldn't predict the outcome.

"It's going to be real, real close tomorrow and whoever does the best job in the general debate will win," said Rep. Joe Barton, R-Ennis, a tireless collider supporter who has discussed the project in person or by telephone with over 120 House Republicans.

Political trouble ahead for orbiting space lab

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Supporters of the space station say President Clinton will have to throw his full support behind the orbiting laboratory if it is to survive the budget-cutting mood in Congress.

The station squeaked by with a single-vote margin Wednesday when the House voted, 216-215, to reject an amendment that would have killed it. When the full NASA authorization bill comes before the House, it will include a commitment to spend $12.7 billion on the station in the next seven years.

With the space station authorization out of the way, the House planned to vote today on the future of a sister big-ticket science project, the superconducting super collider.

The space station vote did little to reassure backers of the $10 billion or more atom smasher, which is believed to have less support than the space station. The House last year killed the super collider on a 232-181 vote, but the Senate rescued

Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission Chair Jim Courter presides over the commission's meeting Wednesday on Capitol Hill to decide the fate of military bases around the country. Some of the best-known Air Force bases in the country could be on the chopping block today as the national commission continues to hunt for savings that will produce a smaller military.

Base-closing panel skirts Kelly decision

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The fate of Kelly Air Force Base is as much in doubt today as it was before the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission met to weigh the merits of the Texas base against four others.

The San Antonio base is one of five Air Logistics Centers nationwide being eyed for closure by the independent commission, which met Wednesday.

While the Air Force has recommended closing Newark AFB in Ohio, the seven-member commission added the four other Air Logistics Centers for comparison purposes.

Joining Kelly and Newark in the comparative round are McClellan AFB in California, Robins AFB in Georgia and Tinker AFB in Oklahoma. McClellan was removed from the Pentagon's "hit list" by Defense Secretary Les Aspin to lessen the already heavy economic blow California is expected to take in this year's base-closing round.

The commission's discussion Wednesday of the logistics bases came as the panel prepares to vote on the future of 238 military facilities and activities nationwide. The vote on Kelly and the other logistics bases is expected Friday.

When the commission concludes its decision-making Sunday evening, it will have debated the future of five other Texas installations. Other Texas bases being reviewed for closure are Naval Station Ingleside near Corpus Christi, Corpus Christi Naval Air Station, Naval Hospital Corpus Christi and Dallas Naval Air Station. The Red River Army Depot near Texarkana is being reviewed for realignment.

"I really do feel cautiously optimistic about our bases," said Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, R-Texas, who met last week in private with some of the commissioners.

"I think that Kelly is in good shape on the merits. I feel the (Corpus Christi) naval air station is also in good shape. I think that we have had to really do a lot of question-answering on Ingleside and I think we've done that."

During Wednesday's debate, none of the commissioners indicated how many of the logistics centers they think should be closed.

Chairman Jim Courter said the panel intends "to close the maximum number of depots we can based on excess capacity," but he later declined to tell reporters how many Air Logistics Centers he expects the commission to recommend for closure.

Commission analysts told the panel Wednesday that the Air Force has from 25 to 50 percent excess capacity in its Air Logistics Centers. They told the commission that three of the logistics bases could be closed and still leave enough capacity to handle the Pentagon's future projected workload.

Air Force estimates show that closing Kelly, Tinker or Robins would not produce any savings for more than a century. It would cost $1.1 billion to close either the Kelly or Tinker depots, and $940 million to close Robins. Closing McClellan would cost $494 million, while shuttering Newark would cost $31 million. Savings wouldn't be realized until 2094 for Kelly, Tinker and Robins; 2008 for Newark and 2003 for McClellan.

The closure costs don't include environmental cleanup of the bases — which in the case of McClellan are estimated at anywhere from $1 billion to $10 billion, commission analyst Roger Houck said.

Commissioners will forward their recommendations to President Clinton, who has until July 15 to accept or reject the list.

State urges judge to reject motions from poor districts

The Associated Press

AUSTIN — A trial should be delayed until next spring on challenges to Texas' new school funding law, giving the measure a chance to work, state lawyers say.

Assistant Attorney General Toni Hunter on Wednesday asked State District Judge F. Scott McCown of Austin to reject a plea by poor school districts for quick action on their complaints about the new education funding law, known as Senate Bill 7.

"If this court holds a hearing ... now and grants or denies the motion and the issue goes to the Supreme Court, the process of implementing S.B. 7 will be confused and confounded," Ms. Hunter said in a document filed with McCown, who oversees the long-running school finance case.

The group of poor districts earlier asked McCown to declare the new law unconstitutional and require a new way of distributing state aid before school opens in the fall. Ms. Hunter said the new law meets constitutional requirements.

The districts have won a Texas Supreme Court order for lawmakers to even out funding available to school districts of differing property wealth. Texas' 1,048 school districts rely on state aid, local property taxes and some federal funds.

Two previous attempts by lawmakers to meet the Supreme Court mandate were ruled unconstitutional.

The latest law, passed last month, gives the school districts with the most property wealth in the state several options for sharing some of their wealth with poorer ones. They are required to get down to a property wealth level of no more than $280,000 per student.

Poor school districts, among other complaints, say that the way state aid is distributed under the new law hurts students in poor districts more than those in rich ones.

State leaders have acknowledged that the Legislature did not put in enough new state money to cover enrollment growth.

Eight held in alleged bomb plot

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Eight people were arrested today on charges that reportedly involve plotting a terrorist campaign of murders and bombings this summer, police said. The targets reportedly included the United Nations, underwater tunnels that carry thousands of commuters, and Sen. Alfonse D'Amato and other politicians.

Suzanne Trazoff, deputy police commissioner, said the eight, all Muslim fundamentalists, were arrested in raids in the boroughs of Brooklyn and Queens.

She wouldn't provide details on the charges, saying the U.S. attorney's office was still drawing up charges. But New York Newsday reported today that the group was accused of planning to assassinate U.N. Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali and D'Amato and bomb the United Nations and other sites.

The FBI and police arrested them in raids after 1 a.m. today after a four-month investigation, the newspaper said.

"The group had surveyed all the locations and produced schematics and preliminary plans" to destroy the sites, New York Newsday quoted an unidentified source as saying. "Their timetable was to execute the plans before the September World Trade Center trials."

Those arrested today are only loosely linked to the suspects in the Feb. 26 bombing of the trade center's twin towers, Trazoff said. New York Newsday said they had ties to Sheik Omar Abdel-Rahman, the radical Muslim cleric who was the spiritual mentor for several suspects in that bombing.

Trazoff said some materials were turned over to the bomb squad for examination. She wouldn't elaborate, but CBS news, quoting unidentified sources, said some of those arrested were caught in the act of mixing chemicals to make bombs like the one that exploded at the trade center.

The suspects were also accused of plotting to assassinate state Assemblyman Dov Hikind of Brooklyn, a Jewish leader who like D'Amato was outspoken in condemning the trade center bombing and terrorism in general.

"I think we have to understand that we're going to have these lunatics who think that can get us to change our position by these kinds of activities," said D'Amato, who has been traveling with extra security. Hikind confirmed that he had received death threats and was getting special protection from police. "I'm happy the story is out and I hope it's the entire group," he said this morning.

Newsday quoted an unidentified Justice Department source as saying the ring leader is Siddis Ibrahim Siddis Ali of Jersey City, N.J. He allegedly conspired to bomb the United Nations, FBI headquarters in lower Manhattan and one of the Port Authority tunnels under the Hudson River linking New York and New Jersey.

The Port Authority operates the Lincoln and Holland Tunnels for vehicles and a commuter train tunnel. It also operates the World Trade Center.

Port Authority Police Superintendent Charles Knox confirmed that PA police recently had heightened security but would not elaborate.

"We have been informed all along and had heightened our security on the Holland tunnel but also the Lincoln and the PATH (commuter) tubes," Knox said.

Man transforms beepers into guns

HAWTHORNE, N.Y. (AP) — A man transformed beepers into lethal James Bond-style mini-guns, winding up in jail after complaining to police that others were stealing his idea, police said.

Police raided Norman Williams' home in Mount Vernon on Tuesday and seized three pistols encased in pagers and rigged to fire through electronic impulses from a battery.

Authorities said it was the first time they had seen beepers transformed into weapons.

"These guns are right out of a James Bond film," said Westchester County Executive Andrew O'Rourke.

Williams, 30, was held on $25,000 bail on weapons possession charges.

He had gone to the police to complain that others were copying his invention, but he had no license to carry or make firearms, county police spokesman Lt. Robert Magaletti said.

Asteroid belt said no threat to Earth

NEW YORK (AP) — Scientists say they have discovered a belt of asteroids relatively close to Earth. But the chunks are so small they would probably explode in the atmosphere with little damage if they collided with the Earth.

The asteroids measure less than about 55 yards across, and their concentration is highest between the orbits of Earth and Mars, researcher David Rabinowitz said in today's issue of the journal Nature. They are spread much more thinly than objects in the asteroid belt between the orbits of Mars and Jupiter, he said.

Rabinowitz, a research associate at the University of Arizona in Tucson, presents evidence for the near-Earth asteroid population along with colleagues at his school and Kitt Peak National Observatory in Tucson.

The higher-than-expected number of small nearby asteroids does not imply any greater risk of catastrophic collisions with Earth, a second study in Nature concluded.

Such objects would generally explode too high in the atmosphere to cause substantial land damage, wrote Christopher Chyba of NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md.

Sewer workers struck by storm surge water

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A surge of water from a sudden rain storm swept away four sewer workers, leaving one missing today.

The workers were upgrading old sewer pipes Wednesday when they were carried hundreds of feet through the tunnels.

"We were running," Robert Fouch said. "As soon as we got to the manhole, five or six hundred gallons of water came at us. We couldn't get out."

Fouch, 29, became tangled in cables in the 5-foot-diameter tunnel and pulled his way about 300 feet back to the manhole. Mark Fisher, 34, and Ezekiel Charles, 27, were swept several hundred yards before rescuers pulled them out.

They were not seriously hurt. Rescuers searched for the fourth, unidentified man. Rescue crews tied to ropes walked some of the tunnels, and a camera was lowered into other pipes. Officials suspended the search late Wednesday; it was to resume today.

The pipes lead to a treatment plant, where workers kept an eye on screening grates overnight. However, in periods of high flow, overflow water is routed automatically to the Missouri River.

12-year-old sentenced to two years in center

MESA, Ariz. (AP) — A 12-year-old who shot and killed her abusive mother as she slept was sentenced to two years in a treatment center.

Kathryn Tomassoni was convicted two weeks ago of juvenile charges of manslaughter in the Feb. 5 slaying of Lydia Tomassoni. The 61-year-old woman was shot in the back of the head as she lay on a couch.

"The treatment facility would give her back her childhood," Judge Linda Scott said Wednesday.

Man charged with planting razor blades

VENTURA, Calif. (AP) — A man planted razor blades in the drivers' seats of at least 14 unlocked cars parked by young women, police said.

Gary Jean Munifering, 53, pleaded innocent Wednesday to assault with a deadly weapon and attempted mayhem. He was jailed on $250,000 bail.

Some of the women discovered the blades before sitting down, some sat on the blades but were protected by their clothing, and others got minor cuts on the backs of their legs, Deputy District Attorney Gregory Totten said.

Kurds stage attacks throughout Europe

The Associated Press

Militant Kurds attacked Turkish embassies, consulates and businesses in five European countries today, taking hostages and staging violent protests in a coordinated series of actions.

The militants — demanding an end to Turkish military campaigns against Kurdish separatists — staged attacks in France, Germany, Switzerland, Sweden and Denmark. At least eight people were injured in a gun battle at the Turkish embassy in Bern, Switzerland.

Kurds have fought for years against the Turkish government for independence of the Kurdish region in southeast Turkey. But today's attacks represented one of the largest single campaigns of Kurdish violence in Europe.

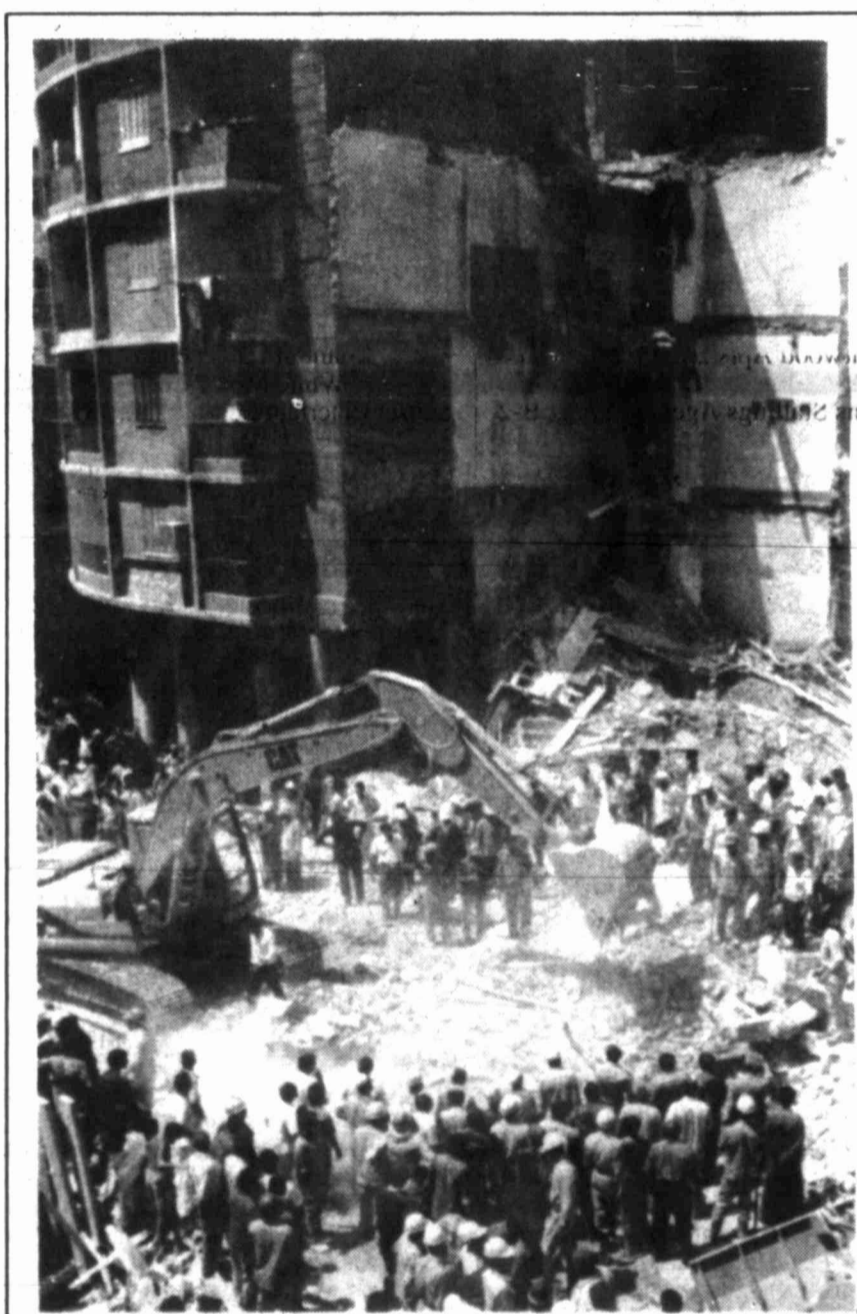

In Munich, Germany, dozens of people also were taken hostage at the Turkish consulate by a group of armed men. In Marseille, France, four Kurds claiming to have bombs surrendered after holding 10 people hostage for about three hours in the Turkish consulate.

The attackers also hit Turkish-owned banks and travel offices in Frankfurt, Berlin, Hamburg, Bremen and Cologne and elsewhere across western Europe shortly after opening times. Attackers broke windows and smashed furniture.

In Ankara, the Turkish government demanded the attackers be captured and sent to Turkey for prosecution.

Some major attacks were staged: —In Switzerland, where eight people including a policeman were wounded in a shootout between Kurdish demonstrators and Turkish Embassy officials as about 50 Kurds tried to storm the embassy in Bern, police said. A passer-by was slightly injured in Zurich, where Kurds attacked a Turkish travel agency and a bank. —In Lyon, France, Turkish Consul General Erdal Gurul said attackers broke consulate windows and yelled slogans of the separatist party PKK, the Kurdish Workers' Party, which is banned in Turkey as a terrorist group. —In Stockholm, Sweden, police said the Turkish tourist office was attacked by five unidentified men but no one was injured. —In Copenhagen, Denmark, police said attackers smashed windows at the Turkish Airlines office.

Alcohol ban leaves change in hands of the community

The Big Spring City Council recently approved a ban on alcohol at Moss Creek Lake except by permit. A similar ban is in effect at Comanche Trail Park.

This action was taken in response to problems with late-night revelers disturbing homeowners.

As usual, the many pay for the actions of a few. But, those actions can not be tolerated.

This permit should give police a few more teeth to enforce the law and catch the problem people.

What we have to remember is the vandalism caused by these people - whether its drawing in the bathrooms at the park or cut fences and locks - costs us, the taxpayer.

This is city owned property, for use by the people of this city. A few would like to destroy that for all of us.

But, as long as we tolerate the vandalism, the drunken behavior, we will have to pay - in new laws and with money.

While this ban has been put into place to protect the welfare of people living near the lake and those using the lake properly, we, as a community, have a decision to make.

We have to decide if we want to continue to deal with the litter in our lakes, the graffiti on our public and private buildings and the destruction of property. As a community, we can say no and help to put a stop to this.

A matter of random thinking

Random thoughts while dreaming of Chinese food:

A few weeks ago, I posed a question asking the worth of mosquitoes, insects I believe to be absolutely, positively, without a doubt useless.

A faithful reader called up to let me know that mosquitoes, irritating pests that they are, do serve the purpose of being part of the food chain.

In other words, their main contribution to the world in general is being frog food.

Well, I'm sorry, but if the only good thing you can say about mosquitoes is that they eventually end up in the belly of a larger animal, I'll still give them a thumbs down.

Cold and cruel, that's me.

You'd think I'd learn. Desperate for column material, I asked one of my colleagues (who shall remain anonymous for protection against possible libel proceedings) for suggestions.

The colleague, with a more or less straight face, said I should write about "the basic injustice of life," among other things.

Just the perfect topic to discuss in a few paragraphs, don't you think?

Well, since I can't think of anything better to write about, here goes.

Some of the basic injustices of life, as recounted by Uncle Stevie: Computers are too expensive.

My Friend Mike hit the road the other day, heading on to bigger and hopefully better things.

My Friend Mike went by the more formal title of Mike Butts, sports editor of the Herald, and he resigned here last week to take another sportswriting job in this area.

If you saw My Friend Mike around town, you'd probably swear that a Q-Tip™ had grown about six feet and sprouted glasses. To say he was skinny would be like saying I have a mild interest in baseball - a total understatement, in other words.

Physical appearances aside, My Friend Mike did have a talent for sportswriting. He was darned good at it, as a matter of fact. When his muses were clicking, he could make an August football scrimmage sound as exciting as the seventh game of the World Series.

On a mean and rainy night during the playoffs - this was a game against the New York Knicks - Louise Harbach of Freeport, Ill., approached the Stadium with her husband, their nephew, and their son. They go as a family to three or four games a year, Mrs. Harbach said.

"My nephew saw something in the gutter, and he knelt to pick it up," Mrs. Harbach said. "We could hardly believe it - it was a ticket, a valid ticket, for that night's game."

The ticket was for standing room - that area at the very top of the highest balcony. This was the same kind of ticket that Mrs. Harbach and her family had.

"I felt terrible for whoever had lost the ticket," she said. "It's so difficult to get tickets to see the Bulls play, and especially in big playoff games. We went to a police officer and asked him if anyone had reported losing a ticket. He said no one had. We really wanted to give it back."

The rain was coming hard, and game time was approaching, and the Harbach family had this unexpected, precious extra ticket.

Mrs. Harbach's son - Scott Harbach, 34, a security consultant - spotted a young boy hovering near an entrance to the Stadium.

"You see these children from the neighborhood all the time," he said. "Some of them are so little, and they stand there begging spare change. All the wealthy people who come to the basketball games, and these kids from the neighborhood have nothing."

I already gave at the riot

If it were up to Monica Grayless, a schoolteacher, there would have been no mass rally in downtown Chicago to celebrate the Bulls' championship.

Instead, there would be only candlelight vigil to mourn those who died or were injured during the post-game disturbances, and to protest the violence.

"I have been a teacher for 25 years and I'm just shocked that there is a rally," Ms. Grayless said.

"This rally is a reward for the violence. So many of these people looting were teen-agers. Having a celebration reinforces that bad behavior."

"If there is going to be any kind of ceremony, there should be a candlelight vigil..."

While I respect Ms. Grayless for having so sensitive a social conscience, I don't share her distress and sorrow, and I'm not about to light any candles.

Yes, there was some looting, rioting, violence and the usual post-championship carnage. And it is possible that two or three people died as a result of it, although that isn't a certainty.

But consider the numbers. Chicago is the heart of a metropolitan area of about 7 million people.

Out of that 7 million, about 700 were arrested. That's not one percent. It's not even one-tenth of one percent. It's about one-tenth of one-tenth of one percent. Or something like that.

It amounts to one person out of every 70,000 being pinched.

Mike Royko

So for every goofball who got himself or herself or itself arrested, 69,999 didn't.

Actually, the post-victory disturbances probably reduced the normal crime rate in Chicago.

There were so many cops on duty and visible that the gangbangers, muggers, head-busters, porch-climbers and window-crawlers were unable to engage in their usual hot summer night activities.

Instead of robbing, raping and pillaging, they were diverted by the Bulls' victory and the massive show of force, and most were unable to do anything more malicious than bust a few store windows and toss objects at the cops.

Who knows how many more serious crimes were prevented by channeling these idiotic instincts into old-fashioned street disturbances?

Maybe we should have riots every Friday, Saturday and Sunday night. It might be a safer city. At least we will know where the boos are. Better that they should be leaping about in the streets than slinking down your gangway or lurking in your hallway.

Nor is there any reason for collective civic guilt, as a West Coast radio person suggested to me.

"Do Chicagoans feel embarrassment because of the disturbances?" he asked. Since we weren't on the air, I told him that was a crock of something or other, and hung up.

Why should anyone who did not commit a crime feel guilty because of what a relatively small number of morons did?

On any Monday morning, I can check out the weekend crime statistics: several murders, numerous rapes and robberies, a few hi-and-runs and the usual number of pea-brained parents dropping their kids out of a window or into a pot of soup.

Should I feel guilty? Should you? Of course not, because we don't spend our leisure time murdering, robbing, raping, drive-by shooting or treating our own kids like lab rats.

So there is no reason for anyone except the guilty to feel guilty about Sunday night's outbursts of madness.

Especially since the guilty feel no guilt. If you ask some yahoo who looted a store, took a shot at a cop, or tossed a brick or a bottle, if he regretted his behavior, he would look at you like you are a nut. Regret? To do anything less than loot or shoot or loot would not be manly. He would get sneers from his peers.

To expand on the old Western movie line - a man's got to do what a man's got to do, even if it's really stupid.

If I have any criticism of the modern tradition of celebration by riot, it would be directed at the methods used by the police.

Their approach is to contain and limit the rioting with a huge show of force. They don't want to shoot people or crack their skulls because that would be insensitive, disrespectful and the ACLU would sue to protect the right of an individual to window shop by walking through the window.

And I agree with this approach. Killing rioters just causes hard feelings.

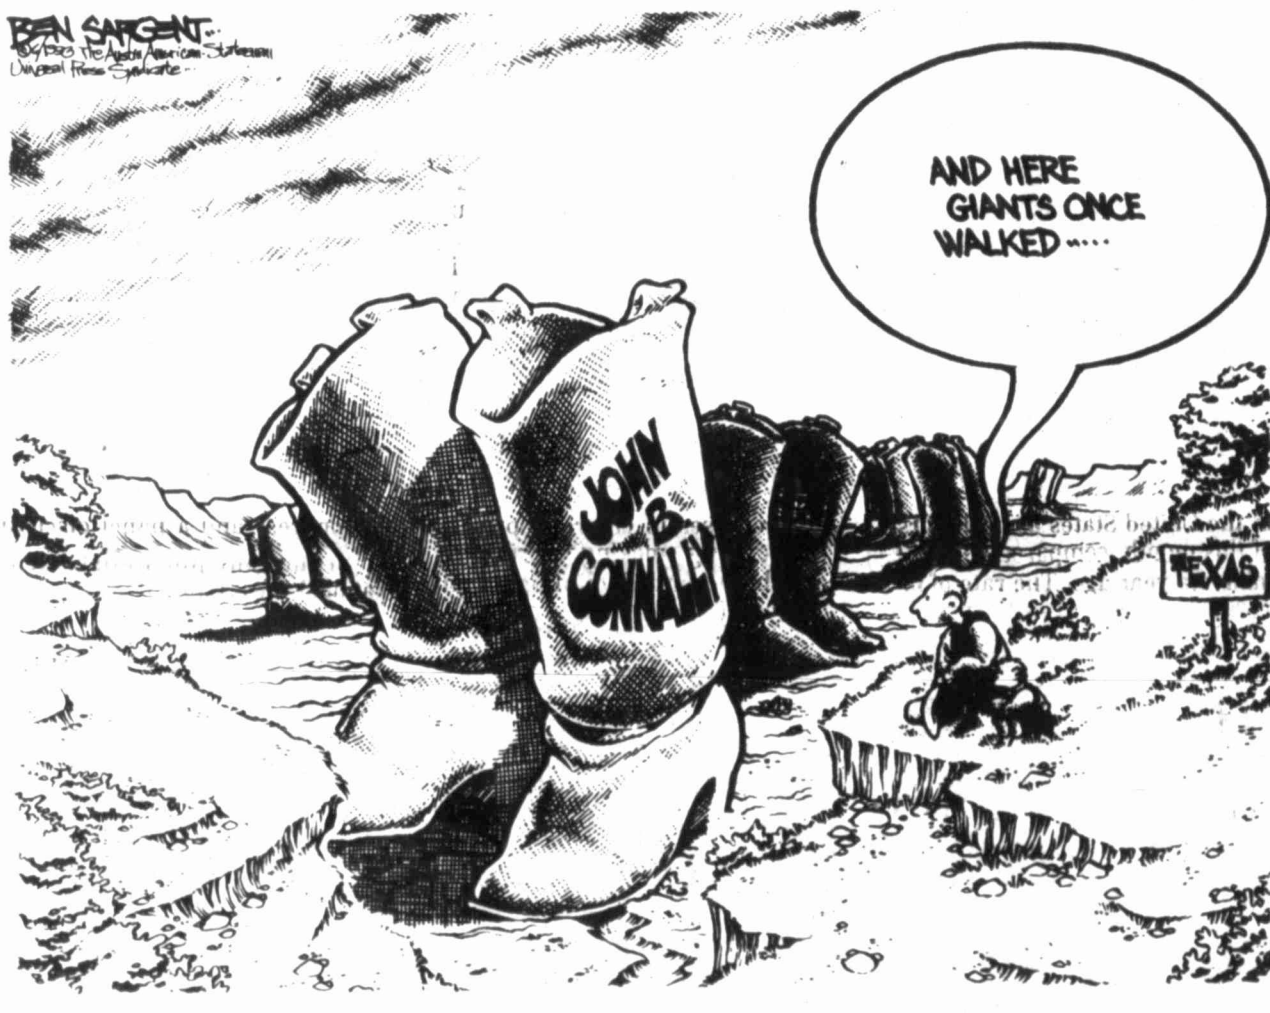

But I'm sure we could borrow a few helicopters from the military. And I'm also sure that there is some sort of non-lethal gas that could be sprayed on the looters from above. Something that would knock them out but do no permanent harm.

Then, when they had all swooned and collapsed, the police could move in and strip them of their earrings, watches, pinky rings, sports team jackets, Air Jordan shoes, firearms, the contents of their wallets and any other valuables in their pockets.

These assets could then be turned back to the city treasury to help cover the cost of maintaining order. Sort of an on-the-spot riot tax.

It would turn civil disorder into a virtue. Even the mischief-makers might find that they like it. Later, if they were asked to contribute to a charity, they could honestly say:

"Sorry, but I already gave at the riot." (C) 1993 By The Chicago Tribune

The night the boy went inside

It was a championship basketball season of many indelible moments at the Chicago Stadium. But for all the thrilling victories, for all the on-court heroics by the Chicago Bulls, I believe the memory I will take with me this year is one that never warranted a headline.

On a mean and rainy night during the playoffs - this was a game against the New York Knicks - Louise Harbach of Freeport, Ill., approached the Stadium with her husband, their nephew, and their son. They go as a family to three or four games a year, Mrs. Harbach said.

"My nephew saw something in the gutter, and he knelt to pick it up," Mrs. Harbach said. "We could hardly believe it - it was a ticket, a valid ticket, for that night's game."

The ticket was for standing room - that area at the very top of the highest balcony. This was the same kind of ticket that Mrs. Harbach and her family had.

"I felt terrible for whoever had lost the ticket," she said. "It's so difficult to get tickets to see the Bulls play, and especially in big playoff games. We went to a police officer and asked him if anyone had reported losing a ticket. He said no one had. We really wanted to give it back."

The rain was coming hard, and game time was approaching, and the Harbach family had this unexpected, precious extra ticket.

Mrs. Harbach's son - Scott Harbach, 34, a security consultant - spotted a young boy hovering near an entrance to the Stadium.

"You see these children from the neighborhood all the time," he said. "Some of them are so little, and they stand there begging spare change. All the wealthy people who come to the basketball games, and these kids from the neighborhood have nothing."

Bob Greene

He's right. Sometimes it's shocking to see children as young as 5 years old standing alone on the sidewalk, hoping someone will give them a quarter or a dollar. The Stadium is located in one of the most economically depressed areas of Chicago. The children, many of them residents of public housing projects, watch the ticketholders come and go on game nights, and in the quietest of voices ask for handouts.

"My mother said she had seen this one little boy before," Scott Harbach said. "She said she had noticed him standing there at other games."

So on this rainy night Scott Harbach approached the child.

"Would you like to go to the game with us?" Harbach said.

He said the boy looked at him disbelievingly. To the boy, the Stadium was only the exterior of an old building, and crowds on a sidewalk, and cars left in a parking lot. The wonders that went on inside the walls were something he knew he would never see.

"Would you like to see the Bulls play?" Harbach said.

"Sure!" the boy said, still not trusting what he was hearing.

According to Harbach, the boy's name was Frederick. He said he lived a block from the Stadium, and that he was in third grade. He was 8 years old. He said that his mother knew he was hanging around outside the Stadium.

"We walked up the stairs, and his eyes were so full of life," Harbach said. "Think about it - he lives so close to the Stadium, he knows everything about the Bulls, yet he had accepted the idea that he would never get to go inside."

They reached the top balcony. "We asked him if he was hungry, and he said yes, and we bought him a pretzel and a Coke," Harbach said. "He stood with us, and when it was time for the starting lineups, he knew every player."

"They were passing out towels or something as a promotion, and Frederick got one, and he was waving it around in the air the whole game, and laughing, and cheering for the Bulls. Way down below us there was Scottie Pippen and Horace Grant, and there was Michael Jordan, and Frederick was looking at the Bulls like he couldn't believe this wasn't a dream."

Harbach said that Frederick yelled for the team during the whole game, and chewed nervously on the towel at tense moments, and laughed aloud when the team made spectacular plays. "We kept looking at each other when the Bulls did well," Harbach said. "It was so loud that we couldn't talk much, because you couldn't hear."

"At the end of the game, he just left, all by himself. This little kid. I think about him a lot. I don't know whether this will make any difference in his life. Probably it won't."

"But maybe it's a night that will stick with him. The night he went into the Stadium instead of standing outside. The night he went inside and saw Jordan and Pippen and all of them, the greatest basketball team in the world. And there was Frederick, cheering his heart out, cheering them on. Cheering his team."

Police TIPS

No typical type of vandal

In 455 A.D. the Vandals, a Germanic tribe, decided to overrun Rome and generally terrorize the Roman Empire. Apparently they did a pretty good job because today the word vandal had come to mean one who maliciously destroys property. Vandalism covers a broad range of crimes, including: breaking windows; painting on walls (graffiti); stealing or defacing street signs; slashing tires; knocking over mail boxes; and even littering. In Texas, these crimes are known as criminal mischief. It is estimated that the annual cost of vandalism in the United States is $5 billion. The cost to schools alone reaches $200 million.

There is no typical vandal. However, many of them will be young people. Usually the vandal will be a male, but females are becoming more involved in acts of vandalism. They may be in fourth grade or in high school. They may come from the richest or the poorest families. Many times the vandals will be in groups as they destroy property, or it may be an individual on their own. Most will destroy property for one of three reasons: boredom, anger or revenge.

Many of these vandals don't see their act as criminal since they didn't hurt anybody. But the victim of the vandalism does feel anger, fear and outrage when their property is deliberately destroyed. There are enormous costs involved in property repair and replacement. Sentimental items may be gone for good. Insurance rates can increase due to vandalism. Even with public property there is inconvenience that affects everyone from jammed public phones, closed restrooms, missing road signs and broken street lights.

Vandalism can be prevented. Begin with your own young children. Teach them to respect other people's property, that they do not deface or take what is not theirs. Show them how to deal with anger in a way that does not harm people or property. Care for your own neighborhood by keeping it cleaned up. It sends a message that this is a solid, clean neighborhood. This is a part of successful crime resistance. Clean up vandalism as soon as it occurs. Paint over graffiti and clean up damaged property. If you see vandalism occurring, report it to the police. There is no such thing as victimless crimes. When people are victimized by vandalism, it is as serious as other crimes. Vandalism does have costs.

Sotello's May victory makes him first Hispanic on council

MONA ESPARZA
Herald Esparza

STANTON - Before 10 p.m., all ballots had been tabulated and Valentin Sotello was declared the official winner in the May 1 Stanton City Council election.

Sotello, the first Hispanic ever to be chosen for a seat on Stanton's council, upset incumbent James Johnson, on May 1.

After much persuasion by friends and neighbors, Sotello decided to take his chances and run for the council, simply because Hispanics were not being represented.

"The main reason that I ran was because I wanted to see equal representation on the council," Sotello said. "And for as long as I can remember, a Hispanic has not been elected."

Last year, Sotello gave his competitor a scare, competing closely as a "write-in." He fell short of winning by only 17 votes.

After having such success without any effort, Sotello gave the election some thought, and at the last minute, officially announced his candidacy.

"During my campaign, I didn't ever have any official campaign promises," Sotello said. "But I did promise to work hard and to listen to the people."

Sotello also pledged to do his job to the best of his ability, and to be the best council member he could be.

During his campaign, several negative remarks were reportedly made concerning the Catholic Church, and its nationally-recognized organization for laymen, the Knights of Columbus. Sotello presides over the Stanton chapter for the Knights of Columbus.

"I really don't feel bad about the negative campaigning that was occurring. I knew that if the people wanted me to win, I would," Sotello said. "I hold no grudges against those showing opposition to my beliefs."

As the end of his campaign neared,

Sotello began to gain support from people of all backgrounds, and the community became involved in his campaign.

Sotello believes the support he gained throughout those last few months, was a direct response to his ability to get along with people.

"I feel that I get along with everyone. Knowing the people and being able to talk to them had a lot to do with the outcome of this election," he said.

Sotello believes his election as the first Hispanic council member, will have an impact on the Hispanics community.

"I think that our city council will have a Hispanic representative from now on," Sotello said. "And hopefully, we will have more representation on the commissioners court, as well."

With Sotello as a role model, Hispanics in Stanton may begin to see many doors opened to them, and take advantage of the opportunities afforded them.

Horticultural exports up from last year

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON D.C. — Exports of U.S. horticultural products totaled $615 million in March, slightly more than 1 percent above the same month last year.

The largest increases were in such products as beer, canned vegetables, fruit and vegetable juices and tree nuts, said a report this month by the Foreign Agricultural Service.

Declines were seen mainly in fresh fruit, both citrus and non-citrus.

Japanese imports of horticultural products increased 5 percent in 1992 in terms of dollars, to $5.01 billion, the report said. "The U.S. product showing the largest increase in exports was cherries, valued at $83 million in 1992, up 80 percent over $45 million in 1991," it said.

During the first half of fiscal 1993, the total value of U.S. horticultural exports was $3.5 billion, 2 percent above the same period last year.

Production of fresh strawberries in the United States in 1992 totaled 595,110 metric tons valued at $685 million, the report said, down 4 percent in volume but up 8 percent in value, from the record-setting year of 1991.

Most of the decrease in production was due to a smaller crop in California, which accounts for 78 percent of the U.S. crop.

Exports of fresh U.S. strawberries in 1992 totaled 46,386 metric tons, up 7 percent from 1991.

Canada was the largest U.S. market, accounting for 77 percent of total fresh strawberry shipments.

U.S. laying flocks produced 17.9 billion eggs during the March-May quarter, up 1 percent from the corresponding quarter a year ago.

Egg production totaled 6 billion during May 1993, up 1 percent from a year ago, according to the National Agricultural Statistics Service.

There were 280 million layers in the United States as of the first of this month, compared with 276 million a year ago. The rate of lay per day averaged 69.1 eggs per 100 layers, compared with 68.6

for June 1992.

U.S. tobacco production is expected to fall about 5 percent in the 1993-94 crop year from the previous season's 1.72 billion pounds, says the Agriculture Department.

"Despite higher price supports, 1993-94 auction prices may show only a slight increase from last season because of greater use of imported leaf in manufacturing cigarettes and large world supplies of leaf," said the summary of a report this month by USDA's Economic Research Service.

U.S. tobacco exports may decline in 1993-94, it said, "but the amount of decline will be cushioned by the shift to American blended cigarettes in a number of countries."

The report stated that during 1992-93, Americans will smoke fewer cigarettes than the year earlier but said higher cigarette exports will more than offset lower domestic consumption.

Increases in cigarette prices, accelerating smoking restrictions and bans, and declining social acceptability are reducing domestic sales," it noted.

SHS student attending national conference Monica Garza selected to participate in Washington D.C. program

Special to the Herald

STANTON - Monica Garza, a Stanton High School student, has been selected to attend The National Young Leaders Conference June 22-27, in Washington, D.C.

The conference is a leadership development program for outstanding high school students, demonstrating leadership potential and scholastic merit. Garza will be among 350 attending.

The theme is "The Leaders of Tomorrow Meeting the Leaders of Today." Throughout the six-day conference, Garza will interact with key leaders and newsmakers from the three branches of government, the media and the diplomatic corps.

Highlights of the program include welcoming remarks from a member of Congress and a panel discussion by prominent journalists at the National Press Club.

Students will visit foreign embassies and receive policy briefings from senior government officials.

Garza will meet with Texas Congressman or their staff to discuss important issues facing Stanton and the nation.

Garza will also participate in learning activities designed to enhance students' leadership skills.

In "If I were President," students role-play the president and members of his cabinet, responding to an international crisis.

Culminating the conference is mock congress on national service, a half-day activity in which scholars assume the roles of representatives and senators by debating, building coalitions, and voting on proposed youth service legislation.

The conference is sponsored by the Congressional Youth Leadership Council, a non-profit, non-partisan educational organization. Founded in 1985, the Council is committed to "fostering and inspiring young people to achieve their full leadership potential." Over 300 members of the United States Congress join this commitment to youth leadership development as members of the Council's Honorary Congressional Board of Advisors.

"I firmly believe that by touching one life, the National Young Leaders Conference enriches thousands more," said John Hines, council's executive director. "Scholars return to their schools and communities better equipped to meet the challenges they face as young leaders now and in the 21st century."

Storms aid crop growth

The Associated Press

COLLEGE STATION — Scattered thunderstorms in the eastern two-thirds of Texas will continue helping crops but will delay harvests, according to the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"High pressure over the southeastern United States will continue pushing moist air into Texas," said Jon Zeiler, meteorologist at the Southwest Agricultural Weather Service in College Station. "It generates southerly winds causing a clockwise motion that pulls up moisture from the Gulf of Mexico."

Although the sky this week will be cloudy in the mornings and partially cloudy in the afternoons, the best chance for rain will be on Friday, Zeiler said.

Isolated areas in the lower Rio Grande Valley and coastal regions may get over 2 inches of rain, but most areas will receive between one-quarter and one-half inch, he said. Little or no rain is forecast for the Panhandle and Trans-Pecos regions.

Afternoon temperatures will be in the low to mid-90s with morning lows in the upper 60s and low 70s.

Council takes no action on reinstatement request

By PATRICK DRISCOLL Staff Writer

STANTON - A letter from fired Stanton police officer Dwain Dempsey, asking for reinstatement, was read to the Stanton City Council and no action taken.

"Not much" discussion followed either, said City Administrator Danny Fryar. The council met two weeks ago.

The reinstatement issue was put on the agenda by newly elected Councilman Valentino Sotello, who received the letter from Dempsey following the May council election. The letter, Dempsey's second request for reinstatement, also congratulated Sotello on his victory.

Sotello replaced former councilman James Johnson, who in January voted against Dempsey's reinstatement in a 3-2 vote. He was fired by Police Chief Mike Adams for not attending an AIDS education conference at the Stanton Community Center. Dempsey said he understood his participation optional but Adams said that wasn't so.

Other council business: It was agreed new Water and Sewer Superintendent Cecil Townley will be paid $18,553 a year, down from $25,000 salary for the previous superintendent. That's $8.92 an hour, up from $8 an hour Townley made as a city crewman. Wage for the crewman hired to replace Townley was set at $7 an hour.

Amended the franchise tax agreement with TU Electric, increasing the city's share from 3 percent to 4 percent. That'll bring in an extra $6,000 to $10,000 a year. In exchange, the city must pay legal expenses in any rate case fight it joins.

Don Morris leased 13,060 square feet, at 6 cents a square foot, at the airport to build a hanger. He'll be required to pour a concrete slab and have a reclaim pen.

A park tree spraying bid was awarded to R&J Spraying of Stanton. For $1,250, trees will be sprayed at least three times between June and September and more if needed.

Airport mowing was awarded to I.C. Wheeler of Stanton. For $450 a month, grass will be mowed at least three times.

JAN TRAMMEL

DQ manager scoops third place

By CONNIE SWINNEY Staff Writer

COAHOMA - Coahoma resident Jan Trammel has put the "fun" back into preparing ice cream cones.

The Coahoma Dairy Queen manager, working there since January, advanced to the state level during the "Richeson Ice Cream Rally" in June, a first-time event.

From a field of 500 contestants, Trammel was honored with an "award-winning performance" because of her ability to prepare items like banana splits, sundaes, cones and other soft-serve dessert products.

"We participated in three events and were judged on speed, accuracy of weight and appearance of the product," said Trammel, who has worked for the company for about 10 years.

"International Dairy Queen" judges inspected the products. The two-day rally began with a parade of participants and company executives, bearing the official torch on June 9 in Graham.

Participants were also treated to a dinner on the Richeson's Rimrock Ranch.

Trammel advanced to the division level and won a third place and at the state level she was placed in the top 10.

"This is going to be an annual event," she added. "I want to win it next year."

To be invited to the Rally, contestants were required to win at their store level as well as a top spot in their division, advancing them to the state level.

Trammel said her preparation for the event was assisted by Paula Kimmel, a district manager in Snyder.

"A lot of people will come in and say, 'Gimme a cone,' and not realize what it takes to make it right," she said. "In each store, employees became certified in making (ice cream items)."

Trammel, a West Texas native, admits making the ice cream items can be the most rewarding part of her job.

"It's probably the funnest thing to make at Dairy Queen," she said. "It makes you feel proud to make the products, trying to get them as nice and even as possible."

Jacqueline Bigar - Horoscope

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, JUNE 25

ARIES (March 21-April 19): As you breeze through your work quickly today, listen to your inner feelings about someone in charge. A partnership is greatly enhanced by your positive energy, allowing you to move from one point to another with ease. Tonight: Get some physical exercise.***
TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be more creative about a key venture, making sure to check out a rumor before you act on it. You'll discover a surprise lurking. Associates, friends and a loved one all want time with you. Enjoy the fussing. Tonight: Do the Friday thing.***
GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Settle down and you'll have a great time. A partner lets you know how much you are cared for, although the information comes in an off-the-wall way. Be direct in a money matter. Tonight: Make the party at your place.***
CANCER (June 21-July 22): Use the telephone to help clear up a mound of paperwork. You'll quickly accomplish a lot while staying in touch with what's happening around you. Take time to catch up on gossip - you'll be amazed at what you've been missing! Tonight: Why, you flirt!***
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You might be the biggest spender of the zodiac today. Be smart in closing a business deal or checking out an investment. Your ingenuity comes in handy when it's left to you to eliminate a last-minute problem. Remain confident. Tonight: Overdoing it again!***
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your confidence helps you zero in on what you want and then make it happen. Watch a tendency to be too attentive to a loved one. The more space you give, the more contentment you'll see. Tonight: Have a revealing talk over dinner.***
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Catch your breath and make some important decisions. You'll gain insight into what motivates another, and the result will be a messy situation solved in a new and unexpected way. In the end, you'll feel exhilarated. Tonight: Be with a favorite person.***
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Friendship plays a major role in your day. Make time for an important social function that could help you professionally. Be ready to extend your horizons and live your life more freely. Go with unexpected news. Tonight: Zero in on what is important.***
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Realize how much your image means to you. A money-making venture looks solid; this might be time to jump in on the project. Tonight: Make your appearance on the scene.***
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): If you are willing to take a bold new step, new vistas will appear. Use your flexibility to handle a sticky situation in a positive way. Your intellectual side comes to the rescue as you are asked to take off with hardly a moment's notice. Tonight: Room.***
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Another demonstrates how much you are cared for. Listen to your instincts about a key partnership or relationship. Open up. Money matters can be delayed because of a career decision. Tonight: Be with a favorite person.***
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): As many others seek you out, you begin to feel pushed around. Look at your new popularity in a positive light. Note all your options. You get surprising but good news. Tonight: All these choices!***
IF JUNE 25 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Relationships will strengthen this year if you acknowledge how important they are to you. From now to winter, home life will be the focus. Don't be surprised if the size of your household increases - and that can mean either another person or a bigger, better home. When dealing financially, be sure it's with a trustworthy type. Build plenty of downtime into this year's busy schedule. Romance will intensify in the winter. Hold on tight. VIRGO anchors you.
THE ASTERISKS (*) SHOW THE KIND OF DAY YOU'LL HAVE: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult.

Dear Abby - Letters...

Gifts won't buy children's love

DEAR ABBY: In regard to the jealous woman whose boyfriend sent his 6-year-old a dozen roses, you wrote: "Children of divorced parents are often the beneficiaries of extravagant gifts from fathers who feel guilty because they can't be full-time daddies to their children." Red flag, Abby! Mothers do this, too! My husband's three small children live with us and visit their mother twice a month. It's a dreaded weekend because without fail, these kids come home with new toys, new clothes, money, etc. It's amazing to what lengths this woman will go to buy these children's love. You're right, Abby - guilt is the motivating factor. Unfortunately, it is detrimental for the children, as it teaches them greed and selfishness. Also, the children want to know why Daddy doesn't buy them anything. (He can't afford to because of the alimony he must pay his ex-wife.) I hope these children will understand what is going on later in life, and not base their love on how much someone buys for them. - IT'S HAPPENING IN SACRAMENTO

DEAR HAPPENING: Most children are materialistic; what kids don't like gifts and clothes and money? And later on - a car for their 16th birthday? But kids grow up to be thinking adults, and where there is no real love - only "things" - they will eventually feel the emptiness.

DEAR ABBY: You have championed many causes for the physically challenged, and I thank you for all you have done. Now, will you please do us one more favor? Please advise waiters, waitresses, flight attendants, and everyone else who serves the public, of the following:

Because a person happens to be in a wheelchair with leg braces - or appears to be partially paralyzed due to polio, cerebral palsy, a stroke or some unknown cause - please do not assume that he or she can neither think nor speak. I was badly clobbered by polio many years ago, but have been rehabilitated greatly, thanks to physical therapy, my own determination and a lot of hard work. However, I am in a wheelchair and somewhat physically impaired. When I am in a restaurant (or on a plane) and food orders are being taken, please speak directly to me. Do not turn to my companion and ask, "And what will SHE have?" - CAN COMMUNICATE IN MARIETTA, OHIO

DEAR CAN COMMUNICATE: Thank you for an important message. Some people need to be reminded.

DEAR ABBY: Speaking of funny names: I laughed like crazy when I was introduced to Doug Casebeer. I thought, "He's probably a liquor or beer salesman." (He wasn't.) Little did I know when I laughed at his name that it would be mine one day.

We have received mail addressed to Casber, Casper, Casbeek, Casbeep, Casbeeb and Casebeery. My all-time favorite is Kay Spear. - KRISTIN CASEBEER, PUEBLO, COLO.

Cecil Cooper

Cecil L. Cooper, 75, Big Spring, died Wednesday, June 23, 1993, at his home.

Services will be 2 p.m. Friday, at First Church of Nazarene with the Rev. Gary Smith, pastor, officiating. Burial will be in Trinity Memorial Park under the direction of Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home.

Mr. Cooper was born Dec. 14, 1917, in Pauls Valley, Okla. He married Betty Jean Lovvorn on Oct. 25, 1948, in San Angelo. He came to Big Spring in 1947 and worked as a barber until retiring in 1990. He served six years in the US Navy, and in the South Pacific during World War II. He was a longtime member of First Church of the Nazarene.

Survivors include his wife, Jean Cooper, Big Spring; four daughters: Cecilia Ward, Teresa Welch, Vanessa Burchett, all of Big Spring, and Melissa Decker, Austin; one sister, Thelma Herring, Los Alamos, N.M.; one brother, Maynor Cooper, Georgetown; 11 grandchildren and a number of nieces and nephews.

Air race competitors learn to shave times

The Associated Press

CORPUS CHRISTI — Esther Grupenhagen never leaves the ground without a can of Pledge. The long-time air race competitor uses it to rid her 1960 Cessna 310 wings of bugs and dirt.

But the polishing is more for speed than aesthetics, Grupenhagen said. The polishing helps to shave precious fractions of seconds in flight time. A moments that can make the difference between a first- or second-place finish in a race. "I want the wind to hit the leading edge of the wing so that it will give me better lift. I'll polish the leading edges at every stop I make," she said.

Grupenhagen is one of 100 pilots in the 1993 Air Race Classic, a cross country all-women race that began at the Corpus Christi International Airport Tuesday.

The 2,532-mile race, in its 17th year, ends in North Kingstown, R.I. The winning pilot and co-pilot receive a prize of $5,000.

Grupenhagen, a two-time winner of the Air Race Classic, learned long ago how to maximize her time, both on the air and in the ground. She used a 3-hour weather delay Tuesday morning for polishing and checking her plane's gas caps, landing gear and tires.

"This is not like a car. You can't pull up to the side of the sky and check your plane if something goes wrong," said Grupenhagen, a 54-year-old American Eagle pilot from Arroyo Grande, Calif. "Problems can be avoided if you do proper pre-flight checks."

In addition to the usual preparations, Corpus Christi pilot Barbara Lewis, who is co-piloting a Cessna 172N, said she wears the same clothes throughout the four-day competition.

"The first thing you hit when you get to your final destination is the shower and a change of clothes," Lewis said.

The timing was good because later that day news was out that the body of an unidentified man matching Culver's description was found in a bar best, they're great Americans, they've done well, they've succeeded, they should participate in sharing the burden," said Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine.

Similar criticism came from administration officials.

"They have ridden to the rescue of the wealthy Americans in the country, and sacrifice the middle class in the process," Panetta said Wednesday.

According to the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office, more than three-fourths of the bill's tax burden would hit Americans earning more than $200,000 annually.

The legislation's major impact on the middle class would come from its 4.3 cents-per-gallon increase in the tax on gasoline and other motor fuels. Families earning between $50,000 and $75,000 a year would see their federal taxes rise by an average $216 a year, the budget office said.

But Republicans said that increase clashed with Clinton's campaign promise last year to cut taxes on the middle class. They contrasted that with his early moves to ease restrictions against gays in the military.

"While he's kept his commitment to the extreme left of his party, he's broken that promise to the working men and women of America," said Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas.

Firing back was Sen. Bob Kerrey, D-Nebr., who took aim at some expensive federal projects under way in Texas.

"I've heard a lot of people stand on this floor of the Senate saying, 'We've got to cut spending,'" Kerrey said. "But I'll guarantee you they'll be down here in spades saying, 'Don't cut the space station, don't cut the superconducting super-collider, don't cut something that is in my state.'"

Besides tax increases, the Democratic measure contained $98 billion in cuts in Medicare and other expensive benefit programs. It also would

Sick or well, your choice

The exciting new emphasis on preventive medicine is complicated by the fact that not all men or women are created equal.

We don't have the same fingerprints, the same pulse rate, the same genetic predispositions, the same IQ.

And one thing more: Your ailment may very well be cured by ground-up unicorn horn — if you believe it will.

Since its beginning the practice of medicine has been complicated by the "placebo effect."

A sugar pill may be altogether as effective as the latest antibiotic — if you believe in it.

Norman Cousins and many before and since have demonstrated that the mere power of suggestion coming from an authority figure (anybody in a white coat) may lower or raise your blood pressure, slow or accelerate your pulse rate, make you sicker or make you well.

A new book called "The Healing Brain" affirms that Grandma Clappett of the "Beverly Hillbillies" might very well have remedied human ills with her "owl's egg poultice" if her own confidence was imparted to the patient.

Dr. Arthur Shapiro of the Albert Einstein College of Medicine, New York, recalled that "mandrake root" was used by the ancients of Babylonia.

The "laying on of hands" demonstrated a degree of effectiveness hundreds of years before Christ.

Very often you can think yourself well — or sick. It's your choice.

The Mayo Clinic teaches its medical staff that the doctor's first contact with a new patient should involve "listening, then examining, then reassuring."

Dr. David Sobel, co-author of "The Healing Brain," cites studies showing that "doctors, on average, spend less than 18 seconds listening to a patient talk about 'where it hurts' before interrupting. Then, when treatment is prescribed, the emphasis is most always on technology or drugs."

He seeks to teach doctors that "some of the most powerful prescriptions are those filled in the natural pharmacy of the human brain." Most often the patient will improve — or not — according to his expectations.

It was agonizing for medical technologists to accept osteopathy and chiropractic as potentially beneficial.

It took a shotgun wedding to convince medical schools to include nutrition in the curriculum.

Now to accept the "placebo effect" implies acceptance of jungle rituals, folk remedies, religion-related healing, hypnotism and voodoo.

The holistic practice of medicine is "part magic."

Our body's intrinsic healing mechanisms can be triggered by a pill, a medicine man's incantations or a scalpel.

The University of Kansas Medical Center, daring to question the necessity of tying off a mammary artery to relieve chest pain, performed two series of operations.

In half of them the mammary artery was tied off. In the other half an incision was made but the artery was not touched.

Results in both groups were identical.

Fido, Fluffy need attention for health

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

Where to go for pet advice, help

For information about your pet's health, consult with a local veterinarian. Some are listed below:

- Highland Animal Hospital, 3600 Hwy. 87, 267-8291.
- Bobby Lawdermilk, College Park Shopping Center, 267-6285.
- Sierra Animal Clinic, E. I-20, 263-1198.
- Western Hills Animal Clinic, 1701 W. 4th, 267-5721.
- Joe K. Neff, Snyder Hwy., 263-6600.

Much like people, the basics in life to keep pets healthy and happy are food, water, exercise and love, two local animal doctors said.

Local veterinarian Scott Burt said pet owners are faced with a barrage of food choices, name brand as well as generic, in the pet food market.

"Pet food (is meeting) more of the nutritional needs of animals," he said. "The more expensive the food, the better."

Cheaper products may state they have "complete nutrition," but may not provide nutrients pets can use.

"(The food) may not be in a form the animal can absorb," he said. "Even though leather is protein, if you were to eat it, the body would not be able to absorb it."

In the last few years, the pet food industry has expanded its products, in an effort to enhance animal nutrition at different stages in pet life.

No longer do puppies or kittens eat the same food as adult dogs that, in turn, do not eat the same as older dogs.

"You used to buy just dog (or other animal) food," Burt said. "Now, there are geriatric foods for older dogs (and) low-calorie food for overweight dogs."

Main causes of obesity in pets are high-calorie diets as well as little or no exercise.

"Just like people, if animals get too many extra calories, they put on weight," he said. "If you feed your pets too much, they'll gain weight, and the older a pet gets the less calories it needs because it has stopped growing and doesn't need as many."

Burt added, "I'm seeing in my practice more and more pets that are overweight or becoming overweight."

A widely practiced non-nutritious habit is feeding pets table scraps, said local veterinarian Neal Tindol.

"(Pets) need to be on the type of food for the pet. A common problem that every vet sees is feeding pets 'people food,'" Tindol said.

Burt added, "There are a lot of calories in (people) food. It fills them up, and then they don't eat their own food and don't get the nutrition they need."

Feeding animals, such as dogs and cats, lactose-based foods and drink, like milk, chocolate and cheese, can trigger overproduction of a chemical that can cause harm.

Obesity causes heart, kidney and liver diseases as well as diabetes, muscular and skeletal problems in pets.

High-calorie pet snacks should be given in moderation.

If a pet is eating nutritiously and moderately, owners can slightly feel the animal's ribs and it has characteristics like good muscle tone and a shiny coat.

Warning signs of poor nutrition include dry skin, intestinal problems (diarrhea) and unusual behavior.

Water is a staple in any pet's diet. "Pets should have free access to clean, fresh water," Burt said. "Make sure and clean the dish periodically because it gets mold, algae, mosquito larvae in it. It's not as palatable, so they may not drink what they really need."

Exercising a pet helps it to burn extra calories and maintain a strong cardiovascular system. "You don't usually see overweight

The right food and clean water are vital to a pet's health, but the attention of its owner may be the most important factor, two local veterinarians said.

Family (of) doctors

Young Reddys keep tradition of healing

By DEBBIE LINCECUM
Features Editor

For two local physicians, the term "family practice" has taken on a new meaning.

Raj Reddy, an orthopedist in private practice, and his wife, anesthesiologist Nirmala Reddy, will soon add three more doctors to their family - daughter Naveen, son Praveen and his fiancée.

Praveen, who left high school early to pursue college (which he finished early) is completing his training in orthopedic surgery in San Antonio. He recently found he was accepted to a Johns Hopkins University program in sports medicine. He plans to return to Big Spring after the year-long study with the woman he will marry, Aparna Reddy (no relation). Aparna, a recent graduate of medical school, has not chosen a specialization, but will likely practice in the local area as well.

Meanwhile, Naveen graduated last week from medical school in Galveston and is preparing for a career as an OB/GYN.

"Pretty soon we're going to say 'Dr. Reddy' and the whole room will turn around," said Peggy Crooks, office manager for Raj Reddy's local practice. Both Drs. Reddys work in Big Spring and Midland, keeping offices in both cities.

Raj Reddy himself is excited about the prospect of a family of doctors.

"It's going to be fun," he said. Not to mention it will make for some stimulating conversation.

"A lot of times when you engage in conversation, even with someone not in the field, you deviate to the medical field one way or the other," Reddy said. "This way we'll have something to share and discuss."

"I think it will make all of us better physicians," he said. "It's all in the family."

Discover

puppies or kittens because they are more active and burn more energy," Burt said. "The older a pet is the less likely an owner can expect to exercise that pet too strenuously."

"We see a good many of the geriatric-type patients for various problems," Tindol said.

Older pets can suffer from ailments like arthritis or heart problems, so it is best to check with a doctor before continuing regular exercise for a pet, Burt said. Overall, owner attention is the most important factor, both vets agreed.

"A lot of people get a pet with the idea that all they have to do is feed and water it. After a while, they may come home and the pet becomes ill," Burt said.

"You need to pet and play with an animal because it's the best way to do an examination."

Is hum imaginary?

Taos residents complain

By The Associated Press

TAOS, N.M. — K.C. Grams hears it: a constant, irritating hum that deprives her of sleep and depletes her energy.

Steven Walters hears it: a low, throbbing sound that robs him of the precious quiet he sought when he left the city.

Robert Faurie hears it: an unnatural, generator-like noise just at the edge of what his ear can pick up.

It's the Taos hum, a phenomenon fit for a supermarket tabloid, a sound — or is it? — that not everyone hears and no one has identified.

"You know how it is when you're about to go to sleep and one of those big black flies, or a mosquito, is in your room? Imagine having that every single night and not being able to swat it. It makes you crazy," Grams said.

When she first heard the sound two years ago, she assumed it was coming from something in her old, adobe house on the outskirts of town. But she couldn't find the source.

She was horrified to discover that when she went camping 30 miles away, she still could hear it.

K.C. Grams, of Taos, N.M. speaks near her home about an annoying hum she says deprives her of sleep and depletes her energy. She and dozens of other residents are complaining, but engineers and technicians can't find the problem.

About a year ago, at a potluck supper at her son's school, a stranger asked Grams whether she, too, heard a hum.

"I almost started crying," Grams recalled. "It's such a relief to know you're not crazy and not alone, and that it's real."

Experts don't doubt Grams and others are being bothered by something. A team of scientists and engineers spent a week in Taos recently at the behest of two congressmen, using sophisticated equipment to measure acoustic, electromagnetic and seismic signals. They found no ready answer.

Please see Hum, page 2B.

Injury helps doctor relate to patients

By The Associated Press

GALVESTON — Kendrick Kahler sometimes has a hard time convincing people he's really a doctor.

One of the University of Texas Medical Branch's top students, Kahler is paralyzed from the waist down.

He said he's had several patients who thought he was joking when he rolled into their rooms in a wheelchair.

"People tell me that you can't be a doctor because you're in a wheelchair," he said. "But it does open doors. You are more empathic, and you can relate to the people who are suffering."

Kahler graduated last month from UTMB and is beginning a three-year residency at a Corpus Christi hospital.

Kahler also received the medical school's prestigious Gold-Headed Cane Award. He and fellow student Philip Gordon Stein shared the award, the third tie in the award's 33-year history.

The award recipient is chosen by students. It recognizes a physician's concern for patients, exemplary medical skill and an interest in the Kahler said he was surprised to win.

"It's a challenge to maintain excellence in medicine, integrity and compassion," he said. "You never think anyone thinks so highly of you."

VA responding to needs of women, Desert Storm vets

With a growing presence of women in the military, VA has responded to their health needs after discharge with targeted programs and facilities.

For nearly a decade, an 18-member advisory committee has assisted in planning programs for women and providing oversight to assure that care is implemented equitably.

Phyllis Fuhs, R.N., Chief, Nursing Service, is the designated women veterans coordinator at our facility, also serving as an advocate and counselor for women. Fuhs can be contacted for assistance by calling 264-4830.

While the focus on women veterans during the 1980s frequently was private bathroom or sleeping accommodations and providing gynecology services, gains in those areas have shifted the focus to providing preventive care and ensuring that counselors recognize effects of sexual abuse.

More than 95 percent of VA medical centers that responded to a congressional committee's survey indicated that counselors were on staff who were trained in providing treatment for victims of sexual abuse. VA's goal is to see counselors at all 171 VA medical centers fully trained in this area.

VA's nationwide network of 196 "vet centers" has been monitoring services to women veterans for nearly 10 years through a Women Veterans Working Group. At Vet

Pat Atkins

Centers, the highest percentage of women reporting sexual harassment or assault are Persian Gulf War veterans, which may reflect both changed attitudes about reporting such events and the larger number of women who serve in the Gulf. Our Vet Center is located at 3404 W. Illinois, Midland. For assistance, call 697-8222, or 1-800-299-8387.

A Task Force on Treatment of Women Who Suffer Sexual Abuse has been formed.

When VA lacks sufficient demand to maintain specialized services routinely on premises, eligible female veterans' needs are met through referral to sharing agreement partners or by the VA's purchase of the services locally.

VA's medical research program is sponsoring nearly a hundred investigations fundamentally oriented to issues of women's health ranging from basic research in female hormones to osteoporosis.

The Department of Veterans Affairs is announcing a national survey of veterans to obtain data on characteristics of the veteran population and their use of VA benefits. The information will assist the Department in planning for veterans health care needs and changes in VA's medical system.

In-depth telephone surveys will be conducted, beginning in June through October. The survey will involve a sample of 10,600 veterans, using a random digit telephone dialing procedure and VA files. Veterans' participation is voluntary, and all responses will be confidential.

The data will allow VA to follow changing trends in the veteran population.

Travel doctors treat many ills

By The Associated Press

KATHMANDU, Nepal — The 51-year-old Dutch woman trekking through Earth's highest mountains will be remembered in Himalayan medicine as "the woman who wouldn't die."

"It's one of the more bizarre stories," says Dr. David R. Shlim, who can spin many a chilling tale about hiking mishaps. He is director of the CIWEC Clinic here, a one-of-a-kind facility that offers Western health care to travelers in this poor Asian capital.

The Dutch woman, hiking with her husband and a small group, developed severe altitude sickness and lapsed into a coma at 15,000 feet.

The common treatment for the illness is a quick retreat to lower elevations. "Normally, if you carry somebody in a coma up higher, they're going to die," says Shlim.

ever since he was a little boy growing up in New Braunfels. A neighbor was a family physician who always seemed to be available to his patients.

"He really enjoyed helping people," he said. "He was held in high regard in town, but he wasn't a high profile person. I'm not high profile either."

Kahler has a quick and easy smile and a strong, irrevocable belief in God. He talks frankly about the accident that left him paralyzed and his future as a doctor.

VA

VA became concerned about exposure of the U.S. troops to smoke from oil-well fires, to unignited petroleum, and to the Persian Gulf environment generally. A small number of veterans have reported mysterious health problems. These symptoms range from joint pain and shortness of breath to fatigue and hair loss. And cases of leishmaniasis, a skin disease transmitted by sandflies, have been reported. Most Persian Gulf vets being treated by VA have conditions typical of military service.

In July 1992, the VA asked Congress for legislation to assist Persian Gulf veterans. The legislation called for examinations and treatment of veterans of the war who were concerned about their exposure to environmental contaminants, and the development of a registry of records to permit continued health surveillance. The Veterans Health Care Act was signed into law in November 1992.

The Big Spring VA Medical Center provides each Gulf veteran who asks to be part of the registry with a physical examination and interview, and compiles a complete medical history. The examining physician pays particular attention to diagnoses which may be associated with Gulf service. Patients with medical conditions that cannot be diagnosed are transferred to one of three special Persian Gulf Referral centers. The VA medical centers, in Washington, D.C.; Houston, Texas; and West Los Angeles, have expertise in pulmonary and infectious diseases, immunology, and neuropsychology.

As of January 22, 1993, the Department of Veterans Affairs has received 368 claims from Gulf veterans for exposure to environmental hazards, and 19 have been granted disability compensation. Oil-fired smoke exposure is the most frequently identified environmental hazard, accounting for 250 of the claims. Other environmental hazards noted in claims include exposure to jet fuel, diesel fuel, solvents, toxic fumes and chemicals.

But at the stubborn insistence of her husband to press on, Sherpa guides carried the woman over an 18,000-foot pass. "There's this unconscious body that's being schlepped around the mountains," Shlim recounts incredulously.

Finally, after several days, the still-comatose woman was airlifted to Kathmandu, where Shlim first saw her. Fearing that she might have a brain tumor, the doctor ordered her flown to Bangkok, Thailand.

Amazingly, after 10 days in a coma, the woman woke up with no visible impairment. She returned home to her job as a pharmacist. Nobody understands why she survived.

A 32-year-old British woman who scrambled off an icy trail to take a photograph of a frozen waterfall wasn't so fortunate. On the way back, "she slipped and kind of laughed and slid down right in front of her friends," Shlim says. "She went off and just died. She went way, way, way down."

In Nepal, the biggest threat to travelers is trauma. "People fall down," Shlim says. "That's what kills them."

The small, private CIWEC Clinic is a global model in the now-growing specialty of travel medicine.

It treats 10,000 patients a year, including victims of falls, frostbite, altitude sickness or upper respiratory infection. Visitors to Nepal's southern lowlands, the Terai, have been brought in with rhino and bear wounds.

On top of all that, Shlim and his colleagues are internationally recognized authorities on gastrointestinal ailments, the most widespread complaint of Westerners in this part of the world.

Trekking and climbing the unforgiving Himalayas hold particular perils for tourists. So does every other type of travel in the Third World, particularly adventure and wilderness trips.

Hum

"Right now we're not close to being able to say anything. It's disappointing to all of us," said Joe Mullins, chairman of the mechanical engineering department at the University of New Mexico and leader of the team from Sandia and Los Alamos national laboratories and the U.S. Air Force's Phillips Laboratory.

Based on initial observations, the team believes it's probably not an acoustical signal — that is, not a sound — that hearers are picking up.

"If it were, then one of the microphones would have sensed it," said team member Horace Poteet. The team used conventional laboratory microphones as well as a specially built microphone that detects low frequency sound.

Poteet, a physicist whose work involves nuclear test-ban treaty verification, heard the Taos hum while he was there.

In fact, he says, he's been hearing a noise for a while at his Albuquerque home, some 130 miles south of Taos. He hasn't found it particularly bothersome; he describes it as sounding like a diesel truck idling in the distance.

Dr. David R. Shlim of the CIWEC Clinic in Kathmandu, Nepal, looks at an X-ray with a 65-year-old Tibetan exile. The clinic offers Western health care to travelers.

Midland cowboy Randy Bomar had bad luck in the calf roping portion of the Big Spring Cowboy Reunion and Rodeo Wednesday night, as his prey eluded his rope.

The rodeo continues tonight at 8:30 p.m. in the Rodeo Bowl just off west FM 700.

Experience reigns at rodeo

By STEVE REAGAN
Sports Writer

On the first night of the Big Spring Rodeo, experience was not only preferred, it was downright necessary.

The Big Spring Cowboy and Reunion opened its 60th edition Wednesday night with music, flags and all the other pageantry rodeo goers have come to expect from the event.

And for the most part, experience was the best teacher Wednesday - not to mention roper, rider and wrestler.

Nowhere was this more obvious than in the bull riding competition, where the cowboys were taking it on their collective ears until a couple of wily veterans showed the kids how it was done.

The bulls totally dominated most of the event, throwing every cowboy that came their way. It looked like a whitewash was in order until the final two cowboys - a pair of men with impressive rodeo credentials - strapped on.

The first of the pair - Big Spring's Wacey Cathey - knows something about the event, having qualified for the National Finals Rodeo bull riding a record 14 times.

Cathey's ride, a black brahma named Underfoot, darted right out of the chute and proceeded to spin several times. But Cathey was able to hang on for the mandatory eight seconds, earning a score of 73 for his efforts.

It took a man with an even more impressive resume - two-time world champion bull rider Jim Sharp - to best Cathey's score.

Sharp, from Stephenville, was able to withstand Cool Cat's incessant spinning for a score of 75 and the lead in the event.

Second place seemed like the destiny for Big Spring entrants Wednesday night. Brad Jenkins and Cabell Mackie were one of only two teams which were successful in the team roping competition, but their time of 7.5 seconds was barely eclipsed by the Pecos duo of Jimbo and Joe Martinez, who finished with a 7.3.

Cowboys also had a hard time in the steer wrestling portion of the rodeo. Only four of the 11 entrants made times in the event, with Rick Bradley's time of 5.1 seconds barely beating out Russell Merchant's 5.4. Merchant's overall time of 10.3 leads the event after two goes.

The human athletes, however, got the best of their four-legged counterparts the rest of the evening.

Cody, Wyo. cowboy John Schirra scored an 80 atop Copenhagen Superstar to take the lead in the bareback bronc riding. Stephenville's Chris Guay was second with a 75 while Matthew Stanley, also of Stephenville, was third with a 73.

In calf roping, Magnolia's Ryan Sewalt finished in a time of 9.0 seconds. Jim Fuller, who compiled a 10.3 Wednesday, leads the event after two goes with a combined time of 20.1.

The first night of saddle bronc riding ended in a tie, with Jimmy McCarley of Azle and T.J. Kennedy of Pecos both earning 73s for their rides.

Del Rio cowgirl Jackie Bob Cox won the first night of barrel racing with a time of 17.74 seconds. Mecca McMullan of Iraan was second with a 18.01.
