Officials doubt ruling will have big local effect

By CONNIE SWINNEY

A recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling has expanded the definition of legal search, allowing an added exception for warrantless seizures.

The Minnesota vs. Dickerson decision, coining the "plain feel" rule, allows police, under certain circumstances, to seize any drugs they find while conducting a pat down to check for weapons.

"If a police officer lawfully pats down a suspect's outer clothing and feels an object whose contour or mass makes its identity immediately apparent, there has been no invasion of the suspect's privacy beyond that already authorized by the officer's search for weapons," wrote Justice Byron White in detailing the majority decision. "If the object is contraband, its warrantless seizure would be justified."

When patting down suspects, law enforcement officials gauge the limits of what they can seize as evidence, using guidelines such as the "plain view" method.

For example, an officer cannot empty a person's pockets with probable cause, like suspecting the presence of a weapon.

If no weapons are found, the officer may ask a suspect to empty his or her pockets, placing items in "plain view" to be able to legally seize contraband.

The 1968 case of Terry vs. Ohio set the standard.

"In subsequent years, they've been wittingly away on the Terry case," said Big Spring Police Chief Joe Cook. "Every time they throw a bone at us like (the recent ruling), we use it judiciously.

"At least, it will set a precedent," Cook added.

Although precedent setting, the decision may have little impact on Texas cases, said District Attorney Rick Hamby.

"It's not that shocking a decision. Rulings only catch our attention if they are limiting," he said. "If it expands a defendant's rights, then it has a direct affect on criminal prosecution in all states.

"Previously, judges might say contraband was not admissible because they were searching for a weapon and had no probable cause to get the contraband," Hamby added.

The case would not impact most of the drug prosecutions in the district attorney's office, he said.

"The right to search and seize has been becoming more and more liberal," said attorney Robert Miller. "It's trying to get away from a technicality."

Judges have deemed contraband inadmissible in court, grinding the cornerstone of cases in the past.

The 1989 Dickerson case involved an suspect leaving a known crack house, acting in what police determined was a suspicious manner.

When police stopped the suspect, no weapons were found, but the officer reportedly determined a small lump in the suspect's pocket to be drugs.

The officer pulled it out and reportedly found it to be crack cocaine. Dickerson was arrested and charged with possession of a controlled substance.

55 Alive slated for Aug. 17-18

Seeking to enhance driving skills among local senior citizens, the Howard County Sheriff's Office has scheduled its 55 Alive/Mature Driving program for Aug. 17-18.

Totalling 15 percent of the local population, senior citizens account for a significant number of drivers in Big Spring.

"As many retired people as we have in Big Spring, we'd like to get prepared for the older generation having to deal with traffic," said Deputy Sheriff Barney Edens. "It allows that age group to prepare for the normal age-related physical changes and anticipate accident behavior."

The course is scheduled to be given in six sessions each year over a two-day period for four hours a day.

Instruction includes group discussions about driving irritations, perceived and unperceived physical changes such as vision, hearing, reaction time and age effects of alcohol and medication.

The instructor reviews basic rules of driving, traffic signs, road markings, freeway driving, safety belts, weather hazards and unforeseeable dangerous traffic situations.

Sponsored by the American Association of Retired Persons, the group contacted medical and safety experts to acquaint members with the physical changes caused by aging and their effect on driving situations.

"The folks that participate can also be eligible for as much as a 15 percent discount on their vehicle insurance for as long as three years," Edens said.

The savings to elderly drivers reaches $500 during that period, he added.

"Even though we don't have the traffic congestion here as in a larger city, there can be some hazardous situations," Edens said. "Sometimes (aging characteristics) make it more difficult to react properly to situations because a person may not be as quick as he or she was at 18."

Accidents per mile driven begin to increase at 55 years of age, the program's statistics cite.

Moreover, older drivers who have attended 55 Alive courses have reduced their accident rate significantly and also have fewer traffic violations.

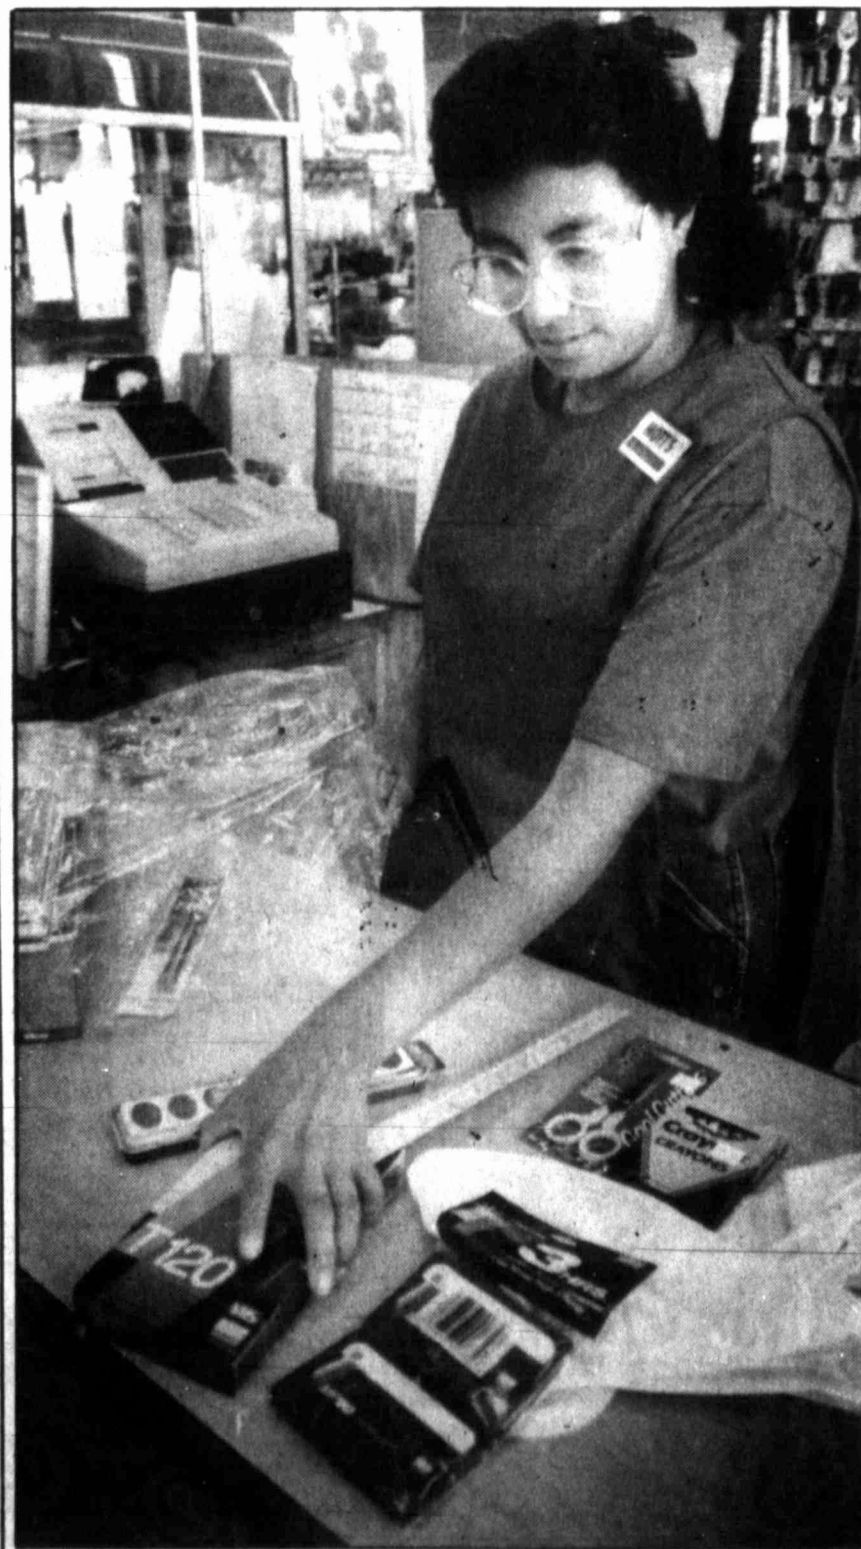

Anyone 50 or older may attend the course, now in its fourth year. The program services Howard, Sterling, Mitchell, Martin, Andrews and Glasscock counties.

The sheriff's office recently gained instructors for the course and classes will be conducted at the Senior Citizen Center.

For more information on the course, contact Bobbie Leonard at the Center by calling 267-1628.

Technology changing traditional supply list

Motts employee Michelle Yanez reaches for a blank video tape as she puts together a packet of school supplies for Bauer Magnet School Wednesday afternoon. Because of advancing modern technology in schools today, Bauer requires students to bring a video tape, audio cassette and a roll of film.

School supplies have changed somewhat since the time of blunt safety scissors and rubber cement.

Students at Bauer Magnet School, in fact, are expressly instructed to bring pointed scissors, along with such standards as a box of crayons and No. 2 pencils.

But advancing technology is most evident in the last three items on the Bauer school supplies list — those being, one video tape, one cassette tape and a roll of 35mm film.

The video and cassette tapes did not even exist for the students of three decades ago.

This is the first year for Bauer students to bring these items, according to Principal Andre Clark. The tapes and film are for a new program, documenting the scholastic and social development of the child.

With the tapes and film, each student at Bauer will have a portfolio created, making a "visual and audio view of how they progress," Clark said.

Although fifth-grade students will have only this year's recordings, "for first-graders, we will have a five-year portfolio of their growth," she said.

In addition to documenting a child's learning, volunteers will catch moments of each child in the other aspects of school life. "We'll try to catch them having fun on the playground — all that comprises the growth of the child, not just studying," Clark said.

At the end of the year, the tapes and film will be given to the child's parents, providing keepsakes other than the obligatory test papers and crayon drawings all parents keep stored, Clark explained.

Volunteers will be making the taped and photographed records. Parents, teachers, librarians and even Clark herself will take time to help document each child's progression.

Clark learned of similar programs at other Texas schools. Please see SUPPLIES, page 6A

Many doubt crime bill effectiveness

The Associated Press

DALLAS — Bobby Small gets riled talking about waiting periods and restrictions on weapons purchases.

The increasing restraints on gun buying hurts the law-abiding citizen — not the criminal, Small said Wednesday while browsing at The Gun and Tackle Store, a shop that provides equipment for sportsmen interested in fishing and hunting.

"It's not going to make any difference and (President Clinton's) going to find that out sooner or later," said Small, an avid collector who owns several handguns, shotguns and rifles. "People get killed in airplanes and they don't try to ban them."

Small was browsing among the sporting equipment and mounted animals specifically checking out an expensive rifle while being questioned about his views on gun control. A skeet shooter and hunter, Small said he believes tighter gun restrictions merely hurt the sportsman, not criminals.

By executive order, Clinton suspended Wednesday the imports of foreign-made assault-style handguns, saying they've become preferred weapons for many gangs and drug dealers. A second order seeks tighter regulations about who can sell guns.

The president also emphasized his support for the Brady bill, gun-control legislation named for James Brady, the former White House press secretary who was wounded in the 1981 assassination attempt on President Reagan.

The already pending Brady bill calls for a five-day waiting period for handgun purchases and background checks on would-be buyers.

Bill Trantham of Rockwall, another customer who only shoots targets, Bobby Small discusses President Clinton's anti-crime package Wednesday at a North Dallas gun shop. Small and other customers were angered at the mention of Clinton's support for the Brady Bill.

said he believes in the Second Amendment right to bear arms. "If you have a society where only the military and the police control (guns), you might as well go back to Communism."

Some gun shop owners and gun buyers scoffed at the notion of a waiting period or background checks, pointing out that criminals rarely make a legitimate purchase by filling out the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms' over-the-counter firearms transaction record.

"The waiting period and restrictions on certain types of firearms is not going to keep the guy with a criminal mind from owning a firearm," said Don Grogan, owner of the north Dallas store.

Texas has no waiting period for buying weapons. A buyer fills out the ATF form that asks whether he is a convicted felon, a fugitive from justice or mentally ill, among other questions, and then gets the gun.

For that reason, someone can buy a handgun in Texas for $40 or $50 "and sell it in New York for 10 times that much," said ATF Special Agent Sharon Wheeler, a spokeswoman for the Dallas office.

"New York and Mexico are the two big, big places where they're going these days," she said. "We're known as a source state."

Grogan said his store doesn't sell the imported, assault-style handguns, which often come from China.

Jeffrey Dillingham (left) standing with one of his attorneys, Michael Ware, sobs with his eyes closed as the jury announces its recommendation of the death penalty in the slaying of Caren Koslow Wednesday in Wichita Falls. Jurors deliberated fewer than two hours Saturday before finding him guilty of capital murder.

Dillingham gets death sentence

The Associated Press

WICHITA FALLS — Jeffrey Dillingham should be executed for killing Fort Worth socialite Caren Koslow in a murder-for-hire scheme, jurors decided Wednesday.

The panel returned its punishment decision for the 20-year-old former honor student after about four hours.

Dillingham stood trembling as State District Judge Bob Gill read the verdict. His parents, fiancée and supporters embraced and cried loudly.

Jack Koslow, wounded during the attack on his wife, swallowed and blinked. But he showed no emotion and left the courtroom without speaking to reporters.

Tarrant County Prosecutor Alan Levy and defense attorney Jack Strickland agreed that the jury based its decision on the brutality of the case.

The planning that went into the murder, testimony from Koslow and Dillingham's confession proved overwhelming, Strickland said.

"It's unfortunate," Levy said. "When someone gets the death penalty, it's not a success for the justice system. It indicates a failure somewhere in society."

Levy said two other defendants, Kristi Koslow and Brian Salter, also would be prosecuted for capital murder.

Jurors had taken just one hour and 40 minutes Saturday to find Dillingham guilty of capital murder.

He said nothing as bailiffs escorted him through a hall lined with TV news cameras.

"He's like someone who's just been in a serious car accident," Strickland said. "He's in shock."

Strickland said Ray and Toni Dillingham were almost hysterical in a brief meeting with their son.

In closing arguments, Levy branded Dillingham as the evil perpetrator of a "methodical, careful slaughter."

"Is this a dangerous man?" Levy repeatedly shouted during his step-by-step replay of the bludgeoning of Mrs. Koslow and her husband. "His conscience was in his purse."

Texas law gave the eight-woman, four-man panel just two punishment choices: lethal injection or life in prison. A defendant assessed life must serve at least 35 years behind bars.

Attorneys for the state accuse Dillingham and two other young adults of carrying out the plan against the Koslows.

The assailants fatally beat Mrs. Koslow with a pry bar and slashed the throat of the 40-year-old socialite. Koslow, a 49-year-old ex-banker, was wounded in the March 1992 attack at his home.

13 arrested during protest of embargo

HOUSTON (AP) — Police have arrested 13 people who were protesting the U.S. embargo against Cuba and the ongoing detention of a bus bound for that communist country.

The arrests occurred Wednesday during a protest staged outside the federal building by about 100 members and supporters of Pastors for Peace.

Police said the eight women and five men were arrested when they sat in front of two doors to the downtown building and refused to move. They were charged with blocking a passageway, a Class B misdemeanor punishable by up to six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Pastors for Peace, a nationwide affiliation of religious groups, took 100 tons of humanitarian aid to Cuba in a caravan that passed through Laredo on July 29.

The aid was then shipped from Tampico, Mexico, to Cuba, accompanied by about 60 members of the group. But U.S. Customs agents refused to allow a school bus to proceed with the other vehicles.

Customs spokeswoman Judy Turner said the bus was seized because the group said it was being delivered to a Baptist church in Cuba. Items such as prescription drugs, computers and typewriters also were seized, while food items were allowed to pass.

Prison inmate indicted for threatening officials

ABILENE (AP) — An inmate at the French M. Robertson state prison unit has been indicted on charges of threatening federal officials through the mail.

Clifford Pollard Turner was named in a 45-count federal indictment returned July 27 in Lubbock. He was arraigned Wednesday by U.S. Magistrate Billy Boone at the prison.

The indictment says Turner threatened U.S. judges and prosecutors, a deputy U.S. clerk, state judges and Internal Revenue Service employees over the last 18 months.

The list includes U.S. District Judge Jerry Buckmeyer of Dallas and U.S. Magistrate J.Q. Warnick of Lubbock. Assistant U.S. Attorney Roger McRoberts said Turner has been convicted twice in federal court for similar offenses, for which he received two consecutive sentences totaling eight years and 10 months.

Las Colinas tram ceases operations

DALLAS (AP) — A high-tech transportation system that has whisked thousands of passengers between Las Colinas' office towers since 1989 has fallen victim to some old-fashioned budget cuts.

Midwest tallying damage

The Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — How do you put a price on a flood-ravaged teddy bear, a house full of family memories, a broken heart?

Thousands of families in nine states suffered such losses and more during the Flood of '93.

Still, as President Clinton headed for St. Louis to sign a $5.7 billion flood-relief package today, officials have to compute as best they can just what the disaster cost.

State officials in Missouri, Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska and Kansas have given their best guesses on property and crop losses. Add them all up and it's well over $10 billion.

But it doesn't begin to cover intangible costs such as heartbreak and grief over ruined homes, farms and businesses.

"People have just been wiped out," said Elizabeth Dole, president of the American Red Cross. "Many small businesses have been erased and with that go their livelihood, their hopes and their dreams."

The flooding was also blamed for 48 deaths.

In Missouri, where both the Mississippi and Missouri rivers spilled broke through levees and pushed houses off their foundations, Gov. Mel Carnahan has said damage to property, crops and farmland could be $4 billion. Iowa's Gov. Terry Branstad came up with $2.72 billion.

The other states: Minnesota, $1 billion; Illinois, $930 million; Wisconsin, $921 million; South Dakota, $750.7 million; North Dakota, $520 million, Kansas, $500 million; Nebraska, $342 million.

But who knows?

A Bosnian Serb soldier receives flowers from a woman in the village of Trnovo Wednesday, as a convoy of Serb armored vehicles prepares to withdraw from the town located on the foothills of Mt. Igman. Hundreds of singing, boisterous Serb soldiers arrived in this burned-out shell of a town Wednesday from Mount Igman, unconcerned that their offensive had almost invited NATO attack.

Serbs move off peak, but retreat uncertain

The Associated Press

TRNOVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Bosnian Serbs have pledged to retreat from a strategic peak overlooking Sarajevo and open supply routes into the capital. The Serbs have broken numerous such promises before — but this time, they face threatened NATO bombs if they don't lift the 16-month siege.

The United States, which pressed for NATO intervention, sounded increasingly determined Wednesday.

"We have concluded it is in our national interest to prevent the strangulation of Sarajevo in coordination with our allies," Secretary of State Warren Christopher said on PBS' MacNeil-Lehrer News Hour.

Though a deadline has not been set, Christopher said the attack plan approved on Monday by the North Atlantic Council in Brussels could be implemented quickly. He called it a very thorough and complete plan.

At U.N. headquarters in New York late Wednesday, Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali had an equally dire warning about military strikes.

"The decision has already been taken. It's been finished. We can do it. We can do it at any time if we want to," he said.

Michael McCurry, the State Department spokesman, cited reports the Serbs were bringing in fresh troops and weapons. If accurate, he said, "all the criteria set forth by NATO as preconditions for using more aggressive military measures will have been met."

Hundreds of Serb soldiers pulled back Wednesday from Mount Igman, but some remained on the peak near Sarajevo. And Serb officers threatened to return in force if Muslim-led government forces retake the mountain.

Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic pledged in Geneva his forces would leave Mount Igman by 10 a.m. (4 a.m. EDT) today.

Heidi Fleiss probe centers on overdose

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The call girl probe into reputed Hollywood Madam Heidi Fleiss and her ex-boyfriend has widened, with investigators focusing Wednesday on the drug overdose death of a woman earlier this year.

"When you turn the rocks over, little critters scramble all over the place. Sometimes they talk, sometimes they don't," said Capt. Glenn Ackerman, head of the Police Department's vice division.

Laurie Dolan, 22, of suburban Tarzana died March 2 of an overdose of cocaine, morphine and codeine — three days after she was taken to the hospital by an associate of Fleiss and accused pandarer Ivan Nagy.

The coroner's office ruled the death accidental, but sheriff's homicide investigators were still examining evidence in the case.

"The sheriff is taking a real hard look at it. It is a very active case," Ackerman said. But he wouldn't comment further.

Fleiss allegedly oversaw an operation that catered to Hollywood's entertainment elite. Earlier this week, she pleaded innocent to five felony counts of pandering and one count of transporting and possessing cocaine.

Miss Dolan, a waitress at the Sagebrush Cantina in Calabasas, collapsed Feb. 28 in the La Cienega Boulevard apartment of Nagy friend Jacob "Cookie" Orgad and he dropped her off at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center.

She remained in a coma until her death three days later.

Clinton campaigning for anti-crime bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton campaigned Wednesday for an anti-crime package that includes gun controls and $3.4 billion to put more police officers on the streets, saying "the first duty of any government" is keeping its citizens safe. While most of the plan is up to Congress, Clinton didn't wait on some gun-control measures.

By executive order, Clinton suspended imports of foreign-made assault-style handguns, which he said "have become the weapons of choice for many gangs and drug dealers." A second order seeks tighter regulations about who can sell guns "to make sure that only legitimate gun dealers are in the business."

"This is the beginning of our efforts to restore the rule of law on our streets," Clinton told a Rose Garden audience that included uniformed officers, Democratic and Republican members of Congress and prosecutors who opposed a similar crime bill that failed last year.

Government requiring meat handling guide

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government ordered Wednesday that all raw or partially cooked meat and poultry sold in America after Oct. 15 be labeled with safe handling instructions.

The Agriculture Department decision was motivated by a food poisoning outbreak in the West last January, traced to undercooked hamburgers tainted with E. coli bacteria at a fast-food chain. Two children died and 300 people were made ill.

It also follows settlement of a lawsuit filed by an advocacy group seeking the labels.

Radioactive antibodies possibly cancer hunters

BOSTON (AP) — Radioactive antibodies can hunt down spreading blood cancer and destroy all signs of the disease, providing a potentially powerful new weapon against malignancy, researchers report.

The idea of arming disease-seeking antibodies with bits of poison or radioactive material has been around for years. Until now, though, efforts to use the technology against cancer have been disappointing.

Pope reaches out to Native Americans

The Associated Press

MERIDA, Mexico — Pope John Paul II strongly defended the "legitimate aspirations" of native Americans as he reached out to indigenous communities from Alaska to South America on a historic visit to Mexico.

During a 24-hour stopover before flying today to Denver, the pontiff pledged the support of the Roman Catholic Church for indigenous peoples who have been "uprooted from their places of origin" and stripped of their land.

The pontiff made his remarks Wednesday atop the ruins of a Mayan pyramid in the Yucatan town of Izamal, in what may be a preview of some concerns he would convey later today in talks with President Clinton in Denver.

The pope's Alitalia Boeing 747 was expected to arrive in Denver at 4:30 p.m., just over four hours after leaving Merida. He was to be welcomed at the airport by Clinton and head afterward to Regis University for their talks.

The pope visits Denver for the church's World Youth Day. He is scheduled to leave for Rome on Sunday.

His historic visit to Mexico was the first by the pontiff since this country restored diplomatic relations with the Vatican after a 130-year break.

The pope's main event in Izamal, an ancient Mayan crossroads located 50 miles west of Merida, was a delayed celebration of the 500th anniversary, in 1992, of Roman Catholic evangelism in the New World.

Meeting with 3,000 representatives of 500 Indian cultures at a Franciscan monastery built atop the pyramid to the Mayan sun god, the pope moved the crowd by speaking in Spanish and a few words of Mayan.

The pope later celebrated Mass at an outdoor ceremony on Merida's outskirts, attended by hundreds of thousands.

Solution need about town's water quality

It seems to be that all Big Spring residents are asking for is better quality water than what they have now. They are not asking for miracles, for that is what it would take to turn this salty water into drinkable water. They simply want something coming through their pipes that is a little better than what it is right now. And, they especially want this since their tax dollars are paying for a $115 million pipeline from Lake Ivie to Midland-Odessa. The cost of this pipeline was passed on to all the cities served by the district including Big Spring. The Big Spring City Council recently wrote a letter to the Colorado River Municipal Water District outlining several concerns it had and requests it would like to be met. One of those requests included plans to construct a pipeline from Lake Ivie to Garden City to Big Spring. "We expect the district to share in the cost of this line, just like we have supported the Ivie Line," said Big Spring Mayor Tim Blackshear in the letter. Another request of the council is for a town hall meeting for the citizens to ask members of the CRMWD about water quality and what is being done to improve it. It would be in the best interest of both the CRMWD and the citizens of this town if a meeting were called. There are too many complaints and not enough belief that something is being done to correct the problem. A meeting explaining what is going on and what is being done just might correct the perception.

Football season is coming, with a crash, boom, bah

Random thoughts while beating the heat:

The start of football season is now less than a month away and, like it or not (and there's a surprising number of you who won't like it) we are about to be deluged with words like blitz, punt, setback, bomb, end-around, dive and my all-time favorite, fumblerooski.

It may seem like sacrilege, especially here in West Texas, but several people either don't like football or are fairly ignorant in the game's finer points.

If you hate football, you'd be well advised to turn your attention to one of the other columnists on this page.

If, on the other hand, you want to learn more about this area's favorite sport, you're in luck, because its time once again for Uncle Stevie's Annual Football Quiz.

Where's Geronimo when you need him?

Sharon Skolnick called and expressed alarm.

"Your column today about the artist who was arrested for using feathers on a painting? Can the government really do that?"

Mrs. Skolnick was referring to the column I wrote about a Michigan artist who is in trouble with the federal government for picking up feathers in her yard and near ponds and adding them to a painting she did of a bird.

And the answer is, yes, it is illegal to sell the feathers of migratory birds, even if the birds willingly shed them in your yard and you put them on a painting.

If you the law and sell stray feathers, it is a felony, and you can get up to two years in prison and a maximum fine of a quarter of a million bucks.

"Oh, my goodness," Mrs. Skolnick said, "does that mean that I could be in trouble?"

I told her I didn't know. Does she sell feathers of migratory birds?

"Maybe," she said, "I really can't be sure."

Could you explain? "Well, I'm a Native American. An Apache."

I interrupted and said that I had not been aware that Skolnick was a traditional Apache name.

"Oh, no, that is my married name. My real name is Okee-Chee. That means 'Little Blue Bird.'"

I was impressed. I had never

talked to an Apache before, as there were few in my old neighborhood. And I asked if she was related to Geronimo. I always admired Geronimo, a spunky sort who always got a bad deal in the movies.

"No, but my great-great-grandfather was Chief Loco. He was a contemporary of Geronimo."

I'm sure that if I knew Chief Loco, I'd have admired him, too. A cool name.

"But about the feathers ..."

Yes, why are you concerned? "I have an art gallery. The Okee-Chee Wild Horse Gallery in Chicago. And we specialize in the works of Native Americans."

And they use feathers in their paintings?

"Yes, in paintings and other things. We have sculptures, fetishes, other objects. A combination of just about everything in Native American art."

Where do these artists get the feathers?

"I believe they get them the way that lady you wrote about did. They find them where birds drop them and pick them up."

Then I had bad news. If they are the feathers of migratory birds, you could be violating the wildlife-protection law.

"But I don't even know what kind of feathers they are and didn't know about the law until I read your column."

In the eyes of the law, that's no excuse. Judy Enright, the grandmother and artist, didn't know until the federal agents came to an art fair and seized her painting of a big bird that she had covered with stray feathers. Now, she is awaiting a decision by the feds as to whether she will be prosecuted.

"Goodness," said Mrs. Little Blue Bird-Skolnick, "that is alarming."

Have you ever been visited by any federal wildlife agents?

"No, but I've had the animal-rights groups come in. I had a buffalo head here and a buffalo robe. And there are other works that have furs and such. Can I be arrested for that?"

As far as I know, it is not illegal to possess or sell a buffalo head. But you cannot sell the feathers of an owl, a duck, a yellow-shafted flicker, a blue jay, a cardinal or just about any other kind of traveling tweeie. By the way, what did the animal-rights group say to you about the buffalo head and hide?

"Oh, they told me off. I told them that I understood their position but that it is the right of an artist to do their presentation and that we respect everything in nature."

Well, if animal-rights groups have been to your gallery, that is not a good omen. It is bad sign.

"Why?"

Because federal wildlife agents have told me that the animal-rights groups are among their best sources of tips on illegal feathers. They are believed to have blown the whistle on Mrs. Enright and her feathery painting.

"I wonder what I should do," said Mrs. Little Blue Bird-Skolnick.

I advised her to stash any feather-adorned art until she knew what kind of feathers they were. If there should be even one feather of a yellow-shafted flicker — well, life is not at all pleasant in a federal prison.

And I suggested that she consider a different business. Instead of art, she might sell cocaine.

"What?" she asked.

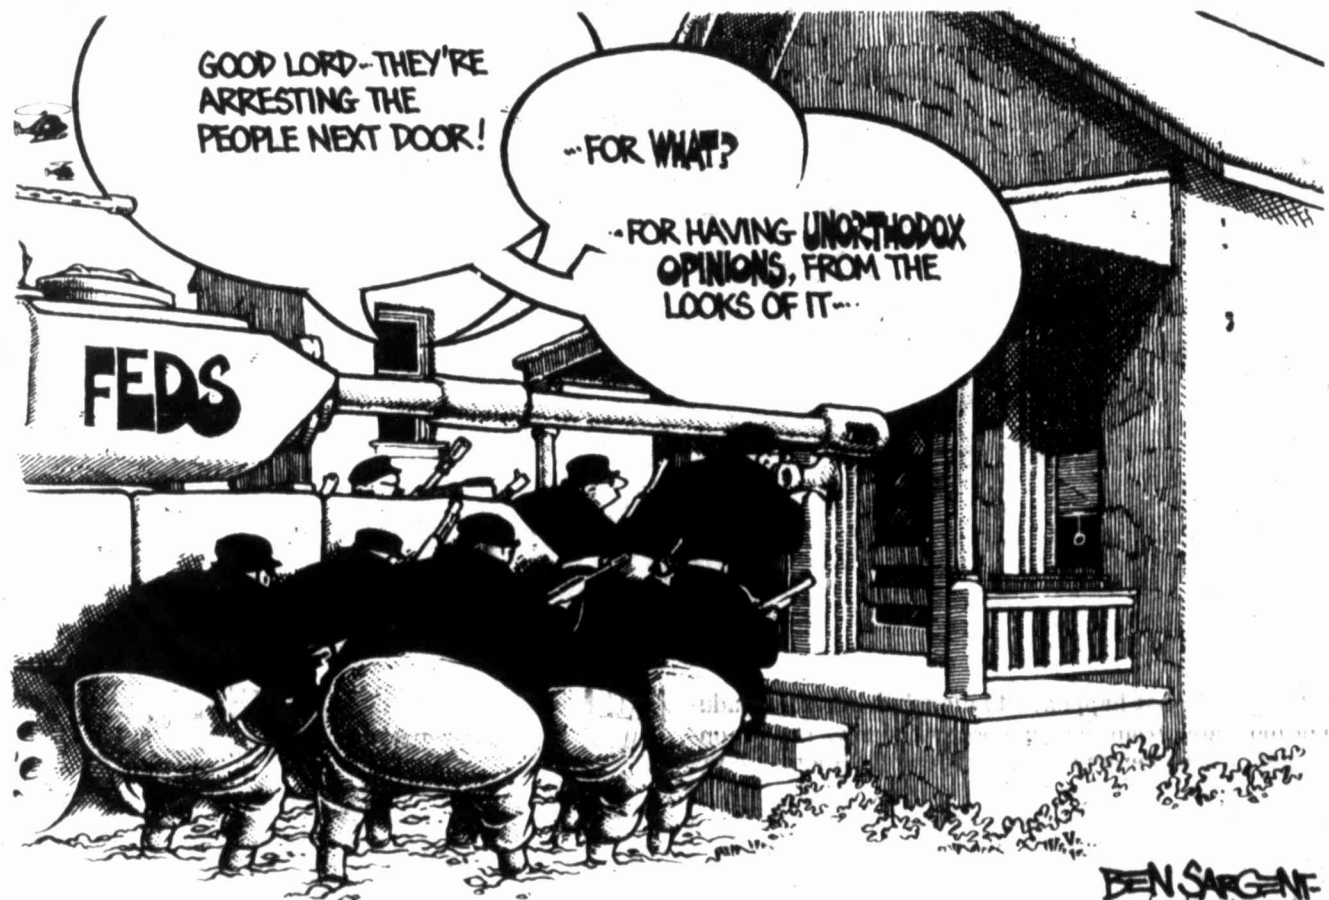

Sure. A lot more money in coke than in feathers, or even buffalo heads. With less risk, too. Tons of it are pushed in this country every day, and g. feathery bird painting, she'd be driving a Mercedes and collecting Picassos instead of picking up feathers in her back yard.

"No, I will stay with art," said Mrs. Little Blue Bird-Skolnick. And she went off to examine her feathers.

I'm sure Chief Loco never thought it would come to this. First, we kill all the buffalo and steal the land.

Now, his great-great-granddaughter can't sell a stray feather.

Where's Geronimo when we need him?

Family of winners in Preble County

EATON, Ohio — The nature of ambition and self-fulfillment is no different here than in the canyons of Wall Street or the boardrooms of Hollywood.

"That pumpkin pie fainted," a woman said to her husband. This was in the Household Arts Building of the Preble County Fairgrounds, right around 7 p.m. on Day 6 of this year's fair. On a sultry August night, the white-frame building was mostly empty. A representative from the office of Ohio Auditor Thomas E. Ferguson sat at a table, ready to take entries in a free lottery that would award one flag (your choice of Ohio or United States) to the person whose name was drawn at the end of the fair, but traffic was slow.

The pumpkin pie that had appeared to faint was one of the winners in the Preble County Fair's baking competition; the winning piece of pie had collapsed in the heat, but its blue ribbon was still attached to the plate beneath it.

The building was full of winners. There was the winning bale of alfalfa, entered by Bill Rushbush of West Alexandria. There was the winning bale of clover, entered by Christine Howard of Somerville. The best chocolate pie — actually the "best chocolate pie baked from scratch" — had been entered by Shirley Fisher, also of West Alexandria; the best tendersweet carrots had been grown by Roger Gebhart of Lewisburg.

The men and women weren't here on this night; just their winning entries, for all to see. And even if there were hardly any of us present at the moment, the effort that must have gone into putting together submissions for the contests was more than impressive. The Preble County Fair is local in scope — the Ohio State Fair, over in Columbus, is the big event of the summer, and it was starting on this very same day — but here in rural Preble County, the men and women had obviously cared enough to prepare and submit their best work.

I noticed one name that appeared on quite a few ribbons: Gib Harris, who, according to the tags, lived in the town of Eldorado. He had taken second in the alfalfa, he had won an award for his shelled corn (displayed in a large jar), he had done well in the wheat competition. The Harris last name, with various first names, was prominent in other categories, too; apparently the Harris family of Eldorado was diligent in its devotion to excellence.

I left the Household Arts Building, and stopped to talk with a man named Emil Lipps, proprietor of the Emil Lipps Home Improvement Co., who was manning his firm's fairgrounds display. Lipps was from Eldorado, also, and I asked him about Gib Harris.

"He's a friend of mine," Lipps said. "He has a farm in Eldorado; he's around 60, I would say. His real name is Gilbert Harris. I haven't seen him tonight, but I think he'd be happy if you were to call him."

So I did, when I got to the place where I'd be sleeping that night. I asked him how many awards he had won at this year's Preble County Fair.

"Well, just a minute," he said. "I'll go get my book and check." When he returned to the phone he said, "I believe I won at least 11 prizes."

He said he has been submitting entries to the Preble County Fair for more than 25 years. "It's a lot of work, but it makes me feel proud when I win," he said. "It makes me feel I've accomplished something in my life."

Farming is hard and getting harder, he said: "There are younger people in some farm families who are deciding it's probably not worth the trouble." But he finds the work immensely satisfying, and each year puts together his county fair entries.

"I hope my winning entries inspire other people," he said. "Maybe a person will see my hay entry, and say, 'I can grow hay that well,' and then try to do it."

The other Harris entries among the winners were, indeed, members of his family: "My son got a first and a second in corn and soybeans. My wife, Anna Belle, baked the grand champion coffee cake. My daughter-in-law got a first in noodles. And this year, for the first time, my grandson showed a pig. He's 7 years old, and his pig got 10th place, and he got a ribbon for it."

There are no ceremonies to announce the winners of the contests Gib Harris enters: "You just go look at your entries after the judging, and the ribbons tell you whether you've won." He said his success at the Preble County Fair over the years has made him feel that his farm career has been well spent.

He keeps his quarter-century of ribbons in a box, because he doesn't know what else to do with them.

"But my wife tells me she may make a quilt of them," he said.

National Endowment for the Arts dooming itself to bad press

By The Associated Press

Oh, the National Endowment for the Arts. Its grants to nude poets and eros-minded photographers have inspired otherwise moderate citizens to send fan mail to Sen. Jesse Helms. Now the NEA seems doomed to more bad press: Using endowment funds, three San Diego "conceptual artists" recently passed out $10 bills to Mexican immigrant workers.

The three want the bills, each marked with their signatures, to circulate throughout the area. This, they believe, will demonstrate the contribution of migrant laborers to the U.S. economy and counter xenophobia. But perhaps Rep. Randy Cunningham, R-Calif., took the better reading of public reaction. "I can scarcely imagine a more contemptuous use of taxpayers' dollars," Cunningham fumed.

We also decry this fleecing. But look at the bright side. Any NEA dollar going to a struggling day-worker isn't going to a woman who spouts blank verse while covered with hollandaise sauce.

Police TIPS

Recently, I had the opportunity to look at new cars. There are some really impressive automobiles out there. The automakers are using new technological safety features on more of their vehicle models. Anti-lock brakes and airbags are becoming standard items.

What really impressed me was some of the new owner's manuals. I guess the last owners manual I looked at was a few pages long and told you how to put in fuel and oil. If you were a real handy person, it also told you what size spark plugs to use.

These new manuals are more like a written course in defensive driving. There are sections on how the Anti-lock brakes work and vehicle theft prevention measures. There are even a chapter on seat belt use. It went over what happens in an accident when you are not wearing seat belts or don't have an infant properly buckled in a child restraint system. It was some pretty sobering evidence.

Some people have the mistaken belief that they can hold an infant in their arms while passenger in a vehicle and the child is secure in their embrace. By the laws of physics, that 12 lb. baby becomes 240 lbs. of forward momentum in an impact at 25 mph. Few people, except possibly the Incredible Hulk, could hold on to that type of force.

This is where child restraint systems have come into use. The seat belts in cars are not designed for small children or infants. The infant carriers and safety harnesses are effective when installed and properly used. I say properly used because some people do not fasten them or install them correctly.

I have had the experience of stopping a vehicle on some traffic violation and then observe an infant lying in a carrier that is not buckled into the car seat. The driver is pretty upset when I give them a ticket for an unsecured child. They argue that the baby is in its carrier. I try to point out that without the carrier properly fastened to the car seat, the baby is not protected. In a crash the child and the infant seat is still a flying projectile.

The same principle applies to adults. Not only your chance of survival, but your ability to stay in control of the vehicle is greatly increased by wearing seatbelts. Yes, I have heard the excuse that "I'm an excellent driver, besides it's my car and if I don't want to wear seat belts it's my choice." There are several flaws in this line of thinking. You may be an excellent driver, but if some inept person that shouldn't be behind the wheel decides to ruin your day by crashing into you, the probability is low that you will be in control of your car if not wearing seat belts.

If you are buckled into the seat then you have a chance of holding onto the steering wheel and guiding yourself to safety. Otherwise you can end up in the passenger seat or the back seat. It's a little hard to steer from those positions.

It may be your car, but our public roadways are governed by various State and Federal agencies. That means they get to set the rules for driving on them. Most people don't like to hear that. That will keep traffic officers busy for a long time.

Increased values mean lower rate, more collections

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

The city of Big Spring's proposed property tax rate is slightly less than the current rate, but 3 percent more taxes would be collected by the city-matching annual inflation - due to increased property values.

The proposed rate of 65.73 cents per $100 property valuation is 1.91 cents, 3 percent, more than the estimated effective tax rate - the rate needed to generate the same property tax revenue as this year. The current rate is 66.09 cents.

All of the increase and more would go toward an estimated 5-cent rate increase for debt service on $2.5 million in bonds for flood control and street projects voters approved in October. It's less than the expected 8-cent increase projected before the referendum.

"I say approximately now," City Secretary Tom Ferguson said of the increase for bond debt. "It hasn't been calculated yet."

Many homeowners, who pay nearly a third of all city property taxes, will see their taxes increase, despite the proposed 0.36-cent tax rate decrease. Average home values this year increased 13 percent, to $23,968, according to the Howard County Appraisal District.

Total city property valuations increased $12.4 million, or 4 percent, to $321 million. Of the increase, $3.9 million was due to new improvements; $5 million for industrial and oil-related industrial properties; and the rest for home and business personal and business inventory.

Besides the property tax increase, a proposed 25 percent hike in garbage fees is projected to pay for federal pollution mandates for landfills. Residential garbage fees would go from $6 a month to $7.50 a month. A dumping fee at the landfill gate is also being considered.

The annual city budget projects $17.7 million in spending for 1993-94, not including operation of the city's federal prison. That's $162,711 less than projected spending for this year, a 1 percent drop. Expenditures of $9.8 million for the city prison is $468,320 less than this year, a 4.5 percent drop.

The first of two required readings by the Big Spring City Council for an ordinance to enact the budget is scheduled for Aug. 24.

Stock market going up

Berny Baruch used to say that the way to make money on Wall Street is to "buy when everybody else is selling and sell when everybody else is buying."

But some things have changed in 50 years, and Baruch, were he still with us, would certainly accommodate the changes.

True, the Dow has been hitting record highs - everybody is buying - but "take your money and run" - There's no place to run to!

All other investments are either so risky or yield such little interest that your invested money, allowing for 3 percent inflation, is shrinking.

The stock market is still the only game in town.

There are too many self-anointed investment gurus selling newsletters these days.

You are safest relying on one with a track record, though even John Templeton, to me and many a personal hero in his profession, concedes that he is correct only two times out of three. That's enough.

Marketing strategist Charles Clough of Merrill Lynch is predicting Treasury bond yields will dip to 5 percent in three or four years, and Clough has been dead right on interest rates since 1988.

Assuming he's right again, certificates of deposit and T-bonds will yield even less, enhancing the stock market as the last, best option.

But the stock market is so high! Wall Street's nervous acrophobics are looking down when they should be looking up.

We need help. Embarrassing surveys show that only one in 10 Americans knows the difference between "debt" and "deficit." So we need competent help.

Paul Harvey

Highly respected Christopher Channer, investment adviser with the Chicago Corp., has a gift for explaining complex economics in shirt-sleeve English.

Channer concedes that the Dow, 3,000 on April 17, 1991, has made an "astounding" 500-point gain to a present 3,500.

No wonder the nervous Nellies want to jump off!

Actually, explains Channer, that 500-point advance is only a gain of 16.6 percent over a period of two-and-a-half years - though corporate earnings are growing 15 percent to 20 percent every year.

The Dow is lagging, not leading. The word Channer prefers is "consolidating."

Unless President Clinton's tax-and-spend philosophy, unchecked, raises investor risk, the stock market remains the best-way for investors to own a share of our country's inevitable growth.

As long as warnings abound, cash is plentiful, earnings are growing faster than stock prices and inflation is in check, there is a very low probability of a major stock market correction.

If you lack the stomach for a roller coaster, then sit on your assets. But the Dow still has a long way to grow. COPYRIGHT 1993 PAUL HARVEY PRODUCTS INC.

while attending a seminar on the latest teaching techniques.

The tapes and film provide far better information about a child's social and scholastic development, than educators have tried to do using the paper records of the past, Clark explained.

Many parents are taken aback, however, when they see the high-tech items nestled among the familiar erasers, Elmer's glue, Big Chief tablets and plastic rulers.

Clark explained the request for pointed scissors, saying educators finally admitted the blunt scissors simply did not cut very well.

City fathers giveth, taketh with budget

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

City fathers giveth and taketh in the proposed fiscal 1993-94 budget. The $17.7 budget, not including $9.8 million for the Big Spring Correctional Facility, projects 1 percent less spending than this year. But it adds quite a bit, including six new jobs and environmental measures. However, it also takes out some, including four jobs.

Four employee positions are to be eliminated in finance, utility and payroll. City Manager Lanny Lambert proposed. Purchasing and warehouse departments are eliminated. But added would be three firefighters for $85,000 out of airpark funds, two heavy equipment operators for $50,000 to address federal pollution mandates for landfills and a general airpark maintenance worker for $13,000 out of airpark funds.

Since non-management employees received a 5 percent pay raise in May, no raises are planned.

A partial breakdown of $262,201 in capital spending, according to Lambert.

• $20,000 allocated for lease-purchase of a new fire truck expected to cost up to $150,000 and $10,000 for fire station building repairs.

• $15,000 for lease-purchase of a new computer in the finance department expected to cost up to $120,000.

• $80,000 for five new police vehicles.

• $60,000 for landfill scales to monitor incoming trash, $71,000 for daily cover of trash and $60,000 for methane monitoring. All are mandated by federal rules going into effect in October.

• $50,000 for 400 garbage containers and $14,000 for a sanitation truck.

• $25,000 for lease-purchase of a vacuum truck for waste water collection and $50,000 for a Bell Street lift station for waste water collection.

• $40,000 for a disinfectant system for the water plant.

• $50,000 for a dump truck, $40,000 for a ditch witch and $82,000 for five pickup trucks.

• $6,000 for three meter-reading motorcycles.

Colorado City prison site of proposed plant

Facility could manufacture plastic lumber and produce composting

COLORADO CITY - A closed-loop recycling program has been initiated connecting Odessa, San Angelo, Abilene and Lubbock with Colorado City, the future site of a 1,000-bed state correctional facility.

Taking advantage of the prison's low cost labor and the guaranteed markets created by state purchasing, the Texas Department of Commerce proposes the site be designated as a recycling facility, manufacturing and marketing products from recyclables generated by the surrounding communities. The department also suggested the prison operate a composting operation.

Processing of recyclables would be done by Material Recovery Facility in Colorado City. It will be capable of handling co-mingled recyclables, source separated materials, commercial-industrial recyclables and compostables. The facility, city-owned, would be staffed by prisoners.

Products proposed to be manufactured at the site include plastic lumber and compost.

Interested parties in the purchasing lumber include Texas Department of Transportation, General Services Commission, Texas Department of Parks and Wildlife and the Texas Department of Criminal Justice.

Interested parties in purchasing and conducting research on composting include Fuel Harvesters Equipment, Inc., Midland and the United States Department of Agriculture Research Center, Big Spring.

The center is developing composting research, integrating recycled newspaper, compost and shredded tires. The tires would prevent soil compaction and wind erosion while promoting better aeration and water infiltration. The newspaper would aid moisture retention and help control wind erosion.

It is believed the area can provide material supply, processing/production and markets, said J.D. Porter, TDC recycling marketing development specialist.

"Sufficient supply of secondary materials and compostables can be provided by communities in and surrounding the immediate area," Porter said. "They are currently served by few waster haulers and are already hauling their waste sig-

Teenagers rally at pilgrimage stop over

The Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — Rock songs about God rang out over tall speakers, and teenagers danced in a conga line before a gospel prayer service among some 2,000 youthful Roman Catholics on a stopover in their papal pilgrimage.

Albuquerque played host to youth on their way to see Pope John Paul II, who will visit Denver from Thursday through Sunday to observe World Youth Day.

"It's probably a chance in a lifetime, and we'll never get to do it again," said Elena Lopez, 16, of Albuquerque. "Maybe something special will happen inside me because there will be so many people there together. Maybe I will feel something I've never felt before."

She said she was impressed that so many young people were interested enough in Catholicism to travel long distances to see the pope.

"There's a lot of people still interested in the church even though some priests are, you know, in trouble. But nobody's perfect," she said of a number of priests who have been accused of sexual misconduct.

Sweaty groups from Midland and the surrounding area endured a 10-hour drive in a bus with a broken air conditioner Tuesday. After unloading, they raced to the gathering held on astro-turf.

A large cardboard cutout of the pope stood near vendors' booths selling papal paintings, T-shirts, rosaries and postcards.

The Rev. Tony Martinez, pastor of St. Helen Catholic Church in Portales, said his homily Tuesday night was chosen for the teen pilgrims.

"It's about Christ sending apostles out in twos to minister. It talks about the role of the prophet in today's society," Martinez said. "This pilgrimage to Denver is to give witness to the world that their faith is important to them — that, in their language, it's cool to be active in your faith."

Joe Rozzo, 14, of Anza, Calif., near Palm Springs, said he hoped to meet girls as well as see the pope.

"There are going to be chicks there from all over the country, but that's like 5 percent of the reason I came. It's like, 95 percent religion," said the teen, who wore 11 silver earrings and a leather cord bearing a wooden crucifix.

Commenting on the party atmosphere, Marisa Soto, 18, of Los Lunas said: "It's innocent fun. We're here for something we all have in common, our religion."

The mood turned serious when the stadium lights went on at sunset. The previously cheering young people — many clad in backwards baseball caps and dark, trendy wire-rimmed sunglasses and plaid shorts — sat down and bowed their heads in prayer.

Young dancers dressed in a rainbow of colors gathered to perform in the prayer service. There were Spanish dances, Indian dances and one dance accompanying the Lord's Prayer.

The Knights of Columbus Council provided housing and food for the pilgrims.

New computer better predicts crop disaster

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The corn earworms are coming! An onion fungus is among us!

Warnings of these impending disasters and others are coming to the attention of Colorado farmers overnight through a new computer database. The creator of the system, which gathers information from the state's weather stations, says it can be adapted for use in other states.

Harold R. Duke, with the Agriculture Department's Agricultural Research Service in Fort Collins, Colo., said this is the first time that crop forecasters are getting information from all the state's stations.

The data allows labs at Colorado

State University and USDA to forecast insect invasions, disease outbreaks and irrigation needs.

Until last year, when the program began, Duke said, scientists had to use data that was several days old, inconsistent and coming from about a third of the stations.

"What's critical is that the computer system gets a wealth of uniform information from all the state's stations."

Armed Forces Chili Cook-Off scheduled

SAN ANGELO - The 20th Anniversary of the International Armed Forces Chili Cook-Off is set for Sept. 24-25 at the Goodfellow Air Force Base recreation camp.

As in the past, the event is open to all active duty, retired military and DOD civilians. Each team must have one military affiliated cook.

The annual event brings in chili cooks from as far away as Europe, competing for the chance to win a spot "behind the store" at the original Terlingua International Championship Cook-Off.

In addition to the "serious" chili competition, a special category for beginners or those just wanting to dabble in chili cooking is available.

Registration packets for the cook-off are available by contacting Coleen Deckers at 654-5327. Entry fees are $15 per team or $10 per team for the dabblers competition.

 data on a steady basis from weather stations statewide," Duke said.
 Weather stations feed the data — like the previous day's high and low temperatures, wind speed, precipitation, soil temperature and humidity levels — over phone lines into a computer in Duke's office between 2 a.m. and 4 a.m. every night.
 From there the information is passed on to the two labs.
 The analyses and forecasts developed at USDA and Colorado State are made available to farmers through computer subscriber services. About 1,000 farmers and 200 agribusinesses currently are subscribing to such services in Colorado, USDA said.
 Besides alerting growers to potential pest hazards, the system has the potential to help irrigators reduce water use by up to 30 percent, Duke said.

 Last year, university scientists forecast explosive growth of a fungus that attacks onions by tracking high humidity levels in midsummer.
 WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Department researchers have discovered a harder and more productive soybean breeding line.
 It produces soybeans that are resistant to the Mexican bean beetle, which USDA calls the most destructive insect to soybean crops in the southern Midwest.
 In field tests, scientists found that the new line, called HC83-193, also produced about eight bushels of semi-dwarf beans more per acre than a similar line released six years ago. The beans matured up to nine days earlier than those from other pest-resistant lines.

Book gives accounts of British in the West at turn of the century

Special to the Herald

An infamous Victorian scandal involving an aristocrat who died in Big Spring is featured in the new book, "Marmalade & Whiskey: British Remittance Men in the West" by veteran Colorado newsman Lee Olson.
 "Remittance men" were victims of the British primogeniture law, abolished in 1925. That was the exclusive right of inheritance of the eldest son. For about 70 years until the approach of World War I, these disinherited second sons of aristocracy and landed gentry found themselves expelled to the "colonies" in return for payments from home. Their cultural and economic legacy still hasn't been properly assessed, Olson tries to fill the gap.
 Big Spring was "the final backdrop for a shabby international intrigue involving not only great aristocratic English families but the Prince of Wales, the future King Edward VII."
 The aristocrat, Joseph Heneage Finch, the seventh earl of Aylesford, wasn't a younger son. But he became a remittance man after choosing to flee the scandal, settling in 1883 settling on a ranch near Big Spring on the apparent advice of Jay Gould, builder of the Texas and Pacific Railway. There, he was bilked on commercial deals. He threw big alcoholic parties. He died of cirrhosis of the liver in 1885 at the Cosmopolitan Hotel - which he had bought on arrival with his numerous retainers when told there was no vacancy.
 Olson devotes a chapter to the Byzantine scandal in which Aylesford and the wife of another aristocrat produced an illegitimate baby, born in Paris. "In London's aristocratic circles he was a joke; in Texas he was considered an eccentric but intelligent and decent - and that's all frontiersmen asked." The current Earl of Aylesford, the eleventh, agreed with Olson in an interview that his experiences in England had been so bitter that he had lost the will to live.

 But the book is more than a recital of adventures and misadventures, as colorful as they were. The author tells how attitudes dating back to William the Conqueror combined with shrinking agricultural markets to propel these aimless gentlemen to the world's frontiers.
 They didn't necessarily want to go. And in their foolish innocence, many suffered. Imagine the abuse showered upon well-dressed "lords" by frontier ruffians, or as the author says, dirty, unshaven, illiterate Jacksonian democrats. Some flourished, if only temporarily. These, the author credits with raising intellectual levels and improving the livestock industry.
 Where these native English-speakers failed economically, the author points out that more realistic and persistent non-English speakers, namely the Germans who had already farmed along Russia's Volga River, succeeded them. Sound familiar?
 Another nugget in the book is Olson's description of the "heirless trade," which "sank almost to the level of a colonial slave market."
 "Any American millionaire willing to put up a few hundred thousand dollars as dowry could marry his daughter into a title and see her ladyship become mistress of an ancient manor house, possibly a great estate like Blenheim Castle." Naming names: Winston Churchill was the result of such a marriage.
 Such are the results of the author's impressive research. Maps would have been useful, and the text shows signs of hasty editing. But Olson, in his thoroughness, includes a recipe for frontier marmalade.

Uvalde residents petition to remove Raul Meza

The Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Residents of Uvalde have gathered more than 1,000 signatures on petitions in an effort to kick convicted child-killer Raul Meza out of their community.
 Meza, 32, was transferred Aug. 3 to Nueces River Ranch Estates 16 miles northwest of Uvalde after a brief stay in Sweetwater. Uvalde is about 70 miles west of San Antonio.
 Parole officials on Tuesday said Meza would stay in Uvalde if they could not place him out of state.
 "We're still diligently trying to find a place for him, but we haven't yet," said Dan Guerra, a spokesman for the Texas Department of Criminal Justice's Pardons and Paroles Division.
 Meza was released from prison June 21 after serving 11 years of a 34-year prison term for the rape-slaying of 8-year-old Kendra Page in Austin in 1982. His release was mandatory because of "good time" he accumulated in prison.
 Meza's transfer to Uvalde County marked the sixth time he has been moved because of angry citizen protests.
 His seven days in Uvalde County are the longest he has stayed in any of the places to which state officials have sent him.
 Residents say the rural area is unsuitable for him because children live nearby.
 "It's still the topic of conversation," Uvalde County Judge William Mitchell was quoted as saying in Tuesday's San Antonio Express-News. "People haven't changed their minds about Raul Meza. They still want him out of here."
 Josie Albrecht, a mother of three who lives about 500 yards from the home where Meza lives with relatives, said her children are afraid to sleep alone at night.
 "I have to take my kids to work with me every day," Albrecht said.

 She said she and a small group of citizens have collected the more than 1,000 signatures from county residents who want Meza transferred out of Uvalde County.
 State Rep. Pete Nieto, R-Uvalde, said he will continue to complain to the Texas Department of Criminal Justice's Division of Pardons and Paroles.
 Nieto said he and others are upset that the parole division did not notify Uvalde County authorities of Meza's transfer to the county until after he was moved.
 Nieto has said he will sponsor legislation that would bar the parole division from transferring a convict under mandatory supervision to a community without permission from the community.

Plastic lumber touted as durable with wide usage

MARTHA E. FLORES
 Regional Editor

The transformation of milk and water jugs into lumber is an example of closed-loop recycling.
 The recycled product's trip to the landfill is not prolonged, but all together avoided by making pallets, patio furniture, playground equipment, cattle mangers or anything else made from lumber.
 The Texas Department of Commerce's proposal to develop a closed-loop recycling program in Colorado

City includes the manufacturing of lumber extruded from plastic recyclables.
 The manufacturing begins with milk bottles, juice and frozen food containers sanitized and pulverized into flakes. The flakes are then made into pellets and mixed in a 50-50 blend with cedar fiber waste, shaping the lumber.
 The Texas Department of Transportation, General Services Commission, Texas Department of Parks & Wildlife and the Texas Department of Criminal Justice had answered favorably to the notion of purchasing plastic lumber.

 Aside from it being marketable, plastic lumber is also known for its durability and flexibility in use.
 In 1989, AERT (Advanced Environmental Recycling Technology) began experimenting with engineered composites. The Arkansas-based company sells the alternative lumber to door/window and recreational furniture manufacturers.
 Big Spring-based Fraser Industries is also taking advantage of the technology by manufacturing pallets at its Arkansas plant from plastic lumber manufactured from a company in Wisconsin.
 High-costs limit large production of the alternative pallets.

 significant distances so hauling to the prison would not create a significant burden."
 Representatives from Pack Rat Services, Coahoma and BFI in Abilene, have expressed interest in participating in the program, Porter said.

 In order to develop a sound business plan, the Texas Water Commission funded a $90,000 feasibility study. The results are expected in November or December.
 "If all goes well, there should be a ribbon cutting sometime in 1994," Porter said.

Recycling, like these cans are going through, will soon become a big part of Colorado City in the near future, as the Texas Department of Commerce plans a regional facility there to take advantage of the low cost labor the new correctional facility will bring. Milk bottles and other plastics will be turned into a synthetic lumber.

Rice study in middle of immigration controversy

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Lawmakers seeking to stem the flow of undocumented migrants into the United States are buttressing their claims with a recent study that suggests illegal immigration will cost taxpayers $186 billion over the next decade.
 But the study by Rice University economics professor Donald Huddle, which has garnered significant attention as the nation grapples once again with the immigration question, also has its share of detractors.
 Among the study's findings:
 —The legal and illegal immigrants who have settled here since 1970 have cost U.S. taxpayers $42.5 billion in education, health care and welfare costs. That's in excess of the $20 billion they have paid in taxes.
 —In the next 10 years, illegal immigrants will account for $221.5 billion in public assistance and jobs taken from American citizens, while providing only $35 billion in taxes.

 —Last year, illegal immigrants cost U.S. taxpayers $10 billion in public assistance programs while returning only $2.4 billion in taxes. Additionally, they cost 741,000 Americans their jobs, for a $5.8 billion cost.
 "I think it's the most significant contribution to the study of illegal aliens that we've ever had," says Rep. Lamar Smith, chairman of the House GOP Task Force on Illegal Immigration.
 Counters Cecilia Munoz of the National Council of La Raza, a leading Hispanic constituency group: "It is contributing to a great deal of hysterical rhetoric."
 "It's unfortunate that this study is being taken in isolation without the rest of the body of research which has been done on this issue," she says.

New BSHS assistant, Butler go way back

By DAVE HARGRAVE
Sports Editor

EDITOR'S NOTE - This is the first of four stories about the new assistant coaches for the Big Spring Steers. This year's four new coaches are Steve Hernandez, Daniel Arista, Troy Garis and Bill Black.

Big Spring head football coach Dwight Butler said he only looks for assistant coaches who come highly recommended. In the case of Steve Hernandez, however, Butler needed no recommendation.

Hernandez, 26, played for Butler when the two were at Monahans. Butler coached at Monahans from 1980 to 1983, leaving after Hernandez's sophomore year. Hernandez, a Monahans native, graduated in 1985 and played one year at Cisco Junior College. He graduated from Sul Ross State last December and came to Big Spring less than three weeks ago.

"I was student-teaching this past spring, subbing a lot, and suddenly I got a call from coach Butler," Hernandez said. "From our first meeting, when I got to meet the administration and the coaches, I really liked it. I haven't seen a frown here yet."

Hernandez is working with the receivers and linebackers, and when school begins he will be teaching math at Runnels Junior High, where he will be the eighth-grade basketball coach.

Butler said finding Hernandez was the result of pure luck.

"I had kind of lost track of him, then I was talking to a coach friend of mine, and he said there was a young man from Monahans who said he knew who I was that was looking for job. Finally it clicked, and I knew who it was."

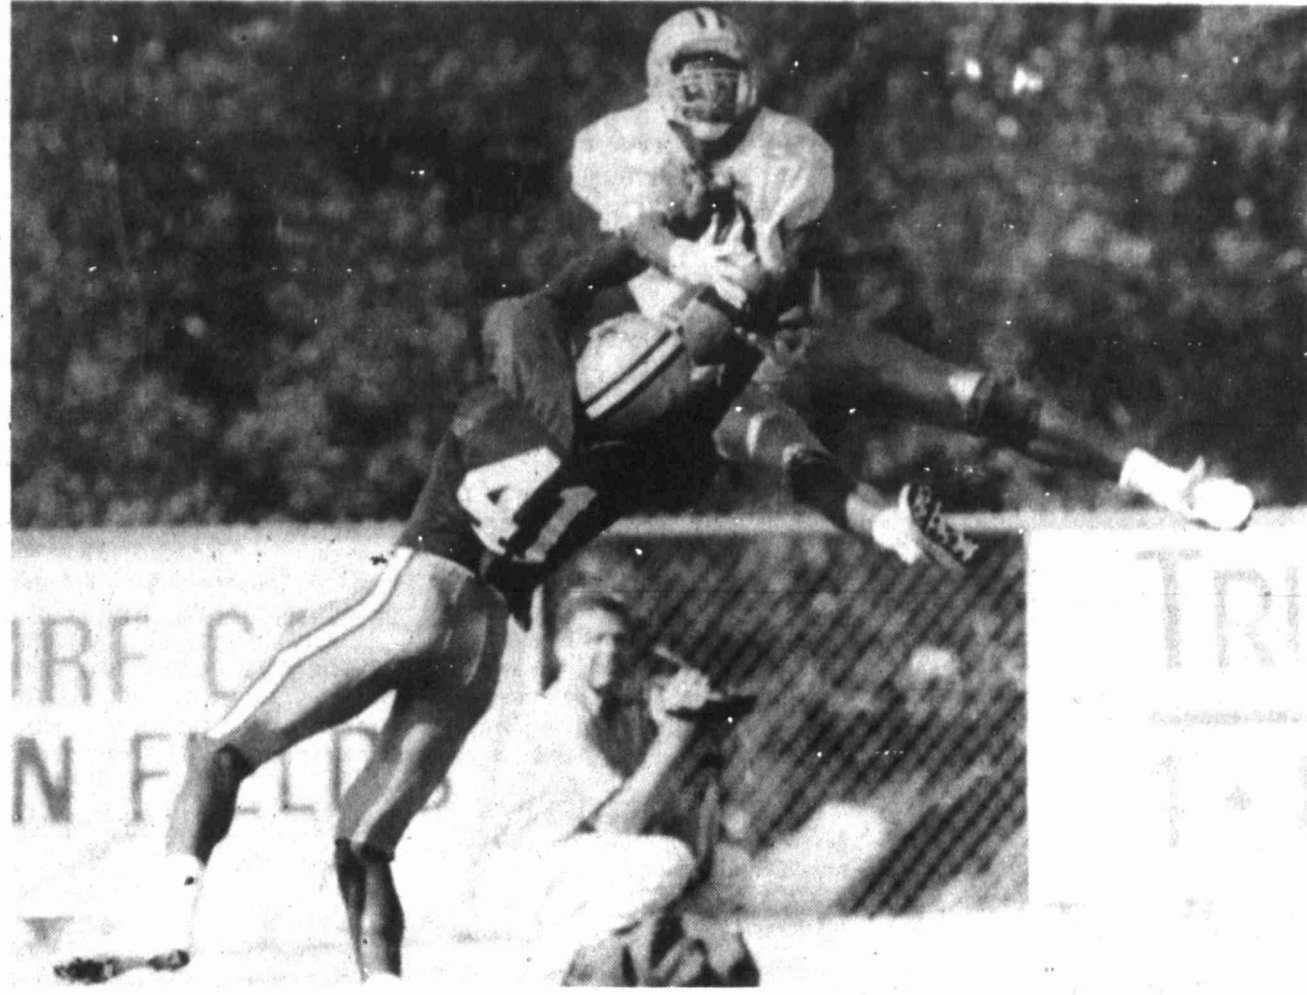

"We had a math job open, and within a week I got him on the phone," Butler continued. "I knew he was a solid kid, he came from a solid family. I was just shocked that somebody hadn't hired him."

Hernandez is replacing Marvin Wynn, who decided to leave coaching. He hasn't had a chance to truly settle in Big Spring, but he said he likes what he's seen so far.

"Everyone I've met has been really nice. The convenience stores, the gas stations - everywhere I go, everyone's been nice."

Right now, Hernandez is focusing on football, but soon that focus will turn to junior high math and basketball. He said as long as he's coaching something to somebody, he's happy.

"Coaching just gets into your blood," Hernandez said. "I enjoy coaching someone, seeing someone succeed, more than anything."

Dallas receiver Greg Reed, in air, has the ball knocked away by Dave Thomas during passing drills at the Cowboys' training camp in Austin Wednesday.

Another injury hits Dallas

By The Associated Press

AUSTIN — Dallas Cowboys starting fullback Daryl Johnston will probably miss the rest of the exhibition schedule with a fractured finger on his right hand suffered during a training camp practice drill Wednesday afternoon.

Johnston, a five-year veteran, will be outfitted with a cast and protective splint and will be available for the team's regular season opener Sept. 6 against the Washington Redskins, coach Jimmy Johnson said.

Backup Tommie Agee will replace Johnston for the final three pre-season games. Dallas hosts the Los Angeles Raiders Saturday.

Johnston said Johnston suffered the injury when he caught and twisted the finger in a teammate's jersey or pads during a blocking drill.

Meanwhile, the Cowboys turn their attention toward their special teams, which over the past two seasons have been among the best in the NFL.

But in two exhibition games, the Cowboys kicking game has been anything but special.

Punt returners Kevin Williams and Clayton Holmes have lost fumbles. Lin Elliott has missed four of six field goals. And rookie John Jett had a punt blocked and returned for a touchdown in last week's 13-13 tie with the Detroit Lions in London.

Johnson has ordered extra practice work on special teams as the Cowboys get ready for Saturday's exhibition game against the Los Angeles Raiders at Texas Stadium.

"That's been one of the real negatives," Johnson said. "We're working to get better."

Part of the problem, special teams coach Joe Avezzano said, is that several key members of last year's coverage, return and protection units have left the team or are injured. The list includes Kelvin Martin, Kenneth Gant, Issiac Holt and Darren Woodson.

Rookies Dave Thomas, Brock Mariotti and Reggie Givens are vying for positions on various special teams. Williams and Holmes are the primary kick returners.

"These are the guys who are going to have to step up," said Avezzano, voted NFL special teams coach of the year two seasons ago.

The Cowboys also are auditioning two rookie punters to take the job Mike Saxon held for eight seasons. Saxon was released during the off-season after an inconsistent year.

East Carolina free agent John Jett currently leads that battle over Steve Domingos.

Jett may have had the punt blocked against Detroit, but it was the fault of his protection unit.

Jackson cleared on gun charge

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Dallas Mavericks guard Jim Jackson was acquitted Wednesday of all charges stemming from a December incident in which four people accused him of waving a gun at them.

The jury of four men and four women deliberated less than two hours before clearing Jackson of one count of aggravated menacing and three counts of disorderly conduct.

Franklin County Municipal Judge Steven Hayes had dismissed one charge of improper handling of a firearm in a motor vehicle and one count of disorderly conduct.

The former Ohio State star shook hands with his attorneys after the verdict but showed no emotion. He said that before the charges were filed, his accusers had asked him to apologize.

"They wanted me to apologize for something I didn't do and I'm not going to do that because I didn't do anything wrong," Jackson said. "That's why I wanted to have a jury case to prove my innocence."

Prosecutor Tony Paat could not be reached to comment Wednesday night. Calls to the county prosecutor's office were not answered and there is no listing for Paat in the Columbus directory.

Jackson was accused of pointing a gun at the four and shouting racial slurs as they were driving down a Columbus street Dec. 30. Jackson and his accusers all are black.

During closing arguments Wednesday, Paat said jurors should have believed testimony of the four, even though they weren't as composed as those who testified for Jackson.

Commissioner grants Coleman postponement

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The arraignment for New York Mets outfielder Vince Coleman on a felony explosives charge was postponed Wednesday.

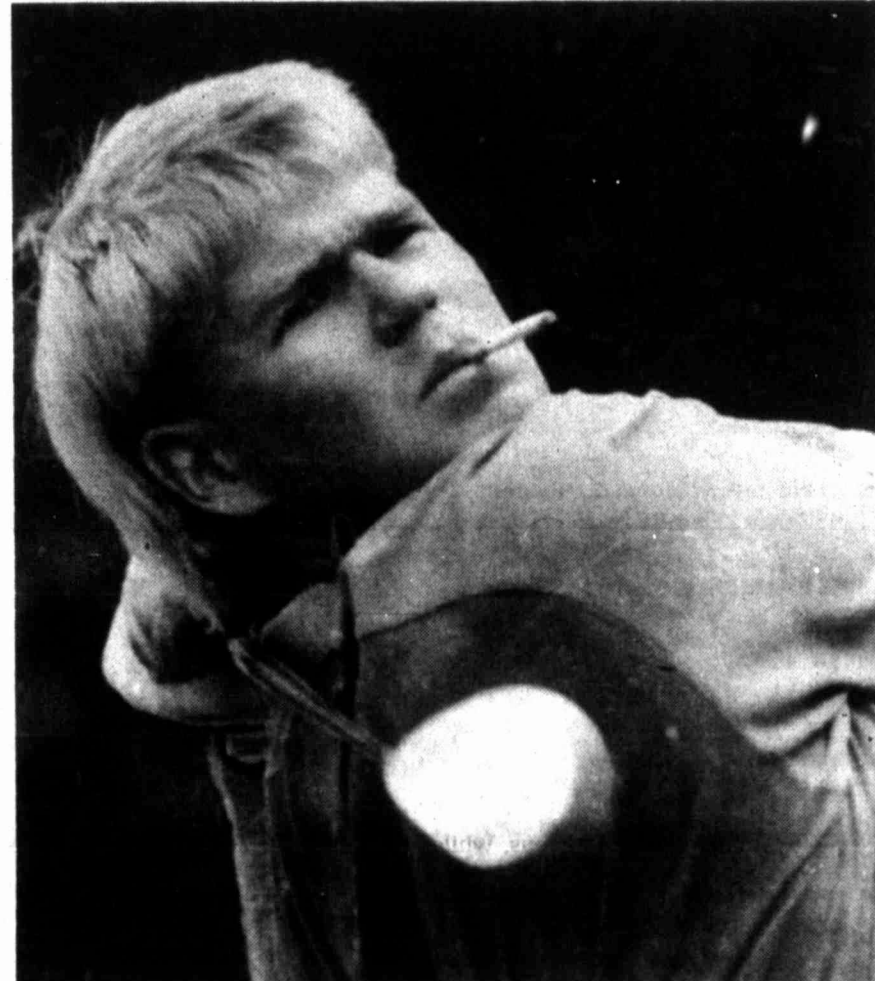

Municipal Court Commissioner Abraham Khan granted the delay sought by Coleman's lawyer, Robert Shapiro, who received the new date of Oct. 8.

Shapiro said he requested the delay because he had yet to receive a report on the three people injured by the explosive, which Coleman threw near fans outside Dodger Stadium last month.

Coleman, free on $5,000 bail, appeared in court with attorneys Shapiro and Michael Nasatir. Outside the courthouse after the proceedings, which took only a couple of minutes, Shapiro spoke for about 10 minutes. Coleman, at Shapiro's side, never said a word.

However, less than four hours after the court proceeding, Coleman did a 13-minute interview with Jim Hill, a sportscaster for CBS-TV in Los Angeles.

John Daly tees off on the ninth hole during practice for the 75th PGA Championship Wednesday at the Inverness Club in Toledo, Ohio.

Ryder spot at stake for PGA participants

By The Associated Press

TOLEDO, Ohio — Paul Azinger, Fred Couples, Payne Stewart and Tom Kite can relax today. All they're doing is competing in the opening round of the PGA, the last of the year's major golf championships.

The same does not hold true for Fuzzy Zoeller, Ray Floyd, Lanny Wadkins, Curtis Strange, Larry Mize, Jeff Maggert and John Daly.

All are competing in a tournament within a tournament this week, struggling not only for the 75th PGA Championship but also for the last few spots on the United States' Ryder Cup team.

Ten members of the 12-man team come off a points list that closes in this event.

Azinger, Couples, Kite, U.S. Open winner Lee Janzen, Corey Pavin and Stewart are assured of positions on the team that will play Europe's best next month at Sutton Coldfield, England.

Stewart put the importance of making that team in focus.

"I'm counting this a successful season," said Stewart, who has not won this year but has three runner-up finishes and was third in three others. "I came into this season with one goal. To make the Ryder Cup team. I've done that. So that makes it a successful season."

He and the other five men leading the Ryder Cup list — Couples, Kite, Janzen and Pavin — are among the leading contenders for the $300,000 first prize at Inverness.

The top choices, however, are all foreign-born: Nick Faldo of England, British Open title-holder Greg Norman of Australia and Nick Price of Zimbabwe, who has won his last three American starts and has collected eight victories around the world since winning this title a year ago.

Faldo already has secured a place on the European Ryder Cup team while Norman and Price, due to their nationalities, are not eligible for the biennial competition that has gained such enormous prestige in recent years.

While they have no particular interest in that competition, other men on both sides of the Atlantic are mightily concerned.

So much so that Gordon Brand Jr. of Scotland and David Gilford of England — both eligible for this tournament — passed it up to play in a European event in an effort to improve their chances for a place on their team.

John Cook, Davis Love III, Chip Beck and Jim Gallagher hold positions number 7-10, respectively, on the American points list with totals ranging from 697.500 to 574.167.

Angels' rookie quiets Rangers; Blue Jays gain breathing room

By The Associated Press

On another 100-degree night in Texas, California rookie Hilly Hathaway definitely was not throwing heat.

Hathaway, however, kept the Rangers guessing and pitched the Angels to a 4-1 victory Wednesday.

Hathaway (4-1) won his third straight start. He gave up five hits in six innings, and Mike Butcher got his sixth save.

Kevin Brown (9-8) gave up a career-high 13 hits in his major league-leading ninth complete game.

The first three batters of the game got hits, with Tim Salmon's ground-rule double to the wall in right field scoring Luis Polonia. Greg Myers and Eduardo Perez also drove in runs for a 3-0 lead in the first inning.

Texas scored in the sixth on an RBI single by Rafael Palmeiro.

Tigers 15

Orloles 5

Dan Gladden hit a grand slam for the second straight game as the Detroit Tigers routed Baltimore.

A day after Gladden's slam highlighted a 15-1 romp, his third slam of the season helped the Tigers take a 13-1 lead in the fourth inning. Travis Fryman, Kirk Gibson and Tony Phillips also homered for Detroit. The Tigers have scored 30 runs against Baltimore without a single RBI from Cecil Fielder, the major league leader.

Bill Gullickson (8-6) was the winner and Rick Sutcliffe (9-8) was the loser.

Yankees 8

Red Sox 3

Jimmy Key pitched six strong innings and Roger Clemens walked three batters in a four-run first, leading the New York Yankees over the Red Sox. Boston's longest home winning streak in five years ended at 11 games.

Clemens' wildness ruined the anticipated duel between two of baseball's best pitchers. He walked six, one less than his career high, and dropped to 9-9 by losing his third straight start.

Key (14-4) leads the American League with a .778 winning percentage and 2.74 ERA.

Athletics 3

White Sox 1

Craig Paquette hit a two-run homer and rookie Todd Van Poppel pitched 5 2-3 shutout innings as the Oakland Athletics beat Chicago.

Van Poppel (3-3), who has won his last three starts, limited Chicago to three singles before giving way to Rick Honeycutt in the sixth. Dennis Eckersley got his 25th save.

Wilson Alvarez (8-8), 0-4 in his last seven starts, allowed three runs and four hits in five innings.

Blue Jays 4

Twins 2

Paul Molitor drove in three runs and scored twice, helping Juan Guzman and Toronto beat Minnesota. The win, along with losses by Boston and Baltimore, put the Jays up by two games in the AL East.

Guzman (8-3) won for the first time since June 26. He struck out 10 and gave up four hits in eight innings. Duane Ward got three outs for his 30th save.

Jim Deshaies (11-10) gave up five hits in his first complete game of the season.

Mariners 4

Royals 3

After a lifetime without a grand slam, Mike Blowers is making up for lost time.

With two outs in the sixth inning Wednesday night, Blowers timed Chris Haney's 2-2 changeup to perfection, knocking it over the wall in dead center for his third slam of the season and powering the Mariners past Kansas City.

It tied Blowers for the league lead in grand slams with New York's Mike Stanley and Detroit's Dan Gladden.

Chris Bosio (5-7) struck out four of the first five batters, and fanned five in seven innings. He gave up three runs on six hits and did not walk a batter. Ted Power got two outs for his third save.

The loss snapped Kansas City's four-game win streak and cost them a chance to move within 2 1/2 games of Chicago in the AL West.

Bret Boone's one-out single started the Mariners' sixth inning against Haney (7-5), who lost his third straight start. Ken Griffey Jr. singled Boone to third.

Indians 7

Brewers 5

Even though the Cleveland Indians trailed by only one run going into the ninth inning Wednesday night, there was not a lot of reason to think they would rally.

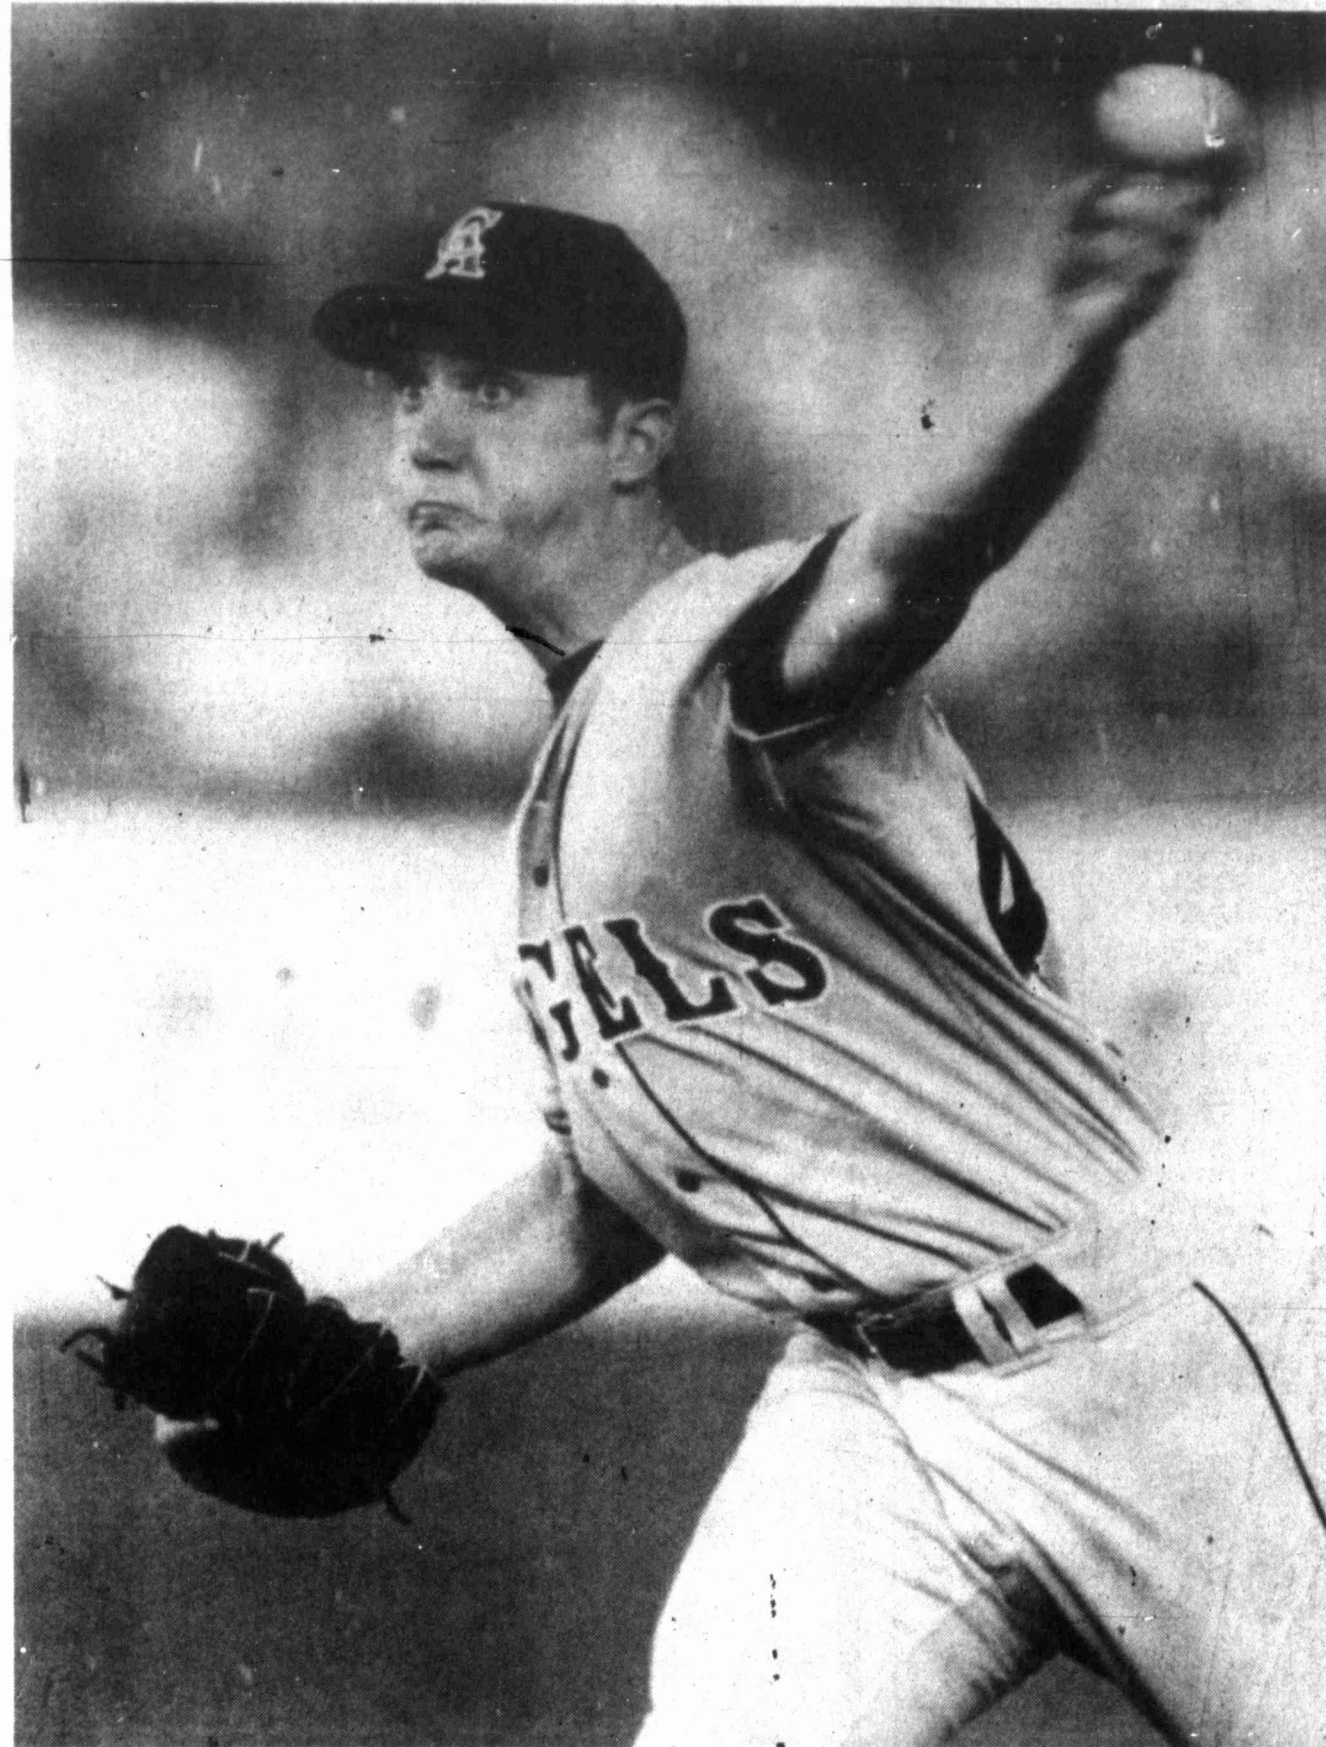

After all, the Indians had been 0-56 this season when losing after eight innings.

But third baseman B.J. Surhoff's error helped Cleveland score three runs in the ninth, and the Indians beat the Milwaukee Brewers 7-5.

The Indians, down 5-0 in the sixth, ended their four-game losing streak and stopped Milwaukee's three-game winning string.

Behind 5-4 in the ninth, the Indians loaded the bases against reliever Jesse Orosco (1-3). Pinch-hitter Reggie Jefferson was hit by a pitch with one out, Carlos Baerga bunted for a single and the runners advanced on a wild pitch. Albert Belle, who hit his 32nd home run earlier in the game, was intentionally walked.

Paul Sorrento followed with a grounder under the glove of Surhoff, scoring two runs and putting Cleveland ahead 6-5. Glenallen Hill added a sacrifice fly.

Hilly Hathaway, above, of the California Angels delivers a pitch against the Texas Rangers Wednesday. Hathaway led the Angels to a 4-1 win.

Astros defeat Padres; SF's Burkett wins 18th

By The Associated Press

Eric Anthony hit a three-run homer and Scott Servais and Andujar Cedeño also connected off Andy Benes in a five-run fifth inning that carried the Houston Astros to a 9-6 victory over the San Diego Padres on Wednesday night.

Darryl Kile (12-4) allowed only four hits over seven innings, surviving a bout of wildness and Billy Bean's first career grand slam to end his personal three-game losing streak. He struck out seven and walked five. Doug Jones pitched two innings for his 22nd save.

Leading 6-3, Benes (13-8) slipped and fell on his back while making his warmup pitches prior to the fifth. He then allowed homers by Servais, his 10th, and Cedeño, his sixth, to start the inning. Craig Biggio and Steve Finley, who had three hits on the night, singled with one out before Anthony hit a line-drive over the right-field fence for his 13th homer.

Giants 6

Reds 0

John Burkett pitched his most dominating game of the season, blanking the Cincinnati Reds Wednesday to become the National League's first 18-game winner.

Burkett (18-4), who tied Jack McDowell of the Chicago White Sox for most wins in the majors, took a no-hitter into the sixth inning. After losing that bid and giving up two singles to lead off the seventh, Burkett showed no signs of tiring.

Bobby Ayala (4-5) had a rough outing in his first start of the season. He gave up four runs in the second, when the Giants sent nine men to the plate.

Braves 4

Mets 2

Greg Maddux's record against New York speaks for itself.

In his first season with Atlanta, the Braves right-hander has three complete-game victories in as many starts against the Mets.

On Wednesday night he improved his lifetime mark against them to 16-9 with a five-hitter as the Braves won 4-2 backed by home runs by Jeff Blauser and David Justice.

Phillies 6

Expos 5

Mariano Duncan's bad-hop single over a drawn-in infield in the ninth gave the Phillies the victory.

Milt Thompson walked to open the ninth, stole second and continued to third on catcher Darrin Fletcher's throwing error. After Lenny Dykstra was intentionally walked, Duncan bounced a single over shortstop off John Wetteland (7-3).

David West (4-3) pitched one inning for the victory.

Marlins 12

Cubs 11

The Florida Marlins scored twice in the bottom of the ninth to set a franchise record for runs and match their longest winning streak with four in a row.

Jeff Conine's sacrifice fly tied it 11-11 and Gary Sheffield's single won it.

Richie Lewis (5-1) worked one inning for the victory. Randy Myers (1-3) came on to start the ninth for the Cubs and blew a save for the second straight night.

Rockies 3

Dodgers 2

Dante Bichette and Pedro Castellano had RBI singles and Armando Reynoso ended a personal four-game losing streak as the Colorado Rockies beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 3-2 Wednesday night for their fourth straight victory.

Reynoso (8-8) helped the Rockies match their longest winning streak of the season with his first victory in a month and second this season over the Dodgers. He also had three singles after entering the game with two hits in 45 at-bats this season.

Pirates 8

Cardinals 6

Mark Whiten hit one of the longest homers ever in Three Rivers Stadium, but the St. Louis Cardinals' mistake was trying to play long ball with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Lonnie Smith's second homer of the game tied it and Al Martin followed with a two-run shot to complete a three-run rally in the eighth inning, giving the Pirates the win.

PUBLIC NOTICE

RAILROAD COMMISSION OF TEXAS LEGAL DIVISION
DISTRICT 08 CASE NO. 0202573
July 22, 1993 NOTICE OF HEARING
NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN to the public and to all interested persons that under the legal authority and jurisdiction of Title 3, Oil and Gas, Subtitle A, B, and C of the Texas Natural Resources Code, and pursuant to Article 6252-13a, Revised Civil Statutes of Texas, the RAILROAD COMMISSION OF TEXAS will hold a hearing on SEPTEMBER 3, 1993 at 9:00 a.m. at the William B. Travis State Office Building, 1701 N. Congress Avenue, Austin, Texas. This hearing will be conducted in conformity with the Administrative Procedure and Texas Register Act, TEX. REV. CIV. STAT. ANN. art. 6252-13a (Vernon Supp. 1991). For room assignment, on the date of the hearing please check the bulletin board in the 1st Floor lobby. Persons planning to attend this hearing are urged to contact the applicant (see service list) immediately prior to the hearing date to be sure that the hearing will proceed on the scheduled date.

The Commission will consider the application of Sharp Image Energy, Inc. for a spacing exception permit under the provisions of 16 Texas Administrative Code 53.37 (Railroad Commission Statewide Rule 37) to drill well No. 1, Penn Lease, 40 Acres, Section 30, Block 25, H.A.T.C. R.R. Co. Survey, A-783, Vincent, N. (Pennsylvania Reef) and Wildcat Fields, Howard County, being 2 miles north from Vincent, Texas. The location of this well is as follows: 82' from south line and 218' from east line of lease; 167' from north line and 2402' from west line of survey. This well is to be completed at an approximate depth of 7800 feet. If a continuation is necessary, this hearing will proceed at the William B. Travis State Office Building, 1701 N. Congress Avenue, Austin, Texas, and to the extent possible, on subsequent working days. The room number and exact time of the continuation will be announced on the record in this proceeding and recorded with Docket Services, Legal Division, Railroad Commission of Texas. ANY REQUEST FOR POSTPONEMENT of this hearing must be received no later than five (5) working days prior to the scheduled date shown above. Copies of such request must be forwarded to all parties shown on the service list. PURSUANT TO SAID HEARING, the Commission, may enter such rules and orders as in its judgment the evidence may justify, including placement of the proposed well at a different location from that requested by applicant, and the establishment of the amount of acreage on the applicant's tract that can reasonably be considered to be productive of hydrocarbons for the purpose of assigning an allowable. TO APPEAR in support of or in opposition to this proceeding, a party other than the applicant must file with Docket Services, Legal Division, at least five (5) working days in advance of the hearing date, a notice of intent to appear. ANY INDIVIDUAL WITH A DISABILITY who needs auxiliary aids and services in order to have an equal opportunity to effectively communicate and participate in this hearing must request such aids or services at least two weeks prior to the scheduled hearing by notifying the Personnel office of the Railroad Commission of Texas by mail at P.O. Box 12967, Austin, Texas 78711-2967, or by telephone at (512) 463-7327 or TDD No. (512) 463-7284. ALL EXHIBITS filed as a part of the record in this cause must be specific, and, if a reference includes an exhibit filed in prior proceedings before the Commission, a copy of such exhibit properly identified shall be submitted for this record. THIS HEARING REQUIRES NOTICE BY PUBLICATION.

More playoffs mean more action, drama and fans

The crack of the bat, the smell of the grass, the cheers of the crowd - all are as prevalent as ever. Still, some people think baseball is dying.

Purists say baseball swerved toward the intensive care unit when Major League Baseball voted to expand the playoffs for 1994 and beyond. They fear baseball's post-season will turn into the long, dragged-out playoffs that professional basketball and hockey offer.

The importance of the long haul - the regular season - has indeed been part of the allure of the national pastime. Win your division, whether it takes 85, 90 or 100 wins, or go home. Second place means zero.

Once, however, the deal was this: win your league or go home. No divisional playoffs - all you had were the regular season and the World Series. From 1903, the year of the first World Series, until 1968, only two major league baseball teams played in the postseason each year.

Certainly the purists' uproar caused by the birth of the league championship series in 1969 was as loud as it is now, but who suffered from that? Some of the greatest moments in baseball history have occurred in the playoffs - just go back to last year's NLCS-winning hit from little-known Francisco Cabrera.

Dave Hargrave

Why whine about another set of dramatic moments?

Major League Baseball will invite eight teams to the playoffs next season - the four division winners and the four runners-up. The division winners will play the runners-up in best-of-five series that will precede the league championship series.

Think of the excitement this playoff system would add to the National League West if it were in effect today. The division race is over unless the Giants choke, so all the games in the division are meaningless. If the second-place team made the playoffs, however, the Braves would be sitting pretty, and the Astros, Dodgers and Reds would still be on the fringe of the pennant race instead of playing out the string in front of small crowds.

More fans would be in the stands simply because more teams would be in the pennant race. Attendance increases every year already - hear that, worriers? - and the new playoffs will only add to that increase.

Certainly, though, there are problems with next year's playoff system. First, the season will soon be dragging into November. Major League Baseball has already said if the 1996 World Series goes to seven games, Game Seven will be played Nov. 3.

Lord help the players if that game is in Cleveland.

It would be smart to start the season earlier, say March 25 or so. By then, it's warm enough to play in every major league city, at least during the day. But baseball is going to start in early April, as usual.

Another problem will be television coverage. With four playoff series happening at the same time at the start of the postseason, there's no way to have each game on television everywhere. The networks will provide NFL-like regional coverage, with parts of the country seeing one game and other parts seeing other games.

Not being able to see every pitch of every playoff game just doesn't seem right, but get used to the idea.

Another problem is the decreased worth of divisional championships, which is one of the purists' rallying cries. Division titles in the NBA and NHL mean little more than home-field advantages, and that is likely to happen in baseball - a sport where home-field advantage isn't nearly as helpful as it is in football and basketball.

If the division champions were given the home field for all of the playoff games against their second-place followers, that would be more fair than getting just one extra home game. But that won't happen. Owners want to make the playoffs to make additional money, including gate revenues, so they'd never allow a playoff team to be denied home games.

OK, so it's flawed, but isn't the possibility of 20 extra playoff games worth a few risks? Longtime fans have endured more traumatic changes - the designated hitter and artificial turf, for example - yet still love the game, and the younger fans will likely be happy to see their teams get a better chance to make the playoffs.

Any change that means more baseball games can't be all bad.
