Walker has solid foundation for success

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

A solid education background and diligent work builds the foundation for one's career goals.

This ethic fuels the energy in which 22-year-old Carolyn Walker uses toward a career in business.

Following five semesters of college, Walker decided to come back to Big Spring and work to add to her personal funds to continue school.

"I know it's important not to be picky about job opportunities if you're just starting off because that's the only way you can get some experience and money to do something more," she said. "If you're ever going to be anything, you've got to work hard no matter what it is you're doing."

Born in Snyder, Walker has lived in Big Spring since her youth. She attended school in Forsan.

The oldest of three girls, she developed a sense of responsibility from family members and school activities such as band, track and student council.

"When I was growing up, I felt a responsibility to try and help keep the kids in line," she said.

With such pressure at a young age, Walker found escape in activities such as one-act play.

"As a junior, some friends talked me into getting involved in it," she said. "I was so glad because I loved performing; being somebody different."

Her eagerness to perform reflected her willingness to take hold of her status in life.

"I knew I wanted to do something after I graduated, but I wasn't sure what I wanted to do," she said. "I knew I had a lot of options."

After graduating in 1989, Walker opted to attend Western Texas College in Snyder. She lived with her grandparents, who helped her financially.

From basics to business management courses, Walker felt she was adding to her cachet of knowledge. She said education would propel her closer to her goal.

"I realize that college is a definite need now," she said. "It's not like when my parent's generation went to school."

"All they had to do was graduate from high school," she added. "You've got to know so much more now."

One of the most difficult tasks for Walker has been her postponement of college.

Working for a water store and a grocery store, while in school, the stress of sustaining herself financially became a heavy burden.

"You don't want to say, 'Hey I will do this college thing later,'" she said. "You feel like if you wait, there might not be a later."

Her mother, Linda, and her Grandparents have been a strong source of emotional and financial support for her through difficult times.

"They've helped me a lot," she said. "But, I couldn't help but feeling I wanted to do this on my own."

About a year ago, she started a job at Walmart Discount Store, as a health and beauty aids sales clerk.

"I try to set money aside," said Walker, who lives with a room mate and is single with no children. "It's hard."

Although finding her niche proves difficult and discouraging at times, Walker maintains a faith which inspires her through adversity.

"I am a Christian," she said. "I believe and I wish more people would believe that God won't give you anything you can't handle."

Coupled with her faith, a strong work ethic will eventually advance Walker toward her ultimate goal; becoming a business owner.

"I know I can do it," she said. "If I'm ever going to get anything done, I've just got to keep working hard."

Random shots wound child

Police have suspect in custody

By GARY SHANKS
Staff Writer

A two-year-old Big Spring girl has been treated and released, following an apparent random shooting by a Coahoma man, shortly after midnight.

The shooting occurred in a parking lot of the 7-11 store at 18th and Gregg streets, according to police reports.

According to witness reports, a man opened fire from his car, spraying the parking lot area with several 12-gauge shotgun blasts.

Three vehicles were hit in the attack, including that of Armando Salgado, 39, of Big Spring. In the car, his two-year-old daughter was struck in the head by shotgun pellets, according to the reports.

The pellets, however, did not penetrate deeply and the girl was released in good condition from Scenic Mountain Medical Center.

The gunman reportedly stepped from his parked vehicle and fired from across the street into the parking lot.

According to witness accounts, the assailant fled in his vehicle before police arrived on the scene.

Piecing together witness testimony, police had a suspect and contacted the Howard County Sheriff's Office, according to Lt. Scott Griffin of the Big Spring Police Department.

Deputies arrested Gregory Stephen Turner, 43, of Coahoma at his home. As of 9 a.m. today, Turner remained in the city jail, awaiting transfer to the Howard County Jail.

He is charged with one count of attempted murder, in the case of the young girl, and one count of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon.

Bond had not been set as of 9 a.m. today.

Police have not yet established a motive for the attack.

Crucial years ahead for changes in roles

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first in a six-part series examining the provision of mental health care in Texas and Big Spring State Hospital's changing role in that system.

MARTHA E. FLORES
Regional Editor

The movement from hospital-based services to community-based services in the mental health care field is about 30 years in the making, but for Texas the next few years will be the most crucial.

Within the next six months, Texas mental health services, as they are known, will go through major metamorphosis. Hospitals may no longer be able to exceed occupancy set by funding guidelines. Changes will also entail an equal distribution of hospital beds throughout the state by reducing excess beds to mental health authorities above the median of funding per capita.

In July, TXMHMR Deputy Commissioner for Mental Health Services Steven P. Shon requested from the TXMHMR board the approval of hospital bed capping implemented January 1993.

In the past state hospital occupancy ran much higher than what was funded through the Texas Legislature. Shon told the board when occupancy exceeds its funded level, the hospital jeopardizes its certification, ability to deliver required services decreases and the consumer does not receive expected treatment, which may prolong length of stay.

"In essence the system is capped at the number of beds funded by the Legislature," Shon stated in a discussion paper addressed to the board. "Because the capped number of beds is a limited resource, TXMHMR has needed to examine a methodology to distribute this resource across-the-state in some kind of fair and equitable manner."

Out-patient care continues to advance

By GARY SHANKS
Staff Writer

Over the last 20 years, out-patient care for the mentally ill has advanced, with tremendous growth occurring in community-based care in the 1980s.

Whereas, in the distant past, mentally ill people were, due to a lack of effective treatment for many mental disorders, often "warehoused" in institutions, according to Big Spring State Hospital officials.

As medications and other treatments advanced, BSSH led the push for accessible out-patient care, initiating the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation's first satellite mental health center in 1968. This is currently called the Howard County Mental Health Center.

BSSH's first outpatient program began on the hospital grounds in 1963, according to BSSH officials.

The outreach centers, supplying professional services from psychiatrists, psychologists and social workers, were moved into a 23-county area now covered by BSSH's Community Services Center, explained Gail Zilai, Central Region deputy director of community services.

Within this area, new satellite centers have been established, from 1968 to 1991, in Dawson, Mitchell, Gaines, Reeves, Ward, Nolan, Garza, Terry, Andrews, Winkler, Upton, Runnels and Yoakum counties.

Over the years, community services have expanded greatly at the Howard County Mental Health Center. Services provided include indi-

Residents protest presence of killer

The Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Some Uvalde County residents again are protesting the presence of convicted child killer Raul Meza and are vowing to keep it up until he is moved from their community for good.

"This is our paradise. We don't want him here," said Josie Albrecht, a mother of three who lives fewer than 500 yards from Meza's home.

About 35 Uvalde County residents protested Thursday in front of the home where Meza lives with relatives.

"How can we forget about a killer who lives in our back yard?" Ms. Albrecht's 10-year-old son Derek Albrecht was quoted as saying in Friday's San Antonio Express-News.

The Uvalde area residents vowed to demonstrate until Meza is transferred again.

Uvalde, about 90 miles west of San Antonio, was the first town to protest Meza after he was released from prison June 21.

Since then, Meza has been relocated to El Paso County, Wichita Falls, San Antonio, Mineral Wells and Sweetwater. In all those places, Meza was met with citizen outrage.

A Texas parole official said Friday reports that a Val Verde County resident had offered Meza a job and housing was a hoax.

"We followed up with a call to that individual. He had no idea of what we were talking about. There's nothing there," said Jesus Zapata, supervisor for the Uvalde County region for the Texas Division of Pardons and Paroles from his San Antonio office.

Meza has been in Uvalde since his Aug. 3 transfer from Sweetwater. It is the longest time he has spent in one place since his release from a Brazoria County prison.

Meza, 32, is under mandatory supervised release for the rape-slaying of 8-year-old Kendra Page of Austin in 1982.

He served 11 years of a 34-year prison sentence and was released because he had accumulated enough "good time" to complete his punishment. Now he is required to report to a state parole officer, officials said.

Some Uvalde County residents say the state's supervision of Meza won't be enough to keep him out of trouble.

"He's broken the law a bunch of times and he's going to keep on doing it," said protester Charlie Chapa. "He needs to be somewhere where police can be there in five minutes."

State Rep. Pete Nieto, R-Uvalde, said Uvalde County won't let state officials forget Meza and their plan to relocate him outside of Texas.

Critical comments results in prosecutor's firing

The Associated Press

BEAUMONT — The chief felony prosecutor for Jefferson County says he lost his job because he criticized a police investigation on a murder case.

Bruce Hoffer told the Beaumont Enterprise that District Attorney Tom Maness fired him Friday from his $53,000 job because police had made it plain they no longer would work with him. Hoffer had been with the department for eight years.

Hoffer was quoted in Wednesday's Port Arthur News as saying he was convinced of the guilt of a 22-year-old woman who was acquitted on Tuesday of murder charges in the shooting death of her 14-year-old cousin.

The woman had testified that her cousin accidentally shot herself while playing with a weapon that had been found in a truck.

The News quoted him, correctly he said, as saying the woman's tape-recorded confession was ruled inadmissible because the interrogating officers improperly warned her of her right to remain silent and to have an attorney present during questioning.

"They start out the tape with 'I assume you know your Miranda rights,' rather than just reading them to her," Hoffer told the News.

Hoffer said Maness confronted him Thursday about his statements and asked if he thought it proper to make the statements.

Hoffer said he replied, "It's the truth."

Hoffer said Maness told him he was "in a peculiar position to have a prosecutor that would have to prosecute cases with Port Arthur police who aren't going to work with him."

Hoffer said Maness told him he could resign, but he said he told the district attorney he did not want to quit. Maness then fired him, he said.

Detective Gene Christian, one of the two officers involved in the interrogation, said the Miranda warning was properly given, but did not come out on the tape because of a foul-up with the tape recorder.

"Consequently, when the tape was listened to, it was discovered that the tape could not be used in court," Christian said.

Federal audit could cost jobs

The Associated Press

AUSTIN — An audit of federal spending could result in a cut of at least 100,000 jobs, including some in Texas, should Congress approve the recommendations to be announced next month, state Comptroller John Sharp says.

Sharp, whose top aide, Billy Hamilton, has been directing the ongoing national performance review audit, said some of the jobs would be lost in Texas, but he did not say how many.

He said that big-ticket federal projects in Texas such as the space station and superconducting super collider would not be addressed in the review because they are matters of policy, not efficiency.

11 school districts plan finance elections

The Associated Press

AUSTIN — Eleven school districts that are required to share some wealth under the new school finance law will be holding elections Saturday, according to a Texas Association of School Boards survey.

The group surveyed the 99 property-rich districts which must share wealth under the law passed by the Legislature in May to meet the latest Texas Supreme Court order for finance reform.

Most of the 99 districts have said they prefer to send funds to the state or contract to educate other districts' students.

Of the 99 districts, 52 decided to seek voter approval for sending a check to the state. Another nine want their voters' OK to educate other districts' students, while 27 more are putting both options on the ballot.

Just one school district has reported a different choice: Tuloso-Midway Independent School District is moving some of its taxable property to Corpus Christi ISD's tax base.

Ten districts haven't yet selected an option, the survey found.

Other wealth-sharing options allowed under the new law are merging tax bases with one or more poorer districts, which would require an election; or consolidating voluntarily, which would not. No school districts have reported choosing those options.

Dan Casey, a TASB spokesman, said 10 districts already have held elections. Voters in all those districts approved the proposals. Seven chose to send money to the state, one voted to educate other districts' students and two endorsed a combination of those two options.

According to the TASB's survey, two more districts will vote Aug. 17, four on Aug. 21, five on Aug. 24 and 12 on Aug. 28. Additional elections are scheduled through Oct. 9.

Pentagon awards two youth programs

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Two youth-help drug awareness programs sponsored by Fort Sam Houston will be recognized Monday at the Pentagon as the best in the Army.

The post's nationally acclaimed La Salida program — Spanish for "The Way Out" — and Fort Sam Houston's Community Mentor Program will receive the Department of Defense Military Services Community Drug Awareness Award.

In conjunction with the presentation to Col. Edward G. Bradshaw, garrison commander at Fort Sam Houston, Army officials will announce the approval of more than $100,000 to fund the program for another year.

Funds sought to help volunteers

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The Texas Forest Service is soliciting donations to help volunteer firefighters combat the threat of wildfires in Central Texas.

The last session of the Texas Legislature established a Texas Fire Mobilization Fund.

No state funds have been set aside for the account, which is handled by the Texas Forest Service.

"It is estimated that annually the volunteer firefighters of Texas contribute over $31 million of their time if they were just paid minimum wage," said Bruce Miles, director of the forest service.

"It is incumbent upon the rest of us to support their operating expenses, especially when they leave their country. Dry conditions throughout the state have left much of Central Texas under an extreme wildfire danger. Recent fires have covered large areas in Bandera, Menard and San Saba counties.

Contributions to the firefighting fund may be sent in care of the Texas Forest Service, College Station, Texas 77843-2136.

Houston to get two area code by 1997

HOUSTON (AP) — High tech could split Houston into two area codes.

Fax machines, cellular phones, modems and pagers are taking a toll on the city's 713 area code and the boom could lead to a split by 1997.

Southwestern Bell is considering the move since Houston is scheduled to run out of phone number combinations by then.

Of 7.8 million potential phone numbers in the 713 area code, 6.8 are in use. About 850,000 numbers were added in 1992.

However, when Houston needs a second area code — as San Antonio did last year — "what's toll-free now will be toll-free then," said Becky Woodworth, a Southwestern Bell spokeswoman.

Six months after San Antonio split area code 512 into 512 and 210, phone customers were able to dial the former area code and reach their party.

Insurance reforms are under review

AUSTIN (AP) — Insurance reforms sought by consumer advocates but blasted by the insurance industry are also being scrutinized by lawmakers.

The House Insurance Committee has scheduled a meeting Thursday to review the proposals that are before the State Board of Insurance.

Committee Chairman Rep. John Smithee, R-Amarillo, said Wednesday that several lawmakers are concerned the Insurance Board is making "11th hour" changes.

A number of proposals opposed by insurers will be considered by the board Aug. 30. That's two days before much of the board's authority is transferred to an insurance commissioner.

When lawmakers earlier this year approved transferring the board's authority, they didn't envision the board making a lot of last-minute changes, Smithee said.

Experimental surgery is woman's last hope

DALLAS (AP) — After a robber's bullet pierced Kelly Brodner's spine four years ago, her doctor at Methodist Medical Center predicted she would never walk again.

The 34-year-old Oak Cliff woman never accepted that.

"I can't explain it," said Ms. Brodner, who is paralyzed from the waist down. "I was sure that I'll walk again. I just didn't know how I was going to go about it."

This past spring, her father, Robert Brodner, read about a Tarrant County woman who was about to have an experimental spinal surgery.

Brodner called the woman and Dr. Harry Goldsmith, a respected neurosurgeon at Boston University Medical Center-University Hospital who performs the procedure.

The doctor helped Ms. Brodner apply for the surgery. Her name was placed on a waiting list for 1996, but has moved up several times.

Brodner expects that his daughter will be scheduled for surgery this year.

Clinton: Health care can't be victim

The Associated Press

VAIL, Colo. — Pivoting from his razor-thin victory on tax increases and spending cuts, President Clinton is raising the curtain on an issue that threatens to be even more divisive: a massive overhaul of the nation's health care system.

"In the months ahead, we cannot let health care reform fall victim to partisan bickering," Clinton cautioned in the draft of a speech prepared for delivery today.

"Reform is not a Democratic challenge, not a Republican challenge, not a liberal or conservative challenge. It is an American challenge that we must face together."

Clinton planned to outline his objectives in an address to the National Governors Association summer meeting in Tulsa, Okla., after a dawn flight from Vail, where he spent two days golfing and relaxing.

The centerpiece of Clinton's program is a comprehensive benefits package that would guarantee lifetime benefits for all Americans.

Reforming America's health care system was a central theme of Clinton's presidential campaign and will be a key measure by which his presidency is judged.

Yet, it is an issue that sharply divides Democrats, Republicans and states.

"I can safely say that not everyone will agree with all of the details of that proposal," Clinton said in a written statement Sunday. "But as we debate, let us consider the worst and most likely alternative: the status quo."

In his prepared speech, obtained Sunday, Clinton offered no insights on how he wants to pay for his program but made clear he will seek to require all companies and individuals who don't now buy insurance to do so.

The administration has said Clinton's plan will not require any broad-based tax, although a $1 a pack levy on cigarettes is believed likely.

Today's speech was the opening shot in what is expected to be an aggressive sales campaign. After months of delay, he is expected to unveil the plan in mid- or late-September. Congress is not expected to act on it until next year.

Clinton said over the weekend he hopes to avoid the political polarization that marked his first months in office. Not a single Republican voted for his $496 billion package of tax increases and spending cuts, which squeaked through Congress by a single vote in both the House and the Senate. Republicans also blocked his economic stimulus program.

"In the coming months, health care is going to be topic No. 1 in America," Clinton said in Sunday's written statement.

He said any program must guarantee that no American will ever lose health coverage and must control skyrocketing health care costs.

"To settle for incremental change is to doom our children to face these same questions a generation from now," he said.

Hoping to ease concerns of governors, Clinton's prepared speech said his plan gives state broad flexibility to carry on with their own programs.

Hijacking drama ends peaceable after 11 hours

The Associated Press

DUESSELDORF, Germany — An 11-hour hijacking drama ended early today when German police arrested an unarmed Egyptian who was demanding freedom for Sheik Omar Abdel-Rahman, the Muslim cleric linked to the World Trade Center bombing.

The hijacker was arrested in front of a toilet that he had been using on board the KLM jet, police said. No shots were fired and the hijacker did not have the explosives he had claimed to have when he demanded the plane be flown to New York, said police spokesman Friedhelm Werner.

The hijacker had released all 131 passengers from the KLM jet and, gradually, most of the seven-member crew. The last two hostages, the pilot and a flight attendant, escaped unnoticed about 2 a.m. Police commandos stormed the plane as soon as the two were clear, Werner said.

The hijacker was uninjured. No further details were to be given out before a news conference later today, Werner said. The hijacker's name was not released, and it was not known if he was a member of a particular group.

The hijacking started about 3 p.m. Sunday as the Dutch jet was over Germany en route from Tunis to Amsterdam.

After the plane landed at Duesseldorf, German police said the man was a 55-year-old Egyptian.

Passengers said they saw no evidence of weapons or a bomb. The said the man was calm and didn't appear dangerous.

The hijacker originally demanded the plane be refueled and flown to where Abdel-Rahman is being held on immigration charges.

Yellow fever still lingering in Africa and South America

The Associated Press

Although vaccines and pesticides have made inroads against yellow fever in the past two centuries, it lingers in remote regions of Africa and South America. An urban outbreak has been under way for six years in Nigeria.

In the 1970s, the United States abandoned a mosquito eradication program because of cost considerations and eliminated the requirement for a yellow fever vaccination for travelers from abroad.

Today's disease surveillance system probably would pick up any U.S. outbreak in its early stages, said physician-virologist Thomas P. Monath, a Harvard University professor and expert on yellow fever.

"Once one case was diagnosed, there would be a very dramatic response," he said.

Still, existing supplies of yellow fever vaccine in North America could be quickly depleted if a major city like New Orleans were stricken, according to the Institute of Medicine, part of the National Academy of Sciences.

"We would project with some confidence that 100,000 people would become ill with yellow fever and that 10,000 would likely die within a 90-day period," the institute's Committee on Emerging Microbial Threats to Health reported.

Other parts of the world are considered more vulnerable, particularly Asia, where yellow fever has never been reported, and the heavily populated Atlantic coast of Brazil.

"It's not a matter of if, it's a matter of when," Monath said.

Hurricane threatens Hawaii

The Associated Press

HONOLULU — A hurricane warning was posted for part of Hawaii as Hurricane Fernanda intensified and changed course Sunday, putting it on a path that would take it 100 to 200 miles north of the islands.

"All coastal areas on the east side of the island are on alert for possible evacuation," said Harry Kim, civil defense administrator for the state's Hawaii Island.

The southernmost Hawaii Island was placed under a hurricane warning at 5 p.m. HST (11 p.m. EDT), while the rest of the state — including Oahu, the most populous — remained under a less severe hurricane watch.

Two dozen youngsters with a baseball team were evacuated as a precaution Saturday night from a park at Punaluu, near the southern tip of Hawaii Island, Kim said.

Meanwhile, the approach of Hurricane Keoni toward Johnston Atoll prompted the evacuation of 900 people at the Army's chemical weapons facility 700 miles south of Hawaii.

At 5 p.m. HST, Fernanda was 370 miles east of Hilo on the island of Hawaii, moving west-northwest at 12 mph with sustained winds of 105 mph and gusts to 125 mph, the National Weather Service said. Gale-force winds of 39 to 54 mph extended for 200 miles.

"It's slightly stronger than it was yesterday," said Glenn Trapp, director of the hurricane center here. "We don't expect it to intensify any more and it should stay pretty much the same for the next 24 hours and then start to weaken."

The storm had shifted slightly to the north from its earlier due west course, which would see it pass 100 to 200 miles to the north of the Hawaiian Islands chain, Trapp said.

Nevertheless, a hurricane watch was issued for the state because winds of 74 mph or greater were possible, the weather service said. Fifteen to 25-foot surf was expected along eastern shorelines by Monday.

In 1992, Hurricane Iniki slammed into the Hawaiian island of Kauai, killing five people and causing more than $1.6 billion damage.

Hurricane Keoni was expected to brush Johnston Atoll with gale-force winds as its center passed 150 miles to the west, the weather service said.

At 5 p.m. HST, the intensifying Keoni was 180 miles southeast of Johnston Atoll, moving west at 14 mph with sustained winds of 110 mph, the weather service said.

21 wounded, sick Bosnians evacuated

LONDON (AP) — They called it Operation Irma, for the severely wounded 5-year-old Bosnian girl whose dramatic evacuation from Sarajevo grabbed world attention. Twenty-one sick and wounded Bosnians were airlifted to Britain and 18 were taken to Sweden for treatment on Sunday, the first beneficiaries of an airlift inspired by the evacuation of Irma Hadzimiratovic.

Prime Minister John Major's office said Britain had no immediate plans to accept more, but a spokesman for the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees in Sarajevo said further airlifts were possible elsewhere.

A Russian plane chartered by the British government landed at Heathrow Airport after noon Sunday with 14 adults and seven children. Ambulances rushed 13 to hospitals across London and southern England. The rest were flown to Birmingham in central England and Leeds, northern England.

The evacuees included 3-year-old Belma Shalako, suffering from a serious case of meningitis. Sarajevo doctors said she would not live long unless she received outside treatment.

Midair collision kills one, injures three

LINCOLN PARK, N.J. (AP) — Two small planes collided over an airport Sunday, and one person was killed. Three people were injured, including two in a car that was hit by falling debris.

The two single-engine planes were coming in for landings at Lincoln Park Airport when they collided about a half mile short of the runway, said Alan Yurman, a National Transportation Safety Board investigator. "Each aircraft had only the pilot on board," said Duncan Pardue, a spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration.

The pilot of one plane, which crashed into nearby Beaver Brook, was killed. Patrolman John Rondani identified him as Steven Janzen, 34, of Bloomingdale.

The other pilot, Ralph Johns, 48, of Kinnelon, was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital and Medical Center in Paterson. Hospital spokeswoman Denise Pinney said he was in stable condition and was being treated for multiple facial injuries and possible eye injuries.

The collision sheared the right wing off one aircraft, and it landed atop a car on a road just outside the airport, police said.

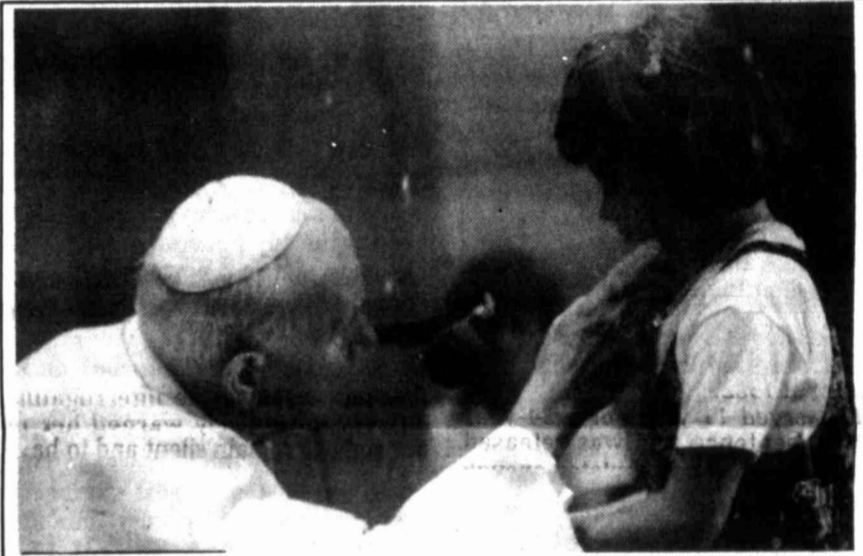

Convicted officer had prior to King beating

LOS ANGELES (AP) — One of the policemen convicted of civil rights violations for beating Rodney King, violated use-of-force policy by hitting a man during an arrest five months earlier, according to police documents.

Prosecutors in the civil rights case reportedly wanted to cite the incident for consideration at the sentencing of Officer Laurence Powell and Sgt. Stacey Koon on Aug. 4, but U.S. District Judge John Davies ruled it wasn't relevant.

Powell's attorney, Michael Stone, complained that prosecutors and the FBI were trying "scare up" evidence against Powell through such tactics as collecting all use-of-force reports that Koon and Powell wrote.

Details of confidential police Internal Affairs Division reports on the Oct. 3, 1990, incident and the disciplining of Powell by Police Chief Willie Williams were reported Sunday by the San Gabriel Valley News-papers.

Where can he go that parents will feel safe?

There is a convicted child killer on the loose in Texas and citizens don't want him living in their town. And, you can't blame them. With all the violence going on in our country, there is enough to worry about. And, the presence of a convicted child killer doesn't help ease the worry at all. Right now, convicted child killer Raul Meza is living in Uvalde County. This was the first community where he went after his release and the first community to protest his presence among them. Since his release June 21, Meza has been relocated to El Paso County, Wichita Falls, San Antonio, Mineral Wells and Sweetwater where he meet with citizen outrage. The release, in and of itself, is an outrage. The man was sentenced to 34 years for the rape and murder of an 8-year-old girl. He was released and is under mandatory supervision after accumulating enough "good time" to complete his sentence. So, where does he go? Where can he live in Texas where people will accept him? Probably nowhere. The parole board plans to keep it secret where they will place him next. But, that's not fair to the citizens who live there. They need to know, to protect their children. Maybe he won't kill again. But, the odds are he will. And, no parent wants to take that chance.

The Associated Press

Here are excerpts from recent editorials in newspapers in the United States and abroad.

Aug. 10 Times Union, Albany, N.Y., on President Clinton's budget battle:

So now it's out: Two Democrats who deserted President Clinton during last week's budget battle placed selfish interests above national ones. That's hardly news in Congress, where re-election is the name of the game, but it does place the budget debate in a different — and more accurate — perspective. ...

Two holdouts in the Senate were David Boren of Oklahoma and Richard Bryan of Nevada. ... Boren's opposition to the proposed energy tax seemed defensible — his oil state constituents would suffer under the Clinton proposal. So, too, for ... Bryan, whose tourist-state constituents would be heavily impacted by a higher gasoline tax.

Now it turns out that both lawmakers weren't acting solely on principle or altruism. ... Boren had some big-time contributors to think of as well. Reports show he collected $60,000 in donations from oil interests during Jan. 1 and June 30 while he was helping to eliminate the proposed BTU tax from the President's plan. ... Bryan received more than $100,000 from hotel and casino interests.

Not surprisingly, ... Boren's camp is busy explaining how all this was a coincidence — that the senator had scheduled fund-raisers long before the tax bill details were known. Banish any thoughts of a quid pro quo.

Yet even if it were coincidental — and to believe so is a stretch — it doesn't change matters. The fact, money is shaping, and in many instances corrupting, the political system. No wealthy contributor, or group or committee should have that kind of power. ...

Only a groundswell of public outrage will make it impossible for the current system to go unchallenged — and politically imperative for incumbents to reform it now.

Aug. 9 Sedalia (Mo.) Democrat on the deficit-reduction plan:

With (the Aug. 6) one-vote margin in the Senate, the Democratic Party took one of the biggest gambles in American political history. The matter at hand was Bill Clinton's "deficit-reduction" plan (although the current legislation bears the imprint of Congress much more than the White House). ...

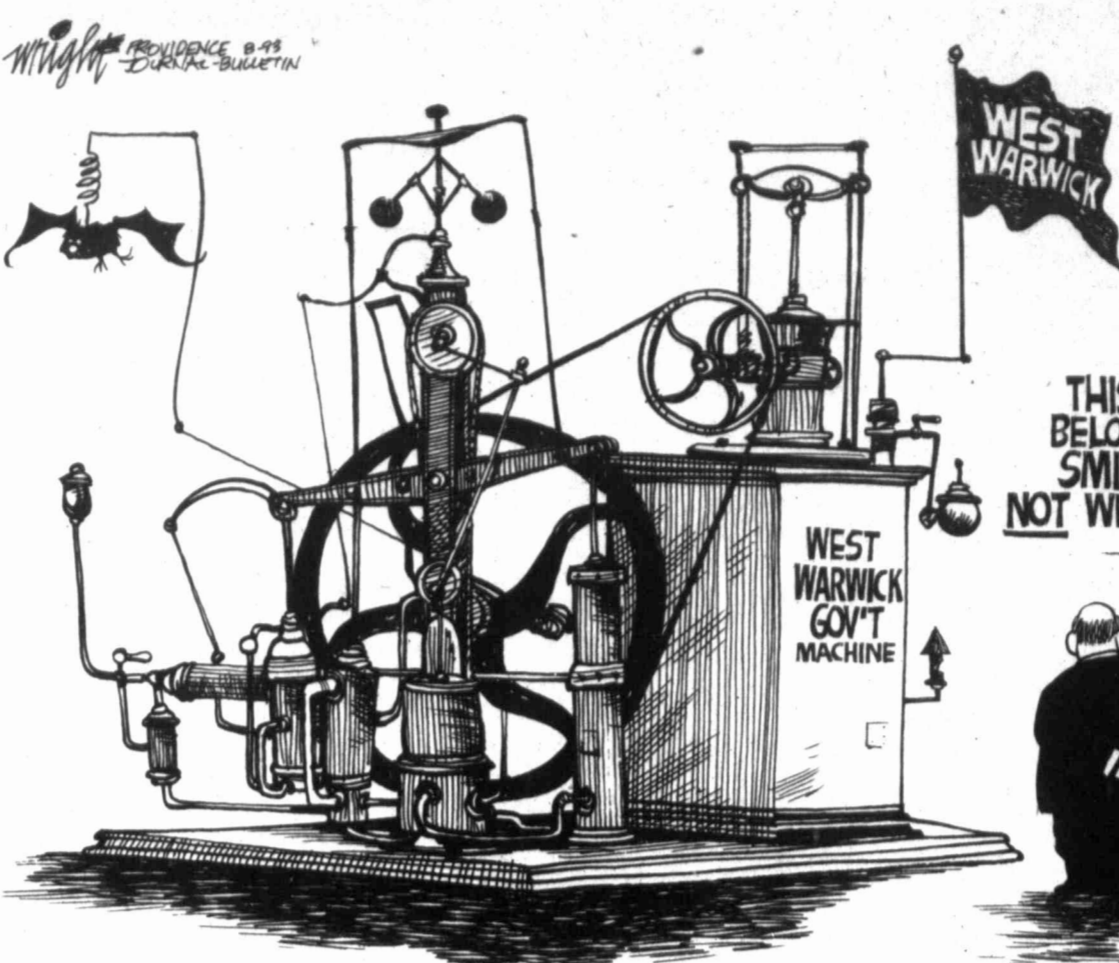

Economic texts and experience both testify that higher taxes act as a drag on the marketplace, cutting real incomes and tax revenues alike. Bill Clinton will get nothing approaching the new jobs and higher tax revenues he has forecast. On the contrary, we'll be lucky if the country doesn't slip back into a recession.

In a demonstration of party discipline never seen before, the reconciliation bill squeaked through without a single Republican vote in either the House or Senate. This baby belongs totally to the Democratic Party. ...

Aug. 10 The Clarion-Ledger, Jackson, Miss., on the deficit reduction plan:

Now that President Clinton's deficit reduction plan has passed by the slimmest of margins, sights should be set on more cuts.

Already, Democrats eager to disassociate themselves from the tax increases included in the plan are vowing for a further push toward spending cuts in the fall. Good.

Behind the growing threat in the north

Kudzu is growing in the North. It was in the papers. It has been seen in Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, and even New York. Kudzu, a fast-growing climbing vine, is not supposed to grow in the North. It is a Southern thing. It was brought to the South from Japan in 1930 to help with the South's erosion problem. Kudzu is green and it has large leaves. It also grows about six feet a second. After the first vine was planted in 1930 on Tuesday afternoon, it had completely covered every square inch of the South by Thursday morning. That kept water flowing from the North through the South from sweeping all the South's soil into the Gulf of Mexico. Now, everybody's wondering, how on earth could kudzu be growing in the North? The answer is simple. The United Daughters of the Confederacy (UDC), a racially motivated terrorist group headquartered in the South, clearly is responsible. I have no hard evidence, but it sounds just like something those hate-mongers would do, especially in light of what occurred in the United States Senate recently. The UDC asked the Senate to reissue its patent, but quick-thinking Sen. Carol Moseley-Braun, D-Ill., smelled a rat, noticed a Confederate flag in the organization's symbol, and immediately exposed the group as the sinister racists they are. Revenge for that exposure and the return of slavery obviously are the UDC's motives here. UDC operatives, probably disguised as Chinese deportees, slipped into the North with kudzu. They planted it in Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware and New York. To give further credence to this theory it was reported to me by my sources that UDC master-terrorist, Myrtle (Mad Dog Myrt) Jackson, a relative of Confederate Gen. Stonewall Jackson, may have been spotted in a Chinese-to-go restaurant in Manhattan recently. Mad Dog Myrt, a horticultural expert, reportedly has perfected a hybrid kudzu that is resistant to spray paint, which it would need to be to thrive in Northern cities. Planting kudzu across the North would have its strategic benefits. Clearly the primary reason the North won the Civil War was because of its overpowering industrial strength against the South's agriculturally based economy. If the kudzu spreads as rapidly in the North as it has in the South, it could bring a virtual halt to Northern industry. You get a bunch of kudzu vines crawling over some sort of mechanism and it would be rendered unworkable in an instant. As a result, plants all over the North might have to shut down, reducing greatly the ability of the area to produce materials that might be necessary to defend itself. On top of that, we have seen in the South how kudzu can slow the flow of water. Get enough kudzu growing in a large Northern city like New York and there could be massive water and sewage backups. So while Northerners were busy trying to get their machines working again, pumping the water out of their basements and dealing with backed-up sewage, a relatively small force of well-trained, well-armed members of the United Daughters of the Confederacy could move in, take over and lead a successful movement in the South without anybody to stop it this time. And, of course, slavery would immediately be reinstated so the UDC wouldn't have to pick its own cotton or refill its own tea glasses, anymore. Sen. Carol Moseley-Braun was right. Montreal: Architecture-mad city

MONTREAL — In the pink-tinted, mirrored sides of the ultra-modern skyscraper called Place de la Cathedrale, I can see the reflection of Christ Church Cathedral, a 130-year-old sanctuary.

The reflection is no accident, I'm told. Seven years ago the Anglican Diocese of Montreal caused quite an unholy stir when it sold part of its hallowed grounds to allow the construction of an office and shopping complex.

But the architect performed a modern miracle, creating a high-rise complement to the old church, replete with a courtyard that joins God and mammon with a simple fountain, flowers and the dramatic reflection of an old church in new glass.

Now Christ Church is well able to launch the $3 million renovation that tempted it to sell the valuable land. And by agreement the church also can use some of the shopping mall space for Sunday school and music rooms.

There's even a business in Place de la Cathedrale called the Bible House, where you can buy The Book in almost any language.

I haven't seen such a smooth blend of the sacred and secular since visiting Jim and Tammy Baker's former Heritage USA religious theme park in South Carolina. But a waterslide with a religious theme was taking it a bit far, for my tastes.

Put up the right building and you're forgiven anything in Montreal. This is a city mad for architecture.

Friends tell me it's not hard to spark a debate when anything new rises; and if anything old goes, something better had better take its place. In a single block you can see

Rheta Grimsley Johnson

Gothic spires, Tudor chimneys, Grecian roof ornaments and Italianate towers. And a few ugly high-rises.

During the 1880s Montreal architects each year designed a 100-foot ice castle for the winter carnival. They used 40,000 cubic feet of ice cut from the St. Lawrence River and held together with water poured between the blocks.

Each block weighed 500 pounds, and 50 men worked on castle construction.

When they finished, the towers and battlements were lighted by colored electric lights. Old pictures make the scene look like heaven with the thermostat turned down.

So it's no wonder that a people who would go to such trouble for a temporary structure take permanent buildings so seriously.

Roam any strange city and your first impression is bound to come from its architecture. Mine does, anyway.

We tend to judge urban books by their brick and mortar covers. Maybe that's why residents fret so about an evolving skyline. What will the tourists think?

Consider U.S. cities. Dallas who could level with a slingshot, there's so much glass; everything looks temporary. Add to that the confusing liquor laws — a dry pocket here, a wet area there — and you have a city with unsound footing.

San Francisco builds close to the ground, lest an earthquake topple the affair. It's beautiful, but again nothing seems permanent. Mother Nature is landlord and could serve eviction papers at any moment.

Denver and Phoenix need watering. Memphis is an acquired taste. Atlanta is a parking lot and a mall.

Montreal writer Michael Carin called Manhattan "the titanic sculpture." And it does have a certain foreboding and steely quality. All I have to do is think about New York and get hives.

New Orleans is the most beautiful American city, and that's only its old wrought-iron core; the rest might as well be Detroit.

Montreal is beautiful, no doubt about it. It is green, for one thing. And it is a city of churches, since they need two of everything here — a Catholic church for the French Canadians on one corner, a Catholic church for the English on the other.

Religion has always invested a lot in its architecture. So it stands to reason the city would benefit visually from the churches.

Next week there will be a free organ recital in Christ Church Cathedral; afterwards you can walk a few steps, past the cathedral's reflected glory, and shop Place de la Cathedrale.

Mess left from the Jeffries case

WASHINGTON — Dr. Leonard Jeffries, the black racist recently reinstated as chairman of the black studies department at New York City College, is a prominent sore tooth and embarrassment to American higher education.

He is also a highly visible product of a particularly ugly form of white racism, the condescending racism — mainly among white elitists — which willingly overlooks outrageous conduct and crackpot intellectual excess as acceptable so long as the perpetrators are black.

It is the a monstrous white insult to black people that blacks — some blacks, but certainly not all of them — are to be patronized and held to different standards, excused almost anything short of criminal behavior because, well, after all, they're black, aren't they? What can you expect? And anyway, it says in this smug white elitism, it's not important. They're black and it doesn't really matter, does it?

So it was that some found it easier for several years to indulge Jeffries than to challenge and discipline his own racism, a situation peeled back by U.S. District Judge Kenneth Conboy in a ruling which reinstated Jeffries in his former chairmanship and scalded City College officials.

The school administrators, Conboy suggested, had an accumulation of classroom evidence of Jeffries' virulent racism and his teaching of "patently absurd and wholly fallacious theories in class."

Yet, with evidence enough to show Jeffries was wholly unsuitable to lead a degree-granting program, Conboy suggested, the City College officials chose to deprive him of his campus post only after complaints at a public speech he gave off-campus in 1991 in which he was especially insulting to "rich Jews."

And even in stripping Jeffries of his department chairmanship after the "rich Jews" speech, Conboy said, the City College officials claimed he was dismissed not because of his racist teaching and class conduct but because of administrative trivialities, such as tardiness arriving to class and in posting grades.

Clearly, Conboy said, the Jeffries firing was a result of the speech and the public outcry that followed. School officials, he said, had not only violated Jeffries' right to free speech under the First Amendment, they had lied about it.

For years Jeffries had been indulged in his on-campus teaching about white "ice people" and black "sun people," while reportedly stirring into his courses his personal rantings on racism, anti-feminism, anti-Semitism, anti-homosexuality and any other targets of bigoted opportunity.

"For the most part," the judge wrote in the opinion reinstating Jeffries, "the university inexplicably, and perhaps cowardly, chose to ignore these improprieties and only acted against the plaintiff (Jeffries) when the public outrage over the July 20, 1991, speech, in effect, forced its hand."

As if speaking directly to that form of white racism which expects less from blacks and forgives everything, Conboy suggested that college officials had tolerated Jeffries' "hateful, poisonous and reprehensible statements" and even his "thuggish" behavior.

But, in the trumped-up firing, the officials had violated Jeffries' constitutional rights, Conboy said.

As if to stress the cravenness of white elitist racism, Conboy noted that less than a month before the "rich Jews" speech, Jeffries had been congratulated by the school president when he was re-appointed chairman of the black studies department.

Then, in the quick response to outcries at the speech, Conboy said, Jeffries was fired for "administrative incompetence."

What's clear — made clear again — in the mess left from the Jeffries case at City College is that too often condescending whites don't impose a double standard for black people; they impose no standards at all.

And in ignoring what often are important failures and lapses by pretending that blackness is itself an excuse, these indulgent white racists damage genuine relationships and do much to soil legitimate black pride in race and accomplishment.

"In looking at a methodology to distribute state hospital bed access, the department has had to examine how this resource fits into the entire mental health resource base and its distribution in the state. This examination reveals that, at the present time, there are enormous inequities in how mental health resources are made available to the local level. Some areas of the state have six times the per capita resources to access than other areas of the state."

During a phone interview with Shon, he paralleled the mental health services inequities with the state's public schools inequities. "It is basically the same concept as the school funding redistribution. Its intent is to equalize the resource space even if the money is limited in Texas."

"Lawsuits are coming down. Some judges are saying people are going to sue if something is not done. Its just a matter of legislation or time."

A Funding Formula Task Force, consisting of community mental health authorities and department representatives, developed a measure to distribute funds.

According to Shon's discussion paper, the method considers the sum of two funding sources: dollars allocated to community mental health authorities, primarily state general revenue dollars and federal block grant dollars; and dollars used by an authority due to residents being in a state hospital during the year to be the total resource base.

The formula is community mental health authority allocation plus state hospital resource used equals total resource base. Then, the total resource base of a community mental health authority, divided by its population gives the per capita funding level of the authority.

Of the funding, the first 25 percent of the dollars distributed will go to all authorities with the remaining 75 percent going to authorities who are below the median per capita level.

MHMR will also decrease the bed resources of authorities higher on the per capita scale. Those authorities will have less access to beds. By allocating a fixed number of beds to each authority the disparity will diminish as authorities will fall a few dollars of the per capita midpoint from each other.

Shon expects bed resources decreases to be phased within two years.

"In summary, the department will comply with required standards for quality care by living within the state hospital bed allocation funded by the Legislature," Shon stated in the discussion paper. "In order to insure fair access to these state hospital beds by community mental health authorities, a capped and fixed allocation of beds will be given to each authority."

"The allocation will be determined by taking into consideration the current funding formula. Allocations for current community-based services will not be moved between authorities. Instead, access to state hospital beds will be redistributed such that high per capita authorities will have less access and low per capita centers increased access to this resource. This will significantly narrow the large per capita resource gap that currently exists between community mental health authorities."

The board is expected to hand down a decision in August.

vidual and family counseling, group therapy, psychological testing, psychiatric evaluations, medication management, crisis counseling, family education and support groups, and assistance with referrals to other agencies, Zilai said.

Much of the thrust in community services, is providing the out-patient with the skills and support needed to live a normal, non-institutionalized life. It is expected that many of the HCMHC's 400 patients, called "consumers," will one day be able to live independent of these services, she said.

In the mid-1980s, services began to multiply at these community-service centers. A relatively new profession, called "case management," identified additional needs of the psychiatric out-patient, according to HCMHC case manager Tim Whaley.

The case managers travel to patients homes, identifying the special needs of that individual. Case managers work closely with consumers, assisting them in securing other needed services, according to Whaley.

The newest services for the out-patient is aimed at assisting the various special needs of children. Identifying personality disorders and children living in dysfunctional families, intervening at an early age.

Because of the proximity of BSSH, more services are available at the Howard County clinic. Hospital personnel and volunteers are more readily available here, according to Zilai.

Services at these outreach centers has taken on a new approach in recent years. Called "consumer-driven services," the individual patients and groups of patient representatives have greater control in designing specific programs needed.

This is readily seen in the administration of The Corral, where out-patients may gather for social interaction, and gain such needed skills as job training, according to Diane Linhart, program manger for The Corral. Members of The Corral even provide volunteer service in and around Big Spring.

Dear Sara,
 To make a napkin You Can use any soft and absorbent paper. You Can also make a napkin with a piece of cloth.
 To make a napkin pretty, you have use more - a lot more. You have to use geometry.

Every once in a while, some sexist bozo will say that girls don't do well at geometry - the math of shapes. Well, I don't think that's true.

I think any girl (or boy) who can turn a limp Scotties into a dazzling dish-top display has geometry mastered - and has a real flair for entertaining as well.

1 Start with a square. A square has 4 sides that are all the same length and 4 corners that are 90 degrees each. If you're using a paper napkin, start by opening it up to give you a big square to work with.

2 Fold the square in half. That gives you a rectangle - 4 90-degree corners and sides that are not all the same.

3 Fold the top corner down and the opposing corner up. That makes a parallelogram, which is the shape in drawing #4. It's like a rectangle relaxing and leaning over.

4 Turn the whole thing over and fold it in half along the dotted line. Let the peak of the triangle flip up so that it looks like drawing #5.

5 So now your napkin looks a little like 2 pyramids connected with a bridge. Fold in each side on the 2 dotted lines.

6 Tuck the end of the pyramid inside the flap you'll find on the other pyramid. Now, just stand it up and open the inside so that it looks like a crown.

This standing napkin has lots of shapes and is also a terrific way to impress visiting relatives. Make as many as You Can.

Howard trainer makes Hall of Fame

Howard College athletic trainer Everett Blackburn has been appointed to the National Athletic Trainers Association Honorary Hall of Fame National Committee.

"It's certainly a great honor to be one of the 10 committee members selected," Blackburn said. "There are around 17,700 members from the U.S. and 14 foreign countries as members of the association, so being one of the chosen few is of the highest honor. It will also be great for the college and town, as Howard College, Big Spring, Texas will follow my name and all correspondence."

Blackburn is also heavily involved on the district level with the Southwest Athletic Trainers Association, which is made up of the states of Texas and Arkansas. He serves as the Co-recording Secretary of the Executive Board and is chair of the 30-member Honor Awards Committee.

Howard places three on national team

Three former Howard College athletes were listed among the 1992-93 Distinguished Academic All-Americans, according to the National Junior College Athletic Association.

Matt Higgs, a 1993 graduate of Howard from Houston, was a pitcher for the Hawk baseball team. Higgs was recognized several times during the 1992-93 school year for his athletic as well as academic achievements, and among those awards was the Scholar Athletic Award he received at the 1993 All-Sports Awards Banquet for maintaining a 4.0 grade-point average while carrying 22 hours during the spring semester at Howard. Higgs also received the Best Pitcher Award at the banquet.

Dina Rozner of Blessing was a guard for the Lady Hawk basketball team. Rozner was also the 1992-93 recipient of the American Legion Citizenship Award at the 1993 Awards Convocation for her outstanding leadership, character and citizenship qualities. Rozner served as a Howard College Diplomat and received the Hustle Award at the 1993 All-Sports Awards Banquet last spring. Rozner graduated from Howard in the spring with a 3.80 GPA.

The third athlete named to the Academic All-American list is Anita Wright of Odessa. Wright was a 1993 graduate of Howard and was a member of the Lady Hawks basketball team. Wright received the Presidential Award for Outstanding Student of the Year at the 1993 HC Awards Convocation. She also received the Lady Hawk Award for her outstanding athletic contribution to the Lady Hawk's successful season, while maintaining a 3.80 GPA.

Paul Azinger, left, is congratulated by Greg Norman after Azinger won the 75th PGA Championship in a sudden-death playoff Sunday in Toledo, Ohio. The win was Azinger's first major title.

Azinger wins playoff to claim PGA title

By The Associated Press

TOLEDO, Ohio — Paul Azinger won the tournament and lost a title. Greg Norman lost the tournament and gained an unwanted piece of history.

"I think I'd acquired the label 'the best player not to have won a major,'" Azinger said Sunday after a playoff victory in the PGA Championship.

Norman, meanwhile, will now be known as only the second player to lose all four Grand Slam events in playoffs. Craig Wood was the other, in the 1930s.

"I've been there a lot more than some others," Norman said.

Norman's three-putt on the second extra hole cost him a chance to win the last of this year's big four tournaments.

Norman lost in playoffs to Fuzzy Zoeller in the 1984 U.S. Open, to Larry Mize in the 1987 Masters, and to Mark Calcavecchia in the 1989 British Open.

And, it was Norman's second wrenching PGA loss at Inverness. He lost on this same course in 1986 on Bob Tway's spectacular birdie from a bunker on the last hole.

That was the beginning of a series of difficult defeats that marked Norman's star-crossed career and which, eventually, sent him into a two-year decline.

"I've really turned my career around" beginning with a record-setting British Open triumph last month, he said. "I can tell myself I am back in contention every week."

Azinger won for the third time this season and the 11th time in his career. More importantly, he gained a major-tournament title that he needed to confirm his stature in the game. "It brought tears to my eyes," Azinger said. "It lifted a huge burden off my shoulders. There is tremendous satisfaction. I thought I was good enough to win a major championship."

On a couple of occasions near the end, Azinger admitted, "I called myself on it."

"Are you ready to deal with all this?" Azinger asked himself.

He proved he was.

He played the back nine in 32, finishing off a final round of 68. It produced a 272 total, 12-under-par, and was good enough for a playoff when Norman, playing behind him, missed an 18-foot, downhill, left-to-right birdie putt on the 72nd hole.

Norman shot 69, despite some short-game mistakes early in the round: a sand shot left in a bunker, a missed 2-foot birdie putt, a poor chip from behind the seventh green.

Only a few moments later, playing the 18th as the first hole of the playoff, he had an almost identical putt — same length, same line.

And it was the same result.

It lipped out and Norman grimaced in frustration and his 7-year-old son Gregory, watching from behind the green, pounded his fist on the ground.

On the second playoff hole, the 10th, both Azinger and Norman hit irons off the tee and had short irons to the green.

Norman got his about 20 feet above the hole, while Azinger was less than half that distance and below the hole.

Norman's downhill birdie attempt was woefully short, 5 or 6 feet.

Azinger also missed. "My heart sunk," he said. "I thought I'd missed my chance."

But Norman lipped out his second putt and it was all over.

"I misread it," he said. "I got painted."

It is a reference to the paint used on the inside of the cups to make them stand out for television. But it also reduces the size of the cup by the thickness of a coat of paint.

And it prompted a little zinger from the Zinger.

"We call it 'getting painted,' when one lips out," Azinger said. "I don't know if it makes any difference, but that's the excuse we use."

Azinger, however, no longer has to make excuses about his lack of a major-tournament title.

"It's a gigantic step for me," he said. "I'm really pleased I didn't have to carry that label very long. I didn't want to be 45 and lose my skills and not be able to do it."

"It's over," he said, then repeated: "It's over."

While the playoff was a two-man affair, several players were in contention for most of the final round. At the start, 11 men were within two shots of the lead. During the day, five men either led or shared the lead.

Nick Faldo of England played without a bogey in the hot sun, shot 68 and missed the playoff by a single stroke at 273.

Vijay Singh of Fiji, a relative newcomer to the American tour and a winner in the New York suburbs earlier this year, was next at 270 after a closing 70.

Tom Watson, who needs a victory in this event to become only the fifth man to make a career sweep of golf's Grand Slam events, once again came up short.

Watson missed 4-foot par putts on two of the first three holes and never really got back in it.

Teens arrested for murder of Jordan's father

By The Associated Press

LUMBERTON, N.C. — After a weekend of wild speculation surrounding the slaying of basketball star Michael Jordan's father, authorities arrested two teen-agers and said the motive seemed to be simple highway robbery.

The suspects, two 18-year-olds with criminal records, were caught in part through calls they made from James Jordan's car phone over several days following his slaying last month, police said.

The two allegedly had set out to rob someone, never imagining their victim would be the father of the Chicago Bulls basketball star, one of the world's richest and most celebrated athletes.

"What happened to Mr. Jordan was the kind of random violence that all the public are concerned about and afraid of," said Jim Coman, director of the State Bureau of Investigation. "It could have been any one of us."

The 56-year-old Jordan was shot in the chest more than three weeks ago, apparently after he parked his car to take a nap along the gravel entrance to a store on U.S. 74 near Lumberton in southeastern North Carolina, authorities said.

His body, found floating in a South Carolina creek Aug. 3, was not identified until Friday.

FBI agents said Saturday they were looking into the possibility of kidnapping and at Jordan's business interests in South Carolina. Questions also had been raised about the possibility of links between Jordan's death and his son's well-known gambling.

But on Sunday officials arrested Larry Martin Demery of Rowland and Daniel Andre Green of Lumberton on charges of murder, armed robbery and conspiracy. They were jailed without bond pending their first court appearance today.

"They had conspired to rob before they left home," said Cumberland County Sheriff Morris Bedsole. "I don't know if they knew who, what or where. This is what they ended up with."

Green was paroled in June after serving less than two years for a conviction in Robeson County for assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill and armed robbery, Robeson County Sheriff Hubert Stone said. Demery was under indictment for armed robbery and out on bond.

Police said Jordan was driving home from a friend's funeral when he stopped his car to rest. He was killed early in the morning on July 23, Stone said. They then went through his personal effects — and found out whom they had killed.

"Once they knew it was Michael Jordan's father, they tried to cover their tracks the best they could," by taking the body to South Carolina, said Capt. Art Binder of the Cumberland Sheriff's Department.

They apparently kept the car, a red Lexus 400, for three days before abandoning it near Fayetteville, police said. The car was seen in and around a trailer park where Green lived.

The car ended up in the hands of several youths who drove it for a while, then stripped it of parts. It was found last week on a secluded dirt road near Fayetteville, in Cumberland County, but officials did not know until last week that it belonged to Jordan.

Green and Demery were arrested at the Robeson County Sheriff's Department after being called in for questioning. No murder weapon has been recovered, authorities said.

Records from Jordan's cellular phone were used to trace the suspects, police said, declining to elaborate. "It was a tremendous help to us," Bedsole told The News &

Observer of Raleigh.

Joe Schulte, an agent for the State Bureau of Investigation, said more charges may be filed against the suspects.

"We determined pretty much at this point kidnapping probably won't be pursued, but in as much as there is a homicide involved, carjacking will be pursued at a later date," Schulte said.

Four youngsters arrested during the weekend and charged with vandalizing the car were not connected with the murder, Bedsole said.

A private service in honor of James Jordan was held Sunday afternoon at Rockfish AME Church in Teachey.

About 200 friends and family members joined Michael Jordan, his mother Deloris and his four siblings at the service. Reporters were kept across the road from the 100-year-old church. About 100 others lined the street.

"They were real close ever since he was a little baby, and he just wanted to tell us about that, about how much he loved his daddy," Betty Herring, a family friend, told The News & Observer of Raleigh.

"I remember when he was a little boy, he'd always hug his dad real tight around the legs. And he wouldn't let go."

Cowboy kicker feeling the preseason heat

By The Associated Press

IRVING, Texas — Lin Elliott still doesn't have any competition as the Dallas Cowboys placekicker but he's beginning to feel the heat from coach Jimmy Johnson.

"I'd be lying if I said I wasn't concerned," the Cowboys coach said after Elliott missed two 32-yard field goals in a 13-13 tie with the Detroit Lions in London.

"I'm not in a groove," said Elliott. "Before I kick it, I feel fine. Everything I'm missing, I'm pushing by a foot or pulling by a foot."

"It's crucial that I start making some. Sooner or later you've got to slap yourself in the face, grow up and make a few kicks."

Elliott, who won the job coming out of training camp last year, hasn't had any kicking competition this summer as Johnson elected not to sign another placekicker.

"It took him time to get into a groove last year and maybe that's what the situation is this time," said Johnson.

Elliott said he knows the score.

"Obviously if you keep missing field goals, something is going to have to be done," Elliott said. "I can't control that. All I can control is what I'm doing. Right now, I can't say I'm controlling it too well."

The Cowboys' only touchdown came on a 41-yard pass from Hugh Millen to Jimmy Smith, who had been mentioned in trade rumors with the Los Angeles Rams last week.

Dallas evened its preseason record at 1-1-1.

Johnson was still not pleased. He gave the team a chewing out in the middle of the game.

"I was disappointed that we didn't tackle well," Johnson said. "That was my biggest concern. The last couple of years we have started out as a very average tackling team."

But the main concern was the placekicking.

Black tackles tough challenge

By DAVE HARGRAVE Sports Editor

EDITOR'S NOTE - This is the last of four stories about the new assistant coaches for the Big Spring Steers. This year's four new coaches are Steve Hernandez, Daniel Arista, Troy Garis and Bill Black.

Of the four new assistants the Big Spring Steers have this season, Bill Black will feel the most pressure.

Black is Big Spring's new offensive line coach, and the offensive line proved to be a glaring weakness for the Steers last season. Much of the Steers' fate for the 1993 season will depend on how much the line improves.

"We've got a lot of guys with size and potential, but we don't have a lot of depth," Black said repeatedly after the first week of practice. "Some of the footwork isn't there yet, but they've been real receptive to what we've been teaching them."

Big Spring's lineman have reason to be receptive. Black, 28, played one season at the University of Texas-El Paso, and he has already put two years as offensive line coach under his belt at Lockhart High School, which is southeast of Austin. He's a graduate of Texas Tech.

Much of Black's experience, however, came in the past three seasons at Smithson Valley High School in New Braunfels. Black was the offensive and defensive line coach. Big Spring's offensive line coach from last season, Dan Burk, wound up at New Braunfels' Canyon High School.

"This is a better job, this is a move up, even though it's in the same classification (4A)," Black said. "The one thing I like most here is the community support."

Black is from Post, so West Texas is not new for him. He graduated from Post High in 1983, and he went to high school and college with another Big Spring assistant, Tim Tannehill. Black and his wife, Cynthia, have a 7-month-old daughter, Kenzie. He will teach biology at the high school.

Big Spring head coach Dwight Butler said Black was an extremely attractive candidate to replace Burk, partly because Black comes from a coaching family.

"His dad is a coach, and I've known his dad for quite a while, so I knew his background," Butler said. "Good offensive line coaches are hard to find - they're a rare breed. We found Bill was looking to get back to West Texas, and we couldn't wait to talk to him."

"He's got a terrific mind for the offensive line, which is an area we had trouble with last year, and with him we'll be able to try new things. Of course, when you hire a coach you look at how well they teach in the classroom. Bill came as a high recommended teacher, and that was our top priority."

Ryan Express rolls on; Yanks, Jays stay tied

By The Associated Press

Nolan Ryan pitched two-hit ball over seven innings for his 324th career victory as Texas defeated Cleveland 4-1 before a crowd of 60,727 in Cleveland. Ryan (5-3) passed Don Sutton for 11th on the all-time victory list and Walter Johnson for 17th with his 803rd major-league pitching appearance.

Tom Henke relieved Craig Lefferts with two outs and a runner on base in the eighth inning. After allowing a pinch-hit to Sandy Alomar, he got the final four outs for his 27th save.

Jose Mesa (9-9) was the loser, allowing Juan Gonzalez 35th homer in the first inning.

Yankees 1

Orioles 0

At New York, Don Mattingly broke a scoreless tie with an eighth-inning home run and Scott Kamieniecki pitched three-hit ball over 8 1-3 innings as the Yankees sent the Baltimore Orioles to their sixth straight loss, 1-0.

Mattingly's 13th homer came on an 0-2 pitch from starter Ben McDonald (9-11) leading off the eighth. TV replays showed a fan reached over the right-field wall at Yankee Stadium and caught the ball.

Kamieniecki (8-4), who has won seven straight decisions at home, walked six and struck out three before Paul Assenmacher got one out and Bob Wickman finished for his second save.

Blue Jays 9

Red Sox 1

Toronto rocked Roger Clemens (9-10) for two homers and six runs in less than four innings Sunday at Fenway Park to beat Boston 9-1.

The Red Sox now trail the division leaders by three games and the Orioles are 4 1/2 out and falling fast. Detroit dropped 8 1/2 games off the pace with a loss at Milwaukee.

Joe Carter, Darnell Coles and Ed Sprague homered for the Blue Jays and Paul Molitor drove in three runs with a pair of singles. Dave Stewart (8-6) allowed three hits in eight innings for Toronto and has won 11 of his last 13 regular-season decisions against Boston.

"Roger's going through something he really hasn't had to go through before. He has always been a dominating guy on the mound, and right now he's not," Boston manager Butch Hobson said. "Physically, there's not anything wrong with him. His velocity is high. It's almost like they know what's coming."

Toronto, which had 36 hits while taking two of three games in the weekend series at Fenway Park, sent Clemens to his fourth straight loss. "Let's hope it's just a little slump," said Red Sox pitching coach Rich Gale. "The biggest thing is Roger, I feel, is healthy and it's not like he's off on his velocity. He just didn't hit his spots with enough on it."

Brewers 6

Tigers 4

Kevin Seitzer's two-run double snapped a sixth-inning tie as Milwaukee defeated Detroit at County Stadium. With one out in the sixth, Seitzer lined a 2-2 pitch from starter John Doherty (10-8) into the gap in left-center field.

Cal Eldred (12-12) gave six hits and four runs in eight-plus innings for the victory.

Royals 7

White Sox 5

Kevin McReynolds hit a homer and drove in three runs to lead Kansas City over Chicago and Tim Belcher (1-2) in a game delayed twice by rain at Comiskey Park. The victory moved the Royals within 3 1/2 games of the first-place White Sox in the AL West as the teams split the four-game series.

Tom Gordon (8-3) beat Chicago for the third time this season without a loss, and has won four of his last five decisions. He allowed three runs and seven hits in 6 1-3 innings.

Texas Ranger Doug Strange, left, congratulates teammate Juan Gonzalez Sunday after Gonzalez hit a two-run homer in the first inning in Cleveland. Texas won 4-1 and moved within four games of the first-place Chicago White Sox. In the game, Nolan Ryan notched his 324th career win.

Twins 12

Athletics 5

Kirby Puckett went 5-for-5 and hit two of six home runs by Minnesota as the Twins routed Oakland at the Coliseum. Puckett hit two two-run homers, driving in four runs, and Bernardo Brito, a 29-year-old rookie, also hit two homers as the Twins completed a four-game sweep.

Scott Erickson (7-14) snapped a personal four-game losing streak, giving up three runs and 10 hits in seven innings. Losing pitcher Mike Mohler (1-4) gave up seven runs in the first 2 2-3 innings.

Angels 14

Mariners 2

Greg Myers drove in a career-high four runs and rookie Phil Leftwich

(1-3) earned his first major-league victory, leading California over Seattle at the Kingdome.

Leftwich, a 23-year-old right-hander making his fourth start for California, was backed by a season-high 22-hit attack that included seven doubles and only the Angels' fourth home run in August.

Seattle's Tim Leary (8-5) lasted only 1 2-3 innings, giving up seven runs on eight hits and a walk.

Giants outslug Cubs, Rockies beat Astros

By The Associated Press

For Barry Bonds and Matt Williams, it was little bit like "Anything You Can Do I Can Do Better," lines from an Irving Berlin musical.

Bonds and Williams hit consecutive home runs in the third inning against the Chicago Cubs on Sunday. That wasn't enough, so they did it again in the 11th inning, leading the San Francisco Giants over the Chicago Cubs 9-7.

"It was a good game, exciting," Bonds said. "Too bad there weren't a lot of people around to see it."

The start of the game was delayed by rain for 44 minutes. There was a 1:27 delay in the eighth.

"I didn't think we'd play," Giants manager Dusty Baker said. "Our dugout was flooded with water. But their ground crew did an outstanding job."

With the score tied at 7, Bonds homered off Randy Myers (2-4) with one out in the 11th. Williams followed with his 27th home run, a drive that landed on Waveland Avenue beyond the left-field bleachers.

He wasn't at all bothered that Bonds retained his nine-homer lead. "I hope Barry hits 60," Williams said. "If he does, then we have a pretty good chance of winning this thing."

Kevin Rogers (1-2) pitched two innings for his first major league victory.

"I'm glad to get out of here with two wins," Baker said. "And we're glad to get away from Mark Grace. He's just starting to heat it up."

Willie McGee's third home run, a drive off Jose Bautista, put San Francisco ahead 7-6 in the ninth. Grace, who had four hits, tied the score in the bottom half with an RBI double off Rod Beck, who blew a save for the fourth time in 40 chances.

"It was a tough loss," Cubs manager Jim Lefebvre said. "We could have easily won the game."

Braves 1

Reds 0

Greg Maddux (14-9) pitched a four-hitter and Jeff Blauser singled home the only run after Deion Sanders tripled with two outs in the third as the visiting Braves won their seventh straight, a season high.

Maddux pitched his second consecutive complete-game victory and his first shutout since Sept. 20. He struck out six and walked two.

Jose Rijo (10-7) struck out a season-high 11 in seven innings and gave up just four hits. The Reds have scored just six runs in his seven losses.

Rockies 4

Astros 3

Shortstop Andujar Cedeno misplayed Vinny Castilla's grounder in the ninth, allowing the go-ahead run as visiting Colorado won for the seventh time in eight games.

Doug Drabek, 0-6 in eight starts since July 4, took a 3-1 lead into the eighth, but Chris Jones and Dante Bichette hit RBI doubles.

Bruce Ruffin (4-4) pitched a perfect eighth and Darren Holmes got three outs in the ninth for his 14th save. Xavier Hernandez (3-3) was the loser.

Phillies 5

Mets 4

Kim Batiste singled home Wes Chamberlain with two outs in the eighth as the Phillies rallied from a 4-0 deficit to win for the fifth time in six games.

John Kruk's two-run homer off Eric Hillman closed the Phillies to 4-3 in the eighth at Veterans Stadium. Anthony Young (1-15) allowed Darren Daulton's double and singles to Chamberlain and Batiste.

David West (5-3) pitched a scoreless eighth, and Mitch Williams finished for his 32nd save.

Dodgers 4

Padres 2

Tim Wallach, given a reprieve when rookie first baseman Guillermo Velasquez failed to catch his foul popup in the sixth, hit a solo homer and Cory Snyder singled in two runs at Dodger Stadium.

Pedro Astacio (9-7) allowed one run and five hits in five-plus innings, and Jim Gott finished for his 32nd save.

Expos 7

Cardinals 1

Center fielder Moises Alou threw out Ozzie Smith at home plate to end the fourth and Brian Jordan to end the fifth at Olympic Stadium. John Vander Wal and Larry Walker drove in two runs each in a five-run fifth.

Pirates 4

Marlins 3

Don Slaught's RBI double off Luis Aquino (6-7) scored the winning run in the 11th at Three Rivers Stadium as Pittsburgh won for the ninth time in 13 games, but just the fourth time in 10 games against the Marlins.

Mark Dewey pitched three innings of one-hit relief before Blas Minor (7-5) worked the 11th inning for the victory. Mark Petkovsek also pitched a scoreless seventh.
