MHMR shift perplexing rural counties

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

"Community-based mental health care" has been the buzzword for mental health professionals across the state for the past two years.

Sept. 1 marks the official beginning of a six-year plan, emphasizing community control of mental health authorities.

Counties will have the decision to choose, continue, discontinue, install, improve or expand services such as alcohol and substance abuse programs, outreach services and support groups.

"Counties have always had a lot of input, but now they're trying to put the responsibility on counties," said Assistant Superintendent Ed Moughon of the Big Spring State Hospital.

Mental health facilities will act in an advisory capacity, in the area of mental illness.

Larger communities such as Lubbock and Amarillo (200,000 plus populations) have been making the transition fairly easy.

But, rural communities are still writhing from the difficulties they may face, maintaining community funding and thus services for the mentally ill.

The local and surrounding counties have tentatively planned for the transition.

Officials confirm killer bees reach Glasscock County

By GARY SHANKS
Staff Writer

GARDEN CITY — Africanized bees, which entered the U.S. in South Texas three years ago, have done an apparent end-run around state officials, appearing in Glasscock and Midland counties.

These bees are hundreds of miles farther north than researchers with the Texas Agricultural Extension first thought. It is known, however, that the bees can travel as much as 300 miles in a season, according to Extension Service data.

Because Africanized bees have been found in Midland, Glasscock, Jeff Davis and Culberson counties, a ban on moving commercial bee hives from these counties has been put in place by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. This does not affect the sale of honey, however.

Africanized bees are a hybrid of aggressive African honey bees and European honey bees. Part of a breeding experiment, the original African bees were released in Brazil in the 1950s and bred with honey bees in the area. They have been steadily working their way north since that time.

Sometimes called "killer bees," they are more aggressive than domestic honey bees, but are less dangerous than the name suggests, experts say.

There are cases, however, of Africanized bees attacking and even killing people, but deaths are rare. The bees often attack when they perceive a threat to their nest, according to Charles Allen, an entomologist with

The unknown: Shifting care to community

MARTHA E. FLORES
Regional Editor

In the 1960s, a new school of thought emerged on the horizon of mental health care.

Under the John F. Kennedy administration, the federal government pushed for a commitment from state agencies to shift hospital care to community-based services.

California was one of the first states to take on the initiative. The state took on the task in the 1960s, while most states waited until the 1970s and Texas was the few waiting several decades to make the transition.

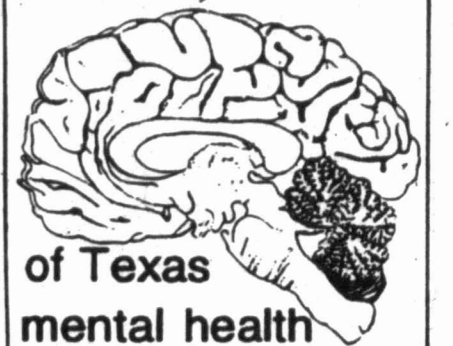

But in the uncharted waters, the California system implementation suffered. Lack of a strong support system, as well as downsizing hospitals and funding caused problems such as homelessness and high recidivism.

"Several things I think happened to cause a strain in services," said Texas MHMR Deputy Commissioner for Mental Health Services Dr. Steven P. Shon. "There were several 100,000 hospital beds now there are 70,000. What happened to those folks? Where did they go?"

"If you look back, the people you see in the hospital now are chronic, bipolar and seriously ill. Thirty or 40 years ago people were in there that would not be in there today. People suffering from senility, chronic alcoholism and tertiary syphilis to name a few examples.

One of the criticisms is, as hospitals began to downsize, not enough money went into the community to take care of them. When legislatures needed to plug a deficit hole they would shut down hospital."

Changing the mind

Shon has been the deputy commissioner for the Texas system for a year and half. Before coming to Texas, he was employed by the state of California Department of Mental Health as assistant director and later acting director of Clinical Services.

But the problems, not limited to the California system, arose across the United States problems.

"In the beginning they probably did not realize people would get out, do ok for a while then they might go back in, or go to jail or become homeless because they did not have a support system," Shon said.

As patients need certain things in a hospital setting, they will still need those things in the community. Psychotropic drugs - medications altering brain chemistry - do not do the job alone. A support system has to be "Right now, we're in the studying stage," said Howard County Judge Ben Lockhart.

The Big Spring State Hospital is considered an organizational cornerstone in its service area, serving 54 counties in and near West Texas.

Officials from counties including Borden, Fisher, Martin, Glasscock, Crane, Kent and Runnels, have met with Howard County officials to determine their status under the new guidelines.

"We're discussing what has to be done; what needs to be done," said Lockhart, a spokesperson for participating counties. "Right now, all the counties have signed letters of intent to contract with the local center."

Officials are looking to communities established in "community-based" care for road maps on how to proceed.

MHMR Centers have previously been supported by local taxing authorities or run by the state.

"In rural areas, there has not been enough infrastructure to support themselves, so state did it," Moughon said.

Lubbock County officials determined a taxing entity, the hospital district, should be contracted to organize service needs for their service area.

"Through the hospital district, we do a lot of community-based care," said Kenny Maines, Lubbock county commissioner for Precinct 1.

"We assess a tax to take care of providing those needs," said Maines of the hospital district's role in providing services for indigent and mental health care.

"The Lubbock Regional MHMR Center entered into a contract with the hospital district to help them take care of those needs" he said.

Unlike Lubbock, Howard County can not rely on an extensive tax base to propel the services.

"In Lubbock County, we're handling it pretty well. The hospital district is providing some of the funds to run the MHMR," Maines said. "They came up with a cooperative (agreement) with the hospital district and MHMR earlier this year at the suggestion of the county."

"It may be tough for smaller counties," he added. Counties in the BSSH service area are trying to figure out ways to maintain their current level of services, when the strategic plan takes effect.

"The whole idea is that we'll have a board to run it, setting up policies and procedures," Lockhart said. "The other counties just want control over what happens to them."

"They want to be able to keep the centers they have now," he added.

Steven Shon, deputy commissioner of Texas Mental Health Services, said communities can maintain services if they develop their own support base.

Lottery win won't make you big rich

The Associated Press

AUSTIN — Good news, Texans. According to Texas Monthly's annual listing of the state's 100 wealthiest, it takes less money to qualify as Big Rich these days.

Bad news. Winning Saturday's $25 million Lotto Texas drawing won't do it. You still need at least $110 million to play this game.

And some things never change. With a net worth of $3.35 billion, up $100 million from last year, entrepreneur and sometime presidential candidate Ross Perot remains the biggest rich of all.

"As we continue to unearth Texas' hidden rich and watch financial empires grow and crumble, one factor remains constant: Ross Perot is still the wealthiest of them all, laughing at his critics, making everyone guess what he'll do next," author Christine Carroll writes in the magazine's September issue.

For the fifth consecutive year, the magazine on Thursday issued its listing of the 100 wealthiest Texans, basing its estimates on industry analysts, brokers, financial advisers and some of the wealthy themselves.

Net worth to make the first list, published in 1989, was $100 million. That rose to $130 million by 1991, but dropped to $120 million last year and to a paltry $110 million this year — "reflecting a still-temper Texas economy," the magazine said.

Tepid economy or not, 38 of the 95 returning multimillionaires did just fine, increasing their fortunes during the past 12 months. Another 45 held steady; 12 dropped in net worth but stayed on the list, while five were replaced.

Two newcomers made their fortunes not in such Texas traditions as oil or real estate but in food.

Kit Goldsberry, 50, owner of San Antonio-based Pace Foods, "whose Mexican salsa led the charge to push ketchup out of America's kitchens," hit the list at $130 million.

Texas Monthly said Arturo Torres, 56, San Antonio, $110 million, became the first Hispanic to hit the list when he sold his Pizza Management Inc. that owned 236 Pizza Hut franchises.

Air Force's elite team a San Antonio secret

The Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — The Air Force's elite paratrooper team and combat controllers are often the overlooked warriors of the military's special operations forces.

"We are definitely the unsung people in the unconventional warfare community," said Master Sgt. Lamar Eikman, superintendent of the Combat Control Paratrooper Indocination Course at Lackland Air Force Base.

"Everybody knows about Marine recon, Navy SEALs, Green Berets and Delta Force but there's never been a movie about combat controllers or paratrooper," he said.

But that may change as the service boosts recruiting efforts for the elite and hard-to-fill positions dubbed "the Special Forces of the Air Force."

They have launched initiatives, including enlistment bonuses, to increase awareness and spur recruitment for the beret-clad units.

The daring paratrooper teams dart deep behind enemy lines to rescue downed air crews, while combat controllers are often the first ones into a combat situation to set up landing zones and navigational aids for incoming aircraft.

Members of both units are experts at military parachute free fall, scuba diving and survival skills.

Paratrooper personnel wear the distinctive maroon beret, while combat controllers wear a scarlet beret.

"People usually don't associate these units with the Air Force because they work closely with other services such as Army Special Forces and Navy SEALs," said Lt. Col. Greg Dahlgren, chief of the enlisted programs branch for the Air Force Recruiting Service at Randolph Air Force Base.

"They do their jobs quietly and effectively, and it's not something exposed to the world," he said.

While the highly technical nature of the specialties may fit in with the Air Force's Space-Age marketing of education and technology, the grueling, physically intensive side of the jobs more closely resembles those found in other military services.

"Marines market for down-in-the-dirt forces and the Army does that, too," Eikman said. "A lot of people who want to do physical, thrill-seeking type jobs are drawn to Navy SEALs and Marines because they know those jobs exist there. Most people don't know they exist in the Air Force, too."

"We also need people with good technical aptitude air traffic control and medical training requirements are stringent," he said. "It's very high-tech."

Even in these post-Cold War days of a draw-down in military forces, the Air Force finds it hard to fill the two career fields.

Memorial service set for city's police dog

MARSHALL (AP) — A memorial service with a full honor guard is scheduled Friday for one of the city's finest: Voss the police dog.

Voss, a 3-year-old Dutch shepherd, died last Wednesday of a birth defect. An autopsy showed his heart and kidneys had never grown to full size.

He was one of two dogs in the Marshall Police Department and was considered a valuable asset in detecting drugs, tracking suspects and recovering evidence. He had been with the department since May.

"Voss had already done an outstanding job for the department and we feel a tremendous loss already," said Marshall Police Lt. R.D. Henderson.

"He was responsible for finding items from burglaries and during one incident he found two guns and 12 rocks of crack cocaine that a suspect had thrown while fleeing from officers. He was also responsible for recovering a lot of evidence in the burglary of the East Texas National Bank (drive-through location)."

Memorial services were scheduled at 9 a.m. at the Marshall Police Department firing range.

The death comes six weeks after the Harrison County Sheriff's Department's canine, Barefoot, was put to sleep after being struck by a tractor-trailer truck.

Man gets 15 years for strangling wife

DALLAS (AP) — A man accused of strangling his wife was sentenced to 15 years in prison under a plea bargain that enraged the victim's family.

Bailiffs had to subdue one of the brothers of Debbie Stevenson, 25, after prosecutors Wednesday announced in court that they had reached the agreement in return for a guilty plea from Stacy John Stevenson, 26.

The brother charged at Stevenson and threatened to kill him. He was subdued by bailiffs but later released without incident.

Stevenson will be eligible for parole in three years and nine months.

Stevenson was sentenced for the murder last Halloween of his wife, whose body was partially covered in trash bags and left beside a grocery store garbage bin.

Lotto goes unmatched; Jackpot at $25 million

AUSTIN (AP) — No tickets matched all six numbers from Lotto Texas Wednesday night, meaning the jackpot will swell to an estimated $25 million for Saturday night's drawing.

Wednesday's numbers were 3, 32, 33, 35, 44 and 45. A ticket with all six numbers would have paid about $17 million.

But the secretary of state's office, which administers the lottery, said 160 tickets had five numbers correct. Each of those tickets pays $2,041.

There were 8,523 tickets with four correct numbers, paying $138 each. There were 191,202 with three numbers, worth $3 each.

Lotto sales top $730 million since the game began last November.

Federal licensing fee threatens reactors

AUSTIN (AP) — The three nuclear reactors run by the University of Texas and Texas A&M University are threatened with shutdowns by a new federal licensing fee.

Responding to a congressional mandate that it recover "approximately" 100 percent of its budget by assessing fees on those it regulates, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission announced July 21 that universities would no longer be exempt from annual licensing fees.

By July 27, UT had a bill from the NRC for $61,200.

The 32 other universities around the country that operate 36 nonprofit research and training reactors got the same size bill no matter what size reactor they run.

"My budget for the entire year is less than $5,000," said John W. Poston, head of nuclear engineering at Texas A&M. He oversees a five-watt reactor used only for teaching.

"If I have to pay this fee, I have no choice but to shut this reactor down," he told the Austin American-Statesman.

Farmers union leader rips NAFTA agreement

The Associated Press

AUSTIN — Consumers will risk buying unsafe fruits, vegetables and beef and farmers nationwide will lose money if the North American Free Trade Agreement becomes law, the president of the 250,000-member National Farmers Union said Thursday.

"It's not just one segment of agriculture that could be negatively impacted," said Lee Swenson, National Farmers Union president.

"It's fruits and vegetables, it's sugar, it's peanuts, it's livestock, it's across the board where we find tremendous negative impacts."

Barry McBee, deputy commissioner at the Texas Department of Agriculture, said, "The free trade agreement is a tremendous plus for agriculture and for the Texas economy as a whole. Some folks just can't bring themselves to see that."

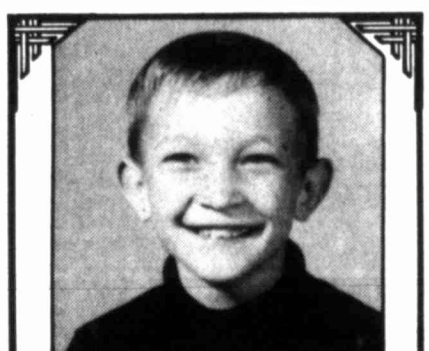

Swenson, whose group represents mostly family farmers, was attending a convention of the Texas Farmers Union.

Many farmers are outraged at what they feel is a pending trade agreement between the United States, Canada and Mexico that caters to big business grain operators and international traders as opposed to the family farmer.

American negotiators of the free trade pact sold out farmers by conceding in such areas as environmental safeguards and limits on imports, Swenson said.

Some producers fear cheaper commodities will be produced abroad and then flooded into the American market, driving prices down and threatening the single-family farm, Swenson said.

Bosnian summit's mediator skeptical

The Associated Press

GENEVA — An international mediator said today that major concessions are still needed for an agreement to end Bosnia's war despite claims by Serbia's powerful president that everything is in place.

Drawing the borders that would carve Bosnia into three ethnic states is the last major element needed for an accord. Bosnia's Muslim-led government, Serb and Croat leaders have already agreed to put Sarajevo under U.N. administration for up to two years once an overall settlement goes into effect.

After talks Thursday between Bosnia's Serb, Croat and Muslim leaders, Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic declared that today would "be a very critical day" in the negotiations to end the 16-month conflict. "I believe we have now all conditions which are needed for a final settlement," he said.

But European Community mediator Lord Owen, entering the talks today, downplayed Milosevic's optimism for an agreement.

"I don't think I could be as certain," he said. "I think there has to be more flexibility on all sides if we're going to get a deal today."

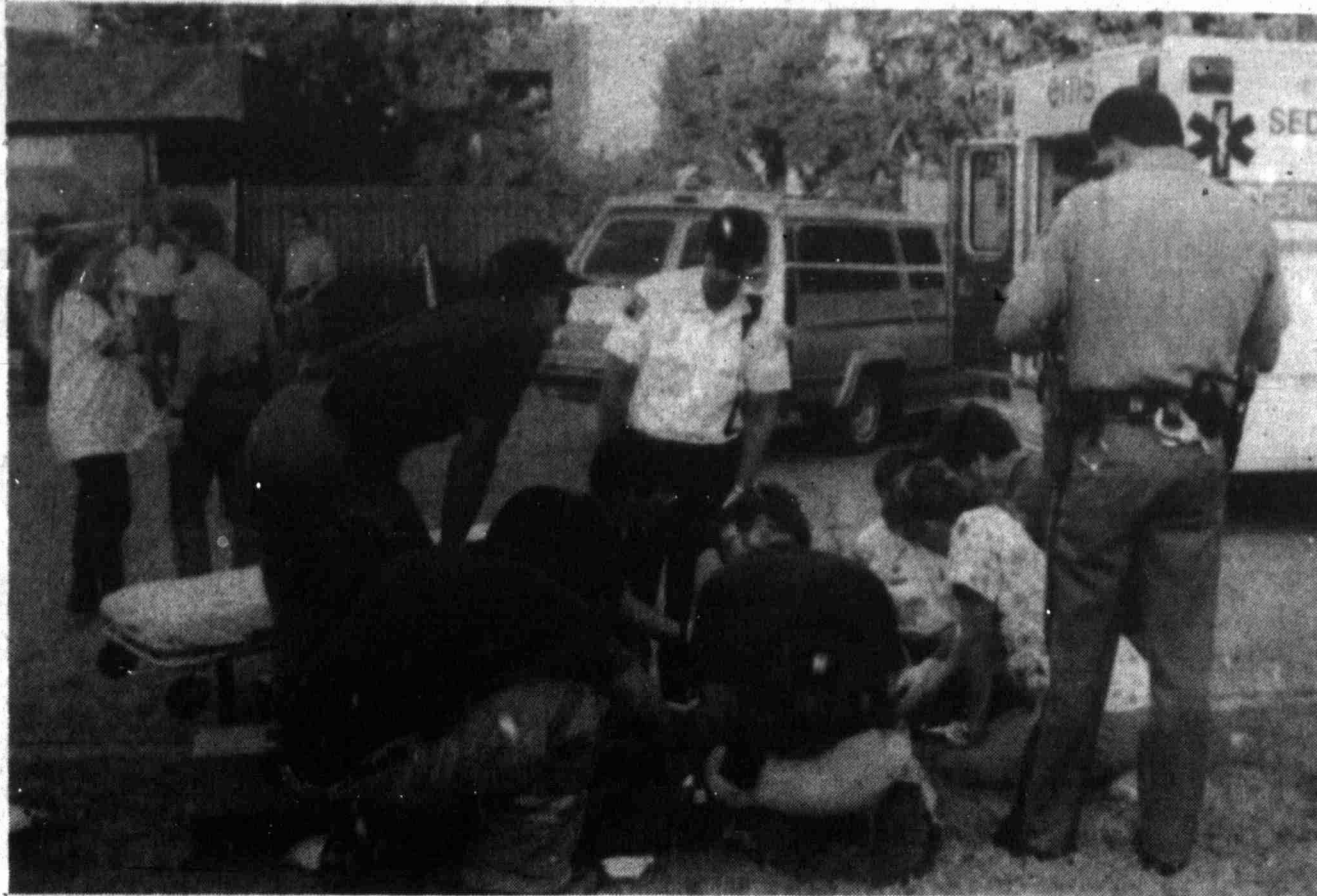

"Each of them wants to keep more territory than is compatible with the others' demands," Owen said, although he added that "substantial movements on the maps" have been made.

On Thursday, Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic spelled out conditions for ending the war, including an immediate end to the Serb siege of Sarajevo.

His demands appeared to be an attempt by the Muslims to salvage whatever they can before a settlement that is certain to be at their expense. The Muslims control 10 percent of Bosnia, while the Serbs have 70 percent.

Serb sources close to the talks said Serbs offered Muslims 32 percent of Bosnia's land on Thursday, including a vital corridor in eastern Bosnia, sweetening an earlier offer of 30 percent.

Muslims, who comprised 43 percent of the prewar population, have demanded at least 40 percent, said the sources, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Wichita, Kan., EMS personnel work on Dr. George Tiller outside the Women's Health Care Services Clinic Thursday. Tiller, who has drawn the wrath of anti-abortion activists, was shot in the arm by a woman who had mingled with protesters outside his clinic, authorities said. Several clinic employees chased the woman after the shooting, but she got into a car driven by another person and escaped. She was later apprehended.

Abortion doctor shot outside Wichita clinic

The Associated Press

WICHITA, Kan. — A woman accused of shooting a doctor as he left his abortion clinic was arrested at an airport 160 miles away when she returned her rental car.

Rachelle Renae Shannon, 37, of Klamath Falls, Ore., was jailed on suspicion of attempted murder in the Thursday afternoon shooting of Dr. George Tiller, who was seriously wounded. Anti-abortion demonstrators focused on Tiller during the city's heated summer of protests in 1991.

It was the second shooting of a physician outside an abortion clinic this year, the first was fatal. And it came just days after an Alabama priest stirred controversy by trying to run a newspaper ad that advocated killing abortion doctors.

Witnesses said Tiller's attacker had been handing out anti-abortion leaflets outside the clinic before the shooting.

Tiller, one of the few U.S. doctors who perform late-term abortions, has been a frequent target of protests. His clinic was one of three picketed by Operation Rescue during protests two years ago that led to 2,700 arrests.

The doctor sometimes wore bullet-proof gear during the protests and traveled with a guard dog, but was using neither protective measure Thursday. Tiller was shot twice in the arms while leaving the clinic, still wearing surgical garb.

Shannon was taken into custody at Will Rogers World Airport when she returned a rental car matching the one in which the assailant fled, said Capt. Bill City, Oklahoma City police spokesman.

She had two outstanding warrants against her for trespassing at women's clinics in San Francisco and Milwaukee, City said.

Tiller, 52, was treated at a hospital and released.

"He said he wasn't going to complain about birthdays any more," said Peggy Jarman, a spokeswoman for Tiller. "He said he was glad to be alive."

Witnesses told police the woman who fired the shots had joined a small demonstration outside the Women's Health Care Services Clinic, handing out literature and talking with the protesters.

Pat Kraus of Wichita, who frequently pickets outside the clinic, said the woman introduced herself as Ann from the Sacramento, Calif., area, adding that she had flown to Oklahoma City, rented a car and driven to Wichita.

She asked about clinic hours and said she wanted to stay until Tiller came out so she could see him, Ms. Kraus said.

Shortly after the shooting, a dozen people stood outside the clinic, carrying candles and signs reading, "Keep Abortion Legal."

"I just feel so bad," said Marie Smith, who works in the office. "She wanted him to die. How can they call themselves Christians and then kill people?"

Abortion-rights supporters condemned the shooting.

"They are 'true believers' who believe they have a direct line to God, and anything is justified," said Patricia Ireland, president of National Organization for Women. "They are very frightening, and they intend to be very frightening."

Israel justice allowing Nazi hunters 15 days

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel's chief justice today gave Holocaust survivors and Nazi hunters 15 days to present a final appeal to retry John Demjanjuk on new war crimes charges.

The decision by Meir Shamgar, chief justice of the Supreme Court, gives the nine petitioning groups 15 days to convince the highest level of the court that it should look at the case again.

The petitioners asked Shamgar for the extra time to review evidence that despite his acquittal as "Ivan the Terrible," Demjanjuk's work as a Wachmann, or Nazi guard, could constitute grounds for a new trial.

Demjanjuk was not in court. The Supreme Court on July 29 overturned Demjanjuk's 1988 conviction and death sentence as "Ivan the Terrible," a sadistic guard at the Treblinka death camp during World War II.

The court also found there was convincing evidence that Demjanjuk was a member of the Trawniki unit of Nazi guards who helped murder Jews, and that he served in other death camps, including Sobibor near Treblinka.

Prosecution uses video in Denny beating trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A prosecutor showed a jury blowups from the video of a truck driver being beaten at the start of the riots and said the footage clearly identifies the attackers, right down to a blemish on one man's cheek.

But the defense argued Thursday that the graphic video proves nothing beyond the fact that chaotic violence occurred, and said police arrested the wrong people — Damian Williams and Henry Watson — in Reginald Denny's beating.

"The evidence will show they are being tried as scapegoats," Williams' attorney, Edi Faal, said in his opening statement.

"The videotape that the prosecution will show you is not a true account of the events that took place at Florence and Normandie as they were taking place."

Williams, 20, and Watson, 28, are accused of attempted murder and other crimes in assaults on eight victims. But the Denny beating, a searing symbol of the riots, is at the center of the case. They face life in prison if convicted.

Exxon pays $240 million to trust for Alaskan spill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Exxon Corp. has paid $240 million into a trust fund to repair environmental damage from the Alaska oil spill, but little of the money has gone for restoration — and nearly $40 million went right back to Exxon, trust fund documents show.

Of the $202 million spent by fund trustees during the first two years, less than a fourth went for restoration projects, mostly involving surveys, data-collection and trying to determine the extent of damage, a review by The Associated Press has found.

The remainder of the money was given to state and federal governments for past cleanup costs and for administrative overhead, travel and legal fees in addition to the reimbursement to Exxon itself for cleanup work.

Under a 1991 court settlement of the government's civil claims against Exxon, the oil company agreed to pay $900 million into the fund over 11 years. Another $100 million is due next month.

Trustees who oversee the fund defend their expenditures, saying much of the spending during the first two years has been dictated by the 1991 settlement with Exxon. The agreement stipulated reimbursements to the state and federal agencies as well as the $39.9 million payback to Exxon for cleanup in 1991 before the settlement and for work in early 1992.

Controversial AIDS drug to be tested next year

WASHINGTON (AP) — A controversial AIDS vaccine trial set for next year will be the largest test of a new concept of therapy: using a vaccine to bolster the immune system against an infection that already has taken hold.

The vaccine trial will test gp160, a genetically engineered protein, in 5,000 to 10,000 patients who already are infected with the HIV virus that causes AIDS.

MicroGeneSys Inc., a Meriden, Conn., company that lobbied Congress for a $20 million appropriation to conduct a national trial of gp160, announced Thursday that the test will start early next year under the guidance of the Walter Reed Army Institute of Research.

The announcement caught many researchers by surprise. A panel of AIDS experts had recommended earlier this year that the National Institutes of Health spend the $20 million on a trial that would test vaccine candidates from a number of companies instead of only the MicroGeneSys gp160 product.

Crackdown on marijuana growers in four states nets $10 million haul

The Associated Press

METAIRIE, La. — A two-week raid last month on marijuana farms in the New Orleans area yielded 6,646 plants with an estimated street value of almost $10 million, federal and state authorities said Thursday.

The seizures, which took place during two weeks in July, focused on rural areas inside Jefferson, Orleans and St. John the Baptist parishes.

It was part of a larger effort by the Drug Enforcement Administration — dubbed "Operation Four Corners" — to crack down on growers in four states — Louisiana, Arkansas, Texas and Oklahoma. The federal agency provided $1 million to the states for the program.

The states were chosen for their particularly suitable growing conditions for the plants, authorities said.

Yeltsin asks parliament to set date for elections

The Associated Press

MOSCOW — President Boris Yeltsin asked parliament today to call early legislative elections.

"I understand that giving up power and facing voters is not an easy decision," he said in a message to lawmakers, urging them to take the "democratic and peaceful way out" of Russia's political stalemate.

The president and his hard-line enemies in parliament have been at war for months over who should hold the lion's share of power in post-Soviet Russia and direct the course of economic reform.

Legislative terms are not due to expire until 1995, and under the current constitution, adopted before the Soviet Union collapsed, Yeltsin does not have the authority to call elections.

Yeltsin's chief of staff, Sergei Filatov, said legislation was being drafted that would authorize the election, but it would require parliament's approval.

Yeltsin threatened last week to call elections this autumn if parliament refuses to do so. He said today a quick decision was essential.

"If we want to continue the course of reform ... and if we are concerned about the fate of Russia more than our own interests, we are obliged to give Russian citizens an opportunity" to elect a "viable" legislature, he said.

The ugly political battle has distracted the president, sapped his popularity and made Russians cynical about their new democracy.

er. DEA Special Agent Johnny Phelps said the average marijuana plot uncovered by authorities during the raids was in the open air and contained about 30 to 50 plants. Each plant is valued at $1,500, he said.

Phelps said sophisticated growing techniques have allowed growers to cultivate a stronger drug.

"This is not (the marijuana) of the 70s, this stuff is more potent," he said.

All of the plots were uncovered by Louisiana National Guardsmen who flew 500 feet in the air over heavy foliage, looking for the plants which average 6 to 8 feet high. Narcotics officers then slashed the plants and sent them to the crime lab for incineration.

Growers purposely plant smaller amounts to better conceal their plots.

Could it be the heat?

I've begun to suspect I'm being plagued with a bad case of PMS. This, of course, standing for perturbational moody snit.

Gary Shanks

"Been awfully touchy lately — in other words.

Come to think of it, just about everybody has been moody lately. Must be the heat.

Seems like you can't offer so much as a tactful bit of advise or a playful jibe without it turning into a spinal fracture, pea-soup scenario from "The Exorcist."

Had the strangest episode in a convenience store a while back.

Like so many days this summer, it was a jillion degrees in the shade, and roughly 50 times more humid than West Texas <ever> seemed to get before this year. I pumped about $15 worth of gas, picked out $6 paperback book and about another $4 of the assorted extraneous unessential consumables that we, as Americans, are somehow compelled to purchase.

Reaching the counter, I began unloading keys, pen, receipts, etc. from the one pocket my sweat pants and golf shirt ensemble allowed. I produced a crumpled $50 bill and held it out for the drab-looking woman behind the counter.

With the look she gave me, you'd of thought I'd blown my nose on Ben Franklin before handing the note to her.

"Don't you have anything smaller than a fifty?," she asked in a nasally parakeet voice that instantly made my teeth itch.

"No ma'am, this is all I've got — I don't think they make a $30 bill." I knew that probably didn't make much sense, but the tone was sufficiently snide.

"Well, you'll have to wait until I can make change!"

I was not prepared to accept this gracefully, since I only needed about $25 and all the woman had to do was press a button to get $20 of it from the time safe. But she was going to make a show of having to access the time safe twice, about 10 minutes delay.

So I grabbed a magazine from the rack and made an equally ridiculous

Borrowing for a little less

omy. If consumers sit on their hands, worried about losing their jobs, cars won't sell and neither will houses. But low rates are pumping millions of dollars into the pockets of families who refinance their homes and sharply reducing interest payments on money borrowed by the government to support deficit spending.

Economists believe the low rates could at least partially offset the fiscal drag of the tax increases narrowly approved by Congress this month to help reduce budget deficits over the next five years.

One key to keeping rates low is Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan, who warned Congress in July he may have to raise rates to keep inflation under control. In fact, the annual inflation rate has been a minuscule 0.8 percent over the past three months. That's no justification for tightening the money supply.

show of leafing through Vanity Fair, sprawling the magazine defiantly across the counter.

"Could you wait over here, please," she gestured to an area clear of the counter, her voice carving the words like a rusty nail dragged across a chalkboard.

"No thank you. This is fine."

In a soporific display of acting ability, Parakeet Woman exaggerated her reaching movements to check out two customers behind me, before punching the time safe and producing my change.

Now. What have we learned from this, Dorothy?

I have absolutely no idea, but I thought it weird enough to recount. It's got to be the heat.

I've overheard the meekest, kindest people spout venomous statements like, "... well he can just take that and stuff it (expletive deleted)," or words to that effect.

Yeah. Heat and humidity — definitely.

It's like walking around in a pasta cooker these days. Who wouldn't be cranky?

I tell ya' what.

Just until the weather changes in the fall, let's declare a moratorium on the old suit and tie and other work attire. Just sort'a, for rationality's sake, suspend the ordinary rules of decorum.

I'm sure everyone would be in a much better state of mind, wearing shorts and T-shirts. Even the police could wear muscle shirts and multi-colored Jams™ shorts.

And if you still get too hot, step outside and hose off.

Aw! You guys are no fun.

Lewis Grizzard

Oh, good grief!!!!

There has been this story going around for weeks now. I must have heard it 15 different times from 15 different men.

Nobody seems to know exactly where it happened, or exactly who was involved, but it's one scary story, especially if you're male. I would appreciate it if anyone could pass along verification.

The story: This woman cuts off half the organ of a sleeping man following some sort of disagreement. Then, she leaves him. He awakens, calls 911, and reports what has happened and that he is bleeding to death.

Help arrives, and he is rushed to an emergency room. Those who come to his aid are, however, unable to locate the portion of his person that was cut off.

Doctors at the hospital learn from the man the name of the woman who has done this to him. They contact her and ask if she knows the whereabouts of said portion.

She tells them that when she left the man, she took it with her and threw it out her car window.

Lucky for the man, she is able to tell the approximate location of where she threw the missing object of great concern.

A search party is dispatched, and the detached portion is located lying on the ground. Surgeons are then able to make a successful reattachment.

My reaction to hearing this story is always the same: good grief!

And, wouldn't you know it, the other day I get a piece of mail from a reader that includes an actual newspaper article regarding a similar incident, which has caused me further mental discomfort.

This from the Asheville, N. C. Citizen-Times:

"A Haywood County woman has been charged with setting her husband's genitals on fire while he slept after an apparent argument between the two."

"Haywood County Sheriff Tom Alexander said 28-year-old Cynthia Mason Gillet has been charged with setting husband Gursham Dennis Gillet's groin ablaze, eventually causing severe burns over 40 percent of his body."

"Alexander said that Gursham Gillet fell asleep in bed wearing only his underwear. His wife is charged with dousing his groin with nail polish remover and setting it aflame with a lighter."

"A Haywood County deputy took Cynthia Gillet into custody and she was charged with a felony, the malicious setting fire to and burning a privy member, the penis of Gursham Dennis Gillet with the intention to maim, disfigure and disable that person and, as a result, did permanently injure that privy member."

Good grief, to be perfectly honest about it, is as strong as I can get away with in a family newspaper.

I was passing along this second story to a male friend who said one of his workers got into a fight with his wife not too long ago and she poured boiling water on his privates while he slept.

I realize a column is supposed to have a point. Give me a minute. There's got to be at least a couple here somewhere.

I suppose the one that would be the most politically correct is that men have a history of physically abusing women, and women of the '90s aren't going to take it anymore and are becoming much more violent when they decide to get even.

There's another, however, and it goes like this: If you have a disagreement with a woman and decide to go to sleep, be sure you're on your stomach.

It's probably best I end this thing right here.

Letters to the Editor

Black eye given

Welcome to Big Spring, Texas race fans, or perhaps I should say, little Waco. Welcome to a dying city, with a sick economy, that wishes to grow and prosper. That's what they tell us; that's what they promote.

My question is, who promoted the almost Gestapo tactics used by our Department of Public Safety Troopers during the Aug. 7-8 boat races. They unleashed their furry, like a pack of wild dogs after the rabbit, on an unsuspecting public. They chose to hide behind their badges, in unmarked vehicles and pursue an unsuspecting public, and in some cases, without probable cause.

If they're drunk, driving reckless and endangering the lives of others, they should be arrested. I have no problem with that. But this was nothing more than the premeditation of the proponents to ban alcohol at Moss Lake.

Their job is to enforce the laws not to help make them. Where is the accountability? Who are they accountable to? These are questions that have to be answered and the public should demand it.

Mr. Woodall says, "That we were within our rights," maybe so, but I believe your actions to be harassment and the abuse of your badge, your power and authority.

Why not at least have the guts to show up in marked, identifiable patrol cars? There has been many instances of people passing themselves off as patrolmen in unmarked cars, stopping people, robbing, raping and murdering them. Would not you be a little reluctant for your wife or daughter to stop for an unmarked car?

When the country club or the golf tournaments, the rodeo have their events, do you show up in full force in unmarked cars and arrest these people? Not even maybe! Perhaps they drive better drunk than those attending the boat races.

Robert and Debra Saunders promoted another great race for Big Spring, with their hard work and efforts, to make Big Spring better; super job, thank you.

Our motels were full, our restaurants were busy; it was good for Big Spring.

Thanks to the actions of a narrow-minded few, this event is probably over for Big Spring.

We have been to races from Phoenix, Oklahoma, Louisiana, North Carolina, Georgia, California, all over the state of Texas, and never have we been treated with such disrespect, by DPS Troopers as right here in our home town. What a black eye for Big Spring!

I'm ashamed to tell fellow boat racers that I'm from the Big Spring area. So, hats off to Robert and Debra and shame on the elite few who wish to keep their rights while they trample on the right of others.

Defining equal

Our Supreme Court in Austin has ruled in favor of minority groups that every student in the state of Texas have an equal amount of money available for their schools to spend towards their "education". Great. Senate Bill No. 7 as passed by the Legislature of the state of Texas under Sec. 36.001 defines "Equalized wealth level" as "the wealth per student provided by Section 36.002" which "means the taxable value of property, as determined under Section 11.86, divided by the number of students in weighted average daily attendance". Notice the "taxable value of property". Senate Bill No. 7 is a 224 page document "relating to public school education and finance, providing civil penalties", the first 34 pages having to do with school funding only, and gives no source of funding outside ad valorem taxes!

Lets examine the word equal. "1. of the same quantity, size, number, value, degree, intensity, quality, etc." Every normal male child born to normal parents on this world have the same physical characteristics. The same accouterments, if you will. Every normal female child born to normal parents on this world have the same physical characteristics. Also, the same accouterments, if you will. Unfortunately there the "EQUAL" or equity ends. They are of different backgrounds, different ethnic groups, different cultures, different income levels - the list goes on. These kids will never achieve equality other than what they were born with.

This is what makes America so great! We live in the land of opportunity! The opportunity to achieve, by ones own efforts, the greatness he or she is willing to work for. This opportunity "to work for" is a great part of our education, there ain't nothing free! Abraham Lincoln came from impoverished parents and went on to become one of our most famous statesmen. Albert Einstein couldn't keep up with his fellow students at first. Ross Perot is a self made man as I understand. Are we doing our kids a disservice by mandating equality? Are we just following along and justifying welfare as a way of life? We have a great number of professional welfare recipients on the rolls now, and they are teaching their kids that it is their right to let some one else foot the bill. I wish that every high school graduate would turn out to be another Einstein. Unfortunately, they will not achieve this. But, some of them will come close, possibly exceed, even though impoverished.

Will Ross Perot share his wealth with those of less? Will you? I hope not. Society does not owe these kids anything except the opportunity to achieve, by their own willingness to work, to sacrifice, to be able to compete on their own for what they want to be in their future. "From every man according to his ability, to every man according to his needs" was tried in Russia, and though the concept sounds good, it is not a feasible reality.

Equality in school funding should mean that everyone be participating, not just the property owners. If property is going to be the only source of funding, then lets include all property. Especially churches. The ad valorem value of churches in most cases equal or exceed most homes. Let's make it equal funding. Lets include all property - or a value added tax, an excise tax, a school sales tax, a duty tax, a user tax, a school toll tax, or a combination of these and an income tax, but let the general public be involved in one of the most important issues that is facing this nation today. You, the voter, have the most powerful tool ever made available to mankind. The vote! To not vote is the same as saying everything is ok. I don't care what happens, it's none of my business. But not voting will cost you.

Thanks for your time.

More about local issues

Editor: Thank you for your column of a few days ago, "Tell Us What You Want". I love your sentence, "Sometimes we get stuck thinking we know absolutely what you want to read."

Each of your many readers will have his or her own pet likes and dislikes so a part of your job is to find the happy medium. As you have long known, that's not easy.

You mentioned that the comment that bothers you most is that there is never enough about Big Spring in the paper. Does that bother you because it is getting awfully close to the truth?

Yes the items many of us like are the "people stories". Big Spring and its surrounding area are replete with people and each of them has some story that may be of interest to us. We are inundated with state, national, and world news. Television, the news magazine, radio, and the big papers like the Dallas News and many others, while only the Big Spring Herald has its unique ability to cover the local scene. It's all we have! Perhaps the editorial policy is to walk lightly around controversy, but I am reminded that William Allen White and the Emporia Gazette didn't build its world wide reputation on that. The Chamber of Commerce and the City Government serve their purposes, but those purposes are not to dictate the editorial and news content of the Herald.

Let me refer to one of your best columns by a local writer, Reverend Flynn Long, Pastor of the First Presbyterian Church and his, "Reflections On The Community: A Well Kept Secret. Flynn Long is not trying to attract tourists, or mow the flowers on our vacant lots. He appreciates our community and his own feeling is that it is the best kept secret in West Texas.

Yes, features are hard to write. Harder than covering City Council meetings, or picking up canned stuff off the wire but you have the staff, and the items are certainly out there in Big Spring, and Coahoma, and Forsan, Garden City, and Stanton, and all our region. It's more comfortable there in the office but that's not where the stories are.

Less criticism

Editor: I'm not a journalist and don't know what is required to be a good one, but I have some opinions of my own. As far as I'm concerned the editorials by Mike Royko (your hero) and Lewis Grizzard are very biased and in poor taste.

They are very positive about the negatives of Bill Clinton and his presidency was a failure before he took office. He didn't create the problems that he faces but inherited them from the previous administration.

I believe we need to support his efforts and give him a chance. If he fails, the voters can make a change in the next election. There is enough blame to go around. Each political party is responsible for our problems. I personally would like to see less criticism in all of the editorials of the Herald and less political rhetoric.

MRS. CLAY REID

What a waste

Editor: I read the article Mike Royko wrote about Judy Enright in the Aug. 10 issue of the Herald.

I know there has to be laws to protect some species of animals and birds. But the feathers this woman used is waste and it is a shame that our tax dollars are being wasted harassing someone that is willing to work. They could put some of that time in catching people that are killing the birds.

I would like to see more about this case against her. I thank she deserves all the help she can get from the public. I would be willing to invest in an article or two if it would help. We have so many things in this country that is wasted because our supposedly public servants makes laws against the use of them.

Dear Abby - Letters...

Good manners make good neighbors

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Dear Abby is on a two-week vacation. Following is a selection of some of her favorite past letters from 1977.)
DEAR ABBY: Why do people place so much importance on manners? From the time kids learn to walk and talk, adults hassle them about manners and being polite.
I don't see what good it does to stand up when an older person or a lady comes into the room. And there are dozens of other rules that come under the heading of "manners" that make no sense at all.
Maybe you can explain it to me. — DONT GET IT
DEAR DONT: To answer your question, no one said it better than the late and great Amy Vanderbilt:
"Good manners are the traffic rules for society in general. Without good manners, living would be chaotic, human beings unbearable to each other. Reduced to a phrase, good manners are consideration of other people in respect of their feelings, their safety, their privacy, and their full social rights and privileges."
DEAR ABBY: I am a reasonably attractive, well-mannered bachelor in my late 30s who receives many social invitations. I recently turned down an invitation to a dinner party. I frankly told the hostess that I was no longer accepting invitations that did not allow me to bring my own date. Very irately, she told me that if I didn't want to go to parties alone, I should get married.
Why do so many people think a single person should be eager to accept invitations to go to a party alone? I always feel like a fifth wheel, or else I get stuck with a dateless woman who shares my embarrassment. Am I

"One of the major things a lot of folks thought early on is if you just treat this folks they will do fine," Shon said. "The whole focus was just treatment. Because of the advances in medications, people began emptying the hospital out. The thought was if we provide these medications we will keep these people out of the hospital."

"Today much of our budgets go into support housing and therapists. A lot of dollars are targeted on community-living programs, case management, housing and none of these are direct treatment. Vocational needs are also funded. There is a big difference in the 1990s than the 1970s and the 1960s."

In the 1970s, Wisconsin developed programs, which became models for other systems, involving case management and aggressive community treatment.

The Ohio system is also praised for its strong community-based support system.

Although advances have been made in enhancing the community support systems, in many cases it is only in theory and not a reality.

A recent study conducted in California concluded the state has a high rate of homeless and prisoners who are mentally ill. Adding to the problem, the state legislature has reduced funding, cutting back consistently from the mental health care system since the mid-1980s.

"With diminishing resources you see a lot of homeless mentally ill people, as well as mentally ill in prison," Shon said.

Again the problem is not isolated to California. The Texas system is far below the national per capita average without any cuts in the last few years. The national average is $49 per capita. Texas' per capita funding is $23.

Texas Alliance for the Mentally Ill President Jacqueline Shannon said, "Well, we believe the community is the best place for people who are mentally ill."

"Unfortunately, the communities are not equipped to care for people. We are very concerned about the downsizing of community hospitals without increasing services available in the community."

"People are ending up in jail that is becoming the new hospital. There are more people in prison and jail than in hospitals because the sheriff's and police departments have no where to take them."

Bees

In 1992, the bees made their way as far north as Fort Stockton, Allen said. Being tropical, the bees are unable to handle the region's winters, as other honey bees can. Because of this, the Africanized bees' progress is knocked back each year.

As of the end of July, the bees had not been found north of the Big Bend area, until these recent findings in gear counties. State agencies keep traps with chemical lures to capture bees, where they are examined for African traits.

To protect one's self from Africanized bees, it is important to check for them around the home, and around camp sites in the wild. Africanized bees make smaller nests and can be found in a multitude of small, protected crevices or holes.

Areas where animals are confined must be carefully checked for bees, since they could kill or seriously injure an animal with no means of escape.

People who are allergic to domestic bee stings also will be allergic to Africanized bee stings. They could be in greater danger, because the Africanized bee is more aggressive and therefore more likely to sting. Those with life-threatening allergies to stings should carry an emergency sting kit.

Mowers and other machinery disturbs the bees. Be cautious of possible bee hives when mowing or using other loud machinery.

If incited, regular honeybees may pursue a person for as far as 50 yards. Africanized bees may chase people three times as far.

If attacked by bees, try to get inside a car or building where the bees cannot follow. Try to cover the head as much as possible, leaving room to see.

When outdoors, never let young children play in an area not checked for bees.

Rural

"The success depends on the community's level of support," Shon said. "The role of the hospital will be to fulfill the needs of the communities."

"Some of the smaller counties will feel the crunch," said Maines of a potential rural dilemma. "I could see some of the smaller counties having to bite the bullet. They have no choice but to possibly raise taxes."

Mired in questions, rural counties, like Howard await more information about their combining roles.

Questions like: would it affect services already offered? Will the transition cost counties funds? How will staffing be handled?

Officials continue to raise issues like government assistance for program maintenance.

"Good luck on receiving federal government assistance," Maines said. "The burden is going to essentially fall on the counties."

Hanes combining skills as FBC's new music/adult education minister

By DEBBIE LINCEUM
Features Editor

Stan Hanes believes music is vital to worship.

"It allows us to really express praise with not just words," he said. "It's another way to praise."

First Baptist Church recently hired Hanes to work as music minister and adult education coordinator. Formerly of Ranger, he is a graduate of Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary.

A singer who plays trombone and several other instruments, Hanes will be in charge of selecting hymns for Sunday worship services, directing the choirs and arranging for special music programs. Wearing his adult education hat, he will coordinate the Sunday School program for adults and conduct special education seminars.

His goal for adult Sunday School is that it help people day to day.

"I want to make it applicable to that person's life that week," he said. "It should give people spiritual answers to their everyday problems and needs."

FBC's Sunday adult courses cover a variety of lessons aimed at all age levels, married people and singles. Content of those classes is as individual as the members.

"Teachers sense the needs of the people in their classes and go from there," Hanes said. In the spring, he may teach during a special evening seminar - "Master Life."

Music has been part of Hanes life since an early age. "Before I got out of high school, I felt God was calling me to the ministry and that music was my area," he said. Hanes travels occasionally with a music ministry, including a recent trip to Brazil - his fifth outreach to that country.

In Brazil, Hanes and a group of others shared personal testimony and organized revivals. He was in charge of music for the mission.

For the time being, however, Hanes is content to plant roots in Big Spring with wife, Carol, and daughters, Amy, 7, and Emily, 3 - all of whom are interested and involved in music as well.

Stan Hanes was recently hired as minister of music and adult education for First Baptist Church. Coming to Big Spring from Ranger, he says he believes music can be an important form of worship. Sunday school classes for adults, Hanes says, should focus on real-life issues people deal with day to day. First Baptist recently consolidated the music and education positions to open a children's education position. Hanes and Mary Lou Beck both began work at the church this summer.

Service & Worship

have already begun piano lessons and both enjoy singing. The new music-education minister is likely to be busy this fall. Sunday school classes for adults will become a "reclaim ministry," or an attempt to bring back inactive members to the weekly gatherings. Hanes also plans to begin Sept. 1 working on the church Christmas musical program, "Everlasting Light."

"We glad to be here," Hanes said. "We're excited about the opportunities in this church."

Why do people feel insecure?

God is unchanging, acts as an anchor in the midst of life's storms

By DARRELL HENDRICKSON
First Church of God

The Preamble of the United States Constitution says that we should expect justice, domestic tranquility and security in our country. But surveys indicate that 95 percent of the people in this country experience a sense of insecurity.

Why do only 5 percent feel secure and 95 percent feel insecure? Hebrews 6:19 tells us, "We have this hope as an anchor for the soul, firm and secure."

Before I tell you what his anchor is, let me answer the question, "why do people feel so insecure?" When children grow up around condemning and judgmental people, they have a tendency to think of themselves as failures. They grow up feeling unable to do anything productive. People also feel inadequate when circumstances around them change or they go through a life crisis. So just experiencing life can make us feel insecure.

As a result, we can become aggressive, have addictive behavior and dependent on some kind of drug or maybe become shy. No matter how it is expressed, it can limit our development and confidence.

Let me give you an example of a confident person in an insecure world. In Acts 27 the Apostle Paul was in a ship in the Mediterranean. A storm is tearing the ship apart. For two weeks they were at the mercy of the storm. Paul, who was a prisoner for preaching that Jesus was the Messiah, said, "Don't worry folks, the ship is going to fall apart but no one will perish." God had given Paul that promise and Paul was convinced that God's word was final.

Now why do 5 percent feel secure in the midst of their storms? Because they have the anchor in the midst of the storm. The writer of Hebrews, who we believe is Paul, says in chapter 6:16-17, first we need to understand the unchangeable nature of God. Everything around us changes, but not God.

Secondly, in verse 18 he says that when God promises something, He does it. God gave the promise of eternal life to anyone who has faith in Him and followed His teachings. Those who "flee" to God have taken hold to the "anchor of our soul."

When a person attempts to climb a dangerous mountain, they need an expert climber to lead the way. The writer of Hebrews says that Jesus is the One who has gone before! He is the only one who gives us security and confidence.

Inspiration, written by local ministers, appears Fridays.

Children get courtroom advocacy group

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

Local children experiencing their parents' divorce will have an advocate in the courtroom, following the meeting of a new group next week.

CASA, Court-appointed Special Advocate, is an investigative group of adults, providing emotional support and guidance through "battles" of divorcing spouses.

"Sometimes children need somebody who has nothing but their interest in mind to speak for them," said Anne Sigmon, the local co-organizer of CASA. "We want to educate the children, talk to them and find out what they really want."

Local leaders, including 118th District Judge Bob Moore and Juvenile Probation officer Margie Thompson, will attend an introductory session at 2 p.m. Wednesday in the district courtroom, located on the third floor of the Howard County Courthouse.

Brenda Bennett, director of the Ector County CASA, will tell of CASA's role nationwide.

She is scheduled to inform officials and the public about the impact of divorce on children.

"We do custody-type cases; most with abused children. Usually at the time of an emergency hearing, we are appointed by a judge," said Bennett, whose group has 34 members. "It's the best thing that has ever happened for the children. If they're old enough to convey their wishes we let the judge know."

"We are not involved in reuniting a family unless it is in the best interest of a child," she said. "We do the interviews that the judge can't do. We report back to the judge and let him see and feel what we gathered."

Volunteers research former neighborhoods, schools, medical histories; they also interview people with whom the divorcing family has come in contact such as parents, grandparents, neighbors, teachers, counselors.

The Odessa-based Ector County CASA has been in existence for five years. The group also conducts other philanthropic activities such as clothing donations and holiday festivals.

Receiving 25-35 hours of training, CASA volunteers will work hand-in-hand with Children Protective Services, law enforcement and courtroom officials, to assess the needs of children in "stressful" and "abusive" situations.

"We try to pinpoint if there is ongoing abuse," Bennett said. "Or, in the event a divorce gets blown out of proportion - the parents do battle - the court will appoint us."

"Working with other agencies, we can check the home environment on both sides," Sigmon said. "We will help in the placement of the child, based on a safe environment or where the child wants to be."

CASA exists in all 50 states and has thousands of volunteers. More than 32 counties in Texas are served. Started in 1976 and formed by a superior court judge, CASA originated in Seattle Wash.

"He had the first group of volunteers trained because he felt like he was having to make decisions about children's lives with very little information," Bennett said. "He wanted to get information from a group that wasn't paid or wasn't biased and could give him a good opinion on what the child needs."

TV clergy not true to reality

By The Associated Press

Asked what influence their pastors have on their lives, church members are apt to say it's a major factor in helping them sort out their spiritual concerns and frequently also their secular views.

That's a common view among religious participants, says a communications researcher, but it's not the image that comes across in prime-time television.

The new study by Thomas Skill of the University of Dayton and a colleague finds that the "tube" depicts Christian leaders as mostly useless and irrelevant.

They aren't portrayed as rogues, and they aren't ridiculed or demeaned, as is sometimes claimed. But their significance is minimized. They're presented as shallow, marginal figures with little influence in life.

"They aren't attacked, but they also are portrayed as lacking real Christian leadership qualities," Skill said.

This is the mixed conclusion of the study by Skill and associate communications professor James D. Robinson. They analyzed 68 hours of prime-time television, involving 100 fictional episodes.

"The expectation that religion would be attacked is just not true," Skill said in an interview. "That's the good part. The bad part is that religious leaders just aren't there in any meaningful way."

Nazarene notes

Pastor Gary Smith and family returned from four weeks absence, during which they vacationed, visited family and attended the quadrennial General Assembly of the Nazarene Church in Indianapolis.

The children's church, directed by Dale and Karon Avant, spent Sunday morning at Comanche Trail Park enjoying games, skits, teaching and refreshments. Slightly over 100 children participated, as well as numerous sponsors.

The "Turning Point" seminar will be Aug. 27-28 in the church's fellowship hall. The purpose of the seminar is to train laymen and pastors to help anyone who is dealing with a life-controlling problem, which might include: pride, food, power, sex, love of money, drugs, alcohol, sports, grief or depression, gambling, fame, fear ... anything that masters our lives. Anyone who is interested in attending and has not registered should call the church immediately at 267-7015.

The West Texas District of the Church of the Nazarene is planning an "Improve Your Serve" seminar for Sept. 18 in Fort Worth and Sept. 19 in Lubbock. The purpose is to enhance the training of those who are involved in ministry. Local Minister of Music Rob Brooks will be teaching two sessions. Areas covered will include Sunday School, senior adults, single adults, nursery, children's and youth ministries, church administration, women's ministry and evangelism.

The church will recognize its 65th anniversary Sept. 25-26 with reunions, singing, memories, meals and a look to the future. Former pastors and members will be in attendance.

Training event slated

An Associational Sunday School/Discipleship Training Convention is scheduled for 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., Sept. 18, at Baptist Temple, Big Spring.

"Unto the Least of These..." is the theme of the convention which offers conferences for pastors, staff, volunteers, general officers and age group workers including department directors, teachers, outreach/evangelism leaders and care group leaders.

Ed Walker, pastor of Baptist Temple, will be a featured speaker.

North Birdwell meets

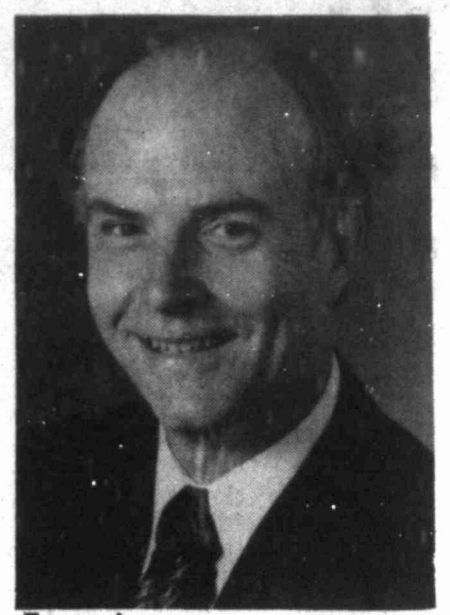

The members of North Birdwell Lane United Methodist Church met Sunday at 6 p.m. in the fellowship hall for a fellowship dinner. This was the first dinner held since Rev. Ricky Carstensen was appointed pastor in June.

Special guests were Rev. Walter and Betty Driver, pastor of Ackerly United Methodist Church. A report on articles purchased for the Salvation Army's Midwest Flood Relief was given by Louise Sneed. One food project and one household project was completed and delivered to the local Salvation Army for delivery to flood victims.

A new Adult Sunday School Class was also started Sunday with eight in attendance. A name for the new class will be decided this coming Sunday. Frances Edens was elected president.

Because North Birdwell Lane UMC shares a pastorate with Coahoma United Methodist Church, worship services are held each Sunday at 9:30 a.m. with Sunday School following at 10:45 a.m.

The Ladies Quilting group meets each Tuesday at 1 p.m. with snacks being served at 3 p.m.

Tommy Lea

Everyone is welcome to worship and participate in all activities of North Birdwell Lane United Methodist Church located on the north end of Birdwell Lane.

Bible study weekend

Baptist Temple, 11th Place and Goliad, will begin a weekend of Bible study tonight. Dr. Tommy D. Lea, professor of New Testament at Southwestern Baptist Seminary in Fort Worth, will lead a study of the sermon on the mount.

Lea, a teacher since 1979, has traveled to many foreign countries with mission work and published articles in many Christian publications.

He will cover the sermon, found in Matthew 5-7 during meetings Friday at 7 p.m., Saturday at 10 a.m. and 7 p.m., and Sunday worship at 11 a.m. and 6 p.m.

The public is invited to attend.

Revival crusade set

Miracle Revival Center, across FM-700 from Golden Corral, plans a special crusade that continues tonight through Sunday. Worship is at 7:30 p.m. today and Saturday, 6:30 p.m. Sunday.

Evangelist Charles Pierce will conduct the healing-miracle and music ministry. The public is invited.

Steers roll over Lamesa in first scrimmage

Butler pleased with team's progress as Big Spring outscores Golden Tornados five touchdowns to one

By DAVE HARGRAVE
Sports Editor

Coaches stand a few yards behind the quarterback, see the play, then shake their heads in shame. Players run back and forth before the snap, searching for where they need to be. Spectators watch quietly.

Welcome to an August football scrimmage.

Big Spring and Lamesa met Thursday night at Memorial Stadium for a chance to let loose - to hit someone besides teammates. Players made sure they enjoyed those hits - including some ear-poppers - but Big Spring avoided more hits than Lamesa and scored five touchdowns to Lamesa's one.

The scrimmage had no clock or score, which explains why a crowd of roughly 500 fans sat quietly most of the way, at least until the Steers started rolling.

The scrimmage started with a series of 20 offensive plays for each team. This first series featured the projected starters for each team, and Lamesa crossed the goal line first with a 57-yard touchdown run on its 19th play.

Big Spring then took the ball, and senior running back Todd Parrish jump-started the crowd with a 20-yard run on the Steers' first play. Many eyes, however, were on quarterback Wes Hughes.

Hughes, a senior, injured his elbow earlier in the week and had not thrown the ball for two days. In that first series, he completed 2 of 5 passes for nine yards.

"It gave me a few problems," Hughes said of his elbow. "It's going to hurt a little bit, but I'll just have to work through it. The main thing we get out of this is you get the early jitters out of you, so you can get ready for Sept. 3."

Sept. 3 is when the Steers host Levelland in the season opener. Big Spring coach Dwight Butler isn't quite ready to talk about that game yet - the players have to get ready first.

"I don't know if we're ready to start the season, but I can say we're better now than we were at this time last season," Butler said.

The Steers' strong defensive effort was led by Torbin Lancaster, a 6-foot-1, 185-pound senior linebacker who was part of most tackles.

"I feel pretty good, but the main thing is we came together at the end tonight, and we played the best we've played in a long time," Lancaster said.

The end Lancaster referred to was the final series, which came after the reserves of both teams went through a 15-play series. In that final series, the Steers' defense closed out Lamesa, then the offense broke through for three touchdowns. Hughes completed a 20-yard touchdown pass to a wide-open Tyrone Banks, then seven plays later Josh Jones scored on a 12-yard run.

Big Spring scored its fifth and final touchdown on the scrimmage's final play - a 1-yard touchdown run from quarterback Dustin Waters.

The Steers' first touchdown came in the first series when tailback Lonnie Jackson ran six yards for the score. Jackson, a 5-10, 170-pound senior, has been battling a strained thigh for a week but performed well. He gained 25 yards on six carries for the evening.

"It didn't bother me, and I didn't get hit on it," Jackson said of his thigh. "If it's not 100 percent by the next scrimmage, I probably won't play. The main thing is being ready for the first game."

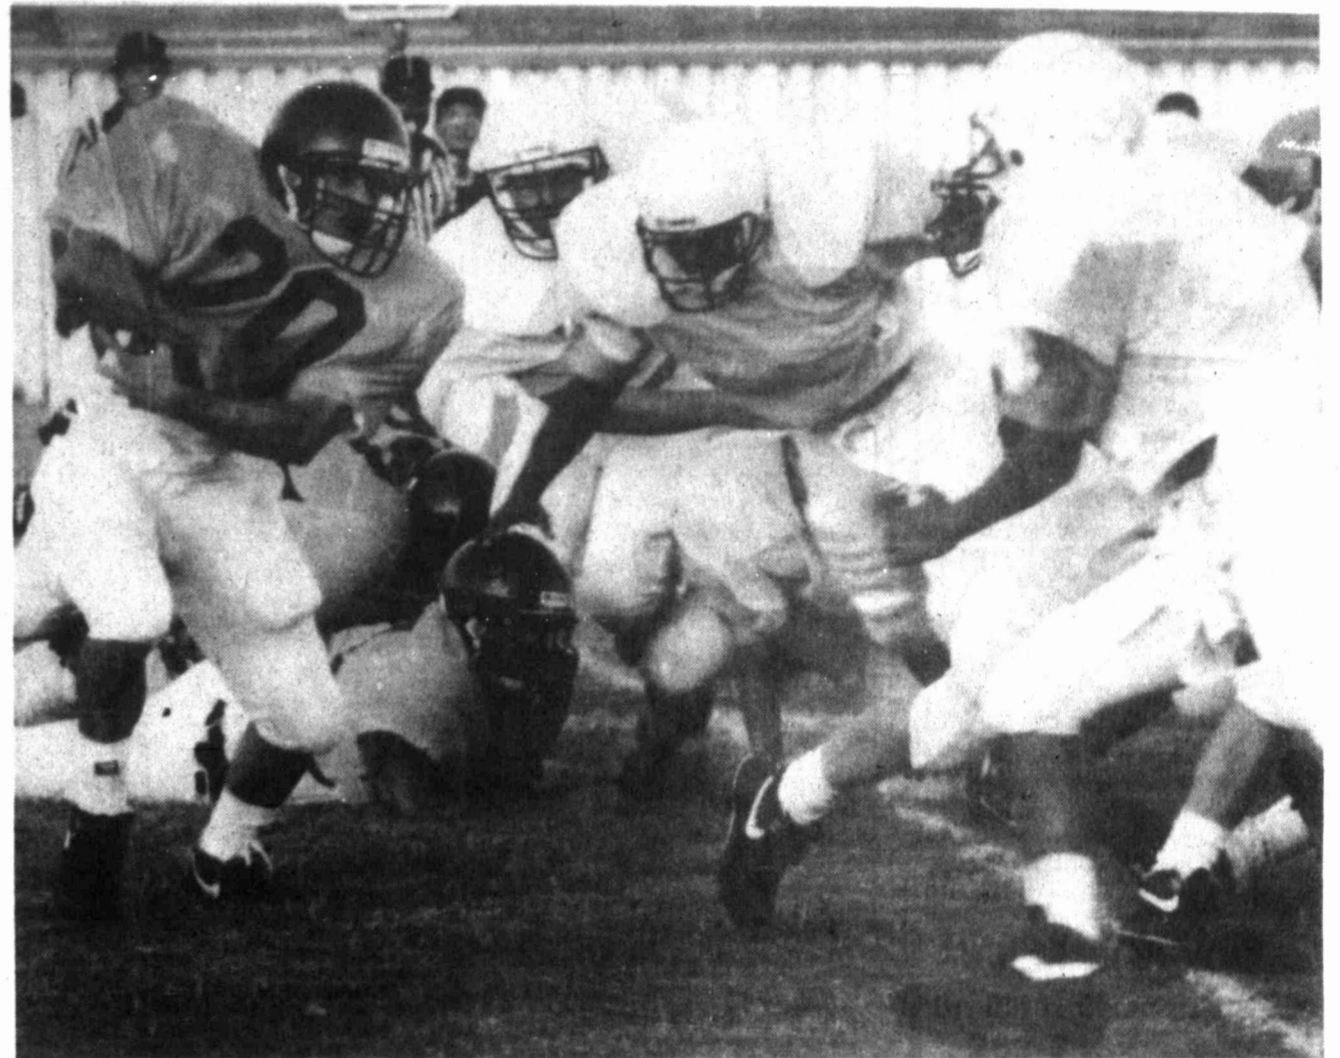

Big Spring's reserves scored one touchdown in the second series on a 28-yard touchdown run from Harvey Simpson, who in that series gained 44 yards on three carries.

Big Spring scrimmages again next Friday at Midland High. Butler said the Steers need a lot of work, but he's already impressed.

"I've been here five seasons," Butler said, "and, besides the team we had to go to the semifinals, this is the most unselfish bunch I've had."

Jackson agreed.

"We've got great leadership, everybody's together, nobody's arguing. If somebody makes a mistake, nobody's getting on him. Everybody's ready to go."

Big Spring tailback Lonnie Jackson (20) looks for running room as a group of Lamesa defenders close in for the stop during the two teams' scrimmage at Memorial Stadium Thursday night. Jackson, who has been hampered by a strained thigh for the past week, gained 25 yards on six carries, and the Steers scored five touchdowns to Lamesa's one. A crowd of roughly 500 spectators attended the scrimmage, in which no score or clock was kept. Big Spring scrimmages again next Friday at Midland High, then plays Levelland Sept. 3 in the 1993 season opener at Memorial Stadium.

BSHS falls in opener

The Big Spring Lady Steers didn't begin their volleyball season as well as coach Lois McKenzie might have hoped, but she didn't consider it a total disaster, either.

The Lady Steers, showing an obvious case of the nerves early, played Water Valley close throughout their season debut, but ended the evening with a 16-14, 15-13 loss at Steer Gym Thursday.

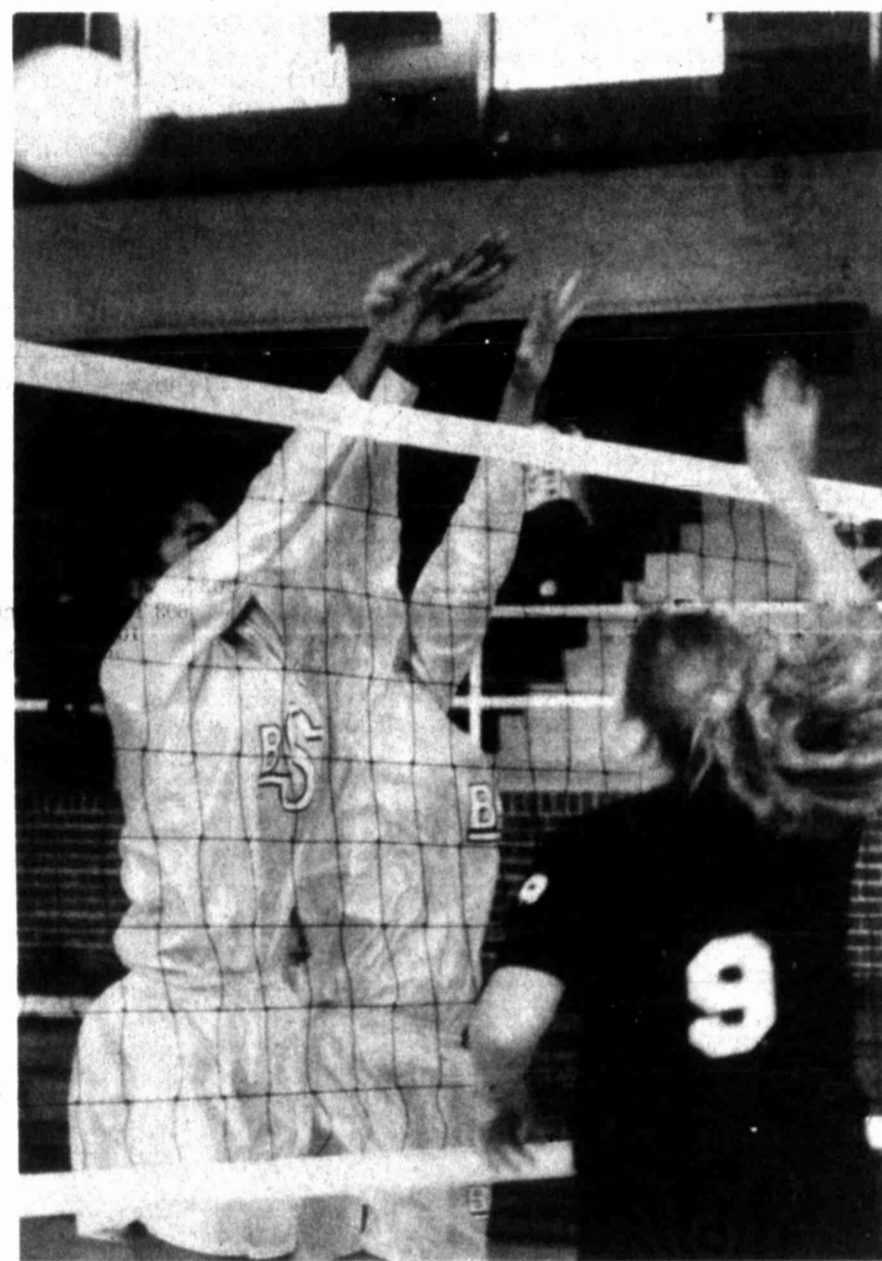

"For a first game, I'm not displeased," McKenzie said. "We had some bright spots that I didn't think would be that good, and there was some other spots I didn't think would be there."

"It was a first game, and obviously, they were all nervous," she added. "Once they settled down and started playing ... that made a difference."

The Lady Steers started strong in the first game, building a 7-4 lead, but Water Valley, a Class A school just south of San Angelo, rebounded behind the serve of Ricci Dickson and reeled off six straight points to take a 10-7 lead.

Big Spring responded with consecutive points off Laura Elrod's service, but Water Valley again stretched its lead and reached game point at 14-11 when Big Spring's Sarah Bristow was called for lifting the ball.

But Gloria Craig's next serve went into the net, and Big Spring reeled off the next three points - two on Robbi Hall's line drive serves and one on a missed kill by Water Valley's Christy Lacy - to tie the game at 14-all. Water Valley steadied, however, and Kitna Copeland served out the first game.

The second game was a much tighter affair: Neither team led by more than three points at any time and the lead changed hands seven times.

The Lady Steers grabbed the lead for the last time at 13-12 on a kill by Kathy Smith, but Water Valley clicked off three straight points off Lacy's serve to take the game and the match.

"This is how we gear up for district, by playing all these big 4A and 5A schools," Water Valley coach Pam Reed said. "Sometimes we win and sometimes we get dogged, but it gets us ready."

Considering it was the season debut for both teams, Reed also was pleased with Water Valley's performance.

"Other than three of the 12 players on this team, everybody's new to the varsity," she said. "But they hustled and played well ... Big Spring's got a good team, too. They're going to come on."

Aikman sits on center stage as Cowboys get set for Oilers

By The Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Dallas quarterback Troy Aikman has expectations for his first Cowboys start since the Super Bowl — he expects the offense to be sharp and he doesn't anticipate sympathy from Buddy Ryan.

Aikman, who had off-season back surgery, will play between one and two quarters Saturday when the Cowboys play the Houston Oilers in a sold-out exhibition game in the 65,000-seat Alamodome.

"I really am expecting to go out and for us to look sharp, maybe not mid-season form, but I would like to think we will be able to move the football and put some points on the board," Aikman said.

"I'd like to make it look like we have some idea of knowing what we're doing. Whether or not that's going to happen, I don't know."

Aikman's return to action will be against the 46 defense devised by Oilers defensive coordinator Buddy Ryan.

"I don't think (Buddy Ryan) is going to come after me any more than any other quarterback," Aikman said. "It's a defensive scheme where he believes in putting a lot of pressure on the quarterback."

"He's going to do that and he's not going to pull back because of my back injury thinking he may get me hurt."

Ryan's blitz-oriented defense has had a shaky start with some spectacular successes and glaring failures. The Oiler defense is still learning the "thinking man's defense."

But Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson is thinking more about Aikman facing the Oiler blitz after observing Ryan's tactics in an early training camp scrimmage between the two teams.

"I'm concerned about it, because in the scrimmage they blitzed over half the time," Johnson said. "I am concerned about it, but our guys have done a good job pass protection-wise, and Troy feels like he's 100 percent ready to go, and so we're going to give him a shot."

While the Cowboys will monitor Aikman's health, the Oilers' critical need is to guard the health of their remaining offensive linemen.

Bruce Matthews, a first team All-Pro center last year, has been moved to left tackle and starting right guard Doug Dawson is now the center. John Flannery's knee injury and the late arrival in training camp of No. 1 draft choice Brad Hopkins has forced alterations.

Bowe-Holyfield rematch set for Nov. 6

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — This time, Evander Holyfield says he'll have to box, to move and stick, to dance. At least he's got the right manager for that — the rapping, hip-hoppin' manager in the fight game, Hammer.

With his new manager sitting alongside him, Holyfield appeared at a news conference in Harlem on Thursday along with world heavyweight champion Riddick Bowe to announce their Nov. 6 rematch at Caesars Palace in Las Vegas.

"I'm just thankful for the chance to fight for the heavyweight title again," said Holyfield, at 30, four years older than Bowe.

Bowe won the undisputed title from Holyfield last Nov. 13 with a 12-round decision but was later stripped by the WBC. Bowe still holds the IBF and WBA versions.

The announcement was held at the well-known Harlem soul food restaurant Sylvia's, and it looked like Bowe had spent quite a bit of time there since his second-round knockout of Jesse Ferguson last May 22.

Bowe said he weighs about 265 but will come into the fight around 230-235.

"I know I'm a little big, but I know what I've got to do," Bowe said. "You know what Evander once told me. He said he could hit me with his eyes closed. You know what I'm going to do? I'm going to close his eyes for him and let him try it."

Texas team hanging tough in stretch drive

I have been putting this column off for a while.

Like many in the area, I have watched the Texas Rangers this season with a combination of joy and impending doom. Joy, because the Rangers are deep into August and still in contention. Impending doom, because I'm afraid I'll jinx them if I say anything nice about the team.

As of this writing, the Rangers are a mere 3 1/2 games out of first place in the American League West. This is the closest they have been to the division lead this late in the season in club history.

The funny thing is that no one can give you a really sound reason why the Rangers are flirting with first place so late in the season.

Granted the team can hit. Good lord, how the team can hit. Texas only has two players hitting above .300, but as a team the Rangers are batting a more-than-respectable .262 and have clubbed 136 home runs.

But you look at the pitching and you wonder how that staff has managed to keep from drowning. A staff ERA of 4.39 is nothing to write home about.

And injuries ... Jose Canseco won't be back until next year, Billy Ripkin's been on and off the shelf all season and almost everybody in the starting lineup has spent time on the disabled list at one time or another.

The players who have replaced the injured are, shall we say, not exactly household names. Dan Peltier, Doug Strange, Donald Harris, Mario Diaz, Butch Davis, Steve Dreyer ... who are these guys?

And yet, despite the injuries and the less-than-eye-popping pitching and merry-go-round lineup changes, the Rangers are still in the race. Unlike past editions, this year's team has developed a tough streak that has allowed them to hang tough in the proverbial dog days.

Of course, it helps that the entire division is having an off year. Chicago, which leads the division, has a .551 winning percentage, which would be barely good enough for third in the AL East.

But I'm sure Ranger fans will take a pennant race in late August, no matter how many qualifiers you offer.

A lot of the credit has to go to rookie manager Kevin Kennedy. Kennedy, who never managed at the major-league level before this season, has taken charge of the clubhouse, eliminated cliques and has installed a sense of urgency that was missing in past teams.

"We've been through a lot of adversity. I'm not making excuses. It's a fact," Kennedy told the Dallas Morning News. "All the role players are doing their jobs to keep us there. It's a real credit to them ... It's been a tough haul, but we are in a pennant race."

The big question, of course, is if can the Rangers keep this up?

Who knows. Conventional baseball wisdom says that good pitching beats good hitting, and if that's the case, the Rangers may well be doomed. But this team has been anything but conventional this year.

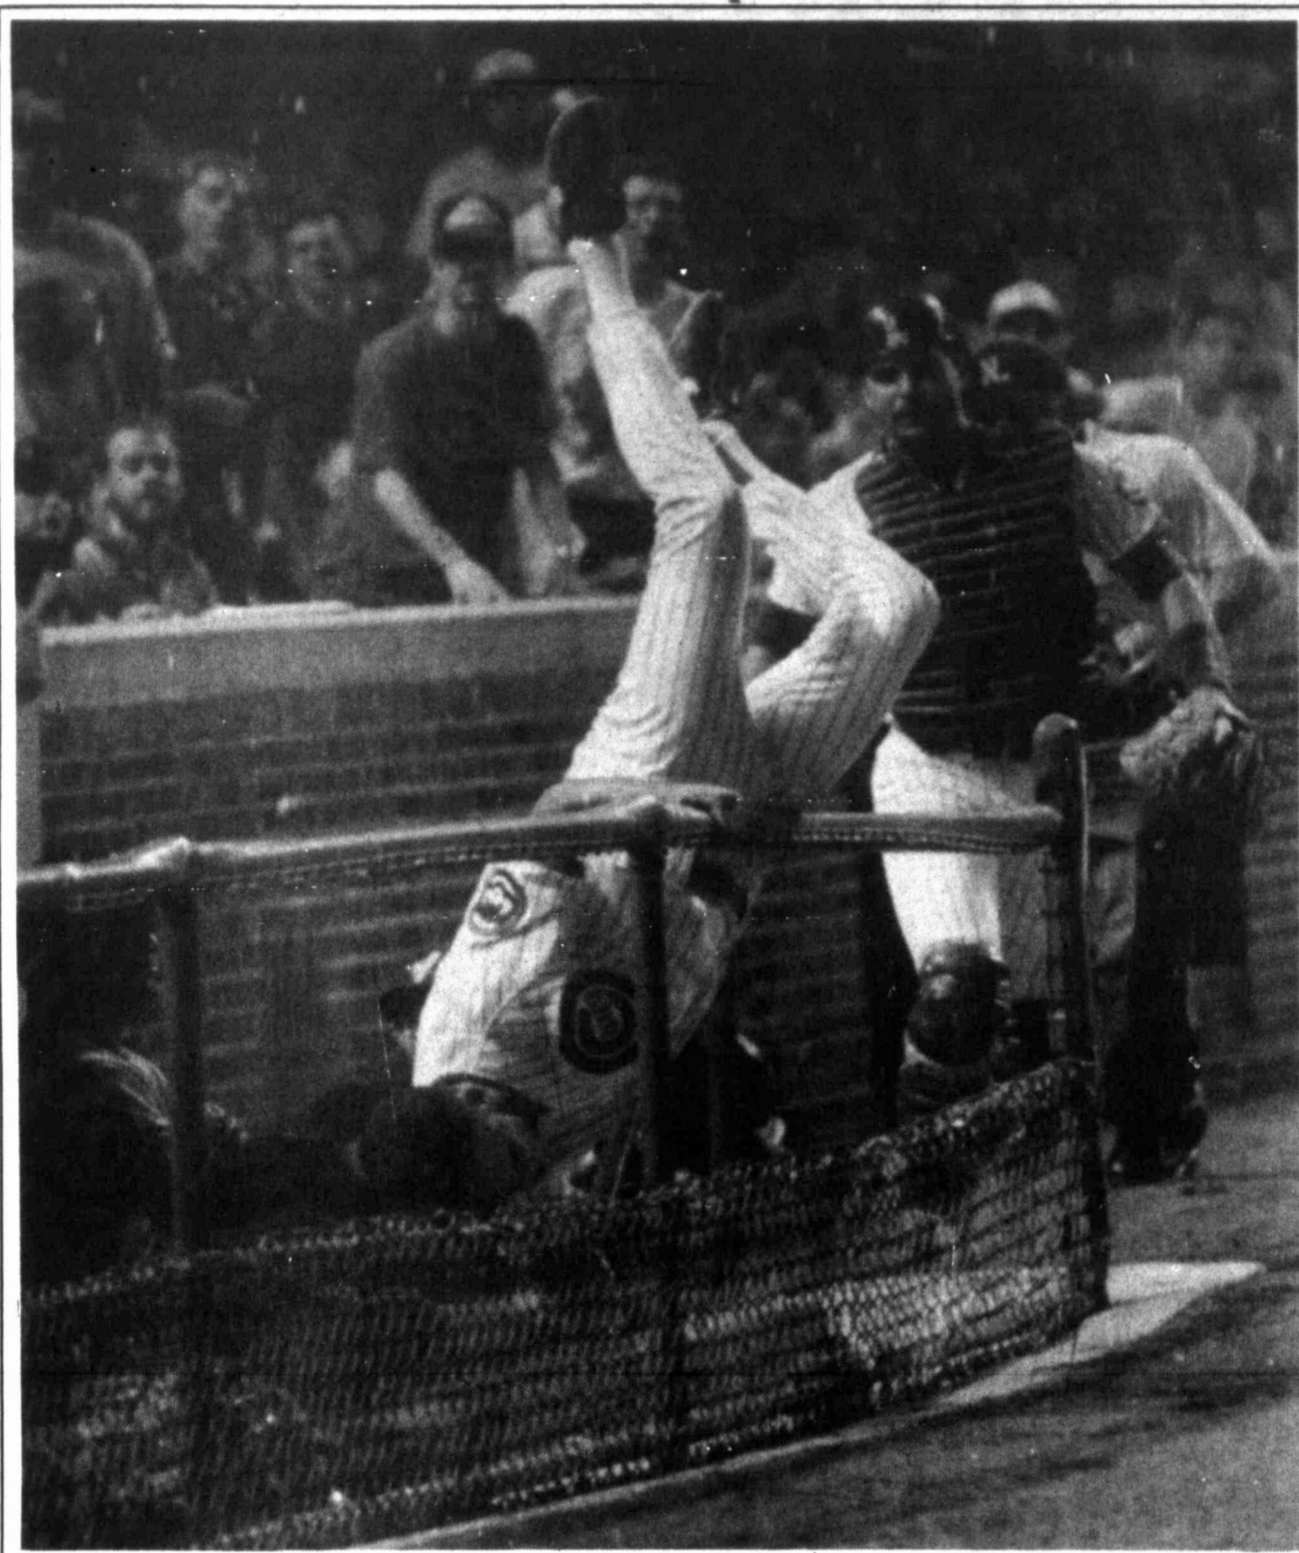

At any rate, Ranger fans should just relax and enjoy the ride. It has been a zillion years (or at least 1986) since a Texas team has been in a pennant race this late in the season.

Pennant race?

Rangers?

I know. It sounds strange, doesn't it?

Defense says new evidence will clear teens in Jordan case

By The Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — An attorney for one of the men accused of killing Michael Jordan's father says he has new information that shows the two suspects are innocent.

Hugh Rogers, the attorney representing 18-year-old Larry Martin Demery, said information he received Thursday suggests that someone else killed James Jordan, The Charlotte Observer reported today.

His client and Daniel Andre Green, the other defendant, "wandered upon a car with a body in it," Rogers said. He declined to give further details.

"There was pressure on law enforcement to solve this thing and solve it quick," Rogers said. "Whether they were overzealous and arrested the wrong folks is something to be determined."

Rogers' statement was contradicted by Jim Coman, director of the State Bureau of Investigation.

"We've got the right people," Coman said. "There's not any indication that anyone other than Demery and Green were actually involved in the shooting."

Authorities are performing ballistics tests on a .38-caliber handgun believed to be the murder weapon that could link the two suspects to the killing. Results of the tests are expected next week.

Thomas Lusby, the FBI's assistant agent in charge of North Carolina, said there is more evidence than just the gun to link Green and Demery to the shooting.

Authorities have charged Demery, of Rowland, N.C., and Green, of Lumberton, N.C., both 18, with first-degree murder in James Jordan's death. Investigators contend the two planned to rob someone early on July 23 and Jordan stumbled into their path.

The NBA superstar's father was shot to death after stopping his luxury car on a state highway to rest while driving back to his home near Charlotte. The body of Jordan, 56, was found Aug. 3 floating in a creek near McColl, S.C.

Demery and Green could face the death penalty.

Rogers said he may ask that his client's trial be moved hundreds of miles away to western North Carolina, where potential jurors would have fewer ties to the Jordan family. Michael Jordan attended high school in Wilmington, on the North Carolina coast.

"I'm looking at somewhere between Asheville and the Tennessee line," Rogers said Thursday.

THE HOME FRONT

By Kay Moore

In many new homes today, the master bedroom is one of the largest living spaces, a quiet retreat for the grownups with a sitting area, TV, even a table for breakfast.

Deep, rich colors create a sense of intimacy, which makes them ideal for hideaways like libraries and dens. Though dark shades may make a room look smaller, the coziness is often worth it.

For most home-repair needs, a table saw is the most accurate and offers all the advantages of other types of saws. Its only major drawback is its lack of portability.

Sponge-painting offers distinctive decorating results with very little effort. Try it on a small accent lamp shade for a table or nightstand. Use vivid vegetable colors and a squeeze-almost-dry sponge.

For best results repairing hairline cracks in plaster, first widen the cracks with the point of a utility knife and brush away the dust. Use Spackling compound to fill, then sand, then prime or seal.

For best results when you put your home on the market, list with
