Moore board approves loan

By PATRICK DRISCOLL

Business Editor

For the second time in its three-year history, Moore Development for Big Spring Inc. Monday approved a direct loan.

Some Moore board members question if it's a good precedent to be following.

Aventech Corp. of Big Spring will get a four-year, $120,000 direct loan to develop an ultrasonic gauge, retaining six jobs and creating up to eight more.

The direct loan was made because no local banks would loan $150,000 guaranteed at 80 percent, or, later, 90 percent. The problem, officials say, is that Aventech has never had a long-term loan, and therefore,

"He's got a viable product that will sell," said Moore board member Steve Fraser. "It's just that he hasn't got a viable line of credit.'

Moore President Owen Ivie said a direct loan could set a bad precedent. The only other direct loan, $30,000 to Freecom Inc. of Big Spring to purchase equipment and retain four jobs, was made in early 1991 before any criteria was set by the board.

"The precedent we would be setting would be hard to live down when the next individual comes," Ivie said. "I think we need to be careful to measure people with the same stick."

Board member Glenn Fillingim said it doesn't have to

"I think you need to look at each individually," he said. Ivie convinced board members to make a direct loan rather than let it go through a bank. "We're not here to subsidize the banks of Big Spring," he said.

Board member Jim Purcell, president of State National Bank, agreed, saying Moore Development is not in the banking business but is in the risk-taking business. "I'm not opposed to taking risks," he said.

In seven other agreements the Moore board has made with different companies, there have been at least three situations in which help was provided without going through a bank.

Blood study focusing on West Texas

Big Spring area residents with histories of certain neurological disorders are urged to participate in a Texas Tech Health Sciences Center research project.

Anyone can participate in the project, intended to collect research data from a large number of people representing a larger population, according to Texas Tech officials.

Families with one or more members with Alzheimers disease, Parkinson's disease, amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, Huntington's disease and multiple sclerosis could benefit from the study, Tech officials said. People in their 20s with Downs' syndrome would be valuable participants for the study.

Study participants will have blood samples drawn at the St. Mary's Episcopal Church, 1001 Goliad, Medical personnel will be on hand to collect the blood samples between 4 p.m. and 9:30 p.m.

Extensive family and medical histories will be taken from each participant. There is no charge and all information will remain confidential, Tech officials added.

Dr. Shirley Poduslo will be available to answer any questions participants might have of the study. She also will answer questions regarding any neurological disorder.

The study will involve information and blood samples gathered from hundreds of West Texans. New information is hoped to be gleaned from the research, and slides prepared from this study will be used for continuing research decades into the Please see STUDY, page 6A

DEA seizes tons of cocaine

Agents say bust largest for Houston

The Associated Press

HOUSTON — Federal agents have arrested three people and seized three tons of pure Colombian cocaine bound for New York in what authorities called the largest drug bust ever in the Houston area.

The cocaine, with an estimated wholesale value of $45 million, was found Monday packed in boxes at two northwest Houston houses, said federal Drug Enforcement Administration agent Ruben Monzon.

"The 6,000 pounds indicates that there's a pipeline from Houston on to other parts of the United States." Monzon said. "These drugs were not for the Houston area.'

Four thousand pounds of the drug was found at one house. The three people were arrested during the first raid. Two originally are from the Dominican Republic and the other is Colombian, officials said.

Agents found an additional 2,000 pounds of cocaine at another house.

Federal drug smuggling charges were pending against the three, who were believed to be connected to Colombia's Cali cartel.

The bust was the culmination of a two-month investigation involving the DEA, the U.S. Customs Service pated in connection with the seizure have a whole lot of details that we're ately available, she said.

derer Ruben Cantu was executed early today for robbing and killing attempts Monday to halt the punishone of two men shot during a burglary nearly nine years ago in San Antonio. The execution, the fifth in Texas in five weeks, was the 12th in the state this year, equalling the record number of lethal injections carried out in Texas last year. Cantu, strapped to the death chamber gurney, was asked by Warden Jack Pursley if he had a final statement. He responded: "No sir." Cantu had little reaction to the lethal drugs that began flowing into his heavily tattooed arms. He gulped once, took a deep breath and then had two shallow gasps. He was pronounced dead at 12:22 a.m. CDT, seven minutes after the lethal drugs began. The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals on Friday refused a request that the execution be blocked. Earlier appeals citing ineffective legal help during his trial were rejected by state HUNTSVILLE — Convicted murand federal courts, including the U.S. Supreme Court. There were no legal > Cantu claimed he was innocent of the Nov. 8, 1984 shooting that killed Pedro Gomez, 35, and wounded Juan Moreno, 18. The men were robbed of their watches and about $600 in cash. Moreno, however, recovered from his wounds and identified Cantu as the gunman.

> "I'm not guilty of this crime," Cantu said in an interview last week. 'I was in Waco. I had been gone all week. When I came back, I found out about all this.'

Cantu, a ninth-grade dropout, was 18 when he was convicted and condemned for Gomez's slaying and was the youngest man on the Texas death row when he arrived there in 1985.

Gomez was shot nine times with a .22-caliber rifle. He and Moreno, shot at least eight times, were sleeping at the nearly finished but empty new house in Cantu's San Antonio neighborhood. The two men were guarding the place after a water heater had been stolen a few weeks earlier. The house was due to be inspected the following day.

Moreno told detectives Cantu was accompanied by another teenager, David Garza. Garza, who was 15 at the time, was certified to stand trial as an adult and was sentenced to 20 years in prison.

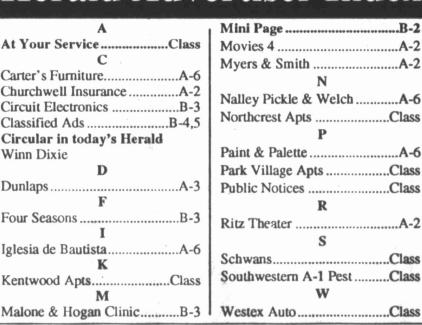

Prosecutors said evidence showed Cantu was the triggerman and Garza was not armed.

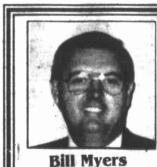

"It was just kind of senseless," Bill Harris, who prosecuted the case in Bexar County, said. "This guy came in with a rifle. These people were sound asleep and they woke up with two guys pulling their watches off their arms.

Testimony showed Moreno identified Cantu only after he had been shown Cantu's photo in a lineup several times. Harris said Moreno was reluctant to identify Cantu because he was terrified of the gunman.

Cantu was arrested six months later after getting into a gunfight at a bar with an off-duty San Antonio police officer. The officer was shot three times.

Cantu also became the 66th inmate put to death in the state since the Supreme Court in 1976 allowed the death penalty to resume. The total by far is the highest in the nation.

Little on surface of Kennedy files

Papers include CIA speculation on KGB's role

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The dogeared, yellowed manila envelope bearing a "Top Secret" stamp was tied with a faded string bow. Inside were newly released CIA documents on Lee Harvey Oswald, John F. Kennedy's assassin.

When it was opened to the public Monday, the envelope's contents turned out to be anything but secret: There were more than a dozen articles inside about Oswald — from magazines like The New Yorker and The Economist.

The envelope was part of some 90,000 CIA documents gathered on the assassination that the National Archives released under a 1992 federal law.

An initial review of the documents showed that anyone looking for proof of dark conspiracies that led to the Nov. 22, 1963, shooting in Dallas — whether the CIA, FBI or organized crime were involved — would be disappointed.

But the CIA withheld some 10,000 other documents on the basis of national security concerns. It is these files that might generate the most interest among the hundreds of thousands of documents that now have been unveiled.

Among the documents that were logged but not released:

—A March 6, 1967, three-page memo from then FBI-Director J.

— A 29-page, 1975 internal CIA report prepared for "Review of Selected Items in the Lee Harvey Oswald File Regarding Allegations of the Castro Cuban Involvement in the John F. Kennedy Assassination."

The files also show how American intelligence officials struggled to learn all it could about Oswald, his ties to foreign governments and, most specifically, how he spent his time in Mexico City in September 1963.

In the end, the new Oswald materials include little that students of the assassination don't already know. Besides his repeated trips to the Soviet and Cuban embassies in search of a visa to Russia, however, one key point emerges:

wrote that Oswald became "a person of great interest to us" in his quest for a visa, the CIA never passed on its concerns to the FBI until the hours after Kennedy's assassination.

The files also detail efforts by the Warren Commission, which investigated the killing and found Oswald to be the lone assassin, as well as the follow-up Rockefeller Commission in 1975, the FBI and others.

For instance, 15 years after the assassination an FBI agent interviewed a Russian emigre who recalled nearly verbatim a conversation with a friend, Pavel Golovachev, who had spoken with Oswald in 1962 in Russia.

A former Marine, Oswald defected

— Although one station officer to the Soviet Union for a period and the returned to the United States before Kennedy was killed.

The Sept. 19, 1977, classified memo to then-FBI Director Clarence Kelley said the emigre's friend had worked with Oswald at a radio factory in Minsk and had heard Oswald boast "he would have lots of money in America."

"For example, I will kill the president," the memo quotes the emigre as saying, recounting Golovachev's recollection of Oswald's words.

Golovachev, who assumed Oswald was joking, also pointed out that he would be arrested and asked what he expected to be paid, the memo said.

Pictured is the presidential motorcade take approximately one minute before President John F. Kennedy was shot in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963. The National Archives made public Monday more than 800,000 pages of government documents concerning the assassination, as required under a 1992 law.

Wal-Mart's predatory pricing trial begins

ren Commission matters."

CONWAY, Ark. — Wal-Mart prices its pharmacy products so low that Dwayne Goode shops there to stock his drugstore with toothpaste, mouthwash and other items,

But Goode, owner of American Drugs Inc. of Conway, wasn't gloating Monday about the bargains he got; he was testifying in a suit that he and two other local pharmacy owners have brought against Wal-Mart Stores Inc.

The merchants, seeking $1.1 million in damages, claim that the world's largest retailer prices merchandise below cost in an effort to drive smaller competitors out of business.

Wal-Mart's prices "have had a negative effect on our store, a very negative effect. I lost customers," Goode said in the first day of the non-jury trial in Faulkner County Chancery Court.

Jim Hendrickson, owner of Baker Drug Store in Conway, said he had lost close to 2,000 prescriptions per year since the local Wal-Mart opened its pharmacy in 1987. Hendrickson said he knew from looking at Wal-Mart's customer list that the bulk of the business he lost went to Wal-Mart, not to a small pharmacy in a Fred's Store that opened within a half-block of his drugstore.

The three independent drugstores, all in Faulkner County, claim that Bentonville, Ark.-based Wal-Mart is violating the Arkansas' Unfair Practices Act, which states no one may sell or advertise any article below cost "for the purpose of injuring competitors and destroying competition."

The company has admitted in court filings that it does sell some products for less than they cost the discount retailer, but says it is not breaking the law because it is not trying to injure its competitors.

Ralph Scott Jr., an associate professor of economics at Hendrix College in Conway, testified that a chart showing Wal-Mart's varying prices on the same items in different markets was a "classic example of successful predatory pricing."

The chart showed that, in markets such as Flippin and Clinton, where Wal-Mart faced little or no competition, prices on items such as baby formula were significantly higher than they were in high-competition areas like Little Rock and North Little Rock.

"That's why we have antitrust laws" intended to keep companies from gaining monopoly control, he said. "It not only protects the competitors in the marketplace, it protects the consumers ... in a long-term context."

Proceedings didn't end until after 9 p.m. Monday. Judge David Reynolds said he would hear another day of testimony on Tuesday, and allow lawyers to filed briefs for up to 30 days afterward. He'll decide the case within 30 days of the deadline for briefs, Reynolds said.

David Glass, Wal-Mart's president and chief executive officer, testified that the company is not trying to drive anyone out of business, but that individual stores can lower prices on some items, based on local competition

"It would be better if you could make a profit on everything you sell, but in the real world, that isn't possible," Glass said. "That's the principal reason why we do it."

Make plans now to attend the fair

Get ready, get set and go to the Howard County Fair. And, right now is a good time to start planning to attend the week-long event which starts Sept. 6 and runs through Sept. 11

This is an annual event in Howard County and one of the biggest. There will be music, cattle, sheep, cheerleaders and the selection of the Howard County Queen. There will also be food to be judge, everything from pies to

There will also be vendors and fun for the kids.

So, make your plans now to attend the fair. It only comes around once a year.

Fact and the AP wire stranger than fiction

It has oft been said that fact is stranger than fiction. Those of us privy to the Associated Press wire every day are constantly reminded of that fact.

Therefore, it seemed somewhat fitting that the report former Texas Rangers owner Eddie Chiles' death at the age of 83 would appear on the wire before I came across Monday's "whopper of whoppers."

Surely we all remember Chiles ... if not as owner of the Texas Rangers, as the guy who bought radio time and railed against government intervention in big business, always opening his brief opinion pieces with "I'm Eddie Chiles and I'm mad."

Yours truly was even more taken by the television commercials his Western Company of North America used to run during Sunday Dallas Cowboys broadcasts.

Who could forget the slogan "If you don't own an oil well, get one. You'll love doing business with Western."

Anyhow, Big John was put in a Chiles-like frame of mind just seconds after reading of Chiles death at the age of 83. And yes, tongue firmly implanted in cheek, it all had to do with my favorite group of professionals — lawyers. Well, actually it's just one lawyer this time.

It was a story out of Galveston that read, and I quote, "The national office of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People is being asked to decide if the attorney that represents the Texas chapter should resign now that he's also working for the Ku Klux Klan."

I swear I'm not making this up. Come to think of it, I don't believe they've invented the drug it would take to conjure us such a vision.

From what I gather, Texas NAACP officials share my sentiment, that for one person to represent them and the Klan at the same time is nothing short of ludicrous.

But lawyer Anthony Griffin of Galveston is defending his acceptance of the Ku Klux Klan civil liberbetween the group's legal aims. The case he's taking involves the KKK's membership lists.

Griffin, who, by the way, is black, said the law on membership lists was established some 30 years ago when the state of Alabama tried to get NAACP lists. The Supreme Court decided in favor of the NAACP. "If we allow little wrongs to take place (against the Klan), it is only a matter of time before they can see the list of the NAACP," he said.

Griffin said he won't apologize for defending the First Amendment, declined to resign during a heated meeting with NAACP leaders Saturday and the matter was sent to the national office in New York.

Whether you agree or disagree with what an organization says is not the point," Griffin said. "It's whether a person has a right to say

Granted, those are lofty ideals, and perhaps Griffin should be lauded for championing basic freedoms guaranteed by the Constitution.

However, I must share the disbelief held by NAACP officials, that anyone dedicated to NAACP efforts would allow himself to be in any way affiliated with the Klan. While first reading the story, I said to myself, "Self, this is the kind of thing you'd expect to come from the Sure enough, the story later informed us that it was Jay Jacobson, executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union in Texas, who asked Griffin to work the case involving membership lists for the Klan. Said he did so, because of Griffin's reputation as one of the top civil rights lawyers in Texas.

He said he did not know Griffin was black at the time

"Had I known he was black, would I have called?" Jacobson asked. "I think it would have been a slam on black people if I hadn't.

"Liberty is indivisible," he said. "You can't have one set of liberties ties case by pointing out similarities for one group of people and another set of liberties for others.

That's probably true, but they could have different lawyers.

John A. Moseley is news editor of the Big Spring Herald. His column appears on Tuesdays.

It's seldom that a judge blows off steam for himself and society in general. Most of them deliver lectures that are less harsh than some of my old principals gave us when we were caught sneaking a smoke in the boy's washroom.

That's probably because some bar groups would start screaming that the judge was not displaying proper judicial decorum.

It's the position of the American Bar Association that judges should treat everyone with courtesy - even some creep who zaps children.

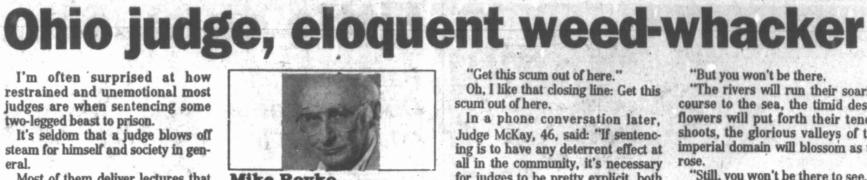

But as we're being overrun by criminals, maybe judges should start tossing some fire and brimstone into their sentencing speeches. They might look to Judge W.

Wyatt McKay for inspiration. Judge McKay hears criminal cases in Trumbull County, Ohio. Recently, he had kind of a loathsome guy in front of him. The creep had kidnapped, robbed and repeatedly raped a young girl who was delivering newspapers.

When it was time to sentence the villain, Judge McKay said:

"When you slithered out of your hole that day, and you spewed your venom all over this defenseless 12year-old girl, you made this court's top 10 hit list.

"I've had the misfortune of being involved with some of the lowest scum this county has to offer and you've made the top 10.

"In a way, the best sentence this court could give would be no sentence at all because if you left this courtroom, I don't think you would be alive 10 minutes. You are nothing but a weed, a weed among wheat ...

"And when we have a weed, it's my job to eradicate the weed, because if I don't, you will choke the

"Therefore, I'm going to take you off the streets for just as long as I possibly can.'

(The judge then ticked off long sentence after long, sentence for each of the many crimes committed against the girl.)

'It means you aren't even eligible for parole until you're 92. "That leaves only one more count,

"Well, I'm going to give you a souvenir of Trumbull County justice. And that is, you will receive a maximum sentence of 10 to 25 on the aggravated robbery for the stealing of that bra.

"And I hope that in your last 25 years in prison that you remember that souvenir.

"Get this scum out of here." Oh, I like that closing line: Get this scum out of here.

In a phone conversation later. Judge McKay, 46, said: "If sentencing is to have any deterrent effect at all in the community, it's necessary for judges to be pretty explicit, both about the crimes and about the criminals. It's a catharsis for our whole community to hear what's been done. And it's a catharsis for the judge, too, to tell you the truth. We hear a lot. But I remain within the bounds of judicial decorum. It's not like I spit and yell."

Was he familiar with the Gonzalez sentence once handed down by the legendary Judge Roy Bean, back in the days of the Old West?

He sounded surprised. "You know about that? The Gonzalez case? That's my inspiration. Got that right here on my desk. Want me to fax it to you?'

That wasn't necessary, since I have it on my desk, too. In fact, it's in one of my books. And I should have guessed that he, too, would be an admirer of the prose of Judge Bean. For those who aren't familiar with it, here is what that hanging judge said in about 1881 when sentencing a killer and all-purpose menace:

"Jose Manuel Miguel Xaviar Gonzalez, in a few short weeks, it will be spring. The snows of winter will flow away, the ice will vanish, the air will become soft and balmy. 'In short, Jose Manuel Miguel

"There comes a point when we should not be ignorant as judges of what we know as men and women."

Of all the important words contained in the Illinois Appellate Court's ruling last week in the case of a 2 1/2-year-old boy known as Richard — and there are many words of vast importance - those may be the ones that contain the most wisdom of all.

They were written by Appellate Judge Dom J. Rizzi, in delivering the court's majority opinion, and if more men and women entrusted with judicial robes all over the United States heeded them, so many children would be spared so much pain. A judge, by definition, has to show some judgment; in so many cases involving children, it simply fails to happen. And the children are the ones to suffer, while the world goes Readers of this column are familiar with the case of the child known as Richard; we first reported on it in this space last May. It has striking parallels both to the case of Jessica DeBoer in Michigan, and to the case of the child we called Sarah in the Chicago area.

According to court records, Richard was born on March 16, 1991, to a woman who, four days later, willingly agreed to put him up for adoption. The birth mother had broken up with her boyfriend, the biological father, at the time Richard was born. She refused to tell social workers the biological father's name - according to court records, she sent word to the biological father that the baby was dead.

Later, though, the birth mother and the boyfriend got married. And the biological father waged a court battle claiming that his rights were violated when the baby was adopted, and that Richard, who has spent his entire life in his adoptive home, should be given to him - and, by inference, to the birth mother who had represented Richard as being dead.

The Appellate Court refused to allow this to happen to Richard. Delivering the court's majority opinion, Judge Rizzi wrote: "Fortunately, the time has long passed when children in our society were considered the property of their parents. Slowly, but finally, when it comes to children even the law has rid itself of the Dred Scott mentality that a human being can be considered a piece of property 'belonging' to another human being.

"To hold that a child is the property of his parents is to deny the humanity of the child. Thus, in the present case we start with the premise that Richard is not a piece of property with property rights belonging to either his biological or adoptive parents. Richard 'belongs' to no one but himself. ... It is his best interest and corollary rights that come before anything else, including the interests and rights of biological and adoptive parents.

Judge Rizzi wrote: "A child's best interest is not part of an equation. It is not to be balanced against any other interest. ... Courts are here to protect children - not to victimize them.'

You would think this is a simple tenet: In cases regarding the life of a child, the well-being of the child

Dear Abby - Letters... Mother-to-be wants good news

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Dear Abby is on a twoweek vacation. Following is a selection of some of her favorite past letters from the

DEAR ABBY: Right now, I am so upset I want to get this off my chest to relieve my own anxiety, and if you print it in your column, it will be a big favor to many women.

I am in my eighth month with my first child, and today I had a checkup. Coming home on the bus, I sat next to a motherly looking woman who struck up a conversation with me. She talked about nothing but the horrors of childbirth!

She had had six and lost two. Her sister had a child who was born deaf and blind, and her daughter's first child was retarded because of the long and complicated labor she had endured. Then her neighbor's baby strangled on the umbilical cord during the birth process. Abby, by the time I got off that bus, I was shaking like a leaf!

Please tell well-meaning (?) women that pregnant women do not want to hear such tales, and if they can't say something cheerful about childbirth to not say anything at all. -

DEAR UPSET: You've said it all. And very well. Let's hope it gives those bearers of bad tidings cause to pause.

DEAR ABBY: We built a lovely patio, bought furniture and a grill, and planned for a pleasant summer. But whenever we cook out, two neighbor children come over, stand around and watch us eat!

Once I gave them each a slice of watermelon and told them nicely to run along home, but they came back with some other children, forming a ring around the grill and remarking on how good the barbecued ribs smelled! I like children and don't want to be unkind or petty, but our budget can't be stretched to feed more than our own family. Shall I call the parents and explain how embarrassing

DEAR HAD IT: Call the parents and tell them you'd like to feed their children, but you can't afford it, so would they please keep them away from your cookouts.

DEAR ABBY: My husband was recently honored at a banquet by the company he works for.

At the end of the program, he was called upon to say a few words. When he reached the microphone, everyone stood up and applauded.

As his wife, I felt it would be out of place for me to stand up and applaud my husband, but my heart was applauding.

Did I do the right thing by remaining seated? — SECOND THOUGHTS

DEAR SECOND: I think you should have stood and applauded with your hands as well as with your heart. DEAR ABBY: I am one of 20 draftsmen working in a large engineering office with a lot of female secretaries. Abby, do you think a woman feels complimented when she enters a room and a man whistles at her? One guy here insists that the girls love it. I say no woman wants to be treated as a sex object, and whistling at a woman is an insult.

I'd like a woman's point of view. — T.C. IN

DEAR T.C.: THIS woman's point of view is the same as yours. (P.S. whistling at women also indicates a juvenile mentality.)

Cult or religion, how to tell

What's the difference between a "religion" and a "cult"?

The United States Supreme Court has stumbled over this question, giving its official sanction to an African outfit now in Florida, the Church of Babalu Aye, allowing the barbaric sacrifice of animals in the name of "religious liberty."

I would not be opening this subject unless I thought I could help, and your Supreme Court needs

In reaction to Jonestown and Waco, TV talk shows have begun using the word "cult" to include any company of zealots.

People magazine interviewed two authors who believe that Campus Crusade for Christ is a cult.

This whole question would be academic were it not for the Supreme Court's decision, which could encourage other weirdos to start sacrificing people "in the name of religion."

In our society, the rule of law prescribes that anybody is "innocent until proved guilty beyond reasonable doubt - before competent witnesses in a duly constituted court of law."

Off-the-street hearsay witnesses on a TV talk show do not qualify! A dictionary definition of "cult" calls it "obsessive devotion or veneration for a person, principle or

But how much is too much? The meaning of "obsessive" can be argued interminably.

Our churches, including mainline churches, have left themselves vulnerable to challenge by repeated revelations of physical misuse of humans by members of their clergy.

Paul Harvey

For the institution to go down or its effectiveness to be diluted would unharness jillions of us, as "unguided missiles" inevitably destined to self-destruct.

So let's see if we can't protect the church from those who would disparage it and preserve the essential discipline it represents.

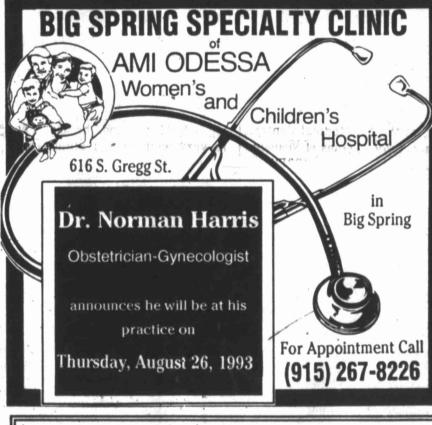

Scholars have suggested that a cult is a group in which the leader claims to be the Son of God.

Other theologians as fervently insist that such a definition would preclude the Second Coming.

It might be said that a cult is any group "with a closed membership." But Jim Jones and David Koresh would protest that their membership was open to all.

To shuck right down to the cob, as we say in the Ozarks, it may be impossible for anybody to offer a perfect definition for the word "cult" which will legally set it apart from bona fide religions.

Until wiser legal scholars can come up with a limit on how much is too much zeal, may I respectfully recommend an interim standard of measure: "If any rite includes hurting anybody or any creature, that is not a practice which our Constitution was intended to protect." Enrique Pena, a native of Madrid, Spain, was fascinated by a recent visit to Big Spring.

"There is land for everything here," said Pena, an engineering student and friend of local resident Shane Higgins. "Everywhere I saw oil wells. We don't have any of those. It was very funny to see a field of something growing, like corn, with an oil well right in the middle of it."

Pena was surprised that Big Spring residents take their cars everywhere. In Spain, he said, few young people even have cars because they are very expensive, as is gasoline.

"We walk much more," he said. Pena enjoyed walking around Scenic Mountain, saying if he lived here, he would do it every day.

For fun, young people in Madrid walk to movies and nightclubs. There is no drinking age, so young people often do drink alcohol, Pena said — and some of them have a drinking problem. "But many Spanish families accept drinking much more," he said. "It is something they do at home." Although the government is not likely to institute a drinking age, it may raise the cost of alcohol to prohibit young buyers, he said. Pena said people in Madrid are much like those in Big Spring.

the museum, they told him he was the first visitor from Spain. Then while Shane's mother, Kathy Higgins, went for an adjustment at Warren Chiropractic Center, Pena decided to try the treatment as well. "They wouldn't even charge me," he said, "and my back feels better."

One of Pena's favorite activities at home is going to the bullfights, which he calls "exciting." He also sees American movies - although he finds them very violent.

"Son-In-Law," which he saw recently, is a good representation of the diversity of American culture, Pena said. But he tries to stay away

"You cannot get to know a culture without getting inside it," he said. To get rid of stereotypes, traveling is one of the best things.

"I don't think many Americans know much about other cultures," Pena said. "They should try to be more open.

Another piece of advice he has for Americans is "conserve," Pena said.

"We are very open people, laughing and joking around," he said. "I fit said the budding civil engineer. I waste less food, energy—little in very well here. I didn't feel things will help. The environment is "They should consider nature," things will help. The environment is very important to everyone."

Issues causing controversy in Spain right now are taxes and concerns over the European Economic Community. "In those matters, people are very segregated," Pena said. But in "human matters" such as abortion and gun control, which split the U.S., voters in Spain are largely in agree-

'We are a Catholic country," he said. "Most people believe the same way on those issues.

American culture has invaded Spain to a large extent, getting even larger, Pena said. His advice to entrepreneurs?

"Move to Europe and open Tex-Mex restaurants," Pena said. "You could be a millionaire.

Two youths have learned to appreciate and better understand a different culture as well as their own, after spending months learning and living together

Seventeen-year-old Oliver Boeckh, Germany and 16-year-old Christopher Bonger, of Big Spring participated in the Rotary International Youth Exchange Program.

The program gives high schoolaged youth the chance to host a person from a different country, in an effort to build understanding.

"I wanted to go because it is an interesting country," said Oliver, who stayed with Christopher in July and August. "I wanted to know the people living there - what they're doing." Christopher said of his trip to Germany, "I have German heritage, so I wanted to see where my ancestion in Big Spring. Both boys said their countries had characteristics different from one another.

Issues such as school, alcohol, food, socializing, driving and the environment were topics of discussion between Oliver and Christopher.

"In the U.S., you have more rules about smoking and non-smoking areas. In Germany, we have more rules about recycling," Oliver said. "At home, you must have different sacks for different things like cans or paper to recycle."

While Christopher was in Germany in May and June, he and Oliver visited places like castles, museums, clubs and markets throughout the

"To get a driver's license where I come from, it costs $1,000, but most everybody goes everywhere on a bike; shopping, all activities," Oliver added. "Here if you drive a distance, you must not go over a certain speed, and we have no speed limit on the

"The town I stayed in was over 1,000 years old. It was old and nice," he said. Regarding the food, "It was great; not a lot of hot dishes, and it was very different."

He said he had a different type of bread and milk as well as a lot of sausages. Oliver said of the U.S. foods he especially liked peanut butter, grape soda, Oreo cookies, Doritoes and root beer.

Unlike the U.S., the biggest meal of the day in Germany is traditionally held near noon. They view supper the way Americans view lunch, Christopher said he made a lot of Christopher said, "I realized how the U.S. is like a young kid and Germany is an older person. They've had time to learn from many mistakes. We're still learning.'

EDITOR'S NOTE - This is the second of a three-part series about Howard College's student athletic

Howard College's student athletic trainers have tough enough job after a year's worth experience. For the new freshmen joining the group, it can overwhelming.

"The first week, it's kind of like pulling your hair out," said Jason Hester, a freshmen out of Big Lake. "You get into a much more professional setting than high school, and you have to learn how things are supposed to be done here, how they want it done.

That learning period, that first week, goes by fast. Howard's athletes have already arrived, soon practices will begin. There will be no time to relax.

The three sophomores among Howard's eight student trainers are Kathy James, Pattie Howard and Thomas Flake. They do their best to help the freshman adjust to the job and understand what's expected of them.

"We tell them that, other than grades, this job is their top priority," Howard said.

The same dedication athletes give their teams can be seen among the student trainers. Whether it's a simple ankle wrapping, if there is such a thing, to running some of the high-tech rehabilitation machines, the trainers have to be there when an athlete needs them. That means work weeks anywhere between 40 and 60 hours, and don't forget these are student trainers. They've got a full load of classes to handle.

The workload is intimidating, especially to freshman Clark Fields. Fields is the lone freshman without training experience.

Fields said: "I don't know if I'm ready for all the time we have to put in. They're so far ahead of me here; I have to learn a lot."

On the other hand, Fields has an advantage some of the other trainers don't. He was a halfback at Forsan High School and a talented athlete, but he injured his knee and required surgery. He endured pain and battled through rehab. He's already done what some of Howard's unluckier athletes will do

"I tore up my knee and needed surgery. That's what got me involved in this," Fields said. "When somebody gets hurt, I'm going to understand what they're going through, I can help them cope with it. I'll know their point of Everett Blackburn, the head athletic trainer at Howard, has faith in all of his "kids," his trainers. The freshmen will catch on, he said, and he'll enjoy watching them.

"One of my biggest thrills is watching a freshman mature," he said. "They come here and they talk a certain way, like a high school kid. Then, after a while, they'll sit across from you and talk as an adult. I really enjoy watching that change.

In fact, the personal adjustments the freshmen have to make may be more difficult than the adjustments in the training room. The student trainers have more to deal with than sports injuries and books.

"We're just like everyone else. The part that's most difficult is the change from high school to colliving away from Mom and Dad. All students have the same problem."

Trainers' first Avery leads Braves past Giants

By The Associated Press

Steve Avery has already been to the World Series twice, and that experience is paying off in the Atlanta Braves' bid for a third straight appearance there.

In the opener of a three-game seried against NL West-leading San Francisco on Monday night, Avery (14-4) beat the Giants for the third time this season, and the Braves' 5-3 victory moved them within 6 1/2 games of first place.

'Avery treated this game like a World Series game," manager Bobby Cox said. "That's the way he

That kind of performance was just what the Braves, who won for the 12th time in 14 games, needed as they pursue the Giants, whom they play five more times in the next 10

"From the first pitch to the last, he had the concentration and the energy and the focus of a big game, which it was for us," catcher Damon Berryhill said.

"He won't give you many good pitches to hit," San Francisco's Royce Clayton said. "He did a good job of adjusting all night and was doing that with everybody. We've done well against everbody but Avery, so this could actually be a confidence booster for us."

Jeff Blauser went 3-for-5 and hit his 14th homer of the season in the ninth inning to cement the victory. He is 10-for-18 with three homers and four RBIs in his last four games.

"Avery threw a great game, and it was really just a matter of too much Blauser,'' Giants manager Dusty Baker said. "We couldn't get Blauser out. He really hurt us in the big inning and that's what the Braves are known for.'

The Braves, who have the best road record in the majors at 42-24, staked Avery to a 3-0 lead in the second inning off starter Trevor Wilson (7-5), who left the game after four innings with a sore shoulder.

Elsewhere in the NL it was Cincinnati 6, New York 2; Montreal 1, Chicago 0; Colorado 3, Philadelphia 2 in 13 innings; San Diego 7, St. Louis 5; and Los Angeles 6, Pittsburgh 1.

Dean Palmer likes Camden Yards. He liked it on Opening Day when he hit two homers. He liked it Monday night when he hit another. In fact, Palmer has liked Camden Yards just about every time he's played there the Rangers' third baseman has hit six homers there this season.
