Youth ready for steer show

During a practice walk-through in the show barn, Jeremy Ebersole pats the head of his steer as he was getting ready for the Junior Steer Judging Saturday at the Howard County Fair.

When Jeremy Ebersole's steer, Lucky, didn't behave during his training, the high school senior sometimes resorted to threats.

"Once I ate a hamburger in front of him," said Jeremy, who will compete with more than 100 other young farmers at the Howard County Fair's junior steer show Saturday.

"I told him a few times, 'I sure am hungry for some barbecue,'" Jeremy added, patting his steer. "But he knows I'm just kidding."

Young steer owners began gathering Thursday evening to prepare for the big show. Some walked their animals around the arena, others just sat on stools and tried to relax.

"They get nervous, because they want to do well," said Michael Kelsey, Howard County Extension Agent for 4-H. The kids entering steers are members of 4-H or Future Farmers of America, ages 9-19.

So many entries came in this year, an extra tent had to be added for pre-show storage.

For months, the young people have been caring for their steers - feeding them, exercising them and training them in certain behaviors. When the best are chosen, the animals will be sold for beef.

"That's the sad part about it," said Ryan Wright, a Coahoma High School sophomore. His steer, Spud, has unusual white markings on the shins of his black coat. Ryan, a veteran of sheep raising, now prefers cattle.

"They just have more personality," Ryan said as Spud licked his arm affectionately. "They're smarter."

As for the art of showing cattle, Kelsey said there's more than one way to catch the judge's eye. Many of the young people will use hairspray, teasing combs and adhesive to plump up an animal's appearance - and that's acceptable.

"There's a lot you can do with a little adhesive," Kelsey said. "You can really make him look thicker."

A steer's tail is teased into a thick ball to balance the animal's size. The judges are looking for three things: Muscle tone, finish (a covering of fat) and balance.

"How they walk is important," Kelsey said. "And they should be pretty, have a good appearance."

Natalie Nichols named her steer Tax Man, since she got him April 15. The 10-year-old has raised the animals for three years.

"It takes time," Natalie said. "You have to work with them."

"I told him a few times, 'I sure am hungry for some barbecue.' But he knows I'm just kidding."

Steer show participant

"Cattle are not gentle like this by nature," said Kelsey, watching young people lead the animals slowly around the arena. "It takes work to get them to walk like this."

And, the young farmers said, it takes a few tricks.

Scratching Tax Man on his stomach with a stick makes him relax - a very important feature for the judge.

"Lucky likes to be scratched right here, on his brisket," said Jeremy, who used rewards to train his steer. But he admits it takes persistence and patience as well.

"You have to chase him around the pen until you catch him at first," Jeremy said. "Then you get him used to walking. Then you have to teach him to keep his head up. There's a lot to do."

With Lucky, it was a matter of attitude adjustment, Jeremy said. "He needed to get used to me."

Close, but ... Wow, a $2,000 winner!

Ben Rubio always thought close only counted in horse-shoes and hand grenades.

Now he can add the Texas Lottery to that list.

Big Spring resident Rubio earned $2,003 by picking five out of six winning numbers in Wednesday's prize drawing. The TU Electric employee said he'll add the money to his kids' college fund.

"I'm going to take it right over to the credit union," Rubio said. He said he was always a supporter of the state lottery, even before it put money in his pocket. Now he plays about every week.

"I think it brings a lot of money into Texas," Rubio said. "And it puts money into the hands of ordinary people."

He grinned, eyeing his state-issued check for the prize money. "You never know who's going to win."

On Wednesday evening, as Rubio and his wife, Jessica, were watching the 10 p.m. drawing, their excitement built to a fever pitch as the first four numbers were called out.

They had all four. "Then they called out the fifth one - it was 29 and I had six," Rubio said. "I thought we'd lost it, and then they called out the last one. We had it."

Rubio knew he'd won some money, but he didn't find out how much until Thursday, when he drove to the lottery office in Odessa. He and more than 200 others picked five of six numbers to get a share of the loot.

While the winnings are all pegged for a bank deposit, Rubio expects to get a few requests for loans.

"Are you kidding?" he said. "The guys at work are going to give me a hard time."

Ben Rubio of Big Spring came within one number from winning the big money in Wednesday night's Lotto Texas drawing. The TU Electric worker earned a respectable amount for coming close, though.

Christmas in April replacing woman's home

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

Christmas in April will pour the foundation for a new north side home for the first time ever in October, following the demolition of a local residence on Wednesday.

The dust settled Thursday, as Strickland & Knight Inc. cleared away remains of the former home of Addie Oliver, a 69-year-old Big Spring resident.

"She's going to go back to that location in a house we're going to provide," said Bob Noyes, president of Christmas in April. "This spring, with all the rain, the ceilings at the back of her house were falling in."

In the transition, Oliver has been provided a temporary residence in the Capehart Addition.

Following the spring storms, Oliver contacted the Red Cross for assistance.

Red Cross initially organized an effort to build a roof and eventually, find a new home for Oliver and was met with unforeseeable difficulties.

Oliver was informed by housing and health authorities that her home was uninhabitable.

"City code forbids the kind of trailer, we were going to put there after her old house was cleared away," said Howard County Red Cross executive director Marianne Brown-Esquillin. "She would have been homeless had other agencies not come in."

Red Cross officials contacted Christmas in April to inquire about a permanent relocation. The group opted for the same location but a new home.

"We wanted to know what they can help us with, and they took over the demolition and house purchase and moving," she said.

Noyes added, "In the past, Christmas in April had done some plumbing off and on to Oliver's house, but the structure was beyond our repair."

At a cost of approximately $1,000 to the Red Cross, Oliver's personal needs were met. Total cost to Christmas in April for her new housing will be about $3,000.

"The Texas Department on Aging gave us some grant money, and the extra money allowed us to be able to take on more projects," Noyes said.

Purchasing a small four-room house at a reduced cost, Valencia House Moving will transport the local house and move it at a reduced rate.

"We've got a sound little house. The road contractors volunteered to demolish the old house and haul it away," Noyes said. "We're going to pour a foundation and move the new house and hook up the utilities and do whatever repairs required to make it livable."

The project will add a new facet to the organization's tasks, which rely solely on donations and volunteers to refurbish area homes to make them inhabitable for occupants.

"We're looking for more houses now," Noyes said, noting that the organization began its efforts in 1987. "There are a lot of boarded up houses we can repair to provide suitable living arrangements."

Long term costs for repairing many homes has exceeded the cost of moving, demolishing, buying and moving houses, he said.

"The perception from government is to keep the seniors in their own home as long as possible to keep them more independent and reduce costs," he said. "We have the same basic idea. It's their home, they want to stay there. Their attitude is, 'This is my home I grew up here, so I'm staying.'"

U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison talks to reporters after testifying before the Travis County Grand Jury Thursday in Austin. Hutchison is under investigation for alleged wrongdoing at the state treasury during her two-year term as head of that agency. Hutchison's attorney, John Dowd, looks on during the news conference.

Hutchison declines to reveal responses to DA's questioning

The Associated Press

AUSTIN — In the raucous atmosphere she wanted to avoid, U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison refused Thursday to say whether she answered a grand jury's questions about alleged wrongdoing during her tenure as state treasurer.

But she said she has done nothing wrong and contended that an indictment, if handed up, only would make her stronger politically. "I am going to win in the end," said Mrs. Hutchison, 50, who became the state's first woman senator after winning a special election June 5. "The longer that (District Attorney) Ronnie Earle puts me through this kind of harassment, the stronger I will become."

Guarded by her husband, lawyer and spokesman against a mob of reporters and photographers, Mrs. Hutchison quickly ducked into a building where a Travis County grand jury has been meeting for the past three months. She emerged 50 minutes later, pausing only to wave to the two dozen sign-carrying well-wishers who had gathered outside.

She said, "Thank you," but was unwilling to reveal whether she responded to the questions of the 12 grand jurors or followed the advice of her attorneys to use her Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination.

"I am not going to tell you if I took that advice because I didn't want to take their advice. I really wanted to testify," Mrs. Hutchison said.

Her attorney, John Dowd, suggested that she was mum. "I just cannot permit her, when the district attorney has no interest in the information on the allegations, to get ensnared," Dowd said. "It's happened before and it's not going to happen in this case."

Mrs. Hutchison repeated her claim that because she is a successful Republican with ambitions for re-election in 1994, she has been targeted for an indictment by Earle, a Democrat.

But Earle, whose office looks into allegations against state officials and who has investigated more Democrats than Republicans, stood by the inquiry.

Earle declined to say if Mrs. Hutchison had answered questions. He said the probe was moving as quickly as possible and would likely end this month.

"The grand jury is working as hard as it can to come to a reasonable decision in this matter as soon as possible," the prosecutor said. Earle denied accusations by Dowd that he was trying to trip the senator on a minor charge, such as perjury.

"The grand jury is interested in patterns of conduct, not in technicalities," Earle said.

Texas law forbids public officials from using their office for non-state business. The crime is classified as a misdemeanor or a felony based on the extent of the abuse.

Former Treasury employees who have testified before the grand jury have said Mrs. Hutchison was an obsessive boss who once hit a worker out of frustration and who made a habit of ordering employees to do personal errands on state time.

Mrs. Hutchison told a news conference Thursday that she never ordered state workers to perform political or personal tasks for her or to have records destroyed that may have outlined possible wrongdoing.

"There has been no destruction of records to my knowledge in the Treasury," she said. "And I have not used public employees for personal purposes except if they volunteered to do something for me and they did not take state time to do it."

Mrs. Hutchison's grand jury appearance brought to a boil the discord that has grown between her office and Earle.

She accused the prosecutor of "pressing for an indictment."

Towns get names from obscure, bizarre

The Associated Press

DING DONG, Texas — Yes, Ding Dong.

Ten miles south of Killeen, on a banked bend of Farm Road 440, sits an inert burg where the most noticeable edifice rising from the Central Texas plains also is the only place of commerce. It is named, appropriately, "The One Stop."

Visitors there are greeted by the sight of an under-the-counter refrigerator labeled "Worms" and a wall decorated by more snuff signs than, well, more than you could spit at.

This dormant farming hamlet got its name in the 1920s from a sign made for a long-gone general merchandise store owned by third cousins I.B. Bell and Z.O. Bell, said Yvonne Harton, I.B.'s daughter.

The sign showed two bells, one captioned "Ding" and the other "Dong." The nicknames stuck, and the town was thus christened.

I.B. Bell, last of the Ding Dongs, died in 1990 in Lampasas at age 100, Harton said. And townspeople here say every new Ding Dong sign that state highway crews erect is usually stolen within a few days.

Ding Dong is one of the hundreds of towns with peculiar names that dot the Lone Star state, stretching from the parched plains of Notrees, near Odessa in West Texas, to the righteous red clay of Fairplay, which is close to Carthage in East Texas.

The monikers range from the obvious to the obscure, bizarre to banal, weird to weird.

Lots of towns have male names, such as Melvin, Nolan, Donnie and Brad. Some towns went a little farther and used surnames, too: Ben Arnold, Ben Wheeler, George West and Tom Bean.

Special kudos go to Howard County, itself a given-named entity and home to the communities of Vincent and Luther, as well as Otis Chalk and Ross City.

But the big winner is a four-bagger: Ben Bolt in Jim Wells County.

Women are represented, too. There's Alice, Mercedes, Helena, Diana, Bebe Aubrey, Peggy and Donna. Collin County, north of Dallas, has Celina and Anna. Other female-related names: Sisterdale, Twin Sisters, Lovelady and Seven Sisters.

Some town names describe their location — Brushy Creek, Plains, South Plains, Flat, Redwater.

Others are misleading. Grandfalls is in a desert, Maple sits on the treeless plains and Big Lake doesn't have one.

A handful of town names are verbs such as Rule, Speaks, Grow, Draw, Tell, Crow and Pine. Others are commands — Needmore and Circle Back.

Hungry? Try Oatmeal, Okra, Grapeland, Pear Valley, Fruitland, Muenster, Lollipop, Honey Grove and Pecan Gap.

Some names are tributes to famous people or characters: Tarzan, Ivanhoe, Wadsworth, Kildare, William Penn, and Ben Franklin.

Others are obscure, bizarre to banal, weird to weird.

Jerry Don Glover poses with his corn crop near the Texas Panhandle town of Lazbuddie. Glover has about 700 acres that is well on track toward its destiny as tortilla chips. But the nearest town, like many others across the state has a somewhat unusual name. Many of those town names have bizarre and obscure origins.

In the same vein, the Panhandle has Conway in Carson County, and 55 miles away, Twitty in Wheeler County. The famous country singer took his first name from an Arkansas town, but Twitty, named after a settler, is the source of his last name.

Some names are stolen from other cities or places — Atlanta, Detroit, Paris, Pittsburgh (with a Texas spelling), Naples, Manchester, Boston, Liverpool, Newcastle, Scotland, Peoria, Newark, Dublin, Egypt, Columbus, Amherst, Sudan, London, Memphis and Miami, Port-Au-Prince.

There are domiciles, too — Whitehouse, Home, New Home, Mountain Home and, perhaps the most heart-felt of the bunch, Sweet Home.

Some places have it good, and apparently want to tell the world about it — Happy, Utopia, Joy, Paradise, Prosper, Eden, Placid and Loyal Valley.

And then there are some names that are just WEIRD: Zipperlandville, Fly Gap, Iraan, Looneyville, Nimrod, Fluvanna, Muleshoe, Loco, Deadwood, Keechi, Priddy, Zorn, Ninevah, North Zulch, Dime Box, Old Dime Box, Snook, Bigfoot, Noodle, Megargel, Cranfills Gap, Sipe Springs, Desdemona, and Lazbuddie.

A more challenging category may be the confused town-county combination. See if any of these make sense: Seguin is in Guadalupe County, but Guadalupe is in Victoria County. Mentone is in Loving County but Loving is in Young County.

Stratford is in Sherman County, but Sherman is in Grayson County.

This one's a little tougher: Woodville is in Tyler County, Tyler is

Media critiqued on Davidian coverage

The Associated Press

DALLAS — The next time journalists face an emotionally charged story with more than 100 lives on the line, they may be better prepared to handle the ethics of the situation.

Answers to some of their questions may be found in a media group's 27-page report released Wednesday that examines the coverage of the 51-day standoff between federal authorities and David Koresh's cult.

The survey by a Society of Professional Journalists' task force also offers more than a dozen guidelines to consider when faced with conflicts involving hostages, standoffs or other crises.

"It is unlikely there will be another Waco, in the same sense," task force chair Bob Steele, the ethics director of Florida's Poynter Institute for Media Studies, said. "But there will be many events that challenge journalists in the same way that Waco did."

"This report challenges journalists to learn some important lessons from what happened in Waco. Journalists can and must be better prepared to make ethical decisions, journalistic decisions, when directly involved in ongoing news coverage about suicidal or homicidal individuals," he said.

The survey says reporters generally acted responsibly, but could've been more aggressive.

The study also concludes that if the cult was warned about the raid, it did not come from reporters for the Waco Tribune-Herald or a photographer for Waco television station KWTX.

The Tribune-Herald was lauded for spending eight months researching its seven-part series into allegations that the Davidians were stockpiling weapons and possibly abusing children.

Waco law enforcement officers lead four survivors of the inferno at the Branch Davidian compound into court in Waco earlier this year. The Society of Professional Journalists has released the results of its evaluation of media coverage of the 51-day standoff and tragic fire which ended the siege.

The government had asked the paper not to run the series and though the paper delayed it for a month for other reasons, the second installment ran Feb. 28, the day of the botched raid which left four federal agents dead. Six Davidians also died that day.

"We made a proper ethical decision based on the integrity of a number of people in this organization," Tribune-Herald editor Bob Lott said. "We walked it through very carefully."

In the report, other Waco-area news outlets were challenged for not taking the same approach to the cult, which had been part of the community for decades.

The study questioned the hundreds of journalists who descended on Waco for not becoming more persistent once the daily FBI briefings became their primary source of information on the standoff, which ended April 19 when a fire engulfed the compound. Koresh and as many as 85 of his followers died just before or during the fire.

According to the report, freedom of information requests should have been filed and pools should have been formed at the sake of competition in order to get out the most complete information.

Dallas radio station KRLD was credited for broadcasting Koresh's 58-minute tape on March 2, which he said would lead to a surrender.

However, KRLD and CNN were chastised for interviewing the self-proclaimed prophet live during the hours following the raid because they may have interfered with hostage negotiations. Other reporters were admonished for trying to telephone Koresh that same time.

Grand jury to decide if 'Infosex' obscene

GEORGETOWN (AP) — A Williamson County grand jury will consider whether the "Infosex" cable television program broadcast Aug. 23 on Austin Community Television was obscene, Williamson County Attorney Gene Taylor says.

"Infosex" producer Terrell Johnson and host Gareth Rees were indicted Aug. 26 in Travis County on charges of obscenity and recklessly exposing minors to sexually explicit materials.

"Infosex", a monthly, live, call-in program on safer-sex, showed a tape that included graphic scenes two men engaged in sex acts. The program also was broadcast in southern Williamson County.

Man arrested carrying two pounds of heroin

HOUSTON (AP) — A 32-year-old Houston man has been arrested after U.S. Customs agents found more than 2 pounds of heroin in his briefcase at Intercontinental Airport.

British Customs officials observed Michael Aloysius on a recent trip to London and notified authorities in the United States, U.S. Customs special agent Leon Guinn said.

"They thought it was rather suspicious and they phoned that information to Houston," Guinn said.

Agents were waiting for Aloysius when he returned to Houston on Wednesday. The heroin, with an estimated street value of $2 million, was found concealed in a false bottom built into his briefcase, officials said.

Aloysius made an initial court appearance Thursday before Federal Magistrate Judge Marcia Crone and was scheduled for a probable cause and bond hearing before Crone on Friday.

If convicted on charges of smuggling more than 100 grams of heroin, he faces from five to 40 years in prison.

Chemical lead forces evacuation in Odessa

ODESSA (AP) — A chemical cloud drifted from Champion Technologies Inc. early Thursday when workers inadvertently mixed two products and a tank exploded, a state official said.

About 1,000 people were forced to evacuate the nearby industrial area. Medical Center Hospital treated at least 36 people for breathing problems, watery eyes, itching and headaches, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Repeated telephone calls by The Associated Press to Champion's offices in Houston and Odessa were not returned.

Lindsey Buckner, emergency response coordinator for the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission, said workers unloaded a truck containing diethylene triamine into a tank containing benzyl chloride. They thought they were unloading benzyl chloride, Buckner said.

"It was an accident," he said. "It was not caused by any of our regulations being broken."

Buckner said the chemical mixup caused a reaction that blew the top off the 5,000-gallon fiberglass tank. A mist rained to the soil, he said.

Champion used soda ash to neutralize what soaked into the ground, Buckner said, adding that state officials likely won't be able to assess any environmental damage until Friday. What spewed into the air has dissipated or been blown into a holding area, he said.

Police Capt. Tom Caldemeyer said authorities set up roadblocks and asked people within one mile of the plant to leave when the chemical began leaking at about 8 a.m. An elementary school was among buildings evacuated.

Food stamp printer fires back at Sharp

AUSTIN (AP) — State Comptroller John Sharp's criticism of efforts by the nation's food stamp printer to block use of a plastic, card-style system is being called an "unjustified personal attack" by the company.

United States Banknote Corp. of New York on Thursday responded to last week's move by Sharp, awarding a "Silver Snout Award" to company president Stanley Kreitman.

Sharp criticized Kreitman for hiring a lobbyist and warning others about Texas' attempt to replace food stamps with a plastic card system called Electronic Benefits Transfer, or EBT for short.

"He's gone above and beyond the bounds of common decency and common sense in trying to exploit public expenditures for personal gain," Sharp said of Kreitman.

United States Banknote issued a statement that said: "Comptroller Sharp's unjustified personal attack on Mr. Kreitman for advocating caution in the face of uncertainty ignores the most essential cost issues with which the Texas State Comptroller should be concerned."

Dallas school district may install cameras

DALLAS (AP) — After the recent shooting death of a student in the halls of a high school, Dallas Independent School District will consider installing video surveillance systems in some schools.

Advanced Surveillance Technologies, Inc. of Richardson, a suburb of Dallas, has offered to let the district use their system for 90 days.

Dallas district security director C.W. Burruss said the district will accept the offer, but only on a trial basis.

"We are not installing their products in all our schools, just in 11 locations," he said.

"We're going to experiment with their system and if it helps us deter crime, we'll consider it," Burruss said. "But we would have to open it (the contract) up for bids."

The single video camera systems will monitor high-traffic areas where students congregate. The system will have "dummy" cameras, to be more cost-effective, but all will have flashing red lights to give the appearance of actually functioning, said Franey Parnell, an Advanced Surveillance Technologies spokesman.

Irving woman lone winner Wednesday

AUSTIN (AP) — A shaky Irving woman on Thursday claimed the state's $38.6 million lotto jackpot, the largest taken by one person since the game began in Texas last year.

"I shook. And then I shook some more. And then I sat down and shook," Rebecca Brown, 39, said of her discovery that she'd won. "Then I went and I woke my husband up."

Mrs. Brown collected her first payment of $1.9 million and will get 19 more.

The previous record for the largest jackpot given to one person was held by Janie Kallus of Schulenberg, who won $21.7 million in November 1992.

"After taxes, it's about $100,000 a month for the next 20 years," said state Comptroller John Sharp, who presented Mrs. Brown and her husband, Eddie, with the check.

Cultist accepts offer of bargain, agrees to testify

The Associated Press

WACO — A woman whose husband was killed during a Feb. 28 raid on David Koresh's Branch Davidian compound accepted a plea bargain Thursday in exchange for her testimony against 11 other cultists.

Kathryn Schroeder, 34, the first cult member convicted in connection with the shootout and 51-day siege that ended in the fiery deaths of 85 cult members, agreed to testify against 11 other Koresh followers, the Justice Department said.

U.S. District Judge Walter Smith accepted the plea during a brief afternoon proceeding.

Mrs. Schroeder pleaded guilty to one count of forcibly resisting a federal officer, which carries a punishment of up to 10 years in prison. She is the first cult member to plead guilty in connection with the case.

No sentencing date was announced.

The other defendants are scheduled to go on trial Nov. 8 in Waco.

The eleven are charged with murder of federal officers, conspiracy to murder federal officers and possession of a firearm during the commission of a crime of violence.

Some also face lesser charges such as unlawful possession of machine guns and conspiracy to possess an unregistered destructive device.

Mrs. Schroeder was among the Koresh followers inside the compound 10 miles east of Waco when two truckloads of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agents pulled up, and a gun battle ensued.

She emerged from the compound after her four children had been released earlier. Three of the children were placed in the custody of their father, Mrs. Schroeder's first husband. The fourth was reported living with relatives in Florida.

Mrs. Schroeder's attorney, Scott Peterson of Waco, did not immediately return a telephone call to The Associated Press.

The other defendants are Brad Eugene Branch, Kevin Whitecliff, Clive Doyle, Jaime Castillo, Paul Fatta, Woodrow Kendrick, Norman Washington Allison, Renos Avraam, Livingston Fagan, Graeme Craddock and Ruth Ottman Riddle.

ATF agents killed in the raid were Steven D. Willis, Robert Williams, Conway C. LeBleu and Todd W. McKeehan.

Schroeder's husband, Michael Schroeder, died in the shootout with ATF agents on Feb. 28, said Justice Department spokesman John Russell.

Mrs. Schroeder had been charged with conspiracy to murder a federal officer and murder of a federal officer and possession of a firearm.

A member of David Koresh's Branch Davidian cult, Kathy Schroeder, seen in this March 19 photo, pleaded guilty Thursday to a reduced charge and agreed to testify against 11 other cult members. Schroeder, 34, became the first cult member convicted in connection with the shootout and 51-day siege that ended in the fiery deaths of 85 cult members. Schroeder's husband was killed in the initial federal raid on the compound.

It's good to be back to jalapeno

Ever hear this conversation?
"Careful, that's hot."
"Well, is it hot hot or pepper hot?"
"It's pepper hot, but it may be hot hot."

"Aw. That's not hot. Let me tell you about my chili. First I take two cups of cayenne pepper and a gallon of chopped jalapenos... I've heard all my life this Indian curry stuff is supposed to be hot. And I guess it probably is in places. But they're really in to curry in South Africa, but these folks don't know what hot food is all about. "Keh-full, that's hot."
"Well, is it hot hot or pepper hot?"
"I beg your pab-don?"
"And to me it makes perfect sense. I've used these terms all my life. "I mean, is it hot hot, like HOT hot... hot. Or is it pepper hot, like hot peppers kind of... hot?"
"Ah... um... c-could you say that all again please?"
"Never mind, I'll just taste it."
"Anyway, this curry stuff is supposed to be hot (pepper hot). But I never found any of this stuff to be hot hot."
"Most of the curry dishes were not even hot as a good chicken fried steak and mashed potatoes. I actually had to concentrate to tell if there was any hot spice in this food at all."
"I finally did get into some lamb curry with enough spice to open the old sinuses. Actually, it was the side dish of chopped tomato and peppers that made it."

Gary Shanks

After a month away from jalapenos, it was good to feel your face flush and sinuses open up. Almost blissful in a weird sort of way. And all the Texans at the table were chowing down on this stuff. The poor waiter had to bring more bowls of this stuff. And all the South Africans were watching these four red-faced Texans gobbling peppers. They had the same look on their faces as little kids do when they watch a spider kill a moth in their web and wrap it in a cocoon. Finally, when we were finished, and all the perspiration was dried or wiped off, one of the South Africans tentatively asked: "Do ALL Texans like hot food?" Well, he shouldn't have asked that. It's a point of pride for many Texans, including several at the table, to eat hot spicy food.

Texan who doesn't eat hot food. Tell him to move to Kansas or someplace like that!

When in actuality, that's not the case. A lot of Texans don't like spicy hot food.

So many, in fact, you have to know what Mexican restaurants to go to. Some Mexican places make the stuff so bland, you can't eat it.

Then, of course, down along the boarder and in the southern Hill Country, you can get food hot enough to kill you.

I've said before — I've had jalapenos grown in a scratch on the desert floor and watered with gasoline.

But the super hot peppers are not so much my style. I like a good pickled jalapeno, but the ones grown without enough water (you can spot them, they're smaller and darker green) need to be used in sausage or something — not eaten by themselves.

If I ever go back to South Africa, I'll definitely take back a few jars of jalapenos.

This cheese dip is called chili con queso, or just queso — but be careful, it's hot!

"That's all right Giddy. I will not burn myself. I'll simply blow on it for a moment."
"Oooowkkaaaaay!"

NAFTA needs to be put first

Scripps Howard News Service

Reinventing government, free trade with Mexico, a complete overhaul of the U.S. health care system — so many blockbuster initiatives crowd the White House agenda this fall there's a danger none will emerge in sharp relief. Of immediate concern is the item that faces a Dec. 31 deadline — NAFTA.

Congressional passage of the North American Free Trade Agreement may seem no more important than the other issues, but NAFTA will not wait. While Congress and citizens can take their time debating the other big administration bills, NAFTA demands a final vote in just over three months.

And at present, its passage is highly uncertain. If the president is serious about winning this one, he had better take heed.

Most Republicans in Congress support the substance of this Bush-administration agreement to remove trade barriers between the United States, Mexico and Canada, but some grumble about having to rescue Bill Clinton from his own early equivocations on free trade. And the Democrats are sharply divided. Right now the antis have the momentum, with two pungent and energetic spokesmen leading the charge.

Unless the administration is willing to watch eccentric businessman Ross Perot and isolationist conservative Pat Buchanan carry off a giant victory, the White House must raise the volume and intensity of its pro-NAFTA campaign. The critics' fear-mongering is the message getting through to the average American.

To be sure, the administration has produced a detailed response to Perot's mischievous, error-laden book blasting NAFTA; but it has been lackadaisical about placing the facts before the public, while the book circulates in 200,000 copies and Perot, with his cracker barrel charm, is all over TV. Bill Clinton plans a speech on NAFTA — which will be quickly swamped by the elaborate unveiling of the health care proposal at a series of events the week of Sept. 20. Then selling the Clinton health plan will absorb the administration's efforts and preoccupy both citizens and Congress.

A love of trains leads to his death

MEMPHIS — It's the trains that haunt Virginia Espinoza, the lonely sound as they rattle by her small brick duplex on a residential curve where already she has planted the funeral chrysanthemums.

Rheta Grimsley Johnson

She remembers the day her son Jeffrey Rice discovered how close to the house the freight train stopped. He was thrilled. Jeffrey had equal passion for airplanes and would sit for hours, even in the cold, looking straight up. And he loved big trucks, too. Once his stepfather, Pat Espinoza, had a car trouble and an 18-wheeler came to the rescue. Jeffrey got his ride.

But Jeffrey persisted. He wanted to ride the train. And on Aug. 10, between 1:30 and 6 a.m. as his parents slept, Jeffrey found his boots, stole outside, climbed aboard a flatted rail car and rode it to his death.

People on a southbound train thought they saw a child playing with toys on a northbound train that morning. Another southbound train reported hitting something on the Hatchie River bridge, knocking it into the water.

They found Jeffrey's body the next day, 45 miles from his home, in the waters of Swift Slew, a channel of the Hatchie River.

Virginia caught Jeffrey dressing in the middle of the night to go out and see a train. After that, she started tying the front door with rope. "And we hid his shoes, because Jeffrey wouldn't go outside without his shoes."

Dreamed, dreamt or just dreaming

SIR: I have often read the expression, "They had dreamt of..." "Dreamt" is such a left-handed word! Is it correct? I think "dreamed" would be more proper. Am I wrong in using "dreamed"? — Emilie T.

A: No, but you wouldn't be wrong in using "dreamt" either. You have a choice; isn't that great? And by the way, what's a left-handed word? If you used both "dreamed" and "dreamt" in the same sentence, would that make you ambidextrous?

SIR: Does "remember me to" someone mean remind them of me? Is this another example of the inexplicable idioms in our language? — Mary D.

A: I suppose you could say that "remember me" to someone means to remind someone of you, but wouldn't it be simpler just to say it means to give them your greetings, which is the standard meaning of the phrase? But if you're determined to call it an inexplicable idiom, go right ahead. Just don't flinch if some hotheaded critic calls you an inexplicable idiot.

SIR: If I have several daughters, and if one daughter has several sons, and if I say "One of my daughters' sons' teacher..." how many apostrophes do I need? — G.B.

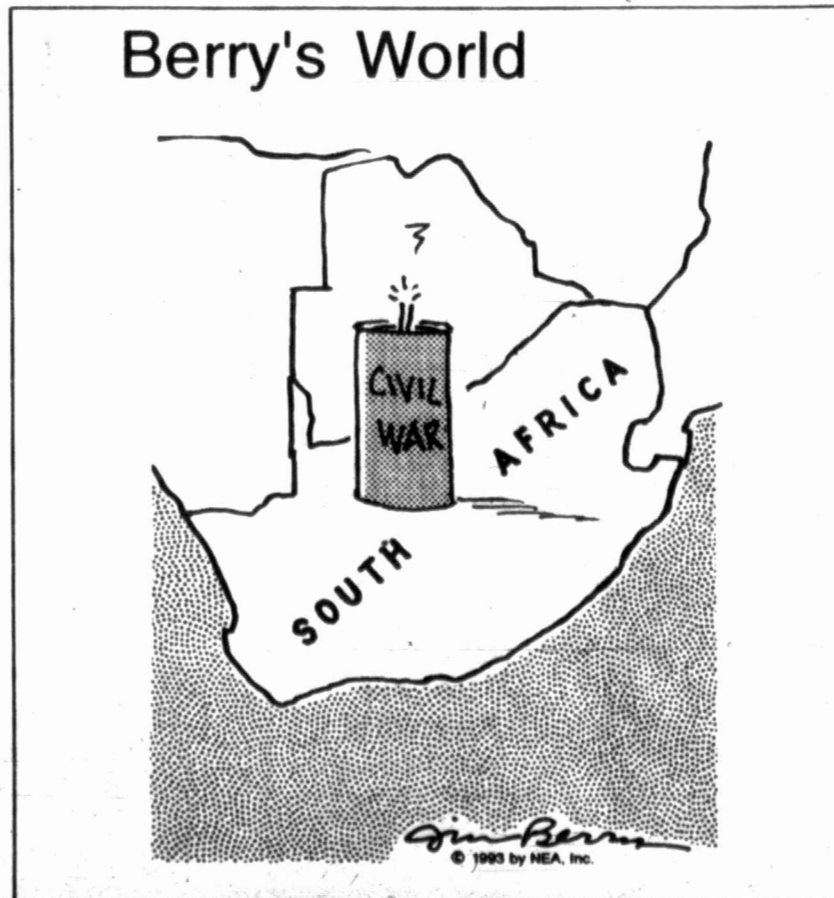

A: That depends. Are any of them named O'Shaughnessy?

SIR: Please give us the meaning of "Hathaway" (not Anne). Does it mean a crossing — a stream, bay, moor or other? — S.G.

A: Blessed if I know or can find out. Anybody know what a Hathaway (not Anne) is?

Schools are armed camps

I can't imagine children shooting and killing other children in school. Can't figure out how it can happen. Can't deal with it really. I come from another time. I graduated from Newnan High School (Ga.) in 1964.

If they caught you chewing gum they took you outside and flogged you.

Well, they didn't do that, but they made you write, "I am a juicy fruit," 14,000 times on the chalkboard.

Shoot somebody? Mrs. Evans, the librarian, made the boys take off their watches and the girls take off their bracelets so they wouldn't scratch the tables when they sat down to read.

When students walked in the halls, boys and girls couldn't be closer than five feet from each other. Teachers carried rulers around with them.

O.P. Evans, the principal, read biblical warnings against disrespecting authority at assembly meetings. He would cite a school rule and bellow in his frightful voice, "Just challenge us! Just challenge us!"

Shoot somebody? I was afraid to breathe.

I also got a great education and never feared for my life.

One kid blows another kid away at Atlanta's Harper High School recently. The dead kid is 15. In 1989 another 15-year-old was beaten to death at Harper High.

You know what one of the problems is? Get some of the reaction to the latest shooting.

The mother of the suspected murderer said her son's "tragic side of the story hasn't been told."

There we go again. The criminal as victim. He's still alive, isn't he?

Vanessa Shareef, described as the cluster coordinator at Harper High, had this to say:

"From what I get talking to my child and others, the boy (who did the shooting) didn't feel he had an option of anyone to talk to, anyone who was listening, anyone who would address the fact that he was getting beaten by these other boys. The children at the school, they feel there was some justification (for the shooting) I'm sad to say."

Poor misunderstood kid. He's getting pushed around and nobody will listen to him, so he shoots a fellow classmate in the back.

And some fellow students think he was justified.

My God.

But not to worry. We've got a task force on the situation now. Has there ever been a task force in the history of task forces that accomplished anything?

Here's what an article in the paper said: "A new state task force on violence in schools kicked off Wednesday with a brainstorming session on how to develop safe schools without creating armed camps of shake-downs and metal detectors."

... without creating armed camps?"

I've got news for the state task force. Some of our schools already are armed camps. The problem is it's the kids who are armed.

If it takes armed camps of shake-downs and metal detectors to stop the violence, then why the hell not?

I wouldn't care if they strip-searched my kid three times before lunch if it lessened the chances of him or her getting shot by fifth period.

"The task force will hold public hearings throughout the state this month and compile a preliminary report," said the papers.

Public hearings and preliminary reports. Horse manure. Parents and school officials have to get mad and mean and dare the punks to challenge them. O.P. Evans would have called up the National Guard.

At one local high school where a policeman carries a gun in the hallways, a student said of the cop's presence: "It sucks."

Not nearly as much, young fellow, as being dead.

Powell satisfied with his career

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Gen. Colin Powell says he can walk away from his high-powered Pentagon job without regrets but feels a responsibility to return to public life to help America's minority youth.

"I feel, just as an American citizen, and because of the position I have reached, I think there will be an obligation on me to do something in public life," Powell said Thursday during a 45-minute interview. "So while I am going out to acquire something of a private life again and spend more time with my family and get off stage for a while, I think in due course I would like to be seen as serving the nation in some way."

Powell, the first black chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, retires Sept. 30 after 35 years in uniform. Born in the Harlem section of New York City and raised in the South Bronx by parents who immigrated from Jamaica, Powell attended City College of New York, rose through Army ranks and forged an extraordinary career as a key member of Washington's decision-making circles.

But the 56-year-old Powell said that after taking some time to write his memoirs and enjoy private life with his family, he will be ready to re-enter the public arena.

While such a move "does not suggest politics to me right now," Powell added that he won't rule out any options for his future.

"It suggests I should find ways to use the experience I have... I feel an obligation to help young people," he said.

Powell became familiar to America during televised briefings on the Panama invasion and the Persian

Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Gen. Colin Powell poses in his Pentagon office Thursday in Washington. The nation's first black chairman of the Joint Chiefs retires Sept. 30 after 35 years in uniform. Powell says he can walk away from his high-powered Pentagon job without regrets, but feels a responsibility to return to public life to help America's minority youth.

Gulf War and his stock as a potential political candidate is high.

The four-star general says he has no regrets about leaving his role as the nation's top military officer "because I've tried everything I've wanted to get done... I would have regretted it if there was something I should have made a run at, but didn't."

Powell said even though he wasn't successful in everything he tried to do "I learned the lesson over the years, do as much as you can in the time you have available, with the energy you have available and then you move on and let others come behind you and they will build on your good ideas."

"I always walk out. I never look back," he added.

Powell said he intends to tell his designated successor as JCS chairman, Army Gen. John Shalikashvili, to "follow his instincts," get a good staff, have a good time and not worry about how Powell did the job.

Pres. Clinton elaborate on what kind of work he might take up, he said. "I don't know yet. I'm getting off the stage for a while and then I'll figure it out."

Powell graduated from CUNY with a geology degree and an ROTC Army commission. He was wounded twice in Vietnam.

He rose quickly in the military, gaining the attention of many in Washington. President Reagan appointed Powell his national security adviser in 1987.

Clinton restoring contact with PLO

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton is preparing to resume U.S. contacts with the PLO so he can host an elaborate White House signing ceremony Monday making peace between Israel and its Palestinian neighbors.

Clinton planned to announce the resumption of the U.S. dialogue with the Palestine Liberation Organization after meeting with congressional leaders today. Several leading members of Congress, traditionally a bastion of anti-PLO sentiment, have told the administration they will not object to renewed ties with the organization now that Israel has recognized the group.

"President Clinton is doing the right thing," said Sen. Patrick Leahy, a Vermont Democrat who chairs the panel that doles out foreign aid.

President Bush broke off an 18-month U.S. dialogue with the PLO in June 1990 after a faction of the organization launched an aborted terrorist raid on an Israeli beach.

White House aides said that since contact was stopped by a presidential order, all Clinton has to do is issue a statement announcing a resumption of the dialogue now that the PLO has renounced terrorism and recognized Israel's right to exist.

PLO leader Yasser Arafat signed a mutual recognition agreement with Israel on Thursday, and Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin signed it today.

"This is a moment where we are looking forward with hope, rather than backward in anger and hostility," PLO spokeswoman Hanan Ashrawi said here today. "The Israelis have realized they cannot brush aside our national identity, and we have realized that we cannot make Israel disappear off the map," Ashrawi said on ABC.

Resuming contacts with the PLO is a mechanism that will clear the way for the White House to invite a senior PLO representative to the South Lawn signing ceremony Monday morning.

Health plan could require drug discounts for federal programs

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton's blueprint for health reform aims to restrain soaring medical costs by limiting premium increases and applying heavy pressure on doctors, hospitals and drug makers to hold down their fee increases.

It also would demand that the pharmaceutical industry provide rebates to Medicare for prescription drugs sold to the nation's elderly, as is now the case with drug sales to Medicaid for the poor.

The White House had been holding the 240-page draft document under tight wraps but began circulating copies on Capitol Hill on Thursday after Hillary Rodham Clinton met separately with Democratic and Republican leaders.

The Associated Press obtained a copy Thursday night.

The document shows health spending actually would rise faster for the next four years under Clinton's plan, before savings kick in.

It also indicates the administration will try to rein in private sector health spending even more than Medicare and Medicaid.

Mrs. Clinton, who led the effort to produce the still unfinished plan, was addressing a seminar of state legislators today on the need for reform.

The president's goal is to achieve universal coverage by 1998 and dramatically lower medical inflation by restructuring the entire U.S. health system, outlawing many common insurance industry practices and forcing every employer to pay a large share of workers' premiums.

Clinton will formally unveil his American Health Security Plan in a nighttime address to Congress on Sept. 22, with congressional hearings already slated to begin Sept. 28.

The blueprint discloses that the centerpiece of the cost-control effort would be a new National Health Board that would propose targets on how much health insurance premiums could increase each year.

The board would pressure companies to back down if they set new drug prices too high.

Employers would split premiums costs with employees 80-20. Most companies would have to spend no more than 7.9 percent of payroll, and some small firms with low-wage workers would pay as little as 3.5 percent.

The plan, with its call for a fundamental reordering of the nation's $909 billion health care system, is expected to generate intense controversy, with no final action in Congress until well into 1994.

While disclaiming any intention of clamping rigid price controls on the health care industry, the White House document says Clinton will seek to slow the increase in private spending to 3.5 percent by the year 2000.

Software piracy is rampant in Mexico

The Associated Press

MEXICO CITY — Juan Perez does a brisk business copying computer games, spreadsheets and word-processing programs, which he sells at bargain prices from a faded yellow cubbyhole in a cinderblock building.

"What software do you want? What software, please?" Perez asks as he hawks illegally copied diskettes — for cash only.

Perez is among thousands of software pirates cashing in as Mexican companies rush to computerize ahead of free trade with the United States and Canada. Although the North American Free Trade Agreement still faces a tough battle in the U.S. Congress, the proposed pact is already producing tangible effects, expanding commerce and spurring the modernization of Mexico's economy.

Computer schools and bulletin boards are sprouting everywhere, and laptop computers are sold through newspapers. You can even buy software on the supermarket checkout line.

Sales of licensed software nearly doubled from $115 million in 1989 to $225 million last year and could approach $500 million by 1995, according to Mexico's National Association of the Computer Programming Industry.

But U.S. software manufacturers, led by Microsoft Corp., want to persuade a country long accustomed to corruption to accept the idea that bootlegging software is wrong — and a crime.

In 1991, Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari enacted tough laws protecting copyrights for software, videos and other intellectual property, but few seemed to notice.

The Salinas government is seeking to bring Mexico in line with international standards in preparation for the trade agreement, which is to take effect Jan. 1.

Previous laws protecting intellectual property were loosely written and poorly enforced. Videotapes, books and music cassettes have long been freely copied and sold on the street and in market stalls.

Software has now joined the fray. According to H. Philip Welt, director-general of Microsoft of Mexico, for every legally purchased software program, nine others are copied or illegally traded — often by the country's largest banks, businesses and industries.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, watched by Norwegian Foreign Minister Johan Jorgan Holst (left) and his Israeli counterpart, Shimon Peres (right), signs a letter to "Chairman Arafat" that acknowledged the PLO as the representative of the Palestinian people in Rabin's Jerusalem office Friday morning. PLO leader Yasser Arafat had earlier signed a document recognizing Israel's right to exist in peace and renounced violence.

Rabin signs document; Israel recognizing PLO

The Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Israeli and PLO leaders made peace today, but angry militants on both sides swore the plan would never get off the ground.

As Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin signed a letter recognizing the PLO as the representative of the Palestinian people, hundreds of Israelis demonstrated outside the prime ministry, which was surrounded by 1,000 police.

"God will punish this insult!" opposition legislator Hanan Porath shouted through a megaphone. He told the protesters Rabin had committed blasphemy, citing God's pledge that the Land of Israel belonged to the Jews.

Hours earlier in Tunis, Tunisia, PLO chairman Yasser Arafat announced with a broad smile that he had signed a document in which the PLO recognizes Israel's right to exist in peace and security and renounces violence.

In east Jerusalem, dozens of Palestinians celebrated by raising a 15-foot red, white, and green Palestinian flag on an office building and setting off fireworks. Until now, the flag has been illegal.

But Abdel-Aziz Rantisi, a spokesman for the militant Muslim group Hamas, vowed to continue attacks against Israeli targets as long as Israeli soldiers occupied Palestinian land.

"I say to the PLO that history will not forgive them and also tell them that the struggle will not stop," Rantisi said in a telephone interview from south Lebanon. Rantisi was among 400 Muslim militants deported by Israel last year. About 180 were allowed back Thursday.

There were fears of a Palestinian civil war over the agreement, but Rantisi said Muslim militants would avoid fighting PLO supporters.

The mutual recognition, worked out in months of secret meetings in Norway and a final burst of round-the-clock bargaining, is the biggest breakthrough in Mideast diplomacy since the 1979 peace treaty with Egypt.

It cleared the way for a signing in Washington on Monday of a separate agreement giving Palestinians a measure of self-rule in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank city of Jericho, occupied by Israel since the 1967 Middle East war.

President Clinton called the recognition agreement "a very brave and courageous thing." He is set to announce today resumption of U.S. talks with the PLO. Washington eventually could give it full diplomatic recognition.

The PLO's Executive Committee was to vote today on the autonomy pact.

Israelis and Arabs have been at each others' throats long before the PLO was created 29 years ago. The first war broke out soon after Israel became an independent state in 1948.

"The Israelis have realized they cannot brush aside our national identity or negate us, and we have realized that we cannot make Israel disappear off the map," said Hanan Ashrawi, spokeswoman for the Palestinian delegation to the Middle East peace talks.

"We hope it will be binding, but there will be opposition. Nobody can wave a magic wand and say 'that's it,'" Ashrawi said in Washington.

After signing the letter "Y. Rabin," the Israeli prime minister said he hoped the agreement "will bring about an end to 100 years of bloodshed and misery between the Palestinian people and Israel."

U.N. seeks to repair lines, but Zuc shelling resumed

The Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Hundreds of thousands of Sarajevo spent a second day without electricity and water today. Engineers trying to repair power lines reportedly came under fire.

The only power line that feeds Sarajevo crosses a frontline on Mount Zuc northwest of the capital's center. It was damaged Wednesday night in fighting between Serb and government forces, leaving the city of 380,000 people dark and without the power to pump water.

A U.N. repair crew set out this morning to repair the line, said Cmdr. Idesbald van Biesebroeck, spokesman for the United Nations peacekeeping forces in Sarajevo. The Bosnian army said later that Zuc had come under renewed Serb mortar fire and the repair team had withdrawn, but there was no immediate U.N. confirmation.

U.N. maintenance crews have repeatedly been frustrated in efforts to repair utility lines to besieged Sarajevo, often finding their work for naught as lines are destroyed anew in fighting or targeted themselves.

Sarajevo's main hospital and central bakery can operate with diesel-powered generators, but fuel supplies for them are running low.

U.S. commanders defending helicopter attack on Somalis

The Associated Press

MOGADISHU, Somalia — The American officer who led a helicopter assault on Somali militiamen after they ambushed a U.N. convoy said today he knew there were women among the fighters when his gunships opened fire.

Supporters of fugitive warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid said at least 125 people, including women and children, were killed by machine gun and 20mm cannon fire from the U.S. helicopters Thursday.

Aidid's fighters were blamed for the ambush. One Pakistani was killed and two Americans and two other Pakistanis were wounded.

Col. Mike Dallas, commander of the U.S. Quick Reaction Force, said he could not provide an estimate of Somali casualties because "the situation was very fluid, very violent, very difficult."

Dallas told reporters he flew over the scene in a Blackhawk helicopter shortly after the ambush began and saw about 200 Somalis firing on the U.N. convoy.

He said they were hidden behind a 600-foot stretch of wall and in nearby buildings and had the convoy pinned down with machine guns, grenades, recoilless rifles and small arms.

"I did see women with that group of people engaging those forces," Dallas said. "I do not know how many. I did not see children. I saw women."

The battle was one of the most severe in the nearly nine-month international military mission in Somalia and is sure to raise the hostility of many Somalis toward the foreign troops.

The Somali casualty toll could not be independently confirmed, but area residents told reporters that bodies littered the streets after the fierce fighting, which lasted more than an hour.

Maj. David Stockwell, spokesman for the U.N. military command, today called the ambush by Aidid's forces "deliberate, large scale and brutal." He earlier said some women and children were armed with hand grenades and small arms.

"In an ambush, there are no sidelines, no bleacher seats," he said.

"Everyone on the ground at that point was a combatant as far as we were concerned."

Jacqueline Bigar - Horoscope

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 1993

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You hear surprising news from a partner. The unexpected occurs with those you put on a pedestal. Be careful as tempers can flare today and you could be sorry about what you say. Discussions ultimately reveal that a partner is really there for you. Be less touchy. Tonight: Play ostrich.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Sensitivities are very high today, and a change in plans upsets you. Allow the good vibes of a current situation come through. High stress from the week needs to be worked out through physical activity. Listen to the suggestion of an associate who means well. Tonight: Go for the fun and the games.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Just as you thought everything was settling in, you hear news that has you shaking your head. Partners are acting unpredictably. Be aware that a loved one might sound sharp-tongued but means well. Be more nurturing. Tonight: Could be expensive.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): It will take all the smiling and magnetism possible to overcome another's bad humor today. It may not show today, but you are important to a family member who is on the warpath. Use your creative spirit and sense of humor to heal wounds. Tonight: You call the shots.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Stress has been taking its toll on you, and today you can see the effects. Communications turn sour and people tend to be caustic. Come from a loving space and focus on what you want. Say little, listen a lot. Tonight: Don't be found.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Today's focus is on friendship and unexpected changes. Jealousy could surround you and money matters seem out of sync. Take the conservative path and you will be happier in the long run. Tonight: Have loving talks with friends.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Tension between your personal and business life peaks today, leaving you in a pressure cooker. You react by being caustic and sarcastic. Look to the long term and be more diplomatic. Tonight: Discuss a security matter with someone you respect.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your instinct to run away is to be right on. With luck, you'll take off before something unexpected wrecks havoc. Work at reducing your stress level and realize that worrying won't change a current problem. Tonight: Return to being your happy-go-lucky self.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Financial plans seem to be falling apart. Remain confident in the face of what seems like bad news. Friends are putting undue pressure on you. Concentrate on determining exactly what you want. Tonight: You're happiest one-to-one with a loved one.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The result of some recent flaky decisions becomes apparent. Ignore the sarcasm of someone who is being overly sensitive. Have a long-overdue conversation and reclaim your power. Once you figure out what's going on, zero in on your priorities. Tonight: Hang with friends and have a good time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You feel so tired that problems seem more difficult than they are. Take off and do something for you. Feel free to change plans accordingly. Tonight: Be a force to be dealt with.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A partner suddenly becomes more talkative (thank goodness), allowing you to see things on a different level. The anger caused by a misrepresentation can be soothed over if you make a loving gesture. Tonight: Stoke the fires of love.

IF SEPTEMBER 11 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: This year's focus is on expanding your circle of friends. Be careful, however, with new as well as old acquaintances, as their behavior will be changeable. Loved ones, too, are rebellious. You won't be able to please everyone. Financial matters are active through fall. Guard against spending money before it comes in. Brainstorming will solve many problems this year. If in a relationship, this year will be hectic but rewarding. If single, new people pop in and out of your life. LIBRA has a lot to share with you.

Dear Abby - Letters...

His daughter has place in her heart

DEAR ABBY: This is in reply to the woman who signed herself "Jealous Valentine," who wrote to complain that her boyfriend gave his 6-year-old daughter roses for Valentine's Day. Your advice not to compete with his daughter struck a chord with me, so I am writing to advise the boyfriend, to RUN, not walk, away from this selfish, insecure girlfriend as fast as possible. No caring father wants to choose between his child and his "love interest," and a woman who truly loves him will care for his daughter because the little girl is a part of him.

I, too, had a daughter (Lisa) from a previous marriage when I met my present wife. After a four-year courtship, including many "take-Lisa-with-us" dates, we married. My wife, far from excluding my daughter from the "adults only" wedding, insisted she be part of the wedding party — and when it was time to exchange rings, she had given the priest a little ring to bless for Lisa. She told me her promise to love and cherish was for both of us that day.

In the 10 years we've been married, my wife has always considered my daughter's welfare first, even to passing up a lucrative job offer so Lisa wouldn't have to change schools. Because my daughter comes first with my wife, my wife comes first with me, and Lisa (18 years old now) has grown into a lovely, caring lady, just like her stepmother.

So, Dear Abby, tell Jealous Valentine's boyfriend to keep looking, and just sign me ... MARRIED AN ANGEL IN CONNECTICUT

DEAR MARRIED: I couldn't have said it more convincingly than you just have. Your wife is a truly beautiful woman.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the lady who

BSISD tax hike not really an increase

By GARY SHANKS
Staff Writer

It is a tax increase, but it is not a tax increase.

The Big Spring Independent School District's Board of Trustees is advertising a tax increase of 90.7 cents per $100 property valuation.

Property owners, however, will pay the same rate as last year. "They paid $1.42 last year and they'll pay $1.42 this year," said BSISD Superintendent W.A. McQueary during a Thursday meeting of the board.

The paper increase stems from the school district's absorption of the County Education District (CED). Because of truth in taxation laws, the school board must post the increase in its tax rate, since the CED tax rate was originally designed as that of a separate taxing entity.

Although there will be no actual tax increase to the local property owner, the BSISD tax rate will technically jump from 50.5 cents per $100 property valuation to 142.2 cents per $100, while the CED tax rate will be reduced from 90.7 cents to 0.0 cents.

"The bottom line is, we paid $1.42 last year and $1.42 this year," said Assistant Superintendent Ron Plumlee.

The board voted unanimously to set a public hearing on the proposed increase, just as other school boards across the state are in the process of doing, McQueary explained.

The public hearing will be at noon Thursday, Sept. 30, in the Goliad

Middle School Library.

The hearings are mandated by state law, as are local advertisements proclaiming the move. The Texas Legislature passed laws governing CED tax-rate absorptions, but did not adapt the truth in taxation laws governing the process.

Taxes from the new rate will be collected during the current 1993-94 school year. The overall tax rate puts the school district well short of the $1.50 per $100 tax-rate limit. Above this amount, a referendum must be established and voter approval given for the tax increase, Plumlee explained.

Keeping the overall tax rate the same, while faced with property devaluations in the area, led to the board's adoption of a deficit budget this year.

The new tax rate will be officially set on Oct. 14.

A fire at Shroyer Motor Company service department Thursday resulted in $25,000 in smoke damage and no injuries. It was caused by a vehicle gasoline tank ignited by a broken bulb.

A fire which occurred at Shroyer Motor Company Thursday, which resulted from a gas tank being ignited by a broken light bulb, was ruled accidental Thursday by authorities.

According to Fire Marshal Burr Lea Settles, the fire occurred at approximately 3:30 p.m. in the service center of the business, located at 3rd and Goliad Street.

"This particular type of fire rarely happens, mainly because what the mechanic was doing," Settles said of the incident in which no one was injured. "It was an accident."

Smoke damage to the business, two trucks, two cars and a van was estimated at $25,000.

As many as seven firefighters were at the scene of the incident which took only minutes to control.

Big Spring police directed traffic as smoke billowed from the service center garage entrance.

An unidentified mechanic was reportedly "dropping" (a process of detaching) a vehicle fuel tank when the fire started.

He attempted to set the van's tank on a stand, in which a hanging light was suspended.

The tank, stand and light fell to the service center floor and the tank ignited when the light bulb broke.

Collider opponents optimistic

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Super collider foes sought Thursday to keep their criticism of the battered program in the spotlight as Senate appropriators prepared to decide next year's funding for the giant atom smasher.

Two members of the Senate appropriations subcommittee that will earmark collider funds next week appeared at a Capitol Hill news conference organized by collider opponents.

Sens. Jim Sasser and Dennis DeConcini, who previously have cast votes against the massive science project under construction south of Dallas, said they were optimistic that the Senate would kill the collider.

"We feel very good about where we are now," said Sasser. D-Tenn., who chairs the Senate Budget Committee. "We are gaining votes every day rather than losing votes."

New FUMC youth minister ready for challenges

Struve says relationship to God brings new freedom

By DEBBIE LINCECUM Features Editor

Kim Struve knows God is cool. "I don't think being a Christian is dull or boring at all," said Struve, 26, the new youth minister at First United Methodist Church. The Lubbock native was unpacking her boxes this week, preparing to fill a position left vacant more than a year.

In that time, youth ministry had been the work of dedicated parents and church members. The challenge of picking up where they left off is exciting to Struve. "My primary job is going to be introducing young people to Christ, helping them to see that He wants to have a relationship with them," she said. "For them, God is not tangible. You can't 'see' him.

"But they see you living your life with that relationship. That's the best example."

But Struve said she won't be working alone. Church members will assist, especially the FUMC ministry team assigned to youth.

"It's easy to let the basics like that slip away," Struve said. "But I know nothing I do will really change these kids. It's going to be God's work."

Struve grew up in a Christian home, where church was part of life. After struggling with the normal teen-age and young adult issues, she graduated from Texas Tech with a degree in interior design.

'My primary job is going to be introducing young people to Christ, helping them to see that He wants to have a relationship with them.'

Kim Struve, FUMC youth minister

"I was going to work in the design world and be a Christian - I knew that was part of it - but I hadn't planned on the ministry," she recalled. "I thought about law school (or) architecture."

A visit to a Kentucky seminary proved to her that ministry was the way she should go. The "youth" aspect of her job didn't come into her plans until even later.

"Having a relationship with God, no matter what your age, helps you to know you don't have to be somebody for other people," Struve said. "You know that you are a child of God and all you have to be is who he created you to be."

If young people realized that, the minister said, it might make battling peer pressure and rebellion easier. "There's a freedom in that," Struve said. "It's so deeper than what is on the outside."

Kim Struve, the new youth minister at First United Methodist Church, zigged and zagged a bit before realizing that the ministry was to be her calling. Now the 26-year-old says she'll meet young people in their world with the message that being a Christian is not boring or dull - it's cool!

Service & Worship

Although the youth program has remained strong without a full-time minister, Struve said she hopes to increase attendance for some levels. Eventually, she hopes to establish a college program.

One thing is certain, youth meetings will be aimed at inspiring, not just entertaining. "When I was growing up, the meetings were mainly social gatherings, and I think I missed out on being introduced to Christianity through it," Struve said. Among her plans are retreats, Bible study, camps and trips.

Senior center: Struggling to meet needs

By PATRICK DRISCOLL Staff Writer

The Spring City Senior Citizens Center is more than many realize, its director said, and more people are invited to come out and see.

More funds, always a problem, are also sought to keep it nice. Within the past year, the center was painted inside and outside, carpeted and new kitchen equipment was installed.

Many people associate the center, 1901 Simler Ave. in the industrial park, as a place to get a balanced nutritional meal - which it is, said director Bobbie Leonard. But as a social center for those 55 or over, it's much more.

"There's a lot of people that don't realize what a nice place we have. It's one of the nicest buildings in Big Spring," Leonard said. "Our seniors deserve the nicest facility we can give them."

"We'd always like for the people in town who haven't seen us to come out."

When doors open at 8 a.m. Monday through Friday, more than 100 people begin filing in to play dominoes, visit or watch television. Dominoes are the most popular activity, usually played until a 4 p.m. closing time. Several special activities are scheduled throughout the week.

Bingo is played Tuesday and Thursday after a noon lunch. Dances are Friday and Saturday from 8 p.m. to 11 p.m. with live country and western music. Ceramic classes are held Tuesday from 9:30 a.m. to 11

Growing population

The local senior citizen population has been steadily growing, doubling since 1960, according to the U.S. Census.

•There were 2,332 county residents 65 or older in 1960, 5.8 percent of a total population of 40,139.

•In 1990, there were 4,687 counted, 14.5 percent of a total 32,343.

a.m. Art classes are held Thursday from 9:30 a.m. to 11 a.m.

A style show will be held at the end of this month.

Keeping things nice at the center takes money, Leonard said. The fiscal year budget for 1993 needs $32,000 in donations to meet expenditures of $225,472. Fund raisers are held frequently and donations are sought each year from city and county officials. Other funding comes from the Permian Basin Area Agency on Aging and a $2 fee seniors voluntarily pay for each of some $45,000 in meals served each year.

"It's hard on a low budget. We do the best we can," Leonard said.

A 1979 van for meal deliveries recently quit running and isn't worth repairing and a 1981 van that has 133,000 miles needs to be replaced, local citizen Joyce Crooker told the Big Spring City Council this summer.

"It's on its last leg," Crooker said. "That's an item that we're going to have to have this year."

Pets for grandparents Special offered Sunday

Herald Staff Report

For a senior citizen, a pet can be an important friend.

What better time to honor that relationship than Sunday, recognized as Grandparents Day throughout the country. On that day, grandparents will be honored for their special place in society - and the love and friendship they give.

The Big Spring Humane Society will honor grandparents by giving free adoption of selected pets for those 55 and over Sunday from 3-5 p.m.

"A pet can be a very important and non-threatening friend for the disabled and older people," said Humane Society volunteer Margaret Lloyd. For years she has worked in pet therapy, using dogs and cats to reach people that may otherwise be lost in the everyday world.

"A pet can really brighten someone's life," Lloyd said. Pets given to grandparents are chosen for their gentle personalities, said fellow volunteer Julie Frey.

Howard County Commissioners provide maintenance for the vehicles, plus liability and building insurance, bookkeeping and - last year and this year - $8,865 in donated cash. That's a total estimated value of $10,000.

The city provides the building for $1 rent a year but does not maintain it. After declining to fund $18,000 requested last year, the council in January agreed to provide two workers for two weeks to do plumbing, wiring and painting, but it reportedly didn't happen.

Workers did come out several times to give advice, Leonard said. "Well, they told us what we need to do, mostly, and we had it done."

Meanwhile, upcoming fundraisers include a cake walk and supper in October and an RSVP banquet in November. At the Howard County Fair, the center is raffling off a VCR.

Lessons from Jesus' sack lunch

By DAVID ROBERTS Garden City First Baptist

"You want us to do what?" Have you ever heard that asked in your church? "Do you know how much that will cost?" is usually the next question. "There is no way we can pull that off," is a popular reply.

"It's not fair," many in the church will say, "it's not our fault those people are in that condition."

"That's not what we came for" comes the cry from the back of the room.

Remember when Jesus was teaching thousands of people in the middle of nowhere. "Send them off to the local markets so they can get some dinner," suggested one of the disciples. After all, the day was about over and 5,000 hungry families could start a riot. (Remember, some of them did think of Jesus as a political messiah.) However, instead of dismissing the crowd as suggested, Jesus made a rather remarkable request of the disciples. "You feed them."

Can't you just hear some of the replies?

"You want us to do what? Do you realize how many people are out there?" One of the disciples got out his calculator and began figuring the cost. "That would take eight months' salary to feed all those people."

Another may have reminded Jesus that originally this trip across the lake was just for the disciples. "This was to be a time of rest for just you and us. It's not our fault all of these people showed up." "Yea," someone else added, "this was to be a retreat, not a mission project." Perhaps another disciple com-

Inspiration

"Is this why we are here?" "Can we really tackle a project of this magnitude?" "Are we really expected to take care of these people who could have taken care of the problem themselves?"

Oh the things that Jesus can do with our little sack lunches.

Do you remember how the story ends? Of course, everyone had plenty to eat, with even some left over. When it says that the disciples picked up 12 basketfuls, the word is actually referring to small bags known as "beggar's sacks." I like to think that Jesus intended for each disciple to have his own sack of leftovers to eat the next day.

Can you imagine the next day at lunch time? I am sure that with each bite of the day-old bread, the disciples were forced to think about their lack of faith the previous day. What a lesson that lunch of leftovers must have provided.

Oh the things that Jesus can do with our little sack lunches. Inspiration, appearing Fridays, is written by local ministers.

The first luncheon of the 1993-94 year was held at the Community Center Sept. 7. With 30 members and guests registering for the noon luncheon. Special guests for the day were newly appointed preacher for the Church of Christ, Russell Mullen and his wife, Deborah, as well as Luther's retired post-mistress, Velma Lloyd and Louise Stanley.

Deputy Sheriff Woody Howell explained some of his duties in the Coahoma Community and told of some of the police activities taking place in the area that local people need to be aware of.

After reviewing the calendar for the year, 90-year-old Velma Lloyd recited from memory, several poems that she has learned during the years she served as Post-Mistress at Luther.

Some of the programs planned for the coming months are J.C. Bilbro and wife, musicians; Cleo Wolf, singer, Occupational Therapist at Scenic Mountain Medical Center; a Beef Program; a Chili and Stew meal open to the public and Christmas gift exchange.

The group is open to anyone over the age of 50 who is a resident of Coahoma or Sand Springs or who is connected to the Coahoma Independent School District.

Friday Football Forecast

Compiled by Herald Sports Staff

LUBBOCK ESTACADO (0-1) at BIG SPRING (1-0)

Estacado, a 1992 state semifinalist, has plenty of firepower returning. Tation Scott and Willie Turner will be tough enough to stop in the backfield, disregarding the fact that the Matadors have a strong passing game.

Big Spring's defense has been superb, and Todd Parrish returns to the secondary tonight. The offense worked well again. Levelland, and that was without starting quarterback Wes Hughes, who is back in uniform. Estacado's players are bigger, and maybe faster, but the Steers have the home crowd and a history of playing well against the Matadors.

BIG SPRING 17, ESTACADO 14

ROTAN (0-1) at COAHOMA (0-1)

Two teams looking to get off the schneid meet Friday night in Coahoma. The Bulldogs are coming off a 30-0 whitewash against Greenwood, while the Rotan Yellowhammers dropped a 31-22 decision to Goldthwaite.

Rotan's offense is built on speed, and that's something the Bulldogs were susceptible to last week. The key, however, will be how well the Coahoma offense performs against the 'Hammers' 4-3 defense.

The Bulldogs' attack will improve, but is still a few weeks away. ROTAN 28, COAHOMA 21

RANKIN (1-0) at FORSAN (1-0)

We admit it. We picked against Forsan last week and got burned. That lesson learned, we'll brace ourselves and pick against Forsan again.

Rankin is ranked No. 2 in the state 1A poll and is coming off a 47-0 win against Class 2A Iraan. The Red Devils have 20 players back from last year's 10-2 area finalist team.

The Buffaloes are in over their heads, but after Forsan's thrashing of Garden City last week, it looks like tonight could be the only time we can say that this season.

RANKIN 34, FORSAN 14

STANTON (1-0) at COLORADO CITY (1-0)

This looks like it could be a doozy. Both teams are coming off impressive openers - Stanton KO'd O'Donnell 47-0, while C-City blanked Hawley 32-0.

Aside from having obviously impressive defenses, both teams also feature potent running attacks. The busiest man tonight may be the scorekeeper.

This one is a toss-up, so in that case we'll go with the home-field advantage.

COLORADO CITY 34, STANTON 31

FORT STOCKTON (0-1) at GREENWOOD (1-0)

The Greenwood Rangers will make it 2-0 tonight with a win over 4A door-mat Fort Stockton.

Fort Stockton deserves plenty of pity. The Panthers have just five players back from last season's 3-7 team, and 3A Denver City blasted them 24-0 last week.

Greenwood cruised past Coahoma last week. Expect Indavong Phonasa to have another strong game.

GREENWOOD 37, FORT STOCKTON 7

GARDEN CITY (0-1) at OZONA (0-1)

Leonard Nimoy's "In Search of ..." series will be in Ozona tonight as the Garden City Bearkats and Ozona Lions look for both their first win of the season and some offensive punch.

Both teams got clubbed in their debuts last week - the Bearkats were shocked by Forsan, while Ozona was cannon fodder for Class 3A powerhouse Reagan County.

Someday, somewhere, the 'Kats will get it going - but not this week.

OZONA 14, GARDEN CITY 12

SANDS (1-0) at LORAINE (0-1)

The Mustangs could have their hands full in this Saturday six-man game. Loraime, which lost 34-31 to District 10 favorite Moran, is favored by some to win District 6. The Bulldogs have 10 players back from last season's 7-3 team.

Sands handled Hermligh easily last week, but Loraime is going to be a tougher test - in enemy territory, no less.

LORAINE 52, SANDS 39

GRADY (1-0) at BORDEN COUNTY (0-1)

The area six-man game of the week will be in Gail tonight, when the Borden Coyotes hold their home opener against the Grady Wildcats.

Grady opened its season with a hard-fought 18-0 win over Southland, while Borden was on the short end of a 52-20 score in its debut against New Home.

The Coyotes' main weakness right now is inexperience, while Grady has speed and experience, if not a lot of depth. It will take a few more games for Borden to get the bugs out of the system.

GRADY 24, BORDEN 22

KLONDIKE (1-0) at NEW HOME (1-0)

Another game that promises to be a good one will be at New Home tonight, when the Leopards host the Klondike Cougars.

The Cougars like to vary their offensive attack, mixing the passing of Tanner Etheredge with the running of Mike Lee. In contrast, there's no secret to New Home's attack - Run, run, run, run, run, run, run, run, run, run.

This will be close, but let's give the edge to the playoff-tested Cougars.

KLONDIKE 54, NEW HOME 42

Cedric Pioline raises his fist after defeating Andrei Medvedev in their U.S. Open quarterfinal Thursday. Pioline, the man who beat top-seeded Jim Courier, won 6-3, 6-1, 3-6, 6-2.

Cinderellas meet in Open's men's semis

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Another day, another upset.

Cedric Pioline became the first Frenchman in 61 years to reach the semifinals of the U.S. Open on Thursday night, following up his triumph over top-ranked Jim Courier by knocking out No. 8 Andrei Medvedev.

Pioline, who has never won a professional tournament and came in seeded No. 15, took advantage of Medvedev's repeated errors in the first two sets and double-faults on crucial points to win 6-3, 6-1, 3-6, 6-2. Pioline settled down in the fourth set, pounding approach shots into the corners, stretching Medvedev and putting away volleys.

Pioline, seeking to become the first French U.S. champion since Henri Cochet won the Nationals in 1928, next faces Wally Masur.

In the pampered world of tennis, Masur is the workingman's hero. He grinds out matches, trains as if he's going out for Australian Rules Football. He grunts, struggles, never quits. Masur, 30 years old and in the semifinals of a Grand Slam event for only the second time in 42 tries gave all he had in his fourth-round upset of Boris Becker.

Masur didn't so much play his way into the semis as he clawed his way in. He trailed 5-0 in the fifth set against fellow Aussie Jamie Morgan in the fourth round, then simply refused to lose, grabbing seven straight games.

Masur, who hadn't gotten past the third round at the U.S. Open in nine previous appearances, became the first Australian in the Open semis since Darren Cahill in 1988. The only other Grand Slam semifinal Masur reached was at home in the Australian Open in 1987.

Masur also became the first unseeded man to reach the men's semis in New York since Connors two years ago, and only the 26th man to do it since seedings began in the U.S. Nationals in 1927. Only one other man, Gene Scott in 1967, got as far as the semis without having the beat a seeded player on the way.

"I am happy to have made the semis, but I don't want to stop there," Masur said.

Disc golf returns

By STEVE REAGAN Sportswriter

Weekend golfers are nothing new to Big Spring. Weekend disc golfers, however, are another story.

The DiscOver Big Spring Disc Golf tournament will be held at Birdwell Park Saturday. For the uninitiated, disc golf is played much the same as regular golf, except that golfers throw Frisbee-like discs instead of hitting golf balls, and baskets are substituted for holes.

The tournament begins at 10 a.m. and will consist of five divisions: Open (professional), amateur, junior (16-under), women's, and novice.

The open division will have a cash prize for the winners. The tournament is open to everyone and registration will be accepted up until tournament time.

This is third time Big Spring has been the site for a disc golf tournament. Two were held in 1991, said event organizer Greg Brooks.

"This will be third time we've had a tournament at Birdwell," Brooks said. "We're starting to get a real course in there with the (hole) baskets. It's starting to come along."

"We're not expecting a huge turnout," he added. "If we have 30 total, we'll be feeling really good about ourselves."

Getting the Birdwell Park layout up to disc golf standards has been a goal of Brooks and his fellow disc aficionados for the past few years. The major stumbling block has been purchasing the hole baskets, which cost several hundred dollars each.

Four have been permanently installed at Birdwell Park and five more are on loan from a disc golf group in Abilene, Brooks said.

Entry fees are $10 for novices and juniors, and $15 for other divisions. Non-cash prizes will be sterling silver jewelry discs, Brooks said. For more information, contact Brooks at 267-1465.

Lowly A's sweep Jays, AL East now a logjam

By The Associated Press

TORONTO — A first-place team, even one merely tied for the top spot, usually doesn't have to look hard for positives. The Toronto Blue Jays are.

They lost their season-high sixth straight game Thursday night when Oakland won 7-4 for its first road series sweep of the season. The Blue Jays are tied for first with the New York Yankees, and Baltimore is just one-half game back in third. New York and Baltimore were idle Thursday.

"As poorly as we've played lately, we're still tied for first place," Toronto's John Olerud said. "I guess if we're trying to find something positive, it's the fact that the Yankees haven't played very well either."

The Yankees were just swept in a three-game series at Texas, and the Orioles have won nine of 10.

In the only other AL games on Thursday night, California beat Detroit 6-0 and Minnesota needed 12 innings to beat Cleveland 5-3.

Pat Borders drove in three runs for the Blue Jays, following Olerud's run-scoring double in the fourth with an RBI single, and pulling the Blue Jays even at 4-4 with a two-run single off Edwin Nunez in the sixth.

The game featured the first meeting between Steve Karsay and Rickey Henderson, the key players in the trade between the clubs last month.

Karsay came out on top, getting Henderson to line out softly in his first at-bat, then inducing two routine groundouts in Henderson's next two at-bats.

The Blue Jays have had two teams meetings in the last three days, but nothing seems to be working right now.

"We haven't played and pitched well lately. The only thing I can say is we're still in first place," manager

Cito Gaston said. But they're not alone.

Angels 6
Tigers 0
Joe Magrane and two relievers combined on a six-hitter as the Angels avoided the sweep at Tiger Stadium.

Twins 5
Indians 3
They got within 10 innings of the marathon they played last week, wrapping this one up in a neat 12 innings. Brian Harper broke the tie with a sacrifice fly and Pedro Munoz added the insurance run with a single. The Twins got their first three runs in the seventh, and they were all unearned because of errors by third baseman Jim Thome and shortstop Felix Fermin.

Members of the Philadelphia Phillies and Chicago Cubs engage in a brawl after Philadelphia's Mariano Duncan and Chicago reliever Frank Castillo fought in the fourth inning in Philadelphia Thursday night.

Giants lead over Braves down to one

By The Associated Press

Each day San Francisco's lead in the NL West seems to get smaller. Now, the rest of the league is wondering what the Giants have been worrying about: Can anyone stop the Atlanta Braves?

The Braves, 7 1/2 games behind San Francisco on Aug. 22 and on the verge of falling out of the race, trimmed the deficit to one game Thursday night. Atlanta beat San Diego 1-0 in 10 innings, while the Giants lost to St. Louis 9-4.

"The Giants have held their own to this point and it's not over, but when you have the kind of pitching the Braves have and add Fred McGriff, that seemed to be the spark that they needed," St. Louis' Ozzie Smith said. "It's all falling into place for them. It's unfortunate for the Giants because they've had some injuries."

Ron Gant's 32nd home run gave Atlanta its 24th victory in 29 games. The Braves have been winning because of pitching, and won again that way with a combined one-hitter in San Diego.

In other games, Philadelphia defeated Chicago 10-8, Colorado beat Pittsburgh 10-7 in 12 innings and Los Angeles downed Florida 6-5 in 10 innings.

Kent Mercker, making a rare start, was pulled after six no-hit innings. Mark Wohlers gave up a check-swing single with two outs in the eighth to Luis Lopez — his first major league hit — and Greg McMichael (2-3) pitched the last two innings.

"No-hitters don't come very often, but the World Series comes even less often. I'd take a World Series ring instead of a no-hitter," Mercker said.

On Sept. 11, 1991, also against the Padres, Mercker teamed with Wohlers and Alejandro Pena to pitch the NL's only combined no-hitter.

The Atlanta trio was trying to pitch baseball's third no-hitter of the week. Jim Abbott did it for the New York Yankees on Saturday and Darryl Kile pitched one for Houston on Wednesday.

Gant helped preserve the no-hit bid with a leaping catch against the left field wall on a drive by Lopez in the sixth.

In the 10th, Gant matched his career high for home runs with a one-out shot against Trevor Hoffman (4-6).

Cardinals 9
Giants 4
St. Louis chased Jim Deshaies (1-1)

with three runs in the second inning, and Todd Zeile's grand slam highlighted a six-run sixth at Candlestick Park. The Giants have won only 11 of their last 23 games.

Phillies 10
Cubs 8
Lenny Dykstra homered twice and drove in a career-high five runs as the Phillies stopped a three-game losing streak on fight night in Philadelphia.

Chicago's six-game winning streak ended. The Cubs, who trailed 9-2 after three innings, got a two-run homer from Glenallen Hill in the ninth, then left runners at second and third.

Dodgers 6
Marlins 5
Los Angeles lost Orel Hershiser to an early injury, then won the game at Dodger Stadium in the 10th inning on Tom Goodwin's two-out single.

Hershiser was hit in the back of the right hand by a pair of line drives. He stayed in after being struck by Orestes Destrade's shot in the second inning, but came out after Benito Santiago's drive hit him in the same place.

Cooper frosh rally past Steers

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Big Spring's freshman football team ran into a strong Abilene Cooper squad on Thursday. Cooper beat the Steers 23-6 in Big Spring.

Toma McVae had a 4-yard touchdown run on the Steers' first possession of the game, but the 6-0 lead quickly disappeared.

"We're not the kind of team that can turn the ball over and expect to win, and we turned it over three times inside our own 20," said Big Spring freshman coach Gary Simmons. "We made a lot of mistakes. There's a lot of little things that we need to work on."

Cooper scored its first points on a safety when it blocked a punt out of the Big Spring end zone.

Simmons said Big Spring received strong play from its running backs - including McVae, Robert Valencia, Frankie Green and Jody Bennett.

Big Spring is 1-1 and hosts Lubbock High Thursday.

they play Lubbock High at Chapman Field. Game time is 7 p.m.

Coahoma Jayvees blow out Rotan
ROTAN - The Coahoma junior varsity Bulldogs exploded Thursday, blistering their counterparts from Rotan 54-0 Thursday night.

Tailback Chris Arguello did the most damage for Coahoma, scoring on runs of six, 22 and 60 yards Thursday. Quarterback Adam Tindol passed for one score and added another with a 21-yard run.

Tindol's two TDs, two by Arguello and touchdown runs by Jameson Ward and Gerardo Armentariz gave Coahoma a 41-0 half-time lead, and the Bulldogs coasted in from there.

Defensively, Coahoma limited Rotan to less than 100 yards total offense. Coaches praised the defensive play of Joel Hernandez, Phillip Lambert, Jonathan Miller, Eli Sanders and Michael Lopez.

Coahoma's JV returns to action Thursday when they host Tahoka at 6:30 p.m. in Bulldog Stadium.

Park and cornerback Vincent Garcia.

The Coahoma seventh-graders return to action at 5:30 p.m. Thursday in Tahoka.

Rotan defeats
8th-grade Bulldogs
COAHOMA - The Coahoma eighth-graders were not as lucky as their seventh-grade counterparts, as they dropped a 22-6 decision to Rotan Thursday evening.

Coahoma's lone score came in the third quarter when quarterback Harold Ott found Anthony Garcia for a 68-yard scoring pass.

The eighth-graders return to action at 6:30 p.m. Thursday in Tahoka.

Big Spring JV team falls to Cooper
ABILENE - Bucky Crenshaw passed for two touchdowns, but it was not enough as the Abilene Cooper junior varsity downed Big Spring 33-24 Thursday.

Big Spring's JV falls to 0-2 with the defeat.

The Steers tallied their first touchdown when fullback Donny Hill scored from 40 yards out in the first quarter. Crenshaw added the two-point conversion with a pass to Mark Baker. Crenshaw and Baker hooked up again in the second quarter, this time for 35 yards and a touchdown. The duo added the two-point PAT.

Big Spring's final touchdown of the evening came when Crenshaw passed to James Escobar for 25 yards and the score in the second quarter. Ray McGee ran for the two-point conversion.

Big Spring's JV returns to action Thursday night in Lubbock when

Coahoma 7th-graders

COAHOMA - The Coahoma seventh-graders scored on the opening kickoff and never let up as they trounced Rotan 36-0 in seventh-grade action at Bulldog Stadium Thursday.

Sebastian Gaillandeau took the opening kickoff 70 yards and fullback Blake Nichols added the two-point conversion to give Coahoma an early 8-0 lead. The junior high Bulldogs added three more touchdowns in the first quarter: a 33-yard run by Nichols, a 52-yard run by Gaillandeau and a 40-yard jaunt by fullback Aaron Boadle.

Nichols added the game's final score, a 40-yard touchdown run with 3:01 left in the game.

On defense, Nichols, Lester Duffer and Jeremy Green recovered fumbles. Coaches praised the defensive play of Duffer, linebacker Ryan Pecham, end Cade

Stanton beats
C-City
STANTON - Stanton's junior varsity team defeated C-City 18-8 Thursday. C-City returned the opening kickoff for a touchdown, but Stanton dominated after that.

Chris Carroll's 3-yard touchdown run brought the Buffaloes within two points, 8-6. A 12-yard touchdown pass from Taylor Looney to James Villa put Stanton ahead.

Mark Carrillo returned the second-half kickoff 73 yards for a touchdown.

Looney completed 10 of 16 passes for 156 yards. Nick Hull caught five passes and Jerod Stallings scored two. Hull had two interceptions, and Carroll was also a star on defense.

Stanton's seventh-graders beat C-City 38-0, while the eighth-graders beat C-City 36-12.

Runnels "A" and "B" teams swept Monahans 26-0 and 20-0 on Thursday, and Goliad swept Monahans' seventh-graders. Details will be printed in Sunday or Monday's paper.

SWC teams bracing for Top 10 football powers

By The Associated Press

There is plenty to celebrate for the Baylor Bears this week but rookie head coach Chuck Reedy will have none of it.

The Bears made a thrilling comeback to beat Fresno State last week and earned a No. 24 ranking in The Associated Press college football poll but Reedy and the Bears got right back to business.

The approaching visit by No. 10 ranked Colorado has something to do with Reedy's serious mood.

"We didn't have long to celebrate the win over Fresno State," Reedy said. "We were already worried Sunday night after looking at Colorado game tapes."

No. 5 Texas A&M will visit No. 17 Oklahoma, still with no word from the NCAA about the suspensions of five players, including running back Greg Hill, for accepting pay for summer jobs they did not perform.

It's becoming a tired subject with A&M coach R.C. Slocum.

"I'm anxious for me, but I'm anxious for the players, too," Slocum said. "They've gone nine months where they've had their names in various media outlets almost on a daily basis. I'm anxious for them to find out what their futures are."

In other games: Texas Tech plays at No. 9 Nebraska; Rice hosts Tulane; Houston hosts Tulsa; Wisconsin is at Southern Methodist; and Texas Christian hosts New Mexico. Texas has an open date.

Colorado will try to add its second SWC victim in as many weeks after beating the Texas Longhorns last week.

Reedy, offensive coordinator under former coach Grant Teaff, turned the job over to Jack Crowe, former Arkansas head coach, and he likes the way quarterback J.J. Joe and Crowe have worked together.

"I had a chance to work with J.J.

at quarterback but Jack Crowe has done a fabulous job in getting him ready to play this season," Reedy said. "Jack has J.J. getting into the deeper mental aspects of the game. Jack is really a great football mind."

Houston initiated Kim Helton's head coaching career with a 49-7 loss to Southern California a week ago, leaving Helton desperate to avoid an 0-2 start.

"I'm not sure how much I make a month but I'd give a month's salary away if we win," Helton said.

Helton expects the Hurricane to come out throwing in Saturday's noon kickoff. USC passed for 292 yards against Houston's defense.

"If I watched a team and they can't rush the passer and can't cover the curl, I know I would throw," Helton said.

The Red Raiders are beginning the rugged part of their schedule, beginning Saturday at Nebraska and followed by games against Georgia.

Baseball approves expanded playoffs

By The Associated Press

BOSTON — Major league baseball, the most traditional of American sports, approved three-division leagues and a four-week playoff system with wild-card teams, possibly pushing the World Series into November.

The proposal, passed 27-1 Thursday over the objection of the Texas Rangers. Baseball's plan is subject to approval of the Major League Baseball Players Association, but the union said it anticipated no problems.

The American and National Leagues first split into divisions when they expanded for the 1969 season, and the alignments have basically stayed the same. The new divisions would look like this next season:

- AL East — Baltimore, Boston, Detroit, New York Yankees, Toronto.
- AL Central — Chicago White Sox, Cleveland, Kansas City, Milwaukee, Minnesota.
- AL West — California, Oakland, Seattle, Texas.
- NL East — Montreal, New York Mets, Philadelphia.

NL Central — Chicago Cubs, Cincinnati, Houston, St. Louis.

NL West — Colorado, Los Angeles, San Diego, San Francisco.

Atlanta, Florida and Pittsburgh are to be assigned within seven days, with two teams put in the NL East and one in the NL Central. The three teams waived their right to veto realignment.

The new playoffs would add four best-of-5 series, and include the second-place team having the best record as the wild card in each league. The wild-card teams would play the division winner with the best record in its league, unless it was a team in its own division.

In that case, the wild card would play the division winner with the second-best record. First-round winners would advance to the best-of-7 League Championship Series and the pennant winners would go to the World Series, which also would remain best-of-7.

Owners also approved a $255 million, six-year contract with ESPN that will decrease telecasts from 175 per season to about 75, and a $50.5 million, six-year contract with CBS

Radio. Those deals mark steep decreases from the expiring $390 million, four-year deal with ESPN and the $52 million, four-year contract with CBS Radio.

George W. Bush, the Rangers general partner, was the only negative voice on realignment. He said he was speaking for baseball's purists.

"I made my arguments and went down in flames," Bush said. "History will prove me right."

Owners voted in June to expand the playoffs but keep the current two-division set-up. That proposal was foiled last month by the players' union, which said it preferred a three-division plan.

One obstacle may be the amount of postseason money that goes to players, who now get 60 percent of the ticket money from the first four games of each League Championship Series and the first four games of the World Series.

The 162-game schedule would remain balanced at least through 1997, with teams playing opponents 12 or 13 times each.
