Seminar views varying styles for parenting

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third of a 13-part series on life-management skills. Stories run once a week.

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

Raising children in today's world is most successful in families structured like the society we live in — democratic, where all are considered created equal.

"The democratic parenting style is working better," said Becky Moughon, child development specialist at Howard College and a parent of 22 years. "This tends to go along better with the ideals of our country and what the world's evolving to."

Tuesday Moughon taught the first of six weekly seminars on parenting skills, part of the 12-course "Brown Bag Seminars" at the college's Tumbleweed Room. This week's course was, "What Is An Active Parent: A look at how different parenting styles affect children."

It was the second course of the Brown Bag series, held each Tuesday from noon to 1 p.m. The public is invited, but is asked to call 264-5020 the day before to ensure seating.

It's not that children should have as much control as adults, they cannot assume that kind of responsibility, agree Moughon and about two dozen attending Tuesday's seminar. But children should have input, mutual respect, dignity and protected

Villafuerte praises local donations

By GARY SHANKS
Staff Writer

Big Spring Salvation Army officials are thankful for the community's generous donations of materials, food and money for flood-relief efforts in the Midwest.

The donations, including many household cleaning products, are helping victims of the flood rebuild their homes and lives following the summer's devastating floods along the Mississippi River.

"We have worked diligently with our service network system and sent all the donated items to our Dallas warehouse where they will be transported to the flood victims on the Mississippi," said Salvation Army Lt. Albert Villafuerte.

"Any donations received as of this point will be used in our traditional program services throughout our community," he added.

Villafuerte asked local residents to donate items in two categories — food and cleaning products. Howard County residents responded splendidly to the call for help, according to Villafuerte.

"When it comes to disasters, every Salvation Army unit is part of a nation-wide networking system," Villafuerte said of efforts in the disaster area.

Salvation Army relief efforts in the area are expected to continue into the fall.

Food collections in for the flood relieve consisted of nonperishable food items such as peanut butter, cookies, cooking oil, macaroni and cheese, spaghetti sauce, canned meats, rice, corn, breakfast cereal, crackers, powdered drink mix, pasta, tuna, dried milk, pinto beans, peas and baby formula.

Items from the Big Spring area sent for cleaning flood-damaged homes included paper towels, sponges, all-purpose cleaners, dish soap, scrubbing cleanser, toilet

Council appoints attorney to fill municipal judge spot

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

Local attorney John Rheinscheld will take over as municipal judge Oct. 1.

He replaces Arnold Marshall, whose contract wasn't renewed so a new salary and hours could be renegotiated. Marshall didn't apply for the job.

The Big Spring City Council hired Rheinscheld Tuesday on a 4-2 vote after interviewing six other people. Rheinscheld, who's been with Hamby & Mouton since December 1990 and a partner since November, is the only attorney who applied.

"We had several others we felt were good candidates but because he's an attorney I felt he was best suited to the job," said Mayor Tim Blackshear. "John will do a good job."

"I thought the court deserved some legal expertise," Rheinscheld said. "This is many, many people's first touch with the justice system and I think it should be a legitimate experience."

Another candidate, district court bailiff Bill Tune, a former Howard County judge, was reportedly supported by Councilmen Mark Sheedy and Chuck Cawthon.

"Cawthon and I were in the minority," Sheedy said. "I'm disappointed but it's my duty to support the other gentleman."

Cawthon this morning declined comment. With Rheinscheld being an attorney, one criteria is met for making the municipal court a court of record, which would eliminate appeals to county court and instead route them through appellate courts, Sheedy said.

Joining Blackshear in the vote were council members Stephanie Horton, Charles Beil and John Coffee. Coffee, an attorney, once served as municipal judge and later as county judge.

Under a one-year $15,000 contract, Rheinscheld will work an anticipated 10 to 16 hours a week, five in the office, three to five at night and on weekends and three to five hours every two weeks in court.

This year, Marshall made $19,500 for 20 or more hours a week but said he actually worked 40 hours a week.

Rheinscheld will also implement a teen court to

Old Settlers Reunion will begin Friday

Herald Staff Report

The 69th Annual Howard-Glasscock Old Settlers' Reunion is set to begin at 9 a.m. Friday at the Howard County Fair Barns in Big Spring.

The special one-day celebration will honor the families of the area's first settlers and will feature games, a barbecue lunch, awards, a fiddler's contest and a dance.

Perhaps the longest celebrated activity in Howard County, the reunion is rich in history.

Originally held at the J.L. McKinney Farm on June 28, 1924, the event has moved to other locations to accommodate increasing attendance. Its home has included the former Cottonwood Park, the Old Settlers' Pavilion (built specifically for the reunion) at Comanche Trail Park, and now the Howard County

Nurses cross traditional barriers

Filling gaps in the delivery of health care

The Associated Press

DALLAS — Pediatrician Carl Turner of Marshall, Texas, tried for almost three months last year to persuade another doctor to join him. About 16,500 children live in Harrison County, where he practices, but there are only three pediatricians. Many days, he worked 12 hours.

When an emergency would send him rushing off to the hospital, Turner says, his practice would back up like a Dallas freeway at 5 p.m.

"My waiting room would be full, and they'd be sitting in chairs down the hall," he says.

Turner found no takers. Instead, he hired Marie Heimerdinger, a nurse practitioner. She sees patients, makes diagnoses and writes prescriptions. But she's never been to medical school.

"I think doctors are beginning to realize they don't need to see every patient," Ms. Heimerdinger says. "It doesn't take a doctor to say, 'Mama, this baby's three years old. You need to throw away the bottle and buy some training pants and a potty chair.'"

Nurses with advanced graduate education, such as Ms. Heimerdinger, are found everywhere in Texas from nurseries filled wall-to-wall with newborns to doctors' offices to rural health centers.

A 1993 study commissioned by the American Nurses Association shows that nurse practitioners can provide most routine care and do it cheaper than doctors.

"It's highly likely that nurse practitioners will be used extensively because they are so cost-effective," says Marla Salmon, nursing director at the Bureau of Health Professions in Rockville, Md., and a member of an advisory group for Hillary Rodham Clinton's health care task force.

During the past five years, nurse practitioners have pushed hard to move into what was once considered the realm of doctors.

"What we're trying to do is remove the barriers that will allow them Nurse practitioner Mindy Mashburn checks 9-month-old Jessica Garza's heartbeat at the Denton Pediatric Clinic in Denton Friday. At right is Carol Garza, Jessica's mother. (nurse practitioners) to function within their scope of practice," says Kathy Hutto, a lobbyist for the Coalition for Nurses in Advanced Practice in Austin.

Nurse practitioners in 42 states can now write prescriptions. In 38 states, they can be paid by insurance companies.

In Texas, nurse practitioners who work in areas where there are few doctors have been able to write prescriptions and practice somewhat independently since 1989.

But it's a trend that disturbs more traditional members of the medical profession.

"Quality of patient care is at risk here," says Dr. Roy Schwarz, a vice president of the American Medical Association. "You're going to get what you pay for."

Yet the nurses say they are not trying to elbow out doctors but to fill gaps in the U.S. health care system. Almost all of them are trained in primary care — the yearly checkups and day-to-day treatment of sore throats, ear infections and stomach aches.

It's a field with a lot of openings not enough young doctors are going into it, and a lot of the older physicians who have provided such care are retiring, said Michael Evans of Austin, who serves on the board of the American Nurses Association.

"There's no way in our lifetimes to provide all the primary care that's needed," he says. "Nurse practitioners aren't qualified to do all things, but they are eminently qualified to provide primary care."

They often take care of the most neglected among us — the poor, the very old and the very young, said Dr. Salmon of the Bureau of Health Professions.

Parkland Memorial Hospital in Dallas realized the need for nurse practitioners early on. Seven years ago, babies there were born on gurneys in crowded hallways because there weren't enough doctors to tend to all the women in labor. More than 11,000 women were delivering in a hospital designed for 9,000 to 10,000 births a year.

Parkland is up to 15,000 births annually. But the hospital now has nurse midwives — another type of advanced practice nurse — delivering more than a third of babies. Nurse practitioners also give those newborns their first checkups and care for mothers until they leave the hospital.

Parkland's nurse practitioners "are the best-kept secret in the town," said Dr. Greg Jackson, who oversees the pediatric nurse practitioners.

In some areas, nurse practitioners and midwives are all that patients have.

When Denton County's public hospital, Flow Memorial Hospital, closed in 1988, uninsured patients had no place to go for routine care. There were no prenatal exams, no PAP smears, no blood-pressure checks. Only a handful of Denton-area physicians accepted Medicaid, the government-run insurance program for the poor.

After four months, a nurse midwife, Pat Brewer, began offering prenatal care in a building that was left vacant when a Denton family physician retired.

Almost a dozen other nurses also began spending their free time seeing children and pregnant women.

Health care reform could mean gains, setbacks for Texas

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The sweeping health care reform package President Clinton will unveil in an address to Congress tonight could be a boon to Texas.

Then again, it could hurt.

With so many details — including financing — still in doubt, it's difficult to get a precise handle on how the plan eventually will impact everyone from patients to businesses. There's also no doubt that the package will be significantly altered as it makes its way through Congress and the onslaught of lobbyists.

One of the plan's fundamental precepts — guaranteeing all Americans a standard set of health care benefits — could be of special advantage to Texas, where one out of every four residents lacks health insurance.

Texas leads all other states in rate of uninsured citizens; in fact, one out of every 10 Americans without health care coverage lives in Texas. State physicians and hospitals provided some $4 billion in uncompensated care last year alone.

But while Clinton draws praise for trying to bring coverage to the nation's 37 million uninsured, other aspects of his plan are causing fear.

Chief among them is a requirement that employers pay 80 percent of average health-care premiums, with workers paying the rest. While small businesses and low-income workers would get federal subsidies to help them pay their share, concern is high that the new federal mandates would crush many small businesses.

"We support most of the plan, it's just the mandated part we detest," says Robert Howden, director of the Texas branch of the National Federation of Independent Business.

Howden says small business owners may be forced to lay off employees, raise prices or even go out of business if they have to provide health coverage for all workers.

The Texas NFIB, which represents some 40,000 small businesses, estimates that up to 1.2 million jobs may be at risk from the White House health plan. And Howden says the organization is planning to take action.

"It's time to crank on the fax machines, turn on the phones and mail the letters," he says. "We are just going to grassroots the living heck out of this thing and fight to the bitter end."

University of Texas public health expert David C. Warner says it's difficult to assess the impact of the reform package until its financing is fully known and other details finalized.

"Obviously, there's no question a lot of people will be covered that aren't now," Warner says. "But the other issue is how in fact is that going to be financed and what does that do to small business?"

"There's definitely a lot of questions at this point."

Gov. Ann Richards' press secretary, Bill Cryer, says national reform will mesh well with reforms already ongoing in the state, particularly legislation creating insurance pools for small business.

But, Cryer adds: "Anytime you put a burden upon small business, absolutely you have to worry about it and we are looking into that."

Lawmaker threatens suit against Resource Center

The Associated Press

HOUSTON — A critic of the federally funded Texas Resource Center, which has built a controversial reputation as a defender of death row inmates, says he wants the center to reveal how it spends its taxpayers' dollars.

State Sen. Jerry Patterson, R-Houston, says he is going to use the Texas Non-Profit Corporation Act in court action to find out how the money is being spent.

Center lawyers have refused to disclose the financial records, claiming the law does not apply to the center.

Patterson claims the center is trying to hide inappropriate expenses from the public.

"The fact is, they know they've been caught, and they know things are going to get real hot," he said.

The Texas Resource Center was created in 1988 as part of a national network to provide counsel for death row inmates who can't afford to hire attorneys for appeals.

The center's attorneys have become experts in fighting executions. While it receives some funding from private sources, the bulk of its financing comes from the U.S. government.

The center is under fire in Washington as well. U.S. Rep. Jack Fields, R-Humble, this week announced that he is introducing legislation to kill all funding for death penalty resource centers, which exist in 19 states that have the death penalty.

His constituents want the Texas Resource Center abolished, Fields told the Houston Chronicle.

"What they do is they thwart the process," he said. "To me this is a waste of taxpayer money. And I think the average Texan violently disagrees with their tax dollars being used in this way."

Because the center receives its federal funding from the Administrative Offices of the U.S. Courts, it is exempt from federal laws requiring public disclosure of its records.

Patterson is angry, saying the center has stepped far beyond the bounds of its federal mandate and accuses center lawyers of using taxpayer dollars to fund its mission of abolishing the death penalty in Texas.

The Houston lawmaker said he believes the center is using tax dollars to pay for public relations campaigns on behalf of Texas death row inmates such as Gary Graham and to fund spurious legal claims aimed at clogging up the legal system and keeping condemned inmates alive at any price.

Russian militia form a human chain around the Russian Parliament building where hard-line lawmakers suspended by President Yeltsin gathered to take part in the emergency session in Moscow this morning.

Yeltsin is taking biggest gamble yet against foes

The Associated Press

MOSCOW — After wooing army support, demoting rebellious officials and creating new alliances, Boris Yeltsin took the biggest gamble of his career Tuesday by summarily kicking his enemies from office.

His decree dissolving the legislature and calling elections to a new parliament was an act of desperation. But it was also a bold act, taken with strong faith in his popular support.

Now, its success and possibly that of Russia's continued peaceful emergence from Soviet rule, depends on whether he guessed right.

Yeltsin took the act after two fruitless years of negotiating, cajoling and threatening Communist holdovers and former allies who oppose his tough political style as much as his policies. He took it in the belief that he himself is Russia's best hope for democracy, even if that means delaying it.

"As a guarantor of the security of our state, I am duty-bound to propose a way out of this deadlock, I am duty-bound to break this vicious circle," Yeltsin said in announcing his order.

The president and his aides left little to chance, right down to the pre-recorded TV speech during which he took a sip of tea — possibly to counter his image as a boozier.

Collider clears Senate hurdle; tough test ahead

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Boosters of the super collider proclaimed themselves optimistic Tuesday after the battered program survived its first — and easiest — step through the Senate.

The Senate Energy and Water Development Appropriations Subcommittee earmarked $640 million for the giant atom smasher, which is the full amount sought by the Clinton administration for the year beginning Oct. 1.

The action was expected because the subcommittee is chaired by one of the collider's strongest congressional supporters, Louisiana Democrat Bennett Johnston.

Johnston and Texas' two senators, Republicans Phil Gramm and Kay Bailey Hutchison, were cautiously optimistic that they will ultimately prevail in the heated debate.

"Let me put it this way, I've gone from hopeful to optimistic," Johnston told reporters after the subcommittee concluded action on its $21.7 billion appropriations package.

The measure now goes to the full Senate Appropriations Committee, which meets Thursday to consider the legislation. Action by the Senate could come as early as next week.

"I think at the moment we don't have the votes and the opposition doesn't have the votes, so we are working hard for every one," said Gramm, who with Hutchison has been lobbying GOP senators. Johnston has worked the other side of the aisle, including making a collider pitch at Tuesday's Democratic policy luncheon.

Gramm hailed the allocation as a "major step forward."

"Six hundred and forty million gives us something to build on," he said.

Mrs. Hutchison, who made an appearance at the subcommittee meeting to find out the collider funding level, said: "As we are getting the word out on the super collider, I'm getting very good feelings about it — not that it won't be close."

"It's not going to be a slam dunk," she added.

Senate support is crucial because the House, for the second year, voted to pull the plug on the giant atom smasher.

Two Russian governments duel for power

The Associated Press

MOSCOW — Russia was torn by dueling governments today after President Boris Yeltsin suspended parliament and hard-line lawmakers, meeting in their barricaded headquarters, voted to impeach him.

Vice President Alexander Rutskoi tried to grab the reins of power but appeared to be failing as military and police commanders remained loyal to Yeltsin. There was little public reaction and life in Moscow and other major cities was normal.

Rutskoi's main hope was in some of Russia's far-flung regions, such as the vital oil-producing Tyumen district of Siberia, where the vice president's supporters threatened to strike.

The Russian ruble plunged 6.4 percent against the U.S. dollar following Yeltsin's move, and stocks in New York fell sharply Tuesday on the news of Russian turmoil — by nearly 70 points — before recovering to close at 3,537.24, down 38.56 points.

In what amounted to a coup against his longtime foes, Yeltsin went on television Tuesday night and announced December elections to a new parliament. His declaration trampled the Soviet-era constitution, which he has been trying to replace, and was aimed at breaking the stalemate that has paralyzed Russia's government for more than a year.

Yeltsin warned that any attempt to block him would be "punished by law."

Yeltsin's move was seen as a gamble. Growing support came from President Clinton and other world leaders.

Hard-line protesters mill about near barricades around the Russian parliament building in Moscow early Wednesday morning. They gathered near the parliament following Russian President Boris Yeltsin's TV address Tuesday in which he suspended parliament and hard-line lawmakers, calling for early elections.

British Prime Minister John Major today praised Yeltsin's "courageous efforts in the face of great difficulties." German Chancellor Helmut Kohl said the promise of new elections "earns our full support."

Yeltsin was gambling that he would win the backing of the military and the people and end up with a new parliament more receptive to his economic and political reforms.

The stakes were high. Yeltsin's move could determine what kind of government emerges from the chaos of the post-Soviet era. And it could finally settle the question of who rules Russia: the president or parliament.

The Communist-dominated parliament, which has consistently blocked Yeltsin's initiatives and whittled away his power, has little popular support.

The gamble seemed to be paying off today. Lawmakers voted to replace the defense, interior and security ministers — a clear sign that Yeltsin had won the loyalty of the top leadership of the military, police and former KGB. But it was unclear which way the career officer corps would lean.

Strike force long needed

It has taken a long time, but finally the state of Texas is going after developers who don't follow through law when creating a new subdivision.

Many of these subdivision turn into colonias along the border of the U.S. and Mexico, creating problems for the homeowner, the city and the state.

For too long, the homeowner has not had any recourse against the developer who has not followed through with water, sewer or utilities. Once they buy the land, they are responsible. And, many of these landowners cannot afford the cost of installing these utilities.

Then, it comes to the taxpayers on the city and state level to fix the problem - which can be a danger to all citizens and the environment. The Colonias Bill was passed several years ago, providing for the sale of bonds to take care of these problems.

So the state has formed the Colonias Strike Force which already has filed 12 state district court lawsuits against developers in six border counties. The thrust of the suits is to force the developers to comply with the laws which require them to provide utility, water and sewage services.

But, cities across the state can take heart about seeing the task force and consider adding teeth to their own ordinances.

This will also give counties, who handles the platting of subdivisions, stronger grounds for making sure everything about a new development is right.

We need to make sure everyone living in this state has access to these services, for our protection and theirs.

In the 'good ol' days'

I'd had one of those weeks. You know the kind of bad, rotten never-ending weeks, where it seemed like everything that could go wrong did.

My children had developed hearing problems and couldn't understand simple instructions, like "pick up your clothes." I had spent two hours washing and waxing my car by hand, and my two dastardly feltnes walked all over it with their nasty little paws. I worked late one day and remembered 45 minutes too late my daughter's orthodontic appointment.

Another night we had to have sandwiches for dinner since I had forgotten to take something out of the freezer. The checkbook wouldn't balance no matter how I added, subtracted and lied. Then, the compressor on my cooling unit locked down and had to be replaced. I wasn't a happy person. Oh, how I wished I'd lived in a quieter, simpler time, "the good ol' days." None of the headaches of these modern times.

However, the longer I thought about life in the 'good ol' days' the less appealing they seemed.

Nostalgia can be tricky. One of its characteristics is you tend to glamorize the good and forget the bad. The reality of the situation is I really wouldn't want to live in the "good ol' days" of my grandmothers' era.

One thing for certain, I wouldn't have had most of the major stresses I endured that week. Take the air conditioning unit for example. Ha! Air conditioning in those days consisted of a piece of cardboard waved back and forth in front of your face. Of course, when you went to church on Sunday, the funeral homes were usually nice enough to furnish fans with wooden handles on them.

There would be no car related stress either. I would have walked to where I needed to go or else hitched up the mule and wagon. Of course, going to the grocery store would be an all day event.

Let's see...I'd probably have to get up around 5 a.m. to start breakfast. That would involve hauling wood inside for the stove. The water to cook, bath, and wash with would have to be drawn from a well with a bucket or rope. My washing would be done in a tub on a scrub board and hung out to dry.

If that's not enough to make you shudder, remember this - There was no such thing as permanent press! That translates into ironing and lots of it. I've got one of those old irons sitting on my mantle. Heavy little thing, with the wooden handle that let's you use more than one iron at a time.

Thawing food from the freezer would be a thing of the future. Everything was canned or processed during the summer and fall months. Can you imagine putting up enough food to last a family for a year?

And that checkbook? Not to worry, I probably wouldn't make but several hundred dollars a year. I'd simply put it in a jar and hide it somewhere.

And you know what else? With my luck, if I could go back to the "good ol' days", I bet you a quarter my kids' hearing wouldn't improve not one bit.

Newsletter addresses issues

Hello Citizens of Big Spring! School has started, fall is here - I hope your family had an exciting, profitable summer!

I would like to take this month's newsletter to address several issues that have been in the local media the last several weeks:

MOSS CREEK LAKE BOAT RACES

The Big Spring City Council wholeheartedly supports the boat races at Moss Creek Lake! We believe this is a positive use of our little lake east of town and that it brings needed tourist dollars to our City. We have supported the boat races since their inception. We have no intention of thwarting the boat races in any way. In fact, if the city's ordinance on alcohol was expanded to Moss Creek Lake, the ability to purchase an alcohol permit to drink alcohol at the lake would still be available. Boat races and the problem with alcohol are different subjects.

During the boat races, the Texas Highway Patrol chose to enforce the DWI laws on the traffic leaving Moss Creek Lake. It is my understanding that a total of nine DWI citations were given. Three of these were felony DWI charges.

The city of Big Spring did not ask the DPS to enforce this event, we did not have any city police officers working traffic and we had no prior knowledge of the DPS's intentions to enforce the DWI laws during the boat race.

However, I want to commend the DPS for this action. I certainly don't want anyone driving under the influence of alcohol in this city - whether they came from out of town or not. I do not understand why anyone would object to enforcement of such a serious driving violation at any public event as DWI. Maybe the newspaper editors can explain to me why the DWI laws should not apply in Big Spring especially to out of town visitors who choose to get drunk at our lake?

HEART OF THE CITY & CINCO DE MAYO

The Big Spring City Council did not ban, outlaw, eliminate, remove, or otherwise harass the "Heart of the City Festival" or "Cinco de Mayo Celebration." The City Council asked the promoter of Cinco de Mayo, Raul Marquez, if he could move the celebration to a larger location. He said he could not find a location on such a short notice - maybe he could in 1994. We (city council) said "okay"

Home schooling grows by leaps and bounds

Scripts Howard News Service

However fares California's upcoming school-choice referendum, a great number of American parents are registering their misgivings about public education in their communities by voting with their feet.

Despite the recent economic downturn, enrollment in private schools, grades K-12, remains constant at about 5.2 million. (Private elementary schools are actually adding students.) Meanwhile, the number of children being taught at home has grown astoundingly - from around 15,000 in 1983 to some 350,000 today.

Interestingly, these trends parallel the growth of a non-teaching educational bureaucracy that has ballooned by 40 percent since 1972 (alas, with no concomitant rise in standardized test scores). If parents are cutting family budgets to the bone to keep their kids in private schools, or teaching Johnny and Jane at home, the explanation may be that much of this central-office deadwood specializes in mass-producing mush or mischief. Or both. Under one trendy program, three and granted the Cinco de Mayo a permit. Both events were a success. I attended them and enjoyed myself. Why have several "letters to the editor" asked about the elimination of these two events by the city council? I believe this exemplifies the old adage "Nothing is so insignificant that it cannot be completely blown out of proportion." (Don't misunderstand me - these events are important!, the actions of Big Spring City Council was to help promote a safer environment.)

The Big Spring City Council supports and encourages all City festivals and events. We simply want them to be safe and located in an appropriate location. We would also like to see a more accessible location, which would make it easier on promoters, businesses and the city.

WATER QUALITY

As mayor of Big Spring, my number one complaint from citizens is about the poor quality of our drinking water. It is high in salt and destroys our water mains, hot water heaters, plumbing pipes, dishwashers, etc.

The Big Spring City Council asked the Colorado River Municipal Water District to participate in a "Town Hall" meeting to present the actions taken and being taken by the Water District to supply Big Spring with better water.

The meeting was held on Tuesday, August 31 and was informative and timely. The District assured us that water quality would improve with the completion of the Lake Ivie water supply line to Midland/Odessa in 1995. We intend to monitor this situation and insure that this committee is commitment is provided.

WRIGHT FIBERS INC.

Wright Fibers Inc. is moving along in their efforts to renovate the former Cameo Homes building, but have experienced delays resulting in cost overruns. The building delays have pushed back the start of production of knitted cotton bale bags and knitted fabric. Wright Fibers, when all machinery is completely installed, will also produce cotton yarn to be sold to other manufacturers to produce woven fabrics. Full completion of the building and start-up should occur in sixty to eighty days.

Interest in organically grown cotton in Texas and the western United States has accelerated in recent years. Mr. Herbert Wright is working with growers of organic cotton to produce knitted fabrics for the apparel industry in the Big Spring plant.

Upon completion, the Wright Fibers facility will be a major asset to the industrial manufacturing base of Big Spring and represents good growth potential for expanded employment.

I assure you the Board of Directors of the Moore Development are working to insure that our tax dollars are used wisely and our investments are guarded and secure.

WAL-MART

The Wal-Mart people tell us that they are almost complete with their negotiations to buy the Highland Mall area for their new Super Store in Big Spring. We have not lost, run-off, discouraged, or impaired the Wal-Mart Super Store in any way. Wal-Mart assures us that they are building a Super Store in Big Spring. I would say that the number one problem facing Big Spring is not that population loss, tax base loss, the empty downtown or the poor quality of water. The number one problem in Big Spring is the attitude of the negative nay-sayers who are quick to criticize and complain about anything they don't understand or see clearly.

I talked with one of Big Spring's newest progressive businessmen. He stated Big Spring is a great place with great people. He said a number of people have welcomed him to Big Spring and then asked why did you come to Big Spring? We have to get hold of that attitude in Big Spring. Some of ours needs adjusting.

Be Positive! Support Big Spring, don't tear it down. We are a great town yet! Don't bury the City before we're dead - we have more positive attributes than negatives. I am ready to see some positive letters to the editor and editorials, and comments of support for Big Spring. How about it?

Tim Blackshear is mayor of Big Spring.

It's more than a game

Sitting up for an Atlanta Braves West Coast telecast isn't as easy for me as it once was. I go to bed earlier now. I get up earlier.

But I still have my hair and my teeth, so don't order the walker and the case of prunes yet.

I even made the entire Braves game from the West Coast recently. It didn't begin until 10:30 and it lasted for nearly three hours.

Naturally, I wanted to see if the Atlanta team could gain more ground on the Giants, but I also knew Johnson and Johnson were working the game and that's always a special treat for me.

Turner's WTBS carries most of the Braves games. On some Wednesday nights, however, cable's Sports South gets the opportunity.

I think this week it was because TBS had to show Chuck Norris in "Delta Force," kicking somebody in the face for two hours, for the 72nd time since the first of the year.

One of the Johnsons who calls the Braves on Sports South is Ernie Johnson, Sr., the former Braves pitcher who was a regular Braves announcer until he retired a couple of years ago.

The other Johnson is Ernie, Jr. There is something about listening to a man broadcast a baseball game with his son at his side that softens my cynicism.

Maybe it's a man's thing. Maybe Murphy Brown wouldn't understand.

I suppose part of the appeal is that I never got to spend much time doing anything with my own father. My parents had divorced back in the '50s, too. The difference was, it was pretty rare back then.

What I like most about Johnson and Johnson is they seem to know what they are doing. Both are professionals and hearing them offers one of the few family-value broadcast situations left on television.

Ernie, Sr. calls his son, E.J. The son calls his dad, Big Guy or Righthander. Ernie, Sr. was talking about the time some cows got loose in his neighborhood during the Christmas season and his wife decorated them. (It was a slow game.)

Ernie, Sr. directed the comments at his son and referred to his wife as "your mother."

Ernie Jr. talked about how he was flying to South America later in the week to see a little girl he and his wife are trying to adopt.

You could almost feel dad (grandpa in this case) beaming at the possibility as young Ernie spoke.

I know. I know. The cynics say give me the balls and strikes and tell me how many millions this guy just signed for and lose the small talk. Small talk is for the bush leagues.

Sorry. I'm a Johnson and Johnson fan and I like a little homespinning with my baseball, even in a pennant race.

When I listen to him during a ballgame, I often think Ernie, Sr. could be my dad, anybody's dad.

He says things only dads would say. In the game from the West Coast, Ernie, Jr. brought up an "if" situation. "Yeah," replied his father, "but if your Aunt Minnie had a moustache, she'd be your Uncle Fred."

At another point, the conversation got around to chickens. The Braves were up 8-0 by this time. Ernie, Sr. did a chicken right there from Dodgers Stadium. Only your dad would do a chicken.

This Braves broadcast team is an amazing family affair. Skip Caray has done games with his son, Chip, and Skip's dad, of course, is Harry Caray, voice of the Chicago Cubs.

And when Johnson and Johnson get together, it reminds me of why I would give what I have for one more hour with my father.

The new baby's name, said Ernie, Jr., is Carmen. Ernie, Sr. said, "I promise not to call her Carmen Miranda."

We love you, dad, grandpa. And you have raised a fine young man. c 1993 by Cowles Syndicate, Inc.

Reunion

Fair Barns.
The celebration was created to recognize and honor the area's first permanent settlers. Explaining the term "Old Settlers," explained Lorin McDowell III, who presides over the host committee. "Anyone who has lived in Howard or Glasscock counties for more than 20 years is considered an old settler."
Festivities will get under way at 9 a.m. with a brief registration of all old settlers and their families. Dominoes and bingo will follow, with prizes being awarded to the bingo winners. The prizes, as well as those to be used as door prizes, are donated by Big Spring merchants.
One of the highlights of the day will be a noon barbecue. The fee is $6 per person, with those over 65 receiving their meals as compliments of the Old Settlers Reunion committee. Archie Archibald, president of the food committee, said that special tables will be furnished for those over 65, with their meals being served to them.
A ceremony will follow at 1 p.m. with awards to be given in various categories, including the most authentically dressed woman and man, participants married the longest to the same spouse, the old settlement with the most children, the eldest man and woman, and for traveling the longest distance to attend.

Another highlight will be the old fiddlers' contest scheduled to begin at 1:30 p.m. In order to be eligible to compete for one of the five cash prizes, all participants must be over 45 years of age. A special award will be presented to the oldest fiddler.
Activities will slow down with a break at 3 p.m. so everyone can visit and relax for a few hours. The celebration will resume at 8 p.m. with a dance featuring Ben Nix and the Boys who will provide music until midnight. A special surprise band will also perform.
Prizes will be awarded to certain dance couples. There is no admission charge to the event, however, donations are encouraged to help defray expenses.
Tickets for the reunion barbecue can be purchased at the door of the Howard County Fair Barns. Those wishing more information about the Howard-Glasscock old Settlers' Reunion and activities planned are asked to call 398-5461 in Big Spring.
For donations, please make check payable to the Old Settlers' Reunion and mail to McDowell Ranch, HC 63, Box 173, Big Spring, Texas 79720 or drop by 708 South Main Street, Big Spring, Texas 79720.

Administration aims at agricultural pesticides

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Farmers would reduce their reliance on pesticides under a Clinton administration plan to cut toxic chemicals in agricultural products and increase food safety.
The goal of the plan unveiled Tuesday: By the turn of the century, have at least 75 percent of the nation's farmers using innovative pest management techniques. Currently, 20 percent are using them.
Farmers would spray crops only when a pest is detected rather than on a fixed schedule. And they would plant crops that encourage natural insect predators, and develop crops that are pest-resistant.
There were early signs of support. "Much of agriculture would not have a problem with stating that as a goal," said Richard E. Stuckey, executive vice president of the Council for Agricultural Science and Technology, a consortium of food and agriculture scientific societies.

"We welcome the administration's support. We've been doing it for a long time," said Jeff Nedelman, spokesman for the Grocery Manufacturers Association.
"Farmers are eager to move to more environmentally sound methods," Agriculture Deputy Secretary Richard Rominger said in discussing the plan with lawmakers on Capitol Hill.
The administration plans to consult with growers to develop a timetable for reducing use of certain high-risk pesticides by the year 2000.
The Environmental Protection Agency proposes to establish criteria to define lower-risk pesticides and give priority to registering such products for use.
The administration urged Congress to mandate a government reassessment of all pesticides used on America's fruit and vegetable crops, with a seven-year deadline for all of them to meet health and safety standards.

Often-conflicting food safety laws would be supplanted by a uniform standard requiring "a reasonable certainty of no harm" to public health because of a pesticide's use.
The pesticide approval process would change too — economic considerations and impacts on farmers could not outweigh health and safety concerns. The only exceptions — if discontinuing a pesticide would cause "significant disruption in the food supply" or reverse health benefits. In those cases, farmers would be given five years to continue using the substance while seeking an alternative.
And the Clinton administration wants to promote market incentives — for example, using product labels identifying low-pesticide products.

American Farm Bureau Federation president Dean Kleckner praised one feature of the administration proposal. It's the provision that calls for doing away with a 1958 law barring cancer-causing pesticides from processed foods where the amounts exceed the residues in the raw fruit or vegetable.
The administration would replace the so-called Delaney clause of the Food Drug and Cosmetic Act with a standard requiring proof that the pesticide causes a "negligible risk" to human health. It would in essence codify the way the government has interpreted Delaney for years.
Richard Wiles of the Environmental Working Group called the abandonment of Delaney the "Achilles heel" in an "otherwise good plan."
Environmental groups won a recent court case that ordered the government to strictly interpret Delaney, which would lead to cancellation of dozens of pesticides.

Seminar

Michael H. Popkin for the six courses.
"It's not that black and white," Moughon cautions. "We're probably all quite a mixture of all of these."
"I will not ask for a show of hands of how many of you did not have perfect parents, my hand would be raised too," she said.
The parenting styles, according to Moughon, with added input from attendees, are as follows:
Autocratic, which usually involves a dominant parent, tends to be uncompromising, demanding and unreasonable, punishing, have little communication, little praise and encouragement and does not encourage expression. Children tend to have low self esteem, are dependent, undependable, are rebellious or withdrawn, angry, distrustful, critical of self, rigidly structured and have trouble making decisions.
Permissive parenting is marked by an "I don't care" attitude, lack of concern, little involvement, little or no punishment, inconsistent rules and guidelines, nurturing and communication but at shallow levels, parents that are resources rather than role models and frustration on part of parents. Children feel unloved, are insecure, have difficulty adjusting to rules, irresponsible, non-compliant, immature, disrespectful and impulsive.

Democratic involves high demands, lots of communication, nurturing, respect teamwork, accepting unique qualities of each other, independence, compromise, guidelines and freedoms. Children have confidence, are mature and independent, demonstrate leadership, can be bossy and aggressive, take risks, are social, have family values, show concern for others, are responsible and maintain close family ties.
Family structures and values have changed through history, sometimes as a means of survival.
For example, autocratic parenting was needed in Medieval times to teach children how to live in a feudalistic society, according to a video shown. Children today must learn to live in a society that stresses equal rights.
"Kids absorb this, they know this," Moughon said.
Modern families have fewer generations living in the same home, are headed by more single parents, have more working moms, are more mobile and less agrarian.
"So, parenting needs to be different, kids are different," Moughon said.

Coalition for Environment giving away seedling pines

MARTHA E. FLORES
Regional Editor
October will mark Howard County Coalition for the Environment's second anniversary and in celebration of the recycling efforts of the past two years and to encourage resident to continue recycling, coalition members will be giving away seedling pine trees.
"Since the establishment of the coalition, a small fund has grown from the collection and selling of steel and aluminum," said Rebecca Pierce, secretary. "We would like to put this money back into the hands of the citizens of Howard County by giving away trees."
The coalition will order Arizona, Afghan and Cypress seedlings from the Soil Conservation Service. Members will be taking orders throughout October and the trees will be available in February. To order contact Grace Long at 263-3771 or Pierce at 263-7149.
The coalition collected 20,000 pounds of recyclable goods its first year. Collection of steel and aluminum averaged about 1,300 pounds a month. Organization volunteers have made it a habit to collect recyclable goods the first Saturday of the month. The next drive is Oct. 2 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Recently, some plastics have been marked off the collection list due to a glut in the market, but soft drink bottles, milk and water jugs are still collected.
The coalition is also accepting volunteers. The number of people devoting their time to the recycling efforts is lagging behind the volume of recyclable goods collected.

Facing the facts

Cosmetic companies try to meet needs of non-white customers

By DEBBIE LINCECUM
Features Editor

When Lydia Perez first started wearing makeup more than a decade ago, finding the right colors for her skin was not easy.

"I had to buy two shades and mix them to get my tone," she said. But things have changed for Perez, and - cosmetics experts say - for other women like her. Especially in the last several years, they say, companies have responded to the needs of non-white skin.

Local representatives said black women and the community's growing Hispanic population can now find their needs met by cosmetics options.

"We started with shades geared toward white skin," said Dene Sheppard, local Mary Kay sales director. "But we have 14 shades now, and we can mix those to create more."

"We have shades that will work with the golden undertone of many Hispanic women's skin," said Sherry Phillips, owner of Merle Norman in Big Spring Mall. "You can't put a pink-toned makeup on the golden undertones."

Merle Norman recently launched "international" colors designed to work with many skin shades. Mary Kay has also added to its palette, aiming to reach more women.

Sheppard said local salespeople serve a large Hispanic clientele, and Phillips said she hopes to increase her customer base in that group of women as they discover what options are available.

"It's exciting to be serving the largest growing population in Texas," Sheppard said.

"Hispanic women a lot of times have really good coloring," said Phillips. "Darker skin often has less blemishes and flaws than light skin." Sheppard warned that, although people with dark skin may not realize it, harmful rays of the sun affect all skin types and shades.

"Everyone needs to wear sunscreen on any skin that is exposed to the sun," she said.

Mary Kay expanded its eye shadow colors, increasing those that would work with medium skin tones. Bringing out the eyes is a focus of Mary Kay, but Sheppard pointed out, ophthalmologists have warned against a way of outlining the eyes that may be dangerous to the delicate tissues.

"They're saying don't rim the eyes inside, above the lower lashes," Sheppard said. "We advise keeping eyeliner below the lashes. And don't close it in on the inner corner at the nose. Keep it open, to open out the eye."

Merle Norman information says Hispanic women make up 9 percent of the total cosmetics market. It says one out of four American women is black, Hispanic or Asian, and they spend $1 billion a year on cosmetics.

The new corporate attitude has worked out well for Perez, who is happy with her options in Clinique, the brand she normally wears.

"I was shopping for makeup recently and I talked about that with the saleslady," she said. "They had several shades for darker skin. I guess they've accommodated the other colors."

Sherry Phillips, owner of Merle Norman in Big Spring Mall, shows one of the company's new shades of makeup. Responding to the needs of a diverse population, local cosmetics experts say companies have created shades of makeup for non-white skin.

Try a bunch of banana recipes

Bananas (the fruit of paradise) are good for you!

The banana tree is native to tropical Asia and was cultivated in India 4,000 years ago. The ancient Greeks referred to the fruit as "the remarkable Indian fruit tree." The Portuguese found bananas on the Guinea coast and carried them to the Canary Islands. In the 16th century, Spanish missionaries brought the fruit to tropical America.

Its botanical name, Musa sapientum, means fruit of the wise men. Man isn't the only creature who finds them delectable. A tropical American oriole is so fond of the fruit that it is called the banana bird. There are many species of bananas - red, green and plantains to mention a few. The plantain is not suited for eating raw, must be cooked and is treated more like a vegetable than a dessert.

There are about 85 calories in a medium banana and it is a good source of Vitamins A, B, C and potassium. They are low in fat and protein and high in carbohydrate and fiber.

There is no need to adhere to the old wives tale that says never put bananas in the refrigerator. It will turn the skins brown, but will not affect the flavor of ripe bananas. Actually, it is the only way to keep them for any length of time. If you find yourself with an abundance of overripe bananas just put them in a blender with a little lemon juice, puree and freeze for later use in recipes calling for mashed bananas.

Giving them shelter

Volunteers asked to fix dog houses

By DEBBIE LINCECUM

All any dog needs is food, love and a place to hide from the wind and rain.

On Saturday, volunteers will give their time and tools to improve a dog's life by rebuilding, painting and winterizing shelters at the Big Spring Humane Society.

"We call it helping hands for canines," said volunteer Margaret Lloyd. Many of the homes used by the shelter's nearly 200 dogs are deteriorating and badly in need of repair.

She and other humane society volunteers are trying to drum up support for the work day among local residents. Work will begin at 8:30 a.m., with hammering, sawing and painting continuing until 5 p.m.

With fresh straw piled in their winter retreats, the shelter's canine residents are hoped to be better-equipped for cold weather.

Local volunteers are asked to call

What: Helping Hands for Canines

When: All day Saturday

Where: Big Spring Humane Society shelter, West I-20.

Call: 267-7832

the shelter, 267-7832 or 267-5646, to confirm they will work. Lloyd said there will be jobs for people of all skill levels.

Many of the day's necessary supplies will be available at the shelter, but those with hammers and pry bars are asked to bring them and any other tools that might be useful. All tools brought by workers should be marked with the owner's name.

Around noon, the Big Spring Woman's Club will serve lunch for the workers. A snack and drinks will also be provided.

"We need helping hands," said Lloyd. "We hope to have a good turnout to get us ready for winter."

Growing numbers with no time to shop pay someone else to do it for them

Scripps Howard News Service

Embassy personnel, visitors to the United States from the Middle East and working women have something in common: They often use "personal shoppers."

Personal shoppers are employed by many of the nation's department stores to help cater to valued customers. Usually, the helpers have worked in sales and often have built up their own clientele.

"Personal shoppers are really an extension of our sales force," says Cheryl Engstrom, head of corporate media relations at Nordstrom. They are employed in the "Personal Touch" departments of each of the Seattle chain's 52 stores.

Bonnie McLaughlin, the personal shopper at Hecht's, in Washington, D.C., says most of her clients are "women who need professional clothes, Saudi and Iranian men who come in about twice a year to buy clothes for their wives and daughters, and embassy officials."

Like other personal shoppers, McLaughlin, who helps her clients select complete wardrobes, keeps profiles that include descriptions of their height and weight, hair and eye color, age, size and brand preferences.

"We're not here to change their style, just to enhance what they have," she says.

Patty Cumming, spokeswoman for Bloomingdale's, says many customers do their shopping by phone.

"We have a lot of women who don't come in," she says. "Some are simply wealthy and others are working and just don't have time to shop."

People do not have to be wealthy, however, to have a personal shopper. "There's a balance between the woman who buys three or four Chanel dresses every season for about $15,000 and the working woman who spends between $2,000 and $4,000 a year on her wardrobe," Cumming says.

Donna Robinson, manager of "Personal Touch" at Nordstrom's store in suburban Washington says she deals with customers who spend from a couple of hundred to a couple of thousand dollars a season.

"Our customers run the gamut - from secretaries to company presidents," she says. "Everybody is value conscious. Even those who have lots of money don't just drop it."

Robinson says that while a sales person on the floor might deal with 20 or 25 customers a day, a personal shopper "might work with two customers in a day."

The personal shopper works "in depth" with a customer, she says, so that "customers will be completely accessorized when they leave."

Personal shoppers help their customers do "one-stop shopping," according to Robinson. And the personal shopper builds up a regular clientele in the process.

"We're like hairdressers," she says. "Wherever we go, our customers go, too."

Much of the business of personal shoppers comes by referral. Other business - particularly that from overseas - comes through correspondence or telephone calls.

Lady Steers find winning combination

By STEVE REAGAN
Sportswriter

All season long, Big Spring volleyball coach Lois Ann McKenzie has been looking for the right combination - the winning combination - of players to put on the court.

Tuesday night, at least, she hit the jackpot. Led by Tequilla Marion and Kathy Smith, the Lady Steers powered to their first District 3-4A victory of the season Tuesday at Steer Gym, a 16-14, 15-11 win over the Sweetwater Lady Mustangs.

The win improves the Lady Steers' record to 6-10 overall and 1-2 in the District 3-4A standings. Sweetwater fell to 3-8 and 0-2 with the loss.

Marion and Smith were terrors at the service line and the net for Big Spring. Marion, a senior, had nine points on her serve and added six kills. Smith, one of the many juniors on the squad, added nine service points and eight kills.

"I thought Kathy and (Tequilla) had one of their best games of the year," McKenzie said. "As long as we're hitting the ball like we were tonight, we're OK."

However, the game started like it would be another in a frustrating string of losses for the Lady Steers, who are off to their worst start ever under McKenzie.

Marion started the first game with four straight points off her serve, but Sweetwater began nibbling at the deficit and later took the lead at 7-6 on an ace by Jennifer McCain. Slowly but surely, the Lady Mustangs built their lead, and when Laura Elrod netted a kill attempt later in the game, Sweetwater had game point at 14-8.

At that point, to use the vernacular, the Lady Steers stoned 'em.

Six times in that first game, Sweetwater had game point. And six times Big Spring had an answer. Smith fought off the first game point with a kill, and Sweetwater blew the second on a long serve.

Game point three ended with a Marion kill, and McCain was called for lifting the ball to waste number four. Game points five and six ended with mishits by Sweetwater, making the game 14-14.

The Lady Steers regained the advantage when Sweetwater's Kadee Barnes netted a kill attempt, giving Big Spring game point. The hosts needed no second chances - Marion produced a kill to give the Lady Steers the game.

"That was the difference," McKenzie said of her team's stand in game one. "They knew all along they could do it ... it just had to come from deep down."

The Lady Mustangs almost gave Big Spring a taste of its own medicine in game two. The Lady Steers again started fast, but kept building on their lead this time, eventually making the score 10-3 off five straight service points by Angie Powell.

McCain, who had seven points on serve, reeled off five straight to make the score 10-8, then an ace by Barnes and net shot by Powell knotted the game at 10-10.

The teams traded points before Smith apparently decided enough was enough, reeling off four straight points on serve to close out the game and the match.

The victory ended a clean sweep for Big Spring Tuesday. The Lady Steer freshmen downed Sweetwater 15-10, 10-15, 15-1 to improve to 5-5 for the season. Coach Traci Pierce credited Brandi Scott, Mandy Morrow, Amanda Hensley and Dee Hill with good games.

Big Spring also won the JV game, sweeping Sweetwater 15-7, 15-12. JV coach Angela Garis, whose squad improved to 5-9, cited the efforts of Molly Smith, Sarah Wetzel and Tosha Wilbert.

Big Spring returns to action Saturday when the Lady Steers travel to Pecos.

Rangers blow chance to move up

Seattle blanks Rangers, Jays win ninth straight game

By The Associated Press

At Seattle, Randy Johnson struck out 11 and moved within 12 strikeouts of becoming the eighth pitcher in American League history to reach 300. Seattle blanked Texas 8-0.

Johnson (18-8) pitched his third shutout and ninth complete game of 1993.

Ken Griffey Jr. hit his 42nd home run, moving within two of major league leader Juan Gonzalez. Charlie Leibrandt (9-10) took the loss for Texas, which remained 4 1/2 games behind Chicago in the AL West.

Angels 8, White Sox 0

At Anaheim, John Farrell and Steve Frey combined on a seven-hit shutout and Chili Davis, Chad Curtis and J.T. Snow each drove in two runs as California handed Chicago its 14th shutout loss.

The Florida Marlins are the only other team to be shut out that many times.

Farrell (3-11) won for the first time in 11 starts, scattering seven hits over 6 1-3 innings. Frey did not allow a hit.

Alex Fernandez (17-8) lost his second straight decision after winning his previous five.

"We just played terribly. I'm talking about offense, I'm talking defense and I'm talking pitching. It was an ugly one," Fernandez said.

Blue Jays 5, Red Sox 0

Just a few days ago, everybody was talking about how close the race was in the AL East.

Now, Toronto leads the division by five games - the largest lead any AL East team has had all season long.

The Blue Jays won their ninth in a row Tuesday night as Todd Stottlemyre pitched a three-hitter in a 5-0 shutout of Boston. New York lost 5-4 to Minnesota and third-place Baltimore rallied to down Cleveland 7-6.

If the Blue Jays can keep this up, their series this weekend against New York and their four-game set at Baltimore next weekend might not even matter.

"Championship teams have a way

Greg Litton of the Seattle Mariners slides across home plate to score as Texas catcher Ivan Rodriguez waits for a late throw during the eighth inning of their game Tuesday in Seattle. Litton was the third run to score on the play following a three-RBI double by teammate Dave Valle.

of turning it on when it comes down to crunch time," said Stottlemyre, whose spot in the starting rotation was solidified earlier Tuesday when the Jays announced that Jack Morris is out for the year with a damaged elbow ligament.

The Yankees and Orioles, on the other hand, tried to look for some positives.

"We're in a tough spot now," New York manager Buck Showalter said, "but it's been done before."

"I want the last 10 games in Baltimore to mean something," Baltimore rookie Jack Voigt said. "At this point, it's do or die. We've got to win every game we can."

Stottlemyre (11-10) struck out a career-high 10 in winning his third straight start. He walked one in his first complete game of the season and third career shutout.

Roger Clemens (11-14) took the loss for Boston, ensuring that he will not post a winning record for the first time in his major-league career.

Toronto got an RBI double from Joe Carter, an RBI triple from Tony Fernandez and a run-scoring groundout from Pat Borders. Two other runs scored on catcher Tony Pena's throwing error.

Twins 5, Yankees 4

At New York, light-hitting Pedro Munoz had two homers and drove in all Minnesota's runs against Jim Abbott (10-13), who has given up 14 runs and 25 hits in 15 1-3 innings since pitching a no-hitter against Cleveland on Sept. 4.

The Twins, losers of eight of 11 games, were coming off a three-game sweep by Toronto at the Metrodome.

"I tried to get the boys charged up against the Blue Jays and we lost three straight," manager Tom Kelly said. "I tried to do that again tonight."

This time, it worked. Willie Banks (10-11) got the victory, allowing three hits, five walks and three runs in 5 2-3 innings.

Orioles 7, Indians 6

At Cleveland, Baltimore managed to stay 5 1/2 games behind Toronto by rallying for two runs in the top of the ninth.

Cleveland went ahead 6-5 in the eighth on Kenny Lofton's single and a sacrifice fly by Candy Maldonado. But Baltimore benefitted from a throwing error by defensive replacement Alvaro Espinoza a half-inning later.

With runners on first and second and none out, Chris Hoiles bunted. Losing pitcher Jerry DiPoto (4-3) threw to third for an out, but Espinoza threw wildly past first in trying for the double play. Cal Ripken scored on the play and Hoiles went to third, and David Segui followed with a single that went in and out of the glove of a charging Albert Belle.

Alan Mills (5-3) got the win despite allowing two runs in the eighth.

Athletics 9, Royals 6

At Oakland, Calif., Ruben Sierra had three hits and three RBIs and Scott Hemond singled four times and scored three runs.

The Royals have lost three straight and six of their last eight to drop out of contention in the AL West.

Kelly Downs (5-9) pitched four innings of two-hit relief for the win, while Mark Gubicza (4-8) took the loss by allowing the go-ahead run in the sixth.

Brewers 7, Tigers 4

John Jaha's solo homer in the eighth broke a tie after Milwaukee rallied for a 4-1 deficit.

Jaha's 16th homer, on the first pitch from Storm Davis (2-8), made a winner of Mike Ignasiak (1-0).

Elbow injury shelves Morris

TORONTO (AP) - Jack Morris' brief, but successful stint with the Toronto Blue Jays may be over.

The Blue Jays announced Tuesday that Morris has a partial tear of his medial collateral ligament in his right elbow and will not pitch again this season.

Morris is in the second year of a two-year contract with an option for a third year.

"I was hoping he would be OK and be able to come back and give us two good games," Blue Jays manager Cito Gaston said.

Although Morris, 7-12 with a 6.19 ERA, has been relatively sharp in his last two starts, the ligament damage may be partly responsible for his ineffectiveness for most of the season.

Lady Steers going in the right direction

Calling this volleyball season Lois Ann McKenzie's winter of discontent might be a bit melodramatic - especially since it's only autumn - but these have been trying times for the Big Spring coach.

Her team is off to the worst start of her six-year tenure at Big Spring. Going into Tuesday's game with Sweetwater, the Lady Steers were 5-9 overall and 0-2 in District 3-4A.

It hasn't helped matters any that the team is relatively young - only two seniors are on the varsity. And McKenzie will be quick to point out that the rest of the district, with the possible exception of a team or two, is improved this year.

But the worst thing about this season, McKenzie says, is that she's been unable to put the right players into the right spots at the right time.

"This year's been hard in that it's taken us a long time to find a lineup that clicks," McKenzie says. "That's what we're dealing with - trying to find which ones click with the other. It took me longer with this team than any other."

Notice that McKenzie used the past tense in that last sentence. That's because she just may have found the right combination of players to use, as evidenced by the Lady Steers' victory over Sweetwater Tuesday in Steer Gym.

The 16-14, 15-11 win may or may not be a season-saver for Big Spring, but it definitely marked a turning point. Until Tuesday, good games had been few and far between for the Lady Steers.

To say that Big Spring struggled earlier in the season would be an understatement.

Even McKenzie added to the problems, calling a time out she didn't have in the Lady Steers' district-opening loss to San Angelo Lake View.

But, for Tuesday at least, all that changed. It's hard to put a finger on what exactly was different, but the Lady Steers played like a team possessed against Sweetwater.

Particularly impressive was the defensive stand Big Spring had when it faced game point at 14-8 in game one. Earlier in the season, the Lady Steers probably would have lost that game, but not Tuesday. Led by Tequilla Marion, Kathy Smith and Angie Powell, Big Spring not only drew even with Sweetwater, but passed the Lady Mustangs to win the game and eventually the match.

"Basically, there's just a whole different attitude," McKenzie said. "That's the bottom line. They're beginning to believe in themselves ... It's just a whole new team than it was two weeks ago."

A change in attitude, making lemonade out of lemons ... not novel concepts, but maybe they can salvage a season. Stay tuned.

Gretzky signs with Kings

By The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Wayne Gretzky has agreed to sign a new three-year $25.5 million contract with the Los Angeles Kings, making him the highest paid player in the National Hockey League, team officials said Tuesday.

Gretzky, 32, the all-time leading scorer in the NHL, will earn $8.5 million per season, according to Kings owner Bruce McNall. That is more than double his current $3 million annual salary.

The new three-year deal supercedes his previous 10-year contract signed when he joined the team in August 1988.

"With the contract, Wayne has made a commitment to dedicate the next three years toward bringing the Stanley Cup to the fans of Los Angeles," said McNall.

Team spokesman Scott Carmichael said the deal was finalized Tuesday afternoon, and Gretzky is expected to sign in the next few days.

Carmichael said Gretzky will be paid $4 million this year, and receive another $4.5 million in a deferred payment at a later date.

Gretzky is entering his sixth season with the Kings and his 15th in the NHL. Gretzky is just 36 goals short of Gordie Howe's all-time record of 801, a level once thought untouchable.

The NHL's next highest-paid player is the Pittsburgh Penguins' Mario Lemieux, who earns an average $6 million per year in a 7-year contract.

Other top earners include the Montreal Canadiens' Patrick Roy, who signed a new contract last week for $4 million a year, and Philadelphia's Eric Lindros, who earns $3.5 million.

McNall said the deal recognized Gretzky's contribution to the Kings and the sport of hockey.

"Wayne has been a true ambassador for the sport of hockey, not only here in Southern California, but all across North America," McNall said.

"It is no secret that Wayne and I have enjoyed a relationship that transcends the hockey arena since he came here five years ago," McNall said. "At the same time, I had made a promise to both Wayne and Walter (Gretzky's father) that he would always be the highest paid player in hockey as long as he was a member of the Los Angeles Kings."

Five cities fight for NFL teams

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO — The leader of a group trying to get an NFL expansion franchise for St. Louis added a mystery element to the bid Tuesday, saying he was ready to add another major investor to his group.

Jerry Clinton, who became managing partner of the St. Louis NFL Partnership earlier this month after buying out former leader James Busch Orthwein, would not identify the investor to the league's finance and expansion committees.

The addition of the unidentified investor potentially strengthens the St. Louis application. Orthwein, who owns the New England Patriots and remains a limited partner in the St. Louis effort, has been said to be worth as much as $200 million.

The other four finalists for an expansion team, which will begin play in 1995, are Baltimore, Charlotte, N.C., Memphis, Tenn., and Jacksonville, Fla. The five cities were selected as finalists in May 1992.

It is anticipated two expansion franchises will be awarded at the league's fall meetings in Chicago on Oct. 26-28.

Baltimore had two groups bidding for a franchise. One is led by Leonard "Boogie" Weinglass, who owns clothing stores. The other group is headed by Malcolm Glazer, a Florida investor. Baltimore is the only bidder with two groups vying for a franchise.

Maryland Gov. William Schaefer accompanied the Baltimore groups.

A team in Baltimore probably would play in Memorial Stadium, home of the Colts before they moved to Indianapolis, for one year, then switch to a new stadium adjacent to Oriole Park at Camden Yards.

Jacksonville, represented by mayor Ed Austin and J. Wayne Weaver, managing partner of the bidding group, had dropped out of the race several months ago. Then the city and the bidding group agreed on a stadium lease, including $121 million in improvements to the Gator Bowl.

Also included in the St. Louis group is NFL career rushing leader Walter Payton.

Houston's Mark Portugal delivers a pitch against the San Francisco Giants in the fifth inning of their game in Houston Tuesday. Portugal won his 10th game in a row, setting a team record, as the Astros downed the Giants 6-0.

Phillies, Braves step closer to titles

By The Associated Press

Magic numbers can't be taken too seriously until they are below 10. Well, it's time to get serious in both divisions of the National League.

The Philadelphia Phillies, who haven't won the NL East since 1983, cut their magic number to clinch to seven with a 5-3 victory over the Florida Marlins, while Montreal was losing to Atlanta 18-5.

The Braves, the NL champions the past two seasons, cut their magic number to nine with the easy win over the Expos, coupled with Houston's 6-0 victory over San Francisco.

What makes the pennant chase more interesting is that the teams with the magic numbers meet this weekend in Philadelphia, setting up the possibility that both could clinch on the same night at the same place.

The Braves came up big in the matchup of the NL's two hottest teams. The Expos led 3-1 after three innings, but Atlanta had a seven-run fourth and added six in the fifth as Fred McGriff and Terry Pendleton combined for five hits, three homers and nine RBIs in the two innings.

John Smoltz (15-10) cruised as Atlanta won for the 32nd time in 39 games, while the Expos lost for just the fourth time in 23 games.

The Braves are 3 1/2 in front of San Francisco, and Philadelphia's lead is 5 1/2 over the Expos.

The Braves had 16 hits, helping the Braves match the club record for runs.

Astros 6, Giants 0

The last thing the Giants needed to see was Mark Portugal starting for the Astros. The right-hander threw a three-hitter and improved his career mark against San Francisco to 11-3.

"I go to the mound feeling I can beat any team, but I feel confident against the Giants," Portugal said. "I'm sure they are second-guessing some of the things that they did."

That was in reference to the reports the Giants were thinking of trading for Portugal (16-4) as the pennant race wore on.

"I wish we would have gotten him when we had an opportunity to. He would have been a big help with us on this side of the diamond," said Barry Bonds, who went 0-for-4. "Instead, we had to face him and unfortunately, he slammed the door on us."

The Giants had won four in a row, but Portugal, who tied a team record with his 10th consecutive victory, allowed just three singles, and only one runner reached third base.

The Astros had a three-run third against Salomon Torres (2-3) to make it 4-0.

Dodgers 5, Reds 3

The Reds lost their 11th in a row, falling in 11 innings after tying it in the bottom of the ninth. Jody Reed had a sacrifice fly and Brett Butler doubled in the final run in the 11th as Cincinnati matched its longest losing streak in 27 years.

Mets 4, Pirates 3

Dave Gallagher drove in three runs with a homer and a double and Dave Telgheder (4-2) remained the only Mets pitcher with a winning record. New York ended an 11-game losing streak at Three Rivers Stadium and won in Pittsburgh for just the sixth time in 30 games.
