Democratic family builds responsibility

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the eighth of a 13-part series on life-management skills. Stories run once a week.

By PATRICK DRISCOLL

Staff Writer

Remember the adage, "A man's home is his castle?" That concept was a matter of survival in Medieval times because it taught children how to live in a feudalistic society. The family today is still a microcosm of society, but that means children now must learn democratic principles to function. An example is making decisions through a family council.

Council supports hike trail

By PATRICK DRISCOLL

Staff Writer

A 2-1/2 mile hike and bike trail that would wind through Big Spring State Park and along Wasson Road bordering Comanche Trail Park is garnering support.

It may be just the beginning of several such trails in the community.

A state grant for the $120,000 project must have full community support before a Nov. 2 application date, and later, 10 percent in matching funds. That's 10 percent after donated in-kind services are subtracted from costs. Price Construction Inc. and Strickland & Knight Inc. may do some $46,000 worth of donated work.

"We feel like nature trails are really the going trend in tourism," said Marae Brooks, director of the Big Spring Visitors and Convention Bureau, who addressed the Big Spring City Council Tuesday. "We would like to see a lot of nature trails in Big Spring.

The council gave initial approval but criticized a stipulation that inkind service cannot be used as part of matching funds, as it can in other grants.

"That doesn't seem right," said Councilman Ladd Smith.

"That doesn't sound logical," said Councilman Charles Beil.

Brooks said local matching-funds could be used to purchase right-ofway. Local Convention Bureau tax money, up $40,000 last year, could be used. Civic groups will also be contacted.

Big Spring Independent School District Assistant Superintendent Murray Murphy wholeheartedly supports the plan, according to a letter he wrote to the local office of the Texas Department of Transportation. The trail would go by Marcy Elementary School and could be used by school children.

"From a safety standpoint to our children, I feel this would be a wonderful addition to our city," Murray said in the Oct. 22 letter.

In other action Tuesday, the council agreed on the first of two readings to allow jet skiing at Moss Creek Lake. It'll be on a one-year trial

Lineup booth sheriff's new tool against crime

By JANET AUSBURY Staff Writer

The Howard County Sheriff's Office has added a new tool for fighting crime - a lineup identification booth.

Located in the basement of the courthouse, the booth looks very similar to those shown on television. Six separate height charts are posted on the back wall. In the room where the victim sits, a two-way mirror allows the victim to see the suspect lineup without being seen, and a layer of plastic glass on the mirror ensures that it cannot be broken by an angry suspect. A two-way PA system allows deputies to communicate with the suspects in the booth. A dimmer switch controls the lighting in the room where the victim sits, darkening the room so visibility from the suspect's view is zero. Floodlights in the booth allow for better illumination of suspects' features. Metal mesh coverings secure the glass on the doors to the booth and the viewing room. As an extra safety precau-tion, the viewing room is locked and a deputy is always with the person viewing the lineup. Deputy Investigator Tony Chavez is

Charges against Hutchison dropped

The Associated Press

AUSTIN — Allegations that U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison used her previous office for political and personal gain are being taken to another grand jury, prosecutors said.

On Tuesday, State District Judge Mike Lynch dismissed indictments charging Mrs. Hutchison with official misconduct.

The indictments were dropped after Mrs. Hutchison's lawyers discovered that the grand jury which handed them up included a juror who was ineligible because of a charge pending against him since 1988 for a $20 hot check.

A second grand jury has resumed the investigation into Mrs. Hutchison, prosecutors said. A former aide to Mrs. Hutchison when she was state treasurer was subpoenaed Tuesday.

Mrs. Hutchison, a Republican, was indicted Sept. 27 on charges of using her previous office as state treasurer for personal and political purposes and then destroying records as part of a coverup.

She has denied any wrongdoing and calls the charges a Democratic plot to discredit her.

Mrs. Hutchison's attorneys filed motions to have the charges dismissed because of the improperly seated grand juror. Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle had agreed.

But on Monday, Mrs. Hutchison's defense team surprised State District Judge Mike Lynch by asking that the charges stand so that Mrs. Hutchison's trial could start as initially scheduled Nov. 29

Instead of the grand jury charges, Mrs. Hutchison's attorney Dick DeGuerin said she could face charges, called an information,

Parents to be fined in juvenile shootings

PASADENA (AP) — The Pasadena City Council has approved an ordinance that would fine parents up to $500 if their juvenile children are involved in shootings.

"It's another tooth in the hound's mouth to stop crime in Pasadena," Mayor Johnny Isbell said following Tuesday's 7-1 vote that approved the law calling for fines if parents allow their children, age 17 and under, to get their hands on a gun.

Some residents of the Houston suburb had asked council members to postpone action on the measure until a section on gun safety education could be included.

Isbell, however, said he thought it was important to pass the ordinance as proposed and that it will be finetuned in months to come.

"Education is extremely important in gun control," he said. "Do not leave guns lying around on the dining room table or coffee table. The ordinance is directed at parents."

If those offers sound too good to be true, that's because they are, prosecutors said Tuesday in announcing legal action by 10 states against 70 firms and individuals in a nationwide crackdown on telemarketing fraud. The states whose attorneys general announced actions Tuesday were Arizona, Florida, Iowa, Minnesota, Nevada, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Washington and Wisconsin. However, the targeted companies and individuals were from all over, including California, Colorado, Connecticut, Maine, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania and Texas.

'In the hands of a con artist, a phone is an assault weapon," said Minnesota Attorney General Hubert H. Humphrey III, president of the National Association of Attorneys General. He urged people to "learn how to hang up, to tear up the offer' that promises too much for too little.

Nobody is giving anything away these days," Humphrey said, cautioning that if it's really a free 'prize," it shouldn't cost a dime. "If it sounds like a steal, it probably is, right out of your own pocket."

WASHINGTON - Just about everyone in Congress favors some type of health reform bill. Now President Clinton's trick is to work with liberal and conservative Democrats and moderate Republicans to cobble together a plan that can pass.

The bargaining is just beginning," said Rep. Jim Cooper, D-Tenn., sponsor of a rival "managed competition" bill that has backing from lawmakers in both parties and congressional

"We go into a new phase now it's called seriousness," said Sen. Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va., a supporter of Clinton's plan who vows to make sure all the alternate plans now before Congress get equal scrutiny.

With Clinton's formal delivery of the plan to Congress coming today, some lawmakers spoke of a monthslong battle ahead. Congressional committees will pore over the fine print and then make changes. No floor votes are expected until well into 1994.

Yet there was also talk of conciliation and compromise — even from those opposed to much of Clinton's "Everybody's going to have to move a little to the left and a little to the right," said Sen. John Breaux, D-La., who is backing a "managed competition" plan of his own. Like Cooper's, it would be less costly and regulatory than Clinton's.

'We've already got Democrats talking to Republicans and Republicans talking to Democrats — we didn't have that on the budget,"

Breaux and Cooper, both conservative Democrats, are holding meetings with moderate Senate Republicans, led by Sen. John Chafee of Rhode Senate Finan ce Committee Chairman Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., a key player in the health reform debate, greets first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton as she arrives on Capitol Hill Tuesday. President and Mrs. Clinton are due to bring the 1,600-page health reform bill to Capitol Hill today, five weeks after the president's initial pitch.

Clinton's challenge will be to weave a compromise with those two groups - or one group if they unite — but also bring in liberal Democrats backing a system where the government would pay all the bills.

Enthusiasts for Clinton's plan say they'll focus, at least for the next couple of months, on contrasting the administration proposal with the others. They note that the Breaux-Coop-

Wofford dismissed the idea that Breaux and Cooper, if they joined forces with Senate Republicans, could be a potent political force that "People seem to be beating war drums," Wofford said, but the American people don't want to see nasty political fights. "There's still a lot of good will ... Let's wait a while before we start lining up in battalions," he Wofford, while pushing Clinton's plan, also sounded willing to compromise. He noted that the president was forced to accept less than he originally wanted on his national service plan to provide college aid.

Denny trial documents, jurors describe heated deliberations in case

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES - Acrimony and confusion about the law hampered jurors struggling to reach verdicts in the racially charged Reginald Denny beating trial, court documents and juror interviews show.

One juror accused another of being too stupid to reach a verdict. Another described tense deliberations punctuated by the chants of protesters demonstrating outside the courtroom.

"It was the day of the verdicts and we could hear them outside, the chanting of the megaphone. I thought, 'Oh my God, these people are waiting for this verdict," one juror told the Washington Post in an interview published today

Juror No. 307, a 22-year-old Hispanic woman, said the jury's relatively light verdicts were not reached out of fear of starting another riot. Rather, prosecutors had aimed "for the highest charges they could when half the time the charge wasn't really relevant," she said.

A riot victim, however, condemned the verdicts as a victory for mob rule, even though the jury convicted Damian Williams of misdemeanor assault for throwing an object at her car as she drove through an intersection.

"The message this sends out is that hoodlums run the city and everyone is too scared to do anything about it," said Alicia Maldonado, who said she planned to

"When the city sinks and is run by the Bloods and the Crips, I'm going to be somewhere else reading about it in the paper," Maldonado said Tuesday.

Williams and Henry Watson, both black, were acquitted of the most serious charges in the attack on Denny, a white trucker, and eight others at the flashpoint of the April 1992 rioting.

The riots began hours after four white policemen accused of the beating of black motorist Rodney King were acquitted of most charges in state court.

Watson was convicted of a reduced charge of misdemeanor and analysis assault in the videotaped Denny and California Attorney General Dan attack. Williams was convicted of felony mayhem for throwing a brick at Denny's head, and four misdemeanor assaults in attacks on other motorists.

During the trial, five jurors were replaced by alternates, including two after deliberations began. The final jury included four blacks, four Hispanics, two Asians and two whites. Panel members haven't been identified.

Documents unsealed Tuesday by Superior Court Judge John Ouderkirk show that Ouderkirk decided to sequester the jury after one member, who had been dismissed for discussing the case, received death threats.

The juror, a black man, was dismissed Sept. 29, two days before deliberations began. He was accused of boasting to acquaintances that "We got Williams," keeping a file of newspaper clippings about the case and discussing plans to write a book about his experience, documents

The juror denied talking or reading about the case, but Ouderkirk dismissed him anyway. He was relocated at court expense after he received death threats, the transcripts showed.

The unsealed documents included a note Ouderkirk received from a white male juror who wrote that a black female colleague was too stupid to deliberate.

The woman was removed over defense objections for failing to deliberate or comprehend deliberations. In a message to the judge released earlier, the jury's forewoman, who is black, said there was unanimous agreement among the other jurors that the woman wasn't able to deliberate.

An alternate juror who appeared on CNN's "Larry King Live" Tuesday night claimed some jurors were biased. The woman, who is white, declined at first to specify the race of the jurors she considered biased.

Pressed by King, the woman, who did not participate in deliberations, said: "OK, I believe that there was a racial issue in it, but it didn't come from the light-skinned jurors."

Congress seals death of super collider

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The super collider may be history, but Texans are working to ensure that the scientific and technological developments already made aren't buried along with the controversial atom smasher.

Texas Gov. Ann Richards has scheduled meetings today with President Clinton and Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary to discuss the termination of the $11 billion program.

Gubernatorial press secretary Bill Cryer said Richards has a twofold mission: ensuring that Texas recoups its $400 million investment and seeking administration commitments to salvage as much as possible of the work already done near Waxahachie,

Experience

La Premiere Editor:

There is a phenomenon in our very midst that if you have not yet experienced you should make the time to in your very near future.

I have had the honor of watching these young men at rehearsals where there concentration is so intense that they are oblivious to anything or anyone around them. In their eyes is mirrored all the opportunities their collective efforts and talents will no doubt, garner them.

On stage, like a meteor with all its awesome beauty and force explodes upon entering earths atmosphere so does Big Spring's Premier group La Primera!

They are transformed into showmen who transcend the generations. I have watched audiences reaction to their performance and like a cobra that mesmerizes its captives so deep La Primera. They are contagious! Worth catching. As individual as their talents are their personalities. They come together so well. Jimmy, Tom Olague Jr., Johnny Saldivar, Roman Ortega, Johnny Lozano, Manuel Richard Hilario, Mae Fierro along with their manager Junior Moreno are to be commended for their talents. As a former San Antonioian let me tell you that when they went up against 38 bands and came up fifth - they were superb! San Antonio is to Tejano Music what Nashville is to country! It is practically unheard of in South Texas to even consider anyone from West Texas. Tejano music is dominated by South Texans! I'm impressed to say the least.

answer

Re your editorial of Wednesday, 20 October, apparently F. Scott McCown has a preference in the "equitably" funded school situation. There is no easy answer to this mess our legislators have saddled us with. In the first place, money is not the answer to the education problem. And SB-7 CERTAINLY isn't, though it has some good points, I guess. It includes an incentive for an increase in the pregnancy rate of school kids through the Compensatory Education Allotment. $10,000,000 has been appropriated and set aside for distribution, with "preference to the districts that apply that have the highest concentration of students who are pregnant or who are parents.'

If money were the answer, then Sommervell County, or Glen Rose, should have straight-A students, with nothing less than salutatorians graduating. Unfortunately, such is not the case.

And Forsan should be up there close to Glen Rose with their graduates. But such is not the case.

Mandated school equal funding will probably be in the courts for years to come, and cost you and I billions of dollars.

"When one form of tax is substituted for another, it's the same taxpayers who foot the bill," says Gov. Richards. This is true - as long as be permanent until we have resolved how much money is needed in the system to provide a good education, and whether we should continue to rely on property taxes as a major funding source.'

There is another source of funding available that apparently meets all the requirements. The Alliance for Quality Education, AQE, their plan would repeal the local business property tax for schools. The franchise/earned surplus tax, which is paid only by corporations, would also be eliminated. "The single broad-based replacement tax would be levied against all businesses in the state equally, based on their economic activity in Texas, with very small businesses and agriculture exempted. Economic models show that such a tax would increase economic growth in the state by making the tax system more efficient" say AQE leaders. And this plan would also bring tax relief for homeowners as well. As it stands now, everyone loses. And proposition 4 is in the same category as Robin Hood, only this one is hydra-headed, or as the plains Indian used to say - "He speaks with forked tongue.

Only through active voters participation can these problems be solved. A fellow told me the other day that if he didn't understand the amendment, he automatically voted against it. This may not be the proper attitude, but at least he voted.

Thanks for your time. In closing let me say that it gives me a good feeling knowing that these very talented young men are bringing attention to Big Spring from all over Texas and parts of New Mexico. Continued notority and success for all your hard work and talents. Adelante con exito!

Paying for health security

Scripps Howard News Service

"Health security" is the promise of the 1,600-page reform bill President Clinton is scheduled to unveil Wednesday. Congress's job is to make sure well-intentioned reforms don't plunge the country deeper into fiscal insecurity.

Both experience and theory send up warning flares. For one thing, government's record of accurately forecasting the price of new programs is abysmal. For another, the administration's reliance on dubious spending caps and huge savings from programs budgeteers have been squeezing for years is grounds for steely skepticism.

In the past, creators of entitlements have failed to reconcile their urge to do good with their duty to pay for the goodies. Medicare's designers, for example, back in 1965, said the program would cost $9 billion in 1990 - by which year the actual figure was $106 billion. Such benefit programs have brought us deficits that add $1 billion a day to our government's unprecedented $4 trillion debt.

Entitlement outlays are said to be on "automatic pilot" because they don't require annual appropriations by Congress. Instead, they are determined by the number of eligible people and by fixed formulas that establish the level of benefits. Such mandatory spending - on Medicare, Medicaid, Social Security, welfare, unemployment and so on already consumes most of the federal budget.

The innovation President Clinton proposes is the mother of all entitlements: guaranteed health care for every American from cradle to grave. True, employers and workers would shoulder most of the cost. But the government-subsidized groups - the poor (28 percent of whom now have no health insurance, public or private), the unemployed, workers in small firms, early retirees - are large, and their numbers vary with the state of the econ-

Other variables outside government's control abound. Economists warn of the "woodwork effect": After Clinton expands drug coverage for the elderly, say, unexpected claimants will appear. Technological innovation and the emergence of new diseases (think of the costly AIDS epidemic) are unpredictable. The White House recently announced that it will set a legal ceiling on the amount of these subsidies. But if spending hits the ceiling before the end of the year, what yields, health security or fiscal restraint? Which of its legal promises will government break?

As for the $238 billion the administration claims it can save out of Medicare and Medicaid, all debate must begin with the verdict of the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, Daniel Patrick Moynihan: This figure is "fantasy."

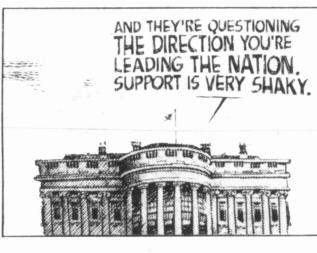

President Clinton has done a remarkable job of galvanizing a national consensus behind health care reform.

Squawking from some 50 zealous residents from the Wasson Road area got Big Spring a better deal on the four-acre Wal-Mart Stores Inc. supercenter expected to be open by Christmas next year.

Many in Big Spring were content just to get a supercenter. It didn't matter if it was going to be located near residential areas and serviced by Wasson, where at FM 700 it's already one of the city's most hazardous traffic spots. In fact, publication that Wal-Mart rejected a Northside location in favor of Wasson didn't deter two of the most ardent supporters, Pat DeAnda, then a city councilwoman representing the Northside, and her opponent for the council seat, Stephanie Horton. Petitions circulated separately by both gathered about 6,000 signatures, the largest as far as can be determined - on a single issue ever presented to city

"We need it. That's progress. They can put it in my back yard," DeAnda

Not all felt as strongly. Of 110 polled by telephone in April by the Big Spring Herald, 76 said Wasson was a good location for it but 26 said it wasn't, while eight didn't have an opinion. However, 109 said they wanted a supercenter here while just one said no.

Many of the grumblers around Wasson said they wanted a supercenter here too. They just didn't want it in their back yard. Despite several publicly saying that, the group still had to fight off "antiprogress" labels as well as field numerous anonymous and often nasty phone calls.

The homeowners group that formed to prepare for a zoning battle met privately with Wal-Mart and city officials in March to discuss concerns. At the meeting City Manager Lanny Lambert asked Wal-Mart to again consider three other sites, including Highland Mall.

It got more interesting. First, it looked like Wal-Mart might pull the plug, reportedly a scare tactic they use in other other communities too. Then it looked like Furrs-Bishop's Cafeterias Inc. was getting blamed for not negotiating a buyout of their lease at Highland.

Well, Furrs' officials, not wanting a bad rap, promptly refuted the charges and made a trip from Lubbock to Big Spring to set the record straight. At one point, Furrs Vice President Randy Egenbacher bluntly asked, "What do people in Big Spring want to happen?"

gave it my best shot, based on reports from both sides.

Make a deal with Wal-Mart to build a new Furrs restaurant in the supercenter parking lot. Highland businesses, already accustomed to competing with Wal-Mart, could help fill up Big Spring Mall or downtown buildings. Dunlap's could move into the vacated J.C. Penny space. The city and other organizations could assist Highland businesses to

Then you have a full mall instead of two half-full malls - actually Highland was only a third full, an aging mall replaced with a sparkling new building at the city's most highly trafficked corner and possibly a owntown that's a little livelier. It almost happened that way.

Egenbacher, eager to make sure

Furrs didn't get stuck with blame of a sour deal, kept the media abreast of negotiations. He even announced details of his firm's verbal agreement as well as Wal-Mart plans a month before corporate heads at flatfooted Wal-Mart allowed their public relations people to say anything. The new Furrs restaurant will open in March between Texaco and Pizza Hut.

Big Spring Mall got seven new businesses, with possibly more coming. Dunlap's is staying, apparently Jean Saint Geours (center), president of the French National Securities Commission, talks with Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari and Luis Miguel Moreno, president of the International Securities Organization, at Los Pinos, the presidential residence in Mexico City Tuesday. The three were attending the opening of the International Securities Organization's 18th annual meeting. President Salinas has made the proposed North American Free Trade Agreement the centerpiece of his economic overhaul since taking office in 1988.

Mexican economy prepares for possibile NAFTA failure

The Associated Press

MEXICO CITY — Investors remain bullish on Mexico and the North American Free Trade Agreement, despite opposition on Capitol Hill and a new government in Ottawa that may ask for changes to the pact.

But even as investors continued to pour cash into the Mexican Stock Exchange, driving the Bolsa to another record high on Tuesday, analysts say Mexico's economy is bracing for a possible NAFTA failure.

President Carlos Salinas de Gortari has made NAFTA the centerpiece of his economic overhaul since taking office in 1988. The government has pocketed more than $22 billion by selling off most of Mexico's 1,155 state-owned companies, slashed debt and controlled rampant inflation.

Salinas now hopes continental free trade will haul Mexico out of the cent of its exports to the United States, has the most to lose should the pact fail.

Passage of the accord is assured in Mexico. But on Monday, Canadian voters threw out the Conservative government that negotiated the treaty for Canada, and elected the Liberals under Jean Chretien, who has said he wants parts of the pact renegotiated.

But U.S. lawmakers may save him the trouble. Despite White House support, some Clinton administration officials concede NAFTA would probably be defeated in Congress if a vote were held today.

Mexico will remain an attractive place to invest, deal or no deal, said Mexico City economist Sergio Martin. The markets have already forseen the possibility that NAFTA might not be approved," he said. But free trade's failure will hurt, frightening away investors and slowing growth, experts say. "Over the short term, some investors will be scared away," said economic commentator Sergio reforms on NAFTA. If NAFTA is not Sarmiento. "In the long term, our signed it could fracture" the ruling trade will suffer, and we will have trouble getting our products into the Most of all Mexico needs NAFTA to ensure a continuing flow of foreign investment. Salinas has tried to assure investors that Mexico's economy is solid without NAFTA.

While the economy has slowed recently, Mexico is growing again as Salinas has tamed inflation, lifted trade barriers and imposed discipline on public finances.

Now he wants the pact to reassure investors and prevent successors from backsliding into protectionism after he leaves office in December

But the deal's rejection would be a blow to Salinas and his ruling party, said columnist Raymundo Riva Palacio of the business daily El

A suggested complaint procedure starts with defining the problem and determining if it's still a problem, clarifying it using active listening reflecting back what you understand the problem is, brainstorming and respecting all input, and reaching a decision by consensus, not a vote. Action can be postponed if a consensus cannot be reached.

Of course, in matters of health and welfare, a parent must step in and make a decision, Moughon said. "Sometimes there's no room for a family decision."

For example, a necessitated move to another town must be decided by parents. However, the move or other decision can be discussed and feelings shared in family council. Some problems created by the move could also be solved in council.

Some suggested ground rules include, everyone has an equal voice, everyone's opinions get heard, avoid airing disappointments of others opinions, don't deal with problems owned by others such as a child and a divorced parent, choose a comfortable place with everybody seated in equal positions and keep it short.

Sharing support

Local diabetics will gather Nov. 9

By DEBBIE LINCECUM Features Editor

When Jason Key, 10, found out less than a year ago that he had diabetes, his reaction was normal.

"I didn't like it," said the robust, active kid. Hearing Jason's admission, Brittney Phillips nodded. The eighth grader has felt the same dread.

But Tina Smith is an old hand. She's had diabetes 30 years, coping with complications of all sorts - even the need for a kidney transplant. Both she and her husband Louie have become expert in her care, and still learn some thing new all the

"When I was a kid, I had this pet duck," Tina told Jason and Brittney recently. "I named it Daffy the diabetic duck just so I'd have some company. I didn't want to be the only one with diabetes.

Through their friendship, this group has found help and support. Now they want to reach out to others with diabetes. An informational meeting will be conducted Nov. 9 at 7 p.m. in the Scenic Mountain Medical Center classroom.

From that meeting, the Smiths and other local families hope to form a diabetic support group

"First, we want to have an open forum, find out what people might want from the group," said Louie Smith.

"It helps a lot just to talk to other people dealing with the disease, said Billie Miller, Brittney's grand-mother. "You'd be surprised how comes the idea of a support group.

Signs, symptoms

Type I diabetes normally begins in young people, but can occur in adults. Symptoms, which almost always come on suddenly, include:

 increased thirst. increased passing of urine. sudden weight loss.

 increased hunger. •feeling very tired.

Type II diabetes, which most often begins in those over 40, can include the following symptoms: ·feeling tired. slow-healing cuts or sores.

 dry, itchy skin. frequent infections. •frequent passing of urine.

 blurred eyesight. sexual problems. numbness or tingling in hands increased hunger and/or Brittney participates in cheerleading and gymnastics; Jason has kept playing football. They have no need for words like "sick.

"Brittney says she's not sick," Miller said. "She can tell you that her pancreas just doesn't work like it should to make insulin.

Jason enjoyed a summer trip to a special camp, where he spent time among 400 other kids who were learning to control their diabetes.

Jason Key, Brittney Phillips, Tina Smith and Louie Smith look over information about a support group they are planning to meet for the first time Nov. 9. They hope to establish regular meetings for the organization, designed to share ideas for coping with diabetes for people of all ages.

"Doctors know the basics, and they tell you what they know," Key said. "But people with it will learn other things.

"Tricks of the trade," Tina Smith agreed.

Main concern for American Diabetes Association staffers Martha Atwood, regional director, and Holly Whitefield, field representative, is the word "support" in the new group's name.

"That's most important, supporting each other," Atwood said. "Listening to others helps.

"There are a lot of things they can share," agreed Whitefield.

American Diabetes The Association (ADA) estimates there are 830,000 Texans with the disease, and 14 million Americans. Ironically, half of those don't know they have it.

Diabetes is divided into Type I and Type II, the latter being noninsulindependent. Although 90 percent of diabetics have Type II, both types can carry many of the same compli-

"The whole key is to take care of yourself," Atwood said. "You've got to stick to your diet and exercise.

It's a good thing he took the extra time, though, because that's how he met Mamie, who became his wife. They both graduated from Stephen F. Austin in 1932.

Floyd and his brother, Otis, who enrolled the same day, are two of five surviving charter students of the university. They will be honored this weekend at homecoming ceremonies there, riding atop a special parade float among other honors.

Floyd expects to see more than former classmates during his trip to Nacogdoches. His family lived in the area for many years, so he has friends to look up.

When he thinks back, Floyd can't imagine what his life would have been like if he had stayed a high school dropout.

'My father was a carpenter," he explained. "I dropped out to go to work at Christmas and just stayed. I was out all the the next year, and the next year at Christmas, the superintendent called for me. I thought he had a job for me.'

But the superintendent wanted to convince Floyd to come back to school, and the young man agreed.

Dynamic duo dominates, forms top tennis tandem

By STEVE REAGAN Sportswriter

Looking at Greg Biddison and Rob Lee, one gets the idea that maybe opposites do attract.

Lee and Biddison, the number-one doubles team for the Big Spring High School tennis team, are about as physically opposite as you could expect. One is tall and lanky, while the other is short and solidly built.

And the Mutt and Jeff comparisons don't stop there. Biddison (the tall one) prefers a slashing, volleying, rush-the-net style of play, while Lee would rather grind it out on the baseline.

Tennis definitely has a place in Biddison's future.

Lee wouldn't mind playing tennis in college, but plans to concentrate on academics.

Despite the differences, however, one thing the duo does well together is win tennis matches. They've only been beaten twice this year, and both times were in practice matches with players from Lubbock Country Club that didn't count in the regular season standings.

But it is those two losses that most stick in their coach's craw.

"They've only lost those two matches, but those are exactly the kind of matches we'll play at the regional tournament (this weekend in Lubbock)," Ralph Davis said. "That's what we needed, to have to good, close matches and be pressed. We shouldn't go in overconfident."

ROB LEE

Don't get the wrong idea. Davis doesn't write off the duo as a couple of loafers. He just sees the potential for bigger and better things.

"These guys could be the state champions of Texas if they get quality competition and their work ethic toward practice changes," he said.

For their part, Biddison and Lee admit that their work ethic during team practices could be better.

"Yeah, pretty much," Lee said. "It gets kind of boring when you play the same guys over and over ... I'm not really sure of what we're capable of right now.

"I don't think we've really been pushed at all this year," Biddison said of the team's undefeated record.

This weekend ... if we concentrate, we can beat them.'

About the best competition the two have faced so far is in practice, where they play each other.

"(Biddison) is probably better than anyone in district," Lee said.

"Probably?" Biddison interjected. There's only one or two decent players in the district besides us,

The two, both seniors, have been teammates since the eighth grade and doubles partners since their sophomore year. That experience, both agree, has helped them this

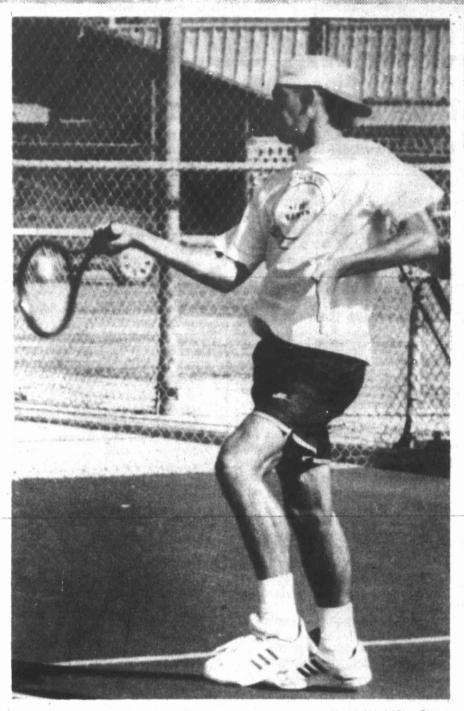

"We kind of know what each other going to do," Biddison said. "We know who's going to get the ball down the middle, or who's going to chase the ball down.'

"I think we work pretty well together," Lee said. "It helps to have a big power player to get those big

Both plan on attending college, although Biddison is more sold on a tennis career than his partner. But for now, their future plans include exacting some revenge on Wichita Falls, which has been Big Spring's nemesis the past few years at the regional tournament.

We just want to beat Wichita Falls, because they've beaten us the last couple of years," Lee said.

"I think we'll meet them in the finals," Biddison added. "It'll be close, but whoever's on in the last few matches will win.

SAN FRANCISCO — Dusty Baker's final victory of the 1993 season was no remedy for his team's final loss.

"It's high-priced consolation. Any time you get awards and don't win, it's a consolation," the rookie man-ager said Tuesday after being named National League Manager of the Year by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

Baker led the San Francisco Giants to 103 wins, the most victories by the Giants in three decades. But the team fell one game shy of the NL West title when the Dodgers

The 44-year-old former outfielder became the first to be named the top NL manager after a non-first place finish since Buck Rodgers won it in 1987 with the Montreal Expos.

Baker received 15 first-place votes, more than Jim Fregosi, who led the Philadelphia Phillies to their first pennant in 10 years. Baker received no bones about it. They seem to play nine second-place votes and three thirds for 105 points. Managers receive five points for first, three for second and one for third.

The Giants' new owners hired Baker last December to replace Roger Craig.

Charlotte gets NFL franchise

By The Associated Press

ROSEMONT, Ill. - The NFL expanded into new territory Tuesday night, adding a team in Charlotte, N.C., that will begin play in 1995 as the Carolina Pan-

NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue announced the addition at the league's expansion meeting. Another club is still to join the league, and Tagliabue said that decision will come Nov. 30.

The four other cities in contention are St. Louis, Baltimore, Memphis, Tenn., and Jacksonville, Fla.

Charlotte was a unanimous choice of the 28 owners, but only a three-quarters vote was necessary. It is the first team to join the NFL since Tampa Bay and Seattle began play in 1976.

The Panthers, the NFL's 29th club, will be run by Jerry Richardson, an ex-Baltimore Colts wide receiver and owner of a chain of restaurants. The general manager will be Mike McCormack, the former general manager of the Seattle Seahawks and a former player and coach with the Cleveland Browns.

Of the four cities left in the sweepstakes, St. Louis is considered the front-runner.

The owners deferred action on naming the second club Tuesday because the St. Louis ownership group led by Stan Kroenke was not named until Monday. The owners wanted more time to finances.

Tagliaube said the market, stadium and ownership group were all critical factors in Charlotte getting a franchise

He said the combined expansion and ownership committees voted unanimously for the Caroli-

The situation is similar to the league's last expansion. The owners first approved a franchise for Tampa Bay, then named Seattle after further investigation of the ownership group.

Tagliabue was believed to have favored a split of the two franchises between one new city and one that has lost an NFL team. That would make St. Louis, which lost the Cardinals to Phoenix in 1988, and Baltimore, which lost the Colts to Indianapolis in 1984, the prime candidates.

World Series stops the presses, gives us stories for the grandkids

Only the World Series could have a newspaper in Big Spring, USA - a town more than 1,000 miles away from Toronto and more than 300 miles away from the nearest Major League Baseball team - stand still.

Saturday night World Series games are a newspaper's nightmare, but they're also a newspaper employee's dream. At least for some people. Like maybe sports editors.

By 10 p.m. Saturday night, Steve Reagan and I were on the fringe of being finished with the Sunday sports section. That's a bit earlier than usual for a finish time, but subconsciously we were hurrying more than usual.

Game 6 of the World Series was happening as we spoke. The television was on in the other room. We could hear the cheers and the moans of fellow employees watching the game.

We had to finish.

We left a hole on the front page for the whenever-the-game's-over World Series story, went to the room with the TV and pulled up a chair. The past two years, I've been in the same situation. In 1991, my sports editor in New Albany, Ind., cursed the television and paced the floor as Minnesota and Atlanta were dueling in Game 6.

The Twins and Braves weren't in any hurry to help us meet our deadline. Profanities turned to near tears as the game went into extra innings.

By the top of the 11th, the sports editor grew too accustomed to my face and sent me home. I sped to the nearest TV, flipped it on and, while the TV was still warming up, saw Kirby Puckett hit a home run to end the

The Braves did it to us again in 1992. The Blue Jays and Braves were locked in another extrainning Game 6, and once again the Braves lost in 11 innings.

Now this. The Phillies were up 6-5 going to the bottom of the ninth, but everyone in the room (all five of us) knew the lead was extremely shaky Philadelphia closer Mitch "Wild Thing" Williams on the mound.

With one out and one on, Toronto's Paul Molitor stepped to the plate. In a bold move to make a prediction and show off my trivial knowledge (something I do often, perhaps too often for some), I said:

"OK, guys. The World Series is going to end right here on a home run, and that will be the second time in history that has happened."

Bill Mazeroski homered to end the World Series in 1960. It hadn't happened before or since.

Of course, I was wrong, Paul Molitor didn't homer, he singled. I had said, "The World Series is going to end right here.. Before Molitor singled, Herald photographer Tim Appel, a prolific predictor in his own right, told me. "No, the homer is going to come with two outs. After Molitor's one-out single, Joe Carter smashed a three-run homer to give the Series to the Blue Jays.

Tim was wrong. I was wrong. But, in a way, we were both right. At least that's what I'll tell my grandchildren. Sort of.

"Yeah, I remember that game." I'll say as I squint through my bifocals. "I was sitting in the conference room at the Big Spring Herald in Big Spring, Texas, children, and as soon as Carter came up, I told everybody he was going to hit a home run. You know what, kids? Sure enough, right after I said it - Boom! There it went. Our photographer, I forget his name, couldn't believe how smart I was - his mouth just hung there, wide open. That's the day I called Carter's shot!"

"Yeah, right, Grandpa," my little granddaughter will say. "Tell us another one of your
