Big Spring man dies in crash

By JANET AUSBURY
Staff Writer

Big Spring resident Rick Holden, 32, was killed in a plane crash Saturday, Nov. 6.

Hector Casanova, air safety inspector for the National Transportation Safety Board field office in Arlington, said the crash occurred at 5:15 p.m., two miles north-west of Van Horn Airport.

According to Casanova, Holden rented the Cessna 152 two-seater plane from Midland and flew to Van Horn. Holden proceeded to give rides to friends and acquaintances.

After stopping to refuel, Holden made a fifth trip up with a passenger. Casanova said Holden made a low pass over a friend's house and was then observed making a steep climb. The plane then dropped to the ground nose first.

"He didn't have sufficient altitude to pull out of it," said Casanova. "He lost control of the plane."

Holden and his passenger were killed on impact. "The crash was not survivable," said Casanova, and the plane was destroyed, although there was no fire.

Casanova said the identity of the passenger, a 47-year-old Van Horn man, is being withheld pending notification of relatives.

The cause of the crash is still under investigation. Casanova said he could not speculate on the probable cause at this time. He noted that an autopsy had been performed on Holden and toxicology tests were also being performed.

"It's routine to perform an autopsy and toxicology tests on the pilot in a crash," Casanova added. He did not have the autopsy results and said the toxicology test results would be available in about 45 days.

When asked if weather conditions or problems with the aircraft could have contributed, Casanova said it is too soon to know the answers to those questions.

The NTSB should complete and issue its report on the crash in about 60 days.

"I can tell you the sky was clear, 20 miles visibility, light winds," said Casanova. "It's opinion whether that constitutes good weather or not. It depends on the craft. Good flying weather for a crop duster is different from that for a helicopter."

He added that the plane, a light aircraft weighing about 1,670 pounds, is the type normally used for flight training and that there appeared to be no problems with the plane prior to the crash.

Holden is survived by a daughter, Michelle; his mother, Maxine Overman; his father, Paul Holden; three sisters, Renee Barraza, Stephanie Burk and Denise York; and other family members and friends.

Jackson quits to accept job with Harris Co.

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

Howard County Librarian Donna Jackson, who has held that post since 1989, is literally headed for greener pastures, when she quits Dec. 10 to go to East Texas next month.

She'll also manage the Bear Creek Branch of the Harris County Library System, five to six times larger than the library here and one of some two dozen libraries operated by Harris County. In addition, it'll put her near her children and grandchildren.

"I have some mixed emotions," Jackson said Monday after handing in her resignation to Howard County commissioners. "I'm certainly looking forward to being close to my son and his family. I love to see the green trees in Houston, that'll be great, but I'll certainly miss the people here."

Jackson told commissioners she enjoyed working with them and that she regrets not being able to assist with an eventual move of the library into the old Bluebonnet Savings building.

"Your flexibility has allowed me to do my best job for the library," she said in a resignation letter to County Judge Ben Lockhart. "The library has a fine staff. Milton Perkins and Rose von Hassell are very competent and will do a fine job filling in until you and the commissioners select my replacement."

At first, none of the commissioners offered to make a motion to accept her resignation. Proceedings came to a halt for about a minute until Commissioner John Stanley said, "As much as we hate to, I'd like to make a motion to accept her resignation."

The vote was unanimous. Jackson recommended to commissioners that library employees be consulted during interviews of librarian candidates.

"It's very important for them," she said. "They could even help you ask some questions that might help you."

In order to remain accredited with the Texas State Library System, the librarian hired must have a master's degree in library science. Jackson is paid $28,300 a year plus $1,560 in benefits.

Jackson also suggested library employees be given a pay raise, especially with the move into the new building. "A little higher salary range might be helpful," she said.

Jackson says she has a busy job ahead of her. At any one time, about half of available books are checked out. Harris County libraries are linked by computer so patrons can check out books at other branches.

"It's a very, very busy library," she said.

Howard County Librarian Donna Jackson is quitting Dec. 10 to manage the Bear Creek Branch of the Harris County Library System, five to six times larger than the library here and one of some two dozen libraries operated by the county there. She'll also be near here children and grandchildren.

Christmas parade's deadline

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

Do you know what the true spirit of Christmas is?

If you and your school, church, civic group or company have a good idea on how to interpret the spirit of Christmas as a float, you may want to enter the city's annual community Christmas parade Dec. 4, sponsored by the Big Spring Herald. Award plaques will be awarded in four categories.

This year's theme is the "True Spirit of Christmas." Deadline to enter is Nov. 17. Contact Elizabeth Flores at the Herald, 263-7331, or mail or bring entry forms - provided on page 3 in today's Herald - to Parade Committee, Big Spring Herald, 710 Scurry, PO Box 1431.

"We've had a lot of themes through the years, but I think the true spirit of Christmas is what we want to reflect," said Herald Publisher Pat Morgan.

There are a few rules for float entrants to follow.

1. An official Santa Claus will be provided by the Parade Committee. No other Santa will be permitted.

2. Floats should not exceed 65 feet in length, eight feet in width and 14 feet in height.

Blum's makes move to mall

Employees of Blum's Jewelers move the last of their equipment, the jewelry store's safe out of their old location at Highland Mall. The new location, in Big Spring Mall, was scheduled to open today at 10 a.m. It makes the fourth move for Blum's in its history, having been housed in two different downtown locations prior to its move to Highland Mall.

Blum's Jewelers has a new look and a new location in the Big Spring Mall, 1801 E. FM 700.

The store was scheduled to open for business at 10 a.m. today.

Formerly located in Highland Mall, Blum's Jewelers was one of several businesses forced to relocate after Wal-Mart announced it would use the Highland Mall location for its new supercenter.

Greg Brooks, president, said the move was planned before Wal-Mart officially notified Highland Mall tenants they would have to vacate.

Brooks is pleased with the larger store. "It's a beautiful new store, lots of color," he said. The new location is 1,600 square feet, compared with 1,350 square feet in the old location.

"Almost all the expansion is in the repair area," Brooks continued. "This is something we will emphasize in the new location."

Brooks is also pleased that many fellow Highland Mall tenants will be moving to Big Spring Mall as well. "The traffic just wasn't here (Highland Mall) anymore due to the loss of businesses after Wal-Mart made their announcement."

The new Blum's Jewelers is located near Regis Hairstylists, in the old Royal Optical space. Another jewelry store is not far away. Please see BLUM'S, page 5

George W. Bush says he will run for governor

The Associated Press

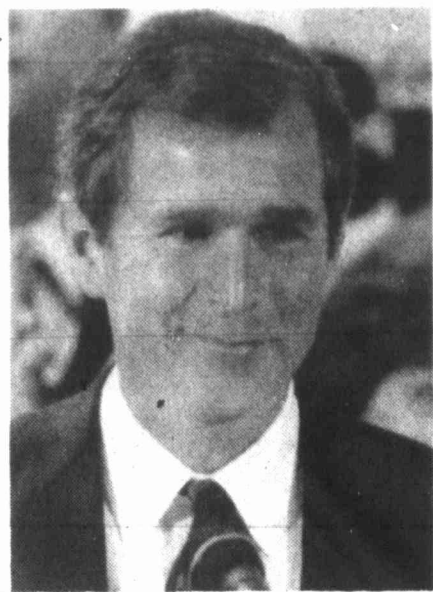

HOUSTON — Republican George W. Bush today kicked off his campaign for governor by focusing on education, crime and the growth of state government.

"I worry about the future of our state. I think Texas is changing, and not for the best. My drive is to make the future for my kids bright. I like the Texas of dreamers and doers," said Bush at a news conference.

Bush, the eldest son of the former president and managing partner of the Texas Rangers baseball team, was accompanied by his wife, Laura. They have twin daughters.

About 300 people turned out at the rally launching Bush's bid. Signs proclaiming "Bush For Governor" dotted the hotel ballroom.

Michigan Gov. John Engler, a Republican, was in the crowd. Engler was in Houston on other business. His wife, Colleen, was getting an award from the Northwood Institute.

BUSH

"I think George is a strong candidate. There's no question this will be a bellwether race," said Engler.

A race with Democratic incumbent Ann Richards would be "very formidable," according to Bush.

He also vowed to try to focus not on personalities, but on results.

"If people are happy with the way things are in Texas, I won't win," said Bush, who planned a five-day, 27-city tour of the state.

Bush said his parents are supporting him, although he suspects the elder Bushes won't be involved publicly in the campaign in the early stages. Former President George Bush and his wife, Barbara, who live in Houston, were not at the news conference.

The younger Bush is the second Republican to announce for the governor's race. Louis Podesta, a San Antonio writer and consultant, announced his candidacy two months ago.

Richards, who won the post in 1990, is seeking re-election to a second term.

Bush planned appearances today in Houston, San Antonio, Austin and Dallas. His brother, Jeb, is running for governor in Florida.

Whooper not treated correctly

The Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Inexperienced rescuers' attempts to help an injured whooping crane may have contributed to the rare bird's death, an authority says.

Had High Sky been handled differently, it might still be alive. Dr. Mel Richardson, a San Antonio Zoo veterinarian and a national coordinator for whooping crane activity, said Monday.

Richardson's remarks came after results of a necropsy released Monday showed that the bird had not been shot, as first was believed, but died from respiratory failure.

The 3-year-old bird was found last week on a ranch near Midland, suffering from a broken right wing, shock and blood loss. Midland wildlife rehabilitator Midge Erskine nursed the bird before it was flown Thursday to San Antonio for medical treatment. It died the next day.

"You hate to be a second-guesser, but I don't feel like we gave the bird every chance we could have" before it arrived in San Antonio, Richardson said.

James Lewis, a whooping crane expert with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, said the agency's plans for dealing with injured whoopers call for notifying the service's biological branch, which knows best how to care for them.

The Albuquerque-based biologist said the law-enforcement branch of his agency was notified, but the biological branch wasn't involved until days after High Sky was found.

Only about 150 whooping cranes exist in the wild, and the birds are protected by federal law.

Richardson criticized Ms. Erskine for keeping the bird in a playpen in her home for several days.

Ms. Erskine and Midland veterinarian Steve Betton flew with Sky High on a donated plane. They held the bird, whose beak was taped shut, in the aisle between them.

Richardson said someone knowledgeable about whoopers would have known they have no diaphragm and breathe by moving. Also, a whooper can't rid itself of heat unless it opens its mouth and spreads its wings.

Rob Lee, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service special agent originally assigned to the case, reacted angrily to Richardson's criticisms.

"Everyone did the best they could," Lee said. "Could someone have treated the bird better? Maybe so. But I think it's petty for someone to say they could have taken better care of the bird. Where were they?"

Richardson said the zoo, which is the area center for injured whoopers, was notified last Tuesday not by federal or state officials, but by Dr. Melissa Hill, a veterinarian and expert bird surgeon who cared for the bird after it arrived in San Antonio.

Ms. Hill said rescuers made some "honest mistakes," but "in cases like this, you have to use what is available."

She said results from the necropsy performed at the International Crane Foundation in Madison, Wis., showed the whooper's lungs were very bruised.

Based on all available data "the bird probably wouldn't have survived, no matter what," she said.

Judge in Hutchison case gave money to her rival

AUSTIN — (AP) District Judge Bob Perkins, who appointed the people who selected the Travis County grand jury investigating U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison says he contributed $300 to her Democratic rival during this year's U.S. Senate race.

Perkins, a Democrat, said he made the disclosure Monday because he wanted to ensure full public disclosure.

The Republican senator has said the investigation of her actions as state treasurer is a partisan maneuver to hurt her re-election chances next year.

The Austin American-Statesman reported today that a search of Federal Election Commission reports also showed that one of Mrs. Hutchison's attorneys, Michael Tigar of Austin, contributed $1,000 to Krueger's campaign.

Mrs. Hutchison won a landslide victory over Krueger in a June 5 runoff.

Officials investigate gun battle that wounded five

MISSION, Texas (AP) — At least one witness heard voices yelling "FBI" before a shootout that left five people wounded, prompting investigators to consider that some of the gunmen may have been posing as narcotic agents.

Two of the victims remained in critical condition late Monday.

David Neubauer, spokesman for the Hidalgo County Sheriff's Department, said investigators were checking the possibility that the incident late Sunday began as an attempted robbery in which the assailants posed as federal agents making a drug bust, Neubauer said.

None of the victims cooperated with the investigation, the spokesman said. No charges had been filed as of Monday.

The shooting occurred outside a trailer home northeast of Mission where two of the victims, Lucas Resendez and his brother Mariano Resendez, lived.

Suspect arrested in slaying of Dallas priest

DALLAS (AP) — A 21-year-old parolee has been charged with capital murder in the slaying of a Dallas priest, who may have been killed for his 1990 Chevrolet Cavalier, authorities said.

Two years later, in 1986, he got an eight-year term for theft in Harris County but was paroled after just one year behind bars. In six months, he was returned to prison as a parole violator, but was on the streets after another six months, paroled to El Paso County on May 27, 1988. The VanTassel slaying occurred 13 days later.

Death-row inmate refuses to appeal

The Associated Press

HUNTSVILLE, Texas — An ex-construction worker sent to death row for killing a University of Texas student five years ago faced almost certain execution this week by refusing to have appeals filed on his behalf.

Anthony Quinn Cook, 32, requested that no legal steps be made to delay his lethal injection early Wednesday for the abduction in Austin and killing about 50 miles to the northeast in Milam County, prosecutors said.

"He's said he doesn't want any more appeals," Milam County District Attorney Hollis Lewis said Monday.

Cook, a Louisiana native, was convicted in the slaying of David Dirck VanTassel Jr., who was abducted outside an Austin hotel June 9, 1988, where he had just completed a State Bar test review.

The killing occurred 13 days after Cook was paroled for a fourth time following various convictions.

Cook and an accomplice, Robert Moore, drove VanTassel in his car to a roadside park west of Cameron and tied him with his shirt and belt. After taking his watch and wallet, he was shot four times in the head with a .22-caliber pistol.

The pair took VanTassel's car and later sold it to a man who identified them in a police lineup. At the time of his arrest, Cook, a 9th-grade dropout, was wearing VanTassel's watch and had the victim's wallet in his pocket.

No appeals were pending in the state or federal courts, Lewis said.

The inmate had asked for a hearing before a judge in Milam County in September so an execution date could be set, the district attorney said.

Trade agreement debated tonight by Gore and Perot

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — When Ross Perot and Vice President Al Gore lock horns today, will it be a debate or a publicity stunt?

The professionals of broadcast news, commenting from the sidelines, disagree about the importance of the special edition of CNN's "Larry King Live," which stages the Perot-Gore showdown over the North American Free Trade Agreement from 9 p.m. to 10:30 p.m. EST.

"King gets this debate because he's got an active and ongoing forum, and he is by and large a benign force," said NBC anchor Tom Brokaw, "and if Larry King hosting this debate offends some journalistic purists — give me a break!"

But Brokaw's boss, NBC News President Andrew Lack, accused Perot of ducking a mass viewing audience.

"For whatever reasons, I think he is afraid to come on REAL national television and have at this issue," Lack said.

Average "Larry King Live" viewership is about 700,000 households, with 3.5 million households tuned to Perot's pre-Election Day appearance last year. Even with Tuesday's edition shared with some 350 CNN Television broadcast affiliates for airing live or tape-delayed, the total audience will be small compared with the Big Three networks.

"Only the cognoscenti within the Beltway will likely see the program," Lack said.

That's OK, contends ABC News correspondent Jeff Greenfield.

"This debate is not taking place in a vacuum," he said. "These two men go head-to-head, and then the rest of us can get our hands on them when we analyze what they said."

From a dollars-and-cents perspective, the Big Three broadcast networks might be happy to give cable's CNN this exclusive, particularly now, when they are locked in the November "sweeps" for ratings.

The debate would almost certainly draw fewer viewers than prime-time shows would. On the East Coast, the debate goes up against ABC's "Roseanne" and "Coach" and a Barbara Walters special. The film "Die Hard 2" will be on CBS. NBC is airing the final hour of "Victim of Love," a made-for-TV movie, and "Dateline NBC."

But ratings are beside the point, said CBS News Vice President Lane Venardos, who questions the news value of the debate.

"In my wildest dreams I don't see this as something CBS would break into its prime-time programming to cover live," Venardos said. "Here's a debate about a topic that is inherently boring and in which there has been precious little interest across the country."

That sort of apathy may explain why this NAFTA discussion is being handled like a heavyweight prize fight, said Sanford J. Ungar, dean of the School of Communication at American University, and a former correspondent for National Public Radio.

"It's like Bowe and Holyfield — who will win?" he said. "It's all about entertainment."

Key facts about the North American Free Trade Agreement:

WHAT IT DOES — Tariffs and other trade barriers among the United States, Canada and Mexico would be eliminated, creating the world's largest and richest trading bloc, covering 30 percent of the world's population.

WHEN — Jan. 1, 1994, if Congress approves.

TARIFFS — Eliminated over a 15-year period. Levies on half of the more than 9,000 products would be phased out immediately, 65 percent of them within five years. U.S. tariffs on Mexican products now average less than 4 percent; Mexican tariffs on American products average 10 percent.

AGRICULTURE — Tariffs on all farm products would be phased out but producers would be given 15 years to adjust to a duty-free status on sensitive products. These include corn and soy beans for Mexico and orange juice concentrate, melons, sugar and asparagus for U.S. farmers. Mexican import licenses, which cover about 25 percent of U.S. exports, would be dropped immediately.

AUTOS — To qualify for duty-free treatment, the North American content of cars, now 50 percent, would have to reach 62.5 percent after eight years.

FINANCIAL SERVICES — Mexico would allow U.S. and Canadian banks, brokerage firms and insurance companies free access after a six-year transition period during which bans on foreign ownership would be phased out.

TELECOMMUNICATIONS — U.S. companies would be allowed to compete for contracts from Mexico's public telephone system, and investment restrictions would be eliminated by July 1995.

TEXTILES — Mexico would be able to escape high duties on shipments to the United States and Canada as long as the clothing was made from yarns and fabrics from North America.

TRUCKING — Mexico would allow foreigners to invest in its trucking firms, and U.S., Mexican and Canadian trucking companies would be allowed to do business on cross-border routes that are now prohibited.

SIDE AGREEMENTS — Would establish tri-national commissions to oversee environmental and labor laws with the possibility of sanctions, either punitive trade tariffs in the case of the United States and Mexico or fines in the case of Canada, for failure of a country to enforce its own laws.

Hillary starting to get feisty on health care

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hillary Rodham Clinton calls it "a shakedown period" in the debate over health care, and the first lady is getting feisty as she takes on the critics.

If they "want a real battle ... they'll get it," she told a group of reporters Monday as she also stepped up her criticism of rival health care proposals circulating on Capitol Hill.

Mrs. Clinton said the White House is open to suggestions for changes in President Clinton's proposed health care plan. But she made clear the critics must first demonstrate they have a better way of guaranteeing all Americans health coverage with a broad package of benefits.

The issue of universal and comprehensive coverage is not negotiable, she insisted as she also had during a speech to medical educators over the weekend.

Trial continues on wife who assaulted husband

LORENA BOBBITT

MANASSAS, Va. (AP) — A woman who cut off her husband's penis was upset over his insensitive lovemaking and only later claimed rape, a defense lawyer argued at the start of the husband's sexual assault trial.

Gregory Murphy, attorney for John Wayne Bobbitt, read portions of Lorena Bobbitt's statement to police in which she complained her husband was a selfish lover who "always has orgasm and he never waits for me to have one."

In the same statement, Mrs. Bobbitt, 24, complained her husband had initiated sex without taking off all her clothes.

"That does not sound like the statement of a woman who has been raped," Murphy said.

Wildfires are a fact of life in California

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The hard-learned lessons of fire seem to have little effect on development in Southern California.

Deadly wildfires incinerate homes and turn vast areas to ashen moonscapes. And yet, Californians build and rebuild with few constraints.

"People want to replace what they had," said Bob Benard, planning director for Malibu.

And newcomers still flock to high-risk areas, willing to gamble everything for the good life.

It's a self-perpetuating burn-and-build cycle that the most recent outbreak of wildfires seems unlikely to break.

Wildfire is a fact of life in California. Brush and grasses flourish in the rainy season, then turn to tinder in the hot summers. Fires, natural or manmade, are whipped into infernos by the dry, raging Santa Ana winds of the fall.

The Malibu area alone, where three people died in fires last week, has been hit by 14 major blazes in the past 50 years.

The consequences were limited when the state's population was concentrated in urban centers. But the migration of an estimated 7 million people into California's mountains and canyons over the past two decades has made such fires more disastrous.

One state study estimates the population in some fire-risk counties will grow 20 percent by 2005.

Legal precedent and political pressure have thwarted attempts to limit the migration.

Copyrights on song parodies is challenged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The rap group 2 Live Crew is asking the Supreme Court to rule that copyright holders cannot ban song parodies such as the rappers' raunchy takeoff of the rock 'n' roll classic "Oh, Pretty Woman."

But the song's copyright owner maintains the group is only trying to cash in on the enduring popularity of Roy Orbison's 1964 hit.

Hussein wins free hand to pursue peace with Israel

The Associated Press

AMMAN, Jordan — King Hussein won a free hand to pursue peace with Israel when Jordan's elections weakened his Muslim fundamentalist and leftist opponents in parliament.

Both the king and the fundamentalists sought to turn Monday's parliamentary election into a referendum on the peace plan. But voters shunned the fundamentalists.

Official returns today showed the powerful Muslim Brotherhood and their extremist allies dropped from 22 to 16 seats in Jordan's first multiparty election since 1956.

Proponents of the peace plan representing various parties took the lion's share of the 80 seats up for grabs in the lower house. The 40-member upper house is appointed by the king. Voters also sent a female to parliament. Women have occupied Cabinet posts in the past, but Toujan Faisal, a liberal Muslim who opposes Islamic extremism, was the first to enter parliament.

The election, deemed the freest in the Arab world, was seen as a reflection of Hussein's commitment to political openness. The king last year lifted a 1957 ban on political parties. An outbreak of price riots forced elections in 1989 but those were on a non-party basis.

None of the 20 diverse and ill-defined parties had enough strength to win a majority. Hussein's secular, pro-Western government now must decide whether to appoint a prime minister to form a coalition or retain Prime Minister Abdul Salam Majali.

Issues facing a new parliament include widespread poverty in this predominantly Muslim nation of 3.9 million people and unemployment estimated at 30 percent.

Hours before the polls closed, the king appealed to voters to give him a parliament that would back his efforts to make peace with Israel.

Jordan and Israel signed an agenda for peace on Sept. 14, a day after the Jewish state and the Palestine Liberation Organization reached an accord giving Palestinians limited self-rule in the Gaza Strip and West Bank city of Jericho. About half of Jordan's population is of Palestinian descent.

Fundamentalists seek to wreck the U.S.-backed peace process and turn Jordan into an Islamic state.

Dear Jax, How do you make ice cream?

Tiffany Robinson Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

Dear Tiffany, Ice cream is one of those wonderful weird things you get when you mix different forms of matter (stuff) together. Different forms, like a solid suspended in a liquid — paint. Or a liquid suspended in a solid — Jell-O. We call these weird and wonderful things colloids (CALL-oids).

Ice cream is gases (air) suspended in frozen liquids (fats and milk). It's made by whipping in air while it's being frozen. That's what an ice cream freezer does — whips in air at the same time it's freezing.

You Can make an excellent ice cream by whipping in the air before you freeze it. Today's experiment is like a recipe. Get some family help and permission.

WHAT YOU NEED: 2 envelopes unflavored gelatin - 1/4 cup water - 3/4 cup milk - 3/4 cup sugar - 1/2 teaspoon vanilla - 1/4 teaspoon salt - 3 cups whipping cream - egg beater - shallow metal baking pan

WHAT TO DO: Put the metal pan and the egg beater into the freezer the night before you do this. All your tools have to be really cold. Sprinkle the gelatin onto the water. Soak it for 15 minutes. Mix the milk, sugar, vanilla and salt until blended, then stir in the gelatin mixture. Pour into the cold pan and place in the freezer for 1 1/2 hours. With the cold egg beater, beat up the cream until it forms soft peaks. Beat chilled gelatin mixture. Fold together both mixtures. Put the pan and the egg beater back in the freezer. In 2 or 3 hours, take them out and use the egg beater to whip the ice cream again.

SO WHAT: You just made still-frozen ice cream. Serve it immediately because it will just turn into a block of sweet ice if you try to freeze it again. The big deal with regular ice cream is whipping air into it while it's being frozen. You need an ice cream freezer to do that.

▲ Little history

Thousands of years ago, ancient Romans invented lots of stuff. Things like: Latin, bureaucracy, circuses, road building, and putting those fancy, flowery curlicue things on top of elegant Greek columns.

They also invented ice cream. Slaves had to run from the city of Rome up into the Alps — a range of mountains — to get snow and run back with it.

Everyone had to work quick because in ancient times, there weren't any freezers. Cooks took the snow and placed it in a bowl. They made a little crater in the top of the pile and stirred in a mixture of cream, sugar and a flavor. We'd use vanilla, although Romans used anise or mint.

The problem with snow ice cream in the modern world is pollution. All the poisons we spray into the air from our cars and factories make snow ice cream a lousy idea because it's really difficult to find snow that's clean enough to eat.

The very aim and end of our institutions is just this: that we may think what we like and say what we think."

Encourage your child to get a book and read

Nov. 15-21 is Children's Book Week and all the schools in Big Spring and surrounding area will be participating mainly by conducting book fairs.

What better way to encourage a child to read than by letting them choose a book they would like to peruse.

Reading is a necessity. It is something everyone of us needs to know how to do well just to get by in our society.

It doesn't matter that we are becoming a computer society, you still have to read what is on the screen.

The illiteracy rate in Howard County is estimated at 44 percent. That's quite a few people in just this county that can't read at all or well enough to do simple things like fill out a job application or read a prescription.

It is important to be able to read. And, it is important that families take part in this effort and join their child in reading a book. Or, encourage them to buy a book during the book fairs.

It can only help them and yourself. Reading is Fundamental as the campaign slogan puts it and there is no questioning the importance of being able to read.

Shortsighted at the polls

With apologies to Tim Robbins, today we'll discuss what can only be called the Nightmare Before Christmas II.

Realizing too well that it's all too early for any sort of sequel, we can only hope the voters of Texas and Florida remember same during upcoming gubernatorial elections.

Republican George W. Bush began a 27-city tour of Texas Monday, announcing his intention to unseat Democratic Gov. Ann Richards.

Former President Bush's eldest son, who served as both an adviser and confidante in his father's campaigns, said his campaign would focus on education, crime and the growth of state government.

"I worry about the future of our state. I think Texas is changing, and not for the best. My drive is to make the future for my kids bright. I like the Texas of dreamers and doers," Bush said at a news conference in Houston.

Bush's brother, Jeb, is running for governor in Florida. The scary part, of course, is that the American public — even after eight years of Reaganomics promises of a trickle down that didn't — bought into a sequel before reaching its collective senses in November of 1992.

Perhaps even worse, is the fact that Texas voters have in the past have proven to be possessed of exceedingly short memories. How else can one explain Bill Clements' second term as governor?

In case the memory is somewhat blurred, it would be wise to remember that during Clements' initial term as governor, Texas quit being a "pay as you go" state with an annual budget that consistently finished in the black.

State spending skyrocketed under Clements, even though he possessed the line item veto Ronald Reagan and the elder George Bush always claimed the president needed to effectively cut wasteful federal spending.

The younger Bush, 47-year-old managing partner of the Texas Rangers baseball team, was born in Connecticut, and grew up in Midland and Houston. He earned a master's in business administration from Harvard and started an oil and gas exploration company in Midland.

In 1978, he lost a race for Congress, and there are lots of Democrats who say he lacks the political experience to be governor.

He is, of course, far better known than the only other announced Republican candidate, San Antonio writer-consultant Louis Podesta.

Who? Just suffice it to say the former president's son should win the GOP nomination in the March primary.

Those already willing to scramble into the Bush fo'd really ought to be reminded that he is taking on a high-profile, nationally known incumbent who has made education, prison-building and luring new jobs her priorities, too.

So, what does Bush say when reminded of same?

"If people are happy with the way things are in Texas, I won't win," Bush said.

That's a heck of a way to analyze the situation, and unfortunately, he's probably right.

All you really have to remember is Clements' win over an incumbent Mark White, who became a scapegoat for first, having promised teachers a pay raise; second, not delivering as much a raise as they wanted; and third, having to surrender to the educational reforms contained in House Bill 72, specifically the TECAT.

Teachers flocked to the polls to vote for Bill Clements, a governor who in his previous term proved he had no respect for them and had no interest in their needs.

We can only hope we won't be so shortsighted this time around.

Rocky stands tall in passion

In the past, I've written unkind words about tiny dogs. I thoughtlessly said that all they're good for is being tied to long sticks to wash windows or being sprayed with Endust and shoved under beds to collect lint.

But now I must apologize, and never again will I say such things.

Not after hearing of the bold and amazing feat of a little Chihuahua named Rocky.

Rocky lives with his owners in Key Largo, Fla., which is where he recently gained fame and admiration.

It happened when he took a stroll around the neighborhood. While passing a nearby house, he saw another dog.

That dog was a Rottweiler. If you aren't familiar with the breed, believe me, you wouldn't want one mad at you. Big and burly, they are related to the Doberman. In ancient times, the Roman armies used Rottweilers as guard dogs.

So there stood Rocky the Chihuahua, weighing in at about 8 pounds and about as high as your ankle.

And there was the Rottweiler, whose head probably weighed more than Rocky's whole body. With one snap, it could have downed Rocky like a yummy bone.

But that isn't what happened. Rocky, as his name indicates, is a male dog. And the Rottweiler, who goes by the name Canella, is of the female persuasion. (In kennel circles, she would be formally described as a "bitch." Kennel people are a bit behind the times in sensitivity.)

For little Rocky, it appeared to have been love or lust at first sight. And he dashed toward Canella to express his emotions.

One might have expected Canella to spurn him, thinking something like: "Don't be silly, you ugly little creep."

But you never know about females. Mickey Rooney, the tiny actor, had eight gorgeous wives. And the late Aristotle Onassis looked like a toad, but was quite the international ladies' man.

So Canella thought something like: "Well, he may be an ugly little creep, but he's my very own ugly little creep."

She responded favorably to his advances, and in a moment they were engaged in an act of passion.

It isn't known how tiny Rocky accomplished this. Maybe he was flying, acrobatic leap. Or he might have jumped up on a fence to gain a proper flight path toward his landing area.

But there is no doubt that it happened, because they were seen by witnesses. That can happen when engaging in such acts in public.

One of the witnesses was a local animal control officer who happened to be going by. He stopped to watch, out of professional curiosity and amazement.

The other was Canella's owner, who came out of the house and was shocked and dismayed. Which is understandable. He had high hopes for Canella, such as his introducing her to a handsome, refined, male Rottweiler, from a distinguished family.

Canella's owner grabbed his camera and took pictures. He wanted evidence of what he thought was a terrible assault. Or maybe he thought he could sell the photos to the National Enquirer.

Then he and the animal control officer did what they could to break up the romance, squirting the two lovers with a garden hose and shouting for them to cease and desist.

It was too late. Rocky was small, but he was fast. And the deed was done. Rocky, we hear, looked weary but proud, the little scamp.

But it doesn't end there. Before long, Canella's owner discovered that she was in a family way.

And he was dismayed at the prospect of a litter of pups that were half big Rottweiler and half bitty Chihuahua.

So he took Canella to a veterinarian and put an end to the pregnancy, while taking measures to prevent Canella from ever again engaging in such activities.

A pity, really. They might have been remarkable pups. Maybe giant Chihuahuas, which would scare any burglar to death. Or teeny Rottweilers, which many ladies would like to keep in their purses as protection.

Then Canella's owner sued. Doesn't everyone?

He said that Rocky's owner was irresponsible for letting the horny little fellow wander about looking for impressionable females.

And he asked to be compensated for all the fine puppies he planned to sell for $400 each, had Canella taken up with a respectable Rottweiler.

Rocky's owner responded that someone else might have been the father. Canella, he said, wasn't all that fussy. He even hinted that the father might have been a tiny Shih Tzu from down the block that had been seen lurking about.

But the judge didn't buy it. As he said in his ruling:

"Graphic and explicit expert testimony was received describing the virtual certainty that Rocky's efforts would result in Canella's pregnancy."

"Defendant (speculated) that Canella had been visited by other male dogs, in particular a determined but inadequate little Shih Tzu with an injured hip, but only speculation existed, as opposed to the certain success enjoyed by Rocky."

So he awarded Canella's owner $2,500, plus $67.50 in court costs.

That seems like a lot of money for one impetuous romp with a consenting partner.

On the other hand, it could have been worse. What if Rocky was a U.S. senator?

THE BLIND CONGRESSMEN AND THE ELEPHANT

The boy, the father, the front lawn

They'd lived in an apartment for a long time.

"Halloween was always very quiet in the apartment building," she said. She is 31, a wife and mother; she works as a waitress at a country club. "We hardly ever got any trick-or-treaters. I think that children were reluctant to go into an apartment building."

This fall, though, she and her husband and daughter moved to a house. "It's not a big house, but it's very nice, and it's on a quiet street," she said. The family lives in Lombard, Ill.

"We were looking forward to Halloween," she said. "For all the neighborhood children to come around."

Her husband works in a factory that manufactures food products — among them, corn chips. "At Halloween," she said, "the company gives employees cases of the corn chips to give out to trick-or-treaters. Those little lunchbox-sized packs of the chips."

So they were well stocked on Halloween. In Lombard the weather was lousy on Halloween this year, but it didn't stop the children of the neighborhood from coming around.

"It was great," she said. "We must have had more than 100 children come to the house. A lot of the girls were dressed as princesses, or as Disney characters. A lot of the boys were dressed as athletes."

There were seven adults in the house on the afternoon the trick-or-treaters came around. "Family members," she said. "Spending the day with us and seeing our new house." The adults took turns greeting the children and giving out the corn chips.

"There was this one boy," she said, "and he was dressed as a football player. He must have been around 8, maybe a little older. He came to the door all alone. My husband said to him, 'Haven't you already been here?' The boy shook his head no. So we gave him a bag of the chips."

The adults in the house talked about the boy; some of them agreed that, yes, he had been to the house more than once. "It was no big deal," she said. "But we figured out that he had come back several times."

About half an hour later, she said, the boy was there again. "He walked up the short flight of steps to our front door," she said. "His father was waiting for him down on the lawn."

"The boy handed us five packs of the corn chips. He said that he was sorry, and that his father had told him to bring them back. Apparently he had been to our house a number of times, and every time one of us had given him a pack of the chips."

"We thanked him for bringing them back, and we tried to hand him one of the bags of chips that he had just handed to us. But he wouldn't accept it. He said that he still had one pack of our chips at home."

"When the boy left, we laughed about the whole thing. But then my brother Bobby pointed out that this really wasn't the story of a kid who made off with more Halloween treats than he was supposed to. It was really the story of a great dad."

The father, she said, had evidently noticed that when his boy came home from trick-or-treating, something wasn't quite right. A lot of parents, in our sad contemporary times, feel the need to go through their children's Halloween bags to make sure there is no candy that has been tampered with or tainted. But this boy's father, it seemed clear, had noticed something else. He had noticed that his child had gone back to houses — or at least to one house — again and again.

"It would have been easy for the father to blow the whole thing off, or just to scold the boy," she said. "A lot of dads might even have congratulated their sons for getting so much stuff. For figuring out a way to come home with extra goods. You never know what goes on in people's houses."

"But this dad cared. He made his boy do the right thing — the hard thing. We don't know the boy or his father, but it made us feel great that the dad was teaching his son right from wrong in even the littlest situations. I hope the boy knows how lucky he is to have a dad like that. After they left, my brother said, 'You know, I bet you that boy really grows up to be somebody.'"

You can never be sure about that, of course. Who knows what factors help make one child turn into a success in life, and another child turn into a failure?

But on this Halloween — the first Halloween in their new house — the family in Lombard saw a lot of children, a lot of costumes. Only one of the sights will stick in their minds: A boy in a football uniform. And his father, waiting for him on the front lawn.

Campus atrocities

Scrrips Howard News Service

Activists on college campuses have been seizing and destroying student newspapers they consider racist or insensitive to the needs of blacks, women and other aggrieved groups. The rationale for this vandalism is that "we're making a statement."

The statement they're making — whether they know it or not — is that they have no respect for the freedoms of speech and press guaranteed by the First Amendment to the Constitution.

Whatever the motivation, confiscation of campus newspapers is a throwback to the book-burning tactics of Brown Shirts in Nazi Germany during the 1930s. It has nothing to do with discrimination and less to do with open debate, which is what colleges are about.

The latest atrocity was the theft of 10,000 copies of the Diamondback, student newspaper at the University of Maryland, by self-appointed defenders of women and minorities. Among the complaints: The newspaper misspelled the name of black hero Frederick Douglass and ridiculed feminists who posted a random list of male students to make the point that any man might commit a rape.

Similar incidents have occurred at other campuses, including the theft of 14,000 copies of the Daily Pennsylvanian at the University of Pennsylvania last spring by black students who didn't like the views of a white columnist. Sheldon Hackney, then president of Penn and now chairman of the National Endowment for the Humanities, condemned the theft but muddied the issue by musing about an apparent conflict between "diversity" and freedom of expression.

To his credit, Maryland's president, William Kirwan, has been more direct and less correct. "The university," said Kirwan, "is unequivocal in its support of the First Amendment right of freedom of speech — even if such speech is offensive to some persons."

Destroying newspapers may be a statement of sorts, but what it says is that some misguided students are unwilling to tolerate any viewpoint or opinion that doesn't agree with their own.

McKenzie elected to NCASA board

By JANET AUSBURY
Staff Writer

Cecelia McKenzie, co-founder and former executive director of Rape Crisis/Victim Services in Big Spring, was elected to the board of directors of the National Coalition Against Sexual Assault (NCASA) at its 15th annual conference held last July in Chicago.

McKenzie is currently program administrator for the Texas Department of Health Sexual Assault Prevention and Crisis Services program.

Along with Gail Earls and Mary Kenny, McKenzie founded the Rape Crisis/Victim Services center in Big Spring in 1984.

McKenzie was executive director from the center's inception until 1989, when she went to the Texas Department of Health.

This is McKenzie's third election to the NCASA board but her first to an executive position, program administrator for the Texas Department of Health Sexual Assault Prevention and Crisis Services program.

"Our major mission is to be the voice of survivors of sexual assault," McKenzie said of NCASA. The coalition prepares educational pieces and technical assistance programs, and encourages legislation to assist sexual assault victims, such as funding for rape crisis centers.

NCASA recently contracted with the Pennsylvania Coalition Against Rape, a group active in NCASA, to be the national headquarters and handle phone calls, paperwork, and administrative functions of NCASA. The change became effective Oct. 1.

"The amount of information requested from us is so high," said McKenzie. "We used to have a telephone in Washington, D.C., that wasn't even a telephone. It was a voice mail. Now we have a central place to handle everything."

The new NCASA mailing address is 912 North Second, Harrisburg, Pa. 17102. The phone number is (717) 232-7460.

Texas is becoming well represented at NCASA, according to McKenzie. Cassandra R. Thomas, president of NCASA, is from Houston, and the next national conference of NCASA will be held there next year.

McKenzie, who sometimes returns to Big Spring to visit a brother, will visit soon for another reason. She is speaking at a two-day seminar, "Dispelling the Myths of Sexual Crimes," sponsored by Rape Crisis/Victim Services.

The seminar will be held from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday, Nov. 19, and 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 20, in the student union building of the Southwest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf.

McKenzie will present her topic, "Teamwork Within the Community," from 10:15 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday.

Other speakers for the seminar include keynote speaker Judge Robert H. Moore III; Judy Edwards, program director of the Crime Victim Crisis Center, Abilene; Dr. E. John Civello, Scenic Mountain Medical Center; Jane Clinton, social worker supervisor, Big Spring State Hospital; L. J. Nelson, supervisor, Child Protective Services; and Laurie Barber, executive director of Midland Rape Crisis.

McKenzie noted that continuing education units will be awarded at this seminar. Those interested in attending may register from 8:30-9 a.m. the morning of Nov. 19 and 20, or preregister by contacting Rape Crisis/Victim Services at 263-3312.

"We want to push local services for survivors," said McKenzie about Rape Crisis/Victim Services and the seminar. "They have a good program."

Collider's staff receives notices concerning jobs

The Associated Press

FORT WORTH — Employees still working at the superconducting super collider have received official warning that they might lose their jobs 13 days after Christmas.

Under federal plant closing guidelines in the Warn Act, government employees must receive official warning two months in advance of possible layoffs.

"It's like putting the last shovel of dirt over the grave," said Marletta Henegar, a secretary in the collider lab's education department. "It was just a letter on regular, white, 8-1/2-by-11-inch paper. It's very sad ... You are hereby notified that your job at the SSC will be terminated, but in no less than 60 days."

Congress terminated the collider, an $11 billion federal construction project in Ellis County, last month after more than $2 billion had been spent to design and build the proposed atom smasher.

The 2,000 employees still on the job received their 60-day notices Monday.

Details involving severance pay and the layoff schedule have not been spelled out. Some SSC employees will stay on to help shut down the lab, but officials were uncertain how many.

At the collider lab, Ms. Henegar said she and her co-workers are worried about personal predicaments.

"When is our last day and are we going to get severance pay? Because it's right after Christmas that we may be let go, it's devastating to families because you have to provide for Christmas and the holidays," said the secretary, who has worked with the collider for three years — 18 months as a temporary employee and 18 months on the federal payroll.

"The lab is making a good effort to give us some seminars on how to do our resumes. They are going to help us find new positions," Ms. Henegar said. "I have no idea what step I'm going to take."

Department of Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary will be in the Dallas-Fort Worth area after spending Thursday evening in the Amarillo area with Panhandle politicians and officials at Pantex, where nuclear weapons are disassembled and stored.

How even phys ed can become your favorite class

Bowling adds life to PE's good, bad and basics

By JANET AUSBURY
Staff Writer

Physical education. Do these words bring to mind images of huffing, puffing, sweating, running endlessly and getting hit in the head with a kickball, to name a few less-than-fun activities?

Or does the mental picture consist of teamwork, fitness, achievement, boosting confidence, and a feeling of being part of the group?

People who liked phys ed as kids will be pleased to know that nothing's changed. Those who hated and feared phys ed will be pleased to know that many things have changed!

Jo Ann Ritchey, a PE instructor at Big Spring High School for 21 years, said that many traditional activities such as volleyball and kickball are still staples of the curriculum.

But the students' favorite activity (and one many of us might have enjoyed, had our high schools offered it) is bowling. "The kids love it. It's their favorite," said Ritchey. The students are bussed to and from the bowling alley.

The students spend six weeks working on bowling skills, and the second six weeks are spent organizing a structured league. Averages and handicaps are figured, and the best bowlers receive prizes.

Of course, the students must take the bad with the good, and for most of them the "bad" is the first six weeks of the semester: physical conditioning. "The kids will probably tell you they hate physical conditioning the most, because of the running," said Ritchey.

A 12-minute run is part of students' physical skills conditioning and testing. "I think after the first six weeks, they would tell you they find it much easier," Ritchey said. The students are tested three times every six weeks on their skill levels.

Sophomore Lisa Riffe, 15, agreed that the 12-minute run is her least favorite part of phys ed. "But of everything we've done so far, I like volleyball the best," she said. Ritchey noted that Lisa has not been through the bowling segment yet.

Brandy Coleman, a 15-year-old sophomore, likes the running, which is not a surprise as she is a runner anyway. What is her least favorite aspect of phys ed? "Nothing, really," said Brandy. "I like phys ed."

Junior Nathan Neighbors, 17, said he hates when his PE teammates don't try. "We have to work together to be a team," he said. He likes kickball best because everyone has a chance to participate.

"In volleyball, some of the girls don't even get a chance to hit the ball," said Nathan. "In kickball, everyone has a turn."

Freshman Lee Escobar, 14, doesn't hate anything about phys ed, and said he liked volleyball most of all. "It's exciting getting to hit the ball over the net," he said, adding that he enjoys the class overall.

Freshmen and sophomores are required to take PE - freshmen for two semesters and sophomores for one. Juniors and seniors may take it as an elective.

Special education students are also being included in activities more than in the past. Ritchey said that special ed students have recently played soccer with the regular phys ed classes and have enjoyed it.

Aerobics, performed to Richard Simmons' "Sweatin' to the Oldies" videotape, is the activity of choice for special ed students. Leann Garza, 16, said, "I like aerobics a lot." Of phys ed in general, she said, "I pretty much kind of like it."

Fellow special ed student Heather Moreno, 18, also loves performing aerobics. She and Garza added that they like bowling as well.

The special ed students perform aerobics in a corner of the gym while sixth period gym class plays kickball. The occasional stray kickball bouncing near the special ed students doesn't break their rhythm; the closest student simply hands the ball back to one of the kickball players.

Ritchey said that each phys ed class has its own personality.

"One class I have just doesn't enjoy activities like kickball, so I came up with other activities for them — scooter relays, aerobics, and basketball dribbling. They really had a good time."

Every school has its students who, for reasons of weight or lack of physical skill, just don't do as well as others. Ritchey tries to be sensitive to these students' needs and build up their confidence.

"One girl I worked with really didn't want to participate because of her weight," Ritchey recalled. "I worked with her on her physical conditioning, encouraged her to exercise at home and watch her diet, and really bragged her up when she did well."

No magical turnaround has taken place, but the girl has more confidence in herself and is more willing to participate actively in phys ed.

Some classes are co-ed, but other activities such as flag football, are held separately for boys and girls. "In fifth period, the girls aren't intimidated by the boys at all when they play kickball," said Ritchey.

However, in another class that was playing softball, Ritchey noticed that many of the girls seemed fearful or embarrassed to compete alongside the boys. Sometimes, this fear disappears with time. "The social interaction (between the boys and the girls) is good for them," said Ritchey.

One activity Ritchey would like to add to the phys ed roster is Frisbee golf, but she has had a difficult time making arrangements with people who play the sport to help her put together a program.

Overall, students at Big Spring

High School seem to find phys ed an enjoyable series of activities, rather than the high school equivalent of boot camp. The emphasis seems to be on fun and teamwork, not exclusion or taunts for those who are not ace athletes.

Ritchey's upbeat approach, contrasted with the drill-instructor mentality that so many might remember from their high school PE days, may very well make all the difference.

58-year-old gets diploma

By MARTY DOUCE
Thomson News Service

"I thought I knew more than the teachers," said James Smail, explaining why he quit school at age 18.

"That was the worse mistake I made. I just never studied." "You've made up for that," laughed Bonnie Williams, an instructor in Warren, Ohio, City Schools Adult Basic Education.

In spite of working midnight shift as a millwright at Warren Consolidated Industries, Smail managed to fit in a nap and be in class by 9 a.m., staying until 2 p.m. every weekday since January.

"We couldn't convince him to take a break," Williams said.

Smail can rest a little easier now since he recently passed his GED and received a high school diploma.

"I shed tears of joy the day I got my diploma. It came in the mail the same day I had a sale — a good sale, a good day," said Smail, an independent auctioneer.

Williams interrupted. All test results come in the mail. A brown envelope is a good sign. It means you passed.

"You're in trouble if you see blue. A blue envelope means you didn't pass."

In the case of Smail, it was perseverance that paid off.

"I had an obligation," said the 58-year-old. "I caught the education bug and made up my mind I was going to continue working at it, this time until I got my GED."

He had taken and failed the test in 1969 for a general education development certificate, the equivalent of a high school diploma.

"The lack of a diploma was never an issue that I know of, but it could have been. But I started to work at a time when jobs were plentiful. I went right into working at a gas station, then a steel mill, a blacktop company, a company that processed powder for nuclear reactors.

"I came to Warren from Pennsylvania in 1964 and went to work at Taylor-Winfield. There were all kinds of work in the area but then jobs started to go out of here. I went to WCI 17 years ago."

Smail is the father of three daughters and three grandchildren. Next on Smail's agenda is getting into computers and taking the course for real estate appraisal. "I want to get certified."

Williams described Smail as a student any teacher would like to have around.

"He is enthusiastic, fired up and very open in talking to other students about the importance of education," she said.

Methods have changed since Smail first took the course in 1969.

Kindergarten students get in on Scholastic act

By DEBBIE LINCECUM
Features Editor

Kindergartener Jose Ybarra got $5 from his mother before going to school one day last week.

He used some of the money at Anderson Kindergarten Center's week-long Scholastic Book Fair.

"I got Jurassic Park," said Jose, pointing to the coloring book. "My brother told me to get it."

Olegario Melendez bought more than books. He was carrying around a pencil and a colorful eraser, too.

"I had enough money left," he explained.

Ann Marie Reyes picked a classic story, "Little Red Riding Hood."

"This girl in my class, my friend, got this one, so I did too," she said.

Parent volunteer Vickey Weaver was holding down the fort at the book fair Thursday, taking students' money and showing off the stock to teachers. The fair, slated to benefit the Anderson Kindergarten Center PTA, was just one of many expected to visit local schools this year.

"Each class got to come in at least twice," Weaver said. "They get stories read to them and they look around for books."

Weaver said the fair is designed to encourage reading among the students as well as make a little money for PTA projects. Its books are especially good for Anderson, where there is no library, she added.

This year, the Scholastic offerings have increased to include stories of popular movies, paper dolls from favorite screen characters, lots of dinosaur information and some books in Spanish.

Classics like the adventures of Clifford the Big Red Dog are displayed alongside newer characters like Barney and Baby Bop. Some books are designed to educate, others entertain.

There are videotapes, notepads, joke books and cartoons. Young adults will find many of the popular series designed for their age group, and beginning readers will find plenty to keep them busy as well.

Prices range from under $1 for small paperbacks to $30 for a "treasure of classic stories." At Anderson, every kid who bought a book got to wear a kangaroo hand stamp the rest of the day.

Some schools may plan an alternative to the traditional book fair, including a "book swap" or another type of money-making sale.

For information about other book fairs, contact the school or PTA.

Dog tags go high-tech

By CARL RYAN
The Toledo Blade

Rover's dog tag is entering the electronics age.

The newest thing in pet identification is a computer chip, implanted beneath the animal's skin, that has an identification number programmed into it.

When a stray pet is found, an electronic scanner is used to read the number, which is then checked against a register of owners. The chip is a permanent identifier that cannot be altered.

"It's inserted with a needle under the scruff of the neck in a dog or cat," explains veterinarian David Thornton. "Birds are done in the pectoral muscle, and the needle is only inserted part way."

The procedure causes the pet no more discomfort than an ordinary rabies or distemper shot, adds

Thornton, who has implanted 200 of the devices in pets.

The Toledo Humane Society sees the identifier chip as an aid in returning lost animals to their owners. The agency scans every pet that comes through its doors — without result so far.

Very few of the thousands of animals picked up by the agency each year have identification. The rate of return is under 5 percent, says spokesman Patty Mazur.

"So many times an animal may have got out of the house while it was being washed, or it may have lost its collar," she says. "For us this is another way to identify them."

The identifier chip, about the size and shape of a large grain of rice, is an integrated circuit encased in glass. It works by reflecting a low-energy radio signal emitted by the hand-held scanner; the chip itself contains no power pack.

A Wonder Wheel to Help You Do What Scientists Do

These young scientists are doing a fair test.

Do you often ask why and try to come up with new ideas or theories? Scientists do.

There are many kinds of scientists:

Some study living things.		Zoologists study animals.
Some study the nature of the universe.		Chemists study what things are made of.
Some study numbers.		Mathematicians use math to solve scientific problems.
Some study people and how they live.		Geographers study the Earth and how living things adjust to where they live.

For hundreds of years, all types of scientists have used a special orderly way to solve their problems.

You can too. We have put these steps into a wheel that will help you when you wonder how to solve your scientific problems.

Use a brad or a paper clip to keep up with the step you are doing.

Cut out this wheel and pointer. Paste them on cardboard.

PETER PENGUIN'S PUZZLE & LE-DO

Here's a fun problem to solve at home with your family. Use your Wonder Wheel as you go through the steps.

I wonder: What are bones made of?

What you'll need:

- a clean chicken bone
- a glass of vinegar

What to do:

Put a clean chicken bone in a glass of vinegar. After a few days (two to five), take the bone out and observe it. How is it different? Try to bend it!

(Research hint: The hard part of bones is made of minerals, mainly calcium. The minerals are dissolved by the acid in the vinegar. What remains is the soft cartilage of the bone.)

How Your Scientific Wonder Wheel Works

IT'S A WONDERFUL WHEEL!

Let's go through the steps of one problem to see how you might use your Mini Page Scientific Wonder Wheel.

After reading how this was done, you might want to do it yourself.

You'll need:

- a 16-ounce bottle of clear soda
- straws
- clear plastic cups

RESULTS

Object	DID SINK = X				DID NOT SINK = Y
	Test 1	Test 2	Test 3	Test 4	Test 1	Test 2	Test 3	Test 4
Beans
Pennies
Raisins
Rice

8. Organize Look for patterns. Classify or group your answers. Which objects sank and then rose to the top? Which did not?

9. Decide What was the best answer to your question?

10. Share Tell a partner or grown-up what you found out. Think about what other questions you could investigate about soda. See if your friend has some ideas.

1. Wonder Did you ever wonder why a straw won't stay down in the bottom of a glass of soda?

2. Question Decide exactly what you want to ask.

3. Research You might want to look up more information in your library. You might also ask a friend what he or she thinks about what happens to objects in a glass of soda.

4. Predict Get some small objects such as raisins, rice, pennies or beans. Make a prediction about what you think will happen.

5. Design a fair test To see if your predictions are right, should you ...

- put all the objects in one cup of soda at one time?
- put each kind of object in a separate cup?
- have one cup with no objects in it?

Write down your plans so you will know exactly what to do. Talk these questions over with an adult.

6. Do your fair test Carry out your tests. Do the experiments more than once to see if you get the same results each time.

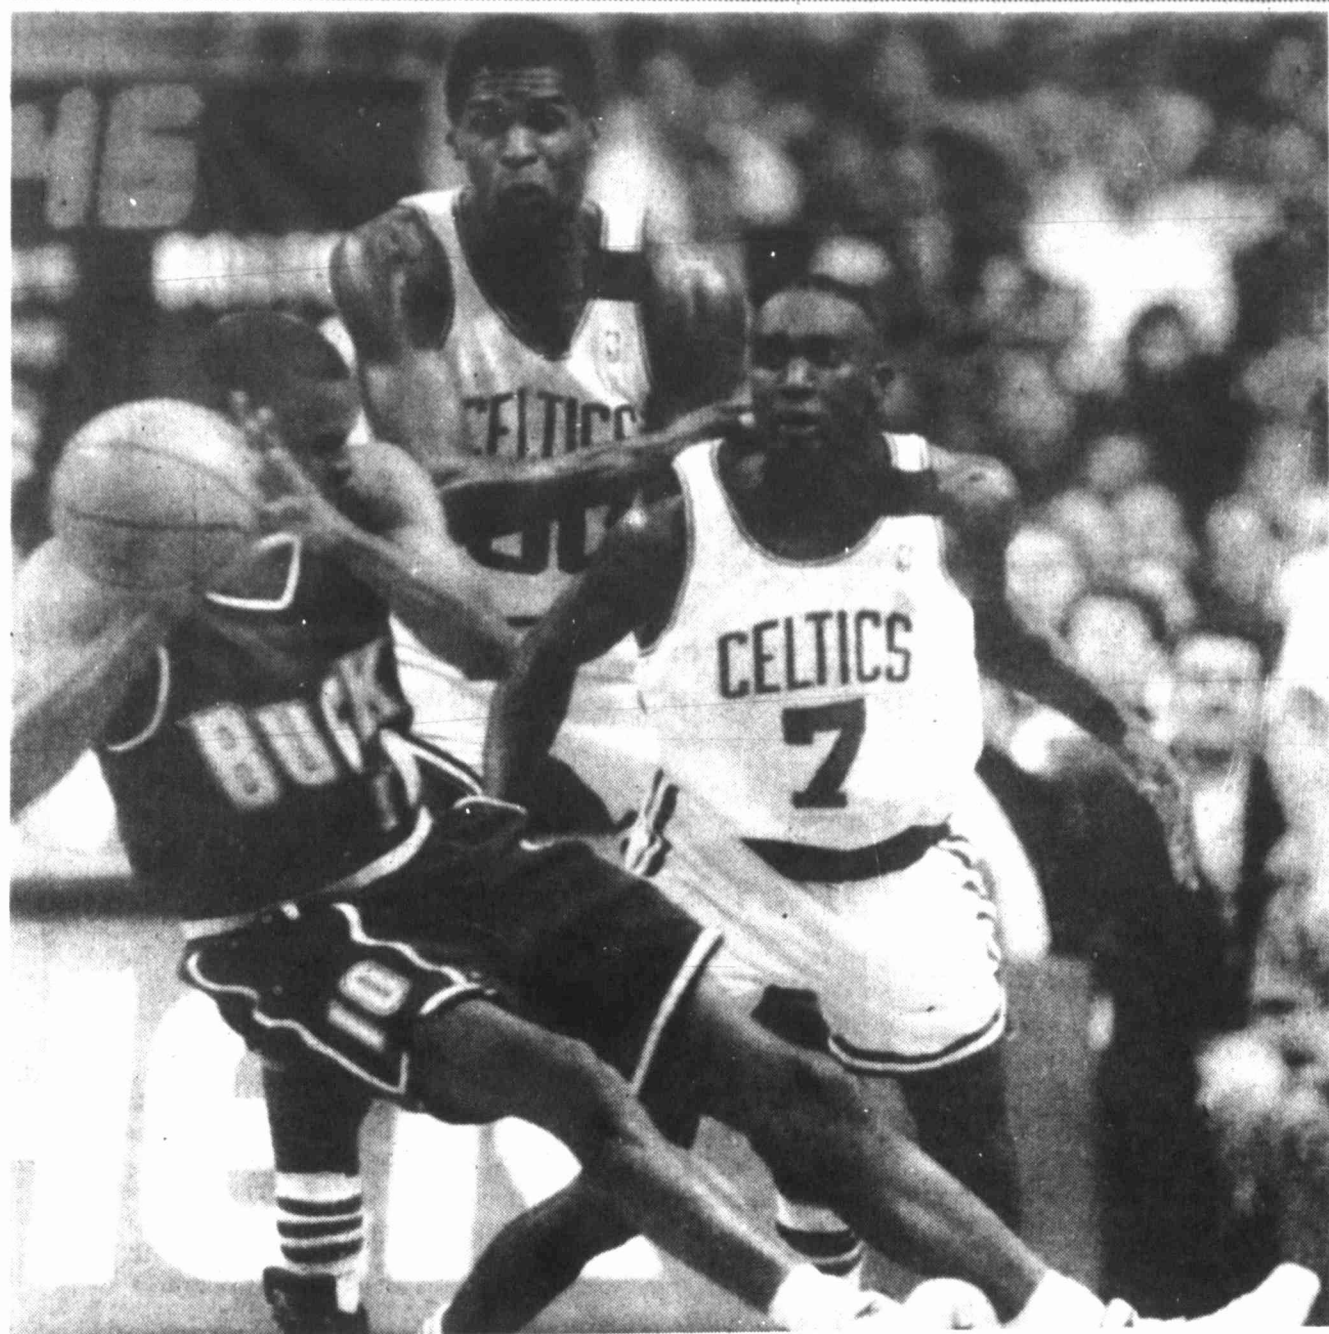

7. Collect data Write down what you find out from your test.

Why not wonder about ...

- Why silver turns black?
- Why bicycles rust?
- Why copper turns green?
- Why rubber bands stretch?
- Why glue sticks to things?

Browns sharpen their ax, cut longtime quarterback

Kosar cut just a month after signing huge contract

By The Associated Press

BEREA, Ohio — Bernie Kosar lost a three-year power struggle with coach Bill Belichick and was cut Monday by the Cleveland Browns.

The most popular Cleveland player since Jim Brown retired nearly three decades ago, Kosar never fit into Belichick's offense and finally lost his starting job last month to Vinny Testaverde.

Kosar returned as the starter Sunday in a 29-14 loss to Denver — Testaverde is out with a separated shoulder — but learned Monday morning he was being waived.

"I've known for a while that I don't really fit into their plans," Kosar said. "Bill has his way of doing things. That's been shown by the way they've been getting rid of the players who were here before he got here."

Of the 52 players now on the Browns' roster, only 11 preceded Belichick. He was hired in 1991.

Todd Philcox, who has started one game in four seasons, will start Sunday at Seattle, backed up by Brad Goebel. The Browns plan to sign a third quarterback this week.

"This is the most difficult decision I've ever made or been a part of," Belichick said. "I have a tremendous amount of respect for Bernie as a person, as a competitor, his toughness."

"Basically, it came down to his production and a diminishing of his physical skills. We've all seen him play. I'm not going to bad-mouth and bash Bernie. He's done too much for this organization."

"That hurt me," Kosar said Monday night on ABC. "I'm comfortable and confident in my ability to make plays. It's disappointing to hear that. I feel I'm still throwing the ball well. ... It's pretty sad."

Kosar, who turns 30 on Nov. 25, played in 108 games and started 105 of them in nine seasons after Cleveland chose him in the 1985 supplemental draft. A native of nearby Boardman, Ohio, Kosar led the University of Miami to the national championship in 1983.

Five weeks ago, Kosar signed a seven-year, $27 million contract, but it was not guaranteed. The contract would have been a burden for the Browns to carry under the NFL's impending salary cap, particularly if Kosar was not starting.

He took the Browns to the playoffs in each of his first five seasons, making it to the AFC Championship Game three times; only to lose to Denver each time.

But from the time Belichick arrived, there was friction. Belichick insisted on considerable control of the offense at the expense of Kosar's biggest asset: his ability to read defenses and adjust to them at the line of scrimmage.

Dallas Cowboy trainers huddle around quarterback Troy Aikman after he pulled his hamstring Sunday afternoon. Aikman said he may try acupuncture in an attempt to play this Sunday.

Aikman may play Sunday

By The Associated Press

IRVING, Texas — Dallas Cowboys quarterback Troy Aikman, limping with the first pulled hamstring of his career, said Monday he might try acupuncture in an effort to play next weekend against Phoenix.

Aikman went down in a heap in the third period of Sunday's 31-9 victory over the New York Giants.

"It's pretty sore and I'm sure there is some bleeding but doctors don't believe it's tearing," Aikman said. "I'm day to day this week. Nothing has been ruled out. But you'd have to be optimistic to say I'll play this week."

Aikman said he will consider acupuncture if the bleeding clears. He's treating the injury with icepacks.

"There are some other players who have had success with it, so I'll give it a try," Aikman said. "I'll look into it."

Aikman said he had never pulled a hamstring during high school in Henryetta, Okla., or in college at Oklahoma and UCLA.

"I didn't even know what it felt like," he said.

Point guard pilots Howard to 89-73 victory over Ranger

By DAVE HARGRAVE
Sports Editor

It's too early to know for sure, but the latest in a long line of Lady Hawk stars may have popped over the horizon Monday night.

The Howard College women's basketball team beat Ranger Junior College 89-73 at the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum, and leading the Lady Hawks was thrill-a-minute point guard Cathy Grice of Los Angeles. Grice, a freshman in just her fourth junior college game, led Howard in points (19), rebounds (eight) and "oohs" and "aahs" (too many to mention).

"She's been our bright spot," said Howard coach Royce Chadwick, who watched Howard start, stop, start and stop on its way to its fourth win in as many games. "Cathy's an excellent basketball player, and when she's in a zone she's pretty hard to stop. Plus, she's just a great kid."

"She's got the potential to be one of the best point guards ever. She's getting better and better."

Grice, 5-foot-6, crossed the legs of her defender several times, surprised the Ranger defense (and sometimes her teammates) with pinpoint passes and dazzled the crowd. Her crowning moment came in the second half - she drove from backcourt, flew to the hoop and took the ball behind her back from right to left as she jumped and scored a layup.

Ranger coach Anthony Simmons said of Howard, "They've got some experienced post players, and when you add a point guard like the one they've got, they're going to win a lot of games."

Howard seemed destined to win a cakewalk when the Lady Hawks raced to a 17-5 lead. Five different players - Grice, Becky Barnes, Annette Robinson, Angel Spinks and Tiffany Johnson - scored as Howard built that lead, which it later pushed to 24-10.

Then the pattern started. Ranger (0-4) hit three three-pointers in the span of a minute to cut Howard's lead to 28-22. Howard followed with an 11-point run to lead by 17, but Ranger came back to cut the lead to 10. Howard led 48-35 at the half.

"We've got a lot of adjustments to make," Chadwick said. "We came in, we were ready to play, and we were excited. That will carry you through about 5 minutes, but then you start to calm down and you have to regroup. We didn't regroup and we made three or four quick turnovers to get them back in it."

Howard committed 22 turnovers, but Ranger topped that with 26. After quickly falling 17 down to start the second half, Ranger cut the Howard lead to 11 three times, the last at 64-53 with 11 minutes, 18 seconds left. Finally, the knock-out came.

Robinson, a 6-3 sophomore from Killeen, hit a 12-foot jumper in the lane. Ellen Griffin, a 5-11 freshman from Brookshire, scored the first points of her Howard career on a tough offensive rebound. Grice slashed and danced her way to a suave left-handed layup and a foul. She added the free throw.

By the time the ambush was over, Howard had scored 12 straight points to take a 76-53 lead, and Chadwick started to pull his starters off the court.

During Howard's game-winning rally, Ranger went 6:16 without scoring. Call them the Three-Point Rangers, for the visitors fired an amazing total of 40 treys, hitting just 12. Lolita Brown, a sophomore, led Ranger with 23 points and 13 rebounds.

Robinson had 14 points and eight rebounds for Howard, and Angel Spinks scored 11. Joy Bass, a 6-0 freshman from Austin, came off the bench in the second half to score seven and snare five boards.

The Lady Hawks' next game is Thursday in the New Mexico Tournament in Hobbs. Their next home game is Nov. 18 when they host the three-day Howard College Tourney.

Jacqueline Bigar - Horoscope

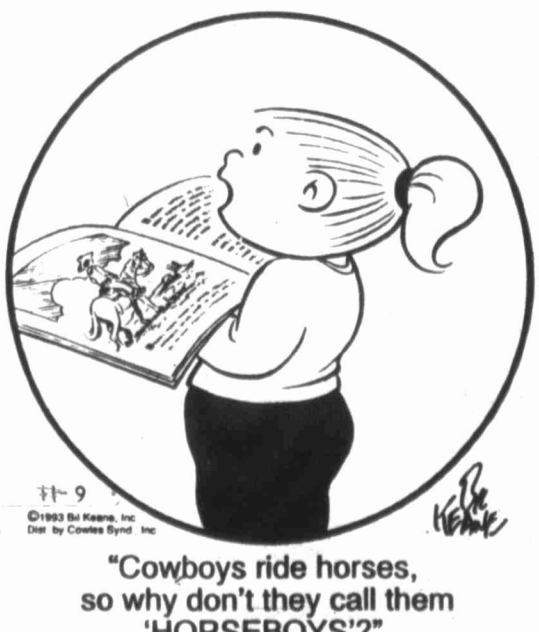

FOR WEDNESDAY, NOV. 10, 1993
ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your need to make a point eases up later in the day. Help out in a family situation. Loving conversations, which can be intense, will bring positive results. A partner provides a lucky break. Tonight: Entertain at home.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Finances are finally settling down. You discover a solution to a problematic situation. Stop minding words. Instead, be positive about your opinions. Touch base with a loyal friend at work who can give you needed feedback. Tonight: Swap info with a pal.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You are on a roll and have reason to celebrate - but don't overdo it. A conservative approach will get you farther. Be aware of what you must do to make your life work. You hear news from a distance that makes you happy. Tonight: Go to the movies.
CANCER (June 21-July 22): If you feel like a cat about to spring, it is because you are about to put a major plan into effect. Be careful how you approach another about a financial matter. Be aware of your feelings concerning an amorous relationship. Tonight: As you like it.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Make the most of the earlier hours of the day because by evening you will want to vanish. Other things - like one-on-one mixing - will be on your mind. Loving comments and flirtation will mix. Tonight: You're frisky, aren't you?
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You take a professional stand and find that it works for you. Be willing to move to the next step. Another cares about you quite a bit and expresses it. Put some extra effort into your work. It will make a difference in the long run. Tonight: Whisper in someone's ear.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Do some research with a friend. Take a firm stand in the later part of the day. A loved one will respect you for it and just might go along. Tonight: Burn the midnight oil.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Find out how a partner feels about a project before you take action. Your plan is more innovative than you realize. When you get feedback, you will know that you have someone's support. A family member is interested in an investment you're making. Tonight: Plan a weekend getaway.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You need to verify news and looking at things in a new light. As playful as you are at present, you need to have a serious talk with a loved one. A friend helps you get what you want. Look to increased happiness. Tonight: Go for some romance.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Charge into work and get as much done as possible. A financial opportunity comes your way, and you might need to make some time off to check with someone in the know. Your understanding of what makes a situation tick will help you. Tonight: Be where the gang is.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You are more in contact with your feeling than you have been in a long time. A loved one cares about you and expresses it in a deep way. Make a long-distance phone call. Tonight: Get plenty of exercise done.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Handle a personal issue early in the day so it doesn't interfere with other activities. Security is highlighted. Take a creative approach with a work-related matter and with a loved one. Be careful how much you reveal to a business partner today. Tonight: Make it a duo.
IF NOVEMBER 10 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You are likely to feel this year that others are in control, but that will not be the case. In important partnership matters, however, you will need to hear others' opinions before you make decisions. Your magnetic ways will help you get the support you want. Be careful with overindulgence; a weight gain is likely. After winter, look to scheduling a long-desired trip. Flirtation, travel and experimentation will be highlighted. If single, you could meet someone quite exotic. CANCER opens your eyes.

Dear Abby - Letters... Some stepmoms happy with role

DEAR READERS: When "Fed-Up Stepmother in Lancaster, Pa.," asked my readers to respond, the mail came pouring in. There are many frustrated stepmoms out there, but there are others who are happy. Read on:
DEAR ABBY: The day my son was born, I sat in the hospital and cried. I knew being a parent was the hardest job in the world. The day my first husband and I divorced, I sat in the courtroom and cried. I knew being a single parent was the hardest job in the world. The day I married my second husband (and his two kids), I sat at the reception and cried. I knew being a stepparent would be a breeze after what I had already been through.
Then reality set in. Nothing is harder than raising another woman's children. You are a constant reminder to them that their mother left them. And for some reason they just know it's your fault. You are a daily reminder that Daddy and Mommy aren't together anymore. Somehow that is also your fault. They also have to share Daddy with "her."
I strongly believe the fathers of these children are just as much to blame for the problems. They do not believe their children are anything less than perfect. They allow these kids to control them through guilt and manipulation.
I've been to hell and back with this so-called "blended family." I could write a book, but who has the time? I sleep with one eye open and my back to the wall, emotionally exhausted. I have begged my husband to face reality, but after five years, it's like banging my head against a wall.
I started counseling two years ago to save this marriage and family. Thank God, I realized I needed to save myself from any more humiliation and abuse. I love my husband, DENNIS THE MENACE
