Second annual Cranefest activities set for Feb. 4-5

By TIM JONES
Staff Writer

Big Spring's second annual "Cranefest," sponsored by the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce, has been scheduled for Feb. 4-5.

Beginning at 7 p.m. Friday, Feb. 4, dinner and a talk by Ed Kutac, author of "Birder's Guide of Texas," will kickoff the two day event at Garret Hall located at the First Methodist church.

Saturday's schedule of events begins with breakfast at 7:30 a.m. in the Crestwood Hall party room at the RV Park Of Texas, followed by guided bus trip tours to view cranes in their feeding areas.

Scheduled into the morning tour is a stop at the Big Spring State Park/Scenic Mountain to view birds and to study historic rock carvings and then to Comanche Trail Park for hiking along the flora-and-fauna trails.

After returning to Crestwood Hall for a hot lunch and program, buses will take birders to nearby Knott to view crane and waterfowl feeding.

Cranefest coincides with the annual "Around the World in 80 Bites" gastronomic fund-raising event beginning at 4:30 p.m. Saturday at the Heritage Museum, which adds variety to the already event-filled weekend.

Promoters of the "Cranefest" invite bird-lovers statewide to submit designs for a logo to represent the event, and a $300 prize will be awarded to the artist of the winning sketch. The art will become property of "Cranefest" and should no entry be selected, competition will continue the next year.

The lesser sandhill cranes begin their migration in late October from summer homes in Alaska, Canada and the Arctic region. In February, the peak of their migratory season, thousands of birds feed all day in the Big Spring area, and by nightfall, they return to the playa lakes, some within Big Spring's city limits. The shallow lakes protect them from predators.

These interesting birds stand more than three-and-one-half feet tall, with a wing span of up to six feet and weigh from five to eight pounds. Plumage on young birds is brownish in color, changing to gray on adults which have bald red foreheads and black legs.

For information about any activities and costs, as well as lodging information, contact Marae Brooks at the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce by calling 263-7641.

Browning sentenced to life, fined $10,000

By JANET AUSBURY
Staff Writer

Randall Mark Browning, convicted Tuesday of sexual assault on a 14-year-old girl, was sentenced to life in prison and fined $10,000.

The jury deliberated for 50 minutes before returning the verdict. Browning and his family showed no obvious reaction. The girl's family cheered briefly and surrounded her with hugs after the sentence was announced.

Don Richard, Browning's attorney, said his client is adamant about appealing the verdict. Richard predicted an appeal may occur within the year.

District Attorney Rick Hamby was not surprised by the sentence. "I hope this has a deterrent effect to what seems to be a growing epidemic in the community," he said.

Browning will receive 118 days' credit for the time he has served in the Howard County Jail awaiting trial. He will remain there awaiting transfer to the Texas Department of Corrections in Huntsville.

Browning was previously convicted in 1978 in Dallas County on two counts of rape of a child under age 17. The rapes were committed in May 1977.

Bivins rips government mandates

Tells PBRPC audience Texas will soon operate nation's biggest prisons

By TIM JONES
Staff Writer

There was good news of sorts for Big Spring Wednesday, as the city hosted the annual general membership meeting and luncheon of the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission.

Howard County Judge Ben Lockhart and Big Spring Mayor Tim Blackshear welcomed visiting dignitaries and other guests. Lockhart expressing his thanks to the PBRPC for selecting Howard County as host for the event, and Blackshear telling the crowd that positive changes are occurring in the "crossroads of West Texas."

"We've stopped our downward economic plunge and are on our way back up," Blackshear said. "We'll be seeing 600 new jobs locally in 1994 and $50 million in new construction."

Blackshear presented a certificate honoring guest speaker State Sen. Teel Bivins, declaring Wednesday as "Teel Bivins Day in Big Spring." A key to the city was also given to the fourth generation rancher and businessman from Amarillo.

"His 1993 record in Austin demonstrates his faithfulness to both his constituents and to the citizens of the state of Texas," Gaines County Judge Max Townsend said of Bivins during his introduction. "Bivins has a 96 percent voting and 96 percent attendance record in the senate this last year."

But it was Bivins who offered one of the biggest surprises of the day.

"I'm declaring a campaign dividend," Bivins exclaimed. "Since no one is challenging me this year, I'm returning $150,000 in campaign contributions to the donors."

Bivins received resounding applause from the crowd by adding, "Sen. John Montford, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, is behind Big Spring," adding that Montford recently said, "We've got to do something for Big Spring."

Much of Bivins commentary, however, dealt with the frustration municipal and county governments experience as a result of mandates from state and federal authorities.

"What are these 'other governments' going to do to us next?" Bivins asked. "Mandates without funding, like the $2 billion new dollars that will be needed to cover the state's expanded eligibility for Medicare," he said.

"County jails filled with paper-ready felons costing the taxpayers more and more are simply mandates by omission," accused Bivins.

"From 1980 to 1990, Texas led the

Mamie Lee Dodds selected chamber's Woman of Year

By JANET AUSBURY
Staff Writer

Mamie Lee Dodds, a part-time and volunteer worker at the Chamber of Commerce who is active in the community, has won the Chamber's "Woman of the Year" award for 1993.

Dodds will be formally recognized at the Chamber's annual banquet 7 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 1, at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum, along with the Chamber's "Man of the Year," who has yet to be announced.

Since 1972, the Chamber has selected a man and woman each year who have contributed to the community not just as part of his or her job but with outside activities.

"This is an effort by the Chamber to recognize people who go out of their way to improve the quality of life in the community for no pay," said Chamber President Ben Bancroft.

Terry Burns, the Chamber's executive director, said past winners were announced at the banquets but this year the Chamber decided to announce the winners ahead of time.

"In the past, the people who won got lost in the banquet publicity," said Burns. "Now they will get their share of publicity for what they've done for the community."

Bancroft added that friends and relatives of past winners often had not made the effort to attend the banquet, not realizing who the award winner would be.

"Now the friends and relatives know they can come see this person receive an award," he said. "I think in the past, people who didn't attend might have if they realized they knew the person being honored."

Dodds has lived in Big Spring since she was a high school sophomore — "back in the Dust Bowl days," she said. She retired from teaching after 30 years and continues to teach Sunday school.

Dodds serves on the city government's Traffic Commission and Parks and Recreation boards. She also serves on several Chamber committees, including the Clean Committee, Athletic Committee and the decorations committee for the Chamber's annual banquet.

She is the Chamber's coordinator for the Tourist Information Center. In addition to preparing information packets for out-of-towners who request information about Big Spring, Dodds also selects and trains volunteers for the center.

She regularly gives programs about flag etiquette and the history of the United States flag.

She is also active in the First United Methodist Church, has been a lay speaker for 23 years and serves as lay speaker coordinator for the Big Spring district. She also serves as a 4-H Club sponsor.

In the past, Dodds was parade assistant chair for the Big Spring Centennial Committee. She coordinated the first Christmas parade and organized the July 4 "Let Freedom Ring" pageant from 1965 to 1976. She received the Mayor's Commendation Award in 1976.

What happens when students are numbers

In the 1950s, when Dr. Clark Kerr was chancellor of the University of California, Berkeley, he conceded that the enormous enrollment, then 15,000, was deleteriously impersonal.

Paul Harvey

"Students," he complained, "have become 'numbers' rather than names."

The historic College of William and Mary in Williamsburg, Va., with a campus population of 10,000, today might be considered deleteriously impersonal, though standout students will still stand out.

Gershon Wynn stood out. He was bright, hard-working and into everything.

He was a leader in student government and often addressed college officials in behalf of commuter student issues.

When the off-campus student council needed someone to organize and manage parties, Gershon always pitched in.

He pledged Sigma Mu Sigma fraternity and ultimately became the fraternity's rush chairman.

Much of Gershon's availability for extracurricular activities related to his gift for getting by without studying. He did hang out a lot in the school library and was ever able to dominate frat rap sessions with his uncanny grasp of a wide spectrum of subjects.

History and economics were his majors, but his interests covered the entire spectrum of learning.

The college-owned house for off-campus students is a gathering place for commuter students to study, fix a meal or just hang out. There, Gershon was personally popular and was elected to represent that house on the Student Government Association.

With other students, he had part-time employment at the Williamsburg Winery and rented a house from the winery president, Patrick Duffeler. His roommate was fraternity brother Patrick Duffeler II.

Nobody knows how the rumors started last summer that standout student Gershon Wynn had misrepresented his academic credentials from Virginia Military Institute.

When the new school year began, Gershon's fraternity routinely asked college administrators for Gershon's academic records.

There were none.

As mercifully as possible, I will synopsise what's happened since.

Gershon Wynn has no academic credentials; none at VMI, and none at William and Mary.

He has been on campus since 1992, "into everything" — except classes. He has attended no classes.

Gershon knows what he did was wrong. His mother died in 1990. He is not close to his father. His ambition to be "a student at William and Mary" and to have friends overwhelmed any inhibitions, so he initiated and perpetuated the charade.

Samuel Sadler, vice president for student affairs, says, "In a campus population of close to 10,000, one must understand how this could happen."

"Local city and county governments are so much closer to the taxpayers that they receive most of the flack," he said.
"Legislative bodies are evolutionary, not revolutionary, so we don't act until we have to," he added. "A prime example being the state school finance issue. Challenged in the courts since 1968, it's still a continuing saga," he said.
"Litigation followed by legislation is an endless continuum with no end in sight," he said.

Returning to criminal justice issues, Bivins said the first duty of government is to protect its people.

"Crime is more rampant and the root of the crisis exists in the criminal justice system where we got behind the curve, paralyzed for 17 years by the Ruiz lawsuit," he said.

"It's estimated that by 1997, Texas will have 127,000 prison beds and will be the largest penal system in the world. If the crime rate persists, there will still be a backlog in the county courts in 1997, even with all planned expansion," he declared.

"The Environmental Protection Agency is now considering requiring expensive pollution equipment for any combustion engine that 'can' emit 30 tons yearly of pollutants into the air. Examples of such are compressor motors in the oilfield and farm irrigation motors. You can write them about the proposal at the following address: EPA Air Docket, LE-131, Attention Docket A91-52, Room M-1500, Waterside Mall, 401 M Street Southwest, Washington, D.C. 20460. They probably do that long address so no one will write," he commented.

"The new state agency which combined the old 'air and water' boards is called the Texas Natural Resources Conservation Commission; some of us in Austin call it the 'train-wreck'. It's supposed to allow one-stop permitting," he said.

"In New Mexico, I visited some 100 dairies which could just as easily be here in West Texas, but our state's onerous permitting regulations make it cost prohibitive. We rather need regional permits by rule than statewide regulations that are unworkable. Let's end well intentioned bureaucrats seeking to solve regional issues with statewide policies. It's not common-sense leadership," Bivins said, concluding his speech.

The PBRPC officers to the board of directors were elected for 1994. They are Max Townsend, Gaines County judge; Pat McAdoo, the mayor of Seagraves; and Charles Arthur, Dawson County judge.

Midland will be the site for next year's PBRPC meeting.

Arsenal displayed as evidence

The Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — A huge arsenal of military-style weapons quickly became the focus of prosecutors attempting to show that 11 religious followers of David Koresh were prepared for a holy war with government agents.

Rifles, gun barrels and evidence of charred ammunition were hauled before jurors Wednesday by Texas investigators who were the first to pick through the ashy remains of the 77-acre compound that housed Koresh and his followers just outside Waco.

Defense attorneys, however, said the Branch Davidians, who are on trial in federal court, collected weapons as an investment. They used the guns only when they were besieged by agents of the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms early last year, the attorneys said.

The lawyers for Koresh's followers charged with murdering four ATF agents grilled Texas Ranger Capt. David Byrnes about his belief that two ATF supervisors lied about events leading to the raid.

In questioning from defense attorney Dan Cogdell, Byrnes acknowledged he believes ATF agents Chuck Sarabyn and Phil Chojnacki were not truthful in interviews with Texas Rangers.

"Those two individuals were fired by their supervisors because they lied about what had happened?" Cogdell said.

Byrnes said he believes they "misrepresented" the facts.

Cogdell: "You mean they lied?"

Byrnes: "Yes."

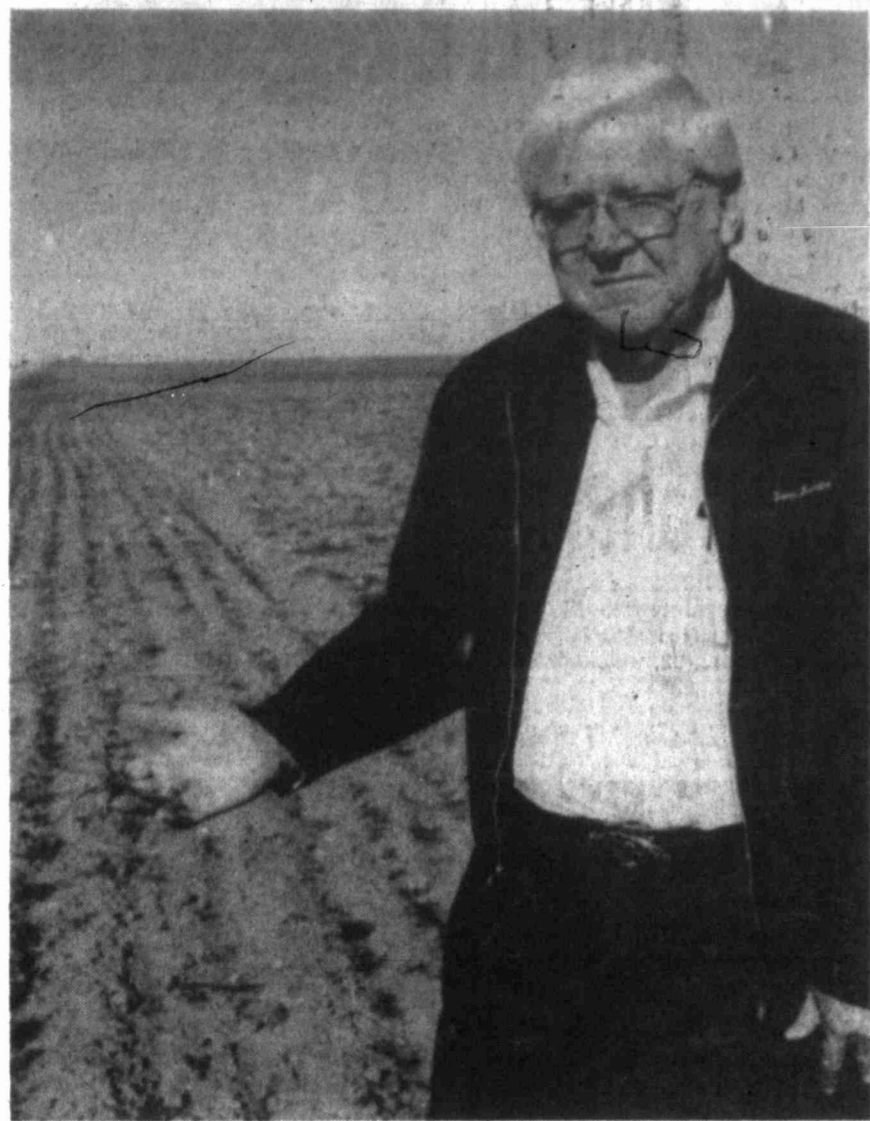

Sarabyn and Chojnacki have been placed on paid administrative leave; no final disciplinary action has been taken.

Outside the courtroom, defense attorneys marked Byrnes' testimony as a minor victory because U.S. District Judge Walter Smith has denied a defense request to introduce a Treasury report that documents several blunders made by Sarabyn and Chojnacki during the ATF raid.

Byrnes also was asked about whether the Rangers led a truly independent probe into the killings. Defense attorneys criticized the Crosby County farmer Joe Rankin surveys his wheat fields under a cloudless sky Tuesday in Owens. Rankin and other farmers say the state's dry spell is stunting some winter crops and could threaten later crops that need deep moisture.

Cloudless sky, parched soil cause for farmers' concern

The Associated Press

OWENS — Crosby County farmer Joe Rankin remembers precisely the Oct. 13 rainfall on his wheat crop. It hasn't rained since.

Rankin, 64, stood under a cloudless sky one recent afternoon and pointed across to his neighbor's land, usually lush and grazed by cattle. There, too, the wheat was puny, thin-rooted — and above all, dry.

"Only fools and newcomers predict the weather in West Texas," he mused.

A prolonged dry spell across much of the state has parched winter crops and already threatened spring planting.

Agriculture experts say the lack of moisture and high winds are stunting grain crops. Livestock, with no wheat to graze, are being fed hay instead. "You could fly over the Panhandle and not tell the difference between wheat fields and plowed fields," said Bill Nelson, executive vice president of the Texas Wheat Producers Association in Amarillo.

The statewide wheat outlook is down 58 percent of normal, Nelson said.

The Texas Agricultural Extension Service reports very short soil moisture in the Rolling Plains and Central Texas. Soil moisture is short, the state service says, in the Panhandle, South Plains, Far West Texas, East Texas and South Texas.

Rainfall totals from 1993 were an average 3.5 inches below normal across the agriculture-dependent Lubbock region, the National Weather Service said.

Lubbock itself received 12.75 inches in 1993, down from the yearly 18.65-inch average, said Larry Toombs, NWS meteorological technician. The last "significant" shower was one-quarter inch Dec. 12, he said.

"Prior to that," Toombs paused. "Oh my gosh ... in November only 30 hundredths."

He had to search back to June to find the South Plains' last good soaking. That month, Lubbock recorded 3.78 inches, 3.4 inches of it pouring down June 30.

The current dry spell bodes even worse for the future.

Cotton and other spring-planted crops need generous sub-soil moisture to endure through August, ag experts say. Snow and winter rains usually provide that deep dampness.

Wayne Wyatt, manager of the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District, said he worries about the level of the Ogallala Aquifer next year, after farmers irrigate heavily through 1994.

And Steve Newton, who manages the Owens Co-op Gin near Rankin's fields, warned of spring dust blizzards if no rain falls to help anchor the soil.

Rangers for hoisting an ATF flag at the compound.

"They (ATF) were not allowed on the scene ... The reason being there had been some concerns that people would think it was a coverup, if you will," Byrnes said, explaining why his agency investigated.

Under cross-examination, Byrnes also said the ATF had not made internal incident reports on the gun battle and that he complained the FBI wasn't preserving the crime scene during the standoff.

Texas Ranger Israel Ray Cano testified 21 of the 22 rifle remnants presented were either military-issue M-16s or civilian AR-15s, both of which can be automatic or semiautomatic.

Cano said he could not identify another gun that was recovered and displayed for jurors — a large, military-style rifle.

Byrnes testified about the investigation he led into the gun battle and compared the burned compound to a war zone with hand grenade parts and "rounds of ammunition cooking off."

Four agents were killed when gunfire broke out Feb. 28, 1993, at the group's compound near Waco after about 100 officers approached the place with an arrest warrant for Koresh. Sixteen agents were wounded. Six Branch Davidians also are believed to have died in the shootout.

After a 51-day standoff, Koresh and about 80 of his followers, including children, died in a raging fire April 19 that engulfed the compound as the FBI attempted to insert tear gas.

The 11 Branch Davidian defendants are accused in a sweeping 10-count indictment of conspiring to murder the agents, and some face additional weapons charges. They could face up to life in prison if convicted.

"It was David Koresh who should be held accountable and the leaders of the ATF should be held accountable, not these people," defense attorney Joe Turner said in opening statements.

Reno pledges 'ruggedly independent' investigation

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The special counsel investigation of the Clintons' 1980s Arkansas real estate investment will be "ruggedly independent" and include its relationship with a now-failed failed savings and loan, Attorney General Janet Reno says.

President Clinton reluctantly called for the investigation Wednesday, dropping his opposition to an independent review after the White House concluded there was no other way to halt a growing political controversy.

"We believe that a special counsel can conduct an independent and fair inquiry and we believe that it will show what we believe, that the Clintons did nothing wrong," Clinton adviser George Stephanopoulos said. White House press secretary Dee Dee Myers said in Moscow early today that Clinton made his decision after conferring Tuesday with his wife, Hillary, back in Washington, as well as with aides. "The president slept on it overnight and decided to go forward," she said.

She said the president was keeping his focus on the issues of his trip but acknowledged that, "He's president and these things follow him wherever he goes." She said Whitewater had become a distraction and that the decision to seek a special prosecutor "is an attempt to move beyond that."

Clinton, himself, has not spoken to Reno during this trip and does not plan to, Myers said. "I just don't think we have a lot to say about it."

Even with their victory, Republicans who for weeks demanded appointment of a special counsel were not satisfied, questioning whether Reno's choice would be impartial and demanding that Congress conduct a special investigation of its own into the Whitewater Development Corp.

Senate Republican leader Bob Dole said the fact that Reno was acting at Clinton's request indicated "she's not in effect an independent attorney general."

But Rep. Jim Leach of Iowa, senior Republican on the House Banking Committee, praised Reno as impeccably honest. "Whoever she names will be above reproach," he said on CBS today.

The White House and congressional Democrats quickly accused the GOP of playing politics with the issue, and Reno sought to assure Republicans and the public that the investigation would be truly independent and comprehensive.

"The person I choose I want to be ruggedly independent," Reno said, adding that she would name someone "as soon as possible."

In a letter to Reno, White House counsel Bernard Nussbaum asked for appointment of a special counsel to "conduct an appropriate independent investigation of the Whitewater matter and report to the American people."

Reno, however, described Nussbaum's letter as seeking an outside investigation of "all matters concerning the Madison bank investigation in Arkansas."

The now-defunct Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan was run by James McDougal, who also was Bill and Hillary Rodham Clinton's partner in Whitewater.

Justice Department investigators are trying to determine whether depositors' funds were diverted from Madison to help retire Clinton's 1984 gubernatorial campaign debt and whether thrift money was improperly deposited in the Whitewater account.

Some Republicans also have questioned Mrs. Clinton's legal work on behalf of the S&L in the mid-1980s when it sought approval from Arkansas regulators for a recapitalization effort.

Attorney General Janet Reno talks during a news conference Wednesday in Washington after President Clinton asked the Justice Department to name a special counsel to investigate his investment in an Arkansas land development. Reno said she will pick a special counsel "as soon as possible."

Presidents Boris Yeltsin and Bill Clinton are surrounded by their aides in the Kremlin Palace in Moscow. A break in between.

Clinton helps Russia

The Associated Press

MOSCOW — President Bill Clinton and his old friends today gathered inside the Kremlin to seal an agreement on getting nuclear warheads out of the hands of two leaders of the vast Russian republic, the gleaming white marble palace for a warm handshake.

Clinton, hoping to help Russia against rising economic and political problems, said he was pleased to see Russian president Boris Yeltsin.

After their first meeting, Clinton said he was visiting a rebuilt church that had been razed, chatting with market and street vendors.

Talking about the whole conversation, Clinton said he and Yeltsin were working together for the lives of ordinary people.

Clinton said he was pleased to see Yeltsin ways to help Russia and "a large Russian project said would create jobs."

Clinton said he was pleased to see Yeltsin with a map showing different types of projects that have been given and will be given.

At the outset of the summit last month, Clinton said he and Yeltsin "the personal relationship" that developed last month in British Columbia.

"I believe that the work to lead a free economic system for one another."

Clinton visit could help Yeltsin during Russia's upheaval

The Associated Press

MOSCOW — President Clinton and Boris Yeltsin greeted each other as old friends today, then settled down inside Kremlin walls for summit talks at a tense moment in Russian history. In a goodwill gesture, they will seal an agreement Friday to stop targeting nuclear missiles at one another, U.S. officials said.

Opening three days of talks, the two leaders strode from opposite ends of the vast Hall of St. George in the Kremlin, meeting in the center of the gleaming white and gold room for a warm handshake.

Clinton, hoping to steel Yeltsin against rising opposition to his economic and political reforms, said the Russian president "deserves our support."

After their first round of talks, Clinton did some sightseeing in Moscow, visiting a rebuilt Russian Orthodox church that the Communists had razed, chatting with workers in a market and strolling through Red Square.

Talking about his meeting with Yeltsin, the president said: "The whole conversation was about how our work together can help change the lives of ordinary Russian people for the better."

Clinton said he discussed with Yeltsin ways to speed up international aid and "a big joint American-Russian project on energy" that he said would create many jobs.

Clinton said he presented Yeltsin with a map showing where in Russia different types of western aid had gone "so we can document what we have given and where it has gone."

At the outset of the summit, Yeltsin said he and Clinton would build on "the personal rapport and friendship" that developed in their first summit last March in Vancouver, British Columbia.

"I believe that together, we can work to lead a new security for Europe based on democratic values, free economies, the respect of nations for one another," Clinton told Yeltsin.

After a full morning of discussions, they were ending the day at a private dinner at Yeltsin's country home outside Moscow.

Clinton's message was that despite the rise of Russian ultranationalists, communists and other foes of reform, Yeltsin must not relax the pace of painful change.

Ultrationalist Vladimir Zhirinovskiy, a leader of Yeltsin's foes, sniped at the summit from parliament.

"It's nothing good from Mr. Clinton to Russia, nothing for Russia," Zhirinovskiy said today. "Only promises, promises: 'We'll give you money, money' Where? Where is this money? 'We'll give you technology' Where is this help? We need no help from the United States and the West ... We are a very rich country, very strong, very rich."

On Friday, Clinton and Yeltsin will finalize an agreement to stop aiming long-range missiles at each other, administration officials said. It will be announced as part of a ceremony with Ukrainian President Leonid Kravchuk, who has agreed to dismantle his country's nuclear arsenal for security guarantees from the United States and Russia and a doubling of U.S. aid.

During a break in the talks, Yeltsin gave Clinton a brief sightseeing tour of the Kremlin's Cathedral Square. The two men wore coats and scarves but were hatless in the frigid weather.

Later, Clinton browsed at an outdoor kiosk near the former KGB headquarters at Lubyanka Square. He went into a bakery and a meat and fish shop. Clinton took off his gray fur hat and waved to a cheering crowd of more than 500 people.

Moscow was the centerpiece of Clinton's eight-day European trip, which began with a NATO summit and a meeting in Prague with Eastern European leaders eager for closer ties with the Western military alliance as a safeguard against any aggressors.

Elbow employs 'inclusion' for special needs students

GLEENDA CUMMINGS
 Staff Writer

ELBOW — The latest buzzword in education is "inclusion." It means learning disabled, handicapped and special education students need to be included in the regular classroom when feasible.

This year at Elbow Elementary, students in the fifth grade are included in the regular classroom. Instead of students coming to their resource teacher, Brenda White goes to them.

This inclusion policy also carries through with the Chapter 1 students as well. The teachers work with the regular classroom teacher, Rhonda Rothell, and everyone benefits.

"This way, no one knows who is getting the help. Everyone gets help. Inclusion is an alternative to singling out students and it allows help for students that may not qualify for special programs but do need a little extra attention," says White.

"Students need to be in a regular classroom. They are not secluded or separated after they complete school. They can't be expected to function in life if they have been separated from the regular classroom in school," explained Elbow Principal Richard Light.

But teachers say including such students in the regular classroom is not always easy, and it will be a while before it will be accomplished in all grades.

White has been the resource room teacher for 17 years. She goes to workshops and tries to stay current with the ideas being used to help students.

White has several teacher's aides who enable her to instigate new lesson ideas.

The school recently purchased a motorized "Cooper car" for a student that has cerebral palsy. This car will enable the student to be more mobile once she learns how to use it. That mobility is hoped to give her the chance to believe in her abilities to have independence.

The Region 18 Education Service Center made the car possible for Elbow. Sylvia Gray works closely with area schools to provide equipment and help to meet the special needs of the students.

This summer, White went to a workshop to learn how to help communication-delayed students. She brought back to the school "Aided Language Stimulation."

The system uses "communication boards" to help with communication skills.

White has clear plastic "boards" with symbols and words that are used by all the students for communicating. The symbols may be used to help students know routines such as brushing their teeth, or going to lunch or physical education class.

Displayed is a communication board, used by Brenda White, resource teacher at Elbow Elementary School. The aid is used for communication delayed students.

Some are used to sing songs such as "The Wheels on the Bus," "I'm a Little Teapot" and "The Itsy Bitsy Spider."

If the song requires that the student answer, White has a recorder with buttons and symbols that students can push to "sing" the required response.

The communication board provides a method of non-verbal and verbal exchange for all students. It helps with multiple sensory stimulation, because it requires looking, touching and a response from the students.

"I am very fortunate that the school system consents to the many ideas brought to them in regards to this group of students," White said. "The school board made it possible for me to help so many kids, as opposed to the few I could help if they weren't so caring and agreeable."

"They allow this work to be so much more diverse than it might be, giving their consent and the money they budget for these students," she continued.

"I feel sure that as long as the monies are there, the school system will continue to allow teachers to do their very best for the special needs students," White said. "They deserve to be recognized for their efforts, too."

Commissioners urge return of school prayer

By JANET AUSBURY
 Staff Writer

STANTON — Martin County commissioners approved a resolution urging the return of prayer to public schools during a meeting Jan. 11.

The resolution was on the agenda to be discussed during the Jan. 10 meeting, but was tabled because no resolution had been prepared, according to County Clerk Virginia James.

A resolution was prepared in time to be approved when the meeting continued Jan. 11.

The commissioners also selected a salary grievance committee from the 1992 grand jurors list. The 1992 list was used because none had been required for 1993.

In other business, the commissioners certified the 1994 budget and declared they had been working under this budget since Jan. 1. Martin County officials were also set as being paid on a salary basis, which is done each year.

Court terms for the County and Justice of the Peace Courts were set at every two months; for example, January-February, March-April, etc.

Paperwork was approved to formally establish the Martin County Library. Although the library has existed for years, no formal paperwork had been used to establish the library's existence. James said the formal establishment was necessary to obtain financial assistance for the library.

Other approvals included advertising for proposals for group medical insurance, payment of a road reclaimer, payment to a man who had overpaid his juvenile son's restitution to the court and routine bills and past meeting minutes.

Livestock, grain producers suffer under dry conditions

The Associated Press

COLLEGE STATION — Although some rains swept the state early this week, high winds caused the moisture to keep blowing through the air. Both livestock and grain producers are suffering from the lack of moisture and are hoping the spring crops will alleviate the stress caused by a poor winter season, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service reports.

Jon Zeidler, meteorologist at the National Weather Service Agricultural Service Center in College Station, said an upper-level disturbance brought cloudy skies and scattered showers.

"We could get anywhere from a quarter of an inch to a half of an inch of rain, it just depends on how long the system stays in the state," he said.

Zeidler also said that a blast of arctic air will bring a cold weekend.

And with supplemental feeding of livestock continuing throughout the state, the paltry rains the front could bring wouldn't be enough to save forages and wheat pastures.

Ken Cook, district Extension director in San Angelo, said the ranges and pastures are dry because of the high winds and lack of moisture.

"All pastures need rain right now," Cook said.

Bodyguard confesses in Kerrigan case

By The Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — Tonya Harding's bodyguard told investigators that he, Harding's husband and two other men set up the attack that injured Olympic figure skating rival Nancy Kerrigan, according to news reports.

The bodyguard, Shawn Eric Eckardt, confirmed that Harding's husband, Jeff Gillooly, asked him to arrange the Jan. 6 attack. The Oregonian newspaper reported today in a copyright story, citing unnamed law enforcement sources.

No arrests have been made.

Authorities said there was no indication that Harding helped plan the attack or had any knowledge of it, according to The Oregonian and NBC News.

The investigation spread to three states as authorities in Oregon, Michigan and Arizona pieced together the story of how Kerrigan was targeted for an attack aimed at wrecking her chance to compete in last week's U.S. Figure Skating Championships.

The scheme allegedly involved Eckardt, Gillooly, an intermediary in Phoenix whom Eckardt knew, and a Portland man who carried out the assault. The Oregonian reported.

NBC quoted sources as saying that after a meeting in Portland, the hit man went to Boston, where Kerrigan lives and trains. It was there the investigators believe he originally planned to get Kerrigan, but bad weather somehow fouled the attempt, NBC said.

On Jan. 6 in Detroit, a man brandishing a club struck Kerrigan after a practice session at the U.S. Figure Skating Championships, severely bruising her right leg and forcing her to withdraw from the competition.

The attacker escaped after breaking the glass out of a locked arena door.

"There's no indication that Tonya's involved at all and our goal is to make her as competitive as possible for the games in Lillehammer," Schiller said this morning on NBC-TV's "Today."

Kerrigan withdrew from the event, but the U.S. Figure Skating Association named her to the Olympics team anyway, along with Harding, who won the U.S. championship two days later. The two women will be part of the U.S. contingent at the Winter Olympics in Lillehammer, Norway, Feb. 12-27.

On Tuesday, Detroit police said they had recovered a black metal baton, believed to be the weapon used in the attack that hobbled Kerrigan.

A Detroit resident found the baton in a dumpster behind the ice rink and turned it over to police, the Detroit Free Press said, quoting unidentified sources.

In Portland, meanwhile, another man, Russell "Rusty" Reitz, told The Oregonian that Eckardt had asked him two days before the Kerrigan assault if he'd be willing to kill someone for $65,000. Reitz said he declined.

"He said, 'Would you break somebody's leg?' I said, 'Well, I don't know, Shawn, I'm not that way.' And he says, 'Well, I got a job in Detroit. I'm going to send a team there,'" Reitz told The Oregonian.

Gillooly said Tuesday he had been questioned by the FBI, but denied he was involved in the attack.

"I wouldn't do that," Gillooly said. "I have more faith in my wife than to bump off her competition."

Harding has not commented since the reports surfaced, but Tuesday night she was asked by KOIN-TV about an anonymous letter it received accusing Gillooly of being involved in a plot.

"I can't believe it," she said. "I mean, why does someone want to discredit me? I just don't understand."

Harvey Schiller, executive director of the U.S. Olympic Committee, said there was no reason why Harding's participation in the Winter Games would be affected.

Early word of the alleged plot to attack Kerrigan came from a private investigator in Portland, Gary Crowe, who told The Associated Press the FBI learned of the alleged plot from a local minister.

Crowe said minister Eugene Saunders came to him for advice after being contacted by a friend who played a tape recording of Gillooly, Eckardt and the unidentified Arizona man discussing an attack on Kerrigan.

Crowe said Saunders told him a man's voice on the tape asked, "Why don't we just kill her?"

The response was: "We don't need to kill her. Let's just hit her in the knee."

Carlton reaches the Hall of Fame

Four-time Cy Young winner makes Hall on first try; Cepeda misses out

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Steve Carlton, the only pitcher to win four Cy Young Awards, was overwhelmingly elected to the Hall of Fame in his first year of eligibility Wednesday. Orlando Cepeda just missed in his final chance.

Carlton received 436 of 455 votes for 95.8 percent, the fifth-highest in history. But Cepeda, the subject of a big letter-writing campaign by the San Francisco Giants and members of Congress, fell seven votes short and finished with 73.6 percent.

It takes 75 percent to be elected, which meant 342 votes in balloting by the Baseball Writers Association of America. Among others who missed this time were 300-game winners Phil Niekro (273 votes) and Don Sutton (259), along with Tony Perez (263). Cepeda and Perez each hit 379 home runs.

Cepeda is the third player in the last decade to just miss election. Nellie Fox fell two votes shy in 1985 and Jim Bunning was seven votes short in 1988. In three years, Cepeda can become a candidate for selection to the Hall by the Veterans Committee in three years; Bunning and Fox are under consideration, too.

This is the second straight year that only one player was selected. Last year, Reggie Jackson was the lone choice.

Carlton was 329-244 with a 3.22 ERA in a career from 1965-88, most of it with the Philadelphia Phillies. He is ninth on baseball's win list — second among left-handers to Warren Spahn's 363 victories — and second in strikeouts with 4,136. He shares the NL record of 19 strikeouts in a game.

Carlton will be inducted into the shrine in Cooperstown, N.Y., on July 31. He is the 25th person to be selected in his first year of eligibility since the first election in 1936, and is scheduled to be the 217th member of the Hall.

"While I've never been one to place a great emphasis on individual awards, I'm touched to be elected to the Hall of Fame," Carlton said in a statement released by the Phillies.

Cepeda was an 11-time All-Star and batted .297 with 1,365 RBIs and 2,351 hits, along with his 379 home runs.

He received just 59.6 percent in voting last year. This year, the Giants and some members of Congress backed him, both groups believing his 1975 conviction of smuggling marijuana into Puerto Rico and his 10 months in jail may have hurt his candidacy.

Cepeda now works for the Giants in community relations and often speaks about the dangers of drug abuse.

Former Philadelphia Phillie pitching great Steve Carlton, shown above in a 1986 game, was elected to the Baseball Hall of Fame Wednesday. He was the only inductee selected for 1994.

Don't worry - one loss won't sink Chadwick, Howard

Howard College Lady Hawk fans will be greatly relieved to hear that Royce Chadwick has not called long-distance information seeking Dr. Kervorkian's home listing.

Steve Reagan

Nor has he been noticed making midnight walks down dark hallways, muttering incoherently.

And he's not even in need of antidepressants or other medication.

It's not as if Chadwick is normally a cover boy for "Psychology Today" or in need of protective supervision, but he was a mite upset after South Plains upset his undefeated and No. 2 ranked Lady Hawks 81-75 Monday night at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

It was a bitter loss for a number of reasons: the Lady Hawks' ranking; the fact that they hadn't lost a regular season game in almost two years; it was the conference opener for both teams; it was South Plains; etc.

What was particularly galling, however, was that the Lady Hawks played a sub-par game against the preseason conference favorite and still almost won the game.

Almost.

You know what they say about almost.

As Dennis Hopper would say, "Horseshoes and hand grenades, man! Horseshoes and hand grenades!"

I am not the biggest stat freak in the world, but two statistics from the game are telling: South Plains shot 78 percent from the free-throw line, compared to 61 percent for Howard and SPC fought the taller Lady Hawks to a virtual draw (48-46) in rebounding.

But to Chadwick, the problem went beyond numbers.

"I think it was a lack of execution," he said. "We were just a step slow in everything we did, which threw our timing off offensively and allowed too many penetrations defensively."

OK, so the Lady Hawks lost one they maybe should have won. And it is no secret that Chadwick hates losing about as much as paying taxes. But even he was surprised at people's reactions to him the morning after the loss.

"It was really strange," he said. "Everybody was tip-toeing around me, from my kids — 'How you doing, Dad?' — and at school it was very similar. It was very strange ... And it was just a basketball game. It wasn't like a death in the family."

To those still concerned with the coach's mental well-being, relax. The sun has come out, the birds would be singing if they weren't sunning themselves somewhere in the Yucatan right now and life as we know it continues, even for a formerly undefeated team.

"Pretty much everybody in Hawkland wants to know what happened," Chadwick said. "We know what's wrong, and we're going to work to get it fixed by Monday."

Chadwick, who publicly worried about how his team would react to the loss Monday night, said he was encouraged by their collective attitude when they met to review game tapes Tuesday.

"They were inquisitive," he said. "They were really wondering, 'What do we do to get back to where we were?' ... It was really one of our better practices."

"It's never good to lose a conference game, but the sun will be up tomorrow, win, lose or draw."

And the Lady Hawks were not the only highly regarded team to take it on the chin Monday night. Odessa College, another one of the preseason favorites, lost to Western Texas. And don't be surprised if someone bumps off South Plains in the next week or two.

All this means is that the race to the conference championship is a marathon, not a sprint. Chadwick likens it to a heavyweight match, with contenders trading body blows for 15 long, grueling rounds.

Round two for the Lady Hawks is next Monday at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum. The bell rings at 6 p.m. Chadwick believes his team is ready to rumble.

Strong, silent Carlton let four Cy Young awards do the talking

By The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — There always was an air of mystery to strong, silent Steve Carlton.

The mound was his world, where visitors were not welcome. Standing tall, he never smiled nor frowned, no matter whether the batter struck out or reached on an error.

For most of his glory years, "Lefty" did not speak to reporters.

He was not rude to those who approached his locker, he just would not talk to them. Perhaps there might be a word or two about wine, which he collected, but nothing more.

Carlton said he began the policy after he felt he had been burned by a writer he was friendly with. Whatever, his media blackout began a way of him shutting out everything that did not deal with him shutting out the opponent.

Now, Carlton lives with his wife, Beverly, on a 400-acre ranch in Durango, Colo. He said he strives to be a modern-day cowboy, relying only on himself and needing nothing from the outside world.

"I led a sheltered life for 23 years," Carlton told The Philadelphia Inquirer in a recent 4 1/2-hour interview. "I've had a lot of catching up to do."

Carlton, 49, has little interest in baseball now, although he says he could throw 85 mph and win 10 games if he returned to the major leagues tomorrow.

"Could I do it? Yes," he said. "Will I do it? No."

Carlton played from 1965-88 and won a World Series with both the Phillies and the St. Louis Cardinals. His last three seasons were a struggle and included stints with San Francisco, the Chicago White Sox, Cleveland and Minnesota.

Boycott drawing mixed reviews among college hoops coaches

By The Associated Press

College basketball coaches are used to making difficult decisions on the court. However, their toughest decision this season may be whether to play at all.

While most coaches appear ready to support a boycott to protest scholarship cuts by the NCAA, others are taking a wait-and-see approach, and at least one has rejected the idea.

"Our position, unofficially because I have not talked with our athletic director, is not to boycott," said New Mexico State coach Neil McCarthy.

"I'm in sympathy with what the (Black Coaches) Association is trying to do and I'm not criticizing their right to do it. It's just not the right course of action for our program. We have a game Monday night at UNLV and we plan to be there."

The BCA is threatening to boycott games, possibly this weekend, to protest the NCAA's refusal to restore a 14th basketball scholarship for Division I men. Scholarships have been cut from 15 to 13 over the past two years.

Tennessee coach Wade Houston said he would support a boycott, although he's not sure what form it would take.

"I want to play Saturday, I want to coach Saturday," said Houston, the first black head basketball coach in the Southeastern Conference. "But at the same time I think it's wrong for over 270 minority players to be shut out of the opportunity of getting a scholarship."

Arizona State coach Bill Frieder supports the extra scholarship, but said that doesn't mean the Sun Devils will participate in a boycott.

"I think disruptive measures should be a last resort," he said.

Tulsa's Tubby Smith is a member of the BCA and thinks the 14th scholarship should be restored. But he's not sure if a boycott is the right way to protest.

"It may not be the first thing I would want to do," he said.

Three other coaches in Oklahoma also said they haven't made up their minds.

"To tell you the truth, I've just been thinking about how we can beat Iowa State," said Oklahoma's Billy Tubbs.

Oklahoma State coach Eddie Sutton said he needed to talk to more people "before deciding what, if anything, I might do."

And Bill Self of Oral Roberts said: "In my heart, I will support the Black Coaches Association 100 percent. But I don't know if that means a boycott."

Ohio State coach Randy Ayers said he's still weighing his options, but he added: "I am an African-American. I have a responsibility to the African-American community. If I have to stand up for that community, I'm going to do it."

Welcome to the soap opera — uh, we mean sports — section. It's getting out of hand, folks. A defensive coordinator slugs his team's offensive coordinator. A husband perhaps plotting to injure his wife's chief competitor at the United States Figure Skating Championships. What happened to the good old days when skyrocketing salaries were the unseemly side of sports? Have to admit, though — it's making for good reading. Buddy Ryan, the aforementioned defensive coordinator, should thank skater Tonya Harding's husband as soon as possible. If it's proven that Harding's husband, Jeff Gillooly, played a part in the senseless attack on America's latest figure skating darling, Nancy Kerrigan, then Gillooly will supplant Ryan as the biggest idiot in sports. For now, though, Ryan has firm grasp on the Sports' Best Buffoon title belt.

Dave Hargrave

Here's a guy that's been campaigning for an NFL head coaching job since he talked his way out of Philadelphia, and then he flings a fist at Houston offensive coordinator Kevin Gilbride. During a game. On national television. Hey, Buddy — is that the way to impress prospective employers?

Ryan couldn't stop there. He refuses to apologize to Gilbride, and Tuesday he called Gilbride a wimp who shouldn't be part of a professional football team. Poor Buddy's crying foul because he thought those comments, made to a Philadelphia Enquirer reporter who Ryan said was a personal friend, were off the record. Oh, please — give me a hanky! There's some things you don't say — even off the record, even among Buddies. Still, Ryan has that elusive, attractive quality that so few people possess — he says what's on his mind without worrying who he's going to tick off. A good 99 percent of the world's people put others' feelings ahead of candid comment, which may be a good thing, so an occasional Ryan here and there makes life much more entertaining. Here and there, mind you. Not everywhere.

Give no room in your life, however, for any deranged dorks out there getting their kicks out of bashing figure skaters' knees. You hope Harding's husband was behind it — Harding's bodyguard has already confessed to having a role in the attack, NBC has reported — because you want Kerrigan's attacker behind bars. On the other hand, you hope Gillooly and the rest of Harding's supporters knew nothing about it. It's just too ugly to imagine. Meanwhile, on All My Children...

Out of all the unreachable records out there — Joe DiMaggio's 56-game hitting streak, Cy Young's 511 wins, and so on — there's one plateau in sports that is so impossible, no one seems to even consider it anymore: The undefeated season in college basketball. They say never say never, but in this case it's OK. Face it, hoops fans — it's never going to happen again.

At least one story coming out of sports is a good one. Steve Carlton made baseball's Hall of Fame in his first year of eligibility. The media speculated that Carlton's career-long refusal to talk to reporters could keep him from making the Hall on the first ballot. It didn't — as it should be. The only man to win four Cy Young awards deserved immediate selection. Orlando Cepeda? He's t u u y on the fringe, but a guy that misses the Hall by just seven votes should be put in the Hall by baseball's Veteran's Committee. Of course, the Hall will never be complete until Pete Rose is part of it. Another column, another time. Dave Hargrave is the sports editor of the Herald.

Georgia Tech gives whipping to Tarheels

Eleven Top 25 teams were in action Wednesday night, and five of them lost. And none of the defeats was more surprising than No. 1 North Carolina's 20-point loss at Georgia Tech. The 17th-ranked Yellow Jackets, who got a 27-point performance by Travis Best, crushed North Carolina 89-69. It was Tech's second victory in a row over the Tar Heels when they are ranked No. 1, the other coming in the final of last year's Atlantic Coast Conference tournament. Tech also beat Duke 80-79 a year ago when the Blue Devils were ranked No. 1. "I gave one of the finest performances I've seen since I've been coaching here," Tech's Bobby Cremins said after collecting his 250th victory at Tech and 350th overall in 19 years on the bench. "Tech played a tremendous game," North Carolina coach Dean Smith said. "That's not just the coach talking. I think anyone who saw the game would say that. Maybe they're better than we are every night, but I hope not." Best scored 10 of his 27 points in the final 2:45, eight of those on free throws, as the Yellow Jackets (10-3, 1-2 ACC), who never trailed, snapped Carolina's 10-game winning streak. The Tar Heels dropped to 12-2 and 2-1.

In other games, No. 8 Kentucky beat Mississippi 98-64, No. 9 Purdue beat Michigan State 89-77, No. 12 Wisconsin lost to No. 18 Minnesota 90-53, No. 20 Boston College lost to Seton Hall 61-53, No. 22 Alabama-Birmingham beat Sacramento State 88-46, No. 24 Vanderbilt lost to Alabama 73-67, No. 25 Missouri lost to Notre Dame 77-73, and No. 25 Xavier of Ohio beat Dayton 57-46. Tech also got 22 points from James Forrest, eight of those in the last 3:10 when the Jackets took control after Eric Montross' jump hook closed the deficit to 68-64 with 3:55 to play. Montross led the Tar Heels with 20 points.

Kentucky 98, Mississippi 64 At Louisville, Ky., Walter McCarty got off to a great start in his first start. The sophomore forward hit five of his first six shots as Kentucky (12-2, 2-1 Southeastern Conference) jumped out to a big lead and coasted. Mississippi (5-6, 0-3) lost its fifth straight. Purdue 89, Michigan St. 77 At West Lafayette, Ind., the Boilermakers (14-0, 2-0 Big Ten) used a 15-2 run to break a late tie. Glenn Robinson, the nation's scoring leader at 29.5 points per game, started the decisive run with a free throw and finished with 25 points. Shawn Respert led the Spartans (10-5, 1-2) with 21 points.
