Police await council OK for STEP

By JANET AUSBURY
Staff Writer

The Big Spring Police Department will attempt to address residents' complaints about speeders by starting its own Selective Traffic Enforcement Program (STEP).

Chief Jerry Edwards said implementation of the program will depend on whether city council members approve it during their Jan. 25 meeting.

The BSPD had previously tried to monitor the problem areas using on-duty personnel for each shift, but limited personnel made it impossible to cover the necessary areas and still provide other police services.

The proposed program would use off-duty officers working specific areas at varied times during the week to enforce traffic regulations, primarily speed laws. Officers would work time blocks of 3 to 4 hours, 3 to 4 days per week.

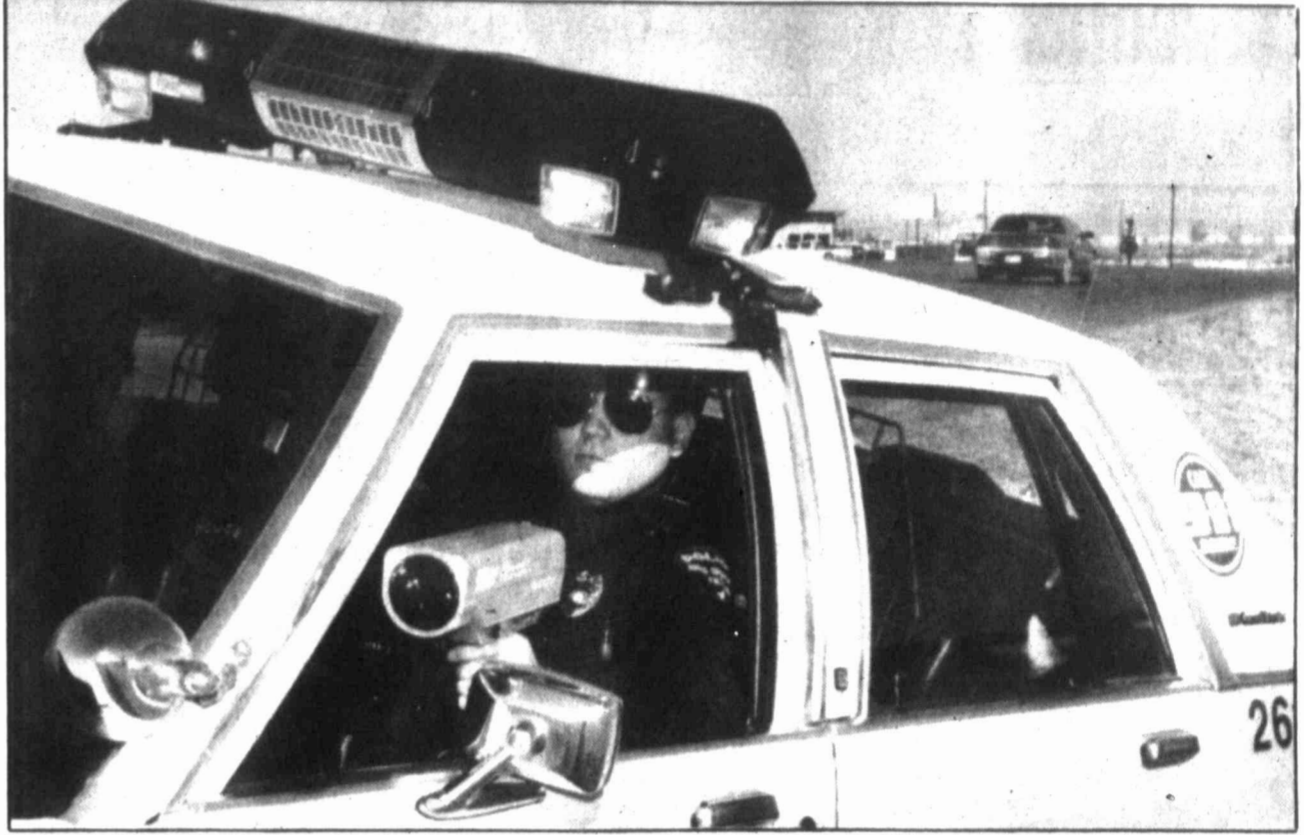

To prevent a pattern from being set, the day watch patrol commander would assign the areas to be worked on the preceding Friday, giving officers the weekend to sign up for the duty.

STEP would cover Gregg Street, Birdwell Lane, Washington Boulevard, Third and Fourth Streets including West 80, FM 700 and the school zones.

If the program is approved, the public will be made aware of the increased traffic enforcement.

Edwards said STEP would probably be initiated on a pilot basis and if it proved successful in reducing speeding incidents, the program might be moved to other locations in the city.

Neighbors putting city's pet ordinance to a test

By JANET AUSBURY
Staff Writer

A city ordinance concerning cats running loose will be put to the test in Municipal Court today by two feuding neighbors.

At 3 p.m., Kenneth Morrison and Mike Adams will answer charges against each other. Each accuses the other of violating city ordinances against pets running loose, with no leash, off the owner's property.

Violation of the ordinance is punishable by a fine of $1 to $1,000.

Morrison is concerned about what he describes as a sudden enforcement of the ordinance against cats. He believes City Attorney Mike Thomas set a precedent by not enforcing a previous complaint Adams made to Animal Control last year.

After Morrison filed several complaints about Adams' dogs, Adams filed a complaint about Morrison's cat directly in Municipal Court instead of contacting Animal Control.

This, said Thomas, is the reason Morrison is having to answer in court for his cat's behavior.

"If a complaint is filed, we hear it," said Thomas. "It's left up to the judge whether it's justified or not, depending on the evidence presented in court. When you sign one of these complaints, you're certifying this law was broken."

Each man insists he is the victim of harassment by the other. Adams said he owns one large dog and gave away a puppy he used to own.

He added the dog has had shots and that no dog he has owned has bitten anyone.

Morrison said Adams owns a second large dog that allegedly bit a 13-year-old boy and did not have shots until after the biting incident.

Adams countered that he and several neighbors have found Morrison's cat digging up yards and inside Adams' car. Adams said the cat scratched him when he attempted to remove it from his car.

"I'm taking Mr. Morrison to court because I can't be outside with my dog on my porch without getting ticketed," said Adams. "It's only fair that if a cat runs at large, the owner should pay a penalty."

Lt. Terry Chamness, who manages Animal Control for the city, said all complaints about animals running loose are investigated, not just those against dogs.

However, cats are less likely to attack people, are difficult to catch and are less likely than dogs to tangle with wild animals. The primary reason for the ordinances is to ensure animals are vaccinated and do not spread disease.

Alice Morrison, wife of Kenneth Morrison, holds their cat Charley Bug. They contend a precedent was set when a previous complaint about Charley Bug running loose was not acted upon.

Morrison said he would not object to paying a ticket for violating the city cat ordinance, but that if the city was going to decide to enforce the ordinance more strictly, officials should have warned cat owners first.

City Manager Lanny Lambert said there were no plans to crack down on cats. "They don't attack people and can't be caught," he said.

Kennel club show Saturday

Special to the Herald

Big Spring Kennel Club and San Angelo's Concho Kennel Club will sponsor their annual winter dog shows Saturday and Sunday at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

More than 900 dogs are entered each day. Judging will begin at 8 a.m. and run into late afternoon both Saturday and Sunday.

"Admission is free. We encourage local persons to take advantage of this chance to learn more about dog breeds they might want to own," said BSKC Breeder

Referral Co-Chairman Carole Owen. "Many long-time breeders from Texas and surrounding states will have dogs entered in the show and will be happy to talk dog."

The Japanese Shiba-Inu is the newest breed to be recognized by the American Kennel Club. There undoubtedly will be several entered at the show," added Owen.

Special attraction to local dog lovers will be concessions selling dog supplies and many canine specialty items not found in West Texas stores, according to Owen. The full-line vendors Le Beau Chien and Courtney's Pet Supply will be back again, along with dog-theme Jeweler Precious Products from Ohio and the dog artist Maren Phillips. New this year will be Whitehouse Designs with its lambswool dog beds and toys. Seven other vendors have reserved space.

Added event for the weekend is an AKC-sanctioned match Saturday night sponsored by Big Spring Kennel Club. Any AKC-registered dog older than 3 months is eligible to enter. BSKC members invite area novices to come out for the match and "get their feet wet in the show ring." Match entries will be taken from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday. Judging begins at 6:30 p.m.

For more information, call BSKC show chairman Doug Hart, Midland, 915/687-3281; BSKC match chairman Sandy Young, Midland, 915/520-0077; or local contact Carole Owen, 263-3404.

More dog shows will follow in Odessa Jan. 29 and 30 when both West Texas Kennel Club's show and Abilene Kennel Club's show will be at Ector County Coliseum.

Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms special agent Eric Evers (center) returns to the federal courthouse after a lunch break in the Branch Davidian trial Wednesday in San Antonio. Evers, who was shot and wounded during the Feb. 28, 1993, raid on Mount Carmel, identified Branch Davidian Livingston Fagan during his testimony as the man that shot him during the raid.

ATF agent relives raid, death of fellow agents

The Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms special agent Dan Curtis quickly realized his disguise as a cattle rancher didn't matter.

Several days preceding last Feb. 28, Curtis had rehearsed driving one of two unmarked cattle trailers filled with heavily armed agents up to the religious compound of David Koresh. After arriving, he was to quickly help subdue several men expected to be doing construction chores outside.

But that cold, misty Sunday morning, the men weren't outside.

No one was. Curtis spotted only one person — peeking out from behind curtains in a second-story window.

"I became leery. It was so quiet and no one was outside. And then I saw the person dart back from the window," Curtis told jurors Wednesday in the federal murder trial of 11 Branch Davidians.

His story was among the first public accounts of the no-turning-back fear that spread among agents as they ambled down the gravel road in anticipation of confronting Koresh.

As Curtis drove toward the Davidians' city-block-sized home wearing a brown jacket over his bulletproof vest and a baseball cap, he kept thinking over and over about what his raid supervisor, Chuck Sarabyn, had just told him.

"Hurry up. We gotta go. They know we're coming. It's showtime," Curtis recounted Sarabyn as saying.

The element of surprise had been lost and Curtis finally snapped. He jerked the cattle trailer to a halt, short of its anticipated unloading area, and told his fellow agents, "You better get out, I think we're in trouble."

Several minutes later, he watched fellow agent Steven Willis die after being gunned down behind a van in front of the compound amidst a dizzying exchange of gunfire with the religious sect.

Jury selection set to begin in McDuff trial

The Associated Press

AUSTIN — Kenneth Allen McDuff, a twice-convicted killer described by a prosecutor as "everybody's nightmare," will be tried on a capital murder charge in the death of a woman whose body has not been found.

McDuff, 47, has spent more than half his life in prison. He is accused of abducting and killing Colleen Reed, who vanished from a west Austin carwash in December 1991. He has repeatedly said he is innocent.

More than 300 Guadalupe County residents were summoned to Seguin today as potential jurors. State District Judge Wil Flowers ordered the trial moved from Austin last September because of excessive publicity.

Both sides in the trial will face daunting tasks. Prosecutors must prove their case with circumstantial evidence, the testimony of a co-defendant and the lack of Reed's body.

The defense, meanwhile, must try to generate reasonable doubt about the guilt of a man labeled a monster and serial killer through almost two years of nationwide publicity.

Ms. Reed, a 28-year-old accountant at the Lower Colorado River Authority, is presumed dead. Numerous searches in several counties have not turned up her body. Other Texas murder cases have been upheld on appeal despite the lack of a body, and prosecutors have said they believe they can overcome the handicap.

McDuff has alternated between silence and bombast throughout a lengthy criminal history, which began with a prison sentence for 14 burglaries.

McDuff, who according to testimony once compared killing people to killing chickens, was sentenced to die for the 1966 slaying of a Fort Worth area teen-age girl. The death sentence was commuted to life because the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that the Texas death penalty law was unconstitutional.

He was paroled in 1989, returned to prison for a terroristic threat and was released again in 1990. That release was the result of several bureaucratic decisions, which eventually led to a revamping of state parole laws.

Richards sees tough campaign ahead

The Associated Press

AUSTIN — Gov. Ann Richards, in one of the fieriest speeches of her reelection campaign, Wednesday said she expects a tough battle because Republicans have targeted her for defeat.

But the Democrat told the state's labor leaders she plans to win.

"I became governor of the state of Texas because I worked hard to get here, because I know my craft, because I understand what public service means. I understand what government means to the lives of the people," she told an AFL-CIO political convention.

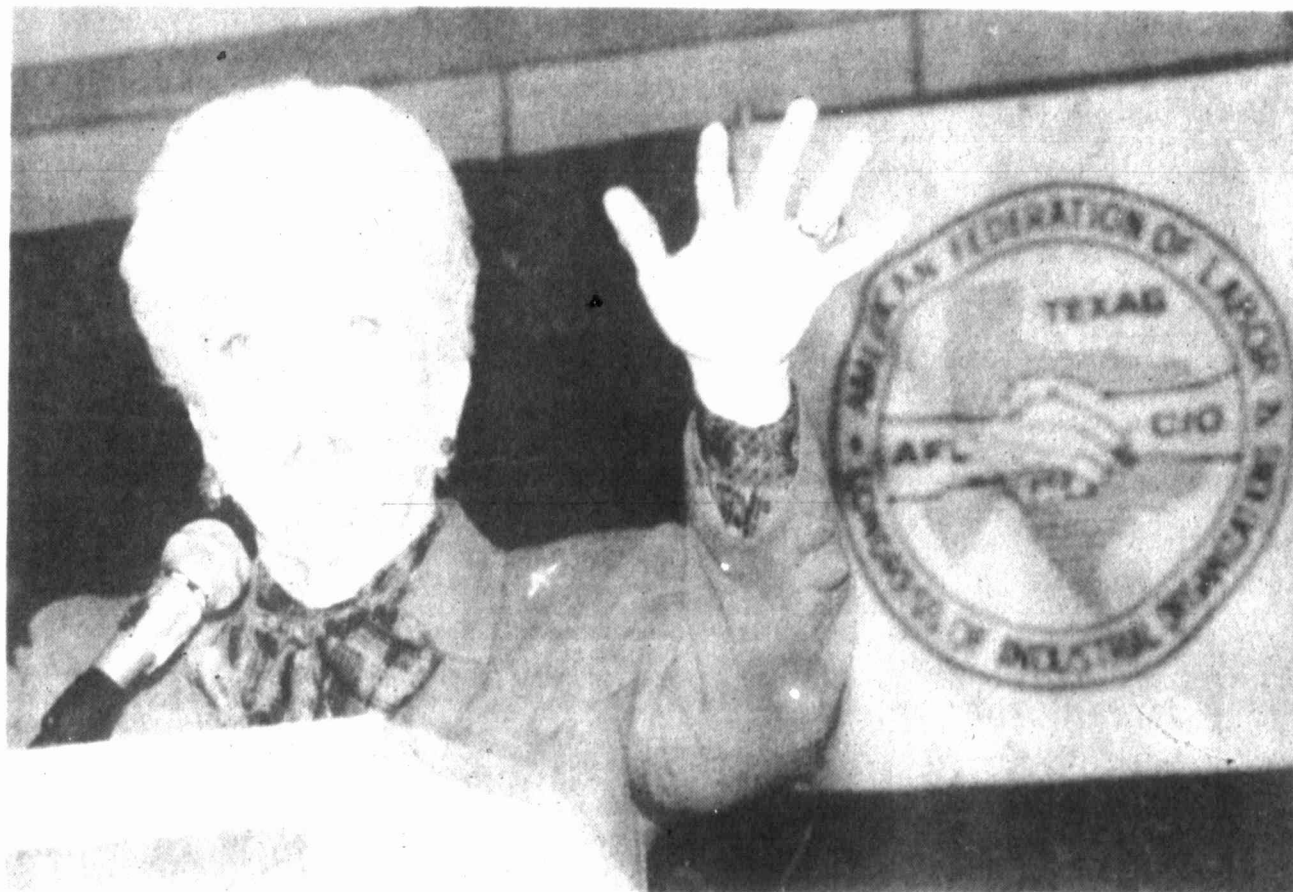

"I'm here to tell you that we are not about to give up government to people who are looking for the latest popularity contest or people who don't have the foggiest idea about what it should do," she said. "These jobs are not handed out on a silver platter."

Richards faces only token opposition in the March 8 primary and expects to meet Republican George W. Bush, eldest son of the former president, in the November general election.

In a wide-ranging speech to the AFL-CIO delegates, Richards bragged about her first-term record, said Texas leads the nation in creating jobs and openly discussed her split with the unions over the North American Free Trade Agreement.

NAFTA "is going to be good for Texas," Richards said. "The bottom line is that Texas is going to be the hub of economic activity in this country for the rest of my lifetime and the rest of yours."

"It is right and just that we recognize that there can be differences, honest differences, among friends. I'm talking about 30 years of friendship and mutual support between this organization and me."

Richards said 456,000 more Texans are at work today than when she took office in 1991. Crime is down, insurance reforms are in place, more women and minorities hold state posts, and the school finance crisis has been solved, she said.

"We put in overtime on the issues ... There is a new pride in this state," she said.

The governor pointed to the $400,000 that the Republican National Committee spent last year in helping to defeat a school funding referendum as evidence that the GOP wants her defeated.

"My friends, we are in for a fight this year," she said. "This is going to be an extremely tough political year."

In other political news Wednesday, Richards picked up the endorsement of the AFL-CIO's Committee on Political Education.

So did other top Democrats, including U.S. Senate candidate Jim Mattox, Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, Comptroller John Sharp, Attorney General Dan Morales, Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, state Treasurer Martha Whitehead, incumbent Railroad Commissioners Jim Nugent and Mary Scott Nabers, along with Marvin Gregory, the lone Democratic candidate for agriculture commissioner.

— Campaign finance reports filed with the Texas Ethics Commission showed that Bullock raised $1.98 million in the last four months of 1993 and spent $488,000.

Clinton has empathy, dollars for politically important California

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Rushing to aid a key political state, President Clinton delivered fistfuls of dollars to crumpled California neighborhoods, promising "to go back to Washington and figure out how to pay for it."

"This is a national problem. We have a national responsibility and we will be in it for the long run," Clinton told a round table of local political leaders Wednesday. "This is something we intend to stay with until the job is over."

The president took several political aides along with him on the one-day roundtrip, including Tom Epstein, a former California state official who now coordinates the White House's political efforts in the state.

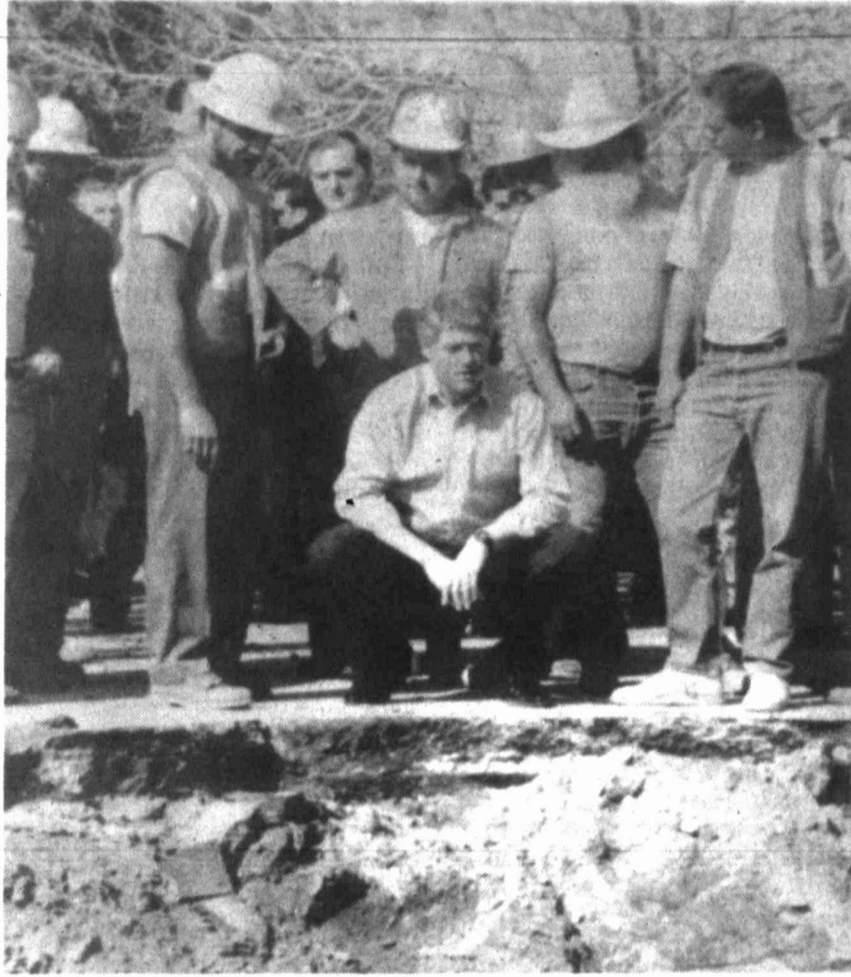

"The folks on the ground thought it was important he come — and soon," Epstein said.

Former President Bush was criticized for appearing to react too slowly when Hurricane Andrew hit Florida and Louisiana in 1992.

Last year's Midwest floods brought out Clinton's keenest political instincts: Mingling with victims, his empathy was readily apparent for the cameras. The picture of him hugging a sobbing woman at Midwest water station made political aides ecstatic.

Wednesday's trip not nearly as poignant: After his motorcade passed front lawns and parks filled with tents sheltering displaced residents, Clinton made quick stops at a collapsed freeway and a shaken neighborhood. He shook hands campaign-style with Californians kept at bay with a rope.

One man standing outside his earthquake-damaged home told the president, "No water, no electricity, I haven't had a shower in three days."

Accompanied by California Department of Transportation workers and Los Angeles Mayor Dick Riordan, President Bill Clinton squats as he surveys a crater on Balboa Avenue in the Northridge area of the San Fernando Valley Wednesday. The crater was caused by Monday's earthquake in Los Angeles.

No time for colleagues to mourn dead officer

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Someday, when the earthquake rubble is cleared and the stoplights start working again, the police pulling 12-hour shifts will mourn Officer Clarence Wayne Dean. Right now, there's too much to do.

Dean, 46, a 26-year Los Angeles Police Department veteran, was killed Monday when his motorcycle sailed off a collapsed freeway. He was apparently racing from home to his station minutes after the quake. "We're going to deal with Wayne's death later," Lt. Bob Normandy said. "That's all we can do. You can only handle this stuff one day at a time."

Witnesses on nearby roads saw Dean's motorcycle lights flashing as his bike dropped 30 feet off the edge of the Antelope Valley Freeway. The section before him had just crumbled between two of its supporting piers.

"I can only assume that he was hurrying on in because of the earthquake," said Normandy, who supervised Dean in the San Fernando Valley.

His fellow officers remembered Dean as a cop's cop, an ex-Marine who would come in to work each morning with a smile. He always had a joke, or a story to tell about the time he worked as a movie prop man.

"He was a great guy, one of those kinds of guys that everybody seems to know," Officer Jim Johnson said.

Borden County prepares for junior livestock show

By BARBARA MORRISON
Staff Writer

GAIL — The Borden County Junior Livestock Show begins Jan. 20 in Gail, and promises a showing of excellence from students throughout the county, according to Buddy Wallace, agricultural science teacher at Gail High School.

The show, Wallace explains, "has been going on for at least 30 years" and is attended by hundreds of individuals throughout West Texas.

Exhibitors will include 4-H and Future For America students from throughout Borden County. Among them will be Mendy Hensley, a GHS senior who has exhibited market swine since the third grade.

Mendy says her interest in exhibiting animals came quite naturally. "I've just always loved the farm," she said, referring to the family farm she grew up on with parents Kenny and Carla Hensley.

The exhibition of market swine requires hours of work, according to Hensley. It is important to make sure that the swine remain the right weight on the date of the show.

"A pig can gain up to two pounds per day," she explained, "and sometimes you have to put your pig on a diet. I have three pigs and they are all on a diet."

Wallace states that it is not unusual to find women actively involved in competitive livestock showing. "Probably 60 percent of our exhibitors are girls," he states.

Another of the girls is Sandy Brummett, a 15-year-old GHS freshman.

Brummett has been showing hogs, sheep and steers since the fifth grade.

Sandy is the daughter of Debbie and Audry Brummett, and became involved in livestock showing through her extended family. "I couldn't help but become involved," she said. "I have aunts, uncles and my dad who all used to show."

Brummett explains that there is much more to showing her livestock than "simply walking them around an arena." The animals must be walked and exercised daily to build up their muscles.

During the exhibition, the animals must be able to push so that their muscles will flex, somewhat like a body builder does.

Sheep must be washed, dried and then sheared so that their coats appear nice and slick. They, too, must meet certain weight requirements.

When showing steers, the backs must be straight and level. This is aided by the use of the "show stick" which the exhibitor uses to make the animal spread its feet, forming a "box-like shape."

The show begins Thursday with the Lamb Show beginning at 6 p.m. The remaining show agenda is as follows:

Swine Show — Friday, Jan. 20, 8:30 a.m.

Steer Show — Saturday, Jan. 22, 8:30 a.m.

Barbecue Lunch — Saturday, Jan. 22, 12 noon.

The show concludes with a premium sale following the lunch.

Bodyguard paints ugly picture of Harding

By The Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — An impatient Tonya Harding complained about the delay in disabling rival Nancy Kerrigan days before the assault in Detroit, according to an interview with her bodyguard.

"You know, you need to stop screwing around with this and get it done," Harding reportedly said to Shawn Eckardt, the bodyguard told the Oregonian newspaper in a three-hour interview published in today's editions.

Eckardt said he was talking with Harding at her practice rink near Portland while alleged hit man Shane Minoaka Stant was in Boston trying to find an opportunity to attack Kerrigan on her home ice on Cape Cod.

Eckardt suggested she call Stant, but Harding replied, "No, I want you to do it," Eckardt said in the interview.

Eckardt's new allegations followed his testimony in a sweeping, detailed affidavit by a sheriff's deputy that led to the arrest of Harding's ex-husband, further implicated her and jeopardized her spot on the U.S. Olympic team.

"Tonya categorically denies those allegations," Harding's attorney Dennis Rawlinson said earlier in dismissing Eckardt's accusations in the affidavit. "We note that none of the comments are directly attributable to Tonya. We believe Mr. Eckardt's lack of credibility is already well documented."

There were records of phone calls from Harding's house to Kerrigan's practice arena, a trail of money from Portland to Phoenix to Boston and Detroit, and allegations of concocted alibis.

Harding may yet skate at the Winter Games in Norway next month if she is not arrested along with the four men already arraigned for conspiracy in the case.

"Until something unfolds that implicates Tonya, her name will remain on the application for the Olympic team," said Claire Ferguson, president of the U.S. Figure Skating Association.

So far, Harding's alleged involvement, as far as authorities said they knew, appeared to be limited to two telephone calls her bodyguard said she made to find out Kerrigan's practice time at the Tony Kent Arena on Cape Cod, and efforts to create alibis for a coverup.

Eckardt told a sheriff's deputy that Harding made the calls as part of a plan to have Stant attack Kerrigan before she left for the national championships in Detroit. Stant allegedly stalked Kerrigan in Boston but didn't get the chance to carry out the assault until he followed her to Detroit.

Kerrigan was deliberately smashed on the right leg because it was her landing leg for jumps, Eckardt told authorities.

Mary Scotvold, one of Kerrigan's coaches, confirmed that the skater was training at the Tony Kent Arena during the time Stant allegedly stalked her there.

Harding allegedly was worried about the calls from her house to the rink, which appear on telephone records, the affidavit by deputy sheriff James McNelly said.

Eckardt also said Gilooly told him that Harding was concerned about having made these phone calls and had stated that in the event she was ever questioned about them, she would say she had made those calls in an effort to get Kerrigan to sign a poster for a fan of Harding's.

The affidavit, which accompanied the warrant for Gilooly, is unclear about whether Harding participated in a discussion to create an alibi about the assault when she returned to Portland after winning the U.S. title.

Gilooly and Harding divorced last August but lived together since September until Harding announced Tuesday that she was separating from him again. The announcement came during Harding's 10-hour interview with authorities and shortly after a Multnomah County Circuit Court judge signed the warrant for Gilooly's arrest.

Gilooly, who has denied involvement, was released after posting 10 percent of his $20,000 bail. Stant, extradited from Arizona, remained in custody in lieu of $20,000 bail.

The Arizona Republic today quoted unidentified sources as saying Stant allegedly threatened other skaters in a note he claims he left at the scene of the attack.

The note was crafted from words cut from a skating magazine and listed three other skaters as potential targets, the Phoenix newspaper reported without identifying the other skaters.

"No matter how you try to shut me off, skating hors (sic) keep dying," the note reportedly said, according to the Republic.

Authorities have not mentioned finding a note at the attack scene.

49ers can throw to Rice, but Cowboys counter with Irvin

By The Associated Press

IRVING, Texas — Michael Irvin excels in big games against teams that have bigtime receivers.

It's the competition that brings out the best in the Dallas Cowboys wide receiver, who is neither the fastest nor the best pair of hands among the NFL's premium pass catchers.

"The best thing about Irvin is that he's a competitor," said Dallas quarterback Troy Aikman. "He's not the fastest nor the most athletic, but he has a tremendous will when the ball is in the air."

"He uses his size well and is very aggressive at the point of the catch. And he never shies from contact."

In October, Irvin had 12 catches for 168 yards against the San Francisco 49ers. That same day, Jerry Rice caught 7 passes for 82 yards for the 49ers.

A week earlier, Irvin caught 7 passes for 155 yards in a game against Green Bay where Sterling Sharpe caught 4 for 34 yards. In the NFC divisional playoffs, Irvin caught 9 passes for 126 yards while Sharpe had 6 catches for 128 yards.

"I get compared to those guys a lot so it's natural to get up for those games," Irvin said. "If feels good to get recognized by your peers. That's why making the Pro Bowl is so important with your peers voting on it."

Irvin's three-year total of 4,249 yards is the second highest over that period of time in NFL history behind Rice's 4,291 yards from 1988-1990.

Irvin said the NFC title game in Texas Stadium Sunday won't be a Rice vs. Irvin game.

"I have all the motivation I need," Irvin said. "Jerry Rice is the best receiver ever to play the game. But it's not me and Jerry on Sunday. It's the Cowboys and the 49ers."

Jimmy Johnson coached Irvin at the University of Miami and agreed with Aikman about Irvin being a big game type of player.

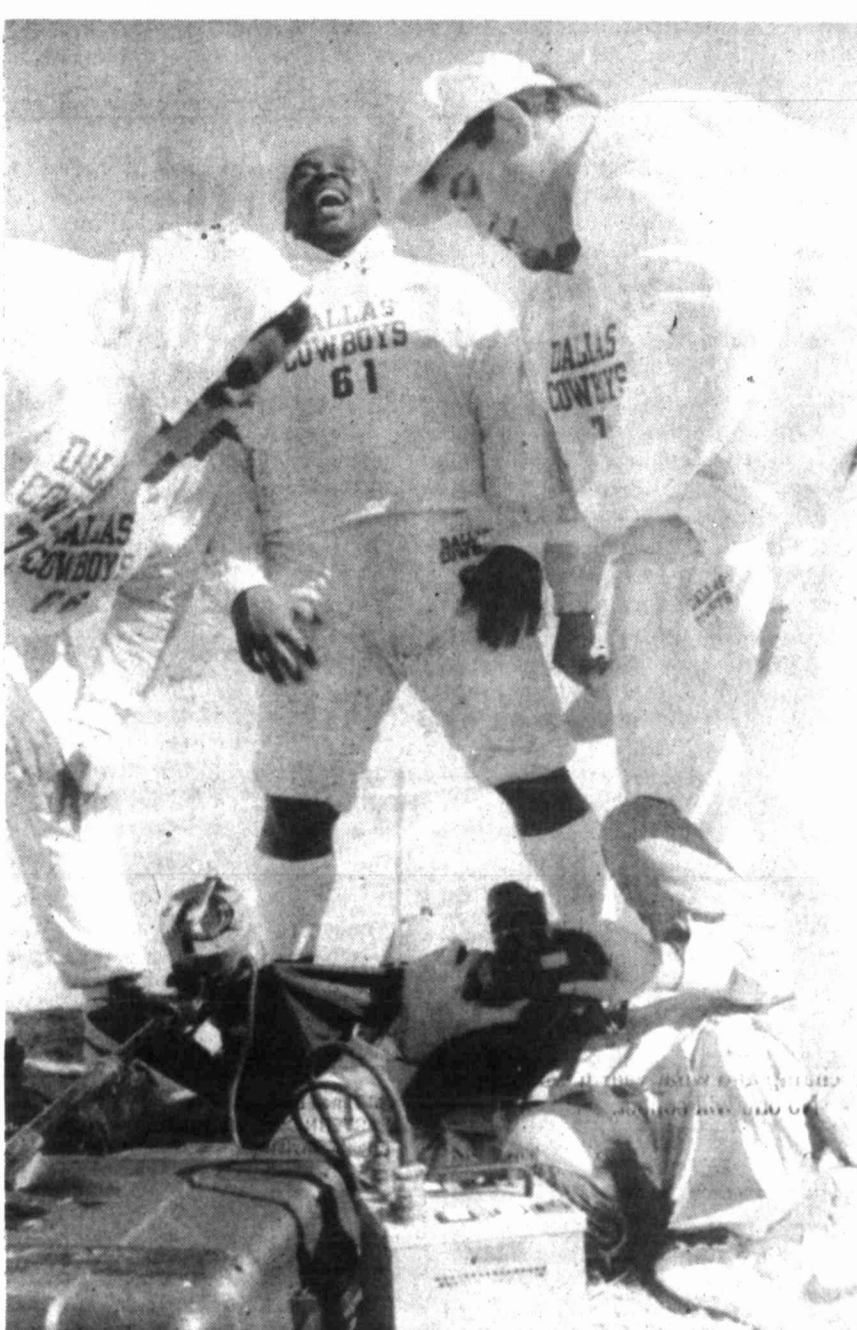

"He's a tremendous competitor and loves to play in the big game," said Johnson. "He has a tremendous confidence in his abilities."

"He's a guy who in the 10 years that I've been with him has improved every single year. I thought the first year that I saw him that he was outstanding."

Irvin said he goes into every big game "scared."

"I tell myself it's the biggest game of my career," he said. "I'm scared by the feeling of losing. How it hurts."

"I have to tell myself I'm the greatest player in the game. That I will make the play."

Dallas Cowboy offensive linemen Erik Williams (79), Kevin Gogan (66), Nate Newton (61), Mark Tuinei (71) and John Gesek ham it up for a photographer trying to get an unusual point of view during a recent practice. Media attention has engulfed the Cowboys as they prepare for Sunday's NFC Championship showdown against the 49ers.

Aikman, Young took quite different paths to Sunday showdown

By The Associated Press

IRVING, Texas — Troy Aikman joined a loser when he came to Dallas. Steve Young went to a winner in San Francisco.

It turns out to be Aikman's blessing and Young's curse, one that Young hopes to take a step toward erasing when the 49ers play the Cowboys in Sunday's NFC title game.

"I think I've won some big games," Young said Wednesday. "I've won both in the regular season and in the playoffs."

Still, it's Young's misfortune to be the man who followed "JOE" in San Francisco, "JOE" being Joe Montana, who won four Super Bowls for the 49ers. Young has won none since becoming the starter in 1991, thus earning the rap, fair or not, that he "can't win the big one."

Aikman, on the other hand, was the first block around which Jimmy Johnson built the Cowboys. He went 1-15 in 1989, 7-9 in 1990, 11-5 in 1991 and last year won the Super Bowl, in which he was MVP.

Thus a $55 million, 10-year contract, passing Young as the NFL's highest paid quarterback (they both have the same agent, Leigh Steinberg). More important, a Super Bowl title early in his career established him as someone who CAN win the big one.

The talk about big-game quarterback hovers in the air around this title game. Most of it centers around Young, because despite a regular-season MVP trophy last year and two straight All-Pro seasons, the only Super Bowl rings he has ever earned sitting on the bench.

In the Bay area, it was "JOE" who won them. He's now in the AFC title game for Kansas City, while Young goes into Dallas with that tag.

More over, he's not being allowed to forget it.

Johnson, that master psychologist, brought it up earlier this week.

"With what Troy has accomplished, there's no lingering doubt in his mind of what he's capable of," Johnson said. "Troy is confident he can do everything there is to accomplish as a quarterback. He doesn't have any doubts hanging over his head."

Johnson was asked if that means that Young does.

"I don't think Steve Young has won a Super Bowl, has he?" Johnson replied.

No, not even an NFC championship game — he and the 49ers lost to Aikman and the Cowboys 30-20 last year in San Francisco. The 49ers and Aikman also lost 26-17 at Texas Stadium on Oct. 17.

San Francisco coach George Seifert doesn't see that as a factor.

"This isn't an issue," he said Wednesday.

On Feb. 19-20, a hunter education course will be offered at the Big Spring Chamber of Commerce building.

All hunters born on or after Sept. 2, 1971 must have successfully completed a hunter education course to hunt in Texas.

The February course will be 8 a.m. - 5 p.m. The instructor is Boyce Hale, Texas Hunter Education area chief.

The course is sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce, Wal-Mart and Dibrill's Gun Shop.

To register, call 267-6957 or 267-7891. The fee is $5.

National Bulls' Pippen arrested

CHICAGO — After a lackluster performance on the basketball court, Chicago Bulls forward Scottie Pippen's night got worse.

He was arrested shortly after midnight when a Chicago police officer checking out his illegally parked car noticed a gun in plain sight.

Pippen had been in a restaurant and had come outside while police were around his car. Although he had a license for the loaded semiautomatic weapon, police said it does not entitle him to carry it in public.

Pippen was charged with unlawful possession of a weapon, a misdemeanor, according to watch commander Walter Logan.

"He was processed like any other arrestee," Logan said.

That meant fingerprinting and 45 minutes behind bars before his release on a $100 cash bond.

Meanwhile Pippen's car was towed and impounded, as is required in arrests involving gun charges.

Owners approve realignment

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — Expanded playoffs and three-division play finally won agreement Wednesday from baseball players and owners, while teams decided against hiring a commissioner during the 1994 season.

The playoffs will begin with four best-of-5 series, with the winners advancing to a best-of-7 league final. The pennant winners will then meet in the World Series.

Lady Bearkats showcase area's tallest front line

Garden City girls mow down competition with 17-2 start

By STEVE REAGAN Sports writer

The Garden City Lady Bearkats know where they've been. Just don't ask them where they're going.

There's no arguing that the Lady Kats are good. A 17-2 record attests to that. But it's almost as if they would jinx their good thing if they allowed long-range goals for this season.

"We just want to go as far as we can go," coach Phil Swenson said. "When we get to the start of February, I'll talk to you about how far we can go."

Swenson says he wants the team to "see how far we can drive the yellow dog," a reference to the common nickname for a school bus. If the Lady Kats keep up their current rate of progress, the "yellow dog's" odometer may be in for some serious spinning.

The Lady Kats, bolstered by a front line featuring three 6-footers, finally broke through with a playoff year in 1992-93, going 23-7 and breaking a three-way tie with Sterling City and Forsan to win the District 23-A title.

Garden City lost in the area round of the playoffs that year, but Swenson said a pattern of success had been established.

"When we won district, we overcame a big burden," he said. "Cause the girls haven't had that sort of goal for them lately."

And that success has carried over to this season. The Lady Kats started the season winning 11 games before hitting a rough spot at the Sterling City basketball tournament in late December, where they lost games to Stanton and Sands.

Despite the losses, team members are able to find positives in the losses.

"We knew Stanton was really good," senior wing player Jamie Glass said. "I think maybe it was good for us (to lose), although I didn't think so then. I think it made us realize that every shot and every free throw is important."

"When we played Stanton, we gave it our all; we left everything we had out there," senior post player Melanie Machicek said. "I think we learned how to play against a really good team."

Since that tournament, the Lady Kats have gone undefeated, including their first two district games.

A major reason for the team's success, junior Melinda Braden said, is that it has been together for several years.

"We've come together more, started working harder," she said. "Four of us have been playing together for three years. We've just gotten really close. We know how each other plays."

"I don't know if I can explain it, but it's like you know what they'll be doing and where they'll be," senior post player Brooke Eoff said. "And you'll just know this by looking at them."

Swenson agrees this togetherness has fostered happy times in Garden City.

"We're jelled right now," he said. "Probably one of our biggest assets is selfishness. They're not afraid to make a pass."

Swenson said he'd like to see the post trio of Braden, Machicek and Eoff combine for at least 40 points a game. If they can do that, and if Glass can continue scoring her 10-12 points a game, Garden City's yellow dog might be in for some serious mileage.

Not that anyone will admit they're looking that far ahead.

"We're just trying to take each game as it comes," Braden said.

"We just need to do our best each game... and let our potential carry us as far as it can," Machicek said.

"Our goals are just to take it game by game," Glass said, "do our best every game, and make good things happen."

'Nobody's perfect' - it's the gospel truth in college basketball world

Perfection is passé. Sports is one of the few areas where perfection is possible - whether it's a pitcher throwing a perfect game, a team completing an undefeated season or Howard basketball player Will Jones sinking all nine of his shots Monday night.

Dave Hargrave

The schedules grew longer. The nation's best teams started playing each other in ACC-Big East Challenges and Maui Invitational and preseason National Invitational Tournaments. The 3-pointer was born.

With the large number of games teams play in various tournaments, it's a chore just to survive the pre-conference schedule without a loss. The nation's best teams also play in the best conferences, where making it through the home-and-home round-robin unscathed is about as likely as shoving your elbow in your ear.

Regardless of the competition, the simple fact is teams play more games than they used to play.

share the record for the most wins by an undefeated champion, 32. The '91 Nevada-Las Vegas team, the last to enter a Final Four undefeated, would have had to finish 36-0 to be perfect.

The 3-point shot has added unpredictability to basketball. Many of the nation's top teams make the trey a top priority in their offense. Take Kentucky for instance. If Kentucky is hot from 3-point range, no one in the country can beat it. If the 'Cats are cold, however, Montana State can beat them.

Face it. No team can be hot from 3-point range every night.

So if you're looking to start an office pool, and you can't wait for the Super Bowl, have your friends and fellow workers throw in a dollar to pick when UCLA and St. Louis will lose, and by what score.

But don't start a pool to pick the next NCAA undefeated basketball champ and what year it will happen. No one will collect.

AP names Athletes of the Year

By The Associated Press

LUBBOCK — Sheryl Swoopes has been called the Michael Jordan of women's basketball. It figures.

One day after Jordan was named the Associated Press Male Athlete of 1993, Swoopes edged veteran tennis star Steffi Graf to grab Female Athlete honors.

Swoopes' finesse and agility carried Texas Tech to its first NCAA title and dazzled even her opponents. In a matter of weeks last spring, new fans around the nation caught the "Swoopes, Rhymes-With-Hoops" fever.

She is the first female honoree from a team sport in the 63-year history of the Associated Press award.

AP voters deciding the top honor cast 26 first-place ballots for Swoopes, who totaled 180 total points. Graf received 177 points, including 20 first-place votes.

A first-place vote was worth five points; second place was worth three points and third place one point.

Monica Seles won the award in 1991 and 1992, but was knocked out of 1993's competition when she was stabbed in the back by a spectator at a Hamburg, Germany, tournament on April 30.

Placing third in the balloting was Wang Junxia, who in September ran the 10,000 meters in a world-record 29 minutes, 31.78 seconds. Wang polled 60 points, including five votes for first place.

Mexican military fears new attacks

The Associated Press

SAN CRISTOBAL DE LAS CASAS, Mexico — An envoy for the Mexican government appealed in a radio broadcast for a peaceful settlement of a rebel uprising amid warnings by the military that the guerrillas may strike again.

In a message broadcast overnight, Manuel Camacho Solis declared it was time to ask forgiveness of the Chiapas Indian community for "the suffering they have lived through" in Mexico's poorest state.

"Let's all make the effort, truthfully all of us, to create peace," Camacho Solis said in the message, which was recorded Wednesday and translated into an Indian language.

The conciliatory broadcast appeared aimed at defusing support for an estimated 2,000 Indian guerrillas who briefly seized San Cristobal de las Casas and outlying towns on Jan. 1, retreating before ground and air assaults.

The rebels of the Zapatista National Liberation Army have said they are fighting for the rights of Indians, who are a majority in the southern state but often lack jobs and housing.

Meanwhile, the rebels remained silent again this morning on a call for talks on laying down their arms, made two days earlier by Camacho Solis.

He said that would be a first step in bringing about the social and political reforms demanded by the rebels. But the rebels have vowed not to disarm until the government negotiates an end to the misery of the Indians.

At least 107 people have been killed since the rebels declared war on the government on New Year's

A convoy of Mexican troops arrives in the town of Alatomirano, Mexico, Wednesday. The Mexican defense department issued a statement Wednesday claiming the cease-fire in Chiapas was in danger because of rumored pending rebel attacks near Alatomirano.

Day. The fighting subsided after a Jan. 12 cease-fire ordered by President Carlos Salinas de Gortari.

On Wednesday, the Defense Department declared it had learned of rebel plans to attack the towns of Yajalon, Sabanillas and Venustiano Carranza in southern Chiapas "within the next 24 hours." None was a scene of the earlier fighting.

Excerpts of the military statement, carried by the official Notimex news agency, said soldiers sent to the towns to perform "public works" would stay to guard citizens. There were no subsequent military statements.

Although there has been sporadic gunfire and bombing, there have been no major clashes between the rebels and the government since early January, when 14,000 government troops forced the rebels to retreat into the jungle after a few days of fighting.

But in some parts of Chiapas, fears were on the rise.

"People are scared of the guerrillas, of a fight with the army," said Gustavo Pinto, owner of the 26-bed hotel Suzy in Alatomirano, a town 60 miles southeast of San Cristobal de las Casas.

He hasn't had a guest since the uprising began.

For second day, U.S. relief plane hit over Bosnia

The Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina

— An American plane bringing food and medicine to Sarajevo was hit by gunfire Wednesday, the second relief plane struck in two days. The United Nations suspended aid flights to the Bosnian capital.

There were no injuries, and the plane landed safely in Sarajevo. It was not immediately clear who fired the shots, U.N. officials said.

A German aid plane was hit by gunfire near the Sarajevo airport Tuesday. U.N. officials said the plane was targeted while flying over Bosnian Serb territory.

Aid flights are the main lifeline for the 380,000 residents of Sarajevo, who have been under Serb siege during the 21-month-long war between the Muslim-led government and ethnic Serbs and Croats. The aid flights are even more crucial during the winter.

In Geneva, where yet another round of peace talks ended without agreement, the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, Sadako Ogata, sharply criticized the warring parties for disrupting aid deliveries. She said the disruptions threatened tens of thousands of Bosnians.

"I am particularly concerned about innocent civilians in places like Maglaj, Tesanj, east Mostar, Gorazde and parts of central Bosnia," she said, referring mainly to Muslim enclaves surrounded by Bosnian Serbs or Croats.

Aid officials have said the situation in Maglaj is especially bad, with about a third of the 16,000 Muslims trapped by Serb and Croat forces suffering severe malnutrition.

Four people were killed by shelling Wednesday in Maglaj, state-run Bosnian radio reported.

Sarajevo was mostly quiet. The Yugoslav news agency Tanjug said sniper fire from government positions killed a woman and injured three other people in the Serb-held Grbavica district.

Three bullet holes were discovered in the wings of a U.S. Air Force C-130 transport plane after it returned safely to Split, Croatia, said Ron Redmond, a spokesman for the relief agency.

"If this continues, it's just a matter of time before someone on the planes gets hit," he said.

Redmond said the airlift would be suspended for at least a day.

Relief flights were stopped for five days earlier this month because of shelling near Sarajevo's airport.

In central Bosnia, British peacekeepers said one of their armored vehicles came under small-arms fire in a Muslim-held area Tuesday near Gornji Vakuf. They also said a British sentry traded gunfire with two intruders at the British encampment in Gornji Vakuf.

Lt. Col. Bill Aikman and Capt. Niels Pedersen, spokesmen for the U.N. forces, said Nordic battalion patrols came under fire this week in northern Bosnia. No injuries were reported, but the incidents were part of an increase in attacks on U.N. peacekeepers in recent months.

Also Wednesday, U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali appeared to back off a NATO threat to use air strikes in Bosnia.

NATO said last week that it was prepared to use air strikes to open the Tuzla airstrip for humanitarian flights and to relieve Canadian troops protecting the Muslim enclave of Srebrenica in eastern Bosnia.

But Boutros-Ghali told the Security Council that "other military assets" would be needed to open the airstrip and relieve the Canadians. U.N. spokesman Joe Sills said that meant more ground troops — something member nations seem unlikely to provide. Britain, France, Spain and Canada have said they might withdraw the troops they have in Bosnia if a peace settlement is not reached soon.

Yeltsin appoints core of his new Cabinet

The Associated Press

MOSCOW — President Boris Yeltsin appointed the core of a new Cabinet today that is dominated by conservatives opposed to rapid economic reforms, and his prime minister said he would pursue "corrections" in government policies.

"The period of market romanticism has ended for us," Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin told reporters. But he added that he had no plans for "cardinal changes in the pursuit of reforms."

Chernomyrdin said the post of finance minister had been offered to top reformer Boris Fyodorov, but Yeltsin and Chernomyrdin rejected the conditions Fyodorov had set to accept the job.

"No conditions will be accepted from anyone," Chernomyrdin said.

He said Central Bank Chairman Viktor Gerashchenko would remain in the government. Fyodorov had demanded his ouster.

"For now, he remains," Chernomyrdin said, shrugging his shoulders. "I don't see any reason why he shouldn't."

Chernomyrdin told reporters there would be changes in government policies, but he promised to continue with market reforms.

"The course that was pursued by the government in 1993 remains unchanged," he said. "We propose corrections in the course of reforms."

The essence of those corrections would be a shift from the previous emphasis on "restraining hyperinflation to restraining the hyper-fall in production," he said.

Chernomyrdin also said there would be efforts to create "real competition in the market" and steps taken to open Russia's market to the international economy.
