Funding needs affecting juvenile probation

Cost of keeping offenders more than funds; could put them back in community before time

By TIM JONES
Staff Writer

"We're here and functioning but on a low budget," said Margy Bradberry, chief juvenile probation officer in Big Spring who supervises young offenders from Howard, Martin and Glasscock counties. "If we cannot get better funding to make placements, some of these young people will end up back on the streets."
Bradberry said this 118th district office received $64,911 in Community Correction Assistance funds for this year; their share out of a $22 million block grant the Texas Juvenile Placement Commission distributed statewide to deter young offenders from ending up in the Texas Youth Commission's detention facility.

Bradberry said there are six levels of care that classify and distinguish the type of supervision needed by the young people their office supervises; either in the community, or in juvenile placement facilities. Most of these placements their office makes are either level fives or sixes.
A level five placement facility costs $82.67 a day or $30,174.55 a year.
A level six placement facility costs $99.68 a day or $36,383.20 a year.
"The $64,911 budgeted doesn't adequately address these costs," Bradberry commented, "that's why offenders needing a placement may end up back in the community instead of getting help they do not or cannot receive at home."

Howard County has funded the local juvenile detention center, with $31,500 to buy food and pay the staff. The staff consists of call-in shift-workers who are paid $6.30 an hour. Food costs are about $4 a day, but if there is a mixed population of boys and girls, it costs $288 a day to staff the facility.
The lock-up is designed to hold four juveniles in custody, but Bradberry says they often have five. She has three or more that need to be off the street, if space were available.
The county commissioners' court recently approved Bradberry to negotiate a space-available contract with Recor, a juvenile detention facility in Sweetwater. The

Robbery suspect is still at large; police have some leads whereabouts

By TIM JONES
Staff Writer

The suspect in the Rip Griffin's Truck-Travel Store robbery is still at large, according to Acting Police Chief Jerry Edwards.

The police do have some leads as to his whereabouts but have been unable to locate him so far.

The robbery occurred Feb. 7 in the rear fuel-desk, located in a building separate from the main store, just after 10:10 p.m.

The assailant, described as a black man, approximately six feet-two inches and weighing about 170 pounds. He was wearing a blue baseball cap, a denim jacket with a hood, blue jeans and white tennis shoes. He sported a light, three-day beard that does not cover severe acne scars on his face.

The subject brandished a small caliber handgun, and forcibly took an undisclosed amount of cash from the register. He also stole wrist watches and $561 cash in total from his three victim's wallets.

He then ordered the victims to remain on the floor and fled in an unknown direction.

Filing begins Monday for college board seats

Herald Staff Report

Two seats on the Howard College District Board of Trustees are up for election. Filing begins Monday at Howard College.

Place 3, representing the southwest part of the county and the same as Howard County Precinct 3, and Place 4, representing the northeast part of the county and the same as County Precinct 4, are open.

Harold Davis currently holds the Place 3 seat and has served on the board since 1971. Don McKinney is representing Place 4 and has been serving since 1972.

To file for either position it is required that the person live in the precinct they chose to run for. Filing papers may be picked up at the president's office between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. The deadline for filing is March 23.

The election is scheduled for May 7.

Receipts turn into money in a Don's IGA program

By JANET AUSBURY
Features Editor

A little-known donation program operated by Don Newsom, owner of Don's IGA stores, provided a big benefit for the Kiwanis Club at its noon meeting Thursday at Howard College.

Kent Newsom presented a check for $256 to the club. Under the program, which was started by the Newsoms about a year and a half ago, service organizations may return members' register receipts from their Don's IGA purchases to the Newsoms.

The Don's IGA stores, along with wholesale supplier Fleming Foods of Lubbock, will then return 2 percent of the total receipts to the club.

"Not a lot of people seem to know about this, but the Kiwanis Club sure did," joked Kent Newsom as he presented the check to club president Bob Ramsey and Billy T. Smith.

Smith gave receipts totaling $6,500 to Newsom about a month ago. Fleming Foods contributed $123 and the Newsoms matched that amount for a total donation of $256.

According to Newsom, few organizations have participated to date but the Kiwanis Club has had the largest participation in the program. Smith said the club had been saving register tapes since Oct. 1.

"There's no set time limit on when you can turn these in," explained Smith. "It's just whenever we decide to get them all totaled up and turn them in."

The donation will assist the club with upcoming projects such as its pancake supper, as well as with contributions to other organizations such as the United Way.

Discovery of prostitution ring has capitol wondering about names

The Associated Press

AUSTIN — A longtime state Human Services employee has been accused of running a prostitution ring from his office. Now, the corridors of capital office buildings are buzzing about the 400 or so clients named in boxes of index cards seized by police.

Will the names of Texas' movers and shakers be on the list?

Lt. Keith Leach, who heads the Austin Police Department's vice detail, told at least two newspapers that investigators had uncovered the name of a state legislator.

But Deputy Chief Ken Williams on Thursday said Leach's comments were taken out of context, declining to confirm any names.

"If there are prominent individuals who have used this service, that's certainly a concern to them," Williams said. "If a politician is involved, that could affect whether or not they get re-elected, but that's not important to us. We are not going to defame or ruin anyone's reputation."

Even with assurances of secrecy from police, the nail-biting by some who feared being linked to the scandal appeared to be unavoidable.

Williams said phones were ringing "off the wall" with calls from people wanting to find out if they are among the list of clients and if they can talk to police.

"Some were inquiring as to whether their name was on the list," Williams said. "Or attorneys will call saying, 'I have a client whose name I won't reveal, but they would like to come in and talk to you.'"

"If there are (state) representatives and senators in this book, it will be the Bob Packwood case of Texas," said one political insider, who spoke on condition of anonymity. Packwood is a U.S. senator from Oregon who has been the subject of sexual harassment allegations.

Another said, "We could have the makings of Heidi Fleiss meets the Texas Legislature." Ms. Fleiss has been charged in California with running a prostitution ring. She has claimed Hollywood stars were among her clients.

Elected officials in Austin are refusing to comment on the matter. One simply said, "Have a nice day," when asked for a response.

At the center of the controversy is James A. Bunch, 45, a bald, gray-bearded, 23-year Human Services employee who helped evaluate the agency's Medicaid program for mothers and dependent children.

Bunch has been charged with aggravated promotion of prostitution. He was released from jail Wednesday on a $5,000 personal recognizance bond.

In a brief interview with The Associated Press on Thursday, Bunch said the case was being overblown. He declined to comment further, referring questions to his attorney Steve Brittain.

Brittain was out of his office and didn't immediately return messages

Gag order issued in Gilmer trial

The Associated Press

GILMER — A state district judge has issued a gag order to reduce the "circus atmosphere" he said is surrounding the murder case of a Gilmer teen-ager.

Judge F.L. "Tiny" Garrison said he was placing all parties involved in the Kelly Wilson murder case under a gag order because "these cases shouldn't be tried in the media."

"I'm tired of this, so I just decided to stop it all," Garrison said Thursday at a news conference in Gilmer. "I just think we ought to reduce the circus atmosphere."

Garrison said he feared that certain "inappropriate" statements being made to reporters might be jeopardizing the defendants' rights to a fair trial.

Eight people are charged with kidnapping, raping and murdering 17-year-old Wilson, whose body has not been found. She vanished Jan. 5, 1992.

The judge's order applies to all attorneys, special prosecutor Scott

Lyford, investigators and defendants. It came down just 20 minutes before a scheduled news conference by attorney G.F. "Corky" Stovall, who represents defendant Wendell Kerr.

Stovall's investigator, Jimmy Lancaster, had told the Longview News-Journal earlier Thursday that he and Stovall were calling the news conference to present evidence he said would exonerate Kerr, and possibly others.

Meanwhile, the Texas Attorney General's Office announced Thursday it will help investigate and prosecute the eight capital-murder cases.

Police are following up on evidence that may lead to further charges against Bunch, who purchased Aimes Escorts two years ago, Williams said.

There is some indication he was using a computer and telephone at his office to conduct some of the business," Williams said. "There is also a possibility that juveniles were involved in his business. Both of those allegations could result in more charges being filed."

Bunch was fired from his $32,000-a-year job after agency investigators conducted their own probe. The investigation was triggered by employees who said they overheard Bunch in "strange" sounding telephone conversations.

Human Services spokesman Mike Jones said agency investigators discovered computer discs with "escort service correspondence" on them and related paperwork in Bunch's work space.

"As far as I know there were never any complaints or indication of problems from Mr. Bunch," Jones said. "You don't always know what people are doing at home."

"But the department looked to see if any other employees were involved, and that was the good news. No other employees were involved," Jones said.

Files seized by police at Bunch's home included a catalogue of index cards that describe clients, including their sexual preferences, the amount of money they would pay and even if they were a "good" or "bad" customer who would hurt the prostitutes, said Senior Sgt. Jack Kelley.

Officers' application for a search warrant included affidavits from two men who said they had paid $50 to Aimes Escorts and $120 and $150 to prostitutes for sex arranged through the escort service.

Another man claimed to have obtained prostitutes through the escort service 50 to 100 times.

"You are talking about a lot of money here," Williams said. "Some of these clients have spent $15,000 over a 12 month period. If there are 400 customers, we are not talking pocket change."

contract doesn't cost anything unless we actually use the beds, but provides that beds will be available at the agreed cost, if they are needed, she explained.

"The common denominator we see among first offenders is an absent father and a disinterested mother," Bradberry explained.

"These young people find or form a peer group and end up parenting each other, starting a nucleus to face the world," she said. "The group's leader is the one who calls the teachers bad names, or can get keys to a car, or has the exceptionally cute boyfriend."

Bradberry realizes that peer-pressure is immense, especially among boys.

"Often a boy misses school, we are called, and we find out that the reason he is not in school is he lent another boy his 'cool clothes' and he won't wear what he has already worn this week, justifying his absence in classes," she explained.

Bradberry says "girls often tell her they exchange physical/sexual intimacy because of the attention and rewards they get which they believe are not available to them elsewhere - they do it to simply survive."

Bradberry said their office has some funds for clothing, and "they can go shopping with us or we can go for them. They often have no socks, underwear, or panties. There is also money for dental work," she said.

Bradberry said that she has become a children's advocate. She hopes that someday she'll be empowering them to live in society.

Her dream is a facility where the young people learn simple things - like daily bathing with soap and hot water, living on a schedule, learning to cook a balanced meal, and how to wash clothing.

There would be half-a-day for academic training, how to read, write, spell, add and subtract.

"I would like them to receive some moral and ethical training, and an understanding about a loving God, which many have never heard of in their homes," she said, "maybe we will be able to do that sometime in the future."

The other part of the day, boys would learn auto mechanics, welding, carpentry and electrical/mechanical concepts. Girls would learn to sew, cook, clean, can food and how to budget for a household.

"Most of the young people on my caseload probably do not get any breakfast," she said, "I can't name those whom I know do because of confidentiality, but they are few."

Defense rests in Davidian trial

The Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Eleven Branch Davidians smiled and their lawyers voiced optimism after the defense closed its short case in a federal murder trial and looked ahead to jury arguments.

Today prosecutors and defense attorneys meet before U.S. District Judge Walter Smith to mull over the instructions the judge will read to jurors before deliberations begin next week.

Self-defense is a key issue.

"I believe that a self-defense charge has been raised in the courtroom," said defense attorney Steven "Rocket" Rosen. "That, I believe, is the most crucial part of it."

Government attorneys repeatedly have declined to comment on the case.

Prosecutors contend the Davidians were cold-blooded killers who murdered four agents of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms as the federal officers raided David Koresh's prairie compound near Waco on Feb. 28, 1993.

The botched raid erupted into a shootout that killed agents Steven Willis, Robert Williams, Conway LeBlou and Todd McKeen. Six Davidians died.

The 11 Davidians on trial could face up to life in prison if convicted of the murder and murder conspiracy charges against them.

Smith's proposed jury directions contain instructions about a self-defense claim and about possible findings of voluntary manslaughter. Closing arguments are scheduled for Tuesday, then the case goes to the jury.

The final day of testimony began after Judge Smith summoned both sides into his chambers to discuss possible jury tampering. A letter was mailed to eight members of the jury in what appeared to be fake envelopes from the Texas comptroller's office, unidentified court sources told The Dallas Morning News.

The letters, on fake district attorney's stationery, were critical of the government's case and said the trial was crucial to the right to bear arms.

The letters also defended the sect members and criticized Judge Smith, the paper said in Friday's editions.

It is the second time that jurors have received mail during the trial.

Both sides refused comment on the matter Thursday.

New bridges not the answer to congestion

The Associated Press

HIDALGO — New bridges aren't necessarily the answer to congestion problems on the U.S.-Mexico border, the Customs chiefs for both countries agree.

"I think we have to deal with the deck that we are currently dealt," U.S. Customs Commissioner George Weise said Thursday during a tour of the busy international bridge linking Hidalgo to Reynosa, Mexico.

"We have to do everything in our power to make the existing facilities work as effectively as possible," Weise said.

His Mexican counterpart, Luis Manuel Gutierrez Levy, generally echoed that sentiment.

Asked about long truck lines at the bridge, Gutierrez Levy said: "I can show you bridges a few kilometers away where there's nobody. So, we have to look for other options that already exist."

That wasn't good news to Mike Allen, president of the McAllen Economic Development Corp., who is lobbying for the proposed Anzalduas Bridge south of Mission.

"We absolutely need Anzalduas. It's not a question of politics. It's a question of business. These decisions need to be business-driven," Allen said.

But Weise said the Customs agency is neutral about where to local new crossings. But budget constraints make the prospect for several new bridges unrealistic, he said.

Weise said the recently built Columbia-Solidarity Bridge north of Laredo is the nation's most modern, but few people use it.

"The traffic isn't there for whole lot of reasons. But one of the reasons is that the infrastructure on the Mexican side — the roads haven't been appropriately built," Weise said.

"We need to make sure that we work a lot smarter in the future, that we take into account the infrastructure on both sides of the border before we make the kind of financial commitment to new structures," he said.

Early traffic counts also have been shown at the new Free Trade Bridge south of Harlingen.

Weise, on his second visit to the Texas-Mexico border since taking the top Customs job in May 1993, said his agency's focus is to make current crossings more efficient.

But Allen said the agency fails to foresee an increase in traffic under the North American Free Trade Agreement.

"You can't provide jobs if you can't attract industry and you can't attract industry if you can't move trucks," Allen said.

The United States and Mexican governments already are constructing a new bridge east of McAllen between Pharr and Reynosa.

U.S. Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Mission, said he supported new bridge proposals because of the growing populations in Mexico and the border area.

"That's why we are trying to get the crossings in place before you need them," de la Garza said.

Banning of 'racist' t-shirt prompts student walkout

The Associated Press

TYLER — The principal of Robert E. Lee High School pledged to do whatever was necessary to maintain order today in the face of a controversy over racially offensive T-shirts.

White students passed out fliers Thursday urging students to walk out of first-period classes today for a protest for white rights, highlighted by raising of the Confederate flag on the school flagpole.

As soon as school officials became aware of the planned protest, they had the chain cut on the flagpole so that no flag could be raised today.

School principal Eddie Milham said police would be present for the start of classes today and that he would do whatever was necessary to run the school day as normally as possible.

Thursday, Hundreds of students staged a lunch-hour protest because a white student was forced to remove a T-shirt that school officials declared racially offensive.

Wednesday, student Alan Daigle wore a shirt emblazoned with a rebel flag that read, "It's a White Thing; You Wouldn't Understand."

Protesting students said the shirt was the direct result of a shirt worn by black students that read, "It's a Black Thing; You Wouldn't Understand."

Daigle removed the shirt when ordered to by principal Eddie Milham, but Daigle's mother, a Tyler attorney, complained to school officials Thursday that if her son was barred from wearing his shirt, then black students should be prohibited from wearing Malcolm X shirts.

After morning-long discussions Thursday, students staged a protest, refusing to report back for classes after lunch.

Kerry Max Cook confers with investigator Jim McCloskey, left, in Georgetown Thursday before the start of closing arguments in his third capital murder trial. Cook, who is accused of the 1977 murder of Tyler secretary Linda Jo Edwards, spent 13 years on death row before the conviction was thrown out by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

Cook trial heading to same result - mistrial

The Associated Press

GEORGETOWN — The third capital murder trial of Kerry Max Cook may be doomed for a familiar fate — a mistrial.

Just five hours after deliberations began Thursday, jurors sent out a note saying they were divided over whether Cook is guilty in the 1977 slaying of Tyler secretary Linda Jo Edwards.

Judge Robert Jones told the six-man, six-woman jury to keep deliberating. A previous Cook retrial, in 1992, ended in a mistrial when the jury deadlocked.

Earlier Thursday, jurors heard impassioned closing arguments from the prosecution and defense.

"The only reasonable deduction you can make from the evidence before you in this case is that Kerry Max Cook is guilty of the sick offense of the mutilation-lust murder of Linda Jo Edwards," said Smith County prosecutor David Dobbs.

Defense lawyer Paul Nugent countered, "There is not one piece of scientific evidence that connects Kerry Max Cook to the crime."

While Cook's fingerprints were found on the sliding glass door to Ms. Edwards' apartment, he said, they were not found in the room where she was killed.

"If you convict Kerry Max Cook based on innuendo, based on the slop the prosecutor's thrown against the barn wall hoping it sticks, our founding fathers will roll in their graves," Nugent said.

Cook, now 37, was sentenced to die in 1978 in the murder of Ms. Edwards, 21. He is accused of killing her during a rape or burglary.

Cook spent 13 years on death row before his conviction was thrown out in 1991 by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals because a psychiatrist who interviewed Cook had not warned him that their conversations could be used in court.

His second trial, in Georgetown, ended when the jury said it was deadlocked. The case was moved from Smith County because of the public attention it had received there.

Ms. Edwards was beaten in the head with a small plaster statue and stabbed with a knife and scissors. Prosecutors also say her assailant cut off part of her lip and vaginal area and a lock of her hair.

Mexico praises the return of artifacts

MALLEN (AP) — Mexico is praising the return of about 1,300 pre-Columbian artifacts stolen from archaeological sites by illegal traffickers.

"The decision to return these goods that enrich the cultural patrimony of my country is an example of the respect and voluntary cooperation that exists between our nations," Luis Manuel Gutierrez Levy, general administrator of the Mexican customs agency, said during a ceremony Thursday.

The U.S. Customs Service seized the artifacts from a McAllen art collector who cooperated with a federal investigation, according to the agency's commissioner, George Weise.

"Instead of dealing in stolen goods, he was suddenly very eager to give Customs the goods on what he said was a worldwide network dealing in stolen artifacts," Weise said.

Many dating back more than 1,000 years, the items are mainly pottery, figurines, burial beads and pottery fragments from the Huasteca culture in the area of the eastern coastal Veracruz state, said anthropologist Tony Zavaleta, who appraised the collection.

Jury deliberating in beating trial

ATHENS (AP) — It's a case of the supposed good guys versus the alleged bad guys. Now a jury is deciding which is the real McCoy.

Prosecutors claim Lorenzo Colston beat two law enforcement officers, punching them in the face and knocking one to the ground, to try to escape arrest.

One officer "tried to protect his life," shooting Colston in the buttocks and arm, prosecutors say.

But defense attorneys say Colston feared for his own life. That fear, they say, prompted him to defend himself against the strokes of the officers' batons.

Jurors return to court today to continue deciding whether Colston was a victim or an attacker. Their main decision-making tool is a graphic videotape that captured the attempted arrest, ensuing struggle and shooting of Colston.

Defense rests in Davidian trial

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Eleven Branch Davidians smiled and their lawyers voiced optimism after the defense closed its short case in a federal murder trial and looked ahead to jury arguments.

Today prosecutors and defense attorneys meet before U.S. District Judge Walter Smith to mull over the instructions the judge will read to jurors before deliberations begin next week.

Self-defense is a key issue. "I believe that a self-defense charge has been raised in the courtroom," said defense attorney Steven "Rocket" Rosen. "That, I believe, is the most crucial part of it."

Government attorneys repeatedly have declined to comment on the case.

Settlement accepted in harassment suit

EL PASO (AP) — A group of high school students and employees that sued the U.S. Border Patrol to stop alleged harassment is celebrating, but with restraint.

The alumni, students and teachers from Bowie High School cheered a federal judge's decision Thursday to approve a lawsuit settlement agreement that will restrict the agency's actions. But they cautioned in almost the same breath that continued vigilance is needed.

The battle came to an end when U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton approved the agreement that stipulates patrol agents cannot detain or arrest people simply because they look Hispanic.

"We've still got a ways to go," said Ben Murillo, a football coach at the predominantly Hispanic school, which became a civil rights battleground when he and others filed a suit in 1992 accusing patrol agents of abusing and assaulting them.

The settlement, said Bunton, is "the best thing for the people in the Bowie area. I think it's the best thing for the people who serve this country in the U.S. Border Patrol."

Battle waged over who's done more on enforcement

AUSTIN (AP) — Democratic U.S. Senate candidates Mike Andrews and Jim Mattox are tangling over who has done more to make deadbeat fathers pay child support.

On Thursday, Andrews' campaign blasted Mattox' collection of child support while he was state attorney general from 1983 through 1990.

"Thanks to Jim's mismanagement of the child support enforcement office, Texas became known as the 'black hole' for deadbeat parents," the Andrews' campaign said.

But Mattox said that before he took over child enforcement collections in Texas, the state had one of the worst collection records in the nation.

Letters to the Editor

Thanks for making Cranefest a success

This past weekend, Big Spring had our second very successful Cranefest. Eco tourism is a new buzz word in the tourism industry and we have gained recognition through out the state for our efforts.

We had visitors from Houston, Amarillo, many from Abilene and our immediate area. Sometimes we judge monuments on numbers instead of quality and what it can do for our community in terms of recognition.

Doyle Phillips won the Cranefest Logo contest this year and turned his $300 prize back over to the committee for a photo contest for 1995.

Jerry Worthy and Polly Mays sponsored the Logo contest. Thank you goes to Jerry Worthy for the donation of Crestwood Hall; Big Spring High School for the use of the school buses; Tim Martin, who donated profits from metal sculpture crosses; Ron Alton, State Park Manager; Lilly St. Clair for decorations; Eulene Jones for her hospitality; Rip Griffin catering staff; Howard College Diplomats; Linda Lindell, Rev. Fuller and Everett Bender; Rip Griffin's, Best Wester-Mid Continent Inn; Angie Clanton, tour guides, and all of the committees and volunteers; Pat Simmons, Chairman, who worked long hard hours to put this successful event together. Where else can you find such great volunteers throughout the year and to each of these, I say Thank You!

And to the Big Spring Herald, KBYG, KBST, KWES, KOSA, KWID, for their fine coverage.

MARIE BROOKS, Director

Convention & Visitors' Bureau

Thanks for helping us with decorations

We would like to personally thank the following for helping us make windmills that were used as decorations for the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce banquet on February 1. We will also be entering our windmills in the 4th Annual Big Spring Area Student Art Show to be held in April.

Mrs. Polly St. Clair, who gave us the wonderful idea to make the windmills, and the opportunity to use them for the enjoyment of our community. Harris Lumber and Hardware and Mr. Lonny Hattenbach, who helped our creative teacher, Mrs. Helms find all of the supplies we needed, and for being very patient with her. Mr. Eugene Helms, who spent his time to cut all of our wood to build the windmills.

Thanks all of you. We appreciate all of your support.

"Sorry, I'm not interested. I'm having an anonymous, superficial relationship on Internet."

Monstrous, cruel to the children

Something so cruel that it can almost be described as monstrous was done to the three children in McHenry County, Ill., about whom we have been writing.

It happened back in November. Now that the children have won their victory — now that there is no immediate threat of giving them to their birth mother and her boyfriend — we can report it. They seem safe from further courtroom harm, at least temporarily.

The children are a 4-year-old girl, a 3-year-old boy and a 21-month old girl. They were found living in a car with the birth mother, and were removed from her because of severe neglect. As we have reported, there have been further allegations of neglect and outright abuse on the part of the birth mother and boyfriend.

In early November, when we first heard about some of these allegations, we spoke with foster parents Charles and Patricia Lewis of Crystal Lake, Ill. — with whom the children have been living for more than a year — and suggested they take their concerns to the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services (DCFS). We gave specific names and phone numbers inside DCFS to the foster parents, thinking they might be able to get some help for the children.

On Nov. 17, there was a routine hearing before Judge Frank J. Rhode Jr. Thomas Quinn, a public defender for the birth mother, said he felt the foster parents were hindering DCFS' goal of giving the children to the birth mother and boyfriend.

The public defender asked the judge to remove the children from the foster home — the only home they had known for the last year — and to send them elsewhere.

And the judge, without hearing a word of testimony, did it. He ordered that the three children be taken away immediately — that day. Sent to somewhere they had never been.

Judge Rhode's manner on the bench is gentlemanly. His manner totally belies the utter disregard he had shown those children before attention was drawn to the case — and at the Nov. 17 hearing, what he did was nothing short of brutal.

The children were packed up within the hour. Their possessions were put in paper sacks. Two DCFS employees showed up at the home of the foster parents and, with the older girl sobbing, took the children away. They would not say where they were going.

"(The older girl) was weeping and begging not to be taken," said Catherine May, who had first met the children when she was working in a church-sponsored homeless shelter. "The people from DCFS just took the three children and drove away."

What makes this even more sadistic is that the children were split up that night and taken to separate sites. All those children have really had in their lives is each other. There were no allegations of maltreatment in the foster home. The judge was in a hurry — he was scheduled to go on vacation that week — so he went along with the recommendation of the birth mother's public defender and punished the children.

That day, we heard about what happened. We called the McHenry County courthouse and managed to get Judge Rhode on the phone. We asked him why he did it. He said he could not speak to us about it.

But less than 48 hours later, the judge reversed his decision. He said he had made a mistake. He said he should not have taken the children from their home, and he ordered them back. He told the lawyers that his reversal of his decision had nothing to do with having been contacted by us.

There is no polite or diplomatic way to say this about a judge — but we do not believe he is telling the truth. We believe that had his attention not been called to the fact that someone was aware of his action, those children would still be gone. Think of the panic in those children's hearts as DCFS took them away — on an hour's notice.

And no one in authority in the courtroom stood up to say this was wrong. Certainly not the public defender. Not DCFS. Not the court-appointed attorney for the children. Not the lawyer from the office of McHenry County State's Attorney Gary Pack.

All of them now say that what was done was wrong and inexcusable. But on the day it happened, no one tried to stop it. No one offered to help the children.

None of the legal and judicial authorities who failed those children so utterly will be pleased to read this today. All of them will be back in the courtroom in front of Judge Rhode the next time the children's fate is being decided. No matter how displeased Judge Rhode and DCFS and the lawyers are that this is being reported, here is a piece of advice for them: they had better not take it out on those children.

Song of the lower East

The South continues to have a terrible public relations problem.

I became aware of this at the Super Bowl that was held in Atlanta last month. The city, which is in the South, was even ripped by a Chicago columnist.

That doesn't concern me greatly because I know there's never much Super Bowl news for sportswriters, so the way to get one day behind you is to write a column knocking whatever city you happen to be visiting on expense account.

It's a cliché, but it beats writing about large linemen.

It's a little odd that somebody who lives in Chicago would have the guts to rip Sioux City, much less Atlanta.

But Atlanta is in the South, so it's easy to throw in a few "sho' nuffs" and "kiss my grits" and a mention or two of molasses, which, of course, is what we put on our grits.

It was the controversy over Georgia's state flag that really pointed to the PR problem. The Georgia state flag includes a replica of the Confederate flag, and many felt it was inappropriate for a symbol of the Civil War to be shown at the Super Bowl. There were televised protests.

The Civil War, of course, was the war between the North and the South, which the North won by two touchdowns after the South had kept it fairly close for a half.

It also involved the issue of the enslavement of black people, which was taking place in the South at the time. Quite naturally then, many people, including the Rev. Jesse Jackson, are against the public display of any symbol that allegedly glorifies the South's stance in those days, the state flag being just one of them.

I have also heard the same thing mentioned about the carvings of Confederates Robert E. Lee and his fellow generals on Atlanta's Stone Mountain, and all those Confederate monuments on all the squares in small towns throughout Georgia and the South.

But here's the problem: We can change the state flag. We can chisel off Lee and we can tear down Confederate monuments. We got rid of the song "Dixie," didn't we?

But this portion of the United States will still be known as "The South," as in "The South that rebelled against the rest of the country," "The South, where people eat and talk funny" and "The South, which once fought a war to keep its slaves."

As long as we're known as The South, we've got that serious PR problem.

Today I propose a solution — a new name for the region. As soon as we rid ourselves of every symbol of the Civil War, as soon as we lose our accents, as soon as we stop eating molasses and grits, then we start calling ourselves something other than The South, which has so many negative connotations.

I suggest we call ourselves "The Lower East."

It has a nice ring to it, doesn't it? And we are, in fact, located in the lower eastern part of the United States. By calling ourselves The Lower East, we would be both politically and geographically correct.

Actually, when we're asked or mocked in the North with "Well, sho' nuff, honey chile, where are you all from?" we can answer, "We all is from L.E."

We could talk about Lower Eastern hospitality and Good Ol' Lower Eastern cooking and if we could ever convince Ted Turner to stop showing "Gone With the Wind" on the Super Station, perhaps in time everybody would forget there ever was a South, a Civil War, hoop skirts and all that stuff.

And we don't have earthquakes in L.E.

Sho' nuff? Sure enough. This is going to be easier than I thought.

Astroturf not an artificial issue

President Clinton recently said something that is even more confusing than when he makes policy wonk-talk.

He was at an auto plant in Louisiana, making a speech to the workers, and he noted that there were some new trucks behind him.

He said: "When I was a younger man and had a life, I owned an El Camino pickup in the '70s. It was a real sort of Southern deal. You don't want to know why, but I did."

A couple of things in that statement puzzle me.

First, I don't understand what he means by: "When I was a younger man and had a life ... in the '70s."

It seems to me that he has "a life" now, and a pretty lively one.

He lives in a fine mansion, with cooks, valets, maids, drivers, his own physicians and nurses, and countless other flunkies. He can walk down stairs to work in a minute or two. No bucking rush-hour traffic or waiting for a bus or train. He has helicopters and Air Force One to fly him wherever he wants to go. And at his request, even his closest chums call him "Mr. President."

Besides the creature comforts, he is on one of the great power trips of our time, turning entire professions and industries on their ears. Doctors fear him. Giant pharmaceutical and medical supply companies quake. Many small businessmen are more afraid of him than of any two guys in ski masks carrying pistols.

He makes a handsome salary, which he doesn't have to spend. Even on vacations, rich strangers are eager to let him use their palatial retreats or cart him about their private golf courses. And every fast-food joint in America dreams of his stopping in and inhaling a platter of their greaseburgers.

Editor Big Spring Herald Box 1431 Big Spring, Texas, 79721

Mike Royko

I don't know what he was doing back in the '70s that can top all of this. For a while, he was in England as a Rhodes Scholar. Then at Yale Law School. And before the '70s were over, he had run for Congress, become Arkansas' attorney general, and at age 32, its governor.

That wasn't exactly hanging out at Bubba's Saloon and swapping stories about the lunker catfish you caught that morning.

On the other hand, maybe going to Yale Law School was his idea of real kicks. As that old Yale Law School saying goes: Different kicks for different hicks.

But the real puzzler is his reference to having had his own pickup truck, saying: "It was a real sort of Southern deal. I had Astroturf in the back. You don't want to know why, but I did."

Although I've spent considerable time in the South, I'm not a Southerner. Nor have I owned a pickup truck, with or without Astroturf. So I don't grasp the significance of having a pickup truck with Astroturf in the back.

He says: "You don't want to know why." But since he is the President, and anything he says is significant, I do want to know why he had Astroturf in the back of his pickup truck.

I called the White House press office and asked about the Astroturf. The person on the phone had me spell my name twice, then said there would be no information forthcoming. For that meager crumb, I should have had to spell my name only once.

So I asked a few of my Southern acquaintances about why a young Southern man in the 1970s would have Astroturf in the back of his pickup truck.

The first one, obviously a Republican, said: "Maybe when he was between political payrolls, he had a job as an undertaker. You know, way back in the woods, they don't have regular hearses. Just throw the stiffs in the back of the pickup."

That sounded unlikely, so I sought a second opinion.

This man said: "Well, you know that Clinton is a golfer. So he probably had the Astroturf installed to practice his putting and chipping. This is common among young Southern gents. Yes, he probably would get in the back of the truck and try to perfect his stroke."

That makes sense.

But another Southerner said: "Being an urban Northerner, you probably don't appreciate the affection that Southerners have for their animals. If he kept animals, it is possible that he put in the Astroturf to make them comfortable. Being from Arkansas, which is known as the Razorback state, it might very well have been a pig. Yes, I can see Clinton being concerned about the comfort of some pig in the back of his truck."

That, too, sounds plausible, since Clinton has displayed a strong social conscience. But why wouldn't he tell us that himself?

Well, I'm sure he has his reasons. But if he puts Astroturf in the back of Air Force One, he'll have to explain.

Serbs begin withdrawing heavy guns from Sarajevo

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Bosnian Serbs besieging Sarajevo began withdrawing their heavy guns in earnest after Russia acted to head off a showdown with NATO.

It was the first significant Serb withdrawal since NATO threatened last week to bomb if all heavy weapons within a 13-mile radius of Sarajevo are not removed or placed under U.N. control by Sunday.

Lt. Col. Bill Aikman, a U.N. spokesman, called the pullout "a very heartening sign."

Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic pledged to meet the Sunday deadline, saying "We do think the war in Sarajevo is finally over."

But Bosnian government officials, who hoped for a NATO attack on their Serb opponents, were unimpressed.

"These weapons will be well-used in other places throughout Bosnia-Herzegovina," said Kemal Mulic, a spokesman for the Bosnian presidency.

Russian President Boris Yeltsin promised to send 400 U.N. peacekeepers to Sarajevo if Serbs comply with NATO's ultimatum to end their siege of nearly two years. Karadzic said the Serbs accepted the proposal, which gave his troops a way of complying with NATO without seeming to back down.

Trade with Haiti grew despite embargo

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. trade with Haiti grew dramatically last year despite an international embargo aimed at restoring President

Jean-Bertrand Aristide to power. U.S. imports from Haiti rose nearly 50 percent, and U.S. exports to Haiti also were up, according to the Commerce Department. More than $370 million in goods went back and forth, much of it under a little-mentioned exemption to the U.S.-backed embargo.

The Clinton administration last month extended the exemption for another two months.

It allows U.S. companies to export clothing parts and other pieces for assembly in Haiti. The finished goods, including baseballs and softballs, then are returned to the United States.

New computer privacy standard is proposed

Computer enthusiasts worried about electronic privacy are attacking the Clinton administration's proposed new computer privacy standard — and they're putting their feelings on-line.

"For an administration that's concerned with the information highway, they really are putting potholes in the highway before it gets built," said Jerry Berman, executive director of the Electronic Frontier Foundation in Washington.

The government's new standard, Key Escrow Encryption, was announced this month and is supposed to assure privacy during the current explosion in electronic communications.

But computer users and the industry have bridled at a provision that guarantees that law enforcement and national security agencies would still be able to intercept all messages, including electronic mail and telephone signals, for lawfully authorized wiretaps.

Japanese lawmakers urge quick moves

TOKYO (AP) — Lawmakers jittery over the prospect of a trade war with the United States urged their prime minister today to move quickly to cut Japan's trade surplus.

Prime Minister Morihiro Hosokawa agreed Thursday to offer some measures to open Japan's markets to more foreign goods. But an intense session of the Japanese Parliament's lower house budget committee today was dominated by calls for more dramatic action.

"The easygoing approach we've taken so far just won't work," said Socialist lawmaker Shigeru Goto. "Japan should take drastic action to open markets and ease regulations."

Economists say freeing up Japan's complex distribution systems and bureaucratic bottlenecks that favor local firms would also help Japan recover from its worst recession in decades.

Strokes triggered by powerful cholesterol

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A particularly dangerous form of cholesterol appears to be the single most powerful trigger of strokes, a discovery that may someday help doctors control these medical disasters, a study concludes.

The researchers found that people with high levels of this substance, called lipoprotein (a), are more than 20 times more likely than those with lower levels to suffer strokes.

"The single best factor for identifying people at risk of having a stroke was Lp (a)," said Dr. Janet H. Ransom, one of the researchers.

About 500,000 Americans suffer strokes annually, and nearly one-third are fatal. Strokes are the leading cause of disability among adults.

Counsel puts mark on Whitewater

The Associated Press

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Less than a month on the job, special counsel Robert Fiske Jr. is starting to put his mark on Whitewater, a wide-ranging probe of the business dealings of some prominent Arkansans, including President and Mrs. Clinton.

He filed a new indictment Thursday against a former judge. The day before he asked for and got his own 18-month grand jury after saying that his team of lawyers might have to go through a million pages of documents and interview hundreds of witnesses by the time they're through.

His subjects include Whitewater Development Corp., the failed Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan and a company that was authorized to make loans backed by the Small Business Administration.

The Clintons were 50-50 investors in Whitewater with Madison S&L owner James McDougal and his then-wife, Susan.

Fiske is examining the failed S&L to determine whether funds from it were diverted to Whitewater, and whether some Madison depositors' funds were used to repay Clinton's campaign debts.

Attorney General Janet Reno on Jan. 20 hired Fiske, who was with a New York law firm, to conduct an independent Whitewater investigation. Upon accepting the job, Fiske said he wanted to work out of Little Rock, which he said was the probe's "center of gravity."

He promptly got a three-year lease on an office right next to the FBI. Clinton said Thursday that he reluctantly requested appointment of a special counsel so that "I wouldn't have to fool with it any more."

He also complained the investigation will cost taxpayers millions of dollars though "most of it has nothing to do with me."

Fiske's special grand jury will start meeting in the late March or early April, said Mary Buford, grand jury coordinator for the Eastern District of Arkansas.

By that time, Fiske may already have gone to trial in a case against former Municipal Judge David L. Hale in connection with a Little Rock-based company Hale owned.

The company, Capital Management Services Inc., was authorized to make SBA-backed loans.

Hale was indicted in September on charges that he and two attorneys defrauded the SBA. Hale has since alleged that Clinton twice pressured him into making a $300,000 SBA-backed loan to Susan McDougal. Clinton has said he did not recall such meetings with Hale.

Fiske last month took over the prosecution of Hale and two co-defendants, and was prepared for the previously scheduled trial date of March 28.

A British Royal Navy Sea Harrier jet lands on the flight deck of the carrier HMS Ark Royal in the Adriatic Sea after a reconnaissance mission over Bosnia Thursday. NATO has strengthened its ability to use warplanes to protect U.N. peacekeepers in Sarajevo if Bosnian Serbs make good on threats to retaliate for any air raids, the NATO commander for the possible attack force said.

Limited work in peacekeeping outlined

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Stung by criticism in Congress, the Clinton administration is briefing lawmakers on a classified proposal that envisions limited participation in U.N. peacekeeping operations.

An outline of the draft proposal, a copy of which was obtained Thursday by The Associated Press, states emphatically that peacekeeping operations are "not a centerpiece of U.S. foreign policy." And, contrary to earlier versions of the proposal, presidential control over U.S. forces down to the "lowest commander in the field is never relinquished."

Titled "Presidential Decision Directive 13," the document is still tentative and has not been signed by President Clinton. But Pentagon spokeswoman Kathleen deLaski said it is "nearing a state of readiness."

Last summer, Clinton's national security team prepared a version of the directive much more supportive of peacekeeping operations. That policy, which came close to winning presidential approval, would have routinely placed U.S. forces under international control in peacekeeping operations and envisioned "rapid expansion" of those efforts.

The new administration proposal foresees "few peace enforcement missions" and "infrequent involvement of U.S. combat units."

The turnaround follows stiff congressional criticism about U.S. participation in the U.N. humanitarian effort in Somalia and concerns about the possibility of NATO air strikes over Bosnia.

A typical comment came earlier this month from Senate Republican leader Bob Dole: "United Nations peacekeeping — both at headquarters in New York and in the field — is out of control."

And Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, complained of "a migration of responsibility for committing U.S. forces to combat from Washington to New York."

Responding to these complaints, the directive proposes "regular bipartisan consultations" with Congress, advance notice of U.N. Security Council votes on peacekeeping proposals and an annual report to Congress on international operations.

The directive is not entirely negative on the concept of peacekeeping. U.N.-sponsored actions can add "political legitimacy and military power" to peacekeeping efforts.

BSKC donates time, money to save animals

By JANET AUSBURY
Features Editor

Big Spring Kennel Club is known for its devotion to dogs, but the club has gone a step further by providing financial donations to Big Spring Humane Society and Animal Outreach of Midland.

BSKC vice president Carole Owen said the club has donated to the Humane Society for about three years and to Animal Outreach for two years. Animal Outreach became a fully organized, non-profit organization last fall.

In January, BSKC donated $500 to the Humane Society's spay-neuter efforts and $200 to Animal Outreach for its purebred rescue work. Both organizations work to place animals, both purebred and mixed-breed, in homes.

Owen feels strongly about the importance of spaying and neutering, both to control the numbers of unwanted animals and also for the health benefits to the animals.

Spaying female animals, particularly before they go into their first heat, reduces chances of cancer in the mammary glands and reproductive organs. Neutering a male dog, especially at a young age, can reduce aggressive tendencies and may reduce chances of disease in the male reproductive organs.

Julie Fry of the Humane Society said the contributions from BSKC have helped spay and neuter many purebred animals at the shelter. Concentrating these efforts on purebred animals may seem elitist to those who don't understand the proportion of purebreds that end up in pounds or shelters.

"About 30 percent of our animals are purebred," said Fry, noting the American Humane Society gives national figures stating 42 percent of animals in shelters nationwide are purebred.

Fry explained many people want purebred animals when they are young, either because they are cute or because the owners envision making money by breeding them. The latter reason means many of these animals are never spayed or neutered.

However, when the animals reach adult size and are too big for the house, or if the family moves or realizes breeding their purebred animal is not a guaranteed source of extra money, the animals often end up in the shelter.

"We get a lot of them from the pound," said Fry. "And we also have people taking the animals to us, saying, 'Here, we don't want it anymore.'"

She recommended that potential purebred owners who are not concerned with breeding an animal go to the shelter; they just might find their animal of choice. Fry received the first Scottie dog rescued by Owen, who breeds Scotties and has worked for several years to place unwanted ones in homes.

Wanda Shaw of Midland's Animal Outreach also recommends checking local shelters for purebreds. She wanted a standard poodle but didn't expect to find one through her work. To her surprise, she encountered four of them.

Animal Outreach works with animal control officers in Midland to pick up animals who have the potential to be adopted. The group uses donations from BSKC and others to take care of minor medical problems the animals may have, such as scratches, antibiotic shots or teeth cleaning.

Owen donates her services to Animal Outreach by grooming Scotties. Employees of VIP Grooming in Midland also donate their services and help transform the animals into clean, presentable pets.

"The little dogs start doing a high step with bows in their hair," said Shaw. "It's like they know how nice they look."

Animal Outreach got its start in part when Owen contacted Midland's animal shelter—where Shaw had volunteered for two years—and asked about starting a rescue program that would save and groom stray or unwanted purebreds and make them adoptable.

Animal Outreach rescues mixed-breed animals as well as purebreds, but confines its services to animals that can fit into a home and have no serious health or behavior problems. "If we spend our money on an animal that isn't adoptable, there's no money then to save one that is," Shaw explained. "We'd like to be able to save all of them."

"Shiloh," this shaggy Old English sheepdog, found a home through the efforts of the Big Spring Kennel Club and the Big Spring Humane Society...

...but "Dot," this spayed female Dalmatian, may still be waiting for the right owner to give her a home.

Support groups help mentally ill patients, families

By TIM JONES
Staff Writer

Two support groups for mentally ill/mental health consumers and their families meet once a month on the last Thursday of the month at the Howard County Mental Health Center (HCMHC), at 315 Rannels.

The Family Education and Support Group begins at 6 p.m. and the local Big Spring Alliance for the Mentally Ill (AMI) meeting is at 7 p.m.

The local AMI chapter is affiliated with the TEXAMI office in Austin, located at 1007 E. Seventh, Austin, and can be reached by calling (512) 474-2225.

The next meeting for both groups—beginning at 6 p.m. for the family support group and 7 p.m. for the AMI group—are scheduled for Feb. 24, and interested parties are encouraged to attend.

"We feel that family involvement is crucial to our consumers' success in their treatment program," said Shannon Nabors, a social worker and HCMHC's program manager. "Having a family member or friend with mental illness or a mental health issue can often be quite confusing and unsettling."

Nabors added, "It is our hope that this newly forming 6 p.m. group can evolve and grow in an endeavor to provide education and support for all those in our community who have a significant relationship with our consumers."

The Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, in their handbook "Mental Illness: A Family Point of View" states four points important to recognize: Mental illness is a disease. Finding professional mental health help and being actively involved in decision-making about treatment are vital. You have to take care of yourself, too. The situation is not hopeless; progress can be made.

"All treatment efforts are nil unless the family gets involved," Nabors insisted. "Everyone involved needs to find out about the illness and participate in treatment with the family member."

The group is facilitated by Nabors and fellow HCMHC staff members Dawne Pearson and Pat Ray. The group meets in an informal setting and there is no fee.

The first group meeting, on Jan. 27, drew about 14 attendees at the family group. About 10 participated in the AMI group, which is being reorganized.

The family group was an introductory session last month, and the next few meetings will involve discussing family problem solving and crisis intervention skills.

The meeting for the families is scheduled to coincide with the 7 p.m. AMI meeting. Family members are also encouraged to become involved with AMI as well as the 6 p.m. support group.

"I have watched this organization be very beneficial to many family members and ultimately to all of our consumers," Nabors explained.

The Big Spring Alliance for the Mentally Ill is a support and advocacy group composed of family members, friends and consumers working together to improve the quality of life for the mentally ill living both at home and inside institutions.

Support is provided by encountering other AMI members who have had similar experiences. Information about mental illnesses and treatments are available as well as locating services such as housing, vocational training and social services.

For further information call the Howard County Mental Health Center at either (915) 263-0027 or 1-800-749-5142 Ext. 287.

Church News

TOLEDO, Ohio — It was a once-in-a-lifetime teaching experience, says Helen Lloyd.

It altered the direction of her career. Later, it propelled her into a second, spectacular career as one of the busiest and most respected puppeteers in the Midwest.

Helen Lloyd of West Unity, Ohio, has more than 500 puppets. Her puppets perform and "teach" all over Ohio and around America, keeping her as busy as she was in a 30-year career in education.

And it all came about because of a little girl whose mouth and mind were opened because she longed to play with a marionette.

Years ago, Lloyd was a teacher in

"Busy Bees" met Feb. 9 at the Presbyterian Church fellowship hall in Coahoma with a covered dish luncheon. Plans were made for the craft booth at the July 4 homecoming and celebration. The next meeting will be March 9.

The Big Spring Women's Club met Monday, January 17 at 7:00 p.m. at the home of Brenda Brooks. This was the annual membership meeting to welcome prospective members. Jackie Swinney, membership chairman, explained to those present about the club's various service projects, socials and monetary donations to the community. Prospective members were encouraged to join the club either at this meeting or the February meeting.

The next meeting will be 7 p.m. Feb. 21. Prospective members should attend. Contact any club member or membership chairman Jackie Swinney (263-1137) for the location of the meeting. Members are encouraged to bring children's books for our book drive, items for the pre-natal clinic and items for M.D. Anderson Hospital.

The Mary Jane Club of Coahoma met in the home of Frances Mason to celebrate its 44th anniversary. The program for this month's meeting featured Big Spring caterer Kay Shaw.

Members brought recipes to contribute to their end of the year cook book.

Members of the Big Spring-Howard County Retired Teachers' Association will meet in the Cactus Room of Howard College at 11:30 a.m. Feb. 21 for their monthly luncheon.

The program, "Old Love Songs," will be presented by Joyce Bradley and friends. The meeting will be chaired by Jean Warren, president.

Mr. Laurence Snively, chairman of the community participation committee, reported that the retired teachers of Big Spring-Howard County completed 10,307 volunteer hours in community services.

The Texas Retired Teachers Association has purchased a lot in Austin near the State Capital. Plans are to build a new office building. Thus far, office space has been rented. At each meeting, those teachers who wish to do so, contribute money for our new proposed building.

Citizens Advisory Group will meet at noon, Feb. 28 in the boardroom at the YMCA, 801 Owens. Contact Tish Long at the Howard County Mental Health Center, 263-0027, by 11 a.m. that day to have a lunch order placed at Main Street Deli.

Anyone interested in mental health services for children and their families is welcome to attend. For further information contact Tish Long.

Bill Bates of the Dallas Cowboys will sign autographs from 2 p.m. to 2:53 p.m. in the lobby of the Big Spring High School auditorium prior to the "If You Love Me—Show Me" youth rally, sponsored by the BSHS Fellowship of Christian Athletes. One autograph per person, please.

Donations to offset the cost of the rally will be collected at the door. Any money collected above the cost of the rally will be used to send students to FCA camp in the summer.

Lottery-winning couple still frugal spenders

By The Associated Press

FORT WAYNE, Ind. — Audrey and Wayne Meyers won the $1 million Hoosier Lottery jackpot last April, but the retired couple still uses coupons at the grocery store.

The unexpected money has made retirement easier, though. They used some of their money to improve their cottage, which they had planned on selling because they couldn't afford it previously.

As an early Christmas present, they treated their four children and their families — 17 people altogether — to a trip to Disneyland.

Mechanic, 61, Wins $110,000 Award in Age Discrimination Lawsuit

DENVER — A 61-year-old Virginia man was awarded $110,000 in damages and attorney's fees in an age-discrimination lawsuit he filed after he was passed over for a job with the Denver Fire Department.

Charles "Webb" Myers applied for a mechanic's job in August 1990, when he was 57, scoring highest on a written exam. Two positions as mechanics were subsequently filled with younger men, both in their 20s.

Howard women three-peat; men struggle to win

Barnes' bombs key second half rally as Lady Hawks grab win

By STEVE REAGAN
Sportswriter

For the Howard College Lady Hawks, the first half of their games is fast becoming a mere formality.

Lately, the first half of basketball games has been a time for the Lady Hawks to struggle. The second 20 minutes, however, have usually been the team's time to shine.

Howard's women again followed this script Thursday night against Frank Phillips - but they did cut it a little close.

The Lady Hawks rallied from a 15-point deficit to down Frank Phillips 84-77 at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum. The win, coupled with New Mexico Junior College's 72-67 loss to Odessa College, gave Howard its third straight Western Junior College Athletic Conference title.

The Lady Plainsmen used 6-of-8 shooting from the three-point line and took advantage of offensive lapses on Howard's part to build a 37-22 lead with 4 minutes remaining in the first half.

But Howard co-captain Becky Barnes apparently decided that two could play the long-distance game, ending the night with four three-pointers. In fact, it was the first of her bombs right before halftime that cut Frank Phillips' lead to single digits.

"Becky just got into a zone," Howard coach Royce Chadwick said. "She's a great shooter, and when she got that way, we just kept giving her the ball."

Barnes, who led Howard with 18 points, spread the credit for the rally among the entire team.

"Coach Chadwick just told us (at halftime) that if we get down, we've got to get back up," she said. "We just sucked it up and played hard. We never gave up."

Joining Barnes in double figures were Angel Spinks and Cathy Grice, who scored 15 points each, and Eureka Ray, who added 10 points.

The Lady Hawks ended up needing all the long-distance support Barnes could give them, because Frank Phillips did not go down easy. Spinks scored in the first minute of the second half to cut FPC's lead to 42-35, but the Lady Plainsmen responded with a pair of free throws from Nova Mullen and a three-pointer from Cheree Monden to push their lead up to 12 with 18 minutes remaining.

It wasn't until Annette Robinson, playing on a mildly sprained ankle, hit a free throw with 14:50 left that the Lady Hawks got back within single digits of the lead.

From there, Howard chipped at the lead like a sculptor with a brand-new block of marble. Barnes nailed a three-pointer, and Grice added a running jumper and a free throw to cut the lead to 52-48 with 14 minutes left in the game.

After FPC increased its lead to seven, Barnes hit from long range again to make the score 55-51 and start the run that finally gave Howard the lead for good.

FPC's Tammy Yelton put the Lady Plainsmen up by five with a free throw, but Ray hit a pair of free throws, Spinks scored off an offensive rebound and Barnes hit - you guessed it - a three-pointer to tie the game at 58-58 with 9:12 remaining.

Muriel Mitchell regained the lead for FPC with a short jumper, but Spinks hit a trey and Grice scored on a marvelous off-balance running jumper to put Howard up 63-60 with 7 1/2 minutes left.

The Lady Plainsmen later tied the game at 65 on a three-pointer from Jeanne Bailey, who led FPC with 18 points. But Grice answered with another jumper and Robinson converted a three-point play, and Howard never led by less than two the rest of the way.

Afterwards, Chadwick remarked about his team's tenacity.

"This team showed more toughness in coming from 15 points down than other teams show in a full season," he said. "The three-pointer • Please see HOWARD, page 10

Howard College post player Charles Poe, right, fights an unidentified Frank Phillips Plainsman for a rebound during their game Thursday night at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum. Poe led all scorers with 26 points, and added 13 rebounds as the Hawks defeated Frank Phillips 104-94. The Hawks return to action Monday night in Odessa.

Hawks survive listless last half to punch out hapless Plainsmen

By DAVE HARGRAVE
Sports Editor

Howard men's basketball coach Tommy Collins has a way of bringing his team down to earth after a win. Usually he does it by criticizing his team in front of any reporters who will listen, saying the Hawks were lucky to win the ball game.

Collins didn't have to say a word Thursday. Howard played its worst 20 minutes of basketball this season in the second half of a 104-94 win over Frank Phillips College. Everyone who follows the Hawks knew it.

Howard (18-9, 7-3 in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference) led 60-39 at halftime against the hapless Plainsmen (0-11, 4-21). Howard could coast to victory after that half, and the Hawks did just that.

The only problem was the Hawks coasted about as fast as the cardboard car their mascot was wearing as it mockingly drove around Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

The Plainsmen upped their intensity in the second half and played well, but Howard was simply listless in the second half, committing 16 turnovers. In a 3-minute span in the second half, Howard turned the ball over six times - most of them unforced errors - and watched the Plainsmen go on a 13-2 run that cut Howard's lead to four, 78-74.

"In the second half, we just put it on cruise," Collins said. "If that isn't the worst we've played, it's certainly among the worst."

FPC cut Howard's lead to three on four occasions but never moved closer than that. With the score 92-89 with 4 minutes to go, the Hawks finally starting playing basketball.

After Howard grabbed a loose ball, Will Jones broke free and scored an uncontested layup. FPC's Vasco Tonch missed on the other end, and Howard quickly put the ball in the hands of Charles Poe, who led all scorers with 26 points. Poe scored down low to put Howard up 96-89.

Jones stole an FPC pass, and Howard's Jerard Billingsley converted the steal into points with a put-back on the boards. Billingsley scored down low again with 2 minutes remaining to put Howard out of FPC's reach at 100-89.

FPC coach Matt Ellis was pleased with the second half, though he said his team's not knowing how to win was the difference late in the game.

Ellis said: "This is the first time I've seen our team play hard for a solid 20 minutes. They played like they had a chance. They played like the glass was half full instead of half empty."

"Howard is scary - they've got a lot of good freshmen. Next year, they're going to be good, boy."

Marcus Harper led FPC with 22 points.

NOTES - Point guard Tony Brown saw only about 10 minutes of playing time Thursday. Collins said Brown may have a deep bruise or slight tear in the cartilage of his left knee and will be rested as much as possible heading into the Region V Tournament, which starts March 4 in Waco... Spencer Stewart is in Collins' doghouse and did not play Thursday. "It's a team policy thing," Collins said... Howard shot just 11 for 23 from the free-throw line, 48 percent... The Hawks have clinched a spot in the Region V tournament, which will be held March 4-8 in Waco.

Gray to interview for WTC coaching position

By STEVE REAGAN
Sportswriter

SNYDER - Howard College assistant women's coach Terry Gray will interview today for the vacant head coaching position for the women's team at Western Texas College.

Gray, who has been an assistant under Royce Chadwick for the past two seasons at Howard, confirmed that he will meet with WTC Athletic Director Milton Ham.

GRAY

WTC head coach Ron Jones recently accepted the same position at Midland College, which will begin women's basketball next season.

Today's interview will be "informal. The AD and I will visit. The (WTC) search committee will formally interview the candidates and they hope to have a coach named before the national signing date (April 6)," Gray said Thursday.

Gray came to Howard after four years coaching high school teams in South Texas. Before that, he was a graduate assistant under Chadwick at Sam Houston State University in Huntsville.

He admitted he is very interested in the position.

"Yes, especially in this conference," he said. "You always look at opportunities when they come about. And one of the reasons those opportunities become available is the success we've been having here."

The Howard College Lady Hawks clinched their third straight Western Junior College Athletic Conference title with an 84-77 victory over Frank Phillips College Thursday night.

Chadwick wished his assistant well, even though it might mean losing Gray to a rival school in the WJAC.

"First of all, I don't want to do anything to hurt his chances," Chadwick said. "I don't want to lose him, but he is absolutely, positively the best person for the job. I don't see anybody out there with his experience and knowledge of the game who will apply for the job."

Chadwick added that WTC's interest in Gray speaks favorably for the Howard athletic program.

"I think it's a tribute to your program when people come and take your assistants and make head coaches out of them," he said. Former HC assistants Terry Dean and Eddie McCarver are now head coaches at Lamar University and the University of Texas at Arlington, respectively.

Other former HC assistants coaching in Division I programs include Greg Pinkney, an assistant at Texas Tech University, and Randall Dickey, an assistant at Oklahoma State University.

Speedskater finally grabs Olympic gold

By The Associated Press

LILLEHAMMER, Norway - Finally! Skating for redemption and a gold medal, Dan Jansen got a world record today in his final Olympic race after seven failures over a decade of heartbreak.

The world's fastest skater thrust his arms up triumphantly after crossing the finish line and put his hands to his head, perhaps as much in relief as in joy. He had to wait for three dozen more skaters to race before his long-awaited gold would be secure. His time was 1 minute, 12.43 seconds, .11 faster than Canadian Kevin Scott's two-month-old world record.

The Wisconsin skater was not flawless even in setting a world record. He skidded twice on a turn and his hand even touched the ice. But unlike his past disappointments, he recovered.

Jansen had seemed alone in the "fallen star" category until Thursday.

But a veritable Who's Who of Winter Games stars on skates joined him in the 24 hours before his race: four world champions, three of them gold medalists.

It was a catastrophe on ice for Brian Boitano, Viktor Petrenko, Kurt Browning and Gunda Niemann.

"I don't know what happened," said Boitano, the 1988 Olympic fig-

Lady Steers begin state playoff quest vs. unfamiliar foe

Big Spring girls to face Berger in area round playoff game in Plainview Saturday

By DAVE HARGRAVE
Sports Editor

Big Spring and Berger share at least one thing in common heading into Saturday's area playoff game in Plainview.

They never expected to play each other.

Berger (26-7) pulled off the upset of the tournament Monday, stunning No. 2 Levelland 57-39 at Hereford.

"To be quite honest, we're really scrambling to try to find out what we can about Big Spring," said Berger coach Jill Schneider. "You could say we were pleasantly surprised to be in this ball game."

Big Spring coach Ron Taylor was surprised by Berger's win as well, but not as pleasantly.

"It was a big upset, but at the same time, those girls are a very good basketball team," he said. "Once you're at this stage, there's not any more weak links anyway."

Game time is 7 p.m. at Plainview High School.

Berger's leading scorer is 5-foot-7 senior forward Robbyn Smith, who scores 16 points per game.

Another player to watch is 6-1 junior Sally Hamilton, who poured in 20 against Levelland despite spraining her ankle just before game time, Schneider said.

Smith and Hamilton set up an intriguing high-low offense for the Lady Bulldogs. Smith, six inches shorter than Hamilton, plays the post, while Hamilton plays away from the basket as a three-point gunner. Hamilton sank five three-pointers against Levelland.

Berger can afford to play a 6-1 girl outside, since it has 5-11 senior Liz Borchardt and 5-9 senior Marva Brown down low to go with Smith. The Lady Steers (20-6) will thus be in the rare situation of "The girls feel a lot of pressure in a game like this, but if we can handle that, then we'll be fine. This is a big game, the biggest game these kids have played."

being smaller than their opponent. Of course, Big Spring isn't nearly as tall as it was before senior star Amy Earnst, 6-0, saw a knee injury take away the rest of her season.

Big Spring fans could be pointing to one possible edge in psychology. Berger beat Levelland, so perhaps the Lady Bulldogs will still be flying high instead of concentrating on Big Spring. Will Berger suffer a letdown?

"I guess I really can't answer that," Schneider said. "I don't think there's going to be a letdown, but then again, we've never had a win like that."

"I don't know about a letdown. Any time you beat a good team in the playoffs, it doesn't do anything but help you," Taylor said. "But what we have to do is worry about us. We can't worry about them; we've got to do what we've got to do."

Taylor is more concerned with his players than he is with Berger or the Plainview gym, which neither coach has seen. The Lady Steers are a young team. Earnst was their only senior.

Taylor said: "The girls feel a lot of pressure in a game like this, but if we can handle that, then we'll be fine. This is a big game, the biggest game these kids have played. We're not fighting the Levelland mystique, but we're still playing against a great team."

"But we can't worry about who beat who and by how many points. We've just got to play as hard as we can for 32 minutes, then turn around, look at the scoreboard and see who won."

Texas playoffs will keep you guessing

Oh, no! Not again. He's going to go back to his days in Indiana - Somebody stop him!
Back in Indiana...

Darn. It's too late. We've lost him. Yep, this week has had my Hoosier-bred behind bouncing back to before the day I moved to Texas.

Before wind convinced me to buy my first can of hair spray. Before running out of gas for the first time, never dreaming there weren't any fill-up stations between the outskirts of Big Spring and Forsan.

Before I had to worry about who was making the high school basketball playoffs and who wasn't. Yea, those were the good ol' days - or the bad ol' days, depending on your point of view. Could it be that it was all so simple then?

(Sorry, Barbra.) Back home again in Indiana, basketball fans don't have to worry about district or conference standings. No need to call the newspaper or the radio station to find out where your playoff game is. No need to schedule those last-minute district playoff games (games that, since the prize is a playoff berth, are playoff games themselves).

It's so easy up there. Everybody makes the playoffs. What's that? How many is everybody?

Hey, we're not exaggerating here. We say everybody; we mean everybody. You finish 20-0, you make the playoffs; you finish 0-20, you're still in. In fact, the 0-20 team has just as good a chance for a first-round bye as the 20-0 squad.

Insane? Perhaps. Unfair? You make the call.

Easy? Yes. Extremely easy. In Indiana, the brackets for the 64 tournament-opening sectionals are completed by random draw more than a month before the state tournament. The tournament games are played in the same places each season, and every year the same six teams are at each sectional.

None of those classifications to worry about, either. Class 5A, 4A and so on - there's no such thing in Hoosier hoops. A school of 57 students could play against mammoth Marion High, a 2,300-student outfit, at any time in the tournament. In the end, there's only one team still standing - the state champion.

Many sports fans in Indiana say they'd like to see classifications instituted, to give the small schools a chance. But then those same people go see the movie Hoosiers, and they curiously shut up.

Texas is a whole new ball game. Girls' hoops coaches in the Lone Star State have their teams traveling to playoff games Friday. As of Wednesday, some of them didn't know where they would be playing.

The Texas playoffs are basically a crap shoot. If you make the playoffs, you find the most available gymnasium in the fairest site for both teams, and you play. Then, if you win, you have to go through the entire process over again.

Is anything about the Texas playoffs etched in stone? Besides the fact that the state finals are in Austin?

The Indiana system has plenty of flaws. Why should the 0-20 team be given the opportunity to go 0-21? Why pair the same six teams together at each sectional, year after year? Doesn't letting everyone into the playoffs make the regular season meaningless?

But darn, it was easy. You knew where you were going to be. Where will I be tonight? Step right up. Spin the wheel.

Becky hit at the half was a big emotional boost for us ... We had some sophomores step up when we really needed it."

The Lady Hawks (27-2 overall, 6-2 in league play) conclude the regular season when they play at Qdessa College Monday. Game time is 6 p.m. After that, they return to action March 1 when they play in the Region V tournament at Garrett

U.S. lugers, steadily creeping from respectability to medals contention, had their best-ever Olympic placing today. Mark Grimmette of Muskegon, Mich., and Jonathan Edwards of South Weymouth, Mass., finished fourth behind two Italian teams and one from Germany, and Chris Thorpe of Marquette, Mich., and Gordy Sheer of Croton, N.Y., were fifth.

Italy vaulted over Norway into second place in the medals race with the 1-2 finish by Kurt Brugger-Wilfried Huber and Hansjorg Raffl-Norbert Huber. The 1992 gold medalists, Stefan Krausse and Jan Behrendt, took the bronze.

Canada got a gold medal today from Myriam Bedard of Quebec in the women's 15-kilometer biathlon. Anne Briand of France was second and Ursula Disl of Germany third.

Russia kept the overall medals lead with 12. Following Italy came Norway with nine, Germany with six and the United States and Canada with four each.

Today's other competition included the jumping portion of the Nordic combined, three hockey games and ice dancing compulsory, marking the return of 1984 gold medalists Jayne Torvill and Christopher Dean.

The U.S. hockey team (0-0-3) woke up feeling better about itself after its third straight late comeback to salvage a tie. Instead of the mixed feelings about ties with lower-seeded France and Slovakia, U.S. coach Tim Taylor said the 3-3 tie against Canada Thursday night was "more of a win."

None of today's action was likely to be as shocking as the failures of the top men's figure skaters at Hamar Olympic Amphitheater.

Coach Chadwick's guide to the playoffs

Royce Chadwick is going to have to learn not to pick up the phone every time I call.

I was sitting at my desk Wednesday, deciding what I was going to write about in this space, when all of the sudden I came up with the bright idea of having Chadwick, the women's coach at Howard College, handicap the playoff chances of the five girls' teams representing this area: Big Spring, Forsan, Stanton, Garden City and Sands.

Needless to say, Chadwick was ecstatic.

"What do I know?" he said. "I've lost twice to South Plains, and they may not make the playoffs. You could go up to Rip Griffin's and probably find someone better qualified. And you can put that in the paper, by the way."

Hey, anything for you, coach. In all seriousness, Chadwick was more than accommodating. He said all five teams have a chance to do some damage in the playoffs, if certain factors fall into place.

The following is the playoffs according to Chadwick:

Steve Reagan

the Lady Steers are young (no seniors) and haven't won a playoff game in recent memory, Chadwick said they have a shot at an extended stay in the playoffs IF they get past their first game with Borger.

"I think their first playoff game will be the most important," Chadwick said. "Borger had to have been up as big as possible to beat Levelland, so hopefully Big Spring can catch them in a regrouping phase."

If Big Spring can limit its turnovers and show good shot selection on offense, the Lady Steers can definitely beat Borger.

"Ron Taylor does such a good job with those girls," he said. "He'll have them ready to play. I've seen them in playoff games before where they were completely outmanned, and still had a chance to win ... and a lot of that has to do with Taylor." Big Spring takes on Borger Saturday at 7 p.m. in Plainview.

Forsan Queens - Chadwick says Forsan's formula for playoff success is simple: Get the ball to Jenny.

"They have to work their inside-out attack and stay in their patient offense," he said. "But they have one thing a lot of other teams don't, and that's Jenny Conaway. I think she's going to be the difference in some basketball games. She can play the perimeter, or she can post up."

The Queens play Eden tonight at 8 p.m. in San Angelo.

Stanton Lady Buffalos - The Lady Buffs have gotten to this point because of their stifling pressure defense, and Chadwick, to paraphrase Daryl Royal, says they have to "dance with what brought 'em."

"They are very well coached and very disciplined," he said. "They play as good a defense as any team I've seen this year. I think they have a chance to really make some noise this year. I like them."

Stanton faces Anthony Friday at 6 p.m. in Pecos. Garden City Lady Bearcats - The Lady Bearcats enter the playoffs after losing two of their last three games, but Chadwick believes their height - they have three starter's 6-foot or taller - can be a formidable asset during the playoffs.

"That's always a tremendous advantage, mainly because of rebounding and defensive opportunities," he said. "That's definitely something that could help them go a long way in the playoffs."

Garden City plays Menard Friday at 6:30 p.m. in San Angelo.

Sands Lady Mustangs - The Lady Mustangs are another team that needs superior play from their post to have success, Chadwick said.

"Sands has a very solid team," he said. "And they have a tremendous player in Courtney Fryar, who can get you 30 points a night. When you have a player like that, that the other team has to focus on, that opens things up for the other players."

Sands takes on New Home Friday at 8 p.m. in Seagraves.

Dear Abby - Letters... Public-address messages fall on deaf ears

DEAR ABBY: I am a 62-year-old man with a slight hearing problem. It's not the kind that can be helped with a hearing aid. I understand that about one in five people in my age bracket have some kind of hearing problem. I do a lot of traveling to visit my family, who live all over the map. The announcements in airline terminals and train stations are sometimes almost impossible to understand, due to resonance and echoes. By talking slower and more distinctly, and making short breaks between each word, the message could be made much more understandable. Example: "Flight" (pause) "number" (pause) "to destination" (pause) "boarding at" (pause) "gate number" (pause) ... Usually it sounds like, "Flightnumberthreesevensixtochicagoboardingatgatesix!" Abby, I doubt if anyone with GOOD hearing could have understood this one. I spoke to the flight attendant who gave the announcement, and she said, "Thanks, I never realized it!" We hearing-impaired people would appreciate attention to our problem. There are many of us traveling now. No ramps to build, or wheelchair accessibility necessary - just a few lessons in diction and enunciation. Thank you. - ROGER GILMAN, NEWPORT, R.I. DEAR ROGER: What a public service you have performed for all travelers. Thanks in advance from them to you. DEAR ABBY: Several months ago, a friend (I will call her Kate) offered to get some theater tickets for my husband and me. I had to be away on a business trip the day the tickets went on sale, and since "Jeff" and I wanted good seats, we took Kate up on her offer. We gave her the $150 for the tickets and thanked her for doing us the favor. When we returned, Kate called with the news that she was able to get us excellent seats, and she would get the tickets to us soon. I saw her several times after that, but she never got around to delivering the tickets. When it got close to the date of the performance, she finally confessed that she had "misplaced" them, but she was sure she could locate them. Well, she never did, so in addition to the disappointment of missing a great show, I was out $150. My husband and I agree that Kate should reimburse us for the tickets she failed to produce, but neither of us wants to risk a confrontation. How should we handle this? -NO TICKETS DEAR NO TICKETS: In this situation, a "confrontation" is in order - either call Kate, or write her a note asking her to kindly reimburse you for the $150 you gave her for the theater tickets you never received. DEAR ABBY: I have been seeing a certain man for about three months. When I am at his home, he never answers his telephone. (Sometimes he turns the sound off completely.) He says they are probably business calls, and he doesn't like to take business calls at home. In all the time that we have been seeing each other, I have never met any of his friends, family members or business associates. I can't help wondering if he has something to hide. -BEST-KEPT SECRET DEAR BEST: Stop wondering. The answer is obvious.

What's your handicap, fella?

Steve Stricker, last year's Canadian PGA champion, bogeyed the par-3 17th hole at PGA West Thursday at the Bob Hope Classic in La Quinta, Calif. Stricker hit his tee shot into the rocks about 10 feet above the green. He considered playing a ricochet off the rocks but instead asked for a ruling and took an unplayable lie. Three times he dropped the ball, and three times it rolled into unplayable positions. He finally placed the ball on a small ledge, putted it onto the surface of the green and rolled in a 25-foot putt for his 4.

Dallas city officials hoping for safer celebration this time

By The Associated Press

DALLAS — The plans have been checked and rechecked, the route has been outlined and a prediction has been made — today's Dallas Cowboys victory parade will be a celebration, not a disaster.

"I don't know of anything that has not been thought of," said Jim Chandler, a police department spokesman.

"We have something to prove. We need to show people locally and nationally that we can do this right. The Cowboys have been two-time champions and we need to be able to celebrate their accomplishments in a safe environment."

Parade planners have all but turned backflips to satisfy and anticipate any problems that might arise at the celebration, which is set to begin at 11 a.m. and run through downtown Dallas.

Nearly 75 people were arrested and about 50 people were injured after a fist-swinging, bottle-throwing fight broke out among groups of mostly youngsters who had skipped school to attend last year's parade.

After the celebration, city officials were roundly criticized for not providing adequate crowd control. The Dallas City Council, consultants, public works representatives and police officials have been planning this year's event ever since.

Dallas Police Chief Ben Click, at a news conference Monday in the department's designated command post in Reunion Tower, predicted a good experience for all involved.

"We want it to be a fun event," Click said. "We want the atmosphere to be relaxed where people won't feel like they are in a war zone."

Some 1,300 officers will be stationed every 32 feet along the parade route.

Cowboys players will ride on flatbed trucks. Heavy metal barricades, borrowed from this year's Mardi Gras in New Orleans, will protect them from the crowd, planners say.

The players and team officials rode in convertibles last year. At times, spectators rushed out into the street to touch or shake the hands of the

THE FAR SIDE

By GARY LARSON

Thirty years had passed, and although he had no real regrets about marrying Wendy, buying a home and having two kids, Peter found his thoughts often going back to his life in Never-Never-Land.
