Candidates agree on most issues

By TIM JONES
Staff Writer

Fourteen of the 16 county commissioner candidates running in the March 8 Democratic and Republican primaries expressed their views Monday during a forum sponsored by the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce.

The candidates had two minutes to introduce themselves before the evening's moderators, Randy Lynn with KBST and Lucy Brown with KBYG, posed written questions from the audience.

Rodney Brooks, a Coahoma farmer, whose served on the Coahoma ISD Board of Trustees told the audience, "I can make a difference in county government. It's not really city or county business, it's all our business."

Brooks said the top problem facing Howard County is taxes, caused by a declining tax base.

Bobby Cathey, the incumbent in Precinct 4, cited that he is a lifelong resident of Howard County who has been married 44 years. Cathey spoke in defense of his voting record against the final Fina tax abatement request, saying "they each stand on their own merits."

Sonny Choate, whose grandfathers came here in the early 1900s, said "I'm conservative. I think people

Daughter's question puts Black History observance in perspective

By JOHN A. MOSELEY

In his keynote address during Monday night's Big Spring Federal Corrections Institution Black Affairs Banquet, Associate Warden Sam Pratt hit on the importance of observing Black History Month.

Pratt, the first black to serve as associate warden at the Big Spring FCI facility, recounted discussing the significance of studying Black History with his young daughter.

After having accepted the importance of understanding and appreciating one's cultural heritage, Pratt's daughter asked, "Then why don't we study white history?"

In only his second day on the job in Big Spring, the Greenville, Miss., native and graduate of Kansas State University said he couldn't remember learning much about Black History as he was growing up and attending elementary, junior high and high school.

It was not until he took an African-American studies course at Kansas State, he said, that he truly began to learn the significance of Black History.

"It was not until the early 1960s that things began to change in our history books," Pratt said, noting that even then only brief mention of the likes of George Washington Carver found their way into American History texts. "It was really only in the late '60s that things truly began to change when the Civil Rights Movement had its impact on American society."

"By the late '70s, it became apparent that if African-Americans were going to be discussed during the study of the Civil War and the Civil Rights Movement, there was a need to explain how they came to be here and the role they've played throughout our nation's history."

The result, he said was a wholesale change in our history texts. While nothing had to be rewritten, there was much to be included that had heretofore simply been omitted.

"From the black man's perspective, America has always been a nation living in direct contrast to its ideals," Pratt explained. "The social and economic situation of African-Americans has never been of prime concern."

As a result, blacks and their organizations, not only those of today and the future, but those well established groups like the NAACP and the church, he said, must make the social and economic situation of African-Americans foremost among their concerns.

Chief among those concerns, he said, should be gangs, drugs and gang violence.

New law proves costly to college

By JOHN A. MOSELEY
News Editor

A new law that went virtually unnoticed to passage in the closing days of the last legislative session is expected to cost Howard College between $200,000 and $300,000 during the next fiscal year.

HC President Cheri Sparks delivered that news to college trustees in her report at the close of a relatively routine regular meeting of the board Monday.

The law, resulting from the passage of House Bill 975 sponsored by State Rep. Tom Craddock, R-Midland, during the waning days of the session changes the manner in which taxes are levied on oil, gas and mineral reserves.

Sparks told the board that the HB 975's passage came as a surprise to virtually everyone, including the most veteran statehouse watchers.

"We're always anticipating a decrease in revenue from oil and gas, simply because we deplete the reserves every day we pump it out of the ground."

Cheri Sparks,
College president

She noted that when first informed of the bill, she checked with the college's consultant in Austin and that even he wasn't familiar with the bill.

After some checking, however, he learned that the bill had indeed been approved along with a number of so-called "housekeeping" bills at the close of the session.

The consultant, she said, noted that the bill was worded as if "the oil companies had written it themselves."

Several trustees questioned why a representative from Midland, which also has a community college, would sponsor such a bill.

Sparks noted, however, that only 9 percent of Midland College's revenue is generated by taxing oil and gas reserves. Howard College and Odessa College, on the other hand, derive almost 38 percent of their total funding from such sources.

"We're always anticipating a decrease in revenue from oil and gas," Sparks said, "simply because we deplete the reserves every day we pump it out of the ground. That's why we're here at the college have been at the forefront of the effort to diversify our economy and recruit new industry."

Sparks told the board she and other members of the college's administrative team are now studying to deal with the new law's "devastating effect."

In other business, Dr. P.V. Malone reported that he and other trustees on the Building and Grounds Committee had met with two firms interested in making presentations for developing energy management plans for the college.

After hearing that both companies had indicated that they would only be paid if the college did realize cost savings through its gas and electric billings, the board voted to advertise for bids from any companies interested in making a proposal.

The board also approved an order of election and resolution calling a trustee election for May 7. Early voting at the County Clerk's Office will begin on April 18 and close on May 3.

Big Spring firefighters were called to a house fire at the intersection of 22nd and Main streets Monday afternoon, where they found both the interior and exterior of the house burning. Three units quickly had the situation under control.

"We have to accomplish something ... no matter what organization we belong to," he said.
Prior to Pratt's address, City Councilwoman Stephanie Horton, the first black to serve on the Big Spring City Council, stressed the importance of "acknowledging all cultures that make up America ... we are not just one people."
Horton noted that the city hired its first ever black department head Monday, and its first minority firefighter in eight years.
"I'm now working on minority contracts for city projects," Horton added. "I'm going to be pushing ... pushing for us. This city should reflect all colors, because we're a city made up of all different colors."

New Warden Dale Brown, making his first public appearance since taking his post last week, praised the work of Ben Watson, Big Spring FCI's Black Affairs Program manager, who coordinated Monday's event.
"In 24 years of work for the BOP/FCI and seeing special emphasis programs, I've never seen one this good," Brown said before continuing to heap praise on Watson and announcing a letter of commendation concerning the affair would be placed in his personnel file.

Wright said a private mediation between two school officials took place in executive session and was resolved in private. After a two-hour closed session, the board reconvened to unanimously approve renewal of all contracts.
A reporter from the Big Spring Herald, he said, called him early the next day. She asked him what happened in closed session, that people wanted to know. He said that she refused to say which people, if any. He again felt that it was not to be made public information.
"The privacy and confidentiality of a closed session was what made the mediation successful," Wright said. "That is why I said what I did," Wright explained. "It has been misrepresented so much, I want to better explain it."

The March 26, 1991, quote read, "Those who are concerned with this are happy with the results. I'm not concerned with the Joe Blow public-I don't owe them an explanation. I want to see the issue left alone. People are trying to make this an issue. As long as the two parties affected feel like they are happy with the results, it's not right to pry into an individual's personal business. They are happy with the situation."

ought to work for a living and obey the law."
Choate says many artificial obstacles are caused by higher government mandates, calling many such activities as needless government interference into our private lives.
Joy 'Decker' Harrison spoke about cooperation between all government entities, and said she wants to clean up Big Spring to better attract business here. She pledged "to reduce my salary as commissioner by 30 percent, and that I will work just as hard."
Ricky Hughes said the top problem facing Howard County is jobs. Hughes wants the commissioner's job to foster economic development for Howard County and alleviate the loss from declining mineral values in the tax base.
Jerry Kilgore, a county resident for 40 years, argued that economic development and jobs are his chief priority.
Kilgore said the county's indigent health care costs are now 10 percent of ad valorem taxes, and he's concerned about that.
J. Arnold Marshall said he was not at all happy with the way the abatements were handled, adding that if any company, including Fina, approached the commissioners in the future, he'd favor granting abatement if jobs and money were created locally.
John Wayne Metcalf said he'd favor growth, and could sacrifice some tax income, if the company met criteria for abatement that served both the county and industry. Metcalf said, "I'd earn, not draw a commissioner's salary."
Reeves Moren explained he's lived in Precinct 4 since 1951, and expressed that he can communicate, as he did with individual customers for years at Western Auto, with constituents and anyone countywide.
The county needs better communication, and to provide better jobs, Moren argued.
Donnie Reid, a lifelong resident of the county, farmer and Coahoma school board member for nine years, said, "I'm honest, efficient and will make informed decisions."
Reid says the county needs to better address minority and women's businesses. Reid was on the county ASCS committee for 19 years.

Roosevelt Shaw, born and raised in Knott, wants to "keep present industry and grow into more manufacturing and industry. Shaw said he also believes in aggressively seeking acquisition of I-27."
"I'll talk to state officials, and do what I can," he said.
Homer Wilkerson explained his belief that Howard County's biggest problem is an 11 percent decline in the tax base, county expenses that have risen 18 percent, and taxes that have climbed by 29 percent.
He says he's in favor of building a new jail downtown to enhance the business district.
"If the present commissioners want the cheapest site, put it at the landfill," Wilkerson said.
Jim Wright, a former Coahoma school board president, said, "At Coahoma, we cut $400,000 from the budget and gave the teachers a raise bigger than they'd ever gotten in the past."
"I'll see to it that the taxpayers are looked after. As for senior citizens, I'll look after them as well, and not in the way of new taxes."

Consideration sought for downtown site for new jail

By TIM JONES
Staff Writer

In a dramatic turn of events during Monday afternoon's county commissioners' meeting, representatives of Big Spring Main Street Inc. and officials from the city of Big Spring asked serious consideration of using the Petroleum Building be entered into before the commissioners voted to rule out a downtown jail site.

A break was taken, allowing Aguirre Associates Inc. officials Norris Fletcher and David W. Snelson, county commissioners, Big Street Main Street Inc. and city officials to tour the Petroleum Building. The architects said the structure appeared structurally sound, and that the Petroleum Building merited a third site analysis.

Howard County commissioners began Monday afternoon's meeting with a presentation by the architectural firm which compared the downtown site acquisition and site preparation costs, which would require the expensive demolition of the Permian Building, to a remote free-standing site on the Lamesa Highway near Douglas Street. Cost comparisons were presented that appeared to favor the remote location in terms of total costs.

The cost to obtain and prepare the downtown site was projected as $753,000.

The cost to acquire and prepare the Lamesa Highway/Douglas Street remote site was estimated to be only $56,800. The remote site is approximately 3/4 of a mile from the County Courthouse.

Then Pat Porter with Big Spring Main Street Inc. rose to strongly suggest that the Petroleum Building be considered.

"Big Spring Main Street Inc. is willing to provide the building for a price of about $25,000," Porter exclaimed.

Porter added that the Petroleum Building contains approximately 27,000 square feet, six floors at 4,500 square feet per story, and needs only interior refurbishing for the most part.

Fletcher and Snelson then considered yet a third plan for a downtown site. Roughly figuring, they calculated the cost of this third alternative.

Acquisition costs, as Porter said, would be $25,000. Add to that the same figure of $270,000 to raze the Permian Building, then the same $3,200,000 figure to build the jail structure, and finally, figure in $750,000 to remodel the Petroleum Building.

Total costs for comparing the two sites would now be much closer in proximity. The newly figured downtown site may actually be cheaper, as rough calculations total $4.245 million as compared to $4.6 million for the Lamesa Highway/Douglas Street site.

No official action can be taken until the architects return with the new analysis, probably by the commissioners' March 14th meeting date. City officials and Big Spring Main Street Inc. representatives appeared to succeed in getting county commissioners to seriously consider this more realistic downtown site.

"Downtown is really everyone's neighborhood," said Charles Bell, city councilman, explaining the "premium of improving our community."

"It's not just a financial concern, we can significantly enhance property values downtown, which is an ongoing return to the tax base," said Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce executive director, Terry Burns.

Burns indicated he'd visited with numerous business leaders, who had each individually questioned that "there is a line where costs differences between the two sites cannot be justified, but where exactly is that line?"

"It's in the 500 year flood plane," said Bobby Cathey, county commissioner in Precinct 4. Cathey said he favors the remote location because it is not in the flood plane, has more expansion capability than a downtown site, and that the project will greatly enhance the overall appearance of the northside area as you enter into Big Spring traveling south on U.S. Highway 87. Cathey also stated that figures there will be hidden costs in the revitalization of the older building, built in 1929.

"I'm going to be emphatic that this third site consideration be the last," W.B. 'Bill' Crooker, precinct 3 commissioner said, "so we can get on with the serious task of deciding how best to proceed on the combined jail project."

The Howard County Sheriff's Office reported the following incidents:

SAN ANTONIO — As jurors voice disapproval over the way federal agents stormed the Branch Davidian compound, prosecutors are working to try to restore weapons convictions against seven sect members.

If U.S. District Judge Walter Smith reinstates the guilty verdicts, defendant Ruth Riddle of Canada — who was cleared of all charges Saturday — could find herself behind prison bars.

"I think it's cruel and vindictive," said her defense attorney, Joe Turner of Austin.

On Saturday, a jury in the San Antonio trial of 11 Branch Davidians acquitted all the defendants of murder and murder conspiracy charges in connection with a Feb. 28, 1993, shootout that killed four agents of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. Six Branch Davidians were killed.

The officers were trying to serve search and arrest warrants when gunfire erupted at David Koresh's compound near Waco.

Five Davidians were convicted of voluntary manslaughter, and two were convicted of weapons charges. Four, including Ms. Riddle, were acquitted of all charges after Smith threw out convictions of using or carrying a firearm during murder conspiracy.

Prosecutors filed a motion Monday with Smith's court in Waco stating they have researched case law supporting the reinstatement of the firearm convictions. There was no word on when Smith would rule. The judge has ordered Ms. Riddle to remain in federal marshals custody.

Jurors said in interviews broadcast Monday they quickly rejected the murder and murder conspiracy charges against the Davidians.

"The government might think that was a defeat, but not really," one juror told WOAI radio Monday. "It was a verdict that perhaps they were too vigilant in their serving of the search warrant."

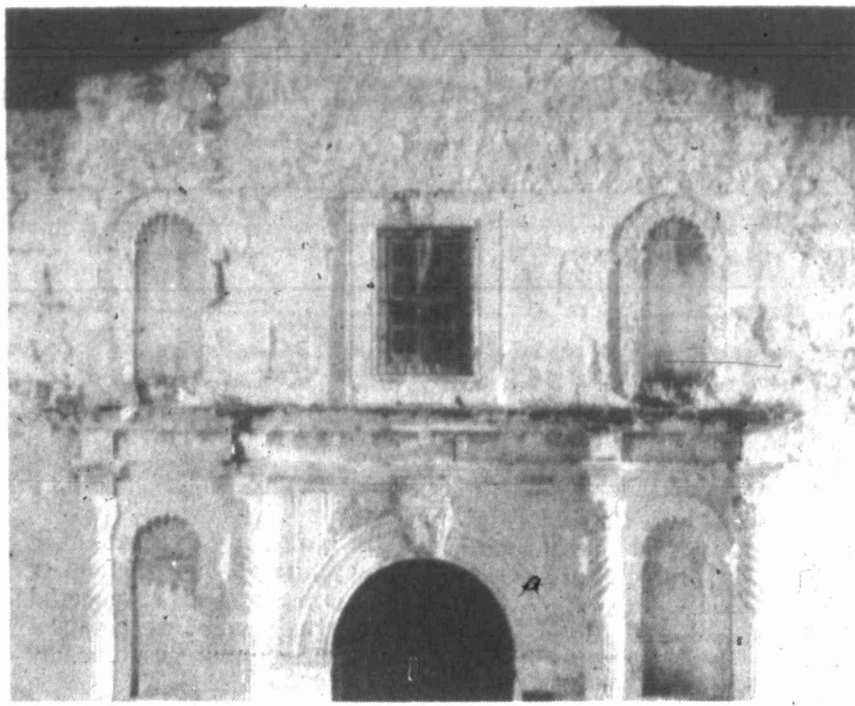

The male juror, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said ATF agents would have been better off "if they had just gone out there with three or four men in business suits and just knocked on the door. But they didn't."

A woman juror from New Braunfels, who asked not to be identified, also criticized the "dynamic entry" raid plan, in which about 75 armed agents dressed in black poured out of two cattle trailers at the Davidian compound.

"I don't know what the average person would do — probably panic and fall on the floor. But these people did not," the juror told KGNB radio in New Braunfels.

"Four agents were killed in what they were told to do. We can never replace their lives and our sympathies are with their families," the juror said.

"But on the other hand, over 80 women and children and a few men died in that horrible fire (that ended the 51-day Davidian standoff) ... and we can't justify that either," she told KGNB.

The most visited tourist attraction in the state of Texas, the famous Alamo chapel facade remains dramatically lit during the night in February. There is an ongoing battle to close Alamo Plaza East to through traffic, exhaust of which is said to be destroying the facade of the chapel.

Groups still trying to close Alamo East

The Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — For decades, San Antonio and the Daughters of the Republic of Texas have quibbled over closing a street in front of the Alamo chapel.

Attempts to close the street have been made on several occasions, but some members of the DRT, which has historically been stewards of the site, insisted it stay open because people "have a right to arrive at the front door of the shrine."

The San Antonio Express-News said in its Tuesday editions that it found a plan to restore the site was shunted aside in 1983 by the DRT as "too far out in left field."

Then in 1986, the DRT Alamo Committee Chairman, the Alamo curator and other Alamo and DRT officials sent statements, "In Defense of Hallowed Ground," to the city.

Some did call for closing of Alamo Plaza East as well as West and removal of all buses from Alamo Plaza East, saying exhaust fumes and vibrations were damaging the Alamo's stone walls.

The city then banned all parking on Alamo Plaza East, except for tour-bus loading at the far south end away from the shrine.

In 1987, the city examined the whole issue of the Alamo and its setting, ordering a master plan be prepared.

Preliminary drafts recommended $5 million in immediate improvements and changes. That plan too was disliked by DRT.

Ultimately, the master plan was never completed or presented to the city.

Still, its recommendations became the framework for Alamo Plaza changes under a 1988-90 project.

One goal was to define the entire compound battleground by paving it all in natural stone. That idea crumbled when stones placed in Alamo Street were crushed under the weight of traffic. The stones were replaced with bricks.

Another failed attempt to close Alamo Plaza East took place in 1989 when bollards were installed at the north end of Alamo Plaza East. The Daughters cited a 1975 agreement the city signed not to close the street. The bollards were removed.

Lack of image means less tourism dollars

FORT WORTH (AP) — As Fort Worth tourism officials know, it's not easy living in the shadow of a larger, wealthier neighbor to the east.

"I don't actually know Fort Worth, and I don't know anyone here who has been to Fort Worth," said Eve Glasberg, an associate editor of Travel and Leisure magazine in New York City.

Country music fans can tell you that Fort Worth is the home of the world's largest honky-tonk, Billy Bob's Texas.

And in April, the Barnes Collection Exhibit will arrive at the Kimbell Art Museum. The Barnes — widely hailed as one of the world's most important collections of impressionist, post-impressionist and early modern paintings — is expected to draw thousands of art lovers to Fort Worth.

But that blend of high culture and cowboy chic has not translated into a national image crucial to luring conventions and tourism dollars to the city, officials say.

Judge can continue to use smiley-face

HOUSTON (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court has no problems with a Houston judge's use of a "happy face" as part of his signature.

The high court, without comment Monday, refused to hear an appeal from Texas death row inmate Robert Drew, who was challenging State District Judge Charles Hearn's signature that included the smiley-face character on his execution warrant.

Drew's attorney, Ronald Kuby of New York, said while the high court would not hear the case, no court has ruled yet on the constitutionality of Hearn's signature.

The matter went to the Supreme Court after lower courts also rejected Kuby's complaint.

"It was dismissed on technicality, that he could have raised this issue before when his 1988 death warrant was signed this way," Kuby said. "Our answer to that was simply, that's an insane rule. This is a fresh proceeding. The constitutional violation is fresh."

DPS troop defended by training officer

AUSTIN (AP) — The state trooper who shot a Dallas man after a stop for a defective headlight turned into a physical conflict is being staunchly defended by a commander in charge of officer training.

DPS Training Commander Albert Rodriguez said at a Monday news conference that trooper Bryan Barnhart and Henderson County sheriff's deputy Jim Langford followed all the proper steps in the state's use-of-force policy.

He used a videotape made by a camera mounted on the trooper's vehicle to make his point about the officers' altercation with Lorenzo Colston, 28.

"Considering all of the elements, you would have feared for your life" in Barnhart's place, Rodriguez said. DPS spokesman Mike Cox said the news conference was in response to media inquiries.

Colston's lawyer, John Heath of Nacogdoches, said, "It would have been Mr. Colston that would have feared for his life, and not the trooper."

Davidian trial cost about $1.3 million

AUSTIN (AP) — An estimated $1.3 million has been spent on the murder-conspiracy trial of the Branch Davidians, and the bills are still rolling in, according to a preliminary review.

The total for the seven-week trial could be pushed tens of thousands of dollars higher, the Austin American-Statesman reported Monday.

For example, U.S. District Judge Walter Smith sequestered the jury last week. Jurors stayed at an undisclosed hotel, and those costs are not included in the $1.3 million figure, federal officials said.

The jury on Saturday cleared the 11 cult members of murder and conspiracy charges in the deaths of four federal agents but convicted seven on lesser counts of voluntary manslaughter and illegal weapons charges.

The price tag of the trial-related costs pales in comparison to the estimated $13 million in expenses associated with last year's Feb. 28 raid on the Branch Davidian compound, the ensuing 51-day standoff and the aftermath of the April 19 fire.

Reno's version of verdict rejected by legal experts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legal experts aren't buying Attorney General Janet Reno's claim that the voluntary manslaughter convictions of five Branch Davidians proves the government acted properly against the Texas cult.

Hearing set on state record fees

The Associated Press

AUSTIN — A public hearing has been set for proposed state fees for public records that have been criticized by watchdog groups and the state attorney general's office.

The most controversial provision would add personnel and overhead charges for public records that take more than 15 minutes to retrieve.

"If the 15-minute rule is not changed ... open government will just be shut down. The cost will be prohibitive," said Suzy Woodford, executive director of Common Cause of Texas.

Earlier this month, Texas Attorney General Dan Morales criticized the proposal and asked the commission to hold a public hearing.

"Cost should not, and cannot be a barrier to access to public information," Morales said.

The hearing was announced by the commission Monday. It is set for 9 a.m. Tuesday, March 8.

The proposal before the commission is meant to be used as a guideline by local and state government entities across the state to charge for access to public records.

Under the proposal, if the information takes longer than 15 minutes to find, then the governmental body can charge personnel costs of $15 per hour and overhead costs of 20 percent of the personnel charge.

Morales said that since most requests for information under the Texas Open Records Act require more than 15 minutes, the public would pay a higher price.

For example, Morales said a request for information that takes 30 minutes to find and totals 20 pages, currently costs $2, based on a 10-cent-per-page copy charge.

Under the new proposal, the same request would cost $11 — $7.50 for personnel charges, $1.50 for overhead and $2 for copies, he said.

New library books to be ordered

Retired teachers donate to school

By JANET AUSBURY
Features Editor

Washington Elementary School students will soon have $300 worth of new library books, thanks to a donation made by the Big Spring-Howard County Retired Teachers Association.

The check, presented to Principal Bill Tarleton last week, is the initial effort by the association to become more involved with the schools by performing an educational project each year.

"This will be a great start," said Tarleton. "We've been in need of new library books." The new books will be ordered within the next few days and should be in the school's library by April.

Once the books arrive, they will have bookplates put in them indicating they were donated by the association.

Association member Jean Warren said the donation was timed to coincide with Texas Public Schools Week this week. The association, which has about 100 members, has logged 10,370 volunteer hours at schools and other organizations in the last year.

"In a day and time when all community resources need to work together, this is a wonderful partnership," said Tarleton about the association's decision to further assist area schools.

"This is an organization that obviously sees a need in education for youth in Howard County," he continued. "We're proud to have an organization like them with us in the county."

Student Council busy with projects

By JANET AUSBURY
Features Editor

Big Spring High School's Student Council has been active in the last few weeks, with several projects and accomplishments to show for their efforts.

Advisor Sharon Richardson and 25 representatives of the Student Council attended the District 8 Leadership Workshop at Prude Ranch in Fort Davis on Jan. 21-23. They participated in leadership training activities presented by Jean Wyatt, a leadership consultant from Richardson.

Big Spring High School represented the district as vice president and hosted the workshop. This activity required an extra effort on the part of the attendees, however. "The kids have to pay their own way," said Richardson. "They have to have incentive to go."

Council members attending the workshop were President Betsy Murphy, Corresponding Secretary Robb Lee, Vice President Hillary Twining, Ryan Hamby, Sarah Bristow, Mike Smith, Drexell Owusu, Raygan McCann, Twila Hillger, Damian Puentes, Carla Timmerman, Arthur Barrera, Kate Rainwater, Peggy Deanda, Josh Jones, Ami Vasanaawala, Amanda Hale, Richard Thompson, Mande Fernandez, Kristi Birrell, Jennifer Reinert, Justin Taylor, Molly Smith, Kassi Shockey and Carlos Garza.

In addition to the District 8 workshop, Richardson accompanied Betsy, Robb and Hillary to the Texas Association of Student Councils Advanced Leadership Workshop at Mo-Ranch, near Hunt, on Feb. 18-20.

This trip, paid by Student Council fund-raising efforts, provided leadership training presented by consul-ants from across the state. The Big Spring students were among 450 students representing 65 schools in the state.

Hillary Twining was selected by the TASC office to serve on staff as one of 10 junior consultants during the workshop.

Monday, Feb. 14 was SASH (Save A Sweetheart) day at the school. SASH is a nationwide program, sponsored every year by the Student Council, which encourages smokers to quit and non-smokers not to start smoking.

For a week prior to Feb. 14, Student Council provided pledge cards at a pledge center in the cafeteria. Students signed the cards declaring their intention not to start smoking for a year (for non-smokers). Smokers pledged to quit smoking on Feb. 14. Students received SASH buttons and stickers to wear and two $5 prizes were given.

'CityKids' uses music, animation to tell truths of streets

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — "We made it! We wrote it! We ate the whole thing!"

So goes the "CityKids" hip-hop theme. It's a triumph of truth-in-labeling.

Exploring "whassup" with voracious curiosity, the show's young troupe is responsible for its stories, songs, performances and soul. And like those who create it, any youngster who tunes in "CityKids" — broadcast Saturdays at noon (EST) on ABC — is going to eat this stuff up.

Of course, grownups aren't completely absent from the "CityKids" scene. The adults of Jim Henson Productions act as creative overseers.

But their partner is the CityKids Foundation, a New York City-based multicultural youth organization that serves as a laboratory from which the show draws inspiration, direction and personnel.

As a result, "CityKids" sports an edgy urban setting and a rainbow coalition of appealing young stars.

Each half-hour episode dwells on a life issue. The unfair perception of women as the weaker sex. Love. Homelessness. Parental neglect. The consequences of deceit. Temptation.

Racism.

Framed by youngsters who live them, the tales steer clear of sermons and simple truths.

"What does it take to be a woman or a man?" asks a reggae-flavored song. "Will I ever know? Will I understand?" It doesn't supply an answer. But the song, like the show, is about broaching the issue rather than finding its quick fix.

"On the show there isn't always a happy ending," says executive producer Brian Henson. "But kids aren't looking to escape from life, they are looking to understand it."

Filmed in New York City, the live-action portions of "CityKids" are Amador Gonzales and Danielle Bruns, clarinet; Mike Barnnet, Damian Puentes, Brandon Oliphant and Jason Price, saxophone; Tony Everett, cornet; and Jacob Quisenberry and Melissa Moulton, horns.

Three others earned Division Three "good" ratings in solo competition. They were Mike Mata on the baritone, Jeff Moss with the snare drum and Jason Ball on the tuba.

Linda Lindell and Cathy Tedesco accompanied the students on piano. In addition to Hankins, the students were instructed by band directors Tim Allshouse and Pat Daniel, as well as private instructors Tim Burleson (oboe) and Elizabeth Hankins (flute).

Students assist fire department

By ANDRE HENDERSON
Governing Magazine

In most communities, it's the firefighters who rescue the citizenry. In Auburn, Mass., however, college students have come to the rescue of the fire department.

In recent years, firefighting services in the central Massachusetts town have been facing the austere budgets and manpower shortages all too familiar to many small communities. In 1991, Auburn closed one of its two firehouses, and the department today employs only three full-time crew members.

The rescue effort began in late 1992, when a graduate student in fire protection engineering at nearby Worcester Polytechnic Institute made the town an offer it couldn't refuse: In exchange for housing him and five colleagues in the closed station, they would serve as volunteers on the firefighting squad.

"We were looking for expanding services without costing anything," says the town manager, William Kennedy. "When they approached, we were immediately very interested."

After pacifying the firefighters' union with assurances that the students' presence would not cut into paid members' hours, Kennedy welcomed the new recruits. Before moving into their new home on Auburn's west side this past October, however, the students remodeled it to suit their living needs, adding a dormitory and computer terminals as well as a training facility.

The volunteers have already produced alarming results. The scheduling of classes at night leaves the students available for daytime duty, and their presence has cut response times and increased the visibility of safety services in the town.

The department has used the students' knowledge of engineering in conducting fire reviews in local buildings and advising on safety equipment for new structures.

Auburn officials also anticipate an improved Insurance Services Office rating, which translates into lower fire insurance premiums for townspeople.

Malls teach teens about business

By KIM MARGOLIS
Thomson News Service

As malls take their place as modern community centers, some are taking on a greater responsibility to their community's goals.

Managers at Connecticut's Stamford Town Center decided that before the problem of teen-agers hanging out in malls became too large they would take action. Combined with the efforts of the Urban League of Southwestern Connecticut, the mall began a program last fall to help teens learn about the business side of the mall and offer them a taste of the work experience.

"The idea of this whole thing is to not just, when the kids are unruly, warn them and when they don't respond, kick them out," said Al Messer, the Stamford mall's general manager. "This is an alternative to saying, 'You're bad, get out of here.' It says 'we're trying to help you, now you've got to do your part, too.'"

The mall finds teen-agers who frequently hang out in the mall and ask them if they want to be involved in the program.

In the five-month program, 25 to 30 teens first learn about the retail business from Urban League counselors. Then they work in the stores six hours a week.

Students get high school credit for completing the course, which began in the fall, and can earn up to a $270 bonus after their February graduation. Half of the money comes from a mall store and half from the mall.

Mall store managers can get a list of students who completed the program so they can be considered for future jobs at the stores.

PLOT SUMMARY: Life is tough for stone-age families. They have to worry about food, shelter, dinosaurs, discovering fire, and important things like that.

But Chuck Rock's family has even more to worry about. Brick Jagger, Chuck's evil nemesis has kidnapped Chuck and is holding him captive. Brick Jagger's henchmen are everywhere and no one has the guts to risk saving Chuck; no one but Chuck Jr. that is!

Not even out of diapers yet, little Chuck Jr. is journeying out to find Brick Jagger and rescue his father. This kid's not going to let any bully push his father around. With just his wits, his childish sense of adventure, and his father's club (much too big for him), it's baby Chuck Jr. vs. Brick Jagger's army in Chuck Rock II: Son of Chuck.

STRUCTURE: Chuck Rock 2: Son of Chuck is a horizontal-scrolling adventure where the hero is Chuck Jr., the stone-age kid on a mission to save his father. Chuck Jr.'s goal is to traverse the many levels of the game, defeat Brick Jagger's super-robot, and rescue his beloved dad. But in order to do that he's going to have to make it through many of the most treacherous areas in the stone-age world.

Little Chuck will have to jump across spiky pits high in the mountains, swing over boiling pools of lava, and even crawl through the smelly sewers in search of his dad. The wild inhabitants of these areas and Brick Jagger's henchmen are all teaming up against Chuck Jr. to get rid of him, once and for all. Just in case Chuck Jr. is elusive enough to make it past all of these dangers, Brick Jagger has sent his most powerful allies out to find Chuck Jr.

So now Chuck has an army of Brick Jagger's henchmen, loads of wild animals, and a few mega-powerful boss creatures, all hunting him down. And if that isn't enough, Brick Jagger and his giant Robot are waiting for Chuck Jr. with his father as bait.

BRITT'S COMMENTS: My first reaction to Chuck Rock 2 was that it was just a cutesy little kids game. But after playing it for a little while, I began to enjoy it more and more. The graphics and the background music are well above average, but the sound effects are downright pitiful.

I'm going to scream if I ever have to hear Chuck Jr. cry again. Chuck's childish antics are humorous but they get old after a while. The one thing that really bothers me is the length of the game. It's so short that I can beat it in just fifteen minutes. It's a great game to rent, but I wouldn't bother buying it.

BRIAN'S COMMENTS: Chuck Rock 2 is a cute game. It combines great graphics and good music that even the mature gamer will enjoy. While there are some annoying things in this game, I think that younger gamers will be able to tolerate them. On the other hand, us older gamers will go bonkers and won't put up with these annoyances.

All in all, this is a kids' game. It doesn't have a huge amount of action, and it is easy enough for beginners. If you are a veteran player, this game will provide about an hour's entertainment.

Become a Mini Expert All About Whales

DR. WHALE, PLEASE TELL US WHAT...

Q: Whales belong to a group scientists call "cetaceans" (seh-TAY-shunz). There are about 76 different species. What do you know about the two different types of whales?

Most people are big on whales. You can be a big expert. Study this page and then ask a partner or a parent to interview you by reading these questions. See how much you both learn.

A mother killer whale nurses her calf.

A trainer at Sea World in Orlando, Fla., shows us the teeth of a killer whale, which number 48. These intelligent whales are easy to train.

Q: Whales are animals that live in the sea. They are mammals. So are we. What are four things that set mammals apart from other animals?

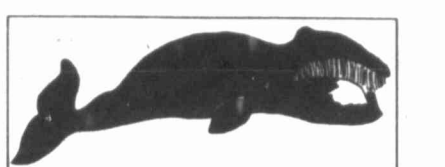

- A: Mammals...
- are warm-blooded, with a body temperature about the same as ours.
  - The whale's blubber, or fat, keeps it warm.
  - have lungs and breathe air.
  - give birth to live young that drink their mother's milk.
  - have hair somewhere at some time on their bodies.

Look through your paper for people you would like to interview. Make a list of questions to ask.

A: 1. Toothed whales...
• have from 1 to 240 teeth. Some of them might be hidden in their gums. They eat fish and small sea mammals. Like all whales, they swallow their food whole.
• have one blowhole.
• Dolphins and porpoises are toothed whales.

The sperm whale is the largest toothed whale. It can weigh 60 tons and be 60 feet long. Its 20-pound brain is the largest in the world.

The right whale has about 600 baleen plates that are about 7 feet long. This whale is about 50 feet long and can weigh 60 tons.

2. Baleen whales, or toothless whales...
• have rows of baleen hanging from their upper jaws. It looks like stiff hair and feels like fingernails. These strips (called plates) act as strainers. When baleen whales close their mouths, out goes the water, in stays whale food—small sea animals called zooplankton.
• can go for months without eating. Many travel to the polar waters, where they eat a lot during the summer. During the winter, they usually live off the thick blubber, or fat, they build up.
• have two blowholes.
• are slower than toothed whales. They can travel about 4 miles an hour.
• Some are the largest creatures on earth.

The blue whale is the largest of all animals. It has about 800 baleen strips. Some blue whales measure more than 100 feet long and might weigh 160 tons.

Bulldogs play favorites in District 6-2A race

By STEVE REAGAN
Sportswriter

COAHOMA - For the first time in its four-year existence, the Coahoma High School baseball team will wear an unfamiliar but pleasant tag this season:

Favorites.
Last year's District 6-2A championship means that the Bulldogs, for better or ill, will not be able to sneak up on anybody this season. And that's fine with coach Doc Rowell, as long as he can find another pitcher or two.

Pitching depth and a lack of experience in the outfield are the two major concerns for Rowell and the Bulldogs as they prepare for their season opener today at Rotan.

The Bulldogs (13-6 last season) return a solid nucleus from 1993's district champs, starting with All-District pitcher Brandon McGuire on the mound. Rowell says that's a nice place to start.

"In our league, pitching is the name of the game, and we've got McGuire," said Rowell, in his third year as CHS head coach. "As long as we've got McGuire, we've got a shot, but some others will have to come through for us."

Finding a second starter behind McGuire (7-2 last season) has been a chore, but Rowell has plenty of candidates, beginning with freshman righthander Freddie Olivas. "I really don't know that much about him, but he really has some pop on the ball," Rowell said. "He's got some stuff."

Rowell is also looking for pitching help from sophomores Brian Ruiz and Kelby Bailey and senior Jason Harmon.

"They may be all chunkers instead of pitchers, we just don't know yet," Rowell said. "But we'll give them all a chance."

"We've got to find out what the others can do," he added. "We know what (McGuire) can do. We have to find another one or two pitchers, and hopefully we can do that before spring break."

At the plate, the Bulldogs will be less reliant on the long ball this season. McGuire (7 home runs last year) is the only proven power-hitting threat on the team this season.

Looking to replace graduated All-District catcher Bryan Sledge are Aaron Hunsacker, a senior transfer from Sanford-Fritch, and junior Jon White.

Another possible platoon situation shapes up at first, where Brandon Shifflett and Murphy Henry are battling for the spot

"In our league, pitching is the name of the game, and we've got (Brandon) McGuire."

Doc Rowell

vacated by Dave Park.

The rest of the infield, though, is solid. Ruiz, solid last year, returns for a second season as the starter at second, while McGuire and Olivas will split time at shortstop. Bailey, who missed time last season with a broken leg, returns to third.

The outfield, though, is a bit of a question mark, although there is plenty of talent to choose from.

Harmon started five different positions last season, and Rowell is hoping he will solidify the defense up the middle in center

Pushing that trio for playing time will be juniors Bucky Williams and Rocky King, senior Brad Harrison and freshmen Mike McMillan and Marshall Wright.

Coahoma's district appears to be the Bulldogs' for the taking. Long-time rival Wall was hit hard by graduation, Ozona is only in the second year of its program and Eldorado begins its baseball program this season.

Now, if only a few small problems clear up in the next few weeks.

"We've got to have another pitcher, whether it's Oliva, Ruiz, Bailey or Harmon," Rowell said. "We need someone who can pitch and get 5-6 innings every time out."

Bulldogettes make debut on diamond

By STEVE REAGAN
Sportswriter

COAHOMA - In the past few years, Coahoma has made a name for itself in girls' softball. Now the community will see if it can take that past success to another level.

The Coahoma Bulldogettes make their debut in UIL-sanctioned fast-pitch softball at home Friday when they take on Westbrook at the softball park on the west side of town.

The task of guiding the team through its first year has fallen on Danny Randolph, who was an assistant coach on the baseball team last year. It is a job he said he is pleased to have.

"We had a lot of girls interested in playing softball, and as big as the sport is getting in public schools, I told them I'd be honored if they wanted me as their coach," Randolph said.

That's not to say it hasn't been an adjustment.

"It's not quite baseball, and it might take me a game or two to get used to it," he said. "But there's definitely a lot of interest in Coahoma for girls' softball."

Twenty-three girls have come out for the team, and Randolph expects two or three more when they get their grades in order. Numbers is not a problem.

Getting the program off the ground, however, has not been painless.

"One of the drawbacks is that we're lacking equipment and uniforms," Randolph said. "We're in a unique position: we've got more girls than uniforms, so we're going to have to rotate them through the season."

With such a situation, Randolph said starting positions will not be set in stone. With so many girls eager to play, he added, position players will have to earn their playing time.

One player who folks can probably pencil in, however, is sophomore pitcher Audra Bingham, who led the local Division III team to the United Girls Softball

"As a group, they have a lot of softball knowledge. There's some things we still need to smooth out, but that's to be expected in any sport at this stage. Overall, I've been very impressed."

Danny Randolph
Coahoma coach

Association Class A state title last year.

"Pitching can be called one of our strong points. (Bingham's) shown she can pitch," Randolph said. "And there's three or four others who've shown they can do what's needed."

Other than Bingham, however, positions are up for grabs. But Randolph is still impressed with the talent on hand.

"As a group, they have a lot of softball knowledge," he said. "There's some things we still need to smooth out, but that's to be expected in any sport at this stage. Overall, I've been very impressed."

Home-run hitting is almost nonexistent in fast-pitch, but Randolph expects the team's offense to be more than adequate.

"We've got some girls who can hit the ball," he said. "I haven't seen any girls who showed they can hit the ball out, but that's not surprising. But we're going to be able to put the bat on the ball."

Coahoma will be in the same district with Westbrook and Hermleigh. Today's scheduled season-opener with Hermleigh was canceled.

Black college coaches meet to form strategy

By The Associated Press

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. — Seven weeks after they threatened to disrupt college basketball, representatives of the Black Coaches Association will meet tonight with NCAA officials and discuss their many grievances.

They will be joined in a two-hour conference call by three federal mediators who will have no authority to resolve any disputes. The issues the BCA has raised, including freshman eligibility standards and scholarship cuts, can be decided only by vote of NCAA schools at their annual meeting.

Tonight's teleconference was expected to be the first of many get-togethers before next January's convention.

"They've asked us to bring our calendars, so I imagine we'll try to pencil in future meetings," said Prentice Gault, associate commissioner of the Big Eight and NCAA secretary-treasurer. "You're talking about trying to get seven, eight real busy people together."

Two earlier attempts to arrange face-to-face meetings, Feb. 20 in Chicago and earlier in Philadelphia, collapsed because of "last-minute logistical problems," Ron Tomalis of the Justice Department's Community Relations Service said Monday.

"Everyone agrees we need to make this first step," Tomalis said.

The conference call is scheduled for 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. EST and will include Judith Albino of Colorado, head of the NCAA Presidents Commission; NCAA executive director Cedric Dempsey; NCAA president Joseph Crowley; Charles Whitcomb of San Jose State, chairman of the NCAA minority opportunities and interests committee, and Gault.

BCA executive director Rudy Washington of Drake is to be joined by BCA members John Thompson of Georgetown, John Chaney of Temple and George Raveling of Southern Cal.

During the NCAA convention in January, the BCA threatened to lead a boycott of college games after Division I schools voted not to restore a 14th scholarship to men's basketball. The threat was withdrawn after the Black Political Caucus took an interest and the Justice Department offered to serve as mediator.

The three federal mediators will be Gail Padgett, associate director of the community relations service, plus regional directors Jesse Taylor of Chicago and Leo Cardenas of Denver.

It is not clear if there will be a public statement following the conference call.

The NCAA said Padgett had identified issues to be raised as gender equity, academic standards, limited access to athletes and minority opportunities in athletics.

The move to restore the 14th scholarship was blocked by the Presidents Commission, which feared it would signal a retreat from cut-backs in coaches and scholarship limits imposed on all sports as part of the presidents' reform movement.

"From my perspective, I would like to have face-to-face interaction," Gault said. "But evidently that could not happen this time. So we took the next best avenue. ... I think it is the beginning of open dialogue and real communications."

Lady Steers place second at Lamesa

LAMESA - The weather was the Lamesa Invitational Golf Tournament's worst enemy this past weekend. First it forced two teams not to show, then it shortened the event to only nine holes.

At the end, Big Spring and Ozona's girls teams were tied for first, and Ozona won a one-hole playoff to take the title. Big Spring's Kristie Hale took medalist honors with a 48.

Considering the conditions, BSHS coach Lois Ann McKenzie was more than pleased with her team's total score of 214.

"Weather was a big factor," McKenzie said, "and that might be why the other teams didn't show up. ... The scores were horrible, but everybody's scores were horrible."

Other Big Spring scores included: Jennifer Broadrick, 54; Stacey Hollar, 56; Jessica Sacher, 56; Jennifer Edgar, 60; and Vanessa Billalba, 60.

Steers 10th at Tall City golf

MIDLAND - The Big Spring boys golf team finished in the middle of the pack at last weekend's Tall City Invitational, finishing 10th out of 20 teams.

Host Midland Lee won the tournament with a team total of 651, while Fort Worth Paschal was second with a 654. Big Spring's team total was 710.

Two-day individual scores for Big Spring were: Jimmy Cox, 175; Jake McCullough, 186; Ryan Williams, 186; Pat Carter, 171; and Charlie Muralgo, 187.

Howard takes two from Tech JV

LUBBOCK - The Howard College baseball team improved to 14-1 for the season by taking a 8-3, 5-4 doubleheader from the Texas Tech junior varsity Monday afternoon.

HC coach Brian Roper said first game starter Kelly Jones (2-0) had an outstanding game, striking out 4 and walking none while allowing 7 hits in his complete game victory. At the plate, Sergio Martinez and Freddy Rodriguez had doubles for Howard.

In the second game, Jason Long highlighted a 5-run Howard first with a three-run homer, and the Hawks held on from there to down Tech 5-4. Starter Dave Maurer picked up his third win of the season against one defeat, while Skip Ames earned his second save of the year.

"Everybody was saying, 'That's just Tech's JV,'" Roper said. "But that's probably one of the best teams we" play this year. They've got some guys who could really pound the ball ... and we probably won't see two pitchers like they had."

The Hawks return to action Friday when they open a four-game homestand with Richland College. Game time is 1 p.m.

Could there be a new domed park in Houston?

By The Associated Press

HOUSTON — The Houston Oilers' proposed downtown domed stadium would have moveable parts, like giant Tinkertoys, to make it suitable for large football crowds or small concerts.

"There isn't anything like this in the world," said Mike McClure, Oilers executive vice president/administration. "It would be the most cost-efficient stadium anyone could imagine."

For several months, Oilers officials have been pushing the idea of a new stadium to house the team, the Rockets basketball team, professional hockey, indoor soccer and conventions.

McClure said the proposed facility, in its different configurations, would be able to seat from 24,000 to 75,000 fans. The 160,000-square-foot floor could be used for trade shows or religious conventions.

By moving the roof and sections of the stadium, the facility essentially could be changed to create a smaller, self-contained arena inside the dome.

Unlike baseball domes which are round, the new stadium would be rectangular. That would push 50-yard-line seats — far away from the field in the round Astrodome — close to the action, McClure said.

Houston Oilers officials were expected to unveil schematic plans today for the multipurpose stadium, which likely would be located just south of the George R. Brown Convention Center, alongside U.S. 59.

Oilers management has not shored up a final proposal for financing the stadium, which it expects will cost $235 million.

About $75 million of that would come from the Oilers and the rest from public sources. Details of the financing plan will not be released for 30 to 60 days, McClure said.

Mayor Bob Lanier, who has not taken a position on the stadium, said he does not want to see tax dollars used. He has not ruled out other sources such as the hotel/motel tax or gambling revenues.

The proposal is opposed by Houston Astros owner Drayton McLane Jr., who manages the Astrodome for Harris County and receives about $3 million a year in rent and other revenues from Oilers games, and by developer Kenneth Schnitzer, who manages the city-owned Summit, where the Rockets play.

Public reaction also has been tepid. The Oilers are courting the Rockets as partners in the stadium project, but Rockets owner Leslie Alexander has not said yet whether he wants to participate.

Williams released from hospital

Poor eyesight, partial paralysis result from Splendid Splinter's Feb. 19 stroke

By The Associated Press

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Former Boston Red Sox slugger Ted Williams is out of the hospital but will need several weeks of rehabilitation to recover from a recent stroke.

Williams, 75, was released Monday from Shands Hospital. He will begin a rehabilitation program at an undisclosed facility, said hospital spokesman Daniel Moore.

The Hall of Famer was hospitalized Feb. 19 after suffering a stroke at his home in Hernando. A heart rhythm problem is responsible for causing the blood clots that led to the stroke and a minor one two years earlier, Williams' doctors say.

The recent stroke has left Williams with some disability on his left side and poor eyesight, Moore said.

"He can walk with some help of a walker," Moore said. "He's just kind of weak, and he has to regain the strength there and some coordination."

Williams' field of vision also has been affected, but he is not blind.

"It is still too early to speculate his eyesight will improve or not," Moore said.

Dear Abby - Letters...

Boyfriend makes widow feel worthless

DEAR ABBY: I am dating a 40-year-old man who has been divorced for three years. (He has no children.)

I am a 31-year-old widow with three children. "Jack" is basically a very loving and understanding man, but he often says things that make me feel worthless. He always talks about women he has slept with, and says he doesn't know if he can be faithful to me—even though he has never loved anyone as much as he loves me. I just can't seem to understand how he can love me that much and still want to have sex with other women.

He says the more I insist on fidelity, the more it makes him want someone else. (At least he is honest.)

Abby, what should I do? I am trying so hard to be patient and understanding, but I'm running out of patience.—LOUISIANA LADY

DEAR LADY: A man who talks about women he has slept with is no gentleman; furthermore, it shows how little respect he has for all women—including you.

When he tells you that the more you insist on fidelity, the more it makes him want someone else, he is giving you fair warning that he doesn't intend to quit sleeping with other women.

If you're looking for a man you can spend the rest of your life with happily, keep on looking. He isn't it.

DEAR ABBY: You are one person I feel I can turn to. My boyfriend and I have been living together for more than two years. He recently shared a sexual fantasy with me: He wants me and another female in bed with him.

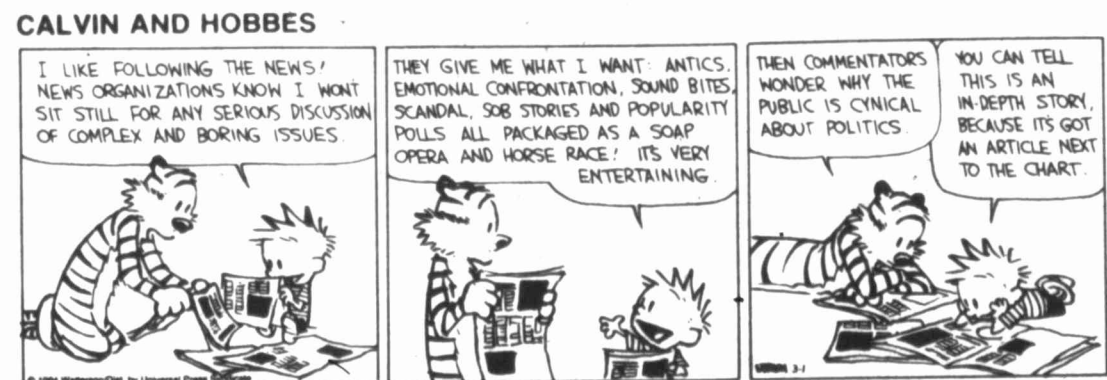

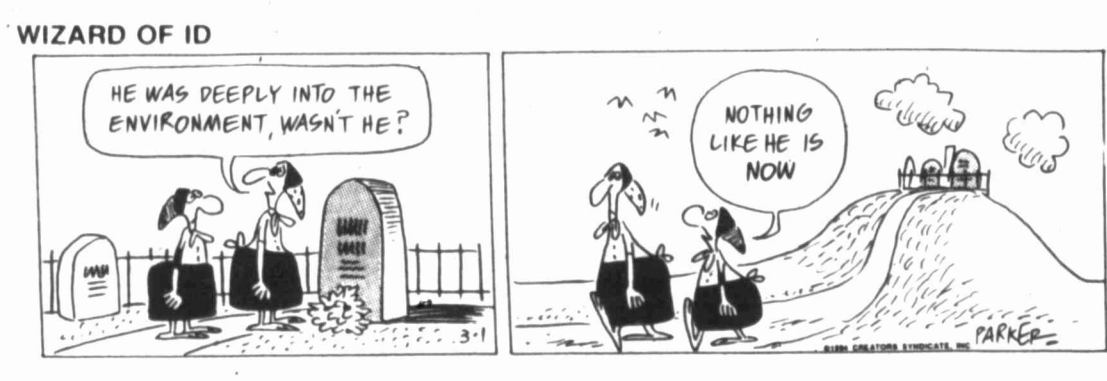

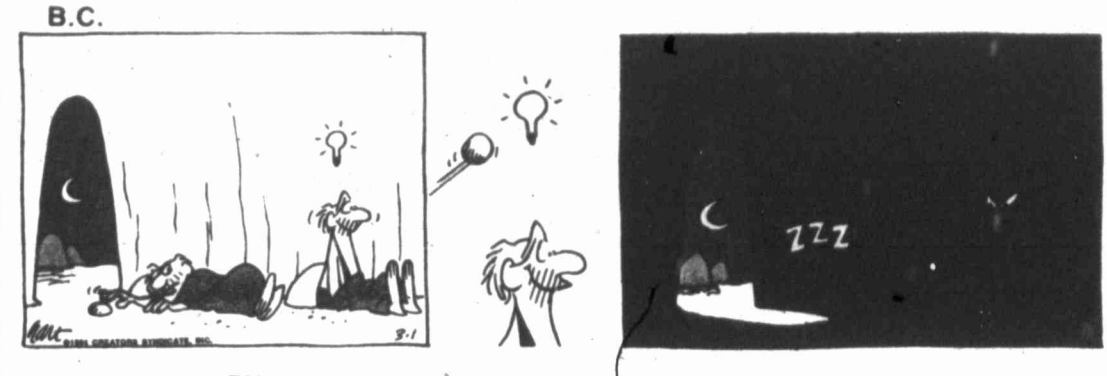

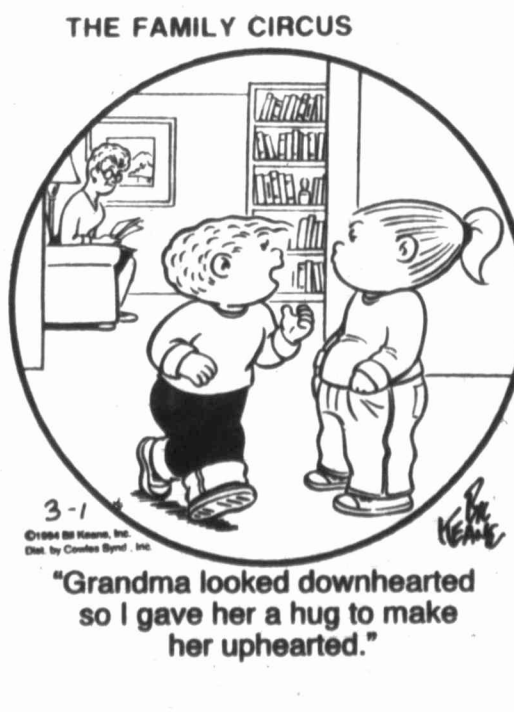

I don't want to deprive him of his fantasy, but I'm afraid that if I allow this to take place, he will feel like it will be OK for him to cheat on me. He promised me this wouldn't be the case. What should I do? I really love him, and don't want to lose him.—SOUTHERN GIRL

DEAR SOUTHERN GIRL: If you participate in this fantasy, regardless of what he says, you will be giving your approval to his having sex with others. Just say NO to this immoral fantasy.

DEAR ABBY: If you think your Catholic and Jewish readers will enjoy this, you are welcome to print it. I never did know who wrote it.—ABBY FAN

ELEVEN O'CLOCK MASS
The storm is howling out of doors,
The drifts are piling high,
And I can see the pedestrians
As they go trudging by.
The faces of my Irish friends
Come dimly through the glass.
They brave the blizzard for the sake
Of worshipping at Mass.
I watch a while, then back to bed,
Curled up so safe and sound.
But they must tramp the icy streets
On sacred duty bound.
I envy them their strength of heart,
The faith that they renew,
But on a snowy Sunday morn,
It's great to be a Jew.
