Union Pacific conductor H.D. Carroll holds a handmade strike sign while standing alongside First Street Tuesday during the nationwide strike against the railroad by brakemen, conductors and yardmen. A judge had later issued a temporary restraining order against the strikers.

Union Pacific survives brief strike by UTU

By TIM JONES
Staff Writer

Members of the local United Transportation Union in Big Spring went on strike against the Union Pacific Railroad at entrances to the railroad yard on West First street beginning at 2 p.m. Tuesday afternoon.

The nationwide strike lasted about 4 1/2 hours before U.S. District Court Judge Thomas Shanahan in Omaha, Neb., ordered striking Union Pacific Railroad workers and members of the United Transportation Union back to work.

At the root of the strike was how crews of brakemen, conductors and yardmen get to and from trains for shift changes. Some of the local workers are concerned this is just the railroad's first step in a process which could end up as a means to reduce the number of union workers and how their jobs are structured.

The court order was twofold; it issued a temporary restraining order prohibiting the union from striking; and it ordered the railroad to chauffeur employees to

Parents should examine their beliefs on issue

By RUDY GUTIERREZ
Special to the Herald

There is only one third of the school year left - two six-weeks grading periods.

During this Texas Public Schools Week, I encourage all parents or guardians to examine their attitudes toward their children and their children's schools.

Are your children doing their best in school? Is there any way you might help your children do better to get the best education possible for them so that they may be successful now and in the future? What about homework? Could you make some improvements in that area?

You don't have to be a teacher to help. You don't have to even know how to do what your children are doing, but it does help. Maybe you can learn something from your children.

Here are some suggestions to improve your children's homework habits:

- Provide a well-lit, comfortable study area for your child to use for homework and studying.
- Limit household noises, sibling interference, TV watching and other distractions that interfere with homework and studying.
- Allow time within the family schedule for completion of assignments.
- Encourage your child to do homework daily, at a specific time of day or afternoon.
- Please review assignments, class work brought home and the school day with your child. Your child should be able to relate the homework assignments to the class work already covered or to be covered shortly.
- Help your child organize assignments by encouraging him or her to use a book or envelope for all assignments.
- Help your child anticipate how long an assignment or studying should take to avoid last-minute rush jobs and all-nighters.
- If your child cannot explain or understand the homework, you find out why. For example, was he or she inattentive in class?
- Initiate and maintain contact with your child's teachers to learn about his or her progress.
- Solicit help from your child's teachers. This can include learning about skill-building techniques, follow-through methods, education activities and games.
- Help your child with drills and practice and, if appropriate or possible, do sample problems similar to the ones assigned.
- Encourage your child to check homework. Sloppy

Texas' 158th birthday

By TIM JONES
Staff Writer

Today is the celebration of the 158th anniversary of Texas Independence Day.

Texas' founding fathers gathered at Washington-on-the-Brazos for the signing of the Texas Declaration of Independence March 8, 1836.

The Battle of San Jacinto, one of the most significant events during the Texas Revolution, was won by Sam Houston that April 21. It liberated the republic and also set into motion a tide of irreversible events that brought the great Southwest into the Union.

Ultimately, 11 states, from Texas to California, joined the Union and fulfilled the dream of manifest destiny.

Summing up the battle, Texas Thomas Rusk, then secretary of war for the Republic of Texas, wrote "The unerring aim and irresistible energy of the Texas Army could not be withstood."

Today Texans will celebrate another yearly anniversary of the bold and courageous action made by Texas patriots when the call to arms was sounded at the Alamo and when every Texan at the Goliad Mission was executed.

Thus, heroic action secured the Texas Republic its freedom from the tyranny and oppression imposed by Mexican Santa Anna's army before his quick defeat and surrender at San Jacinto.

Remember that the freedom Texans enjoy today, they fought and died to preserve.

Second Brown Bag series focuses on learning skills for success in classroom

KELLIE JONES
Staff Writer

The spring Brown Bag Seminars at Howard College are in full swing. There are 12 conferences scheduled for this semester and the topics vary from time management to sibling rivalry.

Margaret Trevino, recruiter-child care advisor at Howard College, says the main focus of these seminars is to teach students life skills that will help them succeed in the classroom. The seminars have been taking place at the college for the past two years and the audience has expanded to not only include students, but faculty and staff members and the general public.

The seminars are on Tuesdays from noon until 1 p.m. and are free to the public. Everyone is encouraged to attend. Most of those in attendance bring a sack lunch, but Trevino says the cafeteria will be open for those who don't bring a lunch.

Some of the topics that will be discussed in future seminars include: Mental Health in the 90's; Stress and Adjustment on March 8; Single Parenting, March 22; Women and Violence, March 29; Money Management their trains until a court hearing Thursday.

According to the Associated Press, Richard Dinsmore, a lawyer for the union, said the UTU called the strike because the railroad has been unwilling to negotiate the issue. He said the railroad has refused to respond to the union's question of whether having union workers drive company cars constitutes a change in working conditions.
"They told us, 'We don't have to tell you that,'" Dinsmore said.
James Dolan, Union Pacific attorney, said the practice has been going on for three years and he did not know why the union suddenly made it an issue.

It was not clear how many union members honored the strike, the railroad said. It operates freight trains on 17,000 miles of track in 19 states.

The union represents 8,500 conductors, brakemen and yardmen. During the strike the union ordered its members to report to work for Amtrak and commuter rail lines as usual.

In addition to Big Spring's union members forming local picket lines, union workers struck in Fort Worth, Little Rock, Ark., Poplar Bluff, Mo., Atchison, Kan., Green River, Wyo., North Platte, Neb. and outside the railroad's national headquarters in Omaha.

Lubbock music teacher can remember former students

The Associated Press

LUBBOCK — They called him Mr. Roberts. They still do.

They are the thousands of students who learned about music, discipline and pride from Roy Roberts during his many years as an educator and a school administrator. And Roberts, 70, who left a career as a professional musician to accept $150 a month to teach music to Oklahoma students who didn't even have instruments, has no trouble remembering his students' eagerness and accomplishments.

Now retired from administrative duties, but still playing hits at private clubs and private parties with his combo, Roberts' eyesight isn't what it used to be. He'll search for his glasses before trying to read a business card these days. But the musical chops are still there — and the memories.

Relaxing in an easy chair at his fashionable Lubbock home, Roberts admitted that he never intended to teach. Accepting that job in Frederick, Okla., was just supposed to be a temporary detour, something to do when times were slow after the war.

But as he put it, "I got hung up on the kids."

It was in 1949 when he received a call from the principal of Boyd High School in Frederick. And Roberts — who studied at Manual Training High School in Muskogee, Wiley College in Marshall and Sam Houston College in Austin — wasn't sure how he was going to make the job work. For one thing, he knew he'd be teaching all instruments, and he was much more comfortable with just a saxophone in his hands.

For another, where would he find those instruments?
"I wound up ordering instruments from a place called Meyers Music in Detroit, Mich.," he recalled, "and would you believe it? They shipped them to me without a penny in advance. The students later earned the money to pay for them by pulling cotton."

Asked if he worked at their sides, Roberts said with a chuckle, "I was the teacher. I was there, but I was the one doing the weighing."

Roberts didn't stop playing. He'd put together a little performing group, but he also had to learn before he could teach. "Really, the only instrument that gave me a lot of trouble was the trombone. I was pretty comfortable teaching trumpet, clarinet, sax. But I'd have to practice the trombone at night before I could teach it the next day."

He wound up putting together a 35-piece band at Boyd High School and, with the money he was making with his combo, was pretty happy.

Then he took the band to Lubbock to perform at halftime at a high school football game, and that trip would change his life. The game was at Chapman Field, and E.C. Struggs, then principal of Dunbar High School, couldn't be sure that those Oklahoma kids were really supplying that big sound.

So he walked down and sat between two band members.

Roberts was hot. "I don't allow anyone to sit with my band," he recalled saying aloud, only to be told by a Dunbar student, "That's our principal."

Roberts let it pass. The next day, Struggs called Roberts with a job offer.

Roberts declined.

In fact, he turned down the job of Dunbar band director six times. He wouldn't even interview for the position. Later, when he was visiting a site near Lubbock, he acquiesced and told Struggs that he'd drive in and talk to him. But even that conversation almost never took place. Roberts said, "I remember my wife (Harvey Esther) telling me I got to get up and go to Lubbock. I said, 'I'm not going.'"
"And she said, 'You gave that man your word, and you're going,' and then she kept hitting me until I said OK."

The Lubbock Independent School District made Roberts an offer he couldn't refuse. He didn't even wait to confer with his wife; she'd made it obvious that she was ready for a move anyway. He accepted the position before he left Lubbock that day.

"That was on Jan. 3, 1952," said Roberts, "and coming to Lubbock was the best decision I ever made."

Saying goodbye to those students in Frederick was not so easy. "I tried to play a farewell concert with them," said Roberts. But then a clarinet player named Billy started to cry, and so Roberts started to cry. "That was hard," he said.

He left town and moved to Lubbock that very night.

Dunbar High School was different. There were more students, most of them already renting or owning instruments. And Roberts had to prove himself, teaching regular classes for a while before being allowed to concentrate only on music instruction. Before long, he was in charge of the marching band, concert band and Dunbar combo.

He stayed at Dunbar from 1952 until 1970, at which point Nat Williams, then LISD superintendent, called Roberts and said, "We need to talk."

Roberts drove to that meeting wondering what he'd done wrong, assuming he was being called on the carpet. Instead, he was offered the job of assistant principal at Estacado High School — but the offer wasn't going to stay on the table for long. Roberts enjoyed making music with students at Dunbar, but he knew he'd reached a salary ceiling there. He asked for 30 minutes to discuss the offer with his wife.

He was told that his answer was wanted in exactly 30 minutes.

"I drove home in no time, and I had these big crocodile tears," said Roberts. "My wife said, 'Oh Roy, you got fired.' I said, 'Girl, I didn't get fired. They want me to be an assistant principal.'"

He accepted the position, calling for another potentially tearful farewell with students. However, he noted, "The kids at Dunbar thought I was leaving to be band director at Estacado. When they found out the truth, I think they understood."

College moving into '90s with new computer buy

Moving into the '90s is the key behind a $78,500 purchase of new computers for Howard College. Board members approved a decision to buy fifty of them for the computer science labs during their meeting on Monday. Twenty four of the computers will be going to the San Angelo campus and twenty six to the Big Spring campus.

The computers that are currently being used in San Angelo are seven to eight years old, according to Dr. Dusty Johnston, Vice President for Student and Instructional Services at Howard College and were needing to be replaced. The new purchases will completely replace the pre-existing computer lab and will help students keep up to date on the latest technology. The same will happen for the computer lab on the Big Spring campus.

Johnston says the old computers will be utilized in different areas of the campuses including the word processing, writing and developmental labs.

Johnston adds the computers were purchased from Personal Computer Depot in Houston and will be installed this summer. The goal is to have all fifty computers ready for use at both campuses for the Fall 1994 semester.

He also adds that half of the money used to make this purchase came from two different federal grant programs. One from the Carl Perkins program and the other from the Federal TECH-PREP Program.

Clinton plan may benefit Texas greatly

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration's latest pitch for its embattled health care reform package suggests states would reap nearly $46 billion in savings.

Texas alone would benefit to the tune of at least $3.3 billion, according to an administration study issued Tuesday.

The Department of Health and Human Services projects that between 1996 and 2000 Texas would save the $3.3 billion through reduced spending for Medicaid, long-term care and employer premiums.

The HHS plan suggests the state wouldn't be the only beneficiary.

Texas employers would save $1.9 billion in reduced insurance premium payments for workers in the year 2000 alone, while employees would pay $2.9 billion less in premiums, the study projects.

The Clinton plan, which would guarantee health coverage to all Americans, has been met with mixed reviews on Capitol Hill, where several competing congressional reform packages are circulating.

Many lawmakers are skittish about the administration's decision to achieve universal coverage through a mandate on all employers to provide health insurance and pay most of the premiums for workers and their families.

Texas Republican Sen. Phil Gramm's office swiftly attacked the study as flawed, saying the analysis ignores the Congressional Budget Office's conclusion that the Clinton plan would add $74 billion to the debt by the turn of the century.

"We note that after counting Texas' share of the $74 billion in extra debt that the CBO says will pile up as a consequence of the Clinton health care program that Texas will actually lose $5.1 billion by the year 2000," said Gramm's press secretary, Larry Neal.

Gramm is a vociferous critic of the Clinton plan and has introduced a proposal of his own that has garnered conservative support. Gramm's proposal has drawn administration criticism because it doesn't guarantee universal coverage.

"The boys at the White House want to spend now and worry later," Neal said.

Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agent is comforted by a fellow agent on Sunday, Feb. 28, 1993, after being injured during a raid on the Branch Davidian compound which led to a 51-day standoff. Four federal agents and six Davidians were killed in the first day. One of the ATF agents' widows is now suing a Waco newspaper reporter and a television station.

AFT widow files suit on newsman, TV station

The Associated Press

WACO — The widow of a federal agent killed during last year's raid on the Branch Davidian compound filed a lawsuit Tuesday against a Waco newspaper reporter, his employer and a television station.

Leslie McKeehan, widow of U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agent Todd McKeehan of New Orleans, filed a wrongful death suit seeking unspecified damages.

Waco Tribune-Herald reporter Mark England, Cox Texas Publications Inc. and Cox Enterprises Inc., both Tribune-Herald parent companies and KWTX Broadcasting Co., which operates Channel 10 in Waco, all are named as defendants.

No specific allegations are outlined. However, the suit filed in state court claims that the defendants' negligent conduct on the day of the raid caused McKeehan's death.

McKeehan was one of four agents killed as ATF agents stormed the Mount Carmel compound Feb. 28, 1993.

Tribune-Herald Editor Bob Lott called McKeehan's death regrettable but said neither the newspaper nor its employees was responsible.

"A year's examination of the facts, in one forum after the other, has shown that neither our decision to print 'The Sinful Messiah' series nor our coverage of the raid caused or contributed to the tragedy," Lott said.

"In fact, an exhaustive Treasury Department probe, which approached the Tribune-Herald from an adversarial point of view, laid the blame squarely at the feet of leaders of its own agency, the ATF."

Rick Bostwick, an attorney for KWTX, said station employees were not at fault.

"The death of Mr. McKeehan is certainly regrettable, but microscopic scrutiny by various agencies over the past year have found that KWTX is in no way responsible or at fault for the gunbattle that took place between agents of the Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms and the Branch Davidians," Bostwick said.

On Monday, a Waco television reporter who covered the botched raid filed a $15 million libel lawsuit against two other journalists and their employers.

John McLemore, a reporter for KWTX-TV, alleges that statements made on television by reporters Kathy Fair of the Houston Chronicle and Valeri Williams of WFAA-TV in Dallas implied he was to blame for the agents' deaths.

Also named in the lawsuit filed in state court Monday are the Hearst Corp., which owns the Chronicle; the A.H. Belo Corp., which owns WFAA-TV; and Belo Productions Inc., which operates the Dallas station.

Belo attorney Michael J. McCarthy said Tuesday he had not seen the lawsuit and would not comment until he reviewed it. Neither the Chronicle nor McLemore had any immediately comment Tuesday.

SEGUIN — Kenneth Allen McDuff, one of the most brutal killers in Texas history who has been dubbed "the devil himself" by one victim's mother, was sentenced to die Tuesday for the murder of an Austin woman.

McDuff, 47, displayed no emotion when State District Judge Wilford Flowers sentenced him for the slaying of Colleen Reed, who was abducted from an Austin carwash Dec. 29, 1991.

McDuff also received two terms of life in prison for aggravated kidnapping and aggravated sexual assault in the disappearance of Ms. Reed, a 28-year-old secretary for the Lower Colorado River Authority whose body has never been found.

It was the third death sentence for McDuff, who has spent about half of his life in prison.

His escape of a 1968 death sentence, his subsequent parole in 1990 and killings since then have become a symbol of a criminal justice system gone haywire.

McDuff's case led to changes in state parole practices that are designed to make it more difficult for violent criminals to win release.

Ms. Reed's sister, Lori Bible, who has aggressively championed prosecution of McDuff, said he got what he deserved.

"She died a horrible death ... and the guys who did this to her are going to pay for it," Ms. Bible said.

McDuff's chief accuser in the Reed case was his accomplice, Alva Hank Worley, 36, who faces capital murder charges but has not been tried yet.

Worley testified that he and McDuff abducted Ms. Reed. As they drove north to Bell County, Worley said Ms. Reed was repeatedly raped, beaten and tortured by being burned with cigarettes.

He said he last saw Ms. Reed when McDuff placed her in the trunk of his car and said he was going to "use her up."

Worley said he confessed to police because he had a guilty conscience. McDuff's attorneys accused Worley of testifying against McDuff to try to get a reduced charge.

McDuff denied killing Ms. Reed.

McDuff was first sentenced to death for the 1966 slaying of a 16-year-old girl near Fort Worth. His accomplice, Roy Dale Green, testified last week that McDuff also shot and killed the girl's companions, two teen-age boys, before raping and strangling the girl with a broken broomstick.

But in 1972, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that the death penalty was unconstitutional, and McDuff's sentence was commuted to life in prison.

He was paroled in December 1990. Last year, he was sentenced to death for the 1992 sexual assault and murder of Waco convenience store clerk, Melissa Northrup, 22, a pregnant mother of two.

His death sentence in the Reed slaying came on the two-year anniversary of the disappearance of Mrs. Northrup.

Mrs. Northrup's mother, Brenda Solomon, attended McDuff's trial in the Reed case, which had been moved to Seguin because of pretrial publicity.

"I'm really tickled to death," said an emotional Mrs. Solomon. "Now I know that he won't go free. I believe he is the devil himself."

In closing arguments, defense attorneys Chris Gunter and Andy Forsythe said a death sentence wasn't necessary because McDuff would never leave prison again.

A sentence of life in prison for capital murder would have made McDuff eligible for parole in 35 years, or when he was 82.

Forsythe said parole officials made a mistake in letting him out in 1990 and because of the publicity generated by the case would never consider releasing him again.

Gunter said McDuff will likely be executed for the death of Mrs. Northrup and that another death sentence would force the state to spend millions of dollars as the case is appealed.

But prosecutors David Counts and Buddy Meyer asked the seven-man, five-woman jury to remember McDuff's victims. "Remember the compassion he showed for her," Counts said as he held up a framed photograph of Ms. Reed.

State, Energy Department trying to preserve collider

The Associated Press

DALLAS — All may not be lost with the superconducting super collider as the state and the Energy Department have taken steps toward preserving some of the benefits already produced by the multi-billion project.

The two moved closer Tuesday to preserving some of the medical and scientific benefits by agreeing to try and keep alive some projects. An advisory committee to Gov. Ann Richards, which has been sorting through ideas for months, chose options involving continued work on magnets, high-performance computing and cancer research.

Although it may take several months and as much as $44 million to work out the proposals, state officials say the action is a good step.

"I believe that this agreement is good for the State of Texas and provides the framework for resolving unanswered questions and examining other uses of the SSC," said U.S.

Rep. Martin Frost, D-Dallas.

Advisory committee chairman Jess Hay said the idea is that "you don't throw away $2 billion."

"You try to salvage it and in the process of doing so, you contribute to scientific advances of the country," he said. "The collider itself is not going to be kept going — there's not going to be a 52-mile tunnel — but that doesn't mean you have to throw away the intellectual property and assets. A good portion of that can be preserved."

Texas spent more than $500 million on the venture before Congress voted to kill it last October. How the state gets reimbursed is another issue that was discussed Tuesday.

"The Department recognizes that the State has made significant resource contributions to the project and we expect that there will be a financial settlement with the State that properly recognizes its contributions," Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary wrote in a letter to Richards.

Be part of child's education

Schools across the state are celebrating during Texas Public Schools Week, going on this week. This is an excellent opportunity for parents to meet their child's teachers, if they haven't already done so, and see what their child is doing while at school. Every parent is encouraged to take part in the activities of their child's school. By being there, you show your child you care about school and how he does. Education is the key to survival in this world. It is important that a child know this.

Good relationships make a child's success easier

Parents - Mother, Father, or Guardian, Texas Public Schools Week would be a good time to evaluate your relationship with your child's teacher or teachers. Parents suffer if the teacher-student relationship is bad; teachers suffer if the student-parent relationship is bad. Each has a stake in the relationship that the youngster has with the other adult. Despite this mutual interest in each other's behavior, a parent and teacher seldom have a very close or significant relationship with each other. They don't see each other very often, and when they do, their time together is limited.

Rudy Gutierrez

ence resources, supplies, and other learning materials for the child to work.

6. Know your child's academic strengths and weaknesses. (This includes learning problems and subject strengths).

7. Write notes frequently to your child's teacher to inform them or to ask them questions about your child. Read the notes and look over information the teacher sends home. Reply when necessary as promptly as possible. The more you both understand about your child, the more you both can help him/her. Set up a conference time through the school's office with your child's teacher regularly throughout the year. If a teacher and your child know you are interested, this helps to insure that your child is getting a good education that he/she needs for now and the future.

8. Stress consistency, sharing, respect and punctuality in home activities, such as chores.

9. Emphasize a routine schedule for eating, sleeping, studying, and recreation whether it be TV or sports.

10. Give priority to schoolwork, reading, and other educational activities over TV and recreational activities.

11. Remember to provide lunch or lunch money daily for your child, or make arrangements with your principal for other services provided for you.

12. Make sure your child gets enough sleep by going to bed at an appropriate time on school nights.

13. Allow time in the morning for breakfast at home or at school. If necessary, prepare the table and breakfast foods the night before.

14. Your child needs to attend school properly clothed and groomed for the day's activities.

15. If your child is ill, please make appropriate arrangements for his/her care. If he/she has to miss school, let the school office know and make arrangements for your child to get and do any make-up work that is necessary.

There are many other suggestions that I could give, but if you as a parent or guardian could follow most, if not all of these fifteen, you would be helping your child experience success at school. You and the teacher would have a good relationship and work together for the best for your child. It is important!

Clinton's charisma tested

Mike Royko

It's almost impossible for most of us to imagine what a thrilling experience it would be. But let's try.

An American president boards Air Force One to jet to your hometown. Then he rides in a limo to your very own neighborhood.

And when he gets there, the president of the United States — probably the most powerful individual in the world — stands on a stage and makes a speech about you.

Yes. About you. About what a terrific person you are. And how important you are to him, his goals and to the future well-being of all Americans.

Think of it, and how you would feel at that moment. Delighted, dazed, dazzled? To say the least.

But most of the 250 million citizens of this country will never have that giddy experience. Most people don't know the president of the company where they work. They're lucky to get a smile from the foreman.

As the theme song for the show "Cheers" said about the charm of that bar: "... where everybody knows your name ..."

Then there is Dan Rostenkowski, from the Near Northwest Side of Chicago. And the magical moment happened to him.

On Monday, the President of the United States flew to Chicago to tell us what a dandy Dan our Dan is.

He did this on a day when international events were swirling: American planes shooting down Serbian planes over Bosnia; Russia expelling our diplomat because we threw out their diplomat because they bribed our spy to tell them which of their spies we bribed to be our spies.

But there was President Clinton, on a stage at Wright College, trying to persuade the voters of the 5th Congressional District — a tiny speck on the political map — that they should vote for Rostenkowski.

And how did Rostenkowski feel? I didn't ask him, so I don't know. But I'll tell you how he should feel. He should be embarrassed, humiliated ed and feel like a damn fool.

Rostenkowski is one of the most powerful men in the Congress of the United States. He is chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, which decides how much of our money the government will grab for federal whoopie.

He is in this powerful position for three reasons:

1. His father Joe was an old-time Chicago powerhouse ward boss. That made Danny a prince of Chicago politics. So old Joe installed Prince Danny in public office about the time Danny was old enough to shave.

2. For those who are ambitious and aggressive, Congress still operates on seniority and Danny has been there for 36 years. Since he arrived at age 30, he's still three years younger than Ronald Reagan was when Reagan was elected to his first term as President.

3. Despite his puffy face and bartender bearing, Danny is an extremely shrewd politician who knows the legislative process inside and out.

All things considered, the President of the United States should not be needed to come in here and act as a precinct captain to get Danny re-elected to his umpteenth term.

Instead, the voters in his district should be saying: "Wow, we have Big Danny, a powerhouse of the world, as our congressman, ain't we lucky?"

He has the backing of Mayor Richard M. Daley and most ward bosses. He has the endorsement of the Chicago Tribune, the biggest paper in the Midwest. He has name recognition, has done a million favors and is an ethnic, which always counts in this town.

So why should he worry? He should be coasting to re-election.

But instead, he is hanging on by bloody fingernails. Which is why President Clinton — with American planes shooting down Serbian planes — was flying to Chicago to make a ward-heeler speech.

That's why Rostenkowski should be embarrassed. He shouldn't need this kind of help. The President of the United States — even a questionable character from Arkansas — shouldn't have to come here to plead for Rostenkowski votes.

But Danny brought it on himself with cheap, embarrassing scandals. Whether or not he is guilty, he shouldn't let himself even be suspected of the sort of nickel-dime grubbing we equate with Chicago aldermen.

So now he finds himself scrambling to win a primary. Not even a general election, but a mere primary against members of his own party.

His opponents are lightweights. A college political science professor whose lectures put his students to sleep. It is said he gives top grades to those who parrot his textbooks.

A member of the Cullerton clan, a name that for more than 140 years has been synonymous with back-room dealing. And a guy whose name I can't remember and won't look up.

And there is the President, hustling votes.

I'm glad I don't live in Rostenkowski's district. It would be a tough choice.

A friend who lives there asked me how I'd vote.

I told him that if he wanted Clinton and Hillary to succeed and favored their health plan, I'd pinch my nose with one hand and vote for Rostenkowski with the other.

Otherwise, I'd vote for the guy whose name I can't remember.

Some way for a national powerhouse to survive.

One for the hill's far side

A 46-year-old man has won a professional golf tournament. And not just any tournament.

He won an important West Coast tournament that is part of the Professional Golfers' Association of America Tour. He competed against some of the world's best players.

Not only that, some of the golfers he defeated were half his age. The 46-year-old man's name is Johnny Miller. He won last week's PGA Tour event at the Pebble Beach course in California.

Johnny Miller used to be one of the tour's leading players. Before he got old. Before his nerves went and he couldn't stand clear-eyed and steady-handed over those short putts in what is known in golf parlance as "the throw-up zone."

So he retired to a career as a TV golf announcer and spokesman for a company that manufactures golf equipment.

But he had been playing pretty well with his kids, he said, so he decided to enter at Pebble Beach, and he won. Of all things.

Perhaps this is why golf is such a great game. You'll never see a 46-year-old man catch a pass to win the Super Bowl.

You'll never see a 46-year-old man hit the winning shot in the finals of the National Basketball Association playoffs.

But it's possible in golf. Jack Nicklaus, recall, won the prestigious Masters tournament at 46.

What Nicklaus did in 1986 and what Johnny Miller did this month were wondrous and heroic things for those of us near their ages.

I'm 47. (I would have been 48, but remember, I was sick last year.)

Forty-six and 47 and the likes, are awkward ages. We haven't reached our 50s yet, but we've certainly passed the age of being promising up-and-comers.

We've started planning for retirement, but there are still rows to plow before we are put out to pasture.

And physically, our minds still aren't convinced we can't do as we always did. We have reached that age where our minds write checks — as the saying goes — our bodies can no longer cash.

We are moving from the fast lane to the slower middle lane. Most of our dreams either have been realized by now or have been forgotten. We are trying to deal with the reality that not all dreams come true.

I can sense so many changes in myself from, say, 12 years ago.

For one thing, I rarely sleep dreamless sleep anymore.

I wear bifocals. They make them these days with no lines in the lens, but they're still bifocals.

I cut the hair out of my ears every couple of weeks. Until I was 45 I didn't have any hair growing out of my ears.

Because of illness, I haven't played much golf in the past year. But before, I could already see some changes there, as well.

My own nerves had begun to fray as Johnny Miller's did. How difficult it is now to ram the short putts into the back of the hole with the unsteady hand and the doubting mind. A friend, my age, once missed a three-footer for the match on 18 and put it this way:

"It's hard to putt through your own vomit."

Crude, but well said.

And, well done, Johnny Miller. You have shown us it is possible to look back and still at least see the top of the hill we are in the midst of crossing over.

Johnny Miller won $225,000 at Pebble Beach. I think he deserves every penny.

Stop! Bring back that shopping cart

"Oh, I see evidence of this all over," Tony Dinolfo said. "All over, I tell you. I've been in auto repair shops, and have observed the mechanics working on an engine. They have hacksawed the basket off a shopping cart, just left the frame and the wheels. A shopping cart is very sturdy, made to last a lifetime. They're using it to wheel a car engine around ..."

Many people embark on what they consider to be great moral crusades. There are men and women who want to save the rain forest. There are men and women who want to preserve the spotted owl. There have been, over the centuries, men and women who have devoted their lives to world peace.

Tony Dinolfo, for 25 years now, has devoted himself to urging Americans to return stolen shopping carts. Dinolfo, 68, is driven to fits of anguish at the thought of a stolen shopping cart. People roll them right out of a supermarket, he said, and take them home. Never bring them back.

"In malls, you see them all the time," he said. "Shopping carts that have been stolen and are being used by people who have no right to them. I've been in malls before they open for the day, and every maintenance man, every janitor is using a shopping cart to haul around their stuff. Those shopping carts were taken from grocery stores, I know they were ..."

Dinolfo used to run a grocery store in the Midwest himself. He has been retired since 1985, but his great crusade, which he began in 1969, goes on. One thing about Dinolfo — rather than theorize in vague and come out of the water with shopping carts," he said. "I have seen this. People steal them from groceries and roll them into the water and they are gone ..."

Dinolfo has no official capacity with any trade group or food-service organization. This is merely something in which he says he deeply believes. Every February, thanks to him, is "Return Shopping Carts to the Supermarket Month." Named so by whom? Named so by him.

"At spring training last year, a Chicago Cubs player picked up baseballs from the field and put them in a shopping cart," he said. "I saw a picture in the paper and I saw it on TV. That was not his cart, not rightfully ..."

It is a matter of right and wrong, he said. People should not take that which is not theirs.

"I have never seen this for myself," he said, "but I have heard that people use stolen shopping carts as barbecue pits. I mean it! They will throw a steak in the basket and put some charcoal underneath and light it ..."

So how does he feel about all of this?

"Disappointed," he said.

Disappointed? That's it? Twenty-five years of effort, and disappointed is the strongest emotion he feels?

"Disappointed is the word," he said. "I saw this one kid, he had a shopping cart and he was pushing his weightlifting equipment around in it. I saw this myself ..."

Israel disarming settlers, restricts other movements

The Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Israel began disarming extremist Jewish settlers today and ordered others to stay out of Palestinian areas in the latest effort to reduce tension following the massacre in a Hebron mosque.

Clashes with Israeli soldiers broke out in Hebron when the army eased the curfew for two hours to allow people to shop, and a 17-year-old Palestinian was killed by a bullet in the neck. A young Arab also died in a clash with troops in Jericho, another West Bank town.

At least 13 Palestinians were wounded in scattered stone-throwing clashes with Israeli troops in the Gaza Strip, hospitals reported.

Israel radio said seven settlers from communities around Nablus in the north were disarmed and given orders to stay out of Palestinian areas. Several dozen settlers from Hebron and nearby areas on the West Bank have also been given orders limiting their movements.

The action against the settlers is the harshest since Jews began moving into the territories after their capture by Israel from Jordan and Egypt in the 1967 Middle East war.

Shai Bazak, spokesman for the settlers' council in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, complained that some of those targeted "have not done anything wrong."

Some 120,000 Jews live in 144 settlements in the territories, which are home to 1.8 million Palestinians.

Meanwhile, the government has put its embassies abroad on alert for possible terrorist attacks. Army radio said the order was issued after anonymous phone calls and intelligence reports indicated possible plans for such attacks.

Palestinians have called for the closing of all Jewish settlements and deploying an international force to protect Arabs in the occupied lands.

But the Israeli government remained adamant it would not bow to Palestinian demands for dismantling Jewish settlements — or even discuss the issue.

"We don't have to punish people who are peaceful and who support peace," Foreign Minister Shimon Peres told reporters today. "What we have really to do is to prevent this small group of terrible, opinionated people who may cause another problem."

Saeb Erekat, head of the PLO's delegation to the Washington negotiations, said the Clinton administration had not taken a strong stance against settlers.

He said statements by President Clinton and Secretary of State Warren Christopher did not mention that the mosque massacre was carried out by a Jewish settler and urged the United States to clearly state its policy toward settlements.

"They know very well that settlements are the main obstacle (to peace), and they know that after the massacre life can't go on the same way as before," he said.

The massacre set off widespread rioting in the occupied lands and prompted the Palestine Liberation Organization to suspend peace talks with Israel.

Today's deaths raised to at least 66, all but three of them Arabs, killed in the mosque and subsequent violence. At least 400 have been wounded.

Most towns in the West Bank remained under curfews confining people to their homes, and Palestinian leaders said families were running short of food and medicine. Curfews were lifted today in most

A Palestinian student in Britain, watched by a policeman, pickets close to the Israeli Embassy in London Monday in protest over last Friday's Hebron mosque massacre in the occupied territories. About 30 demonstrators picketed the embassy over the killings and human rights violations during the month of Ramadan.

Gaza towns and refugee camps for the first time in six days, but shops and schools remained closed by a general strike.

Travel from the territories continued to be banned, and some 60,000 Palestinians remained cut off from jobs inside Israel.

The Cabinet decided Sunday to rein in extremist settlers, especially followers of the late militant Rabbi Meir Kahane, to try to calm Palestinian fears after Friday's shooting spree in the mosque.

Despite peace moves, Serbs step up attacks

The Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Despite concessions to peace efforts in Bosnia, U.N. officials said today that Serb forces have intensified attacks on Muslim regions and denied permission for a relief convoy to travel to Maglaj.

Bosnian Serb artillery continue to hammer Maglaj, a Muslim enclave 50 miles north of Sarajevo, where 19,000 refugees have been under siege for most of the past year.

Serbs denied permission for a humanitarian aid convoy to travel there today, said Lt. Col. Bill Aikman, the U.N. spokesman in Sarajevo.

U.N. officials reported anti-tank rounds landed near Sarajevo's downtown Jewish cemetery this morning, but there was no word on who fired them.

There also were reports of a stepped-up offensive against Bihac in Bosnia's northwest corner, where Serbs support a small Muslim faction that has declared autonomy from the Sarajevo government.

The offensives contrast starkly to a truce that has held for three weeks in Serb-besieged Sarajevo, and to Tuesday's agreement by Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic to allow the reopening of an airport at Tuzla, northern Bosnia, for U.N. aid flights.

The Serbs attacks also come against the backdrop of agreement by Bosnia's Muslim and Croat factions to cease hostilities and form a confederation.

A preliminary accord was signed Tuesday in Washington by Bosnian Prime Minister Haris Silajdzic, Croatian Foreign Minister Mate Granic and Bosnian Croat representative Kresimir Zubak.

President will test length of his coattails in election

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Lest anyone forget this is a midterm election year, presidential trips are acquiring more and more political substance as the White House lends its support to Democratic incumbents. And they seem to be flocking to, not away from, President Clinton's help.

Mindful that the party in the White House historically loses seats in such elections, White House political operatives are planning a massive aid package for endangered Democrats.

More political trips are popping up on the schedules of both Clinton and Vice President Al Gore.

Presidential campaigning hasn't always been welcome.

Just last fall Virginia's Democratic candidate for governor, Mary Sue Terry, made it clear she didn't want the help of Clinton, whose ratings were then low. She didn't get it. She lost anyway.

President Bush in the 1990 midterm elections found he could sometimes help Republican candidates more by staying away. He'd reneged on his no-new-taxes pledge and Republicans were swarming away from him.

But lately, Clinton seems to be developing into a much sought-after campaigner. And he's willing to do it.

"Things have changed," said James Thurber, a political scientist at American University. "He has won on some big ones, like the budget and NAFTA. He's dominating the agenda on health care reform. He's popular. He's not down at 38 percent like Bush was before the 1992 election."

Clinton has been hovering in the mid-50s since the first of the year.

But public support for his health care plan is slipping, according to two polls out today that say for the first time more Americans disapprove of the plan than approve of it: 44 percent to 48 percent in an ABC/Washington Post poll and 46 percent to 48 percent in a CNN/USA Today/Gallup survey.

The president is still mending fences with House Democrats whose support he enlisted last year for an unpopular, broad-based tax on energy. After marching them out on that limb, he sawed it off by abandoning the tax himself in a Senate compromise on deficit-reduction.

At a Democratic retreat last month in Piney Point, Md., Clinton received a standing ovation when he promised — at a closed door session — to do his utmost in campaigning for incumbents in 1992, according to participants.

Clinton has been taking some political risk in voicing early support for Democratic allies — and in using taxpayer-supported trips for events in congressional districts where a principal goal is to help the incumbent.

"He will appear with Democrats who support his initiatives," White House press secretary Dee Dee Myers said. "As election day approaches, he will stand with people who stood with him."

Clinton's trip to Chicago on Monday to demonstrate his support for embattled Rep. Dan Rostenkowski — done under the guise of promoting health care and anti-crime legislation — is a case in point.

The chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee is vulnerable in a March 15 Democratic primary and is the subject of a Justice Department investigation for alleged misuse of House Post Office funds. And, after all, there are other Democrats in the race.

But Clinton minced no words, keeping Rostenkowski at his side and in the limelight.

Presidential support of one Democrat over another in a primary "is always a very dicey thing," said White House political consultant Paul Begala. "The general rule is you don't." But he claimed it was a measure of Clinton's political courage — and reflected Rostenkowski's importance.

Clinton also went to a second Chicago district on Monday and showered praise on Rep. Mel Reynolds, a Democrat who bucked labor and voted for the administration's North American Free Trade Agreement.

He did likewise last week during a health care trip to Norwich, Conn., praising Rep. Sam Gejdenson, D-Conn., another NAFTA supporter.

Teaching a lifetime challenge for Viola Motley

By JANET AUSBURY
 Features Editor

Once a teacher, always a teacher — that's what Viola Motley would tell you.

Motley, who will turn 90 Tuesday, March 8, taught for about 40 years. She considers her greatest teaching accomplishment to be her work with non-English speaking students and their parents. Her work began in 1969, when the Grady PTA tried to find a way to improve relations between faculty and Hispanic parents.

"I suggested I could teach them how to speak English," said Motley, who was teaching kindergarten and first grade. The idea caught on, and she used her free period—the last period of the school day—to teach several Hispanic mothers to speak English.

Motley's success at teaching the mothers led school superintendent L. R. Dunn, to request an additional student in Motley's kindergarten-first grade class — a 15-year-old boy named Jesus who was failing his seventh-grade classes because he spoke no English.

Jesus went from straight-F report cards — "I never saw a report card like his," said Motley — to As and Bs. Finally able to speak and read English, he was promoted to eighth grade.

When the PTA learned of Motley's success with Jesus, they asked if she would enter an achievement contest being conducted by Republican women. The all-expenses-paid trip was not only a contest but a reward for her work. She was unsure at first, but after a week's thought accepted the challenge, "even though it did mean riding on a plane."

At the October 1969 convention, she presented the story of her work with Jesus, telling the crowd, "It has always been my policy to do all the good I can to all the people I can." After her report, she recited the poem "Life's Mirror" by Madeline S. Bridges, the first stanza of which she still recalls:

There are loyal hearts
 There are spirits brave
 There are souls that are pure and true

VIOLA MOTLEY

"He wasn't embarrassed," said Motley of her oldest student. "He participated as if he was their own age. He began learning so rapidly and was so happy, soon I was able to instruct him in seventh-grade textbooks."

ABWA honors Business Associate, Woman of the Year

The Scenic Cactus Chapter of American Business Women's Association presented its "Business Associate of the Year" and "Woman of the Year" awards during a reception Tuesday, Feb. 15 at the Big Spring Country Club.

Lt. Albert Villafuerte of the local Salvation Army was selected as Business Associate of the Year. He was nominated by his wife and ABWA member Lt. Yvette Villafuerte. He received an honorary plaque.

ABWA member Bonnie Bennett was selected as the Woman of the Year and received an honorary trophy. She was nominated by her sister and ABWA member Gertrude McCann.

ABWA member Deloris Albert explained the selection is handled by a special committee for each category. This year, Eileen Zant and Betty Kelly co-chaired the Business Associate of the Year award committee. Pam Welch chaired the Woman of the Year award committee.

Nominating letters are placed in a numbered envelope with all other identification removed and attached to a sealed envelope containing the name of the nominee and the nominating person. The nominating person must be an ABWA member.

Judges read the outer letters and select the person who they feel has the most qualifications to win the award and then open the sealed envelope to find out who the winner and nominating parties are.

Villafuerte's letter of recommendation commended her husband for his ability to excel personally and professionally. "For a boss to be able to wear these hats, and many more, is a boss who is rare and precious as gold. None other can compare to him," she wrote.

McCann commended her sister's willingness to help her employees and their families, her active participation in several local organizations and ability to raise three grandsons despite having had bypass surgeries.

The American Business Women's Association presented its "Business Associate of the Year" and "Woman of the Year" awards Tuesday, Feb. 15. Missed words may indicate age-related hearing loss

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — An early symptom of age-related hearing loss, called presbycusis, is difficulty in understanding — rather than not hearing — speech when people talk.

This is especially true when an older person misses words during a conversation in a noisy restaurant or crowded room. High-pitched sounds, like the chirping of a bird, might not be audible at all.

Presbycusis is caused when the sensory hair cells inside the cochlea, or inner ear, die. When a number of these hair cells die, hearing begins to decline, usually beginning around age 60.

Older adults with presbycusis often experience a phenomenon called "recruitment," in which they perceive loud incoming sounds as too loud. It may prompt the common reply, "Don't shout, I'm not deaf!"

According to a new Consumer Reports book, "The Hearing Loss Handbook," there is no easy way to relieve age-related hearing loss. Eventually, as frustration builds, a person with presbycusis may decide to wear a hearing aid.

One recent national survey, however, said that although 58 percent of all people over 65 had some hearing impairment, only 8 of them percent used a hearing aid.

And here's some more about hearing from the "The Hearing Loss Handbook."

You can reduce the effects of aging on your muscles and joints by adding a program of regular, daily stretching to your routine. Just five or 10 minutes of stretching in the morning, after sitting or standing for a long time, or any time you feel stiff will not only be good for you, but will feel good as well.

But before you add stretching to your routine, you might want to check with your doctor first, especially if you have been inactive for a time or you have had recent surgery.

By the way, periodic stretching can reduce your risk of injury during exercise or any everyday activity as well as help you maintain your ability to tie your shoes or button or zip clothing behind your back. It may even help your golf swing.

People find prescription drug bargains across the border

By The Associated Press

TUJUANA, Mexico — Eleanor Hope used to come to Tijuana to buy silver jewelry, big pottery vases and leather purses. Now she focuses on antibiotics.

They're the real bargain in Mexico, the Los Angeles-area nurse says. And, with two grown children and no way to pay for prescription antibiotics if they get sick, Hope needs bargains.

"They're so much cheaper here, it's amazing," Hope said, gesturing to racks of drugs at a small "farmacia," or pharmacy, just blocks from the U.S. border.

"With the prices they charge in the U.S., a normal person can't even afford to buy antibiotics," Hope said.

Like a growing number of Americans — especially elderly people on fixed incomes — Hope has discovered a land of cheap, legal prescription drugs just over the Mexican border.

The reason is price controls — a hotly debated issue surrounding President Clinton's health care reform plan.

Mexico mandates the price that companies — Mexican, European or U.S. — can charge for medical drugs sold within its borders. The United States does not.

And so, Dr. Cary Present in Pasadena has pointed some of his patients to Tijuana's "farmacias" when they needed the drug Tamoxifen after surgery for breast cancer.

He's not altogether happy about it. Patients can get a lot more from a U.S. pharmacist than just medication, said Present, the head of the American Cancer Society in Los Angeles.

"The pharmacist can go over your drugs, make sure you have no adverse interactions, recommend when you may need to see your doctor, make sure there's no possible side effects," Present said.

"The problem is the drug companies charge a very high price on some of their products. When you've got someone who can't afford that price, but needs the drug, what are your choices?" he asks.

First, Present checks to see if a U.S. drug firm will provide the drug at a reduced price for an indigent patient, he said. If not, he tells the patient to go to Tijuana and look for a U.S.-made drug.

"It's the same drug, often made by the same company, for a price that's about two-thirds less," Present said.

coverage won't cover prescription drugs.

That's the problem for both Hope's children, and for San Diego retiree Don Moore, who buys drugs including eyedrops for his elderly mother.

"It's just terrible, the prices in the U.S.," said Moore, shopping in Tijuana.

Two "very small" bottles cost $4.10 in Mexico, compared to $30 in the U.S., he said.

"I checked all this with her ophthalmologist and said, 'Is there any difference?'" He said no, so what's the danger?" Moore asked.

Some people cut back on cholesterol all week to have a cheese omelet on Sunday morning. Others save up to have deviled eggs once in awhile.

Only a few grains of salt are needed to enhance eggs, especially deviled egg yolks. Most cookbook recipes for deviled eggs (including good old "Betty Crocker") call for 1/4 teaspoon salt, which is way too much for 6 eggs.

Amazingly, these minute quantities do make a difference.

Here's a secret to make them better:

After the cooked egg yolks are smashed with a fork, moisten them with a drizzle of melted butter, then mix in other ingredients to taste. The butter lends a smoothness to the yolk mixture that's subtle but tasty.

Let the wind howl or the droplets drizzle. Do as the Brits do. Have a warming "cuppa" tea in late afternoon. It's a most civilized ceremony, and tea may be more healthful than coffee.

The average American eats less than three slices of bread a day while the USDA Food Pyramid recommends 6 to 11 servings. Pepperidge Farm, commercial breadmaker, is offering a free pamphlet on the Pyramid to inspire more bread eating. For a copy write to: Our Daily Bread, Box 44, Pepperidge Farm, 595 Westport Ave., Norwalk, Ct. 06851.

The average time spent preparing a weekday dinner is about 39 minutes and on weekends, it's just 8 minutes more — 47 minutes — a consumer survey done for Kraft Cheese finds.

Survey also finds that at least once a week, 74 percent skip breakfast, 61 percent miss lunch and a third miss dinner. When they do manage to eat, more than half said they had a hectic lunch or dinner at least once a week.

Lady Hawks rip Ranger 98-64 in region tourney

By STEVE REAGAN
Sports writer

The Howard College Lady Hawks opened this year's Region V tournament much like they did last year, but coach Royce Chadwick is hoping his team doesn't start believing in fate.

The 29-2 Lady Hawks, behind a career-best 33 points from post player Angel Spinks, torched Ranger College 98-64 in the first round of the regional tournament at Garrett Coliseum Tuesday night.

Howard started the tournament almost the same way last year, routing McLennan en route to winning the region and earning a trip to the national tournament. But Chadwick knows a repeat performance isn't necessarily in the cards.

"That has no bearing on this tournament," Chadwick said of the comparisons. "Whether we win by 1 or 41, tomorrow we start over."

But as far as starts go, Chadwick had to be pleased with his team's debut at the tournament. Granted, the 12-17 Lady Rangers may have not posed the most severe test possible, but Howard took care of business early and never gave Ranger a chance to make a game of things in the later stages.

"I thought we did the things we had to do in the first half," Chadwick said. "And then again in the first five minutes of the second half, I thought our defense played well. They were in the 30s for a long time."

The Lady Hawks advance to meet Western Texas, a 101-84 winner over Cisco, tonight at 8 in Garrett Coliseum.

Actually, Tuesday's game was close for a good chunk of the first half. The Lady Rangers used the three-point shot to stay even with Howard for the first 12 minutes.

Two treys by Lolita Brown, who led Ranger with 21 points, and another by Robyn Jansa gave the Lady Hawks a 25-23 lead with 8:26 remaining until the half.

The teams traded the lead for the next two minutes before Howard finally grabbed the lead for good. Fittingly, it was Spinks who got things going, scoring eight unanswered points in a 2-minute stretch to give Howard a 35-28 lead and control of the game.

After that, Ranger was like a deer caught in the headlights. Howard's man-to-man defense limited the Lady Rangers to only 10 points in a 14-minute stretch, and the Lady Hawks increased their lead to 25 during that time.

Afterwards, Spinks was probably more surprised than anybody by her performance.

"I really didn't feel like I played that much differently than before. I guess my shots were just falling," the sophomore from Houston said.

Stanton's Stallings does it again

Jeremy Stallings of Stanton, who is a freshman at the University of Florida, finished fourth in the 800-meter run at the Southeastern Conference Indoor Track & Field Championships at UF Saturday and Sunday.

Stallings' time of 1:51.50 was fourth out of 27 runners, and the winner was two-time NCAA Outdoor 800 Meter Champ Tony Parrilla, who was on the 1992 U.S. Olympic Team. Parrilla's time was 1:49.06.

Stallings' best time of 1:49.88 earlier this season is one of the top 16 times in the country and may enable him to compete in the NCAA Indoor Championships March 11-12 in Indianapolis.

At the SEC Indoors, Stallings also ran a leg on Florida's 4x400 relay team that finished seventh at 3:17.93. Stallings' leg was 48 seconds flat. Arkansas won the team championship; UF was fifth.

Cowboys send superstars to the White House

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A year ago, the White House greeted the world champion Dallas Cowboys with AstroTurf, mock goal posts and banners.

This year, an unadorned Roosevelt Room was the site for the president's traditional welcome of the Super Bowl winner.

With back-to-back titles, neither the Cowboys nor the White House were putting on the splashy show of 1993.

A year ago the entire team was greeted in the East Room, which had been decorated for the occasion with a vast expanse of AstroTurf complete with hash marks. A fake goal post hung between the ornate portraits of George and Martha Washington.

A small, albeit stellar, squad returned Tuesday.

Quarterback Troy Aikman, running back Emmitt Smith, receiver Michael Irvin and defensive tackle Russell Maryland represented the team, joined by owner Jerry Jones and coach Jimmy Johnson.

"This is the most expensive four-some there is in this country today," Jones joked.

During a visit to the Oval Office prior to Tuesday's ceremony, Maryland said he had to set Clinton straight on who was responsible for the Cowboys' 30-13 victory over the Buffalo Bills on Jan. 30.

"He was recapping the Super Bowl game, talking about how Troy and Emmitt moving down the field on the Bills made the difference in the game," Maryland told reporters later. "I'm the only guy here from Dallas on the defense. I had to say something, you know... I said it was the defense."

"I think it stuck with him," Maryland added.

Clinton didn't allow himself to be drawn into the offense vs. defense argument. He praised the entire team during his brief remarks.

"I think that it is just the beginning of what will doubtless be years and years and years of stunning achievement if they can just keep their goals high and keep working for them," the president said.

"Coach Johnson, your team has a knack for coming to the White House."

It's a knack the Cowboys will repeat if Jones has any say in the matter.

As he handed Clinton a copy of the Lombardi Trophy given to the Super Bowl winner, Jones said: "We'd like to put on this trophy 1993 Super Bowl champions, 1994 Super Bowl champions, and we're going to leave a little space open."

Jones also presented the president a fist-sized replica of the Cowboys' diamond-studded Super Bowl ring. "If you can find someone that fits, send him to the Dallas Cowboys," Jones told his fellow Arkansan.

Clinton admitted to "a bit of parochial pride" that the team is owned by a native of Arkansas. The Arkansas ties don't end there. Texas native Johnson, like Jones, played on the 1964 national champion Arkansas Razorbacks team.

Texas takes conference lead as Baylor upsets A&M Aggies

By The Associated Press

The Baylor Bears did the Texas Longhorns a favor by upsetting Texas A&M and giving the Longhorns the lead in the Southwest Conference basketball race.

The Bears needed two overtimes to take a 95-92 victory over the Aggies on Tuesday night as Jerome Lambert scored 20 points and Nelson Haggerty hit a key 3-pointer and provided 12 assists for Baylor.

The victory left the Aggies at 10-3 in conference play and 17-7 overall. The Longhorns are 10-2 in conference play and will play the Rice Owls at Houston tonight.

Texas A&M coach Tony Barone credited the victory to the key plays that Baylor made.

"They deserved to win because of the way they came back. We just fell apart at the foul line. Haggerty hit the big shot that put the game into overtime. They did a good job and deserved to win. They took advantage of our mistakes," Barone said. The Aggies kept a slight lead until Baylor (14-10, 5-7) tied it at 72 with a free throw by Doug Brandt.

David Edwards answered with a field goal and free throw for a 75-72 A&M lead. Aundre Branch scored a free throw and Lambert banked in a field goal with 31 seconds left to tie at 75. Lambert then blocked an Edwards shot with five seconds left to send the game into overtime.

The Aggies jumped out to a four-point lead as Lance Broderson hit a jumper and McGinnis hit two free throws.

Lambert dunked on a feed from Haggerty to make it 79-77. Haggerty then fouled Edwards with 22 seconds left and Edwards got only one free throw for an 80-77 lead. Haggerty came back with a 3-pointer with 15 seconds left to bring up a second overtime at 80-80.

Baylor jumped off to an 86-80 lead to open and the Aggies could get no closer than three the rest of the way.

The upset victory also felt good for Baylor coach Darrel Johnson, who had been disappointed with three losses in a row.

"I told our kids going into the second overtime, 'No matter what happens, I'm proud of you guys,'" he said.

"This team has been through a lot of adversity and this win feels really good," he said.

The Houston Cougars defeated the Lamar Cardinals 95-81 in a non-conference game.

Tim Moore made 31 points and pulled down 11 rebounds in the Houston victory.

Willie Byrd added 16 points for Houston, Jessie Drain had 15 and Hershel Wafer had 14. Atim Browne led Lamar with 23 points and Keith Veney scored 17 for the Cardinals.

It was the third victory in four games for the Cougars (7-18). Lamar (10-16) has lost 21 of 23 meetings with Houston.

Dodger slugger in trouble with IRS

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Darryl Strawberry, the hard-hitting Los Angeles Dodgers outfielder, is about to be hit hard by the federal government, a newspaper says.

The New York Daily News reported in its Wednesday's editions that Strawberry is facing indictment for federal income tax evasion. It also noted that under new sentencing guidelines adopted in November 1987, jail time is virtually mandated when more than $120,000 is owed to the government.

According to the newspaper, sources familiar with the case say government investigators have accumulated evidence that Strawberry, 31, failed to disclose "in excess of $300,000" of income derived from signing autographs at baseball card and memorabilia shows.

Besides Strawberry, the investigation by the IRS and the U.S. attorney's office in White Plains, N.Y., includes Howard Johnson, Lenny Dykstra and Eric Davis, but the Daily News quoted sources as saying Strawberry is the only player known to be facing criminal charges.

None of the players could be reached for comment, the newspaper said. The Daily News said Strawberry has hired a Los Angeles tax attorney to work out a possible plea-bargain agreement.

Marty Gelfand, a former assistant U.S. attorney in the Los Angeles tax division, told the newspaper Tuesday that Strawberry hired him, but Gelfand insisted he has had no negotiations with IRS investigators or the baseball team.

"As far as I'm concerned, there is no problem," Gelfand told the Daily News when asked if he planned to talk to the federal investigators about Strawberry. "I've had no negotiations with the government. All I can say is I'm Darryl's attorney."

Knicks start March toward title; SuperSonics handle Hornets

By The Associated Press

The New York Knicks lost most of their Atlantic Division lead in February. March brought a new lineup and the end of a four-game losing streak.

Coach Pat Riley's three new starters missed 10 of 18 shots and combined for just 17 points, but the bottom line was a 100-88 victory Tuesday night at Sacramento.

For NBA Standings, see page 10

Patrick Ewing, one of two holdover starters in the revamped lineup, had 28 points and tied his season-high with 21 rebounds.

Riley started Anthony Bonner, Derek Harper and Hubert Davis in place of Charles Smith, John Starks and Greg Anthony.

But Anthony, averaging 4.8 points on 28 percent shooting his previous seven games, came off the bench with 18 points, including three 3-pointers. He led New York's 46-9 advantage over Sacramento's reserves.

New York, which saw a 7 1/2-game lead over Orlando cut to two in February, didn't take control against the Kings until the fourth quarter, using a 13-3 run to build an 86-74 edge with 5:24 left.

"They're the strongest team in the NBA," Sacramento coach Garry St.

Jean said. "I thought there were a couple of times when they got away with a little, but that's to their credit. We didn't get the breaks."

Mitch Richmond scored 29 points for the Kings, who had a five-game home winning streak snapped. Lionel Simmons scored 18 points for the Kings, who have beaten the Knicks only once in 10 games during the last five seasons.

SuperSonics 112, Hornets 96
Seattle improved its home record to 22-3 and handed Charlotte its 14th loss in 15 games as Kendall Gill and Gary Payton scored 21 and 20 points, respectively.

The Hornets played the Sonics even for three periods, then were outscored 31-17 in the fourth period. Vincent Askew scored the first seven Seattle points during an 11-2 run to start the final quarter, giving the Sonics a 92-81 edge.

Hersey Hawkins scored 26 points and Frank Brickowski 20 for Charlotte, but Hawkins was shut out in the fourth quarter, which started with the Hornets trailing only 81-79.

Warriors 114, Clippers 109
Chris Webber celebrated his 21st birthday with 26 points and 18 rebounds, and Latrell Sprewell scored 27 points as Golden State outscored Los Angeles 17-5 in the final four minutes.

Trailing 89-75 after three quarters, the Warriors still trailed 104-97 before a layup by Chris Mullin and hook shot by Webber started the Warriors' game-ending spurt. After Ron Harper hit one of two free throws, giving the Clippers a 105-101 lead, Jeff Grayer's three-point play drew the Warriors within a point before Sprewell's short jumper put them ahead for good, 106-105.

Dominique Wilkins, playing his second game for the Clippers, led all scorers with 29 points.

Rockets 97, Magic 85
Houston snapped Orlando's seven-game winning streak behind Hakeem Olajuwon's 26 points and six blocked shots.

Olajuwon got help from Otis Thorpe, with 19 rebounds, and rookie Sam Cassell, who scored all of his 16 points in the second half.

Anfernee Hardaway and Dennis Scott each scored 21 points for the Magic, winless in seven games at The Summit. NBA leading scorer Shaquille O'Neal was held to 19 points on 8-for-19 shooting.

The Rockets led 50-37 at halftime, and Orlando got no closer than nine points in the second half.

Heat 110, Bucks 102
Miami went five games over the .500 mark for the first time in franchise history, defeating Milwaukee behind Glen Rice's 25 points and Grant Long's season-high 22.

The Heat, playing in their sixth season, are 30-25 after matching a season-high with their fifth consecutive victory.

Red Sox skipper tagged; White Sox lose pitcher

By The Associated Press

Boston Red Sox manager Butch Hobson lost his equilibrium, but not his sense of humor after he was hit by a foul ball during batting practice Tuesday at Winter Haven, Fla.

"It hit me in the head, I'm all right," he said, then continued an interview he was conducting in the Boston dugout when a one-hop grounder off the bat of Ruben Rodriguez struck him above his left ear.

Hobson began feeling dizzy and was treated in the clubhouse with smelling salts. Hobson said after the team's workout that he was feeling better, but still appeared a bit wobbly.

The Chicago White Sox will be without pitcher Jose DeLeon for three to six weeks after an MRI revealed a torn knee ligament. The White Sox signed right-hander Scott Sanderson to a minor league contract.

DeLeon has a partial tear of the medial collateral ligament of his left knee, an injury sustained during fielding drills Monday.

The White Sox also announced agreements on one-year contracts with 17 players currently on the roster, including reliever Roberto Hernandez, who saved 38 games last season.

Hernandez said his contract had a base salary of $275,000 and also included incentives. He made $195,000 last season.

Michael Jordan, admitting that the daily press briefings on his progress were starting to wear on him, won't find any solitude Thursday. But he is looking forward to an intrasquad game at Sarasota, Fla., where he might face Chicago White Sox teammate Jack McDowell, the American League's Cy Young Award winner.

"I think I'm well equipped with fundamentals they have been teaching me," Jordan said. "I'm ready to see if I can excel at it or do well at it or do some of that in live action."

Negotiations on a labor agreement with baseball owners apparently will be difficult and a strike later in the season is a real possibility, players union chief Don Fehr said Tuesday as he began his 28-team tour of spring training camps, meeting for nearly two hours with the Montreal Expos in West Palm Beach, Fla.

The two sides haven't met formally since Jan. 25, 1993. The next meeting is scheduled for Monday in Tampa, but Fehr does not expect a proposal at that time. He said a possible strike is several months away.

Major league exhibition games start today, with San Diego playing Seattle at Peoria, Ariz. Minnesota plays Pittsburgh on Thursday at Bradenton, Fla.

Thirteen major league games are on tap Friday. On Saturday, the New York Yankees and Montreal become the last teams to make their spring debuts.

Juan Gonzalez, who led the American League in homers last season, met the March 1 reporting deadline by showing up at the Texas Rangers' training camp in Port Charlotte, Fla. Gonzalez, who signed a $30.7 million, five-year contract, said he hopes back problems that hampered him at times last season are finished.

"I want to be able to play every day," he said. "I want to play hard. And I want to win. I want a ring this year."

Tim Wakefield, whose struggles last season resulted in a demotion to the minor leagues, did little to show the Pittsburgh Pirates his knuckleball is under control again. Wakefield, 8-1 in 13 starts as a rookie in 1992 plus two victories over in the National League playoffs, allowed three runs on one hit and five walks in two innings in an intrasquad game at Bradenton, Fla.

Wakefield, 6-11 last season, allowed a three-run homer to rookie outfielder Midre Cummings.

Jansen ready for more gold

By The Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Speedskater Dan Jansen is ready to cash in on his long-sought gold medal.

The 28-year-old from Greenfield, Wis., was back in the United States Tuesday after winning his first Olympic gold medal in what he said would be his final Olympic race.

"My last chance turned out to be the best," Jansen said at a news conference held by the marketing firm representing him.

It also can turn into a goldmine. Integrated Sports International, based in New Jersey, has signed Jansen to endorse AT&T, the NFL's line of clothing and Apex shoes and clothes, ISI president Frank Vuono said.

Gold, silver and bronze coins with a likeness of Jansen also are being marketed for prices ranging from $15 to $800, Vuono said.

Jansen said he had "no idea" how much he would make from those endorsements and others he is considering and from his many speaking engagements. But he said he hopes the financial benefits from his 1,000-meter victory last month in Lillehammer, Norway, would last a long time.

Jansen said he also plans to continue the motivational speaking career he began in 1988.

"I think I have a good story to tell," he said.

The skater's gold medal followed seven previous tries in four Olympics.
