Beating the odds

FHS council chosen one of six profile schools

By BARBARA MORRISON
Staff Writer

To most people, having the odds stacked against them 1,000 to six is insurmountable. But there are several students at Forsan High School who don't believe that.

The students are members of the Forsan Student Council and the reason they don't believe it is because they have beaten those odds — for the past five years.

According to advisor Jan Sims, the FHS student council received the coveted "Sweepstakes" award at the recent district convention.

"This is a real honor for these kids," Sims said. "And because they've been able to accomplish it for the past five years, the state has chosen them to be one of six profile schools."

Schools are awarded points for several areas of activity, Sims explained. The students must have an active and involved student council, have a student-oriented energy consumption and conservation program, an aggressive safety-oriented plan and have an outstanding drug and alcohol education program for students.

Each area of program concentration earns the school points. Obtaining enough points in all the areas to Please see FORSAN, page 2A

Recount upholds results

By TIM JONES
Staff Writer

The results remain the same, a one vote win for Donnie Reid in the Precinct 2 runoff.

A manual recount confirmed the computerized results of a 466-465 victory for Reid over opponent Roosevelt Shaw.

The recount started at 5 p.m. Friday afternoon, according to Howard County Clerk Margaret Ray, present because as the custodian of records.

A four-member recount committee, appointed by Democratic Party Chairman Frank Hardesty, consisted of Pat Anderson, Clarice Birrell, Debra Franklin and Glenda Brasel.

Shaw attended with his brother Larry and Roe Fulgham and Reid was accompanied by his wife Roelyn and Martha Cummings.

"I don't know whose vote 'it' was," Reid said. "Some of my friends have said it was their vote that did it. I thank my supporters and think they need a little rest now."

"I sure do appreciate and thank the voters," Shaw said. "There were nine of us candidates, at the start. I made a strong showing my first time out. I can feel good about that, regardless of whether I seek office again."

Jail debate alternates between heat, cool

By TIM JONES
Staff Writer

The latest debate on the new jail issue was both heated and tenuous.

City and county officials debated the issue during last Tuesday's Big Spring City Council meeting.

Following the discussion, city officials revised their proposal for participation in the project.

"I was slightly premature in announcing I would ok the funding of the remote site, plus the EPA, into the overall costs of preparing that site for the county," explained Commissioner W. B. "Bill" Crooker. "I've been advised to withdraw that."

The city council asked the county officials attending, Crooker and County Judge Ben Lockhart, "What is the county's position now?"

"Well, as you know, the position right now is kind of undetermined, because we haven't had a chance to quite digest what you all offered, and what we'd need," said Lockhart.

The city's revised proposal states the city will demolish the Permian Building on the downtown site, at a cost of $320,000. Furthermore, the city agreed to pay the county a $75,000 access fee yearly to house their prisoners.

In terms of the old Crawford Hotel site preparation, on lots 14 and 15 in the western half of the downtown block 12, the city agreed to pay, if it is ultimately necessary to build over those lots, $63,000 of the $78,000 cost that the architects said is needed to excavate and clean those lots.

The county will bear $15,000 of the total costs, as commissioners said that is the cost they would incur in preparing enough of the remote site to erect the same type of structure.

"And you all realize, I forget how long ago, we formed a committee to look into building a new jail," commented Lockhart. "I guess being a little naive and everything, we thought we had the cheapest location."

"For 27 years, I've been putting people in jail and I thought that a jail was a jail, you know."

"In February this year, we were ready to build a jail and this other stuff came up, which is all right," Lockhart explained. "It'd be a lot nicer to have it downtown. But some of the commissioners feel that it's still prohibitive, unless we have some help.

"That's where we got into having you all to help tear the Permian Building down, and all that," Lockhart said. "I'd like to see us keep working at it because we need a jail. We keep getting side-tracked on a few things. I think we need to push forward and get this thing settled as soon as possible."

Mayor Tim Blackshear interjected, "I think the city has the same position on that. We're wondering where do we start and where do we stop?"

"We made an offer, on the table, that we felt was extremely good. In fact, some of it at your option," Blackshear said. "After that was met, then we were asked for some more. We're wondering where that is going to stop. We want to know the bottom line of where we are expected to stop."

Lockhart replied, "We're going to have to drive a nail in the floor and say this is where it stops, we've got to do it here. You'll come to this point and we'll come to this point, and together say, let's get it done, one way or another."

Blackshear then asked "has the County Commission- Please see DEBATE, page 2A

Domestic violence: Volatile mixture for police officers

By KELLIE JONES
Staff Writer

More peace officers are assaulted while on a domestic disturbance call than any other kind they might respond to. Why?

Corporal George Yielding with the Big Spring Police Department addressed this question during Thursday night's Citizens Police Academy.

Yielding attributes the high assault rate to a number of factors including aggression by the actor, victims who turn against officers and complacency by the officers themselves.

"Any disturbance call is a volatile situation and the actors involved are worked up mentally and physically. By the time the officer arrives, they are ready to vent their frustrations against the person who has now come in and is taking over their environment," said Yielding.

Yielding added it is common for the victim of family violence to become aggressive toward the officer when action is taken against their "loved one" who only minutes before was aggressive toward them.

"Unfortunately, one sees this more often in the lower economic brackets where the woman is somewhat trapped in the situation because often times her spouse is the only that works and can bring home the paycheck."

Complacency by officers while handling these calls is very high even though they know that a disturbance call is one of the most dangerous calls that they can make.

"Officers are human too and after countless calls to the same house night after night, one has the habit to expect the same as every other call," Yielding explained.

"But then the unexpected happens because this time is worse than the others and a weapon could be involved or the actors are just as tired of seeing the officer as the officer is of seeing them."

Officers are required to give a sheet of paper with information on it to the victim at every disturbance call. The paper gives information on how someone can obtain a protective order and who to turn to if they need help such as Rape Crisis/Victim Services.

A protective order is obtained through the district attorney's office and the police department has the authority to arrest someone if they violate portions of that order.

If the person named in the order commits acts of family violence, directly or indirectly threatens and harasses the victim or family, or if he or she goes within 200 yards of the victim's home, work or children's school, the department can arrest that person.

As a general rule an officer cannot arrest someone on a misdemeanor

Lowe is still alive; government say she's not

The Associated Press

HOUSTON — Karen Lowe is dead tired. She has spent more than a year trying to convince government officials that she is alive.

"It's so ludicrous," Ms. Lowe said. "The whole thing is such a nightmare. And I've got such a headache."

According to Social Security records Lowe has obtained, she was listed as dead in February 1985 when she was 18. Lowe was not in her parents' custody, having been turned over to the state of Michigan in 1981.

Born Karen Ann Kreger, Ms. Lowe did not learn of her "demise" until January 1993, a year after the seven-year waiting period before a person can legally be declared dead.

Now being dead is a problem for the 26-year-old woman from Big Spring, located about 40 miles east of Midland.

When she tried to join the Air Force more than a year ago, they would not accept her because she was dead.

"I can't purchase a car. I can't get any credit. I can't open a bank account. I can't go to school and get a government loan. I basically don't exist in the computer world," she said.

For privacy reasons the Social Security Administration will not discuss Ms. Lowe's case.

Speaking in general terms, Yvonne Emanuel, a spokeswoman for the Social Security Southwest regional office in Dallas, said most mistakes listing live people as dead are clerical goof.

"But this sounds like it's something beyond the problem of a social security number," Ms. Emanuel said. "It's more a problem with official documents."

"We just wouldn't accept someone's say so that you were dead," she said.

ers' Court voted to build a jail, as of yet?" "Yeah, we have voted to...to, a...to build a jail," stated Crooker.

"One of the things I'd like to mention, at this point," Crooker said, emphatically, "You say it came as a surprise to you - it came as a surprise to us, that the possibility of building over the Crawford Hotel lots was being contemplated."

"Now, we don't necessarily stay up with this from hour to hour, day to day," Crooker explained. "So, it was a complete surprise to us last Friday (April 8). So, we surprised you Monday (April 11). Okay!"

"We want the people to know what the cost possibilities are for you and for the county. And that's a cost possibility - we've reduced it to $78,000," Crooker said.

"We want and would like to have that entire half block completely prepared for the county to build a jail on," Crooker stated.

"I don't think we should give you a clean site, free of charge," countered Councilman Ladd Smith. "When you haven't got a clear site, free of charge, at the remote site."

"We, as a commissioners court," Crooker said, "have discussed the north site. We can go to the back block, which the county and the other taxing jurisdictions have half of ownership, if we repossess for taxes.

"Now, the other half we understand, after a contact was made, we can buy for approximately $15,000," Crooker said. "Now, that would satisfy the county, if we go to the remote site. So, if you want us to, we'll kick in $15,000."

"We want to be open and above board with you all - we don't want to hold back anything," he said. "We'd be using one-half the block that presently belongs to G.C. Broughton."

"If we were to prepare the half block downtown," asked Blackshear, "Are we going to get that facility?"

"I think you would. Yes," Crooker said.

"Is that the bottom line of the proposal," Smith questioned, "That we'll have the downtown jail site, if we prepare that?"

Crooker said, "That is as I see it."

"To me, advantageous is downtown," Lockhart said, "Feasibility of the money is the main project; that's why we're trying to get help for downtown."

attain an "outstanding" rating, qualities that school as a "sweepstakes" school. "This is quite an accomplishment for a school of our size," said Sims.

Only six schools are chosen out of 1,100 student councils state-wide to be profiled at the state level. FHS will present two one hour programs explaining how its student council was able to earn the award for the last five years.

"We'll be showing what our program is and how we've been able to accomplish it," explains Sims. "We have several special projects that combine the areas of concentration," Sims said. FHS student council members are key to an aggressive Red Ribbon campaign against drug and alcohol abuse. Additionally, members launch a pledge signing campaign and get students to promise in writing not to drink and drive.

Special monthly activities also combine the different focuses. Students pass out safety reminders on cars reminding drivers to wear seat belts. Gifts to teachers are aimed at increasing instructor morale and recognition. Elementary schools receive Halloween candy reminders.

The student council also sponsors dances. "It's one of our most successful programs," Sims explains. "We offer a weekend alternative to drinking in a party setting."

The parties have included themes of "Movie Night" which featured videos and popcorn. "Gym Night" which filled the evening with basketball, ping pong, volleyball and table games. A "Halloween Game Night" added a special twist to the Olympic experience and a Christmas hayride provided caroling entertainment for senior citizens.

"Each of these activities resulted in points," Sims said. The school with the highest number of points in the district will send a representative to the national conference scheduled in the state of Washington. "This is our second year in a row to send someone," Sims explained.

Leading the honored FHS student council for 1994 were President Bryan Alexander, Vice-president Shane Sims, Treasurer Misty Carter and Secretary Susan Leopard.

"They are an excellent group of kids," said Sims. "We're lucky to have them."

The City of Big Spring Police Department reported the following incidents:

Alva B. Crites arrested for local warrants; bonded out.

David Lee Ayers arrested for local warrants; driving while license suspended and expired motor vehicle registration.

Shots were reported fired in the 600 block of E. 16th and the 700 block of E. 11th Place, unable to locate.

Assault by threats reported from the 1000 block of E. 11th, the 2900 block of Stonehaven, the 800 block of E. 13th and the 800 block of Lorilla.

Thefts reported from businesses at 2310 Wesson, 1701 E. Marcy, 902 Willis and 300 Owen.

Assaults reported in the 1400 block of Mesquite, the 1400 block of Runnels and the 400 and 500 blocks of N. Goliad.

No 'soreheads,' just buying fun

Plenty to find at Trade Days

By BARBARA MORRISON Staff Writer

STANTON — The people of Stanton have been untruthful. The town boasts of having "a few old Soreheads," going so far as to even brag about it on a billboard located on the outskirts of town.

Try as you might, there wasn't one sorehead to be found Saturday at the community's now famous "Old Sorehead Trade Days."

The event, featuring hundreds of vendors selling every kind of ware, kicked off Saturday and concludes today at 5 p.m. A multitude of patrons thronged the main streets of Stanton, coming from as far away as Panama City, Fla., to purchase the unique and the hard-to-find gadget, craft and thingamabob.

And even though throngs of people attended, there was nothing but good ol' Texas hospitality to be found. Children freely ran the streets — swinging on the playground, jumping in the Spacewalk, and riding the train. Some stopped by the museum, just for a peek.

Tired husbands and tireless wives passed into and through booth after booth. Many of the vendors set up indoors, out of the sun, while others offered an additional bonus of a light tan for no extra charge.

Beautiful weather, no rain and the infamous west Texas wind, provided the background to a very successful and fun-filled family day. Barns, quonset huts, store buildings and outside vendors offered an incomparable variety of everything, while entertainment is scheduled in the town square throughout the event.

Broomstick skirts and hand-painted clothing are found in abundance. Only a few steps is all it takes to be convinced that blackbirds and sunflowers are definitely "vogue" in the craft category. And the search is over if anyone is looking for the perfect hand-made quilt.

Fans, books, and antique collectibles are inside the huts, while outside are T-shirts, coca cola memorabilia, tupperware, plants and wood works. "Lula's Home Ceramic Painting" booth offers southwest gift items while "Pieces of Olde" sports artistry in furniture refinishing.

"Martindale's Original Mini-Memories" brings back the shadowbox art with a unique twist to west Texas scenery. Ernestine Russell adds her taste of the past by using recycled jewelry to create Victorian pins.

Trade Days even has the answer to the ancient question every woman in the world has asked whose fortune it is to have a husband who collects baseball caps. Vendors are selling expandable wooden cap racks specifically designed to hold those special male collections.

So, if family entertainment, coupled with the interesting and unique is an item on anyone's list this weekend, it just might be profitable to head out to Stanton today.

Just don't go looking for an old sorehead... there's only a bunch of friendly folks out there.

Zoning requests could prove costly for Stanton

STANTON — The city of Stanton is considering a zoning request that could cost a projected $1 million in lost tax revenues according to tax appraiser Delbert Dickenson.

Dickenson asked the city council on Monday not to approve the request which would no longer allow the placement of mobile homes within the city limits. According to City Manager Danny Fryar, the council is considering Dickenson's report "very seriously." Dickenson recommended leaving the current ordinance allowing mobile homes in the city limits in place.

Other council action included the approval of $21,000 in city expenditures for unprojected expenses. These budget amendment costs included trade days supplies, water line maintenance, code enforcement, police vehicle repairs, sewer plant repairs, traffic control signs and dumpster maintenance.

The council also discussed the placement of lights in the ball parks and approved the report on the park grounds. Additional discussion centered around the advertisement for bids on airport mowing and park trees. No action was taken.

By BARBARA MORRISON Staff Writer

LENORA — For the second consecutive year, Grady High School has come away from the District 8A University Interscholastic League meet with top honors. GHS was the host school for the competition.

Principal Richard Gibson was extremely proud of the student efforts. "We've worked real hard to upgrade our literary performance and it really showed," he said. "Right now we're in front running for the UIL sweepstakes award but we'll have to wait until track and field is over before we know."

According to Gibson, GHS was the only school to enter three contestants in every event. Gibson said the school had 25 students entered in the UIL contest and 20 of those scored points. "We were the only school to do that in the entire district," Gibson explained. "We're working real hard to build a tradition."

Schools in district 8A include: Grady, Meadow, New Home, Southland, Union, Wellman, Wilson, Borden County, Dawson, Klondike, Loop and Sands. Grady scored a total of 322 total points in the contest with Sands coming in second with 162 points.

Close the loophole

Can a person be held liable for a crime while committed as a youth but undiscovered until an adult?

That question is plaguing Mitchell County law enforcement officials as they look into a sexual assault on two children. The offender was 14 at the time the crime was committed but has now become legally an adult. Since there is no precedent in Texas to answer this question, the state's attorney general is being asked to deliver an opinion on it.

What is a question here is when do you stop being liable for an act you have committed? Should there be a statute of limitations on any crime? Should there be a statute of limitation on age of commission of a crime?

As the United States battles a crime wave that seems to have no end and as Big Spring, Howard and neighboring counties contend with their own crime problems, somehow responsibility has to re-enter the picture.

The fear and shame connected with sexual assault makes it hard for the victims to acknowledge to another what has happened. All too often they are made to feel they were to blame for what happened.

It is outrageous to even contemplate a person getting by with this crime. And, the idea that "the guy probably wouldn't get by with it again, now that it has been reported" is no consolation to the mother or to the victims.

It is no consolation to those of us who are next in line to become victims.

Do we actually have to wait for another victim to undergo the horrors of sexual assault before the person can be put away?

No, we can't afford to wait.

The solution is to close this legal loophole. There are enough lawyers in the State Legislature to figure out how.

We must let the lawmakers know this is unacceptable and demand the loophole be closed.

It is to our benefit.

Coffee explains his jail position

Editor:
To Mayor and fellow councilmembers:

I said some time back if I needed to really communicate I would do so in writing. This is dangerous. Your position is not as easy to duck if it comes back to you ... but here goes.

Some of you think I have taken the county's side of some of our controversies. I honestly believe I took the position because I was able to see both sides in a way some of you could not. I thought for some time that we should pay for clearing the Permian building as the city's contribution to get the jail site downtown.

Some of you wanted to bargain. I didn't. I thought our paying for that much was fair. I don't like to bargain. I thought it very important that the city and county cooperate on this project. I thought and still think a new jail was not only needed but the city and the county would receive many benefits and the cost was worth it. How much further the city can cooperate I don't know.

Monday's joint meeting with the county was frustration to all of us and particularly to me because it is very hard for me to express myself verbally in that type of context with this "new voice" I have acquired. It was even further more frustrating to me because again I could see both sides and this time the county is apparently blind to the city's financial circumstances.

First the county owes no debt. Now they are faced with going into debt in the amount of $6 to $8 to $9 million. For the jail, improvements to the courthouse and refurbishing the old Big Spring Savings and Loan building for the county library. According to Bill Crooker this means raising county taxes maybe around eight cents per $100 evaluation. County taxes then would go from 38 to 46 cents per $100 evaluation. The county's tax base for 1993 is $1,131,004,584. An increase of one cent in tax rate translates into an increase of $113,100 in revenue; eight cents would equal $904,800. A collection rate of 95% would amount to $859,560.

Now if the county cares to look at the city's financial position they would find something like this. The city owes in bonded indebtedness including certificates of obligation and bond notes in excess of $16 million. $7,000,000 on EPA mandated waste water improvements. The other $9,000,000 is on such things as the Beal's Creek flood control project, street improvements, water lines, purchase of fire trucks and police vehicles and other capital expenditures. The city's present tax rate is 65.5 cents of which 20.66 cents goes into a sinking fund to retire some of the above bonded indebtedness.

The city is paying annually $638,000 on general obligation bonds and $1,525,981 on utilities, etc., for a total debt payment of $2,163,981 annually.

Now let's compare the city's tax base and tax income to the county's. The city's present tax base is $320,846,059. An increase of one cent in the tax rate translates into $32,084 as compared to the county's $113,100. If the city raises taxes eight cents that would amount to $256,672 compared to $904,800 for an equal raise by the county. In other words every time the county raises taxes they bring in 3.5 times as much as the city raising taxes by the same amount.

Incidentally, $750,564,890 of the counties tax base comes from minerals and industrial after granting almost $20,000,000 in tax abatement. The industrial amount of $338,193,480 before abatement and $318,247,444 after abatement is just a fraction under the city's total tax base.

So what? I hear someone ask (not a city council member). Well, we offered to tear down the Permian and deliver that site ready to build on at a possible cost of $300,000 (according to the county's figures). That, my friends, is 9.35 cents worth of annual taxes to the city and would be 2.65 cents worth of annual taxes to the county. That was alright.

We felt like we were doing our part to get the site downtown where we could remove an unsightly and hazardous structure and begin to improve the condition of the heart of our city. For the city this is no little amount considering that city employees could use more money to bring them up a little closer to the pay scale for county employees, as well as other uses for $300,000 such as water lines and streets.

But then what happened? The county comes up with $124,000 more for excavating and filing the rest of the downtown site. The county is housing an average of 30 prisoners per day for which the state of Texas pays the county $32 per diem. That's about $350,000 a year now. How much more the county will be able to make with more than enough bed space is anybody's guess. I hope the county can make a $1 million a year and thereby keep their taxes low because every member of this council will have to pay his part of the eight cent increase Crooker mentioned and we all hope the county can pay off their debt and reduce taxes.

I think everyone agrees we need a new jail. I honestly believe the great majority of our citizens want it located downtown. We need to improve the downtown area desperately and this would be a tremendous start. But should we pay another $124,000 when we need street and water line improvements almost as a number one priority along with a host of other things? I don't know the answer. I hope you do.

Point

Crime bill - Republican view

By Rep. BILL McCOLLUM
For Scripps Howard News Service

The primary focus of any federal crime legislation this year must be to stop the revolving door that spins violent criminals back out onto the streets to commit more violent crime.

To accomplish this, Republicans have proposed a federal-state partnership to build enough prisons to house all violent criminals. This partnership between federal and state governments would send a strong message of deterrence to those committing or contemplating violent criminal acts — you do the crime and you do the time.

It is a small percentage — 6 percent — of the criminals who commit 70 percent of the violent crimes. Yet they serve an average of only 38 percent of their sentences. We must remove these violent offenders from our streets.

To accomplish this goal, the Republicans have proposed $10 billion in federal grant money to be offered to states for the construction and operation of prison space. In return, the states would be required to change their laws within a reasonable period of time to make repeat violent offenders serve at least 85 percent of their sentences and remain in jail while awaiting trial.

In contrast, the Democratic crime bill pending in the House does not require the states to make these changes to get the grant money. And it offers a paltry $3 billion to build the prisons, which does not come close to doing the job.

The same Democratic House crime bill throws more than $8 billion into loosely worded grant programs for "root causes" or prevention programs like midnight basketball.

We all recognize the need to address the underlying causes of crime with new welfare reform legislation, early intervention programs for juveniles and the like. But to squander scarce federal resources on a grab bag of untested prevention programs instead of spending the money necessary to keep violent criminals locked up in jail is irresponsible.

In addition to keeping violent criminals locked up and sending a strong deterrent message, any crime bill passed this year in Congress should:

- Stop the endless appeals of death row inmates;
- Provide a good faith exception to the exclusionary rule which bars search and seizure evidence on technical grounds from many trials;
- Change laws to expedite deportation of deportable criminal aliens who account for as much as 25 percent of inmates in our prison systems;

— Double the sentences of those who commit violent crimes against children and the elderly and establish tough minimum mandatory sentences for those who commit crimes with firearms.

The pending House Democratic crime bill does none of this. Republicans were denied the opportunity to offer amendments to address many of these problems by the Democratic leadership through the Rules Committee.

In fact, the pending crime bill before the House contains provisions that virtually assure that no death penalty is ever again carried out in this country by giving death row inmates even more appeal opportunities than they presently have and by throwing roadblocks in the path of prosecutors seeking the death penalty.

Ironically, this is done in the name of reform to stop the endless appeals of death row inmates and prevent alleged racial discrimination. It is this type of clever manipulation by liberals who control the process that has kept Congress hamstrung for years.

Since the crime bill has been on the House floor, Republicans have been heartened by their success in passing a drug kingpin death penalty to stop those who traffic in extremely large quantities of narcotics and passing the necessary procedures to restore the death penalty for many federal crimes.

Should this preliminary success carry over into other areas of the crime bill, a solid bipartisan bill may yet emerge from the House. But by preventing many key Republican amendments to be offered, Democrats have assured that whatever is produced will be incomplete and inadequate.

The present crime legislation before the House can be likened to taking medicine for two days when your doctor has prescribed it for two weeks. It improves matters a little, but the disease is not cured and the symptoms return and eventually get worse. Something good may come from the current crime debate, but it is unlikely to be enough.

Rep. McCollum, R-Fla., is chairman of the House Republican Leadership Task Force on Crime.

Counterpoint

Crime bill - Democratic view

By Rep. JACK BROOKS
For Scripps Howard News Service

The scourge of violent and drug related crime has plagued America for far too long. President Clinton and the Democrats in Congress share with the American people the conviction that passage of a comprehensive crime bill is a top domestic priority.

To citizens who fear for their safety in the workplace, at home, in the neighborhood, crime is surely not comprehended as a Democratic or Republican issue — but unfortunately, some Republicans seem to harbor the misguided and nostalgic belief that crime is somehow "their issue" and that the Democrats have now stolen the golden chalice.

That is not only a fallacious view, but it also does nothing to break the Republican gridlock pattern affecting policy making at the national level.

What the House crime bill does is to break the rigid mold of past efforts and create a new prototype for how to approach the daunting task of effectively combating and punishing crime now, while taking solid steps to prevent it in the future.

This balance between hard-nosed punishment and forward-looking prevention is the only way to go if we are to get serious and realistic about the problem.

Finally, unlike past congressional efforts, which sought to federalize every crime under the sun and displace states and localities from their primary role under our Constitution in fighting crime, the House crime bill carves out a crucial support role for the federal government in the form of $15 billion in financial assistance to aid our local states and towns in hiring their own police and building their own prisons based on the specific needs of the community.

This is not the approach of the Republican effort, which is to set up an intricate set of bureaucratic hurdles before a dime to build a single prison cell can go to the states.

Because the House crime bill is both smart and tough, Republicans have had no recourse but to trot out their tired slogan from the '80s that the crime legislation coddles criminals.

But does it stand up to close scrutiny? Not this time — and not this bill.

The facts are that the bill imposes the death penalty for more than 60 federal crimes — including murder for hire and the killing of a federal law enforcement officer. It overhauls the habeas corpus process to limit appeals of prisoners on death row to a single appeal filed within a 12-month period, while the Republican approach is to keep the status quo of endless appeals.

The facts are that the "three strikes and you're out" provisions of the bill, which President Clinton called for in his State of the Union address, mandate life imprisonment for anyone convicted of a third violent felony in federal court.

The facts are that the bill levies stiff penalties against child pornographers and against those who sexually abuse children.

The facts are that when the bill finally passes the House, there will be more than $10 billion available to help states build the prisons needed to keep repeat violent offenders off the streets, as well as $3.5 billion to put 50,000 new cops on the beat in cities and towns all across the nation.

While cracking down on hardened criminals, the Democratic crime bill also reflects the growing consensus that prudent and well-targeted investment in crime prevention and rehabilitation efforts is a cost-effective use of our tax dollars.

For example, the bill provides grants to develop innovative alternative punishments — such as military-style boot camps and victim restitution programs — for young, first-time non-violent offenders and it authorizes financial assistance aimed at curbing juvenile gangs and the use and sale of illegal drugs by our young people, as well as drug treatment programs for state and federal prisoners.

In football, if you are not moving forward, you can always punt. The legislative equivalent of punting in Congress is to cry foul on the procedures used in voting on the crime bill.

Some Republicans have complained that since not every conceivable amendment can be considered on the House floor, the majority has somehow short-circuited the legislative process.

The facts are that a total of 68 amendments — touching on every major plank of the bill — will be debated for 20 hours or more over several weeks.

In my book, that hardly amounts to cutting corners. While some cynics may prefer to delay the process for partisan political advantage, Democrats are committed to passing this bill, resolving differences between the House and Senate-passed bills and getting a comprehensive crime package to the president's desk for his signature this spring.

Let's get the bill enacted.
Rep. Brooks, D-Texas, is chairman of the House Judiciary Committee.

Let's tell them up on Capital Hill how to spend our money

Tax time, tax time, dear ol' maddening tax time ...

The time to pay those oh so wonderful federal taxes has come and went. Another year of paying the government money so it can operate, supposedly doing things we really would like to see happen.

Know what would be nice about paying taxes, if there is actually anything nice about paying the burden? Getting to earmark where your money is spent, kind of like you get to do if you want $3 to go to the campaign fund.

What would be needed is a list of all things the government spends money on from bailing out failed S&Ls to welfare to defense. All new and pending legislation would have to be included because our money is going to be used to fund that also. So, at the beginning of each year, when the accountants at work start deducting your contribution to the government, you would get this list. At that time, you could check off all the things you would want to spend money on and in what amount you wish to contribute to that particular cause.

For example, say you wanted $50 to go to pay for Health Care Reform each time taxes are deducted from your wages. All you would have to do is check the appropriate box and fill in the amount.

One side effect, given the way the government operates, would be the creation of another bureaucracy to compile the list of where the money is to go and figure out the amounts. Of course, the office of the budget could do this, but it's government we're talking about here.

Fairly cool thought - actually getting your tax dollars spent the way you want them spent.

I can't see it happening though. Our representatives really wouldn't like being told how to spend our money plus it would take too much control away from them.

But, that's what they're up there for in the first place, to represent our interest and spend our money wisely, right?

Tornado rips Crosby

One killed, 16 injured; residents begin cleanup

The Associated Press
CROSBY — Under cloudy skies, the cleanup resumed Saturday in a northeast Harris County community torn apart by a spring tornado that killed one woman and injured at least 16 other people.

It's bad. It looks like a lumber yard gone awry," said Crosby resident Billie Holloway, who went to the stricken area Saturday. The twister pounded an area just east of Lake Houston near Crosby, causing the most damage in the Indian Shores subdivision and Heathergate, a neighborhood made up mostly of mobile homes.

About 30 church members gathered in the parking lot Friday night for a prayer service. "Let us give thanks for us and our families. God will bring some good out of this," associate Pastor Robert Williams said.

More questions than answers

Chopper tragedy hard to comprehend

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The more the Pentagon has disclosed about the downing of two American helicopters by two U.S. jet fighters over Iraq, the harder it has become to understand how the tragedy could have happened.

The nation's top military officer told reporters Friday that the fighter pilots who mistook the Army Black Hawk helicopters for Iraqi choppers used an electronic signaling system to check whether they were friend or foe but got no response.

That disclosure by Army Gen. John Shalikashvili, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, did not necessarily exonerate the pilots of responsibility for the accident Thursday, in which all 26 men and women aboard the helicopters were killed.

In fact, it raised additional questions. Why didn't the F-15 pilots receive the expected response from the signaling system aboard the helicopters? A response indicating that the Black Hawks were "friendly" should have been automatic.

And, in the absence of a response from the helicopters, why wouldn't the F-15 pilots have taken additional steps — such as attempting to contact them by radio — especially in light of the fact the F-15s knew U.S. choppers were operating in that area?

Shalikashvili also said the codes and other necessary settings for the electronic "friend or foe" identification systems used by U.S. and allied aircraft "were in fact correctly spelled out" to all involved before the Black Hawks started their flight.

All involved also had been told which radio frequencies to use, the general said.

Defense Secretary William Perry said all U.S. and allied fighter patrols of the "no-fly" zone set up in northern Iraq to protect the Kurdish minority from Iraqi attack were suspended Friday to review safety procedures. He said they would resume flying today.

AWACS radar control planes continued to fly Friday, keeping a lookout for possible Iraqi violators of the zone, officials said. They could call on allied fighters in the area if they

Two of 26 killed are identified

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — U.S. military officials were headed to Turkey to attend a memorial service for the 26 people killed when two U.S. Army helicopters were shot down by U.S. Air Force jets over Iraq, the Defense Department announced Saturday.

Deputy Defense Secretary John M. Deutch and Admiral William A. Owens, vice chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, were to represent the Defense Department at the service Sunday at Incirlik Air Base in Turkey.

As of late Saturday, only two victims of the air disaster had officially been identified — a State Department employee once cited for heroism and an Air Force lieutenant.

The families of other victims were coming forward to identify their relatives.

The Defense Department said Friday that 2nd Lt. Laura Ashley Piper was aboard one of the two Army Black Hawk helicopters shot down by two U.S. Air Force F-15 jets north of Irbil, Iraq.

The State Department issued a statement Friday confirming the identity of Barbara L. Schell, a member of its foreign service since 1966.

spotted suspicious flights, the officials said.

The victims' remains were being flown from an air base in Turkey to Rhein Main Air Base in Germany for formal identification and eventual return to their respective nations. They include 15 Americans, three Turkish officers, two British officers and one French officer, plus five Kurds.

The Pentagon said Air Force 2nd Lt. Laura Ashley Piper, 25, of Venice, Fla., was among the 15

She was foreign policy adviser to the general in command of the military and relief mission to protect the Iraqi Kurds.

Ms. Piper, 25, was assigned to the 7454th Tactical Intelligence Squadron at Ramstein Air Base in Germany.

Schell had been cited for heroism in helping Americans evacuated from Iran when U.S. diplomats were being held hostage there, said department spokesman Michael

The "friend or foe" identification system normally works automatically if activated. A Kurdish official in Turkey identified two other victims as Army Col. Jerry Thompson, the outgoing commander of the Military Coordination Center in Zakho, northern Iraq, and Army Col. Richard A. Mulhern, his replacement.

The center coordinates the humanitarian mission on behalf of Kurds under allied protection in northern Iraq and maintains contacts with Iraqi Kurdish leaders.

Shalikashvili said one of the aims of the investigation was to determine why no proper reply was received by the F-15s.

Officials have said the pilots reported that from visual inspection of the helicopters they believed they were Iraqi aircraft. It was not clear whether the fighter pilots asked the AWACS for confirmation or for permission to fire.

Shalikashvili said procedures used in allied operations over northern Iraq did not require the pilots to ask the AWACS for permission to fire.

Residents have mixed feelings about arrest

GLENDALE, Ore. (AP) — Three years ago, when deputy sheriff Larry Gibson said his 2-year-old son had disappeared, neighbors in this tiny town turned out by the hundreds to search the timbered hills.

Now that police finally have made an arrest in the case, there is a mixed sense of relief and betrayal among Glendale's 800 residents — because Gibson was the one arrested.

"With all the people that searched for him, they'd better keep (Gibson) locked up," Dominic Prielipp, who looked for Tommy for three days, said Friday.

Gibson, 33, was arrested Thursday at his grandmother's house in Townsend, Mont. He waived extradition and is expected in nearby Roseburg as early as Monday to face charges of murder and murder by abuse.

Assistant District Attorney Theodore D. Zacher refused to say what testimony or evidence led to Gibson's arrest.

But it made sense to people who had been suspicious ever since Gibson sat in his trailer drinking coffee while his neighbors searched woods and creek bottoms for his son.

"If your child was missing, would you go to work?" asked Melvin Wilborn, who joined searchers trudging through mud and snow in hopes of finding a sign of the boy. "He was getting ready to go to work."

Gorazde on brink of being captured

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — The Muslim enclave of Gorazde tottered on the brink of capture by Bosnian Serbs who held strategic points around the U.N.-declared safe haven after a day of heavy attacks.

The United Nations and NATO

appeared powerless to stop them.

Bosnian Prime Minister Haris Silajdzic predicted a bloodbath and criticized the United Nations for not ordering new air strikes. He said there was street fighting as Gorazde's defenders ran low on ammunition.

"U.N. decision-makers are directly responsible for people who are dead and those that will be killed tonight and tomorrow," he said in an interview with Cable News Network.

The U.N. Security Council issued a nonbinding statement Friday night, condemning the violence around Gorazde. But the world body did not mention punitive action or identify the Serbs as attackers.

The Serbs on Friday seized positions that had been held by the Muslim-led Bosnian army, which withdrew closer to Gorazde's center, U.N. sources in New York said.

President outlines steps to get rid of firearms

WASHINGTON (AP) — Announcing a new policy to help public housing residents "take back their homes" without violating the Constitution, President Clinton said today that tenants will be asked to allow police to conduct sweep searches for guns.

Clinton said his administration also will encourage "more weapons frisks of suspicious persons."

In his weekly radio address, the president outlined steps to rid public housing of firearms despite the ruling of a federal court in Chicago that searches conducted without legal search warrants violate constitutional protections against unwarranted search and seizure.

Clinton, frustrated by this setback to get rid of drugs, guns and crime in public housing, had assigned Attorney General Janet Reno and Housing Secretary Henry Cisneros "to devise a constitutional, effective way to protect the residents of America's public housing communities."

List for radioactive waste disposal site narrowed to 26

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Energy Department has narrowed its list of possible places to set up a burial ground for low-level radioactive and hazardous waste.

After examining all 49 sites that produce low-level mixed waste — containing both radioactive and hazardous materials — 26 remain in contention, department spokesman Brad Bugger said Friday.

Pantex Plant is the only Texas site in contention.

In the first round of the study, a department committee asked three questions about each potential burial site:

- Is it at least 61 meters from an active fault?
- Is it outside a 100-year flood plain?
- Is a 100-meter buffer zone available around the disposal site?

The answers to those three questions removed 23 sites from con-tion. Next, the department will confer with the National Governors' Association, which is representing state governments in determining how to choose one or more low-level waste graveyards for the nation.

"We are doing this in cooperation with the states," Bugger said. "This isn't just a DOE attempt to find a disposal site."

The governors' group and the federal government have not yet determined how many sites will be needed to dispose permanently of more than 2 million pounds of low-level mixed waste generated each year by the Energy Department.

However, Bugger said the governors and the department are working toward a December 1995 goal for proposing "a final disposal strategy."

"It could be a regional approach; it could be several sites; it could be just one," he said.

In the meantime, the department has agreed to spend up to $23 million this year to dispose of some of the low-level mixed waste from weapons plant cleanups. Envirocare of Utah Inc. will store the wastes under a contract that could be extended to as much as five years and $350 million.

Bugger said he did not know how the Utah disposal capacity might influence decisions about new waste disposal sites.

Because of limits on the amount of radioactivity of the waste shipped under the new contract, "we're uncertain how much of DOE's mixed waste will be disposed of by Envirocare," he said.

Does Howard have enough to reach the grand junction?

A lot of people around Jack Barber Field have mentioned a trip to Colorado next month.

The Howard College baseball team entered the weekend ranked ninth in the national junior college polls. The Hawks (38-5) are sitting pretty in the race for the Western Junior College Athletic Conference title, and they are a lock to qualify for the state tournament.

Winning the state tournament would send the Hawks to Grand Junction, Colo., for the national championship tournament.

Looking at Howard's monstrous offensive statistics, it's easy to say 'Yea, this team is awesome! It's going to Colorado, no doubt about it.' Looking at the pitching numbers does little to change your mind.

Then you remember that three of Howard's losses were to lowly Ranger Junior College, a team with a losing record. Then you look at the fielding percentages for the Hawks. You start thinking, 'Well, on second thought, this team might be lucky to win Region V.'

Howard was batting .359 as a team going into this weekend's series at Frank Phillips College. Three starters - third baseman Kevin Thompson, right fielder Jeff Orth and shortstop Freddy Rodriguez - are batting over the .400 mark, and Rodriguez bats ninth in the order. All starters are over .300 except first baseman Derek Thompson - and he's at .299.

The Hawks had 47 homers in their first 43 games, and they've scored 398 runs - an average of 9.26 runs per game.

The stat sheet gets soggy as you continue to drool over Howard's offense. The Hawks have four players on the bench - Dave Bies, Chris Almendarez, Ryan Merritt and Eric Garcia - batting .353 or higher. Merritt is first off the bench, usually as a pinch-runner for catcher Chad Morford, and he has stolen 22 bases in 26 attempts.

That takes you to the side of the sheet that's even more impressive than Howard's hitting.

Howard has stolen 126 bases in 146 attempts - that a success rate of 86 percent. Howard has stolen 2.93 bases per game, and its 126 steals is already a Howard single-season record, breaking the 1990 mark of 108.

Leadoff hitter Troy May, who broke Howard's all-time stolen base record in the first series of the season, has 34 steals in 39 attempts to up his career total to 78 steals.

Orth's eight dingers ties him for the team lead with second baseman and No. 3 hitter Sergio Martinez, who is hitting .346 with 54 RBIs.

Then there's the pitching. John Major went into the weekend 8-0 with an ERA of 2.59 - a good number at any level but microscopic in the aluminum-bat world of junior college baseball. Kelly Jones (6-0, 4.33) gives the Hawks a second undefeated starter, and opponents are hitting just .219 against freshman Brian Thompson (7-1, 4.26).

The outfield has been adequate defensively, but the infield has been erratic. The left side - Kevin Thompson and Rodriguez - display fielding percentages of .861 and .879, respectively. Thompson and Rodriguez have the range, and they've made some spectacular plays look easy. Occasionally, however, they make easy plays look difficult.

Howard has every reason to think it can make it to Grand Junction, and no team in the traditionally tough WJAC is going to stop them. Odessa is the only team near Howard's level, but the Wranglers' offense doesn't compare to Howard's.

That phrase keeps floating to mind: Good pitching beats good hitting. If that's true, Howard will have to rely on pitching and defense to reach Grand Junction.

Howard may have enough of both, but the defense needs to come around.

Fast.

District 3-4A Track Championships

Lake View edges BSHS in final race

Lake View needs final relay to win third boys' title in five seasons

By DAVE HARGRAVE
Sports Editor

ANDREWS - The boys' half of the District 3-4A championship track meet finished like it should have Friday.

Two traditional powers, one race to decide the title, no excuses.

With only the 1,600-meter (mile) relay remaining, Lake View's boys held a one-point edge over defending champion Big Spring, 146-145. The team that finished ahead of the other would wear the 1994 district championship crown.

Lake View's foursome of Jeremy Bartz, Rudy Robledo, David Taylor and Terrance Norris had more speed than Big Spring's Justin Taylor, Dustin Waters, Joe Franklin and Randy Farr. The Chiefs beat the Steers by nearly two seconds and claimed the title, holding 166 points to Big Spring's 161.

Bartz and Robledo motored at the start and gave Lake View a large lead. Franklin gained ground on the third leg, however, and the Steers were within 5 meters of the lead on the final exchange.

That's when Norris kicked it in. Norris, the defending state champion in the 400, widened the gap between him and Farr from the start of the race. Please see STEERS, page A8

Lady Steers finish in fourth place; send three girls to regional meet

By DAVE HARGRAVE
Sports Editor

ANDREWS - The youth of the Big Spring Lady Steers is starting to get old.

Big Spring's chances of its fourth District 3-4A title in five years were recognized as slim going into Friday's district meet in Andrews. True to those indications, the Lady Steers finished fourth with 93 points, well behind champion Lake View's 177.

Complete Results, page A10

The Lady Steers simply are too young and inexperienced to compete for any titles - that's been written here more than once. The Lady Steers gained some experience Friday, however, and considering how well they performed Friday with more than a few girls running in their first district meet, that youth is becoming a blessing rather than a curse.

"I had us penciled in for 92 points, and we got 93," said Big Spring coach Jay Kennedy. "We got some points in places I didn't think we would, but it was about what I expected. We were a little bit disappointed we didn't get a relay out of district. We were hoping to get at least one relay out, but other than that, I think the kids worked hard.

"Those young kids just don't understand what's on the line. You know, when our mile relay finished - they ran hard, and they were excited, but it didn't crush them like it crushed our boys. And that's what you have to have, that type of competitive fire, and that's what we're trying to build on."

One young runner Kennedy can build some of his team on for next year is freshman Latisha Hurrington, perhaps the leader of the youth movement.

Hurrington won the 400-meter run in 1:02.40. BSHS senior Pauline DelBosque was right behind her at 1:03.82, giving the Lady Steers two regional qualifiers in the 400.

The top two individuals in each event go to regionals, which are two weekends away in San Angelo. Big Spring's other regional qualifier was junior Kathy Smith, who leaped 15 feet, 8 1/4 inches to take second place in the long jump.

Big Spring missed qualifying in the 800 relay by just one-hundredth of a second. Lake View won the event in 1:48.82, Fort Stockton was second at 1:50.11 and the Big Spring foursome of Latoshia Wilbert, Kandi Cline, Charlotte Bumbulis and Smith was third at 1:50.12.

District 6-2A Track Championships

Outsiders take points; Lady Buffs drop baton

By STEVE REAGAN

STANTON - Despite a bungled handoff, things went pretty much to form at the District 6-2A track meet Friday in Stanton.

District coaches expected Wall to dominate the girls' division, and that happened. The coaches also expected Eldorado and Ozona to battle for the boys' crown. Ditto.

The only surprise at the meet came in the girls' division, where a missed handoff on the first leg of the 400-meter relay prevented Stanton from repeating last year's accomplishment of qualifying all three relays for the state meet.

But, after proving that they weren't perfect, the Stanton quartet of Sande Bundas, Lupe Chapa, Laura Herm and Kristen Wyckoff proved they were still close by running season-best times in winning both the 800 and 1,600 relays to qualify for the regional 2A meet. The regional is in two weeks in Abilene.

Those two wins were the only ones posted by area teams at the meet, which was dominated by Wall on the girls' side and Eldorado and Ozona in the boys' division.

Coahoma's Bucky Williams tries his hand at the triple jump Friday in the preliminaries of the District 6-2A track meet in Stanton.

Related story, page A8

In the girls' competition, Ellen King placed first in the 100 and 200 dashes, the long jump and the triple jump to pace Wall to 165 points, outdistancing second-place Eldorado by almost 40 points.

Iraan was third with 100 points, while Stanton ended up tied for fourth with Ozona. Coahoma's girls finished seventh with 12 points.

In the high jump, Bundas jumped a personal-best 5 feet but was nosed out on the final jump of the day by Iraan's Angie Crawford, who cleared the bar at 5-2. Still, the jump was good enough to qualify Bundas for regionals.

BUNDAS

The top two individuals in each event qualify for regionals. Crawford also had a sterling meet, winning the 100 and 300 hurdles along with the high jump, as well as placing third in the long jump.

Just missing out on a spot at regionals was Stanton's Jennifer Adkins, who placed third in the 800 run with a time of 2:39.62. Also, Jody Brooks placed fourth in the shot put with a toss of 30 feet, 5 3/4 inches.

"She didn't run her best time," Stanton coach Frank Riney said of Adkins. "We were disappointed, but she's just a sophomore, and she'll continue to improve. I think she'll be a regional performer next year."

Coahoma's girls, plagued by a lack of numbers and inexperience, had their brightest moment in the 400 relay, when Kori Caffey, Julie Hernandez, Kara Hunsaker and Shaundra Walker teamed to finish fourth in a time of 55.84.

Other Coahoma finishes included Walker placing fifth in the 200 dash (28.47) and Hernandez, Caffey, Tammy Bennett and Stephanie Stone placing sixth in the 800 relay (2:01.07).

"We struggled," Coahoma coach Mike Conley admitted. "But I thought they competed well and did the best they could. You can't ask for anything more than that."

In the boys' competition, Eldorado used its superior speed in the sprint events to outdistance Ozona for team honors. Eldorado scored 154 points, while Ozona had 128 points. Iraan was fourth, while Stanton finished fifth and Coahoma sixth.

The area's lone regional qualifier was Stanton's Cody Hirt, who placed second in the 400 dash in a time of 52.43. Stanton's 1,600 relay team of Francisco Garcia, Eric Martel, Sam Ellis and Hirt barely missed a regional berth, finishing third in a time of 3:35.55. Martel also was third in the 200 dash, finishing in a time of 22.43.

Also placing third for Stanton was Sam Ellis, who finished the 300 hurdles in a time of 42.48.

The magic number for the Coahoma Bulldogs was four, as the team had several fourth-place finishes.

Mario Martinez finished fourth in the shot put with a toss of 41-3 1/2, while Eric McMillian placed likewise in the 400 dash, coming in at 53.35 seconds. Also coming fourth was the 400 relay team of McMillian, Keith Boyd, Marshall Wright and Freddy Olivas.

Other Coahoma finishes Friday included Tim Phillips, fifth in the 1,600 run (5:01.38), Ronnie Grant, sixth in the long jump (19-0 1/2) and the 1,600 relay team, sixth with a time of 3:44.12.

The Bulldogs did have a bright spot in the boys' junior varsity division, finishing second behind Iraan in the team competition.

Results from the meet can be found in SportsExtra, page A10.

Two local skaters will get a good idea how they stack up against the nation's best when they travel to the Olympic Training Center in two weeks.

Sarah Fannin and Kelly Gressett, members of the local West Texas Storms rollerskating team (formerly the SK8 Jammerz), will be making the trip to Colorado Springs, Colo., the week of April 26.

Storms coach David Mills said the week-long training session automatically qualifies Gressett to try out for the United States team that competes on the world circuit. Fannin is qualified to try out for the junior world team.

Being on the world team means just what it implies. Members compete in meets around the globe, including stops in Europe and Australia, Mills said.

"This is not just a local deal, this is a world-wide competition," he said. "It's been going on in Europe for a long time, and is just now catching on over here."

But to get on the team, they have to go to the center.

"The center only accepts 60 kids," he said. "They can, by placing at regional (competition), automatically qualify for tryouts, but they have to go the Olympic Center to try out for the world team."

Both have won more than their share of hardware. Gressett has won more than 30 trophies in rollerskating competition and won two gold medals in last year's Junior Olympics regional competition. Fannin also claimed two golds at that event.

With several hundred skaters vying for spots on the world teams, Mills admits it will take a supreme effort from his skaters. But if they don't make it, it won't be for lack of effort.

Both girls train four or five hours a day, five days a week.

Skating at the Olympic Center will give the girls their first taste of outdoor velodrome skating.

Gressett intends to go to Colorado Springs next month to try out for the world team. Mills said it is uncertain if Fannin will try out for the junior team.

Lady Buff 400 relay team searches for answers

By STEVE REAGAN
Sports Editor

STANTON - It was a self-fulfilling prophesy of the worst kind. If there was anything approaching a mortal lock in the girls division of Friday District 6-2A track meet, it was that Stanton's three relays - composed of Lupe Chapa, Laura Herm, Sande Bundas and Kristen Wyckoff - would dominate the field. The quartet had qualified all three relays for the state meet last year, and appeared to be well on their way to repeating that accomplishment this season. But as the group lined up for its first event, the 400-meter relay, coach Frank Riney had a feeling... "I had kind of a premonition," he said. "I thought that it had been a long, long time since we had mis-handled the baton." And Herm had a feeling...

"I had a feeling something was going to happen," she said. "Everybody up in the stands was talking about how we hadn't had any trouble with the handoff all year. All we had to do was get it around the track to win." It didn't quite work out that way. At the end of the first leg, Wyckoff and Bundas mistimed their hand-off, and, as the two became entangled, the baton dropped to the ground, disqualifying Stanton from the event. "It just all went kind of fast," Wyckoff said. "I'm not really sure what happened. I think Sande took off too soon."

HERM

Just like that, dreams of a triple-threat appearance at the state meet had turned to dust. Needless to say, the team was disheartened by the turn of events. "We were real disappointed," Herm said. "That's the relay we've won in every year since we were freshmen. We were disappointed, but the same thing happened at state (last year in the 800 relay) and we overcame that - and that was more disappointing than this one." The quartet still had two events left, the 800 and 1,600 relays, in which to qualify for the regionals. Putting their disappointment behind them, Bundas, Wyckoff, Chapa and Herm ran season-best times to win both events, punching their tickets to the regional round. "We just told (Bundas and Wyckoff) that it wasn't their fault, and we weren't mad at them or anything," Herm said. "It was a terrible thing, but it could have happened to me or Lupe." "We finally had a screw-up," Wyckoff said. "If we were going to make it to regionals, we were going to have to get together... We were really ready to get out there and show them what we could do." The team's times in the last two events - 1:45.56 in the 800 relay and 4:08.17 in the 1,600 relay - are among the state's best in 2A, and put the group in good position for a repeat trip to Austin. "You look at it, and we've gone three years and missed only one handoff, and they're not that uncommon," Riney said. "So I guess we were overdue. It was just a shame it had to happen at the district meet. Those things just happen, but our time came up at the wrong time."

Big Spring defeat Pecos in baseball

PECOS - The Big Spring Steers defeated Pecos 6-5 Saturday afternoon on the road. The win pushed Big Spring to 16-5 overall, 5-2 in district, and sets up a first-place showdown Tuesday at Steer Park. Big Spring will host Lake View (10-10, 4-1).

Forsan hurdler qualifies for regional PLAINES - Forsan's Laurie Light won the 100-meter hurdles and was second in the 300 hurdles at the district championship meet in Plains.

LIGHT

Light turned in a time of 16.84 seconds in the 100 and 47.93 in the 300. She will compete in the Levelland regional April 29. No Forsan boys qualified for regionals.

Big Spring Jazz win over Coahoma

The Big Spring Jazz, a club softball team, rallied from a 4-1 deficit to beat the Coahoma Bulldogettes 8-6 Thursday evening at the Roy Anderson softball complex. The Jazz scored four runs in the fifth inning and three in the sixth. In the fifth, Kerri Hall and Heather Spence hit two-run doubles. Coahoma led 6-5 in the bottom of the sixth, but Kathy Green walked and stole second to start a rally for the Jazz. Stefanie Kennedy doubled home Green to tie the game, and Kerri Hall hit another two-run double to put Big Spring ahead for good. For the Jazz, Heather James and Jackie Martinez split the pitching duties and combined for seven strikeouts. They allowed five hits. Coahoma pitcher Audra Bingham struck out nine batters and allowed seven hits. The Jazz improved to 4-5, while Coahoma fell to 5-9.

Big Spring golfers take third in district

SAN ANGELO - The Big Spring boys' golf team finished second in the final district round of the season Friday at Riverside Golf Club, but its finish wasn't enough to get them to the postseason.

The top two teams after the regular season's four rounds advance, and the Steers had fallen behind too far in the first three meets to land a playoff spot. The Steers finished the four-round set with 1,320 strokes, third behind champion Andrews (1,239) and runner-up Monahans (1,246).

A highlight for the Steers was Charlie Marmolejo, who tied for the individual lead Friday with a 76. Andrews' Marcus Mainord also shot a 76.

Big Spring trailed third-place Sweetwater by 20 strokes going into the final round, but the Steers caught the Mustangs. Andrews' Derrick Pursley had the top score for the four rounds combined - 298. Big Spring finishers were Marmolejo, Jake McCullough (79), Jimmy Cox (83), Pat Carter (84) and Ryan Williams (88). Big Spring's B team finished seventh in the district standings. Playing on the B team Friday were Ryan Hamby (84), Mike Balderach (88), Derek Hicks (92), David Emmerson (96) and Josh Palmer (97). Weldon Biggs (92) and Nick DeWaters (93) played as medalists for Big Spring. Only the top two medalists advance to the regional tournament.

Stanton hosts softball toumey

The eighth-annual Pop-Up Softball Tournament will be played Friday through Sunday in Stanton. Deadline to enter is Wednesday at 6 p.m. The entry fee is $100 per team. For more information, call Tommy Ramos (756-3332), Auggie Ramos (756-3470) or Orlando Esparza (686-8156).

Lady Steer golfers fall short of playoffs

FORT STOCKTON - The Big Spring girls' golf team had a chance to qualify for postseason action Saturday in the final District 3-4A round of the season, but teams from Andrews and Fort Stockton passed the Lady Steers.

The champion and runner-up teams earn playoff spots, and Big Spring held second place by two strokes going into Saturday's round. The Lady Steers didn't have their best day, however, and Andrews B took advantage to take second place. Fort Stockton claimed third, and Big Spring was fourth with a three-round total of 1,170 strokes. Andrews won the district championship, and Andrews B will enjoy the runner-up playoff spot. Jennifer Edgar and Stacey Hollar tied for top honors for the Lady Steers, each shooting a 92. Jennifer Broadrick turned in a 98, while Kristie Hale shot a 103. Jessica Sanchez shot a 109. Vanessa Billalba, playing as a medalist for Big Spring, shot a 106.

Howard sweeps Frank Phillips

The Howard College baseball team finished a three-game series against Frank Phillips College with a Saturday doubleheader in Borger. Howard won all three games - 7-5 Friday; 8-5 and 10-3 Saturday. The Hawks improved to 41-5 overall, 17-1 in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference.

Steers

final leg to the finish. Lake View's time was 3:21.70; Big Spring finished in 3:23.53.

The runner-up finish in the mile relay spoiled the Steers' strong outing and left Big Spring coach Randy Britton wondering what might have been.

"It really didn't come down to the last race, it came down to we couldn't run Lehebron Farr," Britton said, referring to the senior sprint star who sat out the district meet with a hamstring injury. "That's six points there; we get beat by five. He's a sure three points, I mean a sure third place in the 200 and probably the 400. But we did the best we could do."

The Steers had a slew of strong performances, starting with Justin Taylor. Taylor set district and school records in both the 110 hurdles (13.99) and 300 hurdles (38.15).

Drexel Owusu, returning to action after an injury, won the triple jump with a distance of 45 feet, 6 3/4 inches. Wes Hughes and Tyrone Banks shared the top distance in the high jump, 6-6, with Justin Brown of Lake View. Franklin just missed winning the 800 - Pecos' Willie Meta won in 1:56.34; Franklin was second at 1:56.80. Jason Roberts took second in the discus at 137.7.

However, the Steers came up empty in other events. Without Lehebron Farr, the Steers were unable to place anyone in the top three of the 400. Randy Farr took third in the 200 at 22.15, but had his older brother been there, two Farris might have reached the top three. As it was, the top two slots went to Lake View - Marcell Williams (21.74) and James Kennedy (21.91).

Lake View's Jerome Bryant won the 100 dash in 10.49, and Kennedy was runner-up at 10.60. Big Spring's Harvey Simpson was fourth at 10.65.

Lake View coach Nat Sawyer said: "I think us getting 36 points in the 100 and 200, and I don't know, I think Big Spring got probably less than 15. And of course the intermediates when they didn't 1-2-3 us. We felt like they'd 1-2-3 us there, but we got second and split their points - that helped a bunch."

Taylor, Tim Rigdon and Roger Eddington of Big Spring took the top three spots in the 300 hurdles at the Big Spring Relays April 9, but Lake View's boys weren't at that meet. Friday at Andrews, Lake View's Brad Martin and Marc Levens pushed

Taylor sets two district marks

By DAVE HARGRAVE
Sports Editor

ANDREWS - If Justin Taylor can cut his times at the regionals like he did Friday at the District 3-4A meet, get a marker and write 'State Champion' on his head.

Taylor, a senior who reached the state meet last season, set district and school records in the 110-meter hurdles and the 300 hurdles. He broke the all-important 14-second mark in the 110, turning in a 13.99, and cut more than a second off his personal best in the 300 with a time of 38.15. "That was a big surprise," said Taylor of the 300. "I came out of that curve, and I still had a lot left in me, so I just kicked everything in. In prelims, I ran about a 38.5, and I even let up at the end, I slowed down at the end just to come in."

TAYLOR

Taylor has said during the season that he needed to break the 14-second barrier in the 110 to have hopes of winning a medal at the UIL state meet. "It was totally fantastic, because now I know I'm ranked among the best in the state," Taylor said. Eddington and Rigdon out of the top three in the 110 hurdles. Levens and Monahans' Darrell Carnegay did the same in the 300 hurdles.

The Big Spring boys did win the junior varsity district championship at Andrews. Top finishers for Big Spring included: Todd McAdams - first in pole vault (10-0), first in 300 hurdles (45.8), second in 110 hurdles. Chris Cruz - first in triple jump (39-0). Chris Ochoa - first in 110 hurdles (15.6).

Big Spring also won the sprint and mile relays.

Ray Floyd, left, and Lee Trevino have a legendary chat on the 17th hole during third-round play of the PGA Seniors Championship. Floyd leads the tournament at 9-under-par, while Trevino is two shots back in second place. Dave Stockton, the 1993 Player of the Year on the senior tour, shared the lead with Floyd for much of the third round before faltering.

Floyd clings to two-stroke lead in PGA Seniors championship

By The Associated Press

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. — Mistakes will tell the tale, the three leaders agree, in Sunday's final round of the PGA Seniors Championship.

And, on the lakes and ponds and streams that loom on the back nine at the PGA National Golf Club, they'll be hard to avoid.

"That back nine, that's a very difficult nine holes of golf," leader Ray Floyd said Saturday after his hard-won round of 69 provided him with a two-shot lead at 207, 9-under par.

"I'm going to have to go out and play very well to have a chance to win," he said.

The odds are that he will, said his closest pursuer, Lee Trevino.

"Raymond is playing well, and he manages a golf course as well as anybody," Trevino said. "Raymond won't make any mistakes."

Trevino did, however. He took two to get out of a fairway bunker on the 14th hole, took a double bogey and let the lead escape him with a 70 that could have — probably should have — been much better.

"I'm making enough birdies to win, but I'm not keeping enough of them," he said after completing 54 holes at 209.

Dave Stockton, the 1993 Senior Player of the Year, also had a share of the lead at one point during the third round, but also made a double bogey and was third at 210 after a round of 71.

He will be in the final threesome with Trevino and Floyd in Sunday's chase for a $115,000 first prize and predicted "the winner will come from the last group."

His challenge, he said, is to "make six birdies and keep my golf ball dry."

Dale Douglass, who lost a playoff to Floyd two weeks ago in the seniors' first major championship of the year, the Tradition at Desert Mountain, was next at 70-211.

Jim Colbert, at 74-213, was the only other within six shots of the leader after 54 holes of play. Jack Nicklaus, who carded a 72, was tied at 214 with Chi Chi Rodriguez and Bob Charles.

Floyd holed a 50-foot bunker shot for a birdie on the opening hole, birdied the fourth from 8 feet and reached the turn in 34.

He chipped close for birdie-4 on the 10th, then had to drop a 20-footer for bogey after hitting an 8-iron into the water on the 11th.

He scored with an 8-iron putt on the 15th, one-putted for par on the next two holes and parred the last conventionally.

"I didn't play as well as I'd like to have," he said. "But the bottom line is good, and I like being in the lead."

Trevino birdied five times in a stretch of six holes on the front and had the lead alone at the turn.

"Man, it looked like I was gone," he said.

But he bogeyed the 13th after missing the green, then had that double-bogey lapse from the fairway bunker on the 14th.

"Too much club," he said. "I tried to play a 5-iron and got the lip of the bunker. Should have played the 8."

Sonics roar toward playoffs; Spurs lose

By The Associated Press

SEATTLE — The Seattle SuperSonics are now officially among the NBA's elite teams and coach George Karl likes the way the league's history book reads.

"There's a nice history to winning 60 games," Karl said after Seattle posted its NBA-best 60th victory Saturday, 100-97 over Houston.

"Only 35 teams have ever done it," Karl added. "To do it against Houston is even more important."

Shawn Kemp had 22 points and 17 rebounds and Gary Payton added 21 points as the Sonics became the 36th team in league history to win as many as 60 games in a season. They won their fifth in a row and 14th out of 15.

Of the 35 clubs to have won 60 games, 17 went on to win the NBA championship in the playoffs. The 1992 Chicago Bulls were the last team to win 60 games (67) and then win the NBA title.

The Sonics moved within one victory — or a Houston loss — to getting home-court advantage throughout the NBA's upcoming playoffs. They have four regular-season games left. Houston plays at Portland on Sunday.

"Playing against great players and great teams is challenging and fun," Kemp said. "It's no fun playing the Sacramento of the league."

Hakeem Olajuwon scored 31 points and Vernon Maxwell 30 for the Rockets, who have 56 wins and the league's second-best record. Houston had a six-game winning streak broken.

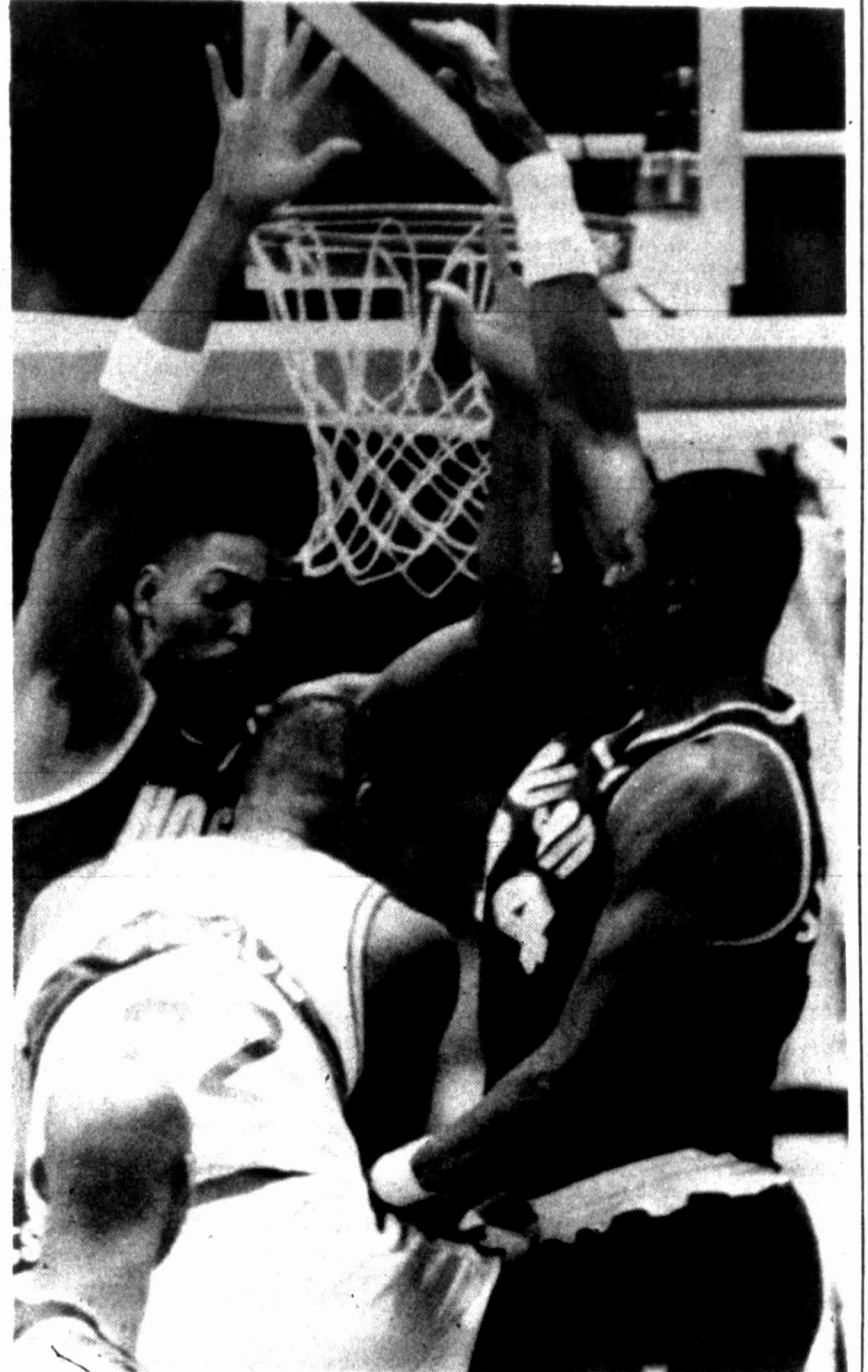

Vincent Askew clinched the Sonics' second victory in four games against the Rockets this season with two free throws with 10.6 seconds left. That gave Seattle a 100-97 lead. Otis Thorpe had popped in a 5-footer on an offensive rebound for Houston with 16.9 seconds to go.

Suns 96, Spurs 94

SAN ANTONIO — Kevin Johnson and A.C. Green combined for Phoenix's last 13 points, leading the Suns to a 96-94 victory over San Antonio on Saturday.

Green, who scored 19 of his 23 points in the second half, gave the Suns the lead for good with a three-point play with 1:38 left. Johnson assisted on Green's last three baskets.

David Robinson made one of two foul shots with 38.5 seconds left to pull the Spurs within 96-94.

Rickie Pierce (22) of the Seattle SuperSonics looks to pass as his path is blocked by Houston's Robert Horry, left, and Hakeem Olajuwon.

San Antonio had two chances to tie the game in the final seven seconds. But Negele Knight missed a 3-pointer with 4.1 seconds left and Willie Anderson's reverse layup rimmed out at the buzzer.

Charles Barkley led Phoenix with 26 points and Johnson added 16 points and 16 assists.

Robinson had 39 points, 15 rebounds and seven assists. Knight added 13 points, Dale Ellis 11 and Dennis Rodman seven points and 21 rebounds.

The victory pulled Phoenix within one-half game of the Spurs for third place in the NBA's Western Division. Should the teams finish in a tie, Phoenix would gain the position by virtue of winning three of four games in the season series.

Phoenix has won three straight and nine of 12, while San Antonio has lost three straight and six of seven.

The Alamodome crowd of 35,845 was second-largest in franchise history.

Barkley and Robinson each scored 14 points in the first quarter as San Antonio led 30-28.

The Spurs closed the second quarter with a 12-4 run and led 51-47 at halftime advantage. Robinson scored 26 points on 12-of-15 shooting, scoring 12 of San Antonio's final 14 points of the half.

Baseball has survived it all in 125 years

By The Associated Press

Happy birthday, professional baseball. For 125 years old, you still look pretty good.

Baseball has always been obsessed with its origins, trying to figure out just where this sometimes confounding, often compelling activity began. The exact beginnings are less clear than the fact that Sunday is the 125th anniversary of the first game played by the Cincinnati Red Stockings, a group of mercenaries assembled for the express purpose of playing baseball and — get this — being paid for it.

In 1869, this was revolutionary stuff.

Baseball's investigation into its roots has determined that as long ago as 1845, a form of the game was being played, mostly in the East. It also dispelled the romantic notion that Abner Doubleday dreamt up the game in bucolic Cooperstown, N.Y. "The only thing Doubleday ever started," Branch Rickey once blustered, noting the union general's presence at Fort Sumter, S.C. in 1861, "was the Civil War." By 1869, when Doubleday and his pals were done with the war, there were baseball teams all over the country. They played not for money, you understand. Just for fun.

Quaint idea, huh?

One day, a team from Washington defeated a team from Cincinnati, so outraging the losing city that it decided to do something about it. Cincinnati would gather better players, the best players, so as not to have to suffer this indignity again. And to acquire those players, Cincinnati would — shhh, not so loud — pay them.

This, then, would be the start of professional baseball, baseball played not only for the love of the game but for cold, hard cash. Not a lot of it, you understand. But this was 1869.

The construction of the Red Stockings began at shortstop, where George Wright was imported from New Jersey and paid the princely sum of $1,400 to relocate to Ohio. That was $200 more than the proprietors of the team paid George's brother, Harry, a jeweler by trade, to manage the team. What's more, for his $1,200, Harry Wright also had to play center field, thus saving the penurious but clever owners an extra salary.

Was George Wright worth all that money? Well, he did hit 49 home runs in 56 games that first season. And Harry? He merely managed a perfect season, 65 wins and one tie, and introduced an important fashion statement for the players — knickerbockers.

The Red Stockings' first baseman was Charlie Gould, the only player who really came from Cincinnati. Charley Sweasy played second base; Fred Waterman, third; Doug Allison, catcher; Andy Leonard, left field; Cal McVey, right field.

Cincinnati's pitcher — there was no such thing as a staff — was Asa Brainard, who won 56 games. The other nine victories were spread among the rest of the team, pitching being less of a specialty in those days. Brainard's dominance was so great that eventually other pitchers who performed at his level were named after him. They would forever more be known as their team's ace.

Once the team was assembled, it naturally needed some practice. So on April 17, 1869, 125 years ago Sunday, the Red Stockings took the field for the first time, playing a "Picked Nine" of local Cincinnati players. Wright's team prevailed 24-15 — not exactly a pitcher's duel.

There would be six more exhibition games and then the Red Stockings were off on their first year's tour of America. Their scheduled opener on May 31 against Antioch became baseball's first recorded rainout. The next day, the longest winning streak in history began with a 48-14 decision over the Mansfield Independents. They would play 130 games without a loss until June 1870 when the Brooklyn Atlantics finally beat them.

The Red Stockings traveled 12,000 miles by rail, stagecoach and boat that first year and attracted 200,000 fans, all of whom ostensibly paid something for the privilege of watching them play. That would seem to add up to a good-looking ledger sheet. The accounting department did not fair as well as the players, though, because at the end of the season, the team's profit was reported to be a rather meager $1.39.

OCCUPATIONAL THERAPY

Special training helps patients regain daily living skills

Story by Janet Ausbury + Photos by Tim Appel

April is Occupational Therapy Month, and Gwen Morton, occupational therapist at Dora Roberts Rehabilitation Center, is seizing the opportunity to let people know what her field is all about.

"We don't want people to confuse it with physical therapy," said Morton. It's an easy mistake to make, especially because the definition of occupational therapy, or OT, can change depending on the facility providing the service.

Morton has cerebral palsy and underwent physical therapy, or PT, when she was young. She originally wanted to be a physical therapist, but was counseled against it because of walking problems.

She discovered occupational therapy to be just as beneficial and rewarding a career, plus it allowed her to take advantage of her upper body strength as she helped others develop theirs. "People are amazed at how strong I am, how strong my hands are," she said.

So what exactly is occupational therapy? At Dora Roberts, it primarily involves helping people use their arms and hands. This, says Morton, is one of the main differences between OT and PT. The other main difference is that OT uses practical tasks as well as exercises to help patients regain what Morton calls ADL skills—average daily living skills.

OT helps patients regain the ability to perform routine tasks healthy people take for granted, such as being able to eat and take care of themselves, as well as improve the cognitive abilities of those who have had head injuries.

Doctors refer patients to Morton (and a doctor's referral is always required) for many reasons. Car accidents and industrial injuries account for many of her clients. People with broken limbs, torn muscles, carpal tunnel syndrome or scar tissue from operations are among her roster of people to assist. Bursitis, tendinitis, tennis elbow and similar disorders can also cause mobility problems severe enough to require OT.

Even less fortunate and harder to help are her patients who have had strokes. In many cases, says Morton, stroke victims will never regain use of a useless arm or hand. If no use is regained within six weeks after the stroke, it is almost certain the limb will remain useless.

Morton specializes in hand therapy and uses arts and crafts, splints, exercise and training to help patients regain as much use as possible of a damaged hand. If the hand or arm is useless, retraining of the other limb may be necessary.

Arts and crafts are also useful to help patients with head injuries regain their ability to recognize patterns, visualize or describe an object, or overcome other cognitive disabilities.

Morton has also had patients with neuromuscular disorders such as multiple sclerosis or diseases such as arthritis.

In these cases, nothing can be done to halt the progress of the disease, but patients can learn to cope with the amount of disability they have.

They also learn how to perform tasks in ways that will work around the disability and not further aggravate it.

She has often found herself challenged to work with patients who, because of stroke or other brain injury, have not only lost motor skills but the ability to fully understand what she is telling them.

Other patients grasp a simple command to raise one arm, but because the message gets garbled in the injured brain, they may raise the wrong arm or lift it in the wrong direction.

Imitation is helpful in working with these patients. Morton will perform the task she wants the patient to do, and then point to the patient or otherwise indicate for that person to follow suit.

Most of Morton's work is not as difficult, however. She particularly loves hand therapy. "I use a lot of massage to help break up scar tissue," she said. "I like watching and helping people regain the use of their hands."

She described the constricted hands of those who have suffered scar tissue or atrophied hand muscles. The stronger palm muscles overtake the weaker muscles on the top of the hand, causing it to close in a shape similar to a flower bud. As Morton spoke of the healing process, she opened her hand slowly, like a flower blooming.

Splinting the hand in a position that does not allow stronger muscles to overtake weaker ones and contract the hand is part of Morton's strategy. People with broken hands or fingers often suffer contracture because the hand is splinted for the immediate purpose of healing the bone, and not with the concern of future muscle atrophy.

OT is often quite painful at first, regardless of the injury. "For some people, it has taken months to gain even a little progress," said Morton. Once she has earned patients' trust, the procedure often speeds up.

Still, some patients are difficult and may not understand that pain will be involved in regaining use of damaged arms and hands. OT appointments last 20-30 minutes.

Please see THERAPY, page 28.

Clockwise from middle right: Patient Genaro Aguirre tests his hand strength as Morton watches; Aguirre practices his fine motor skills by stitching the edges of a key-chain provided by Morton; with Morton's help, Aguirre uses a dumbbell to improve his strength and range of motion.

FOR SUNDAY, APRIL 17, 1994

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Ease up on another who may not agree with you. You don't have to make your point so strongly. One-to-one relating flourishes if you don't dwell on a misunderstanding. Confusion surrounds how your regard a family member. Be loving. Tonight: Pace yourself. ****

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Once more you need to adjust to a change in plans. Your biggest liability is your own energy. Communications are active. Unusual solutions come through detachment and doing things someone else's way. Tonight: Don't do what you don't have to do. ****

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be sensitive to options. A loved one cares about you and lets you know it. One-to-one relating is highlighted. PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): There is a distinct warming up between you and another. You like the vibrations. In your effort to make headway quickly, you might overspend, but you don't need to. Expect detachment and a more spiritual approach to a romance. Tonight: Guard that wallet. ****

IF APRIL 17, 1994 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Focus on your home life and a partnership in the year ahead. Real estate will be your strong suit financially. Use your instincts. Finances will be enhanced as long as you don't get confused with all the information that will be thrown at you. Know you have the wherewithal to make what you want happen. Learn to work through nervousness. Those of you who are single and willing to be vulnerable are likely to meet someone whom you could stay with for the long haul. If you are attached, your relationship should flow smoothly. CANCER anchors you.

Honest mistake or blatant misconduct?

Debbie Denzer poses in the library of the Linderman School in Kalispell, Mont. last week. She was fired in January for lending two students books from her own library that were deemed as "grossly inappropriate."

Librarian fired for lending witchcraft books to students

By The Associated Press

KALISPELL, Mont. — The two seventh-graders wanted to do a report on witchcraft, and they asked library aide Debbie Denzer for her help. She steered them to the encyclopedias, and lent them two books of her own. That was her mistake, say her bosses. No, she says — that was her job.

Denzer was fired in January for providing the girls with material that Frank de Kort, superintendent of the rural district in northwest Montana, described as "grossly inappropriate."

One book contained graphic descriptions, drawings and photographs about witchcraft and Satanic rituals involving sex acts, mutilations and sacrificial killings. The other discussed sexual matters, and included nude drawings.

Denzer contends there is no written policy on such loans and, without one, she would be professionally obligated to do the same thing again.

She is appealing her firing to the county school superintendent, who is expected to rule in mid-May.

She has accumulated some powerful allies: "We basically believe that if a child can understand the material given to them, they're ready for it," said Judith Krug, head of the American Library Association's Office for Intellectual Freedom.

Other supporters include the American Civil Liberties Union, the National Council of Teachers of English, the National Coalition Against Censorship, and PEN American Center, a writers' organization.

"Instead of burning Debbie Denzer at the stake, the school authorities fired her for 'unsatisfactory performance' and 'misconduct,'" wrote a supporter, author Alice Hoffman, in an Op-Ed piece in The New York Times.

But there are critics, as well. Almost everyone but Denzer — even her solitary defender at school, librarian Joan Gates — agrees the books were "inappropriate" for 12- and 13-year-old girls. A letter supporting Denzer's dismissal was signed by 20 out of 21 teachers at the school.

Therapy

depending on how much work and pain the patient can take.

The tools of the trade range from exercise equipment to build strength, to stretching exercises to increase range of motion, to sensory re-education tools such as beans and coins for those who have lost some of their ability to feel things. Washcloth rubs are also used on limbs that have lost feeling.

Heat or cold packs and ultrasound are used to get beneficial treatment deep into the muscles and tendons. Tools that look like toys, such as a large half-circle hoop with objects to move across, are used to help with motion. Dumbbells help patients become accustomed to increased weight on damaged joints, arms and hands.

A particularly handy tool for helping patients regain fine motor skills and sharpen their thinking is a little key chain that requires patients to stitch the edges. The looping pattern of the stitch would challenge most able-bodied people, but patients can and do stitch the edges correctly.

Morton's duties include not only treating her patients but creating new ideas and tools to help them. "Occupational therapists need to be creative because they may need to create or adapt devices for patients to use," she explained. Her creative streak has even extended to designing the Occupational Therapy Month poster on display in the center's lobby.

In the 18 months Morton has been at Dora Roberts, she has rebuilt the OT department from a nearly dormant state. She has practiced for about 18 years and has a bachelor's degree in occupational therapy and a master's in exercise physiology.

After nearly two decades in the field, however, Morton has not grown tired of her work. The variety of injuries to be treated and methods to treat them keeps the job lively. Most of all, she loves to help.

"The neatest thing is when people are amazed at their own progress," she said. "If you can get them to see progress quickly, they'll work for you."

Doing the diet thing

It's time for another diet update. I've been writing these columns, once a month since the end of last autumn.

Christina Ferchalk

In October I decided to make a big change in my life and lose 50 pounds. My target date to accomplish this goal was between Easter and Memorial Day, but if it took me until the Fourth of July, that was OK too. I wasn't overly concerned with establishing a time frame. Past experience has taught me how discouraging that can be.

In a column last month, I told you that reader mail concerning my diet was decidedly negative. People from all over the country advised me to drop the idea of losing weight and accept myself the way I am.

I chose to disregard their advice and stick with the diet.

Within a week following the publication of that column, I began to receive what would become an outpouring of mail. I received more letters during the past months than I have in the last six. Each and every letter concerning my diet was wonderfully supportive. You congratulated me and told me to hang in there.

Going on a diet was a choice I made for myself. As an adult I realize I don't need other people's approval, but it's comforting to know I have friends in my corner. I thank you all very much.

During the months of January and February, I hit a dieting plateau. The scale refused to budge. Staying on my diet was tough. It didn't help that the nasty weather often kept me confined to the house ... where the food was.

Children learn from extension's programs

By MICHAEL KELSEY
Howard County Extension Agent

Our public school systems today offer a wide variety of subjects for students to study and learn. Many of these subjects are mandatory such as math, English, history, etc.

In addition, many schools offer courses as electives to expose students to certain fields and career opportunities. Teachers are preparing their students to continue their educations into college.

However, they go one step further to prepare students for the work force should they choose not to attend college. Our teachers and administration are doing an excellent job of classroom preparation.

Many teachers feel the best way to teach students is with hands-on activities. Students can actually see the process or issue that they are studying.

The Extension Service offers many different curriculum programs for teachers to use in their classrooms. These programs vary from video tapes and slide shows to literature and actual presentations by Extension personnel. The program topics include just about any subject.

If we don't have a formal prepared presentation to go by then we can easily create one for the teacher's specific needs.

This past week our office was involved in two different curriculum programs with Washington Elementary and Big Spring High School. Don presented a career oriented program to the Consumer Education class at Big Spring High School emphasizing interview skills, resume preparation and first impressions. He also discussed the opportunities for careers in Extension as well as agriculture and related fields.

Did you know that there are over 200 job opportunities involving agriculture? My presentation to the third graders at Washington Elementary focused on wool. The students were studying the pioneer days and many activities of the pioneers. Sheep were and still are a very important agriculture commodity in this area.

The students learned about the qualities and different kinds of wool. They were allowed to feel the lanolin in the wool of a sheep and see that sheep only have bottom teeth in the front of their mouths. They all received a fresh-sheared sampling of wool to take home.

Last year, our most popular curriculum program was a video on Africanized bees. Over 800 area students, primarily fourth graders were educated in the habits and behaviors of the infamous "killer bees."

Another popular offering is the Egg-to-Chick program. The Extension Office has small incubators available to teachers to show the development of an egg. We also suggest a presentation on about the 11th day to show and discuss the developing egg.

R.S.V.P. seniors help others

By PAT JOHNSTON
Canterbury Retirement Homes

R.S.V.P. is our local Retired Senior Volunteer Program, which is very active here in Big Spring. This week, April 17- April 22, we will be celebrating National R.S.V.P. Week. We have a total of 386 senior volunteers that volunteered 1,086 hours in March 1994. We have a total of 29 volunteer stations where volunteers spend their time to assist local businesses with their functional needs. These volunteer stations include:

Center, Senior Citizens Center, St. Mary's Episcopal Bargain Box, St. Mary's Episcopal School, St. Vincent de Paul, Texas Department of Human Resources, Tourist Bureau of Information Center, VA Medical Center, VITA (Volunteer Income Tax Assistance), Westside Day Care Center, and West Texas Opportunities.

As you can see, volunteers are really needed in many businesses in Big Spring. If you would like to volunteer for R.S.V.P., you need to be 55 years of age and willing to spend several hours a week volunteering where you are needed. Just call the R.S.V.P. office at 264-2397 and volunteer your services! We need YOU.

In following articles, there will be actual R.S.V.P. volunteers telling you how they volunteer their time in our community. We ask that you look for the next R.S.V.P. news article and if you are interested in volunteering in our community and, of course, are a senior citizen, just call the R.S.V.P. office at 264-2397 or contact Pat Johnston at 263-1265 for more information.

Air mail part of our local aviation history

By ANGIE WAY
Heritage Museum Curator

Editor's Note: This is Part 2 of Angie Way's history of aviation in Big Spring.

The Texas Air Transport Company began passenger service to Big Spring in 1929. A.P. Barrett bought two more lines and merged them with the TAT to form Southern Air Transport.

The SAT operated eastward from Texas as far as Atlanta, carrying passengers as well as mail. In 1930 the SAT operated two passenger planes out of Big Spring. The west-bound Fokker arrived at 9:20 p.m., staying only a short while before leaving to finish its run to El Paso. The eastbound plane traveled west to Dallas, originating in El Paso and leaving Big Spring at 11:25 a.m.

The SAT advertised itself as available for cross-country and pleasure trips. To provide for this the company stationed a Travelair biplane, powered with a Wright J-6 motor, at the Big Spring Airport. As pilot, Charles Smoot could boast of 1,000 hours in the air and was holder of both a transport pilot's license and an airplane mechanic's license. January 1, 1930, Smoot replaced Loy Mitchell as manager of the airport.

The pilots at the airport were occasionally called upon to aid in other ways than transport. In one instance airport manager Smoot "was called to Snyder... from the air in search of a five-year-old boy who was lost." The report ends happily for the boy, though not through the efforts of Mr. Smoot, as "the child was located by a posse of citizens who organized following (his) disappearance."

Pilots might also be called upon to patrol lines of the power companies in West Texas. Searching for evidence of a break, the airplane's usefulness in locating problems quickly outshone the previous method of riding in an automobile, as the airplane could locate breaks in a matter of minutes what would take hours on the ground.

The Southern Air Fast Express Company began air-mail service in Big Spring October 13, 1930. A total of 188 pounds containing 15,472 pieces of mail was collected the first day. Owned by oilman Erle Halliburton of Oklahoma, SAFE was to become part of American Airways which in turn became a part of American Airlines. SAFE used Ford

Tri-Motors and was part of a combined coast-to-coast service using planes and trains.

On Thursday, October 15, 1930, the SAFE passenger and mail plane landed at 10:40 a.m. The plane arrived to "inaugurate the southern leg of the transcontinental air line," of which Big Spring was a part. Arriving in the plane were F.G. Coburn, A.P. Barrett, world famous aviatrix Elinor Smith, Ruth Nichols, and Clarence Young. Smith, who was assistant secretary of commerce in charge of aviation, "radio-cast" from the plane a "word picture of the flight."

The Big Spring Herald relayed the event by reporting:

"When the airport here was designated the West Texas air mail depot, as well as the point to which the only spur route on the new transcontinental line would join the main route, the city's aviation future was made exceedingly bright."

On June 15, 1932, Big Spring became the location of night airmail service. Once again a large crowd gathered for festivities as the inaugural ship arrived. Piloted by Ira McConaughy, the plane carried such famous aviators as Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, then a vice president of American Airways. American Airways instituted a branch line which carried mail only from Big Spring to San Antonio.

The Big Spring Airport reveled in its importance in this capacity. In 1934, however, President Franklin Roosevelt ordered a blanket cancellation on all airmail contracts. Big Spring completely lost any airmail service because of the cancellation.

Roosevelt believed that the airmail contracts had been let illegally, and that a better alternative was to remove the air mail service from private companies and have the Army Air Corps carry the mail.

When the Army Air Corps proved itself unreliable in delivering the service the earlier private companies had been able to provide, bids were again requested. The companies who had previously held contracts with the government were not allowed to bid.

They circumvented this by changing the company names. For Big Spring this meant that American Airlines would arise from American Airways to provide airmail service to the community.

Alzheimer's help available

DEAR ABBY: The response to your column of March 2, offering our brochure, "Is It Alzheimer's?" was extraordinary. Our national office received 12,000 calls that day, and an additional 10,000 in the next few days. Our 220 chapters around the country reported receiving many more thousands of calls.

Dear Abby

Although we added operators that week, we know that many people could not get through because our lines were constantly busy. We invite anyone who couldn't get through to try again (1-800-272-3900), or write to The Alzheimer's Association, P.O. Box 5675, Chicago, Ill. 60680. We will not let our readers down.

Abby, thank you for spreading the word about Alzheimer's and other disorders with similar symptoms. People need to know that with a doctor's care some of those disorders are reversible, and even if the diagnosis is Alzheimer's, help is available.

As a regular reader myself, I can testify that your column is a true public service. Millions of people turn to you daily for vital information and help. God bless you. — EDWARD F. TRUSCHKE, PRESIDENT, ALZHEIMER'S DISEASE AND RELATED DISORDERS ASSOCIATION INC.

asked, "What are your hobbies?" Another question was, "When you get the morning newspaper, what do you read first?"

Most prospective jurors responded, "I read the front page first, then the sports section."

When it came to my turn, I wanted to be honest, so I replied, "I read Dear Abby first, and then the comics."

Everyone burst out laughing. — WALTER C. JOHNSON, NEW PORT RICHEY, FLA.

DEAR MR. JOHNSON: I consider your "little joke" a compliment. Thank you. Believe it or not, many people turn to the obituaries first. I confess I do.

DEAR ABBY: In response to the woman who signed herself "Georgia (my state, not my name)" regarding the Lorena Bobbitt case, I am another woman who endured continual sexual abuse from my husband.

After 25 years of marriage and three children — now grown and gone — I finally got up the courage to leave him.

Billy Graham

Like Georgia's husband, my husband was also a respected member of the community and well thought of by all who knew him.

I had never been on my own before, but I have never regretted my decision to leave him. I also know how Lorena Bobbitt felt, but I never thought of hurting my husband by cutting "it" off. However, I sure prayed for it to shrivel up and drop off. — VIRGINIA (MY STATE, NOT MY NAME)

CONFIDENTIAL TO "MOM AND DAD" IN YAKIMA, WASH.: Yes, we are living in a miraculous age. Communication is magical: "Keeping in touch with kids today 'Is really quite bizarre. 'We call one son, and reach his fax. 'The other responds from his car."

— Lee S. Kavanaugh

For Abby's favorite family recipes, send a long, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Cookbooklet No. 1, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447.

Learning to find God

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: How can I know whether or not it is too late for me to come to God? I have ignored God all my life, and I know He must hate me for the things I have done and the way I have hurt people. I need God, but I know He doesn't need me. — Mrs. F.P.

DEAR MRS. F.P.: No, God doesn't "need" you — or anyone else for that matter. But He loves you very, very much and He wants you to be in His family forever.

Turn to Christ right now. By a simple prayer of faith tell God that you know you have sinned against Him, and that you are sorry for your sins. Then invite Christ to come into your life and cleanse you of your sins and forgive you. He has promised to do so — and He cannot lie. Then begin to walk with Him and live for Him every day.

DEAR ABBY: With all due respect, can you stand a little joke about yourself?

Last year, when I was called for jury duty, they asked prospective jurors all kinds of questions. They

Ben Scott was a first-time visitor from Waco. He is the son of Emily (Smith) and John Scott. Emily was the oldest daughter of the Smith family. Howard Smith, son of Oscar and Annie (sister to Daisy and the late Emily) Smith had traveled the greatest distance from Evergreen, Colorado, to attend the festivities.

Other family members came from Oklahoma and various cities all over Texas. Visitation and entertainment were enjoyed by all.

Ralph Caffey, son of Daisy, delivered a memorial to all family members who had passed on before. An election for new reunion officers was held. Neva Phillips was voted president. Evelyn Kendrick was voted secretary and treasurer.

Family members also voted to have the next reunion as close as possible to Daisy Caffey's birthday, April 8, 1995. We urge all to attend for her 102nd birthday.

Balmorhea provides premier diving

Usually when I drive by the Balmorhea State Park I see some scuba diving lessons in progress. The last time I was by this west Texas oasis I stopped and visited with Park Ranger Tom Johnson and some of the divers.

Tom says it's a good place to go underwater. "It's one of the premier spots in West Texas. The pool is about 25 feet deep and is almost two acres big. Visibility in the water is about fifty feet, so scuba divers just love this area."

The pool has some of the clearest water in West Texas. "It's clearer than some of the scuba diving spots around Austin," says Tom. "The temperature of the water is 74 degrees year round. When you jump in during the summer it feels like ice water. But when the temperature outside is 25 or 30 degrees and you get in the water, it feels like a sauna."

Because of the warm water, most of the scuba diving at Balmorhea is done in the winter months. Scuba divers from El Paso, New Mexico, Odessa, Lubbock and other places go to Balmorhea to get certified in scuba diving. "It's considered open water," says Tom.

The classes have between 10 and

Tumbleweed Smith

30 students. "They come out here because it's some of the safest water around," says Tom. "Divers who are already certified come here to try out their equipment before going to the Caribbean or some other exotic place."

Underwater, divers at Balmorhea get to see some unusual sights. "We have two types of rare and endangered fish, found only in this pool. They are the Comanche Springs pupfish and the Pecos mosquitofish. We have about 20,000 pupfish. The most prevalent fish are the Mexican Tetras. They're just big golden shiners. Scuba divers will take food down there and feed them by hand, thousands at a time."

Bullhead catfish are quite common, as are channel catfish, bluegill and sunfish. "We have about a dozen soft shell turtles and occasionally some snakes and bullfrogs," says Tom, who is a certified diver.

The Civilian Conservation Corps constructed the pool back in the 1930's around San Solomon Springs. The sides of the pool are walled in. It's called the world's largest spring-fed swimming pool.

In addition to camp sites, the park has an 18-unit motel built by the CCC in 1940. It is one of only three state parks in Texas with motel accommodations. The other two are in Fort Davis and Castroville.

There's no charge for swimming or scuba diving. Entrance to the park is $5 per carload. During the summer the swimming pool has eight lifeguards. The park is open year-round, but the pool is open to swimmers only from late May to Labor Day.

The water is a big attraction. People in Terlingua or Lajitas think nothing of driving the 150 miles one way to spend a summer day in the Balmorhea pool.

ERA providing disclosure forms

E.R.A. Reeder Realtors, at 506 E. 4th in Big Spring, have available seller disclosure forms required by law since Jan. 1, 1994.

The seller disclosure law requires sellers to write down exactly what they know and don't know about certain aspects of their property. These are conditions which might affect the home's value, such as the presence of termites, previous flooding, underground storage tanks, hazardous water or waste, radon gas and lead-based paint.

The form does not replace inspections-buyers should have home inspections done.

Wendy Gramm visiting Midland

Wendy L. Gramm, wife of Senator Phil Gramm, will be in Midland on Wednesday, April 20, from 2 to 4 p.m. at the Midland Hilton Hotel, to participate in a Republican national policy forum.

The forum, "Listening to America", is to hear from Permian Basin business people on energy and environmental issues, seeking input on ideas for improving government policies relating to the petroleum industry.

Mrs. Gramm, a native Hawaiian, earned a doctorate in economics from Northwestern University. She was former chairperson of the U.S. Commodity Futures Trading Commission (CFTC). She began her career in 1970 as assistant professor of economics at Texas A & M, where she met her husband, Phil, who was himself also a professor of economics at the prestigious university.

She has had articles published in professional journals such as "American Economic Review", the "Review of Economics and Statistics" and the "Journal of Law and Economics." The Gramms have two sons, Marshall and Jeff, who are students at Rice University and the University of Chicago.

Sharp slated to speak to Petroleum Association

John Sharp, Texas' 35th State Comptroller, will be in Midland as the featured speaker at the Permian Basin Petroleum Association April 28 membership luncheon at the Petroleum Club.

"Forces of Change", a report by Sharp, will be the focus of the speech. The study reports sweeps across the state's economic development, demographic, environmental, criminal justice and other issues affecting future Texans. The study is on important issues facing Texas from now until the year 2025.

Sharp's efforts and leadership have been impressive enough that he was asked by the Clinton administration to establish a "National Performance Review" on a national scale, which is now underway, like Sharp did for Texas after taking office.

He found $4 billion in immediate savings and some $12 billion in savings for taxpayers through 1997.

Sharp was president of his senior class at Texas A&M, serving in the Texas House and Senate until he was elected as Texas Railroad Commissioner in 1986.

Sharp won the comptroller's office in 1990 with 62.9 percent of the vote which he took as a mandate to "break the mold" of Texas state government.

Although Sharp was never personally in favor of a state lottery, he's established on the nation's most efficient and secure lottery programs.

DOT Open House set in San Angelo

San Angelo is host site for one of eight statewide Open House Meetings sponsored by the Texas Department of Transportation to gather public input on the most comprehensive plan Texas has ever had.

Attendees can suggest and discuss issues in the multimodal plan including highways, transit, pipelines, railways, air and water transportation, bicycle and pedestrian paths and telecommunications.

The plan, according to Anne Wynne, transportation commission member, is "based on input not only from the planners and engineers, but from the end users of all types of transportation: the people of Texas." "This is the first statewide transportation plan that will build on this level of participation," Wynne explained.

The date in San Angelo is Wednesday, April 27, from 7 to 8:30 p.m. at the Holiday Inn at 441 Rio Concho Drive. For more information, call Al Zucha, TXDOT public information at (512) 463-8588.

Council tours FLAMECOAT plant

By TIM JONES
Staff Writer

Plastic FLAMECOAT Systems produces a thermoplastic powder that sprays "like liquid paint in a can." The innovative product, a registered trademark, is marketed nationally and internationally.

Recently, members of the Big Spring City Council and representatives from Moore Development For Big Spring Inc. toured the facility at 3400 West Seventh in Big Spring.

Plastic FLAMECOAT moved to that warehouse location from League City late last fall. Since Jan. 1, 1994,

'Such environmentally friendly traits could make for a vast market for a product produced in Big Spring.'

Jeff Loustaunau
Sales, marketing director

weekly visitors have been involved in training courses at the facility.

All the chemicals involved in the flamecoating process are non-volatile and benign.

"Such environmentally friendly traits could make for a vast market for a product produced in Big Spring," said Jeff Loustaunau, director of sales and marketing.

FLAMECOAT has 25 distributors throughout the U.S. and Canada, with six field representatives covering the territory, Loustaunau said.

Describing the process, Loustaunau said "conventional systems often fall short in protection against corrosion.

"The higher cost of painting," he said, "and the more frequent replacement of protection adds up for one to seriously consider the portable coating technique."

A hopper contains polymers which are sprayed through an applicator gun. Using compressed air mixed with propane and applied by flame, a single-pass achieves a conventional three-coat application, with no runs, snags or incomplete cures, Loustaunau explained.

"In terms of protection devices, the applicator need only wear a dust mask," he said.

The annual payroll at the Big Spring plant will be more than $1 million this year, he said.

Loustaunau noted the local facility employs Randy Burks, head of the Big Spring operation; Doug Horton, engineer; Wes Wagner, technical sales and support services; and Dana Jones, marketing and materials.

FLAMECOAT has successfully been used to protect rail cars and piping. It has also been used below the waterline on ships for the U.S. Coast Guard, Loustaunau said.

Texas A&M University tested ship hulls in Galveston harbor, after being protected with FLAMECOAT, and the study showed significant results, even compared to fiberglass gel coating, Loustaunau said.

Coahoma lands new industry

A&M Composites swaps city strife for W. Texas life

By BARBARA MORRISON
Staff Writer

COAHOMA — What uses a large metal storage structure, an oven that cooks up to 500 degrees, and is so technically involved it is hard for even the average whiz kid to comprehend all of its uses? The answer lies within a new industry recently relocated to the Coahoma area.

A&M Composites is owned by Michael and Jeanne Niklasch and officially opened its doors last month as a supplier of high-tech telecommunications fiber casings.

The company was originally founded in Houston in 1992, but transferred its operation to Coahoma for expansion and to "get away from the Houston congestion," says Mike Niklasch.

"The end product is manufactured filament-wound fiberglass tubing in various specific sizes and lengths used for geophysical instrument housings in specialty applications," Niklasch said.

Products are sold primarily to the telecommunications industry, mainly based in Houston and Austin, Niklasch explains.

"For example, tubes are used for antenna housings for low frequencies, for transformer systems and gas line detection," he continued.

The manufacture of these casings is detailed. The process begins with raw fiberglass strands which are dipped in an epoxy-based resin bath and then wrapped around a "mandrel." A mandrel is steel tubing which is ground to a specific size and is used as a form for the casing. Some are polished to allow a smooth finish.

The resin-coated fibers are wrapped around the mandrel in a predetermined manner. The angle of placement determines the part strength, Niklasch explains.

Once the resin is placed around the mandrel, it is placed in an oven at a temperature up to 100 degrees Fahrenheit. The oven "cures" the resin and transforms the fiberglass coating from a liquid to a solid. The process lasts from 45 minutes to five hours, depending upon the product specifications.

Once the curing process is complete, the "extractor" pulls the steel mandrel out of the fiberglass tube. The steel mandrel can then be reused.

The fiberglass tube is then taken to a grinder which is used to take off the rough surface of the tube and to make the casing a specific size. The tube is then cut to the appropriate size, painted if necessary, packaged and shipped to order.

Orders are shipped throughout the country, and the company is currently pursuing a contract with an Australian firm.

"We're definitely not in competition with Fiberflex," Niklasch said. "Instead, we provide a compliment to their industry."

CRMWD's substation bids opened

Special to the Herald

Young Electric Co. of McKinney submitted the low bid Tuesday for substations for the Lake Ivie-San Angelo-Odessa/Midland power transmission line.

Young's proposal was for $3.6 million, followed by one of $4.1 million by ReCon Co. of Oklahoma City. The highest of four bids was a little more than $4.3 million.

The contract will be awarded on or before the next Colorado River Municipal Water District board meeting May 5, said CRMWD General Manager O.H. Ivie.

This will leave only one contract pending on the 157-mile project, that for the electric power transmission line itself.

Tuesday members of the CRMWD finance committee met in Big Spring to consider recommendations for covering a shortfall in construction funds on the order of $7 million, which includes carrying of additional pipeline to Midland's treatment plant on behalf of that city.

San Angelo may handle its smaller portion in-house. Action to proceed with the financing by revenue bonds may meet, but no date for actual issuance has been set.

Chuck Bagwell, owner of Al's & Son Bar-B-Que, slices meat for customers as they line up during the lunch hour rush. Having expanded its hours to again serve evening meals, the restaurant has also expanded its menu.

Al's & Son offers expanded hours, new menu items

By TIM JONES
Staff Writer

"OK, OK. We're open at night again!" exclaim Al's & Son Bar-B-Que owners Chuck and Sue Bagwell. The Bagwells say they're really just as happy to announce their return to evening operation as many of their better customers have been.

The restaurant's expanded hours at 1810 S. Gregg Street are from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. Tuesday through Friday; and 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturday.

For patrons, returning to Al's carries with it the prospect of something brand new combined with old favorites.

The Bagwells still drive to Dublin in order to get the original Dr. Pepper in 12-ounce bottles, made with the pure cane sugar recipe, like the "old days," not with corn syrup. Taste the difference on one of these 89 degree days.

What's more, some say there's nothing better to complement a big plate of that barbecue Chuck and his fater, Al, are famous for.

However, Al's has introduced a new salad, for those whose tastes don't run to barbecue at the moment. The Bagwells explain they tear the lettuce for their salad — not just iceberg lettuce, but a combination of leafy lettuce, spinach and iceberg, adorning it with slices of chicken breast.

Top that, with homemade "house" dressings like French-Lemon-Basil, tastes just like it sounds; or Blue Cheese-Italian, a clear Italian made with chunks of blue cheese and herbs. Or, a new favorite at Al's for the health-conscious, Low-Fat Ranch.

"If you insist, you can have plain old Thousand Island," they mused, "But we invite the curious to sample fresh salads and salad dressings."

If you're a traditionalist, don't fret, they'll always be serving sliced beef, pork ribs, chicken, sausage, ham and chopped beef.

Al's will also be offering nightly specials like chicken fried chicken — yes, you read that right — Chicken breast, breaded, fried and Please see BAGWELL, page 7B

Artist deserves accolade

The mural on the side of the Chamber is the focal point of Big Spring!

I commend the Herald on trying to point out this significant landmark on their cups and T-shirts. It is unfortunate that the name of the artist that painted this masterpiece was not on this design, which is a computer generated reproduction similar to the original. I'm informed, though, that the paper intends to add the name if permission is given to do so. I know they would certainly like to see appropriate credit given, as would we.

Coy McCann is the artist in question, and does beautiful painting, sculpture and other various forms of art. Coy's fame is widespread, but he sometimes laments being overlooked locally.

It is a shame, but it is true that we very often overlook that which is right under our nose. In addition to Coy, for example, "Tumbleweed Smith" is known all over the world, but is generally just Bob Lewis to the home folks.

Same problem. Further, there are a number of folks that are quite well known over a wide area in their business of professional circles or through club or organization activities, but it doesn't quite translate locally.

I myself can go give programs and can be taken as something of an "expert" in my field over an area encompassing several states. Get paid a fee for my opinion.

Locally, I'm "staff" at the Chamber. The Bible speaks of it when it talks of a "Prophet without honor in his own town." I know no slight is intended, it's just human nature.

People even overlook "things" under their noses. How many people go see attractions all over the world, but haven't been to the things in their own region? Even their own town?

Local growers prepare for '94 Farmers' Market season

Local produce growers met last Thursday evening and began plans for organization of the 1994 Permian Basin Farmers Market.

This group has been very widely accepted by Big Spring and Howard County consumers, because the growers have made available high quality fruits and vegetables at competitive prices.

The organization was formed several years ago when the Texas Agricultural Extension began searching for alternative agricultural production to add cash flow to a declining cotton market for local crop producers.

What occurred was a phenomenal success in that not only did some farmers take advantage of this new opportunity for a cash market, but new producers developed along with them a viable enterprise. They were also joined by producers who had been growing fruits and vegetables on an individual basis all along who were now able to capitalize on a new opportunity to market their produce.

Growers from throughout the Permian Basin area joined this group and markets in Midland and Odessa and Big Spring began to thrive with widespread consumer acceptance right from the start. The organization set schedules to have markets open on different days in each of the cities to make available the highest quality, freshest produce available to customers throughout the area.

The local market first opened on the parking lot of the old Highland South Shopping Mall.

Through the efforts of one of the original local market members, Horace Tubb, an attractive, easily accessible new location was located on Gregg Street on the old Gibson's Parking lot.

Another member, Bennie McChristian, added distinction to the location by building of an attractive new sign indicating this site was the location for the local Farmers' Market. This location served for the past several years until it was recently sold for the development of a new fast food restaurant.

The purpose of the meeting at the County Extension Office was to discuss prospects for a new location. Several sites were proposed and the group, headed by Danny Kirby, believes a suitable location can be located by the time produce becomes marketable in early June.

The Farmers' Market has served as a major educational program for all gardeners in the area, regardless of the size or number of plants they may grow.

Through the efforts of local market members various varieties of fruits and vegetables have been tested and grown to the point that certain varieties can now be recommended with confidence as reliable producers for our area.

Market members Mr. and Mrs.

Craig Wyrick assisted the Extension Service in a tomato varietal field which resulted in the findings that proved some of the varieties could definitely not be counted on a consistent producer of high yielding, quality marketable fruit. The results of this demonstration were publicized throughout the area.

Added income to the producers, who in turn, add income to the local economy, help make the continuation of this market a viable concern. In addition, the community offered an asset that attracted travelers through our area an opportunity to stop and pay more than a passing glance to Big Spring.

After all, who can resist stopping at an attractive, colorful local outdoor produce market, visit with some of the friendliest people in the country, and buying farm fresh, quality fruits and vegetables. Can anyone not resist the smell and taste of a fresh, sun-ripened tomato? And, while they have stopped, they just might notice that there is pretty unique little dress or shoe shop that they missed going by the first time, or that Big Spring offered one of the most scenic parks in the state, or any number of attractive eating establishments located conveniently ranging from burritos, fried chicken to ice cream. And while stopped anyway, they just might as well go on ahead and gas up here.

We appreciate vegetable, fruit and nut growers in our area. They add a lot to the makeup of our community and remind us all once again about the diversity and opportunity that is offered in West Texas!

Burns

Coy is being a good sport about it all, but I sincerely hope that this little message has the effect of reminding the community of the tremendous effort that the mural required, and that it was Coy's gift to the community.

Sure, he was honored at the time, but the mural is still there...and we appreciate it as much now as we did then!

Thanks Coy!

I might also mention that we took a trip to Amarillo, trying to get the support of the Amarillo Chamber for the "Central Corridor" of I-27. The San Antonio Chamber and the Corpus Christi Chamber are already on record in support of the route. The city, county, Industrial Foundation, Chamber and some individual contributors have put together funds for our portion of the coalition's efforts to hire a consultant and make a very professional presentation.

Side by side with our I-27 efforts are efforts to develop a "Central Trade Corridor" going after the Mexican trade already being generated by NAFTA via Del Rio. There have been several meetings held to this end.

It appears that the Mexican government is building a four-lane divided highway from Mexico City to Del Rio, and we are working to meet it with as much highway as we possibly can.

Since this will be a much shorter time frame than the I-27 effort, much is being done independent of that effort, and much in conjunction with it. But we can't wait for that effort to conclude before we get started on the trade corridor. More as it develops...

served with cream gravy. Of course, Al's will also serve conventional chicken fried steaks with "real steak."

"Complimentary homemade ice cream is now being served after meals, and it's cranked fresh three times daily," Sue said. "Our hamburger meat is fresh and our french fries are fresh cut, never frozen."

The new hours has created a position for night manager/trainee, Alfonso Acevedo Jr., who has been preparing under Chuck's guidance, for the evening's business.

Other members of Al's staff are Lilly Ruiz, Isabel Flores, Julie Gomez, Louis Hernandez, Lisa Ott, Sheri Holmes, Madonna Pitman, Nina Servantes and Misty Livingston.

Save money. Look good and Guard your car's new paint against chipping and scratching: revolutionary Clear Coat available exclusively at Pat Gray Body Works now.

Stina Wilkerson's new car paint is Clear Coat warranted for 5 years

West Texas weather is especially rough on car finishes. Now you can shield your new paint with the revolutionary protection of Herber's Standox Cross-Linking Clear Coat. It's the only coating endorsed by Lexus and Infinity. And in Big Spring Pat Gray Body Works is the trained and certified Standox shop.

In addition to preventing chipping and scratching Clear Coat guards against fading from extreme heat, cold and sand.

If that's not reason enough to order Standox Cross-Linking Clear Coat think about the beautiful extra glossiness your car will have. Many car manufacturers are now advertising, especially on TV, the value of coating. (For example a Chevrolet commercial shows ball-bearings showering down on the painted surface of a new pickup truck to demonstrate chip resistance.)

The expert application of Clear Coat is a specialty at the right price.
