Moore help for Wright?

Board looking at further backing

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

Moore Development of Big Spring's board of directors is considering whether to help Wright Fibers obtain even more money from a state agency.

Moore's three-year, often rocky, relationship with Wright Fibers took a turn for what directors hope is the better during their meeting Monday morning.

MDBS, which holds the note on Wright's machinery and equipment at the old Cameo Mobile Homes building on West FM 700, called in the note back in March, and prospects for the budding company, which was to create about 100 jobs locally, appeared bleak.

Wright owes about $1.3 million to Moore Development and about $1.4 million more to the Texas Agricultural Finance Authority on industrial development loans secured three years ago.

But attorneys for Jake Wright, chief stockholder in Wright Fibers, contacted the Moore Board recently and informed directors that additional investors had been found for the company.

With that prospect, and to secure additional working capital, the letter requested that MDBS sponsor Wright's application for an additional $350,000 in loans from TAFE. Moore would have a potential obligation for 10 percent of the loan.

Faced with either sponsoring the loan application or continuing foreclosure, board members are amenable to the proposition.

"With the infusion of additional cash on the part of investors, it's a point to consider," said MDBS executive director Ted St. Clair, who announced his resignation at the end of Monday's meeting.

The attorneys letter also spelled out a plan for Wright to repay the existing loan. Most of the points were acceptable to the board, but members did object to two provisions.

The first would allow Wright to buy the building from Moore quicker than allotted in the original agreement, while the second would allow Wright to make periodic repayments to investors before the loan debt is settled.

Those objections aside, board members

Rain floats through; helpful to the farmers

By JANET AUSBURY
Features Editor

If it looks like a duck, quacks like a duck and walks like a duck, it was probably swimming down the streets of Big Spring this morning.

"We didn't have much rain until 8 a.m.," said Bill Fryrear of the Agricultural Research Service. The service's rain count showed 1.38 inches of rain as of 9 a.m. today, most of it falling since 7:50 a.m.

Resident Boyce Hale, who has kept track of local rainfall for 50 years, reported 2.5 inches of rain as of 9:15 a.m. "That's more than I have for the year so far," he said.

While it was enough to make people wonder if they would float rather than drive down the road, it was not enough to ruin crops — yet.

"This is exactly what the farmers needed," said Fryrear. "Whether it hurts the crops depends on what happens from now on. This is what you could call a good planting rain."

However, this was as of 8:30 a.m. Fryrear said that if heavy rains continued, soil could be washed away and crops damaged.

"It's dark out there, which means heavy clouds, and there could be a lot more precipitation coming. It could end up being too much rain at once," he explained.

But if the rain slowed down to a gentle pace distributed over 5

Salvation Army, more than meets the eye

By KELLIE JONES
Staff Writer

The Salvation Army of Big Spring is busy year-round providing services for the needy and less fortunate. Some of the help they provide is well-known such as the emergency shelter and Christmas food baskets.

However, there are others people may not know about and Lt. Albert Villafuerte wants that to change. "There are so many services we provide for the community that they may not know is available to them in a time of need."

The Salvation Army helps people with utility bills, providing transportation to an out-of-town job interview or a funeral, gasoline, help pay for prescriptions, school supplies, visitation of people staying in nursing homes and the VA Hospital as well as substance abuse counseling.

"If a resident is being threatened with having their electricity, gas or water turned off because of non-payment, we can try and help them. If someone needs help, they need to bring in a list of their income and expenses as well as a copy of the bill they need help with. We will then interview them. We can pay for a utility bill once a year and give them $30 towards the bill and if they qualify, another $50 through FEMA (Federal Emergency Management Association) for a total of $80 towards a utility bill," said Villafuerte.

The SA is also working on another project in conjunction with helping out with the utility bills. "We want to make a short video that a person will be required to watch if we help them with a bill. It will focus on energy conservation such as where to set your thermostat, fixing dripping faucets and insulating doors and windows," Villafuerte said.

The SA will also pay up to $25 or half the price of a prescription if the situation is life threatening only. Bus tickets can also be provided for someone to attend a funeral or care for a dying relative in their immediate family. They will also provide tickets for children who are run-aways and want to return home.

Gasoline can be provided for people to go to special medical treatments as well as stranded women or families who run out of gas.

School supplies for children in grades one through eight are given out at the beginning of the school year. These are the starter kits that teachers request students to have at each new school year.

"We also provide substance abuse counseling. There is an educational program on Monday nights at the shelter."

"We visit the sick and elderly in nursing homes, hospitals and in the home. We also give gifts to patients in the VA Hospital and nursing homes for Christmas and give per-

Steps taken to put 911 under one central roof

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

Big Spring and Howard County officials will take steps in the next few days to centralize control of the 911 emergency response service.

The area's 911 service has been peppered with incidences of miscommunication in its history, most recently in the April 30 death of infant Daphne Gutierrez.

To prevent that sort of problem from occurring again, Howard County Sheriff A.N. Standard believes standardizing control of the service is the best course of action to take.

"The most efficient way to solve these problems is to centralize the (911) dispatch service," Standard told the Howard County Commissioners Monday. "Where they're dispatching 911 calls, and that's all they're doing."

Currently, 911 calls are handled by Big Spring Police Department dispatchers.

City and county officials agreed with Standard's call for 911 standardization.

"The city is in favor of centralizing the dispatch," Big Spring Mayor Tim Blackshear said. "I don't think the city council would oppose any of that."

Making it unanimous was county 911 director Carl Dorton.

"These gentlemen are going to meet and decide what to do," Dorton said. "The important thing is to get it all under one roof."

Centralizing 911 dispatching would probably put the service under the purview of either the sheriff's office or the Big Spring Police Department. Standard said he didn't care who was in charge "as long as someone is in charge."

"This is a very serious matter with us in the county," Standard said. "We need to get this matter resolved right away."

County Judge Ben Lockhart said that city, county and 911 officials will meet within the next few days to resolve the situation. No timetable has been set, but Lockhart agreed a solution must be found as quickly as possible.

"The first thing we need to do is work the bugs out of the system and get it centralized," Lockhart said. "We need to get it where one entity has the say-so, whether it's the city or the county."

Dorton said the lack of fireworks at the meeting was a cause for optimism.

"I'm glad there wasn't any mud-slinging," he said. "I am pleased that we can meet to close things up."

Rain

to 6 hours, crops would greatly benefit, he continued.

As of 9 a.m., the clouds had lightened considerably and the agricultural service reported the rain had slowed down.

Across Texas, three tornadoes were sighted during the night as strong thunderstorms roared across northern portions of the Panhandle.

A brief tornado touchdown was reported near U.S. 87 about 15 miles northwest of Dalhart, another was reported just east of Perico in Dallam County and the third was near oldwater.

Large hail pelted a vast area of Jallam County and was reported to be piled up as deep as 4-5 inches in some yards in the county.

There were no reports of injuries. Showers and thunderstorms were reported over the Panhandle and in portions of the Permian Basin before dawn today. The rest of West Texas had clear to partly cloudy skies.

Forecasts called for continued showers and thunderstorms across West Texas tonight and early Wednesday. Forecasters warned that some of the thunderstorms east of the mountains may become severe and be accompanied by locally heavy rainfall.

Forecasters also warned that some showers and thunderstorms in western and southwestern portions of North Texas may become severe. Showers and thunderstorms are expected across all of North Texas.

Showers and thunderstorms will continue across South Texas through Wednesday.

Lows tonight will be in the 50s and 60s in West Texas, the 60s in North Texas and in the 70s in South Texas.

Highs Wednesday will be in the 70s and 80s in West Texas except in the Big Bend area where readings will climb into the 90s, in the 70s and 80s in North Texas and in the 80s across South Texas.

Lead investigator being transferred

AUSTIN (AP) — The officer who has headed up a special task force formed after four teen-age girls were slain at an Austin yogurt shop will soon be transferred to another assignment, a police official says.

Austin police Deputy Chief Bruce Mills said Monday that Sgt. John Jones' upcoming transfer won't affect the case.

Pam Ayers, the mother of victim Amy Ayers, was not pleased about the transfer.

"We want him to stay," said Mrs. Ayers. "We're worried about continuity. This is a complex case. It just can't be handed off."

Jones has led the task force since January 1992 — a month after 13-year-old Amy Ayers, Eliza Thomas, 17, Jennifer Harbison, 17, and Sarah Harbison, 15, were found dead in the I Can't Believe It's Yogurt! shop. Each of the girls had been shot in the head and severely burned.

Club security has suit filed against it

FORT WORTH (AP) — Seven people have filed a lawsuit against the popular nightclub Billy Bob's Texas, claiming all of them were assaulted by club security and that one man was handcuffed and beaten so badly that he needed emergency surgery.

The lawsuit, filed by four men and three women Monday, came as a surprise to Pam Minick, spokeswoman for the Fort Worth establishment.

"There's two sides to every story," she told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "Something had to be provoked because Billy Bob's security workers don't go looking for fights, especially when there's women involved."

Lawyer Mark Carroll of Dallas, who represents the seven plaintiffs, said the group of Dallas and Wichita County residents went to Billy Bob's on Nov. 27, 1992, to see a concert by country group Sawyer Brown.

The suit claims that the group was leaving the club when they were accosted by security workers who accused plaintiff Gaylen Cobb of "throwing liquid on an employee."

Laws make inmate drug use harder to fight

DALLAS (AP) — A new federal privacy law has made drug abuse among prison inmates harder to track and fight, state prison officials and victims' rights advocates say.

Texas began an aggressive drug-addict treatment program this year with a goal of taking 12,000 criminal addicts off the streets and sobering them up.

But the program has been stymied by the 1987 privacy law, officials said.

"It's already a major headache," said Sonja Paige, substance abuse coordinator with the prison system.

The law was intended to protect drug-treatment clients from disclosures about their condition that might hurt their jobs or insurability.

Defense: No reason to suspect drug link

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — The lure of bonuses and promotions prompted two international bankers to launder $30 million for a man handling the profits for one of Mexico's most pervasive drug gangs, prosecutors say.

But attorneys for Antonio Giraldi and Lourdes Reategui of American Express Bank International say their clients never meant to become entangled with tainted money.

"There will be absolutely no evidence that either one of them intentionally set out to commit the career-threatening and life-threatening crime of helping launder drug proceeds of the Juan Garcia Abrego organization," Giraldi's attorney, Christopher Milner, said Monday, the first day of the bankers' money laundering trial.

The government says Abrego is the reputed head of a violent smuggling organization, based in northeastern Mexico with links to the Cali cocaine cartel of Colombia.

Losers, winners try to asses repeal vote

AUSTIN (AP) — Leaders of the successful effort to abolish the city's "domestic partners" benefits say they will apply their newly gauged political muscle to other conservative causes.

Meanwhile, 100 people lost their health coverage Monday as a result of Saturday's vote that repealed the policy of extending insurance benefits to the unmarried partners of city employees.

"We are known for being a very accepting community. This is a black eye," said Scottie Shelton, a city electrician, whose domestic partner lost her insurance benefits.

Slain officers honored Ceremony recalls the lives they gave

The Associated Press

LUBBOCK — As much as people like to believe that law enforcement officers are invincible, Gov. Ann Richards says, there's an annual Texas tribute reinforces just how fragile their mortality is.

Friends and relatives gathered Monday amid the solemn echo of drums and bagpipes to honor 18 Texas lawmen who died from June 1993 to March 1994.

"In this memorial service, the awful realization is that these women and men who risk their lives for us every day are human beings — husbands, wives, mothers, fathers, brothers and sisters," Richards said at the annual Texas Peace Officers Memorial Day.

"They leave their homes every day and put it all on the line for us, and not all of them make it home."

As each officer's name was read, a red carnation was placed in a Texas-shaped marker of white carnations to show the city where he died.

Patricia Early's husband, Les, a Pasadena police officer, was shot during a drug raid Nov. 5.

"They were willing to put themselves between people and evil," Mrs. Early said.

Ron DeLord, president of the Combined Law Enforcement Associations of Texas, said Texas leads the nation in peace officer deaths.

"When you kill or injure police, you have killed or injured our society because the police officer is a symbol of the order that we demand to live together," DeLord said.

Eclipse rare celestial spectacle

The Associated Press

EL PASO — Astronomers were urging people to look up today to catch a spectacular, celestial show that won't be seen again until 2012.

Astronomers, international reporters and amateur eclipse chasers were scheduled to set up shop around El Paso this morning as they prepared to be the first people in the United States to get a glimpse of an annular eclipse.

El Paso was expected to be the nation's prime viewing location because of the region's normally clear skies.

"We're sure looking forward to sharing this experience," said John Peterson, administrator of the El Paso Independent School District Planetarium.

The eclipse, which was to be visible across North America, was to begin in El Paso at 8:44 a.m. MDT and last until 11:52 a.m.

During an annular eclipse the moon creeps slowly across the solar disk, until it appears as a black dot surrounded by a ring of fire, or annulus.

The annulus gives an annular eclipse its name and also differentiates it from a total eclipse, during which the moon blocks the solar disk completely.

Only those viewers along the centerline stretching from San Ignacio in Baja California, Mexico, through El Paso and on to Halifax, Nova Scotia, had an opportunity to see an annular eclipse. The rest of the continent got only a partial eclipse.

Astronomer David Menke, the director of the Buehler Planetarium in Davie, Fla., said Monday the annular eclipse has varying significance for solar researchers.

The event would allow some to conduct important experiments, while others would scarcely pay attention to it, said Menke.

He said the advent of space travel and of other new technologies to study the sun and sky has somewhat decreased the research value of eclipses over the years.

But they're rare enough that they're still worth viewing, said Menke.

New proposals could diminish local control

The Associated Press

AUSTIN — Some school changes proposed by state Education Commissioner Lionel "Skip" Meno may diminish the authority local residents have over their schools, says the Texas Association of School Boards.

Billy Walker, executive director of the school board group, said Monday that under initial proposals by Meno, local boards no longer would have a say in the selection of professional staff, hiring and firing of teachers, and suspension or removal of students.

The school superintendent would make the final decision, Walker said. "This leaves the taxpayer paying the tab with no elected official to hold responsible," Walker said.

"We see a disconcerting trend toward moving authority away from duly elected representatives of the people and placing it in the hands of hired officials," he said. "Authority taken from the local school board is authority taken from the parents and taxpayers of a community."

Meno, who presided over Monday's hearing, said he expects to make final legislative recommendations next month. The Legislature meets in regular session in January.

"When you put a topic on the table — and we've got about 60 or 70 topics on the table here — people are coming back with different ways to approach it," Meno said. "All of us together are much smarter than any of us alone."

Meno also heard from education groups about his proposal for a 5 percent raise in the state's minimum salary scale for teachers. Most teachers already make more than the state minimum.

All 10 levels on the salary schedule would rise under his proposal, with the minimum salary for a starting teacher rising to $17,850. Two new levels also would be added.

Meno's proposal was called "inadequate" by Richard Kouri, president of the Texas State Teachers Association. Kouri said it would require an increase for only 8,000 of Texas' 200,000-plus teachers.

"We continue to talk about building a world-class education system here; however, we pay our teachers far less than world class salaries to produce that product," he said.

Kouri said Texas should, at the least, move toward the national average teacher pay of $35,958 annually. A TSTA survey released last month found the average Texas teacher salary at $30,349.

Anti-abortion groups to fight judgment; said will not pay

The Associated Press

HOUSTON — Two anti-abortion groups say they will fight a $1.01 million judgment awarded to a woman's clinic that was the site of confrontational protests during the 1992 Republican National Convention.

A Harris County jury Monday awarded Planned Parenthood of Southeast Texas a little more than the $1 million it had sought in punitive damages from Operation Rescue, Rescue America and leaders Don Treshman and the Rev. Keith Tucci.

Operation Rescue was ordered to pay $350,000, Rescue America $355,000, Treshman $155,000 and Tucci $150,000.

Jurors already had awarded the clinic $204,585 in actual damages last Thursday after determining that the groups and two others — Dallas Rescue and The Lambs of Christ — conspired to hinder business at Planned Parenthood and nine other clinics.

Planned Parenthood did not seek punitive damages against the two smaller groups.

Both sides said last week's decision was the first time a jury awarded women's clinics money damages from anti-abortion activists.

However, the abortion foes said they would appeal the case and in the meantime would pay nothing.

"We're not going to accept this," Treshman said. "This is an invalid verdict, and that's why we're going to challenge it."

Attorney Richard Schmude, who represented Treshman, said he was "shocked and outraged" by the decision.

"It's a vindictive and hateful verdict," Schmude said. "There is no evidence in this case that supports the plaintiffs' case."

But Judy Reiner, a spokeswoman for Planned Parenthood, said the hefty punitive award amplifies an already clear message from the jury.

"This is a very clear message that people who engage in this conduct will be held accountable," Ms. Reiner said.

Ms. Reiner said her group has been tracking the abortion opponents' assets and will try aggressively to collect on the awards.

"We will collect damages from them," she said. "We will collect all damages."

The jury of seven men and five women deliberated seven days over a 32-page charge before returning with its decision in favor of the clinics Thursday.

Jurors deliberated about nine hours before deciding on the punitive damages.

Planned Parenthood, the only plaintiff to seek monetary damages, listed extra security, fencing, vandalism and lost business as reasons for actual damages.

The anti-abortion activists staged daily demonstrations at the clinics during the GOP convention in Houston. Dozens of people were arrested as protesters confronted volunteers trying to defend the clinics.

The lawsuit was filed as part of a long effort to win permanent restrictions on the protest groups.

With the jury's decision, state District Judge Fileen O'Neill can hold a hearing to decide if such a permanent injunction is warranted.

O'Neill isn't expected to rule on that matter, however, until after the U.S. Supreme Court considers an injunction in Florida that keeps protesters at least 36 feet away from a clinic.

The injunction also created a 300-foot, protest-free zone, in which demonstrators cannot approach someone seeking clinic services without some kind of invitation to do so.

Abortion opponents argue that restrictions such as "buffer-zones" around clinics would violate their First Amendment right to free speech.

With friends Mexican dance troupe helps to celebrate Cinco de Mayo

By KELLIE JONES
Staff Writer

Cinco de Mayo is the celebration of Mexico's independence from Spain. Students at College Heights Elementary celebrated the holiday with a luncheon and a special performance by a group of students from Chihuahua, Mexico.

The group is called "Thraumara," the name of the Indians in the mountains of Chihuahua state. "There are 26 dancers in all that range in age from sophomores to seniors at the high school. They have won first place in state (Chihuahua) and placed second in nationals for Mexico," said dance instructor Bica Baeza.

It is the first time the group has toured in the United States and made stops at schools in Borden County, Klondike, Colorado City and Big Spring.

"For a lot of these kids, this is the first time they have been in the States. Most come from low-income families and never thought this trip could be possible," said Baeza.

The group raised all of the money needed to come to the States by having cake walks and fund raisers.

"They love West Texas. They have enjoyed being here. We had to get a special permit because most of us don't have visas. We have received invitations to perform in Snyder and Texas Tech next year. If we can get the money to get back, we will be coming back," Baeza added.

The dance itself is a representation of five states in Mexico and the costumes are all handmade. Chihuahua, Veracruz, Chiapas, Jalisco and the mountains of Chihuahua are all represented by hairpieces, jewelry and costumes.

Rafael Prieto is the other dance instructor with his wife Patricia helping with the costumes and Rafael's brother handles the sound system and lights for the dance group.

College Heights teacher Pat

DeAnda is the organizer of the event and has been planning it since January. "We heard about this award winning ballet and invited them to come to our school and they were willing to share with us," she said.

Parents volunteered to help out with the luncheon, providing and cooking everything. "Over 200 people were fed by this great homemade food," DeAnda said.

DeAnda added she hopes to see this sort of celebration participate in Cinco de Mayo. "This is part of what America is all about and people tend to forget that."

People ask why celebrate and we need to remember we are closer to our roots than others. We can get in our cars and touch base with our roots in a few hours."

BSISD Parental Involvement Coordinator Rudy Gutierrez added his reasons why it is important to have the celebration. "This builds positive self-esteem in the kids. They see their parents participate and this really gets them excited."

"If this is the only time the parents participate and contribute to their kids and school, let's continue to have this celebration. It's worth it to get parents involved and make contributions even if there might be a lot of work behind it to get it organized," commented Gutierrez.

Normal too weird for Ballinger teen

CHRIS GOVE
San Angelo Standard-Times

BALLINGER — Cathy Hahn certainly doesn't want to be normal, she says. In fact, she can't imagine anything more eerie.

"To be normal, that would be the worst thing," she said, a sarcastic look of disgust spreading across her face. "I don't want to be normal."

She doesn't have to worry about that too much. Her freshman peers at Ballinger High School voted her "Most Unique."

"I guess they're saying I'm weird," Cathy said. "Maybe they're saying I'm weird because of the way I act. I don't know. I just like to make people laugh."

There's one thing, though, that Cathy fears more than normality — being stereotyped. But when you've done what she has, it's hard to avoid.

Forever, it seems to Cathy, she will be the girl with cancer that played football.

These days, Cathy is a 16-year-old Ballinger High School student who says she isn't interested in competing athletically — in any sport — again.

Her favorite class is agriculture and she would much rather crack her friends up than crack pads on the football field.

But the everlasting memory of Cathy is different. It's of a 13-year-old Olfen Junior High student who overcame a deadly disease and a gender barrier to help her school field a six-man football team in the fall of 1991.

Cathy stole the hearts of West Texas, and apparently the heart of the nation. Her story was told in the Cathy Hahn, 15, has played football at Olfen Junior High while battling cancer. The only thing that scares her is normality and stereotyping.

Standard-Times and was on an Abilene television station.

It was even told by Paul Harvey on national radio.

"I just turned the stereo on to Paul Harvey and he was talking about her," said Cindy Lowe, Cathy's mother. "It was fantastic. Her story was in two newspapers and (one TV station) and then was on national radio. I guess Paul Harvey picked it up off the AP wire."

"I asked (Cathy) what was next. She said, 'Maybe Oprah.'"

That was almost three years ago when Cathy was a sixth-grader at Olfen, a southern Runnels County community so small that it doesn't appear on most maps. It's about 12 miles south of Ballinger at the end of Farm-to-Market Road 1874. The school at Olfen only goes through junior high.

The female-dominated school only had five boys for its six-man football team in 1991, so Cathy stepped in as the sixth player.

It was as simple as that, Cathy says.

"Everyone thinks that I played because I think I'm bad," she said. "They just think that I think I'm bad because I played football. But I just played because they needed another player."

The next year, in fact, Cathy was Olfen's head cheerleader for its only football game of the season.

So her days as a football hero are over. But her days as a hero — whether she knows it or not — will live much longer.

Cathy was a few weeks shy of her ninth birthday in December of 1986 when she was diagnosed with large cell lymphoma, a rare form of cancer, in a San Angelo hospital.

After the diagnosis, Ms. Lowe had to make the quick choice about which of five hospitals throughout the state to take her daughter to. She picked Fort Worth, which would become their home for the next five weeks.

Trips to Fort Worth became commonplace for mother and daughter over the next year. Ms. Lowe estimates the cost of treatment over that first year in the $120,000 range — all covered by Medicaid funds from the Texas Crippled Children's program.

Although there were tough times over a few years due to the cancer, it now seems to be in complete remission. Cathy was recently cleared to have her blood count checked only once a year, although Ms. Lowe would like her daughter to have more checkups than that.

"I'm a coward," Ms. Lowe said. "You can't say she's cured, because there's no cure for cancer. But every

'Ice' scream, you scream, we all scream' - for tutors

By JANET AUSBURY
Features Editor

Washington Elementary students and their tutors from Howard College got a special after-lunch treat last Wednesday — an ice cream party courtesy of teachers and the PTA.

The party was a way to thank the tutors for helping students improve their work and their grades during the last several months.

Teachers and parent volunteers dished up the goodies while more teachers and parents helped coordinate the lines of eager children awaiting a frosty treat. The afternoon was chilly, but that didn't stop the hunger for ice cream.

"I didn't think I was going to get any," said student Sandra Munoz as she brought her treat back to her table after standing in line. She took a bite of her sundae and smiled in approval.

"It's been a long time since I've had any ice cream," she explained.

As the children lined up in not-so-orderly fashion, teacher Rita Faulkner kept the sundae assembly running smoothly, with help from fellow scoopers and toppers

Karen Wilson, Teri Bamert, Becky Helsley, Janet Poeppel and Karen Allen.

"Yes, we're all going to go down to the Dairy Queen and apply for jobs," she joked, deftly spraying whipped topping onto yet another chilly creation.

Spoonful after spoonful of pineapple, strawberry and chocolate toppings garnished scoop after scoop of vanilla ice cream. Soon, the workers had toppings and ice cream smeared nearly up to their elbows.

Gandy's, Don's IGA and Winn Dixie donated the ice cream and toppings to feed the 60 children and 15 parents and volunteers. Several types of brownies were at the table for those who wanted an extra-special sundae.

Even after the students came back for seconds, plenty of ice cream was left over at the end of the party. At last, it was time for the workers to help themselves to the treats they had dished out to others for nearly an hour.

So, after fixing dozens of sundaes, what proved to be the most popular toppings? "Goopy chocolate and whipped cream," said Faulkner. "Lots of whipped cream."

Facts about friendship

LOIS BLINKHORN
The Milwaukee Journal

Listening to Leslee Young and Jill Sorenson describe how they got facts during a New York City holiday is a little like watching a particularly hilarious episode of "Seinfeld."

It also is a sharp insight into friendship, because both Marquette University seniors are able to laugh at things that would have split up less tolerant friends. Young, from Valparaiso, Ind., and Sorenson, from Kenosha, Wis., have been good friends since freshman year.

"Advertising brought us together," Sorenson says. "She's accounts; I'm graphics. We're getting an apartment together after graduation — and we're going to have our own business together someday!"

Young nods her head. "We've gone to conventions and conferences together. And we have the same work standards."

So, on a practical level, it is easy to see why these two young women are friends: Both are advertising majors who love art, the theater, shopping and, well, shopping.

But friendship is more than compatible resumes. It has a certain intangible, mysterious quality.

"We can come into the presence of someone, and there is something about them we sense is true," says Rose Ann Trzil, describing the mystery of the friendship link.

"Friendship is a willingness to believe in another person," says Trzil, a Roman Catholic nun who founded and directs Sophia House, a spiritual center in Wauwatosa, Wis.

"We believe in that person as a promise. As the friendship deepens, this promise can get bigger and bigger."

Trust is an important element of friendship because it creates a feeling of safety that allows us to reveal ourselves, psychotherapist Jerry Rousseau says.

"If people don't have sense of safety, it's going to be difficult to get to know each other at different levels," Rousseau says. "One of the cornerstones for trust is the level of acceptance that people feel toward one another. Whenever they don't feel accepted, they're going to distance themselves to keep safe."

Acceptance cuts two ways. Interestingly enough, to be a good friend, you need to be accepting of yourself.

"Whatever I don't accept in myself, I will have a hard time accepting in a friend," Rousseau says. "So an important element in developing trust is my own level of self-acceptance."

Psychotherapist Kathleen Neville plays off a similar theme when she talks about friendship.

"Friendship is being able to be yourself with another," Neville says. "It is being able to let one's guard down, to talk about things that are deeply private. There is a sense of unconditional acceptance. And a sense of being there for the other in time of need."

Every relationship is bound to run into conflict. Conflict can ruin a friendship, but, paradoxically, it also can improve a friendship.

"I think it is important to know not only that conflict is inevitable, but that it is necessary to develop a deep level of friendship," Rousseau says.

Good friends recognize that each person has his or her own view of reality — and that each can have a different perception without disagreeing or arguing about it, he says.

Conflict also is an opportunity to get to know ourselves better, Rousseau says. "We need people to disturb us in order to have the emotional motivation to look deeper within us. When conflict arises, ask yourself: What is there for me to learn from this?"

Good friends are willing to forgive and help each other grow through personality conflicts and tensions, Trzil says.

"Friendship doesn't only comfort, it risks saying the truth — but not in an accusatory or blaming way," she says. "Friendship is a continual discovery of one's self and of the other."

But a friendship can hit the wall when friends have different levels of expectation.

"Some people have expectations that are too high," Neville says. "I think some people expect undying loyalty and a certain amount of perfection. Friendships are imperfect, yet precious. There are some times when we are insensitive, not tuned in, when our own needs take precedence."

'NBA Jams' basketball at its best

By BRITT and BRIAN WARNER
Thomson News Service

GAME: NBA Jams
COMPANY: Arena Entertainment
SYSTEM: Super Nintendo
DIFFICULTY LEVEL: Moderate
PLOT SUMMARY: You have been chosen to represent your NBA basketball team in the two-on-two NBA Jams competition and you know exactly why. You're the toughest, the fastest, and the all-around best player on your team. In the competition it's going to be you and a teammate versus every other two-man NBA team in the league.

The two of you will be up against some of the best: Barkley, Pippen, Robinson, Ewing and others. So you had better show off some awesome teamwork, a consistent rain of 3-pointers, and the hardest slams you've ever performed. Well, come on! Get off the bench and Jam!

STRUCTURE: NBA Jams is a lot like most other video basketball games. It starts with a tip-off to decide which team gets the ball first. Once the ball's in play, it's time to rock! Each player is unique in his abilities to sink perfect three-pointers, slam-dunk, defend the ball and sprint quickly.

Every pair has a unique combination of abilities. Some are stronger in the three-pointers, while others can just blow away the competition with their powerful slams. When a player puts up a good shot, the announcer screams lines like "No good!" and "Wide open!" or "Terrible shot."

If the player makes an awesome slam, the announcer shouts "Ka-boom!!!" or "Boom-shaka-laka!!!" The most unique feature of the game is the turbo function. By using turbo, a player can run faster, jump higher, shoot better and generally play better. But this power is limited. If you use it for too long it'll run out and the player will be left without it until it's recharged again.

BRIAN'S COMMENTS: This incredible game is exactly like the arcade game! I have never had so much fun with a sports game before. It's one of those incredibly well-done games that will not let you go.

The graphics are top notch, and the sound excellent. I was just amazed at how well this game played and had a great time slugging and jamming. I would recommend this game to everyone.

BRITT'S COMMENTS: NBA Jams is an incredible video representation of 2-on-2 basketball. The characters look incredibly like the basketball players they represent. They are easy to control and the action is smooth and realistic. The music isn't very good, but everything else is.

This is easily the most enjoyable basketball game I've ever played.

Normal

year she's in remission the odds are greater and greater that it will not come back."

As great a struggle as Cathy's cancer was, getting her life back on a normal track after the initial treatments was probably even harder.

Cathy transferred from Ballinger to Olfen in the fourth grade in order to take advantage of Olfen's better teacher-student ratio. She was a year behind in school because of the cancer treatments and needed more personable instruction.

After finishing sixth grade in 1992, Cathy skipped to the eighth grade for the 1992-93 school year, with the stipulation that she take summer school in both the summers of 1992 and 1993 to fulfill science and history requirements.

So last May, she graduated from Olfen — along with three other eighth-grade students. It was a day Ms. Lowe had prayed she would see.

"People talk about their kids becoming doctors or lawyers or whatever when they grow up," Ms. Lowe said. "I just wanted my kid to grow up. I just wanted her to be around for tomorrow. You don't look at your kid the same when something like (cancer) happens to them."

"You just take it for granted that they'll be around forever. That's not necessarily the case."

With that attitude, Ms. Lowe even jokes about the everyday battles that go on between a mother and teenage daughter.

"We fight all the time," she said with a laugh. "Just like any normal mother and teen-age daughter. We're as normal as normal can be."

The last thing on Cathy's mind these days is cancer.

"I had it. It's gone," she said. "I don't think about it anymore."

Ways to Prevent Injuries

Kids' Safety Messages

My safety message
Has an event happened to you that made you more safety aware? Do you have a message to pass on to your classmates?

My safety message

The week of May 8-14 is National SAFE KIDS Week.

To observe it, two kids from every state are coming to Washington for a SAFE KIDS Summit. (A summit is an important meeting.)

Each child will bring his or her own safety message. During the week, the kids will meet with members of Congress.

Congress is considering a health care plan. A group called the National SAFE KIDS Campaign thinks that a strong program to help prevent injuries to children should be a part of the plan.

Here are a few of their stories.

The National SAFE KIDS Campaign is a program of Children's National Medical Center in Washington, D.C.

Swimming safety

Kanani Tamashiro, 13, of Milliani, Hawaii

Message: Adults should not rely on older children to watch kids. Adults should be responsible for their kids.

While swimming with her family in a pool, Kanani noticed a little boy at the bottom. She thought he was just playing. Then she and her father realized the boy was in trouble. Kanani swam down and brought him to the top.

Kanani's father gave him CPR. Her mother called 911. The little boy's mother had depended on an older brother to look after her child.

Cycling safety

Gui Zupko, 13, of Huntsville, Ala.

Message: Bikers should wear helmets.

One day, Gui and his brother were cycling. The boys swerved to avoid a dog. Gui landed on his head. Thanks to his helmet, he was not hurt. Gui is now getting people to sign a petition asking state lawmakers to pass a law saying that bicyclers must wear helmets.

Fire prevention

Misty Kimsey, 11, of Spartanburg, S.C.

Message: Smoke detectors save lives.

Misty Kimsey listened carefully to a safety lesson at school. When she got home, she insisted that her family install a smoke detector. The very night after the detector was installed, a fire broke out. The detector woke up Misty's parents, who got Misty and her sister out. The family was saved, but fire completely destroyed the house.

Car safety

Melana Yanos, 10, of Kapaa, Hawaii

Message: Buckle safety belts.

It was Sunday morning. Melana and her family were coming home from church. Their car swerved to avoid another car. Melana's family's car rolled over and turned upside down. Fortunately, they all were wearing their safety belts. Melana and her family were able to walk away from the crash.

Rookie Cookie's Recipe

Microwave Fruit Cobbler

You'll need:

- 1/3 cup brown sugar
- 1/3 cup all-purpose flour
- 1 1/2 ounce can apples, drained
- 2 cups frozen strawberries
- 1/2 cup rolled oats
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine

What to do:

- Combine 2 tablespoons brown sugar and 1 tablespoon flour in a microwave-safe casserole. Mix well.
- Add apples and strawberries. Mix well. Microwave on HIGH 5 to 7 minutes or until heated.
- Combine oats, remaining brown sugar, remaining flour and cinnamon in a medium bowl. Mix well.
- Stir in butter or margarine until the mixture is crumbly.
- Spread crumb mixture over fruit.
- Microwave on HIGH 4 minutes. Let stand 10 minutes. Serve plain or over ice cream or yogurt. Serves 6.

YOU CAN DO IT!

Dear Jax, Why are photos in the newspaper all made of little dots? Justin Camaratto Huntington, California experiment #1

See This Dot
WHAT YOU NEED: Clear tape - water - baby pin
WHAT TO DO: Cover this photograph with the tape. Press down tight and make sure it's completely covered. Dip the folded end of the baby pin into the water and touch it to Andy's eye - right in the middle of the picture. Leave just one drop of water. Look closely into the water drop. It becomes a magnifier.

experiment #2
WHAT IS GOING ON:
The picture seems to have lots of grays in it, like Andy's hair and his face. But really, it's all made of little dots of pure black. Our minds can't read the dots as separate things because the dots are too small. Our brains add together the black dots and the white paper to get gray. It's a kind of illusion.

Family Safety Checklist

Ah ... spring and summer, the favorite time of year for kids. It's also the most dangerous. With more free time, there are more chances for injuries. Here's a safety checklist of some of the rules for you and your family to go over together. Put a check if you follow a safety rule. Put a cross if it is something you should work on. Being aware of and following good safety rules could save your life! Make a list of other safety rules you know.

In your neighborhood

- Do you regularly inspect your playgrounds? Look out for broken equipment and dangerous surfaces.
- Are you aware of the areas that are strictly off-limits?
- garages construction sites
- Dumpsters vacant buildings
- waterfronts railroad tracks
- Do you go over common-sense walking rules, such as those about how to cross a street safely?

Swimming

- Does your family make certain that an adult is closely watching when you go in or near the water?
- Do you know how to swim or are you planning to take lessons?
- Do you know your safe swimming rules?
- Do your parents know infant and child CPR?
- Is the pool in your backyard or in that of a neighbor's carefully fenced? Fences should be at least 5 feet tall and run around all four sides.
- Do you know what to look for in the water? Undercurrents and waves can be dangerous.

Cycling safety

- Do you know your cycling rules? Remember, a bike is a vehicle, not a toy.
- Does every cycling member of your family wear a safety-approved helmet?
- Have you checked to see that your bikes are in good working order?
- Have you carefully discussed and checked out the areas where you plan to cycle?

Window safety

- Are you certain that all of the windows are secure? Does your family have window guards on all windows (except those that are used as emergency fire exits)? Windows that are open only 5 inches can be a danger to kids.
- Are beds and other furniture away from windows?
- Are all unopened windows locked at all times?

Seat belt safety

- When traveling anywhere, do you fasten your seat belt? Are younger kids seated and fastened into their child safety seats?

Little dotz

The first circle is white. The last circle is black. And there are lots of shades of gray in between. The thing is, there aren't gray inks - just black. Look closely and you'll see the dots that fake the shades of gray.

This is a halftone screen. It's called 65 l.p.i. That means there are 65 lines per inch - or 65 dots per inch. Magazines print with smaller dots that are harder to see - at 133 l.p.i., or even smaller dots at 150 l.p.i.

PETER PENGUIN'S PUZZLE LE-DO

Fit the names of this safety equipment into the puzzle.

ACROSS: 2. _____ 3. _____

DOWN: 1. _____ 3. _____ 4. _____

Answers: Down: 1. flashlight; 3. shoes; 4. goggles. Across: 2. pads; 3. rope; 5. helmet.

For use by teachers and parents at home and at school. For use with issue: Kids' Safety Messages

Main idea: This issue is about safety. The following is a list of activities to be used with this issue. They are listed in order of difficulty, with the easier pre-reader assignments listed first. Ask the children to do the following:

1. Draw a safety poster illustrating your safety message.
2. Make a classroom safety booklet. Each student should write out his or her safety story and illustrate it with the message below the picture. Each story can be collected and put into a classroom safety booklet.
3. Make a safety message by cutting out letters from your newspaper.
4. Ask each child to make up a safety quiz of pointers not in this issue. Ask them to take it home for their parents to go over.
5. Make a summer safety checklist to put outside your classroom door.
6. Look through your paper for news of people who have been injured. How could these incidents have been avoided?

BSHS hurdler eyes state gold medal

By STEVE REAGAN
Sportswriter

There's no scientific poll to back the theory, but it is reasonable to assume that most runners at next week's state track meet are physically skilled athletes who have gradually honed their techniques.

For Big Spring's Justin Taylor, it's the opposite: He has always been known for his superior technique and is now honing his athletic skills.

The result? Taylor will make his second straight state track meet appearance in the 110-meter hurdles Saturday at Memorial Stadium on the University of Texas campus.

That Taylor knows the nuts and bolts of his chosen event are evidenced by three consecutive District 3-4A titles. But he and his coaches at Big Spring High School knew he would have to become faster to mine state gold, and they set about to correct that situation this season.

Big Spring coaches put Taylor through a regimen designed to increase his speed - including sprints, downhill running and a pulley system - and the results are a career-best time for Taylor of 13.99 seconds in the 110, good enough to put him among the leaders in Class 4A in the event.

But that doesn't mean Taylor has abandoned his mania for technique; it's just that the added speed has made his technique even better, he said.

"The coaches have worked much more on my speed this year," he said. "That's why my times have gone down so much. And I've worked on my technique, and it's even better than last year."

The newfound speed has Taylor seriously eying a gold medal at this year's state meet, which would atone mightily for last year's sixth-place finish in which he stumbled over a hurdle in the finals.

"Last year, I went down there to just run my best time of the year," he said. "I knew I didn't have a chance to win. This year, I'm going down there with the intention to win."

That's more than realistic, BSHS head coach Randy Britton said.

"It's like I told him this morning, 'You go down there to win,'" Britton said. "You go down there with the time he's taking, you know full well you've got as good a chance as anybody to win."

As non-memorable as last year's experience was, Taylor said it should help him be better prepared this time around.

"Maybe, knowing that I've gone to the state meet before and knowing I can run with the best (should help)," he said. "You understand the anxiety, and you can tolerate the anxiety and stress."

Taylor's best time has him ranked third among meet entrants, but he says the field is wide open this year, and he won't be happy unless he brings home a medal.

Hawks battle crunch time - in class and on the diamond

Howard College starts quest for national title Saturday in Stephenville

By DAVE HARGRAVE
Sports Editor

Howard College's baseball players are wading through final exams this week in the classroom.

Final exams on the diamond start Saturday.

Howard (45-9, champions of the Western Junior College Athletic Conference) is one of eight teams competing at the state JUCO championship tournament, which starts Saturday at Tarleton State University in Stephenville. This isn't like your regular final exams, where you pass if you perform to a certain level.

Only one team passes. Seven teams fail.

The winner goes to the national championship tournament in Grand Junction, Colo., and Howard has every reason to think it can be that winner. However, the field features three nationally ranked squads - Galveston (No. 3), Howard (No. 7) and Northeast Texas (No. 20) - and any easy games Howard may have enjoyed during the regular season are distant memories. The other teams in the tournament are McLennan Community College, Hill Junior College and Laredo.

Howard opens its quest for the state championship Saturday at 5 p.m. against Navarro College (32-14), a school in Corsicana. Four conference champions face four conference runners-up in Saturday's first-round games.

Howard coach Brian Roper said he has to treat the first game of the double-elimination tournament as a must-win situation. Although it's tempting to look ahead at possible meetings with Galveston, Northeast

Texas (a team led by former Howard coach Bill Griffin) and WJCAC rival Odessa, Howard has to concentrate on Navarro.

"If you lose the first game, then to win the tournament you'll have to play seven games," Roper said. "As tough as it is to come out of the losers' bracket and win this thing, you take it one day at a time, but you have to lay it on the line every game. You don't save anything."

With that in mind, Roper said he will start staff ace John Major (11-1) in the opener. Major, a left-hander, had a 2.56 ERA going into his start Sunday in Howard's final regular-season game at Hill Junior College. Speaking of Hill JC, Howard could well be playing that team on a second straight Sunday. Depending on Howard's first-round result, the Hawks will play the winner or loser of the Hill-Laredo game, which is Saturday at 8 p.m.

Navarro coach Keith Thomas said he hasn't decided whether to pitch right-hander Dean Mitchell (9-3) or southpaw Nacho Morales (7-1) against Howard.

"I saw Howard against Hill Sunday, and that was the first time we'd seen them," Thomas said. "They're very disciplined, very well-coached, and they don't make many errors. We were very impressed."

A team could win the tournament in four games. The team that wins its first three games comes out of the winners' bracket then waits to play the winner of the losers' bracket in the championship game. In this format, the team winning the losers' bracket must beat the team from the winners' bracket twice to claim the trip to Grand Junction.

Howard has been slumping at the plate for the past seven games, starting with the doubleheader loss to New Mexico Junior College April 23 at Jack Barber Field. Despite this, Howard won three of those

"If you lose the first game, then to win the tournament you'll have to play seven games. As tough as it is to come out of the losers' bracket and win this thing, you take it one day at a time, but you have to lay it on the line every game. You don't save anything."

Brian Roper
Howard baseball coach

ROPER

games, including 3-2 and 9-6 wins Sunday at Hill JC.

Roper said: "Every team has their slumps at the plate, and we hadn't really had one until now. The last two innings on Sunday, though, we stung the ball really well, and on the way home the players really felt good about that. Not playing the way we should, and still being able to beat a team as good as Hill like that, we feel pretty good."

At a time when you'd expect Howard to be practicing like mad on the diamond, the Hawks are instead hitting the books. Roper is struggling to find times to practice that don't conflict with finals, and that is why the Hawks didn't practice Monday and likely will not practice today.

"I guess I could complain about it, but that's just a part of life," Roper said. "Education comes first."

Roper said Troy May, Howard's leadoff hitter, played just three innings Sunday because of back spasms. Jason Long, Howard's designated hitter and team home run leader with 10, did not play Sunday because of an eye injury he suffered playing racquetball. Roper said he expects both players to be ready to go Saturday.

Wednesday's Herald will feature a closer look at Howard's first-round game with Navarro.

Los Angeles Dodger Delino DeShields (14) has no luck breaking up a double play turned by Houston Astro second baseman Craig Biggio. The Dodgers overcame an 8-2 deficit, however, and won 9-8.

'Wild Thing' blows lead; Texas wins

By The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES - Tim Wallach was asked if he watched the final game of the World Series on TV last fall.

"No comment," Wallach said. "No way am I going to get into that."

Monday night's game between Houston and Los Angeles had something in common with the closing game of the World Series - Astros reliever Mitch Williams surrendering a game-winning homer in the ninth.

This time, Wallach made Williams the goat, hitting a two-run homer that gave the Dodgers a 9-8 victory over Williams and the Astros.

Williams, dealt away by the Phillies after he gave up a ninth-inning, three-run shot to Toronto's Joe Carter that ended the World Series in six games, was left second-guessing himself again after allowing four runs in the final inning.

Said Williams: "I don't know why I didn't throw my fastball. I didn't give up one hit on a fastball. Every hit was on a slider. It's called losing with your second-best pitch."

Williams, who had a club-record 43 saves for Philadelphia last season but received death threats after the season ended, was traded to the Astros in December for Doug Jones and Jeff Juden.

Williams (1-3) has a 9.45 ERA and has allowed 14 runs in 13 1/3 innings.

Rangers 11, Angels 3

ARLINGTON - Last year, Jose Canseco was known more for a season-ending relief pitching stint and a fly ball that bounced off his head and over the fence for home run than for anything he did at the plate.

Canseco's making waves again this season, but now he's doing it with his bat.

He improved his average to .469 with runners in scoring position after going 3-for-5 and driving in four runs Monday night as the Texas Rangers beat the California Angels, 11-3.

Canseco broke out of a 1-for-10 slump with a two-run homer to key a four-run third inning, added an RBI double in the seventh and a run-scoring single in the eighth.

Canseco, 15-for-32 this season with runners in scoring position, has 28 RBIs in his last 21 games.

"I think I'm a smarter hitter, especially with men on base," Canseco said. "The good thing is that the whole team is taking that attitude right now."

Canseco is recovering from right elbow surgery that limited him to 60 games last season. The injury happened during the relief appearance against the Boston Red Sox on May 29, 1993.

In 1991, Canseco's 44 home runs tied for the major league lead and he added 122 RBIs. But his numbers fell to 26 homers and 87 RBIs in 119 games in 1992, as he battled back from shoulder problems and adjusted to the move from Oakland to Texas.

"He's in a different mode this year," Rangers manager Kevin Kennedy said. "Jose is back. He worked his tail off last winter to get his form back to the Jose Canseco of two years ago. He's going to be one of the best players in the league this year, if he's not already."

Canseco has thus far shown a knack for knowing when to swing for the fences and when to go with the pitch and slap the ball in play.

"We're not worrying about the home run to left," Kennedy said. "We're using the whole field."

Juan Gonzalez went 2-for-3 with a two-run double and an RBI triple to contribute to the Rangers' 14-hit attack. Over the last 10 games, Gonzalez is batting .386 (17-for-44) with 18 RBIs. He has a career-high 10-game hitting streak.

Assistant coach to leave Howard

Terry Gray, assistant women's basketball coach at Howard College, is leaving the school to accept the head girls' coaching position at Wharton High School, HC Athletic Director Royce Chadwick said Monday.

Gray, who coached at Wharton and other South Texas schools before coming to Howard, has been accepted for the post pending Wharton school board approval.

He is completing his second year as assistant coach at Howard. During that time, he helped the Lady Hawks win consecutive Western Junior College Athletic Conference titles and make national junior college tournament appearances.

His last day at the college will be June 30, Chadwick said, adding that no timetable has been set for naming a replacement.

Sands' Gooch awarded scholarship

Sands High School senior Grant Gooch, a guard who averaged nearly 18 points per game for the basketball team, was named the winner of the Carl Leevy Memorial Scholarship Saturday at the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches banquet in San Antonio.

Gooch, Sands' valedictorian, was one of more than 30 boys and girls who applied for the award, which is given by TABC and Converse. The statewide award, a $1,000 scholarship, is given each year to one graduating senior whose father or mother is a coach.

Grant's father, Jerry Gooch, coaches the Sands basketball team.

"It's amazing that a Class 1A kid would get it," said Jerry Gooch, who earlier last week was named McMurry University's alumni coach of the year. "Usually a kid from Plano, or Houston, or any larger city gets it."

Texas Tech hosts baseball camp

The 1994 Red Raider Baseball Camp comes in three sessions: Session I (June 6-8), II (June 19-23) and III (July 31-August 4).

Session I is a day-only camp and costs $55.

Session II is a full camp, $280 for residents and $195 for commuters. Session III is the same as Session II. Registration forms are available at the Herald sports department.

'Rematch' set for Garrett Coliseum

Former Dallas Cowboys greats such as Tony Hill, Harvey Martin and Ed "Too Tall" Jones are expected to compete when the Dallas Cowboys Legends take on the Big Spring Police Department in a charity basketball game June 11 in Garrett Coliseum.

Proceeds from the game, which begins at 7 p.m., will go to the Julie Wennik Memorial Scholarship Fund. Wennik was a 1992 Big Spring High School graduate who was killed in an automobile accident last year.

Other former Cowboys scheduled to appear include either Tony Dorsett or Drew Pearson, Robert Newhouse, and Billy Joe Dupree. An autograph session will be held before the game.

For more information on the game, contact Stan Parker at 264-2566.

Andrews May Classic scheduled for May 27-29

ANDREWS - The Andrews May Classic Men's Slowpitch Softball Tournament will be held Memorial Day weekend, May 27-29 at Gene Burk Memorial Park in Andrews.

Entry fee for the double-elimination tournament is $110 per team, and must be received by 10 p.m. May 25. There is a 16-team limit, and ASA rules will apply.

For more information, contact James Senger at 523-4564.

Howard hoops camp begins June 27

The Howard College Girls Basketball Camp will be held in June and July this year.

The first camp will be held June 27-30 and the second will be held July 11-14. It is open to both day and overnight campers.

For more information, contact the Howard College athletic department at 264-5040.

Spending time with Bobby Knight, the Disastros and news

Random thoughts while recovering from my temporary assignment to news (Commissioner, what's a tax rate?):

In the future, I will try my best not to gripe about covering sports. I will probably not succeed, but I will try.

While we're waiting to plug in a new writer, yours truly got the temporary nod to cover a few news events Monday.

For those who like inside lingo, we call those events "hard news" stories. I guess that makes personality features "soft news" and sports stories "lighter-than-air news."

Boy, I can digress with the best of them, can't I?

Anyway, ol' Uncle Stevie, who hasn't seen the news side of the editorial department in a few years, took one for the team Monday.

Actually, I took three or four. Monday was an aberration in the newsroom: a busy news day. Ted St. Clair resigned from Moore Development, the county commissioners are trying to straighten out the 911 mess ... all of that and more fell into my lap.

Well, what the heck, I'm a pro, aren't I? I'm a trained observer, aren't I? I'm a semi-talented writer, aren't I?

I'm exhausted, is what I am. Monday was interesting, I'll say that much. I'll also say, with no reservation, that it is very, very nice to be back in sports.

Sports may be considered the "toy department" of a newsroom, but what the heck, I've always enjoyed toys.

The next time you think it couldn't get worse, try imagining Bobby Knight as your boss. With a hang-over. On a Monday.

It could get worse.

Steve Reagan

Last night, I went to bed with the knowledge that the Houston Astros had a comfortable 8-2 lead in the eighth inning against the Los Angeles Dodgers.

This morning, I woke up to discover that Wild Thing had struck again. Mitch Williams, a.k.a. The Wild Thing, blew yet another save situation Monday as the Dodgers rallied for a 9-8 win over the Disastros in Los Angeles.

OK, OK, OK ... so I couldn't get a big-league batter out if you spotted me two strikes and gave me all day to do it, but this is getting ridiculous.

Williams will forever be known as the guy who gave up Joe Carter's game-winning home run in Game 6 of the World Series last year.

The man obviously knows something about his craft, since he saved more than 40 games last year, but his penchant for late-inning dramatics must have his coaches buying stock in Pepto-Bismol.

Maybe that's why he's bounced between so many teams during his career. He will undoubtedly lead the Astros in saves this year, but he will definitely be the team leader in that little-known but all-important stat of "caused ulcers."

Wild Thing ... you make my stomach swing.

A scary moment

PUBLIC NOTICE

Texas Utilities Electric Company (TUElectric), in accordance with the Public Utility Regulatory Act (PURA), publishes NOTICE of its Statement of Intent to implement proposed Rate WPCF - Wholesale Power Service - Cap Rock. The only customer that will be affected by the proposed tariff will be Cap Rock Electric Cooperative, Inc. This is not a "major change" in rates within the meaning of the PURA since the charges under the proposed tariff are less than the charges that would otherwise be applicable under TUElectric's existing Rate WP - Wholesale Power Service, the tariff under which Cap Rock Electric Cooperative, Inc. presently receives service from TUElectric. The proposed effective date of the proposed tariff is June 10, 1994, or as soon thereafter as permitted by law.

A complete copy of the proposed tariff and TUElectric's application is on file with the Commission and at each of TUElectric's business offices.

Persons who wish to intervene in or comment upon these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible, as an intervention deadline will be imposed. A request to intervene or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information may also be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission's Public Information Office at (512) 458-0256, or (512) 458-0221 for text telephone. The deadline for intervention in the proceeding is 45 days after the date the application was filed with the Commission. The application was filed with the Commission on May 6, 1994.

Outdoors

Rules and regulations under which the CRMWD will provide for public hunting on wildlife management lands owned by the district were approved by directors in their Thursday meeting.

A drawing will be conducted annually to determine by lot those permitted to hunt at various tracts on weekends only. Hunters will pay $100 each to hunt with shotguns only, and bow and arrow hunters $50 (except $100 if exercised on the lease reserved for guns). Weekends are Friday noon to 30-min. post sunset Sunday.

The 1,100-acre Talpa tract will be reserved for archers.

Three tracts (2,000 acres in all) constituting the Riverside Ranch contiguous to and below Lake O.H. Iyie, will be reserved for gun hunters. The Giesecke Ranch 350-acre tract, hugging the west and north side of the lake above the Concho River arm, will be reserved for clients of orphan/childrens' homes.

All hunters must sign liability disclaimers, and those born after Sept. 1, 1971 must show proof of having attended a Texas Department of Parks and Wildlife gun safety course.

In addition to TDPW wildlife census in August-September, the district will conduct another census in January-February. Results of these will determine if habitat and weather conditions will warrant hunting in the next season.

These rules are subject to consent by the U.S. Corps of Engineers which reviews environmental matters under a Feb. 20, 1990 agreement.

Applications for the drawing should be mailed to the CRMWD Recreation Department, HCR 82, Box 4B, Leaday, TX 76888.

NBA Playoffs

Cinderella teams take court tonight

By The Associated Press

On the 12th day of the NBA playoffs, the fans — and the Chicago Bulls — rested.

Monday was not a game day for any of the eight teams remaining in the playoffs. And it was the first game-free day for all teams since the postseason started April 28. The only other scheduled day off through the first two rounds is next Monday, May 16.

Two second-round series begin tonight, with Indiana playing at Atlanta and Denver playing at Utah.

The other two series, Chicago-New York and Phoenix-Houston, resume Wednesday night. New York and Phoenix both hold 1-0 leads in the best-of-7 series.

Bulls coach Phil Jackson surprised the team Monday by loading them on a bus for practice, then taking them on a Staten Island ferry ride instead.

"Physically, we were in no position to work out," Jackson said. "This got our minds off the game so they can concentrate on the positive aspects of what happened yesterday. A thing like that can form a bitterness, and we needed to get ourselves feeling better."

"It was like a nice day in the park."

No team is more surprised to still be playing than the Denver Nuggets. The Nuggets dropped the first two games of their best-of-5 series with Seattle, then came back to win the final three — including the last two in overtime.

The three straight victories made Denver the first eighth-seeded playoff team in NBA history to beat an opponent with the best record in the conference.

Coach Dan Issel says his Nuggets already have exceeded expectations after slipping into the playoffs with a 42-40 record.

"I think what we get from here on out is just a bonus in terms of experience and our team growing up," he said.

The Jazz, while confident they can earn a trip to the Western Conference finals, are sure it won't come easy.

"I'm not thinking that far ahead right now," John Stockton said. "I'm thinking of Denver, and they just beat the best team in basketball."

Indiana at Atlanta

It's been eight days since the Pacers finished their sweep of the Orlando Magic. More impressively, it's been a month and two days since Indiana lost a game.

Riding an 11-game winning streak dating back to April 8, the Pacers are the hottest team left. They dispatched Shaquille O'Neal's team with two tough road victories, and now they'll have to win at the Omni in order to take this series from the Hawks.

During the regular season, the Hawks won three of five games against the Pacers, taking two of three at Atlanta and splitting two games at Indiana.

The Hawks could be tired tonight, two days after a draining five-game series against Miami ended with a 102-91 Hawks victory.

FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 11, 1994
ARIES (March 21-April 19): You might need to do some fast thinking, but you can handle a small financial crisis. Check out what a partner is really doing with your funds. The more realistic you are, the better. Good communications surround you. Tonight: Hang out with friends. ***
TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be serious when dealing with another's finances. Power plays are likely. Communications should center on your expectations. Another will not agree, no matter how much you push. Seek out new solutions. Tonight: Get a card for a loved one. **
GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You are personality-plus. Your biggest problem could be exhaustion. Options multiply if you are receptive to change. Someone demonstrates care for you in a meaningful way. A partner is there for you. Tonight: Express your deep feelings. ****
CANCER (June 21-July 22): Surprising news comes your way. Pressure between a loved one and a friend might have you a bit crazy. Try not to take sides; just listen. Your private thoughts might be going berserk as you absorb all the information. Tonight: Get away from it all. **
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Focus on the job at hand. You might not be able to handle the pressure between home and family. Try to evaluate situations from a new perspective. Communications are active, and a friend supports you. Zero in on what you want. Tonight: Get together with that friend. ****
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Confusing statements surround you. You need to be clear about what you want and where you are heading. Opportunities to handle a situation positively come your way. Do not overthink a situation. A misunderstanding is likely if you push. Tonight: Work late. ***
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Nov. 21): One-to-one relating is highlighted. Another might react strongly to what you say. Despite others' reactions, you get things moving because of your ability to communicate one on one. A positive approach enhances finances. Tonight: Be sexy. ****

Dear Abby - Letters...

Child of Depression found riches in books

DEAR ABBY: Your quote from the late S.I. Hayakawa concerning the value of good literature reminded me of how rich my own life has been. I have never been "poor."
My father raised six children on $10.50 a week (for 55 hours of work a week) until the Great Depression, and then there were weeks when only an occasional day of work could be found, and usually the pay was only 50 cents for that day.
There were times when there was no food in the house, and our father made us wash and iron our one good cotton dress or khaki suit, and wear it to church on Sunday and to school the rest of the week.
When I was 9, I discovered the public library three miles from my home, and had a wonderful experience with Alice in "Through the Looking Glass." As I grew older, I delved with Rafael Sabatini's "Scaramouche," rode with Zane Grey's "Riders of the Purple Sage," laughed with Damon Runyon's "Guys and Dolls," and traveled all over the world.
I have sat in the presence of Plato, Socrates, Jesus of Nazareth, Nietzsche, Voltaire, George Bernard Shaw and Clarence Darrow. Because I could read, I have never been poor. — HOWARD CHILDRESS, MURFREESBORO, TENN.
DEAR HOWARD CHILDRESS: Not only were you never "poor," you were intellectually very rich indeed. I was once asked, "If you could give children only one piece of advice, what would it be?" My response:
"Read, read, read! In reading, you will open up new worlds, real and imagined. Read for information; read for pleasure. Our libraries are filled with knowledge and joy, and it's all there — free for the taking. The person who DOES NOT read is no better off than the person

Hoops Hall of Fame inducts Daly, Crum

By The Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — Chuck Daly, the tough competitor who has won championships in the NBA and the Olympics, talked gently of love as he was inducted into the Hall of Fame.

"That's what it's all about. Love and respect for the people and the game," said Daly, who now coaches the New Jersey Nets.

Also inducted Monday were Louisville coach Denny Crum, Italy's greatest coach, Cesare Rubini, plus players Carol Blazejowski and Buddy Jeannette.

As he accepted the game's greatest honor, Daly recalled his first coaching job at Punxsutawney (Pa.) High School in 1955 and read a card from a colleague, recently retired after 36 years of high school coaching. It said: "You taught me it's OK to love coaching a game."

"That's what we who don't have the talent to perform do," said Daly, 62. "We become lifers. We manage other people's abilities and try to make them work. I'm a lifer."

In 1983, Daly took over the Detroit Pistons, a team that never had consecutive winning seasons, and led them to NBA championships in 1989 and 1990.

He also guided Pennsylvania to four Ivy League titles in the 1970s and the Dream Team to the Olympics gold medal in Barcelona.

Crum walked down the red carpet arm in arm with John Wooden, his old mentor at UCLA and the only man inducted to the Hall as player and coach. It was a tossup which man had the bigger grin.

"He is the one who taught me everything I know about basketball," said Crum, who played for
