Today, Texas slaves realized freedom

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

On January 1, 1863, President Abraham Lincoln issued an edict called the Emancipation Proclamation which freed all people from the bonds of slavery. But Texas slaves were not made aware of the proclamation until June 19, 1865, some two and a half years later.

That date became known as "Juneteenth" which became a state holiday in 1980.

The proclamation read: "...That on the first day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three, all persons held as slaves within any State or designated part of a State, the people whereof shall then be in rebellion against the United States, shall be then, thenceforward, and forever, free..."

Before slaves were freed, the United States was the world's leader in cotton production, but more important is the fact that the U.S. was fighting a Civil War over the issue of slavery.

Freeing slaves was a distinct advantage to the Union Army because many slaves, if they weren't running to freedom through the Underground railroad, were joining the Army as soldiers. By the end of the war, more than 180,000 ex-slaves were soldiers in the Union Army.

Freedom is important to all people, but to African Americans, in Texas, June 19 is especially important because

'The people of Texas are informed that in accordance with a proclamation from the Executive of the United States, all slaves are free...'

General Order 3

It was on that date in 1865 that Texas slaves learned of the Emancipation Proclamation - the final order, an order giving them the freedom that, for many, seemed like nothing more than a wild figment of someone's imagination.

Most of Texas' more than 200,000 slaves probably weren't around or near Galveston's Ashton Villa on June 19, 1865, to hear Maj. Gen. Gordon Granger read General Order Number 3:

"The people of Texas are informed that in accordance with a proclamation from the Executive of the United States, all slaves are free. This involves an absolute equality of rights and rights of property between former masters and former slaves, and the connection heretofore existing between them becomes that between employer and free laborer.

The freedmen are advised to remain at their present homes and work for wages. They are informed that they will not be allowed to collect at military posts, and that they will not be supported in idleness, either there or elsewhere."

Just as "We Shall Overcome" became the unofficial song and cry of the Civil Rights movement during the 1960s, upon learning of their freedom, slaves began celebrating and rejoicing with words from old Negro spirituals such as "Soon I will be done with the troubles of the world."

By the first anniversary of the announcement of their freedom, ex-slaves had taken "June 19" and made it "Juneteenth," (the only state holiday in the nation to recognize emancipation) and the celebrations were on.

In larger cities like Austin, Houston, Dallas/Ft. Worth, etc., Juneteenth is more like a giant festival with old and new traditions alike such as digging pits and roasting and barbecuing pork and beef, serving up red soda water and watermelon as well as fried chicken and cornbread.

Also in some larger cities, permanent celebration sites have long since been established. What is known today as "Emancipation Park" in Houston was 10 acres of land purchased in 1872 by Rev. Jack Yates and other black leaders for $1,000 and in 1898 Juneteenth organizers in Mexia (near Waco) purchased 10 acres of land near the Navasota River. Today, that same land is full of oak trees and is known as Booker T. Washington Park.

What so many Juneteenth organizers are trying to do today is to regenerate the strong sense of family that the very first celebrations had. The feeling is that young African Americans should be

Gutierrez indicted for capital murder

By KELLIE JONES
Staff Writer

A Howard County grand jury has indicted Jesse Gutierrez, 31 of HC 63 Box 237, of capital murder. Gutierrez is suspected of sexually assaulting and murdering his one year old niece Daphne Nicole Gutierrez on April 30.

"The next step will be to have an arraignment then set a trial date. Since he is in jail at this time, I anticipate a trial to be set for late summer or early fall," explained District Attorney Rick Hamby.

"During the arraignment, we will handle administrative matters such as entering what his plea will be to the indictment. We will make sure he is represented by counsel and that he understands what he's been indicted for."

Gutierrez remains in the Howard County jail under a $150,000 bond.

Bush outlines plan to curb juvenile crime

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

From the Texas Border to Monahans, Seminole, Lamesa and to Big Spring, George W. Bush continued to make his rounds of Texas on Thursday promoting his vision for the future of Texas which includes overhauling the juvenile justice system.

Next to education, juvenile crime will be, according to Bush, one of the most important issues Texans face and taking money from education to fix the crime problem is not an alternative.

Crime is at an alarming level in Texas and both Gov. Ann Richards and Bush say they have the solutions, but issues will be taken care of in debate and not through mudslinging according to Bush who has announced a 17-point plan to redo the juvenile justice system.

Bush said, "I don't want to attack Gov. Richards personally, but I just don't think the leadership has been there."

The old system is outdated, according to Bush, who says his plan to revamp the system is based on four principles: a new approach emphasizing punishment, personal responsibility and accountability; longer, tougher sentences; private sector solutions to and local control of community problems; and saving the kids that can still be saved.

In unveiling his 17-point plan, Bush said that juvenile laws in Texas have not seen any major revisions since 1973 and that these laws should no longer be used to justify lenient sentences for juvenile offenders.

"The laws," Bush said, "should be rewritten to emphasize accountability, establish quilt, assess punishment and protect the community."

"Violent juvenile crime is exploding, up from 4,631 arrests in 1990 to 6,178 in 1992, a 33 percent jump. The crimes are getting more violent, random, and shocking and the perpetrators are getting younger. We must act now to save a generation of children. We cannot continue neglecting this problem as the current governor has done during the last three years."

The Bush plan calls for lowering the age at which juveniles can be tried as adults from 15 to 14, expanding the number of offenses for which juvenile can face tougher sentences, and building 3,500

The 17 Point Plan

The 17-points in Bush's plan are:

- Rewrite outdated juvenile laws to reflect a new approach to juvenile crime.
- Lower the age at which juveniles can be tried as adults.
- Amend the determinate sentencing statute to include all aggravated offenses.
- Increase the capacity of the Texas Youth Commission (TYC) by 3,500 beds to house violent juveniles.
- Juveniles out on parole from the TYC for felonies who are then charged with another felony should be tried as adults.
- The decision to prosecute should be made by District Attorneys, not probation officers.
- Make juvenile records freely available to law enforcement officials.
- Increase the minimum amount of time served at the TYC.
- Expand fingerprinting and photographing of juveniles involved in crime.
- Juveniles under the age of 18 should not be allowed to possess a firearm, with certain exceptions.
- Make it easier for schools to deal with classroom violence and establish Tough Love Academies.
- Require all TYC inmates to participate in computer-based literacy programs.
- Make state funding for community-based programs to deter young criminals a priority.
- Increase the Juvenile Probation Commission budget for community-based programs.

Grand jury indicts 8 for welfare fraud charges

By KELLIE JONES
Staff Writer

Fourteen Howard County residents are suspected of welfare fraud and the Texas Department of Human Services took their cases to the grand jury for possible indictment on Thursday.

All of these people are accused of illegally obtaining financial assistance, food stamps and/or Medicaid assistance from the state.

Regional Supervisor Don McWhorter says the total dollar amount involved in these cases is $55,609.70. "This includes $18,707 in welfare benefits, $20,062 in food stamp benefits and $16,840.70 in Medicaid benefits. Nine of these individuals are accused of not reporting the correct household income from employment. Five of them are accused of not reporting the correct number of people living in the household," McWhorter said.

McWhorter explained that the fraudulent activities were first discovered by alert local caseworkers and then referred to the Department of Human Services office in Abilene. "The investigation took about four months for us to complete."

"We interviewed people and discovered that in some cases someone would tell the caseworker that their husband either wasn't living there or wasn't working. We discovered that others would say they had children living with them to receive extra money when in fact that child hadn't been living there all year," McWhorter explained.

McWhorter says they are not trying to scare people off welfare but "insure that those who need it are getting what they deserve. We are trying to stop the greedy people. The state of Texas has only so much to give and we want to make sure the poor are getting the money and not others who don't need it."

Once the investigation was complete, the cases were turned over to District Attorney Rick Hamby who took the information to the grand jury.

Welfare fraud is a third degree felony and there are three charges that a person could face if indicted. "Felony theft, tampering with governmental records or securing execution of document by deception are what we could charge them with. These are punishable by two to 10 years in prison and up to a $10,000 fine."

"We are not dealing with hardened criminals and most will get put on probation and have to pay restitution. The judge can deny their benefits. If they are found guilty, they will be denied benefits for six months. If they are found guilty a second time, they are denied for 12 months and if it happens a third time then they are permanently disqualified from assistance," explained McWhorter.

According to the district attorney's office, eight people were indicted for welfare fraud.

"A few others have already pled guilty, were put on probation and ordered to make restitution to the state," said District Attorney Rick Hamby.

Those indicted by the grand jury were: Donna Berry, Daniel O. Gonzales, Stephanie Gayle Jobe, Grace Leal, Cynthia Munoz, Jose Munoz III, Leticia Castillo Reyna and Melinda Rios.

taught and should remember the struggles that previous generations overcame to re-gain the freedom that was taken away from them hundreds of years earlier.

Freedom for African Americans in Texas can be traced back to June 19, 1865, some 129 years ago when hope seemed to be no stronger than the faint voices singing, "Go down Moses, way down in Egypt land, tell old Pharaoh, let my people go."

In the words of James Weldon Johnson's Negro National Anthem, with Juneteenth once again at hand, African Americans in Texas will again, "face the rising sun of a new day begun."

Perhaps the best advice on rights and freedom was given by Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. in his final and most prophetic sermon at Mason Temple in Memphis, Tennessee the night before he was killed.

He said, "...Let us rise up tonight with a greater readiness. Let us stand with a greater determination. And let us move on in these powerful days, these days of challenge to make America what it ought to be. We have an opportunity to make America a better nation...I just want to do God's will. And He's allowed me to go up to the mountain. And I've looked over. And I've seen the promised land. I may not get there with you. But I want you to know tonight, that we, as a people will get to the promised land..."

Bush believes he has the answer to prison problem

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

With the rising population in Texas prisons and the lack of adequate space and facilities, what do to about Texas prisons is a question that both Gov. Ann Richards and Republican challenger George W. Bush will face many times before the November election.

"Texas is not building prisons and jails fast enough and I think we should be using tents and barracks as a temporary solution," Bush said.

Bush has already expressed his opposition to early releases and has also called for the abolition of the releases of criminals from state prisons through so-called "mandatory supervision."

Under mandatory supervision, inmates are released from prison by a statutory formula and not by a decision of the Board of Pardons and Paroles. Inmates legally eligible for mandatory supervision are released when their calendar time served and their accrued good conduct time together equal their maximum sentence.

Bush said, "Every prisoner who is let out on mandatory supervision has previously been denied parole and for very good reason, so it makes no sense to let them get out of jail without first passing muster with the Parole Board."

"When the Parole Board decides someone is a threat to society, that prisoner should serve all their time unless and until the Parole Board determines there's a reasonable chance the criminal may be safely released. The present mandatory supervision law gives some violent criminals a 'get out of jail free' card that they should be denied. Good time shouldn't be allowed to excuse a violent, dangerous past."

Mandatory supervision is not the only method of releasing criminals that Bush is addressing during the campaign. He believes that certain offenses don't warrant parole consideration. "I believe that there should be no parole for sex offenses or murder."

Bush pointed out that 3,354 criminals were released last year under mandatory supervision. That number was an increase over 1992 releases which totaled 2,178 and over 1991 which totaled 2,213. The mandatory law was put on Texas law books in 1977 and then amended in 1987.

Current member and former Chairman of the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles, Henry B. Keene supports Bush's position saying, "As a conservative parole decision maker, concerned with the safety of the general public, I believe that existing law authorizing the mandatory release of inmates from prison should be abolished in its entirety. This is not a partisan issue but rather what is best for the citizens of Texas."

New abortion clinic law is upheld

The Associated Press

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — An anti-abortion group says it won't relent in its battle to overturn a new law that imposes heavy penalties for blocking entrances to abortion clinics.

"There's no surrender from this camp," Jerry Horn, spokesman for American Life League Inc. of Stafford, Va., said Thursday after a federal judge ruled that the law does not abridge the First Amendment rights of non-violent protesters.

The league and other groups claimed the law was too vague, violated their right of free speech and could put peaceful, non-violent protesters in danger of prosecution.

But in a 15-page ruling, U.S. District Judge Leonie Brinkema said the law was a reasonable and appropriate way to deal with an increase in anti-abortion protest violence.

The ruling was the first to come out of several challenges anti-abortion activists have filed nationwide.

"Contrary to plaintiffs' assertions, the court finds that this statute avoids infringing on legitimate First Amendment rights," Brinkema said. "The First Amendment protects the plaintiffs' right to hold and express beliefs opposing abortion; it does not give them unfettered license to express those beliefs in conduct."

Walter Lee turns W. Texas into a folk music mecca

By BARBARA MORRISON
Staff Writer

COAHOMA - When a person hears the words "Folk Capital of the Country," visions of West Texas don't immediately come to mind.

However, if the pastor of Coahoma's First Presbyterian Church has anything to do with it, those visions just might change.

Walter Lee loves folk music and he's been bringing it to West Texas for the past year. Billed as this area's "biggest sleeper," the Coahoma Concert Series offers family entertainment and an introduction to culture unavailable anywhere else in the region.

Lee comes by his artists very conveniently since he is also the chaplain for the Kerrville Folk Festival. "I know these guys," he says, "and they bring a type of music everybody will love."

Himself a singer/songwriter, Lee says his motives for the series are sincere. "I've seen changes in the way people listen to music," he explains. "I became aware of how few kids these days are learning to play instruments."

Allen Damron to perform Saturday

By BARBARA MORRISON
Staff Writer

COAHOMA - If the music of Peter, Paul and Mary strikes a chord of musical memory, the place to be is the First Presbyterian Church Social Hall Saturday evening in Coahoma. But don't go there expecting just any ol' folk artist show.

Allen Wayne Damron is the scheduled artist for the Coahoma Concert Series set to begin at 7:30 p.m.

Damron is the named first director of the Kerrville Folk Festival. If the name seems slightly familiar, he was also the billed artist for the grand opening of the West Texas Center for the Arts in Big Spring.

Damron's music has touched the world and is known throughout the music industry.

"Allen Damron has a unique and special talent that combines music, caring and art in the time-honored tradition of our best singers," said Peter Yarrow of Peter, Paul and Mary fame. The Dallas Morning News

Hardly any are learning to play the guitar and sing this style. Music is being listened to instead of being 'done.'

Lee's hope is to re-introduce West Texas to current folk music available throughout the country, as well as to inspire youth to become aware of what they can personally do. Many times the artists in the series are known both nationally and internationally on the folk circuit.

"The church is doing it as a community service," says Lee. "We do accept donations of $6 per person or $15 a family, but if an individual can't afford it, don't let money be the reason to not come. It's strictly done on donations."

First Presbyterian receives none of the monies gathered. Instead, they offer it to the performer. "All of the money goes to the artist," says Lee. "It's what they travel on and what they live on."

The next series performance is set for Saturday evening at 7:30 in the church social hall. First named director of the Kerrville Folk Festival, Allen Wayne Damron, is the scheduled artist.

labeled Damron's show as "...one of the top ten shows of the year - excluding nothing." The Austin American-Statesman said Damron is "absolutely one of the greatest entertainers ever seen on any stage."

Allen Damron was one of only nine performers officially designated by the Texas Legislature as goodwill ambassadors from the State of Texas to the world for the Texas Sesquicentennial Year of 1986. The reason for his selection was stated as "his ability to entertain any audience, anywhere."

Damron began singing professionally in 1957. Through the years, he has amassed several credits including many album releases and film performances, including Disney productions. He has also taken his talents to television, radio and the theater stage.

The show is open to the public and there is no charge. Donations of $6 per person or $15 per family are accepted and go entirely to the performer.

Chorale brings patriotism alive during July 4 activities

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

As part of Big Spring's Chamber of Commerce Fourth of July celebration, Randy Stevens, musical director of First United Methodist Church, will present the Big Spring Civil Chorale at the annual fireworks display.

During the Fourth of July festivities, the Chorale will perform for about 35 minutes singing a festival arrangement of patriotic songs including such songs as the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" and "God Bless America" which will include brass and keyboard accompaniments.

In the tradition of the Living Christmas Tree, Stevens came up with the idea last fall.

Church is one thing, according to Stevens but, "this is entirely different," he said. "We want to stir up a little patriotism and we will be performing some very stirring patriotic music."

The Chorale is not sponsored by any church or organization although the group, made up of people from all over Big Spring, does meet at First United Methodist for rehearsals.

This is the first time for a community chorus to perform in this capacity. Stevens said, "We have had good support in the past and will look to expand later on."

Currently the Chorale is 40 to 50 people strong and will perform about three times a year.

Stevens said, "I don't see why we can't eventually have 70 to 80 people in the Chorale. We have picked July 4, the first weekend in December and late February (which will be our spring 'pops' concert) as our performance dates."

Because people have such busy schedules, the Chorale practices anywhere from four to six weeks before a performance. Stevens said, "Rehearsals are set up so that we can get a short-term, high-intensity commitment to rehearsal."

Disney vs. landowners, a fight among the rich

WASHINGTON — A uniquely American culture clash: war between the rich and privileged, showdown over whose wealth and influence is more powerful — a marvelous fight between dis-

Wouldn't it be nice, said Disney and its chairman, Michael D. Eisner, if taxpayers of the state of Virginia handed over an initial $163 million to pay for roads and other infrastructure the Disney park will require?

Yes, of course, answered the past and present governors and the Virginia Legislature, performing as public officials often do when they've been bought and paid for by special interests.

The rich Virginia landowners were, quite naturally, scandalized at the Disney raid on the state treasury.

It wasn't mentioned that less than six years earlier the Virginia landowners rode with another party of raiders who robbed the U.S. treasury of about $131 million to "save" another parcel of land near the Civil War Manassas battleground.

That parcel, not on the actual battlefield but a spot where Confederate Gen. Robert E. Lee was said to have "headquartered" overnight, had cost a local developer only $11 million two years earlier.

Beyond the simple damfoolery of Congress and its willingness to give away public money, the $131 million purchase of General Lee's "headquarters" also displayed the hand of the Washington establishment, always available when Congress and the federal bureaucracy need persuading.

That establishment, impressively powerful in business, government and the media, invariably favors its own in local matters and the rich landowners of Northern Virginia are often counted as members of the Washington elite.

So the Disney forces may find, after winning over the bumptkins of Virginia officialdom, that to win final approval of their American history theme park they'll have to fight the Washington establishment and all its vast powers to influence Congress and untangle the red tape of regulatory agencies.

A suitable resolution might be that Disney — whose revenues last year were reported to be $7.5 billion — would simply buy out the rich landowners nearest the Disney building site in Northern Virginia, acquiring their properties and their silence.

Then the glitzy proprietors of what was once Walt Disney's company could get to work tacking together their Mickey Mouse version of "American history."

Leonard E. Larsen writes commentaries for Scripps Howard News Service.

Leonard Larsen

The principal combatants are showy rich Hollywood people, who are accustomed to having their own way, lined up against the carefully understated rich landowners of the Virginia hunt country, also accustomed to having their own way.

Not surprisingly, the rich on both sides employ public relations wizards and lobbyists and — again, not surprisingly — the arguments for and against are laced with lies.

This American history theme park, this enterprise of beauty and good taste, so the Disney story goes, will make that portion of Northern Virginia and the entire state bloom with new wealth from millions and millions of tourists who'll leave their money but will otherwise hardly be noticed.

This abomination, this wretched excess of showbiz to be inflicted on a peaceful countryside, the opposition answers, is the nightmarish work of devilish outsiders who would trample over the blood-blessed battlefields of the Civil War and leave only the polluted dregs of commercialization gone mad.

What the Disney people and the landed Virginians share — in addition to wealth — is the cleverness that helped make them all rich, not just a genius for accumulating money but a special genius for making the public pay to occasionally lighten the burdens of the rich.

In a first-strike victory in the campaign to build the American history theme park, Disney captured not only the present Republican Virginia governor, George Allen, but also the former Democratic governor, Doug Wilder, along with the Virginia Legislature.

Will World Cup light fire in U.S. soccer?

Scripps Howard News Service

For those who haven't been paying attention, here is a communique from the world of international sports: The great soccer shootout of 1994 is under way. It's called the World Cup finals. It's being held for the first time in the United States. Never heard of it? You will. You might even learn to like it over the next four weeks.

We say this because Americans have a blind spot when it comes to soccer, a game that features intricate footwork, acrobatic attackers, tenacious defenders and scores so low (1 to 0, 2 to 1, 0 to 0) that critics consider it the athletic equivalent of narcolepsy.

The rhythm of the game, according to David Brooks in The Wall Street Journal, goes something like this:

"Maybe... maybe... no. Maybe... maybe... no. Maybe... maybe... no. Maybe... maybe... maybe... YES! YES! YES!"

"When a goal actually does come," says Brooks, "it only seems so magnificent because the rest of the game is so terrible."

The truth of the matter is that Americans just don't understand soccer. Europeans and Latin Americans think soccer is a blast, regard soccer stars as national heroes, celebrate in the streets when their team wins, sink into the depths of despair when their team loses. In this country, we'd rather watch grass grow.

This could change. What if the U.S. team does well? What if the 24 finalists playing in nine American cities generate the enthusiasm for soccer normally associated with Buenos Aires or Amsterdam?

For reasons not entirely clear, soccer seems to thrive among children in the United States — kids like to kick a ball — but fades into oblivion once the children become adults. Maybe it has something to do with the demand for home runs and touchdowns.

Theories aside, the World Cup competition is America's game until the middle of July. It's a chance for skeptics to take a new look — and find out what the rest of the world is so excited about.

'Family cap' crude attempt to limit families

Scripps Howard News Service

USA Today Whether you call it a "family cap" or a "child exclusion," the idea of limiting or denying benefits to welfare mothers who have additional children is just a crude attempt to limit the family size of the poor. ... The truth is that family caps are family punishments, and that they punish all the wrong people. Instead of deterring additional children, restricting benefits will take food from needy children and make it even tougher for the poor to survive. The federal government and states can do much to help mothers get off and stay off welfare by providing job training, child care and affordable health care. But government efforts to limit how many children a poor mother may have don't help our needy families. They hurt them.

Dinner less than inviting

Over and over, we hear that the nagging by Republicans, the media and former female acquaintances should end and President Clinton should be allowed to do the job for which he was elected.

Mike Royko

I'm in favor of everyone doing the job for which they are hired and paid, whether it is a corporate CEO, a bartender or a kid who mows the lawn.

And at times I'm amazed that anyone has the energy and brains for the demands of the presidency of the United States, which is the single most awesome job in the world.

So I would be delighted and relieved if President Clinton could be spared distractions to concentrate on solving our many domestic problems while protecting us and our allies from the perils of foreign wackos.

But maybe the President and his staff should take a look at his schedule and decide what is important and what isn't. Sort of the old concept of the time and motion study.

Most people do this instinctively. If you work hard eight or nine hours a day, you shuffle home most weeknights, kick off your shoes, play with the kids, read or watch some TV, get a good night's sleep and are clear-eyed in the morning.

Maybe you stop for a beer after work, or sip a drink on the commuter train. But weeknights are not considered big social times. Not with a job waiting in the morning. That's why weekends are such an important part of life.

So I was surprised by a letter I received in this morning's mail.

The return address on the envelope was a simple three words: "The White House."

Inside was a spiffily printed formal invitation:

"The President and Mrs. Clinton request the pleasure of the company of Mr. Royko at dinner on Wednesday, June 15, 1994 at 7:00 o'clock.

"Movie to follow."

The invitation went on to say that if I want to bring a guest, I should respond as early as possible with my guest's name, date of birth and Social Security number. I suppose they want to be sure my blond is not a loonie bomb-thrower.

Finally, it said that when I arrive at the East Entrance of the White House, I should have some form of photo ID. A good idea, since I could be a North Korean secret agent posing as me. Anything is possible.

Seeing the invitation, my first reaction was: "A Wednesday night? I don't go out to dinner on Wednesday nights because I work all day Wednesday and I have to get up Thursday morning and work."

And I can't conceive of going all the way to Washington, D.C., just for a free meal. Even with a movie to follow. Since nine of 10 movies stink, the odds are I won't like it.

When I showed the invitation to the blond, she gushed: "But if we ... and if you ... and maybe we could ... and you could adjust ..."

I don't want to sound like a male chauvinist pig, which I admit being, but that is the way women are. They like parties and dinners and such. It's an excuse for them to dress up. Truth: I don't own a suit with pants that match.

So I called and declined the opportunity to dine with the President and, presumably, the brilliant lady from Park Ridge, Ill. It's not that I want to be ungracious. I am flattered at being invited to dinner at the White House. Sort of. Maybe. Actually, I'm not at all flattered, since I know it is a political game.

There is absolutely no reason for the President to invite me to dine at the White House, and to watch an after-dinner movie. (I prefer after-dinner hooch.)

After a hard day in the world's toughest job, the President should go upstairs, flop on a couch, yank off his tie and say: "Well, Hillary, how'd it go today? Kid get home from school OK? What's for dinner?"

He shouldn't be sitting tensely at a long dining table, trying to remember what his public relations people told him: "Uh, this schnook is from Chicago, a columnist, yeah, and Hillary read some of his junk as a teen-ager, and I should mention that, so maybe this gullible goof will be dazzled to be here in the White House and will write something nice about us."

It's part of the political game and I understand that. Among Washington journalists — especially those who get to jabber on TV — being invited to chow at the White House affirms their success and importance.

But for me, Wednesday and the next morning are workdays. And for the President, they should be, too. If the job is as demanding as reported, he shouldn't be wasting tax-paid grub on me.

He should spend his Wednesday nights like most working Americans: relaxing, resting, maybe thinking about the next day's pains in the butt. That is what his yuppie advisers should be telling him: Put your time to its best use.

But having me for dinner? If my wife doesn't like having me for dinner, why should Bill and Hillary?

You wanted the job, so do the job and quit goofing around. If you're in Chicago, I'll gladly buy you a fast beer, but that's it. I'm busy, so are you. Get to work, kid.

And older generations may be too obsessed with self to notice the terrible vacuum of meaning and real love that children complain of. ... As the nation moved to war in the Persian Gulf in December 1990, those Americans who were opposed to engagement took a variety of steps to persuade Congress to resist. In Ladue, Mo., Margaret Gillo decided that she would place a 24-by-36-inch sign on her lawn reading "Say No to War in the Persian Gulf, Call Congress Now." It disappeared. She put up another, and it was knocked down. Police were unconcerned, reminding her that such signs were prohibited in Ladue. So she retreated inside her home and put a somewhat smaller sign that said "For Peace in the Gulf" in a second story window, and she sued the city contesting the constitutionality of the ordinance. (Last week, a unanimous Supreme Court agreed that the law violated her free speech rights. ... All the courts that heard this case decided in favor of Margaret Gillo. How could they have done otherwise? She had a clear opinion on a matter of public importance. She made her views known peacefully and to try and persuade neighbors. And she successfully resisted all the way to the Supreme Court the city government's attempt to limit her right of speech.

Los Angeles Times The venerable National Association for the Advancement of Colored People is at a turning point. Now, 30 years after the courts outlawed racial discrimination, stamping out segregation is no longer the mission. Pervasive poverty, entrenched unemployment and epidemic violence among African Americans are the appropriate focus in the 1990s. To tackle these ills, the Rev. Benjamin F. The approaches of participants differed but emphasized a common challenge: how best to help the black underclass, roughly one-third of black America. ... The segment of the black community that's in deep trouble got the attention at the NAACP summit, and rightly so. The future of the NAACP however, relies on expanding the media-underexposed majority of black America whose ordinariness doesn't inspire summits.

Houston Chronicle While the Clinton administration wants to increase the minimum wage and mandate new health-care costs for employers, the world's industrialized nations are being urged to do just the opposite in order to create millions of new jobs.

The president's proposed universal health care plan would burden employers with mandated health costs that many simply would not be able to pay ...

Meanwhile, Clinton's secretary of labor, Robert Reich, has called for raising the minimum wage by at least 25 cents to $4.50 an hour, and indexing the wage rate so that it automatically reflects cost of living increases ... Many nations in Western Europe are suffering from unemployment rates of 12 percent to 20 percent and much of this is due to their welfare-state programs and mandates on business. Unemployment in the United States has hovered between 6-7 percent.

One reason is that American businesses have generally been less impaired by mandated social programs which increase costs and hamper hiring. That situation ought not be jeopardized.

Davidians to speak out during sentencing

The Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — For weeks during their federal trial, disciples of doomsday preacher David Koresh sat silently and listened while their attorneys fought for their freedom.

Not this time. Eight Branch Davidians convicted in connection with the shooting deaths of four federal agents again are before U.S. District Judge Walter Smith, who planned to sentence them today.

And this time the Davidians are having their say.

Some have rebuked Smith and the legal system. Others have talked more about themselves, describing their personalities and saying they want to spend as little time as possible in prison and then get on with their lives.

"We are innocent — absolutely, without a doubt whatsoever. We know we are innocent," defendant Livingstone Fagan defiantly said Thursday, as a courtroom

Investigation looks into death of woman locked in garage

The Associated Press

HOUSTON — An investigation has been launched into the death of a 29-year-old woman whose body temperatures rose to 107 degrees after attendants at a group home for the mentally retarded locked her in an unventilated garage.

Doctors said Caroline Perez died late Wednesday at Houston Northwest Medical Center of hyperthermia.

Lt. Bert Diaz of the Harris County Sheriff's Department said Ms. Perez was a resident of Trinity House, a state-funded intermediate-care home for the mentally retarded.

The woman "had a temper tantrum of some kind" Monday afternoon, and two attendants at the home locked her in an unventilated, detached garage behind the home, Diaz said. She was left unsupervised in the garage for four hours, he added.

When employees at the home checked on her later, they found she had vomited and was unresponsive. An ambulance was called, and Ms. Perez was taken to the hospital.

Doctors at the hospital initially were unaware of the garage incident. On Tuesday, they learned from another employee of the group home that Perez had been locked in the hot building.

Measle-like disease killing the dolphins

The Associated Press

GALVESTON — Hundreds of dolphins in the Gulf of Mexico have died this spring from a virus that causes measles in humans, although it is believed the virus has run its course, scientists said Thursday.

A total of 235 bottlenose dolphins washed up on Texas beaches between Jan. 1 and May 31, said Elsa Haubold, operations coordinator for the Texas Marine Mammal Stranding Network.

This month, no dead dolphins have been found and only 10 washed up in May.

"Ten is normal," Haubold said. "We had 92 in March and 81 in April. Of those, 111 washed up in Brazoria and Galveston counties."

In a typical year, about 150 dead dolphins wash ashore, said network coordinator Dr. Graham Worth.

Using a newly developed technique to examine lung tissue from the dolphins, scientists at the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology in Washington, D.C., found traces of RNA from the morbillivirus, a group of viruses that cause measles in humans and distemper in dogs.

The virus attacks the lung tissue and leads to pneumonia, Haubold said.

Determining the cause of the deaths was not easy because the dolphin carcasses were decomposed by the time they reached shore, Worth said.

Haubold said the virus occurred naturally in dolphins and the best scientists could hope for was that the dolphins acquired an immunity to it.

Narcotics agent arrested in cocaine disappearance

BEAUMONT (AP) — A former police narcotics commander arrested in connection with the disappearance of an estimated $30 million worth of cocaine last year had purchased a number of large costly items since the drugs disappeared, federal officials say.

Lt. Michael Siebe, 43, was arrested at his home Wednesday night following an FBI investigation that involved lie-detector tests for all 249 police officers in this southeast Texas city.

Siebe, a 14-year department veteran, made an initial appearance before U.S. District Judge Wendell Radford Thursday. Siebe, charged with money laundering, was released after posting a $100,000 bond.

Lt. Mike Siebe, 43, who since had transferred to the department's patrol division, was freed on $50,000 bond.

TABC officers seen consuming alcohol

TYLER (AP) — A former Tyler nightclub manager says he saw agents responsible for upholding state alcohol regulations consuming what they admitted to be confiscated alcohol at a holiday party.

Rick Wheeler said the incident involving Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission agents occurred in 1989 while he was lounge manager at an inn where Tyler TABC agents rented a large banquet room.

"Normally, we catered parties, but they (TABC agents) brought their own alcohol," said Wheeler, who currently manages a liquor store. "They mentioned it was confiscated liquor."

Under state law, alcoholic beverages confiscated from illegal operations must be destroyed, sold to legal distributors, or returned to their original owners if there is not enough evidence for forfeiture.

Wheeler said he did not come forward earlier because the TABC regulates his business, a liquor store.

Clinton meets with lawmakers on oil issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats and Republicans alike are expressing hope that President Clinton will embrace proposals to boost the sagging fortunes of the domestic oil and natural gas industry.

A bipartisan delegation of some 80 lawmakers met Thursday with Clinton to press their case for tax incentives and regulatory relief for an industry that has lost some 500,000 jobs in the last decade.

Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen, White House chief of staff Mack McLarty and other high-ranking administration officials also were on hand for the hour-long meeting.

The lawmakers, who requested the sitdown last March, came armed with a series of proposals to rescue an industry battered by low oil prices.

N. Korea talks could resume

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration said it would be willing to hold a new round of high-level talks with North Korea if it confirms that the North is making concessions over its nuclear program, but it isn't satisfied yet or ready to suspend pursuit of U.N. sanctions.

"We need more information," Vice President Al Gore said today of the latest North Korean offer relayed to former President Carter, who met today with President Kim Il Sung in the North Korean capital.

According to a CNN report from Pyongyang, Carter told the North Koreans today that the Clinton administration was conditionally willing to hold off pursuit of the U.N. sanctions and had provisionally agreed to hold a third round of high-level talks.

White House Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers said today that Seoul residents watch a speech by North Korean President Kim Il Sung on a television screen inside the Seoul Train Station Friday. Former U.S. President Jimmy Carter met with the North Korean leader to help resolve the nuclear crisis.

report was premature. She said U.S. officials "will continue our discussions about sanctions in the U.N. Security Council while we evaluate what North Korea said yesterday. ... We have not in any way said we were ready to suspend pursuit of sanctions."

Gore, asked on CBS if the administration would suspend its push for sanctions, said, "It depends totally on what the circumstances are. We are proceeding with the consultations concerning sanctions now, but depending upon the clarification we receive on what the North Koreans said, then we will evaluate it at the time."

Gore spelled out what the North Korea offer must include if the North wants new talks with the United States:

Rebels break through to rescue refugees

The Associated Press

KIGALI, Rwanda - Rebels broke through government lines early today, rescuing an unknown number of Tutsi refugees in central Kigali and shooting their way back out again, a U.N. commander said.

The Tutsi-led Rwandan Patriotic Front struck around 3 a.m., apparently launching the raid from its nearby northern stronghold of Gisozi. Rebels used heavy artillery and mortar fire to keep the Hutu government forces pinned down as they infiltrated the St. Paul refugee camp.

The raid postponed U.N. plans to evacuate up to 800 refugees from the areas.

"It is very strange that the RPF have staged this raid, just when we were trying to arrange for a truce to take these same people out," said Canadian Gen. Romeo Dallaire, commander of the 450-member United Nations force in Rwanda.

More than a thousand refugees have been huddled around St. Paul and Ste. Famille Roman Catholic churches in central Kigali for weeks. They have proved easy prey for the Hutu militias that have waged pogroms against Rwanda's Tutsi ethnic minority.

The lightly armed U.N. force had hoped to take convoys of trucks into the camps today, but their advance teams turned back because of the heavy fighting.

About 200,000 people have been killed in Rwanda in the past nine weeks. Most victims were Tutsi civilians killed by government-trained Hutu militias.

Hole member found dead in her home

SEATTLE (AP) — In the second death in two months to hit Seattle's alternative-rock scene, the bass player for Courtney Love's band Hole was found in her bathtub, syringes and other suspected drug paraphernalia nearby.

An autopsy to determine the cause of death was scheduled for today.

Kristen Pfaff, 26, was found dead early Thursday.

Love, the rock band's lead singer, is the widow of Kurt Cobain, the leader of the grunge-rock band Nirvana who shot himself to death April 8 at the couple's Seattle home.

Police said a purse containing syringes and what appeared to be drug paraphernalia were found on Pfaff's bathroom floor.

The classically trained pianist had played with Hole since 1993.

Former employee facing prison for theft

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former State Department employee could face a long prison term and huge fines after admitting she stole thousands of secret government documents, the Justice Department says.

Geneva Jones, 48, of Silver Spring, Md., pleaded guilty Thursday to 21 counts of theft and two counts relating to the unlawful communication of national defense information.

Jones began removing documents classified as "secret" and "confidential" in 1991 while she was employed as a secretary for the State Department Bureau of Politico Military Affairs, prosecutors said. She had "top secret" security clearance.

Jones faces up to 10 years in prison and fined up to $250,000 for each count.

Mistrial request angrily denied

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — The federal judge in the sex-discrimination case against The Citadel angrily rejected a "totally frivolous" request for a mistrial and threatened to penalize the all-male military college for asking.

U.S. District Judge C. Weston Houck suggested that the school's request was a publicity stunt. Court rules prohibit filing motions for improper purposes such as causing delays. Judges can fine lawyers or their clients.

Houck heard closing arguments in the case Thursday and is expected to rule within a month on whether 19-year-old Shannon Faulkner can become the first woman to march with cadets at the state-supported college.

Knappe enables the disabled

Carl Knappe, voted the Outstanding Disabled Veteran of 1994 for Texas, holds a plaque as he is congratulated by Dean Walker, the Department of Texas commander for the Disabled American Veterans. Knappe is now one of 50 candidates for the nation's outstanding disabled veteran.

By KELLIE JONES
Staff Writer

Big Spring native Carl Knappe has received a very prestigious award from his peers.

Knappe has been named the 1994 Outstanding Disabled Veteran for the state of Texas.

Knappe will compete against 49 winners from the other states in a national competition in Chicago August 20 through 25.

Knappe has been a veterans' counselor for the Texas Veterans Commission since February, 1990. "I am responsible for assisting veterans, their spouses and dependents. I file for benefits that they may be entitled to and help them anyway I can," said Knappe.

Knappe lost his right hand in December 1973 while on a 48-hour leave from the U.S. Navy.

"We got to go home for two days before we were to be shipped out to the Mediterranean. My dad owned a slaughterhouse here in Big Spring and I went to help him. It had been about two years since I had worked the meat grinder and my hand got caught in it. I was taken to the Webb Air Force Base for the surgery," explained Knappe.

Knappe was an aviation electrician in the Navy and had served in Vietnam before his accident.

When asked what contributions and achievements he has made that qualified him as a nominee, Knappe said, "I'm just a normal person. I try to help these vets the best I can but I don't feel I've done anything outstanding."

He is now a member of the DAV chapter in Big Spring and was last year's chapter commander. He also belongs to the Vietnam Veterans Association, VFW, American Legion and Elks Club.

"When I found out I had won the award for the state, I thought it was a joke," he said. "The guys over in rehab at the VA hospital always play jokes so I didn't believe the guy when he called."

"John McKinney with the U.S. Department of Labor called and told me that I had won. I said you are kidding and he said no, I'm not. I thought I had a snowball's chance in Hades to win. I was quite ecstatic and surprised." Knappe went to Corpus Christi June 3 to receive the award.

"I'd be lying if I said I didn't care about the national award. It would be like the Lotto; I probably won't win but it would be nice if I did win the national award," he said.

Vicki Ditmore is the current commander of the local Disabled American Veterans organization who nominated Knappe for the award.

"I have worked with Carl for quite sometime. I was the local veterans' employment representative with the Texas Employment Commission in Big Spring for several years and worked with him and he is a member of the DAV," she said.

Knappe cares very much about his job and takes it very seriously, she continued.

"When I heard about the award, I immediately thought of Carl as the best nominee. I hope he wins the national award," said Ditmore.

Mission coexists with seamier side of city

The Associated Press

BALTIMORE—The garish neon lights of the city's notorious "block" are designed to lure patrons into strip clubs, peep shows and porn theaters.

But on the edge of the neighborhood that helped launch Blaze Starr's burlesque career is a building with an illuminated cross above its entrance.

Inside is the Grace and Hope Mission, a bastion of peace in a raucous neighborhood of loud music, crowded streets and screaming doormen who hawk promises of a good time to passers-by.

"This is the Lord's house. It ought to be peaceful," said

Gunhild Carlson, the mission's director.

The mission, which is run by Miss Carlson, 72, and two other women, offers evening services five days a week. Patrons get a meal in a lunch bag and some clothing after each service. The service is nondenominational and consists of reading verses from the Bible and singing hymns.

On a hot summer night, the mission can serve about 100 people. The typical visitor is a homeless man with a drug or alcohol abuse problem.

The mission operates on a $24,000 yearly budget. Miss Carlson and the other mission workers, Hilda Bichell and Christine Shifflet, receive small stipends as compensation.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

WHEN THE PROPHET JONAH PREACHED TO THE PEOPLE OF NINEVEH AND TOLD THEM GOD WOULD DESTROY THEIR GREAT CITY AND ALL OF THEM BECAUSE OF THEIR SINFUL WAYS, THE PEOPLE, FROM THE KING DOWN TO THE LOWEST BEGGAR, REPENTED OF THEIR SIN AND GOD FORGAVE THEM AND DID NOT DESTROY NINEVEH!

BUT JONAH WAS ANGRY THAT NINEVEH WASN'T DESTROYED AS HE HAD PROPHESIED AND HE URGED GOD TO CARRY OUT HIS WORD, CAMPING OUTSIDE THE CITY TO SEE IF GOD WOULD DESTROY IT!

ONLY AFTER GOD DESTROYED A VINE, THAT SHADED JONAH FROM THE SUN, DID THE PROPHET COME TO REALIZE THAT GOD WAS TRYING TO SHOW HIM THAT MERCY WAS FAR GREATER THAN SELF-RIGHTEOUSNESS!

NEXT WEEK: A KINGDOM LOST BECAUSE OF A KING'S LAZINESS!

Chadwick leaves Howard College

By DAVE HARGRAVE

A coach on a trip to Nacogdoches signed a dotted line Thursday and sent Howard College reeling.

In a swift turn of events, Howard women's basketball coach and Athletic Director Royce Chadwick, who in February pulled his name out of consideration for the women's head coaching job at Midland College, accepted an offer Thursday to become the head women's coach at Stephen F. Austin State University in Nacogdoches.

The job wasn't on Chadwick's mind until SFA approached him Sunday. Chadwick made two trips to Nacogdoches this week and said he did not make his decision until Thursday - the announcement was made approximately 3 p.m. The sudden departure isn't exactly how Chadwick wanted to leave, but there really isn't a good way for a coach to say goodbye.

"Anytime you have the opportunity to move up and change jobs, you can't do it without it being a ticklish situation," Chadwick said. "I'm sure that everybody, including the players, understands that it was Howard College that allowed us to have the kind of success we had. Howard College is bigger than any player or coach that's been there, and it always will be."

"I hate to leave the people of Big Spring, I hate to leave the players, and I hate to leave the administration at Howard College. It really was the best five years of my life to this point, and it's really going to be tough."

The going may be tougher off the court than it is on the bench at SFA, as Chadwick moves from one of the most successful junior college programs to one of the best NCAA Division I teams. Chadwick, from Floydada, becomes the sixth coach in SFA history, replacing Joe Curl, who resigned in May after one season because of personal reasons.

The Ladyjacks have won seven consecutive Southland Conference titles and made seven consecutive NCAA Tournament appearances, advancing to the Sweet 16 four times. During that time, the Ladyjacks have posted a 192-32 record.

At Howard, Chadwick's record was tremendous: During his five seasons as head coach of the Lady Hawks, Chadwick posted a 148-21 record, advancing to the NJCAA Tournament the last two seasons. Howard went 35-1 in 1992-93; 33-4 in 1993-94. Both of those seasons brought Howard a Western Junior College Athletic Conference championship.

The Women's Basketball Coaches Association named Chadwick National Coach of the Year in 1992. He was the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches' Coach of the Year in '93, the Converse District Coach of the Year in '94 and WJCAC Coach of the Year each year he coached for Howard.

Chadwick will move to Nacogdoches with his wife, Lisa, and their two daughters, Kasi, 6, and Kelsi, 3.

Chadwick earned approximately $40,000 annually at Howard College, he said, but he declined to comment on his salary at SFA. SFA Athletic Director Steve McCarty declined to comment on Chadwick's salary but said Curl made $75,000, including income from basketball camps, in his one year at SFA.

Chadwick will be in Big Spring to conduct the first session of the of Howard's girls' basketball camp (June 27-30). He said he'll be at the second session, July 11-14, if a new Howard coach has not been named by that time.

Related story, Sunday

Howard College president Cheryl Sparks said the school will likely form a committee to search for a new coach and athletic director.

"At this point, we're just going to open up the positions and see who applies," she said. "We haven't really discussed the process yet; it all happened so fast. I wouldn't be surprised if we get a lot of phone calls."

One coaching candidate could be Howard assistant coach Terry Gray. Gray, who is slated to leave Big Spring at the end of the month to take the job as head girls' coach at Wharton High School, might not be leaving after all. Gray said he'd be interested in replacing Chadwick as head coach if Howard were interested in him.

"We have not signed contracts with Wharton. We have been appointed to positions, but we have not signed our actual contract," said Gray, whose wife, Jan, is a kindergarten teacher in Big Spring.

When Gray took the Wharton job, he had no idea Chadwick would leave Howard.

"We talked about it in February, when he didn't go to Midland, that he was making a commitment to stay here, and they were going to build a new home and everything, and at that time we discussed it and it looked like he was going to be here for a long time, so we didn't see any opportunities for advancement here."

City Little League Tournament

Stars shoot down Rangers, move to finals

By STEVE REAGAN
Sportswriter

Chris Herrod began Thursday night looking like Mitch Williams, but he ended the evening looking like Greg Maddux.

Herrod overcame a shaky first inning - he allowed two runs on four walks and two wild pitches - to lead the American League Stars to a 13-4 victory over the National League Rangers in City Little League Tournament action Thursday.

The win puts the Stars (15-3) into the title game of the tournament, where they'll face the Coahoma Reds tonight at 7:30 in Coahoma. The Rangers, regular season champs of the NL, won third-place honors in the tournament with a 20-2 overall record.

Herrod allowed only one hit in Thursday's game. He did allow 10 walks, but he countered that by striking out 12 and surrendering only a fourth-inning single by Ranger catcher Colby Ditto.

"I always seem to start by not doing well, then I just start pitching strikes," was how Herrod explained his rocky start.

While Herrod was righting himself on the mound, his teammates began finding their range against Ranger starter Kyle Newton. Flash point came in the fourth inning when the Stars broke a 3-3 tie with nine runs on seven hits.

Fourteen batters came to the plate in the frame, with Chris Rodriguez and Clint Bamert each collecting two hits and a pair of RBIs. Bamert was a particular thorn in the Rangers' side, going 4-for-4 with two doubles and three RBIs. Herrod also helped his own cause by collecting a pair of doubles and scoring two runs.

"That made me feel good," Herrod said of the fourth-inning onslaught, "because I didn't have to go out there and pitch with the score tied."

Part of the problem for the Rangers, manager Jim Clements said, was that four games in four nights finally took their toll, leaving his team with little gas left in the tank.

"Our kids are give plum out," he said. "They are just mentally drained. The Stars played a good game, and they came out and hit the ball, but our kids were give out."

The Stars now find themselves in a rematch with the Reds, who punted the American Leaguers 16-1 in their first tournament matchup Monday. The Stars have to win two straight to claim the city title, and manager Phil Grawunder admits the going will be tough.

"The whole key is if we're hitting and ready to play, we can do it," he said. "Coahoma's got a great team, and they'll have their top pitcher going, so they'll be tough."

The game will be broadcast on radio station KBST (1490-AM).

Evidence mounts against Simpson

By The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Police reportedly found a bloody ski mask in O.J. Simpson's mansion and the weapon believed used in the stabbing deaths of his ex-wife and a friend — a sharp, military-style digging tool.

Detectives also questioned witnesses who cast doubt on Simpson's alibi, and expanded their investigation halfway across the country, using metal detectors Thursday to search an overgrown, junk-strewn field near the Chicago hotel the former football star checked into hours after the bodies were found.

A homicide detective who spoke on condition of anonymity told The Associated Press that investigators had finished their reports and that Simpson's arrest was imminent. He would not elaborate.

The 46-year-old Simpson has denied any involvement in the slayings of Nicole Brown Simpson, 35, and Ronald Goldman, 25. Their bodies were found Sunday night outside Mrs. Simpson's condominium in the city's Brentwood section.

Police were analyzing the bloody military-style entrenching tool, which resembles a sharp-edged shovel, the Daily News of Los Angeles reported today, citing unidentified police sources. The newspaper did not say where the tool was found.

KCOP-TV, citing unidentified police sources, said that police found a bloody ski mask in Simpson's house. The station also said that police believe a military knife was used in the killings, but it did not elaborate.

The football Hall of Famer flew to Chicago from Los Angeles late Sunday for a business meeting, then returned a few hours later after he was told of his ex-wife's death. Detective Bert Luper, one of two Los Angeles officers in Chicago investigating the slayings, said that someone who stopped at a gas station near the O'Hare Plaza Hotel in Chicago reported seeing a person who looked like Simpson in the field. Luper wouldn't say what searchers were looking for.

"We're working on an anonymous tip," he said.

Meanwhile, a woman who jogged by Mrs. Simpson's condo at about the time of the killings told a detective that a vehicle generally resembling Simpson's was parked across the street, the Los Angeles Times reported today.

"I saw a light-colored Ford Bronco or Blazer-type car," the woman, who requested anonymity, told the Times. The newspaper reported previously that bloodstains were found in Simpson's white Ford Bronco.

Simpson's lawyer has said that at the time of the slayings, Simpson was two miles away at his Brentwood mansion waiting for a limousine ride to the airport.

But the limo driver said Simpson wasn't home when he arrived at 10:45 p.m., according to TV reports. The driver said a sweaty and agitated Simpson got in the limo shortly after 11 p.m. The driver, who was not identified, has been interviewed by detectives, the syndicated TV program "Hard Copy" reported.

A friend of Simpson's, Howard Bingham, told The Boston Globe that he was with Simpson on Sunday's 11:45 p.m. flight to Chicago and "nothing seemed different about him."

"He was talking to me about his golf game," Bingham said. "He wasn't bleeding. I shook hands with him in the airport and in Chicago. He seemed like always. This whole thing is unbelievable."

And Simpson attended his ex-wife's funeral. He emerged from a white limousine wearing a black suit, and kissed his 9-year-old daughter Sydney and 6-year-old son Justin as he entered St. Martin of Tours Catholic Church.

Saying goodbye to '94 Steers hard for catcher

By STEVE REAGAN
Sportswriter

In the space of 24 hours, Brandon Hamblin went from a hero to contemplating saying goodbye to his "family."

Hamblin, the starting catcher for the Big Spring Steers, had been kind of an invisible man for the team, suffering through a prolonged slump the last half of the season.

All that changed, however, at the state tournament.

In the Steers' first game with Brenham, Hamblin went from obscurity to stardom with one swing of the bat, a bases-loaded single in the ninth inning that brought in the winning run in the Steers' 3-2 semifinal victory.

"That's something you dream of," he said of his big hit. "When it does happen, you're so excited. I didn't want to answer any (reporters') questions. I wanted to get back with my teammates. It was more annoying than anything."

"(The hit) has got to be the big memory of the season for me," he said. "But it's not as much as the memory of playing for the state title. That means a lot more to me."

But not as much, it seems, as being a member of the 1994 Steers.

"That wasn't a team, it was more of a family to me," he said. "And it's hard for me to say goodbye. I really don't want to think about that right now."

Hamblin will be saying goodbye in more ways than one. This weekend, he moves to Arlington. When he goes, his fondest memories will be of his teammates and years of playing baseball.

"I'll probably remember the friendships I had (the most)," he said.

Watson leads at U.S. Open

By The Associated Press

OAKMONT, Pa. — Tom Watson took a one-shot lead to his slightly-delayed second round tee time today in the U.S. Open.

A morning fog held up the start of play for 10 minutes and pushed Watson's tee time back to 8:50 a.m.

Watson, 44, played hours later than the first golfers to tee off Thursday in temperatures that reached into the mid-90's and slowed play to a crawl, more than 5 1/2 hours for the late finishers.

Watson shot a 3-under-par 68 against Jack Nicklaus' 69.

They were not alone, however. Hale Irwin, 49, playing just behind Watson, just missed on a last hole birdie that would have given him a share of the lead. Instead, it left him in a tie with Nicklaus.

Stretching with the Steers

Big Spring High School trainer Jim Campbell helps youngsters loosen up with early-morning stretching exercises this week at the BSMS baseball camp.

Steve sends sweaty sayanora to '94 Steers

This week, we've been running stories dealing with remembrances of the state baseball tournament by the Big Spring Steers.

Steve Reagan

Going on the theory that turnabout is indeed fair play, I decided to share some of my Austin memories as well. What the heck - it'll fill space. I can sum up my Austin experiences in one word: Hot. Hot and muggy. Well, actually, that's three words.

I have been in West Texas for far too long. I have become accustomed to 100-degree summers, but for the life of me, I'll never quite get used to humidity in the 80 or 90 percent range.

At least, I didn't get used to it in Austin.

I went with the team down to Austin, and we got a portent of things to come when the air conditioning of the chartered bus died 30 miles out of Big Spring.

Oh, joy. Things weren't too awful until we actually got to Austin, right in time for the 5 p.m. traffic jam.

Imagine being in a bus with about 20 teen-agers, stuck in a traffic jam in downtown Austin on a blistering, humid summer day, with no air conditioning.

Oh, joy. By the time the bus reached the motel, it was smelling something akin to a giant gym sock.

Oh, oh, joy.

For those who have never been to Austin in June or July, my only advice is: DON'T! Well, unless you like living in a very large sauna, that is.

It was hot and muggy when I woke up in the morning, and only got worse as the day went on. I asked a cab driver how he put up with it, and he said, "Oh, it's not so bad, if you don't mind taking about three showers a day."

He wasn't joking.

Showers and swimming pools were my constant companions - anything to beat the omnipresent heat. There was no cool way to dress, unless you want to count those temperature-controlled space suits the NASA guys invented, and last time I checked, they weren't loaning them out.

The worst part was covering the games. Don't get me wrong. The Steers' games were without a doubt exciting affairs - but the HEAT! There was no breeze, temperatures exceeded 100, humidity was in the high 80s.

Down on the field, it was even worse. The field used an artificial surface, which increases the temperature by about 20-25 degrees. In other words, our mighty Steers played in an oven.

Oh well, if you ever want to lose weight - and you want to do it really, really fast - I suggest going to Austin and playing two or three extra-inning baseball games.

Those ol' thunder thighs won't stand a chance.

Dear Abby - Letters... Dog's bark big enough to fear his bite

DEAR ABBY: My husband's brother has a dog, Sparky, who is part German shepherd. When we go over to his house, Sparky barks and snaps at our children (ages 9 months and 2 years old). The hair on Sparky's back stands up and, as our child and the other children in the family are running and playing, Sparky goes after them, barking and snapping. I tell our children to stay away from the dog, as he is not comfortable with people he does not know very well. Perhaps I am overreacting, but when I was 11 years old, I was attacked by a dog and had to have 37 stitches and plastic surgery on my face. I once asked my brother-in-law to please lock Sparky up when he knew we were coming, and he acted like we were asking him to lock up one of his children. He even pleaded with my husband to let them have their dog included in the festivities, since he is part of the family. When we arrived, the dog ran down the stairs, unannounced, loudly barking at everyone. His owners were nowhere in sight. Abby, my in-laws think I am paranoid, but I don't want one of my children to be bitten. I would appreciate any suggestions you have. — ONCE BITTEN, TWICE SHY

(Their veterinarian should be able to refer them to one.) Until then, they should make their guests feel more comfortable and secure in their home by confining Sparky while they are visiting. It is only common courtesy. DEAR ABBY: I received an engraved invitation to a wedding I will not be attending. My cousin's son is getting married in a formal wedding; everything will be first class. When responding to this invitation, should I write a little note explaining why I will not be attending? Or will a plain "regret" be sufficient? Also, should I send a gift before or after the wedding? And if I send a check, should I make it out to both the bride and groom, or just the groom? I hardly know the bride. Should I mail my check in the same envelope with my response? I am a 26-year-old unmarried woman, and I searched through three etiquette books in my public library and couldn't find the answer to any of these questions. Thank you. — FEELING STUPID

Today's Highlight in History: On June 17th, 1972, President Nixon's eventual downfall began with the arrest of five burglars inside the Democratic national headquarters in Washington, D.C.'s Watergate complex. On this date: In 1775, the Revolutionary War Battle of Bunker Hill took place near Boston. In 1789, the Third Estate in France declared itself a national assembly, and undertook to frame a constitution. In 1856, in Philadelphia, the Republican Party opened its first convention. In 1885, the Statue of Liberty arrived in New York City aboard the French ship Isere. In 1928, Amelia Earhart embarked on a trans-Atlantic flight from Newfoundland to Wales — the first by a woman. In 1940, France asked Germany for terms of surrender in World War II. In 1944, 50 years ago, the republic of Iceland was established. In 1953, Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas stayed the execution of convicted spies Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, originally set for the next day, the couple's 14th wedding anniversary. (They were put to death June 19th.) In 1963, the U.S. Supreme Court struck down rules requiring the recitation of the Lord's Prayer or reading of Biblical verses in public schools. In 1969, 25 years ago, the raunchy musical review "Oh! Calcutta!" opened in New York. In 1971, the United States and Japan signed a treaty under which the U.S. would return control of the island of Okinawa. In 1986, President Reagan announced the retirement of Chief Justice Warren Burger. In 1991, the remains of President Zachary Taylor were briefly exhumed in Louisville, Ky., to test a theory that Taylor had died of arsenic poisoning (the results showed death had been from natural causes). Ten years ago: Swale, winner of the Kentucky Derby and the Belmont Stakes, collapsed and died outside its stable at Belmont Park. Five years ago: In China, eight people were sentenced to death for allegedly boating soldiers and burning vehicles in Beijing at the start of the crackdown on the pro-democracy movement.
