Grant will finish 911 addressing

By KELLIE JONES
Staff Writer

The 911 system has been in operation in Howard County since 1990 and efforts to place signs at all state highway intersections will finally pay off by next February or March.

"All the roads in the county have been named or numbered and they all have descriptions. The city takes care of putting up the signs in the city limits and the county takes care of their signs," said 911 Director Carl Dorton.

"We have also completed our maps. When this began, we had an agreement with the 911 district, city, county and state highway department that the highway department place all the signs in the county at any intersection where a state highway intersects with another road," he said.

Those state highways include 87, 350, FM 700 and 818. "We met about a year ago to see where things were. The highway department is working on a grant so that they can begin building the signs and get them put up," said Dorton.

Dan Richardson, area engineer for the Texas Department of Transportation, said the grant money will be available in December. "Right now, the state has given $107,000 to our district but that money is being used in the eastern part near Abilene to put up signs there."

"The very next time the state will give money to our district will be in December and it will go to Howard and Mitchell Counties. December is the tentative date for the contract letting and then it will be another two or three months for the actual work to be completed."

Richardson explained that contract letting is when the TXDOT advertises for the work that needs to be performed and the plans are available to any contractor that wants to bid for the work.

The contractor decides how much money it will cost their company to put up the signs and the bid is placed in a sealed document. All documents are opened on a set date and the state accepts the lowest bid.

"We estimate this will probably cost about $70,000 to put up about 650 signs. It costs $110 to $150 per sign. This will include making the sign, the foundation, sign post, all labor and tools for putting up the signs. When it is complete, both Howard and Mitchell counties will have signs on

Salvation Army opens battered women's shelter

By KELLIE JONES
Staff Writer

The Salvation Army's women's and children's shelter was officially opened Friday with a ribbon cutting ceremony.

The idea has been in the making for about two years and officials with the Salvation Army say it took them a while to convince people that Big Spring needed a shelter for battered women and their children.

"We finally got it off the ground and received the money from Christmas in April. I'm not sure exactly how much it cost but I'm estimating about $15,000," said Lt. Albert Villafuerte of the Salvation Army.

"Before this was built, if a woman needed a safe place to stay, she had to go to Midland or somewhere. Now, she can stay here and not have to pull her kids out of school if she has any," he said.

The shelter is a two bedroom, two bath home with a common living area. It is considered for long term stay and has a private courtyard and security fencing.

"This is a crisis shelter for women and their children who are in a life threatening situation from abuse, eviction or being burned out. If they need to, they can stay up to a year but we shoot for six months at the maximum. We saw the need for this because the emergency shelter is a temporary place for someone to stay. And there are men who stay in the emergency shelter but they are not allowed in the new one," said Lt. Yvette Villafuerte.

The goal of the Salvation Army is to help the woman become self-supporting and be able to leave and stand on her own. Classes on self-esteem, life skills, job training, self-improvement, parenting and finances are requirements of staying at the shelter. "The woman must agree to take these in order to stay."

"Also, no male visitors or visitors of any kind can stay at the shelter. We want to keep this place a secret and safe for the women so we can't have visitors here," explained Villafuerte. "The woman must be considered homeless because of a crisis and not have any family to help her to stay at the shelter. They will also have to see our social worker before being accepted into the home."

They made be referred by Rape Crisis/Victim Services or come by on their own, either way, they will need to speak to our social worker," explained Yvette.

"This is a place for a woman and her children to go to and feel safe. It's a place to retreat, hide and heal if they need to," Yvette continued.

Bush outlines welfare plan

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

Thermometers aren't the only things that are heating up in this election year.

Republican gubernatorial nominee George W. Bush was at Big Spring's McMahon-Wrinkle Airport last Thursday afternoon answering questions about his visions for the future of the state he wants to run.

School finance, crime, prisons and economic development are very hot items in this year's governor's race and the Democratic Party has wasted no time in attacking Bush's experience.

Texas Democratic Party spokesman Joe Cutbirth, earlier this month, said, "moderate Republicans, pro-choice women and hard-working Texans who want change deserve more."

"George W. Bush wants to lead the state of Texas, but he won't stand up to the Radical Right and take the leadership of his own party. Mainstream Republicans and reform-minded Texans want a governor who isn't afraid to fight for Texas. Mr. Bush has been missing for years as state leaders worked to solve issues like school finance, crime and economic development. Texans want a governor to show leadership during the debate - not afterward."

During the 1994 campaign so far, Bush has unveiled a welfare reform package, supported the abolition of "mandatory supervision" of prisoners, unleashed a school plan which would strengthen local control by allowing districts the option of "Home Rule," and has presented a 17-point plan to revamp Texas' juvenile justice system.

Bush said that his "Independence Plan for Texas Families" would empower people on welfare to change their lives and liberate them from dependence on government while at the same time strengthen families.

According to Bush, his plan would, "break the cycle of poverty and transform the welfare system" by limiting welfare benefits to two years, limiting benefits for mothers having additional children while on welfare, and requiring able-bodied recipients to work, learn or train.

Bush said, "If I'm elected I will move to reform the current welfare system as soon as possible. The current system has failed the people of Texas."

"I believe we have an obligation to take care of those who cannot take care of themselves. However, in our attempt to help some, we are destroying the lives of many. The system requires little of its recipients. The system diminishes the motivation to work."

Bush also believes that the welfare system's greatest cost is the culture it fosters and that instead of providing a temporary hand-up, welfare has become, for too many, a permanent hand out. Under the Bush plan, a reformed welfare system would require mothers to identify the father of their children before receiving benefits, it would require fathers to accept responsibility for their children, and would emphasize personal responsibility and accountability for all recipients by requiring them to sign an "independence contract."

According to the Bush campaign, since 1982, Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) in Texas has grown from 287,000 to 828,206 recipients, with nearly two of every three recipients on welfare for eight years or more during their lifetime.

Bush said Texas currently spends more on welfare than on schools and the current state budget will have Texas spend $17.4 billion on welfare, which includes Medicaid - nearly 25 percent of the state's $70.1 billion budget.

Before Gov. Ann Richards took office four years ago, according to Bush, Texas spent just $7.2 billion on welfare.

The Bush campaign contends that during Richard's stay in office, welfare spending has increased 142 percent and the number of Texans receiving AFDC has grown by 20 percent while Medicaid spending has increased 30 percent.

Bush said, "We cannot afford four more years of the status quo and a lack of leadership. Texas cannot have better schools, safer communities, or a more prosperous economy if more and more people go on welfare and the system grows at its present rate."

roads that intersect with state highways," explained Richardson.

Several years ago, the state began a program providing funds to each district to cover certain types of work. "This money we will be getting in December will be used for this sign project as well as replacing other signs, repainting the stripes on the roads, fixing traffic signals - basically anything that is safety related that we need to do. A portion of the grant money is dedicated to the 911 signs for Howard County," Richardson added.

Bush explains his answer to school finance problem

By CARLTON JOHNSON Staff Writer

Saying fine tuning the current education system in Texas is not the answer, George W. Bush unveiled the education proposal that he hopes to take to the Governor's Mansion after the November elections.

Bush's proposal would strengthen local control of schools by allowing school districts to declare their independence from the Texas Education Agency (TEA) and the Legislature, thus creating Home Rule Education Districts.

Bush said, "Education is the single most important key to economic achievement and will be my top priority as your new Governor. I will also veto unfunded mandates and work to abolish the regulatory authority of the TEA for all districts."

"This plan is similar to a city's voters electing to become a home rule city." The plan empowers school districts to be truly independent to shape teaching methods, curriculum, staffing, and use of technology and governance.

"Home Rule Education Districts is an optional plan and local school boards will have the authority to make their own decisions. And parents and teachers will definitely have a lot to say in the process," Bush said.

Under the Bush plan, the Home Rule Education District would be subject to the state's financing structure and a state system of student evaluation that sets high standards. Parents would be allowed to review the evaluation system.

Bush said, "This Home Rule Education District plan's strength is that it guarantees local citizens and educators the power to design a system to meet local needs. This plan pushes responsibility and authority back down to the lowest level - local communities. By placing responsibility and authority in the hands of the people who do the work and lead our schools, it strengthens accountability.

"Home Rule Education Districts will also strengthen community control of tax dollars and by ending unfunded mandates and limiting compliance costs, districts can put more of their dollars back into the classroom."

Bush indicated that this is just another example of Texans not being happy with the status quo. "We cannot fine tune the current system and expect far better results. More of the same is not an acceptable answer. Texans need new thinkers and new systems that put the people back in charge," Bush said.

According to Bush, this plan should not be confused with charter schools. Although he supports the concept, he does not believe that they provide enough independence and local control.

On why revenue from the Texas Lottery has not been utilized to fund public education, Bush said, "When they voted, the people of Texas thought they were voting for the lottery to be used as a source of funding for our education system. We should now hold the people in charge responsible for the failure."

Texas leads in GED obtain

WASHINGTON - Other states in the U.S. are catching up to Texas in the number of adults who took the General Educational Development (GED) exam last year, according to the American Educational Research Association.

Nearly 800,000 GED exam last year, according to the American Educational Research Association. Last year, according to the American Educational Research Association, 1.1 million people took the exam, a 10 percent increase from the year before.

"The U.S. and only nations in the world provide this second chance for adults who did not finish high school," said Jack J. Testa, president of the GED Testing Service. Texas leads in GEDs obtained

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Texas led all other states in the number of adults who took the General Educational Development exam last year, according to figures from the American Council on Education.

Nearly 800,000 adults took the GED exam last year in the United States and Canada, and 71 percent of them scored high enough to receive a high school equivalency diploma, the council said Sunday.

"The U.S. and Canada are the only nations in the world that provide this second chance to adults who did not complete school," said Jean Lowe, director of the GED Testing Service. "As a consequence, more adults in both nations have greater access to higher education and employment opportunities, which in turn raises their standard of living and that of their country."

GED diplomas have been awarded to nearly 9.5 million people since 1971, when statistics were first reported, the ACE said in a report. The program was begun in 1942 to help returning World War II veterans earn their high school equivalent diploma.

The council, which represents institutions of higher education, said more than 45 million adults in the United States and its territories do not have a high school diploma, yet fewer than 2 percent of these adults participated in GED programs.

In 1993, Texas had the highest number of people take the exam, 77,708. Of those, 45,615 passed.

In 1993, Texas had the highest number of people take the exam, 77,708. Of those, 45,615 passed.

North Dakota had the fewest number taking the test, 1,245. Everyone who completed the test in Vermont passed it; the lowest passage rate — 46.2 percent — was in the District of Columbia.

The typical GED test-taker last year was 26 years old and had completed 10th grade, the ACE said. In Canada, the average age was 31. Sixty percent of the people who took the exam planned to continue their education.

Scott Borow dropped out of high school after 10th grade because of family problems. He got his GED degree in February.

"I think it would be really hard for me to do without it," he said. Borow is studying culinary arts at the Potomac Job Corps, and is planning to join the Navy and pursue a career in nuclear propulsion.

Jennifer Bronson, 20, of Richmond, Va., also received her equivalency diploma while a student at the Potomac Job Corps, a federally sponsored program designed to provide vocational training to young adults 16-25.

Bronson was all set to graduate from high school in 1991, but then she failed a required algebra class. She returned to school to make up the class, but failed again. A friend suggested she try the Job Corps.

"It took two weeks and then I was ready," she said. She passed the GED exam and received her certificate in February. Bronson is enrolled in a nurse's assistant program at the Job Corps site. She hopes to go to college and continue her nursing studies.

In 1993, 790,165 people took the GED exam, 400 fewer than a year earlier. Of that total, 20,547 of the exams were given in Canada. Of those who took the exam, 488,838 passed, including 465,838 in the United States and its territories and 13,236 in Canada.

Seventy-two percent of those who took the test passed in the United States; in Canada, the rate was 66 percent.

"Students who earn a GED sometimes are looked at more favorably than a high school graduate," said John Peoples, director of the Potomac Job Corps. "There are numerous high school grads across this country who do not know how to read. If they've passed the GED, they know how to read."

In many states, applicants who pass the GED test have to fulfill additional requirements to obtain their equivalency diplomas. The process can take more than a year.

Teen's confession helps decide intent

The Associated Press

FORT WORTH — On March 12, 1992, two teen-age boys invaded the home of Jack and Caren Koslow and savagely beat and slashed the wealthy Fort Worth couple.

Mrs. Koslow, 40, died. Her husband, then 49, barely survived.

Two weeks later, a 17-year-old girl, her voice a whisper and her story disjointed, told homicide Detective Curt Brannan she asked her boyfriend to kill her father and stepmother.

"You did?" Brannan asked.

"Yes," replied Kristi Koslow. "I guess I meant it when I said it, but I didn't think it ... would actually happen. ... Brian just told me that he would hit them over the back of the head, or some way ... that it wouldn't hurt them.

"Nothing would be wrong. Everything would be OK."

Now prosecutors hope to play that recorded statement for a jury that will decide if Miss Koslow in fact ordered the attack on her parents.

If so, prosecutors insist, she should pay with her life.

In a surprise move, the defense intends to argue that it was not Miss Koslow but her boyfriend, Brian Salter, now 22, who orchestrated the murky, bungled murder-for-hire scheme.

And in another strange twist, Salter entered a guilty plea in exchange for a probable life sentence and is expected to testify as a state witness.

Salter's buddy and co-defendant, Jeffrey Dillingham, 21, spurned a plea bargain last year. A jury then convicted him of capital murder and assessed the death penalty.

Although Miss Koslow never pinpointed a motive for the attack, she expressed contempt for the Koslows and the way she said they treated her.

"I thought maybe I'd get money, but that really wasn't the big issue," she told Brannan.

"How much money?"

"Like $10 or $15 million," she replied.

Alan Levy, Tarrant County's top prosecutor, and Tim Evans, one of the state's leading criminal defense attorneys, spent five weeks selecting a jury to hear the case.

Battleship Texas rusts away as funds, volunteers leave

The Associated Press

DALLAS — The battleship Texas has lost more than half its restoration crew in recent months and two-thirds of its state repair funds, placing the historic vessel in danger of rusting away, officials said.

The battleship is the only one in the nation to have served in both world wars. Moored in the Houston Ship Channel, it attracts more than 200,000 visitors each year.

The hold on nearly all restoration comes four years after a $13 million hull restoration project was hailed as the ship's new lease on life. It was financed by the Navy, the state of Texas and volunteers.

But the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, which has managed the ship since 1983, said restoration other than minimal maintenance has been delayed indefinitely in favor of more pressing projects.

The ship is in fairly good shape now, say the three Parks and Wildlife workers who still work on preserving it. But it could face major problems without improvements within the next few years, they say.

"The ship is essentially rusting from the inside out," Daniel Crouch, of the Parks and Wildlife Department, was quoted as saying in Sunday editions of The Dallas Morning News.

"It's structurally safe ... but there are a lot of places in the ship where support is no longer present or is in a very weakened position," Crouch said.

The head of a national ship memorial organization says Texas relies too much on state money and not enough on innovative revenue-enhancing schemes.

"The folks at the Texas are not quite as forward-looking and innovative as others," said Capt. Channing Zucker of the Historical Naval Ships Association in Annapolis, Md.

Zane Morgan, head of exhibits for Parks and Wildlife, acknowledged that the Texas has "a long way to go where the interior is concerned."

Violent past may come up in retrial

HOUSTON (AP) — Jurors in a case involving a former Houston police officer accused of fatally shooting a woman after a freeway chase could hear evidence of the victim's allegedly violent past.

A state appeals court in September 1992 overturned the voluntary manslaughter conviction handed Alex Gonzales in April 1990, in part because of the trial judge's restriction on evidence about Ida Lee Delaney's past.

Jury selection in the new trial gets under way today in Bryan with state District Judge Ted Poe of Houston again presiding.

Gonzales, now 29, remained free on $20,000 bail after the first trial in Dallas, where he received a seven-year prison sentence. He has worked as a para-legal.

Defense attorneys are expected to show that Ms. Delaney, a 50-year-old janitor, had a history of violence, including a 1967 incident in which she allegedly shot her husband and a 1971 arrest for assaulting a police officer during a traffic stop.

Bone banks leading to confusions

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — An increasing number of bone banks are operating here, and the competition has become so confusing that a new organization has been formed in large part to help the medical community keep them straight.

"I don't know how much tripping over was actually occurring, but we were trying to prevent it from being too confusing for the individual hospitals to know who to call and who was coming," said Maureen Lopez, head of the Alamo Coalition of Tissue Services and president of the San Antonio Eye Bank, which procures corneas, rather than bone or skin.

Five bone banks will be operating in San Antonio when the South Texas Regional Blood Bank begins offering bone and skin services this year.

"It is more than most places," said Jeanne Mowe, executive director of the American Association of Tissue Banks in MacLean, Va. "The only place I can think of that has that many is Los Angeles."

Although all five of the tissue banks are ostensibly not-for-profit, there is no doubt that bone banking can be profitable. A single donor, or cadaver, sources told the San Antonio Express-News, can generate $30,000 or more in revenues.

Lobbyist investigated for travel expenses

HOUSTON (AP) — Republicans are calling for an investigation of Texas' top lobbyist in Washington in response to a report that she billed the state for travel per diem expenses on days she was in Washington.

In a copyright story Sunday, The Houston Post reported that Jane Hickie, director of the Texas Office of State-Federal Affairs, billed Texas taxpayers at least $2,800 for travel per diem expenses on days she was in the nation's capital.

The Post said she claimed $25 worth of travel expenses almost daily from May through August 1991.

While collecting the travel payments, Ms. Hickie also was getting a $40 payment per day from taxpayers to help cover the high cost of living in the nation's capital.

Ms. Hickie's office provided a written, one-page explanation that contends she violated no laws or procedures in the matter.

Lotto winner lonely, ill since cashing in GREENVILLE (AP) — Even though she's gotten the first installment of nearly $458,000, Lotto Texas winner Jean Oliver just can't convince herself that the money will keep coming for another 19 years.

That uneasiness is just one of the problems Jean Oliver has endured since winning almost $10 million in the June 9, 1993, drawing.

"Everyone thinks that when you win a bunch of money, you'll be on the clouds," Mrs. Oliver said.

She learned quickly that money doesn't guarantee happiness.

After winning the lottery, Mrs. Oliver spent a day taking medication for nerves. Her husband, Gary, spent a day quietly repeating, "That's a lot of money."

San Antonio bases face possible layoffs

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Reductions in civilian Air Force positions nationwide could mean the loss of some 4,000 jobs at two San Antonio bases, according to a published report.

A memo, which was made public to Kelly Air Force Base workers Friday, states that 28,300 of the Materiel Command's 85,000 civilian jobs nationwide are planned for elimination before 2001.

Under the proposal, Kelly Air Force Base could lose 3,547 civilian jobs at its San Antonio Air Logistics Center in the next six years. Additionally, the plan could eliminate up to 550 civil service jobs at Brooks Air Force Base during the same period, unidentified Air Force officials tell the San Antonio Express-News in its Sunday editions.

Lackland and Randolph Air Force bases are not affected by the proposal, which has been developed as a planning tool for the Air Force Materiel Command's 14 bases.

A copy of the Air Logistics Center memo, dated June 17, was sent to City Manager Alex Briseno.

Tort claims total $20 million in 2 years

HOUSTON (AP) — During the last two years, the Texas government has spent $20 million on 590 tort and medical malpractice claims.

The claims varied in size and substance, but they didn't include the more well-known cases such as those involving school finance and prison overcrowding.

They result from settlements and judgments involving a range of complaints, from people who have been abused by police to a bicyclist who sued the state after a fissure in a road caused a nasty spill, the Houston Chronicle reported Sunday.

Number of GED grads shows education's worth

Texas has graduated more students in the GED program than any other state.

According to an Associated Press story, in 1993, Texas had the highest number of people take the exam, 77,708. Of those, 45,615 passed.

What this should tell anyone thinking about dropping out of school is to stay in, get your diploma.

This is what educators, politicians and employers have been saying all along. An educated person stands a better chance.

In these days of the Information Highway, you can't afford not to be able to drive that highway. You must be able to compete and that requires an education.

In spite of the lack of a school finance plan, public education is still available to everyone. You simply have to want it.

It's the only way to get along any more in our ever-changing technological world.

O.J. is not the only victim of these crimes

If you were like me Friday night, you were glued to your television set watching the police "chase" O.J. Simpson down the highway in Los Angeles.

DD Turner

I was sitting there, unable to leave it, wondering "why am I watching this?" Maybe even more importantly, why did I listen to the inane chatter of the news media?

I'm with the rest of America, I don't want to believe O.J. could do something so heinous. Not "the Juice."

As we sit stunned, watching the police arrest O.J., we should be asking ourselves why this person gets special treatment.

And, he did. If that had been you or me running away after being given the opportunity to turn ourselves in, we would not have been allowed to drive to where we were headed. No, we would have been stopped immediately.

Preferential treatment of an alleged murderer. Other alleged murderers don't get treated halfway as nicely.

Don't we all deserve this type of treatment - whether we can run with a football or have zillions of dollars?

And, lest we forget as we sink down in the realization that another American hero has fallen, there are two people dead. DEAD!

Two people have had their dreams, their hopes, their very lives brutally taken away from them. They suffered pain, anguish as the weapon tore into their bodies again and again and again.

These two lives can't be forgotten as we all hope O.J. didn't do it.

What we are seeing is an American problem on a grand scale.

Too many husbands abuse their wives, creating a cycle of violence that, for many, the only escape is murder or more violence. The circle continues to repeat itself as the children, for whom this is a way of life, repeat the violence ad nauseum.

And should we forget, there are children involved here. Children who now do not have a mother and in all likelihood, will be visiting their father in jail. Two young children who have to deal with the aftermath of a violent episode that has stripped them of two people they loved.

It is not only these two children, but all children of family abuse, murder and other crimes.

As we ponder the inanity of the media, feel sadness at the fall of a hero, wonder at the special treatment of an alleged murderer, we need to remember the victims - those who are dead and those who are living.

They are the ones who deserve our sympathy and for whom our horror should be reserved for.

Surreal cap for strange episode

JOAL RYAN Thomson News Service

LOS ANGELES — Now we know what it looks like for all hell to break loose.

And I, for one, am worn out.

Oh, yes, we Southern Californians have seen fire and rain and riots and earthquakes. But no amount of images of crumbled buildings could have prepared us for the TV coverage Friday concerning one single human being — the sad tale of O.J. Simpson reminding us that sometimes people are the greatest potential natural disasters of all.

Commentary

Stunning. Simply stunning. Almost more than one can process.

In the course of an afternoon, we watched a respected, beloved, storied public figure be charged with a double murder and called a fugitive from the law. We sat as witness to a reading of what amounted to a suicide note written by Simpson's hand. And finally, we saw him trailed in a freeway pursuit.

So many things we didn't want to see — but couldn't help! — but watch. How riveting was this story? How big was the crowd around the TV set in your office, or your living room? The lure was simple enough — we know O.J. and he was in trouble. The biggest trouble you could ever imagine a person being in.

As if all this weren't enough to digest, TV reporters — obviously electrified by this wildfire of a story — found it harder to contain themselves and began sharing sordid speculation (Is he dead inside his ex-wife's house? What pushed him over the edge? Is O.J. in denial?), the kind of stuff you talk about among yourselves in the lunchroom but that is best left unsaid on the air.

This wasn't TV — this was virtual reality theater of the absurd. O.J. Simpson's life was unraveling by the hour and we were there. And not just here in the Southland. The descent of Simpson was an unholy national pastime. He was network news fodder all week as alleged evidence mounted linking him to the killings of his ex-wife and a male companion.

Friday night's freeway pursuit served as the surreal caper. A harmonic convergence of cameras saw every local TV station, CNN, ESPN, the three major networks and numerous radio stations unite the country in the ravenous watch of a once-glorious football hero (whom we're told had a gun to his head) in despair and panic and in the run of his life.

Then came the images of the only people in Southern California who probably weren't watching their TVs — the ones who poured onto the freeways to follow Simpson themselves, as if they were playing out the lost scene from Stanley Kramer's "It's a Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World."

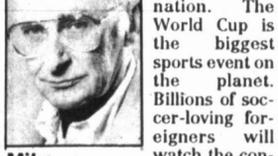

And when the end finally came, when Simpson finally turned himself in to police — fittingly we couldn't see it, thanks to the encroaching darkness of night. Why should anything about this day make sense or be clear?

Label this episode Othello with the information age. That's the level of this dramatic tragedy we experienced — except it wasn't handed to us in the form of a carefully worded Shakespeare play. It was live and direct and unfolding in an unwieldy mess in our living rooms.

No making heads or tail of soccer

"If I don't get excited about this soccer stuff," Slat said, "does that mean I ain't a good patriotic Chicagoan?"

Well, this is a unique event for our city and the nation. The World Cup is the biggest sports event on the planet. Billions of soccer-loving foreigners will watch the contests on TV -- everybody from the Armenians to the Zulus.

"So what? All that proves is that most of the world is too poor to build bowling alleys, golf courses, tennis courts or baseball fields. That's their tough luck. There's hundreds of millions of people still ain't got indoor plumbing, but that don't mean there's something great about an outhouse. And there's hundreds of millions who ain't got no teeth, so is there something popular about gumming your food? Besides, soccer is so boring. I never seen a more boring sport except old geezers taking heel-and-toe health walks."

That's because you don't understand the game and its many nuances and subtleties.

"What's to understand? A lot of guys named Pedro and Boris and Iliwana run around in short pants playing tootsy with a ball for half the day until somebody wins by a scrawny score of 1-0. Then the exciting part starts when the spectators go goofy and have a riot and trample each other. If they want good TV ratings, what they ought to do is skip the game and just have the riot. Besides, in soccer they don't have no timeouts, which is crazy. Every game should have timeouts or innings or halftimes or something where you get to take a break."

Why are timeouts needed? "So people can go to the john or get a beer. I guess in a lot of those foreign countries they don't have indoor plumbing or drink beer, so they don't need time to go to the john. Or maybe that's why they trample each other after the game -- all 90,000 of them are trying to get to the john at once."

Like many older Americans, you don't seem to be aware that among young people in this country soccer has become the second-biggest participation sport, ranking only behind basketball. It has become bigger than baseball and football.

"Sure, I read that. But they never tell you why."

I suppose you have a theory.

"Sure. Bum knees-is one reason."

Bum knees?

"Yeah. See, a lot of these suburban parents wised up. They look at football and what do they see? They see high school kids who weigh 260 pounds, and it's all muscle. There are some high school teams today that are bigger than the old-time pro teams. So these parents don't want their normal-sized kids stomped by these big gooloots and end up gimping around on plastic knees. But they want their kids running around and doing something sweaty instead of sitting home playing Nintendo, so they enroll them in soccer."

So soccer is an alternative?

"Sure. And you don't have to be real big like in football or real tall like in basketball."

But why is it more popular among young people than baseball, which is supposed to be our national pastime?

"Because it's easier than baseball. It's easier to kick a big, round ball that's sitting on the ground than to hit a fastball with a bat or to scoop up a ground ball and make a good throw to first. I mean, would Babe Ruth have been an American hero if he shuffled around in short pants and let a big ball bounce off his head?"

No, I suppose he would have looked foolish.

"That's right. And that's why soccer will never be a really popular TV sport in this country."

Why?

"Because in soccer they bounce the ball off their heads, and to Americans, it is undignified to bounce a ball off your head unless you are having a boozey back-yard party. Name me one other sport where you bounce the ball off your head."

Now that you mention it, I can't think of one.

"See? What happens if a football player is waiting to catch a punt or a pass and it bounces off his helmet?"

The fans would hoot and jeer and shout that he is incompetent.

"And what happens if a baseball player is waiting for a flyball and it bounces off his head?"

No doubt, the scene would be shown on every network's sports highlights and the player would forever be held up to ridicule.

"Absolutely. In the movies, if they want to get a laugh they have something bounce off a head. In the Three Stooges, it was always 'boink, boink' off Curley's head. So bouncing a ball off your head is un-American. Besides, it makes people shorter."

It does?

"Sure. That's why most foreigners are shorter than Americans. All those balls bouncing off their heads compress their necks and spines. And that worries me."

Why?

"Because if American kids keep playing soccer, they're going to get shorter and shorter. In a hundert years, this could be nation of flat-headed dwarfs."

I don't think there is any cause for alarm.

"I hope not, because they couldn't all become Chicago aldermen."

Public housing simply just doesn't work

President Clinton, sir. Whoever plans your public appearances thought it would be nice if you'd speak in Chicago against the backdrop of Robert Taylor Homes.

This is one of the city's infamous public housing projects, but for your appearance, things were tidied up. You saw it with the graffiti white-washed, with the elevators cleaned of urine and excrement, with flowers planted in the normally barren courtyard.

Indeed, Vincent Lane, chairman of the Chicago Housing Authority, concedes that, "public housing does not work."

He is proposing a 10-year plan for putting public housing in private hands.

"Get the government out of the housing business," he says. "All government knows is how to screw it up."

Lane has already demonstrated his premise.

Five thousand of the city's 41,000 public housing units are already in private hands. Ten thousand will be by the end of this year.

So far, success has convinced Lane that eventually he can get rid of 4,500 government housing employees, saving taxpayers millions.

Lane's "big dream" has the support of Housing Secretary Henry Cisneros, and it has received favorable comment from the president, but tearing down and replacing these stone slums will require a considerable investment. A presently cost-conscious Congress, wanting to go to voters with a promise that "we reduced federal spending," is reticent. It can be argued that our own poor people should get priority over the world's poor, but that is not the prevalent Beltway perspective.

Lane is convinced his plan would bring working people back into the city and provide class integration to the benefit of all concerned.

The bottom line, says Lane, is that "government-managed housing does not work."

P.S. Are you sure this is the government you want managing your health care?

Prisoners riot over water shortage

SPARTA, Ga. (AP) — Prisoners upset over a water shortage rioted for about four hours at a medium-security prison before authorities regained control early today.

A guard who had been hit in the head and another with a badly cut finger were hospitalized in stable condition. A third guard was treated and released.

There had been intermittent water outages at the Hancock Correctional Institution since Friday. Lighting may have struck the main water tank, said Deputy Warden Andy Walker.

Temperatures rose to near 90 degrees Sunday. The prison has no air conditioning.

It was not known if water service was repaired or how many inmates were involved in the riot. The prison houses 750 inmates.

Mattresses and trash were set ablaze. Several guards were trapped in locked cubicles, but the inmates could not get to them, Lane said.

Several inmates tried unsuccessfully to escape.

Independent bid for Senate started

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Former Gov. L. Douglas Wilder officially launched his independent bid for the Senate by saying his campaign would focus on issues, not scandals.

Wilder, a Democrat, is running against Democratic incumbent Charles S. Robb, Republican nominee Oliver North and former GOP Attorney General Marshall Coleman, another independent.

Robb has been tainted by admitted marital indiscretions and reports that he attended parties where drugs were used while he was governor in the 1980s. He has denied seeing any drugs. North was convicted of felonies for lying to Congress about the Iran-Contra arms-for-hostages scandal, but his convictions were overturned on a technicality.

Party leader quits after 21 years

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — Juan Bosch, the 85-year-old, president of the Dominican Liberation Party and a major figure in the country's political history, has quit the job he held for 21 years.

Bosch gave no explanation for his decision, which he announced Sunday to party officials at a leadership conference. The former Dominican president vowed to stay active in the marxist political party he founded in 1973.

Feeble and suffering from memory lapses, Bosch is also considered one of Latin America's most important 20th Century short story and essay writers.

Elected president in 1962, Bosch was soon ousted by the army. Civil war broke out in 1965 when democratic forces and some army troops took up arms to restore his presidency.

Within a few days, U.S. Marines landed and put down the rebellion.

Colombians elect an economist president

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — An economist promising capitalism with a human face has convinced Colombians emerging from a long reign of drug terror that he is the man to bring them prosperity in times of peace.

Ernesto Samper, 43, the candidate of the governing Liberal Party, edged former TV newscaster Andres Pastrana in one of the tightest presidential races in Colombia's history, according to Sunday's election returns.

Samper and Pastrana, a 39-year-old former Bogota mayor and senator who carried the banner for the Conservative Party, were the top finishers in a first-round election May 29, which led to Sunday's runoff.

New pressures make goal hard to attain

SEATTLE (AP) — President Clinton's hopes of reducing global warming believed to cause global warming rely heavily on getting people to conserve electricity. But utility executives say new competitive pressures may make attaining that goal more difficult.

During a three-day convention of the nation's 190 privately owned electric utilities, executives debated the impact of the trend toward increased competition among utilities, prompting renewed emphasis by executives on keeping costs and rates down.

But environmentalists fear that as consumers, especially industrial ones, get cheaper electricity, they will be less likely to invest in more efficient lighting, air-conditioning systems and machinery.

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The children of O.J. and Nicole Brown Simpson may be the biggest — and smallest — victims of all.

On Monday, their mother was killed, allegedly by their father. By Friday night, with Simpson's imprisonment, they were practically fatherless, too.

Sydney Simpson, 9, and her 6-year-old brother, Justin, were asleep in their house at the time of the killings. Their mother and her friend, Ronald Goldman, were stabbed just outside on the front walk.

"I can't think of anything more terrifying than to go to sleep and then you're awakened by someone who says your mother is dead," said Dr. Julius Griffin, a child psychiatrist.

The children attended Mrs. Simpson's funeral Thursday alongside their father, who held their hands and bent down to kiss them tenderly. The family has tried to let the children grieve in private.

"We haven't had the TV on — we don't want the children watching it — and I haven't seen a newspaper in days," said Nicole's oldest sister, Denise Brown.

She said Sunday that the children are staying at the home of Mrs. Simpson's parents' in Orange County and have met with a priest. They've been to the beach and went out on a boat Saturday.

"The children understand their mother is gone, but they're holding up well," Ms. Brown said. "We're a really close family and there's a lot of support here."

But there will not be enough love or therapy to keep them free of emotional scars. Child development experts say the best that can be done for traumatized youngsters is let them be and offer love, gentleness and a listening heart.

"I would hold them. I would let them lead the way," Griffin said. "If they want to talk, let them talk. If they don't, I would sit beside them."

Children feel grief differently. They may act if nothing has happened. They may act out, stop eating, or have nightmares.

DA expects Simpson to disclaim responsibility

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The district attorney believes O.J. Simpson may admit killing his ex-wife and her friend but claim he was not responsible for his actions.

"We've seen it in Menendez. It's going to be a likely defense here, I believe, once the evidence is reviewed by the lawyers," District Attorney Gil Garcetti told ABC News.

He was referring to Erik and Lyle Menendez, who admitted killing their parents but said they feared for their lives after years of sexual and psychological abuse.

At Mrs. Simpson's funeral, Justin ran between limousines and tugged impatiently at his dress shirt collar. At the burial service, Sydney was captured on film in the tight embrace of a woman mourner. The girl smiled, but her shoulders pulled back, as if she would have loved nothing

"Even in grief, you can still hold a horse around with them," said child psychologist Tom Bluett. "With a depressed adult, you can't horse around with them. They don't respond."

Before Sunday's slayings, Sydney and Justin were just the children of divorced parents, the offspring of a famous father who had once beat their mother so severely she was hospitalized. more than to break free and go play.

Their first trials ended with hung juries.

Simpson is charged with murder in the stabbings of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman. He was scheduled for arraignment this afternoon.

Simpson has insisted he is innocent.

The football Hall of Famer spent Father's Day under a suicide watch in his cell at the Men's Central Jail, "depressed and sad," said his lawyer, Robert Shapiro said.

Simpson was visited by a psychiatrist as fans flooded the jail switchboard with calls seeking an address.

"I spoke with O.J. this morning and he wished me a happy Father's Day and asked me to spend the morning with my two boys," Shapiro said. "Then he started to cry and said, 'I wish I could spend Father's Day with my children.'"

Simpson had not talked with his own children, Sydney and Justin, Shapiro said. He would not discuss Garcetti's speculation about legal strategy.

Prosecutors have not decided whether to seek the death penalty. Legal experts said pleading guilty to voluntary manslaughter — intentional killing carried out in the heat of passion — could reduce the risk of a death sentence.

Like the children of many celebrities in this city, they remained mostly out of the media spotlight.

Blacks fear of crime is growing

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Black households are nearly three times more likely than white ones to fear crime in their neighborhoods, and that black fear is growing faster than white fear, a survey found.

Fear of neighborhood crime has risen almost twice as much among blacks as whites since the mid-1980s, reflecting the fact that violent crime strikes blacks more frequently, the Justice Department reported Sunday.

The department's Bureau of Justice Statistics said that between 1985 and 1991, the percentage of white households that believe crime in their neighborhoods is a serious problem grew by 50 percent — from 4 percent of all white households to 6 percent.

During the same period, the number of black households expressing serious concern about neighborhood crime almost doubled — from 9 percent of all black households to almost 17 percent.

The Bureau of Justice Statistics drew the data from the American Housing Survey, which is conducted by the Department of Housing and Urban Development once every two years to obtain residents' views of neighborhood problems. About 60,000 households were surveyed.

In central cities, black households viewing neighborhood crime as serious rose from 12 percent to 23 percent over the period.

Among white central city households, the percentage citing neighborhood crime as serious rose from 8 percent in 1985 to 13 percent in 1991. It was not the most frequently mentioned neighborhood problem.

These perceptions, the bureau pointed out, mirror the incidence of violent crime, which victimizes blacks more than whites and central city residents more than those in suburbs or rural areas.

Among all center-city households, 15 percent cited crime as a neighborhood problem, compared with 5 percent of suburban and 2 percent of rural households.

Overall, households identifying crime as a serious problem in their neighborhoods rose from 5 percent to 7 percent from 1985 to 1991.

In black central-city households, neighborhood crime was the No. 1 concern. That was followed by noise, cited by 12 percent; litter or housing deterioration, 8 percent; traffic, 6 percent; poor public service, 3 percent; undesirable commercial properties, 2 percent; and other problems, 9 percent.

White House finds reason for hope with N. Korea

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The White House is finding reason to hope North Korea will keep its promises to former President Carter, who concluded after a remarkable trip to the communist nation that "the crisis is over."

But administration officials, after meeting with Carter at the White House, were much less optimistic than the former president.

"There may be an opening here," Assistant Secretary of State Robert Gallucci, the State Department's top official on North Korea, said Sunday.

"There's much that could be there" in North Korea's proposals on ending the crisis, he said. "The issue again is to determine if it is there."

A senior administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Carter's trip leaves the White House operating on two tracks: Continue its push toward sanctions in the United Nations; and try to confirm North Korea's resolve to keep its promises, most importantly the pledge to freeze its nuclear program and allow international inspectors to stay.

In a sharp difference with President Clinton, Carter said North Korea does not fear sanctions because little trade is allowed now. "But they do have concerns — I think to the point of war — about being branded as an outlaw nation and about the insult they think this would be to their Great Leader," Carter said in an interview Sunday.

Graham: Americans would support invasion of Haiti

The Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Americans would rally in support if U.S. troops invaded Haiti to topple a military dictatorship and restore democracy, Sen. Bob Graham predicted.

"Sanctions hurt, dictatorship kills," the Florida Democrat said Sunday at a news conference concluding his weekend tour of the Western Hemisphere's poorest nation. He called for quick U.S. intervention if international sanctions fail to restore democracy.

Graham traveled to Haiti to assess the effectiveness of the U.N. sanctions, designed to pressure Haiti's ruling military to return power to elected President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, ousted in a September 1991 coup.

Earlier Sunday, the Haitian army refused to let Graham travel to the Dominican Republic border to see if banned gasoline is getting through.

At his news conference, Graham challenged President Clinton to use Haiti as "a place where he can demonstrate his resolve" to counter charges he is indecisive on foreign policy. He said the United States should not tolerate a democracy near its borders being taken by force.

Other reasons for invading Haiti, Graham said, could include the country's extreme poverty and its role as a shipment point for drugs.

Rockets win, force 7th game

By The Associated Press

HOUSTON — Suddenly, the Houston Rockets went from the brink of defeat to being the favorites for their first NBA championship.

Hakeem Olajuwon's 30 points, his two big defensive plays in the final minute and Kenny Smith's clutch 3-point shot enabled the Rockets to escape the fourth-quarter heroics of New York's John Starks for an 86-84 victory Sunday night. The outcome tied the NBA Finals 3-3 and forced just the third final-round Game 7 since 1978.

"For the first time in franchise history, we're going into a seventh game with a chance to win a championship," said Houston coach Rudy Tomjanovich, referring to the team's two six-game losses in its previous trips to the NBA Finals.

OLAJUWON

The Knicks, although they never led in the second half and trailed by as many as 12 points, nearly won their first title since 1973. With Starks scoring 16 of the team's 22 points in the fourth quarter, New York got as close as 78-77 and pulled within two points four times in the final period.

"It's a very disheartening loss for us," Knicks coach Pat Riley said.

But now that the Game 6 chance has passed, the Knicks, as the road team, face a daunting history in the seventh game Wednesday night. The home team has won the last 19 Game 7s since 1982, although just one of those 19 came in the NBA Finals, when the Los Angeles Lakers beat Detroit in 1988.

"This is what we worked all year for," Houston's Robert Horry said of the Game 7 home-court advantage. "We knew it would be very important. Being familiar with your territory is what it's all about."

Houston seemed to have the game well in hand with a 72-63 lead with 9:18 left. Then Starks, who finished with 27 points, took over.

Kenny Smith (30) of the Houston Rockets celebrates next to teammate Otis Thorpe (33) after hitting a three-pointer down the stretch Sunday. Houston beat the New York Knicks 86-84 to force a seventh and deciding game in the NBA Finals.

The first of his three fourth-quarter 3-pointers, two free throws and a jumper made it 72-70, his second 3-pointer made it 78-77 and his third left Houston with an 84-82 edge with 1:17 remaining.

Starks' near-perfect period then took a turn for the worse when his pass intended for Patrick Ewing was stolen by Olajuwon, who was fouled and made two free throws for a four-point Houston lead with 39 seconds left.

Anthony Mason made it 86-84 with a baseline jumper seven seconds later, then rebounded a Houston miss with 7.6 seconds to go. After the Rockets committed a non-shooting foul with 5.5 seconds on the clock, Starks tried to win the title for the Knicks with one shot, but Olajuwon fought through a pick and got a piece of the ball, causing it to fall far short.

Howard roper tops in nation

BOZEMAN, Mont. — Howard College team roper John Folmer, from El Paso, earned a national title at the College National Finals Rodeo, which concluded Sunday.

Folmer teamed with Texas Tech and ex-Howard roper Tye Maben to turn in a combined score of 21.1 seconds.

FOLMER

John's twin brother, Wayne, teamed with Richard Powell of Tarleton State to take ninth place.

"I was just thrilled for both of them," Howard coach Mike Yeater said of the Folmers. "It was quite a run here for the twins — each of them won a go-round."

Vernon Regional Junior College won the men's team title, while Southwest Oklahoma State won the women's team title.

Brad Stewart and Ross Hataway, Howard's other participants, did not place in the top 10 of steer wrestling and bull riding, respectively.

Big Spring Cowboy Reunion & Rodeo

Slack night starts rodeo Tuesday

Ropers pick up the slack with Tuesday action

By DAVE HARGRAVE
Sports Editor

The Big Spring Cowboy Reunion and Rodeo doesn't start until Wednesday, but for many rodeo fans, the best night can be the one before the competition begins:

Slack night. For many ropers, Tuesday is the start of the rodeo. Too many ropers sign up for the rodeo to fit all of their performances into Wednesday through Saturday's planned schedule, so by random draw some of the competitors are tabbed to run Tuesday, in "slack." Former World Champions or struggling Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association rookies can be picked for slack — it's simply luck of the draw.

Slack night is a different type of animal than the performances Wednesday through Saturday. It's less formal, which gives fans a chance to get closer to their favorite cowboys. On the down side, famous rodeo clown Quail Dobbs won't be there; on the up side, you're getting in free.

"It doesn't cost much to get in, usually nothing. I think the only time we charged was here one year and was roping," said Dr. Rip Patterson, a member of the rodeo's Board of Directors. "It's a relaxed sort of deal. Usually the team ropers and the calf ropers that are too numerous to fit into the normal run of the event come early and can rope their steers or calves early. "The reason for having it is to keep the performance during the normal run of the rodeo from being too long, but it also lets a lot of these guys go to two or three rodeos a week. They can come to our slack and a rope, and then go on to another rodeo and rope."

A misconception is that slack night is not a part of the competition. True, the rodeo's advertising says the event starts Wednesday, but ropers on slack night have just as much chance of winning a title as the Wednesday-through-Saturday performers do, Patterson said.

Slack night is also a sneak preview for the die-hard rodeo fans who can't wait for Wednesday. Richard Atkins, a member of the rodeo board, said many of the spectators at slack night are the ones who will be in the Rodeo Bowl from start to finish.

"Of course it's popular for people interested in the roping events, but when I've been there looking around, you see mostly people who have a real rodeo background — they're the people who are probably going to go every night anyway. It's a great night — you get to say hi to a lot of old friends, friends that have been coming to the rodeo for years. It's not a real tourist night."

It is, however, a good night to get a closer look at rodeo, Atkins said.

"It's a fun time, because there's a lot of visiting and talking, and not quite as structured as the regular performances are. You miss out on some of the entertainment of the other performances, and unless we happen to have way too many bull riders or bronc riders, the roping events and sometimes the steer wrestling, or bulldogging, events are the only things that occur during slack."

World Cup

Tie gives USA a comfortable start

By The Associated Press

DANA POINT, Calif. — After one game in the World Cup, the United States still has a reasonable chance to advance — which is far different from four years ago.

A day after Eric Wynalda's 25-yard free kick gave the Americans a 1-1 tie with Switzerland at the Pontiac Silverdome, U.S. starters took a day off and relaxed in the California sun.

"We don't look at the mathematics," forward Ernie Stewart said Sunday. "That's the worst thing you can do."

Colombia's 3-1 loss to Romania at the Rose Bowl on Saturday probably made it more difficult for the United States to advance. The Colombians, a pre-tournament favorite, will be looking for a big victory against the Americans at the Rose Bowl on Wednesday, not only to even their record but also to improve their goal differential.

It was hot but comfortable in southern California Sunday, far different from the steamy sauna of the Silverdome the previous day. The first indoor game in the World Cup's 64-year-old history turned into a large sauna with 80-degree temperatures and 71-percent humidity.

"We felt it was a game we should have won," U.S. midfielder John Harkes said. "We came in thinking we should get three points. In a nutshell, we played badly and got a point."

Still, it was far better than the Americans' 1990 opener, when Czechoslovakia routed the United States 5-1. The contrast was even greater for Wynalda.

Ernie Els hits a shot from behind the grandstand on the 17th hole at the U.S. Open Sunday. After taking a bogey on the 18th, Els forced a playoff today with Colin Montgomerie and Loren Roberts.

Three golfers walk course today in U.S. Open playoff

By The Associated Press

OAKMONT, Pa. (AP) — If there's any edge, it goes to Colin Montgomerie in today's three-man playoff for the U.S. Open golf championship.

"I feel like I'm one-up," the chunky Scot said Sunday after he'd gained a place in the 18-hole playoff against young Ernie Els of South Africa and American journeyman Loren Roberts.

"They had an opportunity to win and didn't take it. I didn't have that opportunity," Montgomerie said.

Montgomerie was the first of the three to finish regulation play at 279, 5 under par.

Roberts and Els each went to the 18th tee with a 6-under total. Both bogeyed the last hole of regulation play to set up the first three-man Open playoff since 1963.

It was scheduled to begin today at 10 a.m. EDT on the Oakmont Country Club.

"I could kick myself. I could have won the Open with that 4-foot putt" on the 18th hole, Roberts said. "But I'm not going to do that. I still have a chance to win."

The 24-year-old Els also had some second thoughts about the way he played the last hole.

"I didn't look at the scoreboard," he said. "I didn't know Loren had dropped a shot there."

So, even though he had been driving erratically, Els used a driver off the tee and hooked it into deep rough. He had to play it out sideways and came up in an old divot. His third was short and to the right. From off the green, he two-putted from 45 feet, dropping a 5-footer to stay in the playoff.

"I was thinking, 'Whoa; this can't be happening to me,'" he said. But it did.

"I guess I'm just happy I made that last putt," he said.

In retrospect, however, he said he probably should have looked at the scoreboard and "probably would have played a 2-iron off the tee."

As it was, the third-round leader shot a closing 73 in muggy heat.

Roberts, nine shots back after two rounds, moved up with a 64 in the third round, then added a 70.

Montgomerie, leader of the European Order of Merit the last two seasons, also shot 70 over the last 18 holes.

None of the three has won in major championships before. Each had the lead alone at one time or another over the last 18 holes.

From the lead, Montgomerie let his advantage get away with a string of three consecutive bogeys, beginning on the 11th.

Montgomerie has a 0-2 career playoff record. Els, who now plays most of his golf in Europe but plans to join the American tour next year, is 0-1. Roberts, 38, who scored his first career victory in Orlando, Fla., earlier this year, has no playoff experience.

And he wouldn't have needed any except for that putting lapse on the final hole.

Roberts hit a 8-iron approach through the green, chipped back to 4 feet and had that putt to remain at 6-under par and — as it turned out — win the American national championship.

"I'd be lying if I didn't say I had trouble taking the putter back," he said.

And, with the blade open, he fanned the putt to the right.

Els also admitted nerves may have been a factor in his troubles off the tee. He missed the fairway on the last four driving holes he played.

The Straw's back in business, signs with San Francisco

By The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Darryl Strawberry wants to salvage a career nearly ruined by drugs and injury. The struggling San Francisco Giants are trying to turn around their season.

Hoping they both get what they want, Strawberry and the Giants reached a contract agreement Sunday. However, the eight-time All-Star won't be ready to join the club for several weeks.

"I think everybody deserves a second chance. There are guys who will turn their lives around, so give Darryl Strawberry a chance to turn his life around," Giants manager Dusty Baker said at a news conference.

San Francisco general manager Bob Quinn conceded the club was taking a calculated risk with Strawberry, released six weeks ago from a drug treatment center and waived a month ago by the Los Angeles Dodgers.

But with the Giants desperate for offense and looking to halt a slide that has left them at a season-low nine games below .500, it was one worth taking, Quinn said.

The Giants hope to have Strawberry in right field by the All-Star break to replace Willie McGee, out for the season with a ruptured Achilles tendon.

Strawberry, 32, was signed to a contract for the rest of the 1994 season. Financial terms were not disclosed.

The troubled outfielder, released by the Dodgers on May 25, did not attend the news conference. He won't be available for comment until later this month, Quinn said.

In a statement released by the club, Strawberry said: "My agent, Eric Goldschmidt, and I were extremely impressed with the manner in which the Giants organization reached out to me."

Despite the presence of Barry Bonds and Matt Williams, the Giants are last in the majors in batting average at .241 and near the bottom in runs scored with 268.

Wallace wins again at the Miller 400

By The Associated Press

BROOKLYN, Mich. — The only thing hotter than the 95-degree weather Sunday at Michigan International Speedway was the Ford Thunderbird that Rusty Wallace drove to his third straight victory.

Wallace dominated the race but had to overcome a near-disastrous late pit stop, charging from 11th to first in 16 laps and racing away to victory in the Miller Genuine Draft 400.

The 1989 NASCAR Winston Cup champion was leading defending series winner Dale Earnhardt when the leaders made their final pit stop on lap 176 during the seventh caution period of the race.

The yellow flag came out just as Wallace was slowing to make his final stop. He went one more lap and, as he drove slowly onto pit road, his engine quit, out of gas. As the Penske South Racing crew changed tires and filled the gas tank, crew chief Buddy Parrott sprayed ether into the engine compartment as Wallace tried to get the engine restarted.

By the time the crew pushed him about 10 yards, with Parrott taking a tumble on pit road, the engine fired and Wallace moved back onto the two-mile, high-banked oval at the back of the lead lap cars. Only Jeff Gordon, who made a second stop because of an oil leak, was behind Wallace on the lead lap when the green flag came out 19 laps from the end of the 200-lap race.

Wallace, who won at Dover and Pocono the previous two weeks and has five victories for the season and 36 for his career, sliced through the thick traffic. He was sixth by lap 186, third the next time around, moved to second on lap 192 and passed Earnhardt for the lead with three laps remaining.

He pulled away after that, leaving Earnhardt to fend off Mark Martin for second place. Wallace crossed the finish line 0.72 seconds, about three car-lengths, ahead.

"That was the hardest last 15-20 laps I've ever run in my life," Wallace said. "I can't believe I was like 12th or 13th and passed 'em all."

"The car was double-tough," added Wallace, who led three times for 83 laps. "We worked real hard on our shocks and engine combination today and you guys are bad to the bone. Your engine's a killer." Earnhardt, second to Wallace two straight weeks, said, "It was a good battle at the end. I was racing Mark. I wanted to be racing Rusty, though."

The winner's average speed of 125.033 mph was held down considerably by 56 laps of caution, most caused by a treacherous patch of repaved track in turn three.

No less than nine cars either crashed or nearly hit the wall as they drove over the crumbling asphalt patch that kept stealing the spotlight from the race cars until the dramatic finish. Three times, caution periods had to be extended while pea-sized gravel was swept off the dangerous patch.

None of the accidents was serious.

Get that two-pointer out of here!

One day soon, I promise to look into the violence in the NBA and the high salaries in Major League Baseball, but for now I want to point my finger at the NFL again.

Carlton Johnson

First, why do we need a two-point conversion?

There must remain a few distinct differences between the college and the professional game, and that is done primarily through the levels of play, the salaries (none for college players), no kicking tees in pro football on extra points (same on field goals) and the two-point conversion in college.

These are just a few of the many differences that make both levels of the game enjoyable, but they do stick out.

Remember the Nebraska-Miami Orange Bowl a few years ago? Heavily-favored Nebraska misses a two-point conversion in the final seconds and Miami goes home with the national championship. The two-point conversions, outside of high school and college football, belong in basketball.

With all of the rules that are in place now, why add another?

Remember when everyone got used to instant replay, but the officials couldn't decide when and on which plays to use it?

Well, I remember that instant replay (or the lack of it; however you want to look at it) probably cost the Houston Oilers a trip to the Super Bowl several years ago.

Instant replay is gone, but having that return would be much better than a two-point conversion that is just another way to cut down on the number of field goals. It lures coaches into going for a touchdown, and a possible eight-point score, instead of a safe three points.

This is a disadvantage to teams in their rebuilding years or teams on the verge of joining the NFL's blue blood (with Dallas; San Francisco, Buffalo and maybe a few others). A good, close, well-played game, down to a make-or-break situation, could end up in a tie or a loss by the underdog when it makes an ill-
