Health clinic could open by Sept. 1

By KELLIE JONES
Staff Writer

If all goes according to plan, a new health clinic for low-income residents of Howard and Glasscock counties will be opened by Sept. 1.

The Howard-Glasscock Community Health Clinic is requesting $298,949 from the Texas Department of Health for their Community Oriented Primary Care project.

Marvin Wise, who will be the director, has applied for the grant and hopes to know whether the state will provide the money by August 1. If the grant money is provided, the clinic will be opened 30 days later. Wise works in the business office at Scenic Mountain Medical Center helping patients find ways to pay for their bills if they do not have insurance.

"The main goal of the clinic is to give people the treatment that is needed so they don't have to go to the emergency room for a headache or cold after hours," said Wise.

The H-G CHC will be a centralized project targeted to serve families who are at or below 200 percent of poverty in the two counties. Approximately 7,000 individuals should qualify for assistance, and it is estimated 2,000 clients will be served at an average cost per client of $149.06.

Wise says he has picked out two or three possible sites and has talked with doctors who will help out at the clinic. He said: "I'll be the director but I won't be there all the time so what will start out as a part-time position will go to full time. There will also be a full-time doctor and a part-time one, a surgeon, registered nurse and an eligibility clerk."

"The clerk will screen the patient to get information about how much money they make, what bills they pay, how many members are in their family and things like that. That will

Warbler threatens private land

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards is urging U.S. Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt to safeguard landowners' rights as the Fish and Wildlife Service considers new regulations to protect the golden-cheeked warbler. Her letter to Babbitt, announced Friday, comes after reports by The San Antonio Express-News that the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is planning to designate parts of 33 Texas counties as critical habitat for the migratory songbird.

Two congressional members Friday also criticized the federal agency. Rep. Lamar Smith and Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison said they have written letters warning against designation of the private property as critical habitat.

"Texans treasure both their natural heritage and their rights to enjoy and use private property. Any critical habitat plan must respect the property rights and unique needs of small landowners, farmers, and ranchers, most of whom have already demonstrated their commitment to good land stewardship," Richards said in the Thursday letter to Babbitt.

She said compliance with the federal Endangered Species Act has been difficult in Texas. More than 95 percent of the state's land is privately owned, she said, and the federal government offers no incentives for landowners to comply.

"A majority of these 33 counties are in my congressional district and it is left unclear whether anyone in the agency has taken the time to consider the potentially devastating economic impact this action will have on the region," Smith, R-San Antonio, wrote Mollie Beattie, USFWS director.

Smith, who called a San Antonio news conference, and Mrs. Hutchison, also a Republican, questioned the agency's legal authority for such a move.

A federal appeals court in March ruled in favor of a group of landowners who had sued to block the agency's attempt to prohibit development of property classified as critical habitat for an endangered species.

"Designation of critical habitat for the golden-cheeked warbler has the potential to cause significant financial hardships for landowners. It is therefore imperative that the FWS consider these economic impacts to the maximum extent allowed by law," said Richards.

She urged that the public receive every opportunity to give input on the process and the critical habitat designation. She said the public comment period should be extended for at least six months after the proposal is published in the Federal Register.

Texas to fund new textbooks, but Big Spring will have to wait

By KELLIE JONES
Staff Writer

State leaders are making plans to come up with $11.8 million to purchase textbooks for the upcoming school year.

The main purchase will be for seventh-grade science books that 50 percent of the districts in the state adopted in recent years. Big Spring Independent School District did not adopt those new books but will be receiving some additional Algebra One texts for the 1994-95 school year.

"Our science books are seven years old and we bought some new ones to offset our losses. The state doesn't have the money to fulfill our new order so this adoption will carry over one more year.

A few years ago, school districts could choose to offer Science I in seventh grade, Science II in eighth grade and so on, or offer Life Science in seventh and Earth Science in eighth. Big Spring teachers didn't want the new option and stayed with teaching the life and earth sciences.

"Those new science books they are talking about won't be for our district. About half the districts went with those and half stayed with the way we are teaching the subject," explained Assistant Superintendent Murray Murphy.

The district will be benefiting from the efforts to buy new books when they receive 40 to 50 new math texts. "If the money isn't approved to buy the books, then our district will pay the difference if needed. We will have to take the money out of our local budget. We don't want to because we feel the state should come up with the money, but we understand that they are in a budget crisis and can spend only a certain amount of money on books," added Murphy.

The Legislative Budget Board, which includes Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, House Speaker Pete Laney and other key lawmakers, will consider a transfer from the state Treasury's unclaimed money fund to meet part of the textbook shortfall.

According to the Associated Press, the unclaimed money comes from such sources as dormant bank accounts that have been turned over to the state. That money is due to revert to the state general revenue fund at the end of the year.

The budget board said $28.8 million is needed to buy new textbooks for the seventh-grade science course, high school math and elementary science, which have been designated as priorities by the State Board of Education.

The transfer of $11.8 million would make up some of that money, with the remaining $17 million to come from a grant approved by the governor.

continued from page 1 determine if they are eligible to be seen by another agency. If so, we will treat them the first time only, then refer them to that appropriate agency.

"But if they aren't eligible for say, Medicaid or the county indigent plan, they will become a client here. If a family of four makes less than $2,400 a month, they are considered by the federal government to be at the 200 percent poverty level and would qualify for assistance by our clinic."

The fully bilingual center will not offer only comprehensive health maintenance and medical care but also patient education, nutrition counseling, emergency dental service and eyeglasses for children up to 18 years old, sensitive eye screening for diabetics, flu shots, well immunizations, lab and x-ray as well as two medical prescriptions per month.

"If a person comes in and needs to see a certain type of doctor, we will have arrangements made to send the patient to the physician that day without an appointment and without having to wait for several days.

If you have to be sent to the hospital, then you are on your own. We won't have the funding to pay for that nor if a person decides to go the emergency room for non-emergency needs after the clinic is closed," Wise added.

Wise continued by saying this type of clinic is really needed in this area because "there are certain limitations for other help such as Medicaid and Social Security disability and they can't afford to see a doctor unless they go to the emergency room."

If a person or family is considered to be at the 1 to 100 percent poverty level, they will not be charged for office visits, seeing a nurse, doctor's assessment, any lab work, x-rays nor medication.

If the client is at the 101 to 150 percent poverty level, the office visit will cost $15, seeing a nurse, getting lab work or x-rays and medicine will cost $3 and seeing a doctor will run the patient about $5.

If the patient is in the 151 to 200 percent poverty bracket, the office visit will cost $20; nurse, x-rays, lab work and medicine will be $6 and the doctor's fee will be $10.

The board agreed the wording in a job description should read as: The executive director should facilitate and implement current long-range objectives as approved by the board of directors.

Other duties of the executive director should be to oversee the financial structure of the organization, plan and direct expansion and recruitment of business, interviewing, hiring and training new employees, etc.

The board had received a few applications for the position that call for someone with a bachelor's degree and at least four to 10 years experience.

The board of directors, in its meeting, also appointed a five-member search committee that was expanded to seven at the request of City Councilwoman Stephanie Horton.

Horton was concerned there wasn't enough representation of the citizens of Big Spring on the committee.

The people selected to the search committee will have to decide if they want to serve in this capacity, but those selected were: Howard County Judge Ben Lockhart, Mayor Tim Blackshear, District Judge Robert Moore, Big Spring residents Bob Brock and Frances Wheat, and Moore Board members Steve Fraser and Glenn Fillingim.

The board would like for the committee to use as much input from the community as possible during their search.

Fire agency feels heat

■ Commission under fire over hiring practices

DALLAS (AP) — The head of the Texas Commission on Fire Protection is drawing controversy over hiring and promotion practices, a newspaper has reported.

Former agency administrator Robert Frost won a $186,000 verdict from an Austin jury after alleging that executive director Michael Hines eased him out of the agency because he was over age 50.

Administrator Helen Campbell won an undisclosed cash settlement in her lawsuit that alleged Hines was hired over her because of age and gender discrimination.

Hines declined comment on the cases. Speaking generally, Hines said his agency "has an outstanding record on hiring and promotion" and complies with all state and federal equal employment requirements.

However, a juror in the Frost case told The Dallas Morning News for a story in Sunday's editions that the jury found the agency's hiring and promotion practices under Hines questionable.

"It looked like a good-ol'-boy network," said Roberto Rodriguez of Austin.

The 148-employee agency, which has a $6.5 million annual budget, has been hit with other accusations of age and sex discrimination.

However, those are still pending at the Texas Commission on Human Rights, Ms. Campbell's attorneys said. The human rights panel declined comment.

The 12 commission members were appointed by Gov. Ann Richards. The agency certifies firefighters and licenses companies that sell fire alarms, sprinklers and extinguishers. It also conducts arson investigations at the request of local fire officials.

Wasps used to fight pests

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists are enlisting an army of parasitic wasps in the battle against the pesky — and noisy — Caribbean fruit fly that plagues Florida citrus groves.

As part of a four-year pilot study, scientists found that carnivorous wasps can detect the chewing sound fruit fly maggots make as they nibble fruit pulp, according to an article in Agriculture Research, journal of the USDA's Agriculture Research Service.

So scientists are using the wasp to find and destroy maggots hiding inside citrus fruits.

The hunt is simple — but gruesome.

Between 50,000 and 150,000 wasps are released per square mile each week. Fruit fly populations in Florida have been slashed by 90 to 95 percent.

The female wasp "fertilizes" individual maggots by poking them with her egg-depositing ovipositor and laying her eggs inside the tiny insects.

Researchers say the wasps are safe alternatives to the hit-or-miss use of sterile fly infestations or the spraying of the fumigant ethylene dibromide, or EDB, which has been found to be carcinogenic.

Scientists created buffer zones in urban areas near commercial groves by releasing huge numbers of wasps to drastically cut back fruit fly numbers. Then fewer flies migrate from neighborhood guava, loquat, cherry and other fruit trees to commercial citrus groves, they said.

"The flies infest grapefruit only at low levels — preferring ... backyard fruits that can be separated from commercial areas by maintaining the fly-free zones," the article said.

Between 50,000 and 150,000 wasps are released per square mile each week.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Diocese of Brownsville bishop dies of cancer

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Bishop Enrique San Pedro, spiritual leader of 650,000 South Texas Catholics, died at the age of 68 after a battle with prostate cancer.

The bishop of the Catholic Diocese of Brownsville died at 6:05 a.m. Sunday in a Miami Beach, Fla., hospital.

The Havana, Cuba-born cleric had undergone surgery for prostate cancer earlier this year and was expected to return to his duties in July. However, his plans were set back when he remained fatigued from the radiation treatments.

Schools fighting for foreign students

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — With increased commerce expected because of the North American Free Trade Agreement, two South Texas universities are stepping up recruitment for international business students.

Texas A&M University at Corpus Christi has added international business classes and applied for a grant to establish an intensive, fast-paced program that would offer a certificate in international trade.

The 5,500-student university faces competition from The Texas Graduate School of International Management, which expects to have 50 students when it opens Sept. 1.

Both institutions are trying to set up shop in the old Nueces County Courthouse.

Rotund teen burglar apprehended

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A 400-pound teen-ager, who was arrested last year after stealing ice cream and beer from a suburban San Antonio home then leaving a trail of wrappers, has been charged with another burglary.

Police say Danny Kelley, 17, was arrested while fleeing from a house that had just been burgled. Police say a stolen camera and jewelry had been dropped on the lawn of the home.

Kelley, who stands 6-4 and weighs about 400 pounds, was charged with burglary and was in Bexar County Jail Sunday in lieu of $15,000 bond, officials said.

Woman's body found in barrel

FORT WORTH (AP) — A Fort Worth businessman has been freed on bond a day after officers found the body of a young woman stuffed in a barrel at his condominium.

Warren Miles Bondurant, 59, who owns a data processing company, was charged with murder on Saturday. He was released from the Tarrant County Jail on Sunday after he posted $100,000 bond.

Police said that Bondurant's live-in girlfriend tipped officers early Saturday that he might be responsible for the disappearance of a close friend.

The woman, who was not identified, had been missing since Wednesday.

Officers said Sandra Lee Underhill, 31, identified as the girlfriend, told officers that the victim was her friend and former roommate. The victim was believed to be about 22.

The Tarrant County medical examiner's office said the woman apparently died of a gunshot wound in the face. Authorities believe she had been dead since Wednesday.

Officers found the body packed in a sealed 55-gallon drum on a backyard patio at the condominium, Lt. Kneblick said.

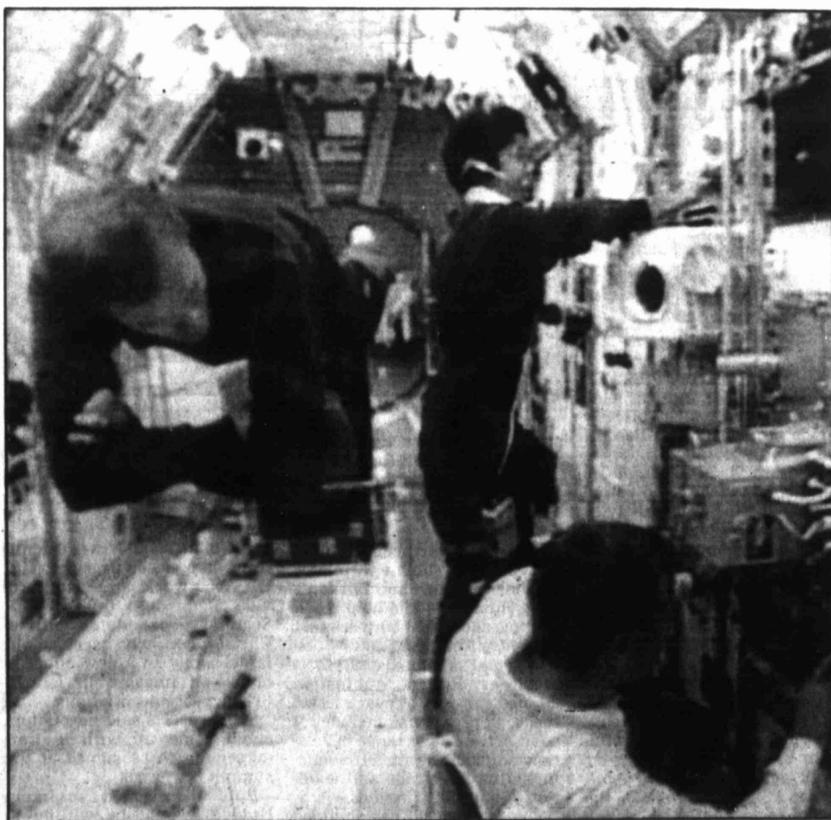

Model says lawsuit is just a money ploy

HOUSTON (AP) — A Honduran woman's lawsuit against Guess? jeans model Anna Nicole Smith is nothing more than a plot to get $2 million from the newlywed celebrity, Ms. Smith's lawyer says.

T. Patrick Freydl told the Houston Chronicle in Sunday editions a May 27 lawsuit filed in Houston was one phase of a monthlong string of accusations and demands by Maria Antonia Cerrato, a former household worker.

Martha E. Garza, Ms. Cerrato's attorney, said she began negotiating with Ms. Smith's attorneys in February.

Protection of one area helps all

Protection of a little songbird is rising a discordant sound in Washington.

The furor started when the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service announced it was planning to designate parts of 33 Texas counties as critical habitat for the golden-cheeked warbler.

The move has been criticized by Gov. Ann Richards, in a letter to U.S. Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt, and by Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison and Rep. Lamar Smith.

The cause for concern is the habitat runs across privately owned property. As Richards pointed out, 95 percent of the land in Texas is privately owned, making it compliance with the federal Endangered Species Act difficult.

What Richards, Hutchison and Smith are asking of the federal government is respect for the rights of private property owners and the financial hardships those landowners might incur.

The concern is warranted. "Texans treasure both their natural heritage and their rights to enjoy and use private property," said

Richards in an Associated Press story.

She is right. While it is important to protect the animal species that co-habit this world with us, the government needs to work with private landowners in protecting both the species and rights of the landowners.

In that fashion, both the golden-cheeked warbler and the landowners come out winners.

Under the act, there is a certain amount of time allowed for public input. Richards is asking that the time limit be extended.

Although this designation affects only Central Texas, it could come to West Texas the next time a species is put on the endangered list. Let your congressman know your feelings.

What protects Central Texas will also protect West Texas.

Different stripe of comment

If there's a lack of balance in the news coverage of the O.J.

Simpson affair, it shows in the choice of legal experts and commentators hired by the TV networks.

There are a few prosecutors and judges. But most of the experts are criminal defense lawyers who gained fame and wealth by winning freedom for assorted nasties and slimeballs.

Because they are defense-minded, they see the trial as an elaborate game in which motions to suppress evidence and aiming zingy questions at nervous witnesses are more important than getting at the truth.

At times, they have formed a virtual cheering section for Simpson's lawyers, while almost hissing the police and the prosecution for having the sheer gall to look for evidence and clues. To hear them tell it, if a cop does something more than write a parking ticket, he borders on fascism.

What they say is interesting and even educational. But if there is to be a balance, it seems to me that the networks ought to have some cops as expert commentators.

During a break in the action, it might be refreshing to hear some experienced street dick say to one of the criminal lawyers:

"Well, counselor, when I arrive at a crime scene and there is a dead woman with her head almost lopped off, and a dead guy with more holes than a shish kebab, the first thing I think of is, 'Who the hell did this and how can I find him?' That's where our jobs are different. The first thing you think of is, 'Who did it, how can I get him off the hook, and can he pay?'"

And since this is a criminal case, the most glaring omission should be obvious: None of the commentators are criminals.

Or if they are, they haven't been caught yet.

If you watch football on TV, you know that at least one expert member of every broadcast team is an ex-football player. The same is true of most baseball and basketball broadcasts. But here we have a criminal case that is being broadcast much like a major sports event, with breaks in the action and expert color commentary, but not even one of the commentators is a criminal.

If there is anything we have no shortage of in our population, it is criminals. I'm sure that some would be available for color commentary, probably for a lesser fee than the defense lawyers are getting.

And they are probably paying as much or more attention to this case than anyone else in America is.

In fact, I have heard from one prison inmate with views on the Simpson affair.

He is Jimmy Ray Blackwell Sr., who is doing a stretch in the Rowan Correctional Center, near Charlotte, N.C., for a firearms conviction.

He wrote: "I am currently in solitary confinement for assaulting another inmate, and I have been keeping up with the Simpson ordeal through the Charlotte Observer newspaper."

"I know that my thoughts and opinions don't count for nothing because I have been in and out of the prison system for the past 14 years.

"I know and have met men that have done the same kind of crime that Simpson is accused of. The guys I know wasn't rich and wasn't no football superstar, and were sentenced to die for their crimes.

"What I've seen so far is all about Simpson and how he feels. Well, what about that beautiful Nicole and the innocent waiter and how they felt? No one is speaking of them. They are the ones people should be grieving for.

"I know that if I had killed two other humans, I would definitely receive the death penalty. Sometimes I don't understand this system at all. Just because he is some famous dude, is it OK for the rich and famous to kill and they don't have to worry?"

"They tell me that if I get three felonies, I automatically get life and no ifs and buts about it.

"But the way this is going, somebody is going to come up with O.J. Day.

"Well, thanks for listening." And if other criminals read this column and have opinions on this case, don't hesitate to drop me a line. Why should lawyers be the only ones whose voices are heard? After all, if lawyers are so smart, how come Jimmy Ray is in solitary confinement?"

Tribal variation on juvenile justice

When a boy reaches 13 he should be sealed inside a barrel with only one knothole, according to advice attributed to Mark Twain. When the boy reaches 16, you seal up the knothole.

A variant of that wisdom turns up among the Tlingit natives of southeast Alaska, as Adrian Guthrie and Simon Roberts are about to find out. A court in Everett, Wash., has just handed the two Tlingit 17-year-olds over to tribal elders for culturally appropriate punishment for beating and robbing a pizza delivery man.

The tribe has pledged to build the victim a new house and pay his medical bills — and to banish the miscreants. They will be sent to separate uninhabited islands for a year's reflection, with nothing but a few hand tools and two weeks' food.

After their exile, they will continue their rehabilitation working in a native sawmill — possibly making barrels to keep boys in line.

WORLD

A Rwandan government army tank carrying Rwandan soldiers moves along a street in Goma, eastern Zaire, among thousands of refugees fleeing the advancing Tutsi-led Rwandan Patriotic Front rebels attacking the border city of Gisenyi in Rwanda Sunday. At least a million refugees have fled into the Goma area, including thousands of soldiers, some with their weapons.

Rwandans flee as rebels take over

GOMA, Zaire (AP) — Chaos and anarchy have overwhelmed this border town, flooded with terrified Rwandans fleeing rebels who have captured virtually all of their country. Dozens of people were killed by cross-border mortar fire and in a massive stampede across the frontier.

A relief worker called the desperate flight "the exodus of a nation."

About 60 refugees were killed Sunday by mortar fire from rebel territory in Rwanda, French officials said. As many as 50 others, mostly children, were trampled to death.

Up to 1 million refugees have crossed into Zaire ahead of the advancing rebel forces. Rwandan government soldiers fleeing their last strongholds have joined the exodus, which began Thursday.

Desperately needed aid flights to Goma were halted Sunday by mortar shells that hit near Goma's airport, cathedral and a market, the French Foreign Ministry said. The ministry quoted U.N. commander Gen. Romeo Dallaire as saying the shells were probably fired by the rebel Rwandan Patriotic Front, or RPF.

With little food and water, relief workers were unable to cope with the flood of refugees.

"Goma is out of control," said Panos Moutzias, a spokesman for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees. "We feel defeated and exhausted."

Gunfire is almost constant, and many refugees have been robbed at gunpoint by soldiers on both sides of the border.

"Security is a nightmare," said Panos Moutzias, a spokesman for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees.

Shelling and gunfire triggered Sunday's border stampede. A Sygma photographer, Charles Caratini, who was at the border shortly afterward, said he saw 30 to 50 bodies, mostly children.

Most refugees pouring into Zaire are Hutus who fear revenge from the Tutsi-dominated Hutu militias have been blamed for most of the estimated 200,000 to 500,000 deaths in the tiny Central African country during three months of ethnic slaughter.

The violence began April 6 when Rwanda's president, a Hutu, died in a mysterious plane crash. Within hours, Hutu militias began systematically killing anyone perceived to oppose the government.

There has been no evidence of widespread reprisals by the rebels.

Dallaire said the rebels had taken control all of Rwanda except for the zone in the southwest carved out by French troops to protect hundreds of thousands of refugees.

As rebels advanced, the government's only escape routes were south into the French zone or west into Zaire. The RPF has said repeatedly that if government troops seek refuge in the French zone, it will invade.

But France warned Sunday it will not tolerate rebel incursions into the zone, which is less than one fifth of the country. About 1,000 French troops patrolled the area.

Israel, Jordan talk peace

ON THE JORDAN-ISRAEL BORDER (AP) — In a carpeted tent pitched symbolically astride their desert border, Israeli and Jordanian peace negotiators held a historic round of talks today and vowed to seek a lasting peace treaty.

The negotiations, broadcast live on television in Jordan and Israel, tackled key differences before a summit of Israeli and Jordanian leaders with President Clinton next week in Washington.

"It is our expectation that the satisfactory results of the negotiations and accepted agreements will culminate in a treaty of peace that delineates carefully our rights and duties under conditions of peace," said Ambassador Faiz Tarawneh, the head of Jordan's 11-member delegation.

Blessing the start of the meeting in Arabic and Hebrew, Israeli delegation head Elyakim Rubinstein said "this meeting takes place in a tent. The tent is tentative. But peace should be permanent."

Israeli peace talks delegation head Elyakim Rubinstein, right, shakes hands with Faiz Tarawneh, head of Jordan's delegation at the beginning of the first round of historic talks in a tent symbolically pitched astride the Israel-Jordan border Monday.

He said the forthcoming summit between Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and Jordan's King Hussein would help break the "psychological barrier" that separates Arabs and Jews.

In remarks aimed at Syria as much as Jordan, Rubinstein defined the sort of peace Israel seeks. "Peace must include, of course, the whole range of relations: diplomatic and economic, including free trade and abolition of boycott," he said.

The Arab world has shunned Israel since its creation in 1948, banning trade with and travel to the Jewish state.

The camp straddles the border in an undisputed area 12 miles from Jordan's Aqaba port and Israel's Eilat tourist resort on the Red Sea.

The talks bring Israel a significant step closer to peace with the Arab world and could provide momentum to help U.S. Secretary of State Warren Christopher who arrived in Israel today in a new effort to break an impasse in Israeli-Syrian peace negotiations.

Some reports said negotiators could come up with a draft agreement to be signed at the summit next week.

But it seemed unlikely Hussein would be willing to sign a treaty before Syria, his powerful northern neighbor, does so as well.

Tarawneh, Jordan's ambassador to Washington, told reporters the process of getting a peace treaty would be "long and it won't be easy."

Gazers keep eyes on comet

WASHINGTON (AP) — Astronomers worldwide were at their telescopes Saturday to watch as mountain-sized fragments of a shattered comet, hurtling through space at 130,000 mph, began smashing into Jupiter.

The first chunk of the 21-piece comet Shoemaker-Levy 9 splashed the cloud cover of Jupiter Saturday at about 4 p.m. EDT. Other parts will follow at about six-hour intervals until Friday.

Some astronomers have forecast the crash will create the show of a lifetime, with explosions as powerful as 200,000 megatons of TNT and towering fireballs.

Others agree with Paul Weissman of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory who said the whole thing could be "a cosmic fizzle." Distance, viewing angle and the massive gravity of Jupiter could turn the hoped-for fireworks into a dud, experts say. The comet shards will hit the backside of Jupiter, just over the horizon of the giant planet as viewed from Earth. Jupiter also is 480 million miles away and any explosive effect caused by the cometary pounding may be too faint to be seen by any but the most powerful telescopes.

And if the comet chunks could be crunched up by Jupiter's gravity so that they hit the planet not as mountain-sized pieces, but only as bits of gravel and cubes of ice.

The negative predictions are not dimming worldwide enthusiasm.

Virtually all professional telescopes on Earth were aimed at Jupiter on Saturday.

Racial issues slow crime bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House says racial provisions in proposed anti-crime legislation should not be allowed to block its passage, but the Congressional Black Caucus is holding out hope for a compromise.

"If there's no satisfactory outcome, we will continue to try and try again. I happen to be an optimist," Rep. Kweisi Mfume, D-Md., head of the 38-member black caucus, said Sunday. "I think we're going to find a way to reach a compromise."

House-Senate conferees trying to work out a final version of the $30 billion crime bill have been stymied in part because of differences over inclusion of the racial justice act that lets death penalty defendants use statistics to show racial bias.

Mfume said "things fell apart" last week when White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta called to say that President Clinton felt there was no longer time to reach a compromise and the bill had to be moved forward without the racial provisions.

Talks reopened when Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., offered a compromise that would have the racial provisions apply only to federal death sentences.

Opponents of the provisions argue that they would give criminals yet another way to avoid the death penalty through unending appeals.

Food stamp fraud reaches record high

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of Americans pocketed more than $1.8 billion in food stamp benefits they were not entitled to receive last year — a record loss that the Agriculture Department blames on mistakes and fraud.

In a recent letter to key members of Congress, the Agriculture Department said that 8.29 percent of all food stamp benefits went to people who were ineligible or collected more than they were entitled to receive.

At the same time, thousands of low-income people were denied benefits totaling $559 million because of mistakes made in running one of the federal government's largest and most expensive welfare programs.

Food stamp benefits, which totaled $22 billion in 1993, help 28 million people a year to buy groceries.

USDA's Food and Nutrition Service said fraud and mistakes by welfare recipients and state and local welfare caseworkers quickly add up to large amounts of money.

According to the department, food stamp recipients may inadvertently or deliberately provide incorrect information about their incomes or assets, while complex and inconsistent rules governing food stamps and other welfare programs may confuse some workers and lead to mistakes.

To estimate food stamp overpayment and underpayment rates, states review a sample of food stamp households to determine how accurately benefits are issued. USDA then checks a sample of those reviews and calculates a nationwide error rate.

The department said difficult economic conditions and rising caseloads in many areas have created problems for states and may account for the increase in errors from 1992, when mistakes cost the food stamp program $1.7 billion in overpayments and $500 million in underpayments.

Haiti policy pushes invasion, critics say

WASHINGTON (AP) — Critics on both ends of the political spectrum said Sunday that the Clinton administration's policy on Haiti is pushing the United States toward a military invasion of the Caribbean nation.

"I think it's going to happen. I think they're right on the edge," said Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan.

Incoming White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta countered that the administration policy of economic and diplomatic pressures to force Haiti's military leaders from power has been consistent. He said the administration has the legal authority to initiate military action if necessary.

Dole said it was wrong to risk American and Haitian lives to restore democracy to that country. The United States shouldn't "run around invading countries because of democratic principles. If there's American interests threatened or American lives threatened that's another thing, but that hasn't happened," he said on CBS' "Face the Nation."

Dole said he would relax economic sanctions and open a dialogue with members of the Haitian parliament.

Rep. Kweisi Mfume, D-Md., appearing on NBC's "Meet the Press," agreed with Dole that the administration's Haiti policy has increased the possibility of military intervention.

The president, he said, "ought to begin today by being consistent. That's been the biggest part of the problem." He said "the options are quickly running out. And, unfortunately, we're getting closer and closer to military action."

Some members of the 38-member black caucus advocate military intervention to restore President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, who was ousted in a 1991 military coup. Mfume, however, said there is no consensus and the final call must be the president's. "He has to make that decision."

Panetta said military action is within the administration's legal prerogatives, and that the United States has vital interests in Haiti that must be protected.

"You've got a country that is in turmoil that's a neighbor ... and I don't think we can simply sit back and allow that kind of turmoil to continue," he said. "We cannot simply sit back and allow the status quo to eat us up alive."

Administration officials in recent days have repeatedly said that an invasion is not imminent. But the Pentagon has also stationed 2,800 Marines and 4,700 sailors in 16 ships off Haiti, and preparations are reportedly being made for a quick strike against the military regime if ordered.

Health care may reach abortion compromise

WASHINGTON (AP) — The administration indicated support Sunday for a compromise that would give care providers an option on whether to provide abortion services under a national health care reform plan.

Incoming White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta said the administration hopes to work with the House and the Senate to arrive at a compromise stressing the rights of people to a choice on the abortion issue.

The government, Panetta said on NBC's "Meet the Press," shouldn't "necessarily impose one approach or the other."

The offering of abortion benefits has become a major sticking point in congressional debate over the final shape of health care reform bills.

Anti-abortion lawmakers have voiced strong opposition to using taxpayer money for abortion benefits, but some 70 members of the House said last week they will reject any plan that does not treat abortion the same as any other medically necessary procedure.

All four health bills that emerged from House and Senate committees contain abortion coverage, although one, approved by the Senate Finance Committee would let any employer or health plan refuse for religious or moral reasons to buy or provide abortion coverage.

It was that approach that Panetta appeared to be endorsing when he said that people should have a choice on abortion issues and "if we provide any kind of major health care reform in this country, people ought to continue to have that choice."

President Clinton in an interview with The Philadelphia Inquirer last week, said three-fourths of private insurers now cover abortion and it wouldn't be right to remove that benefit in a national plan. He said he hoped a compromise could be worked out and noted "there are some interesting ideas floating around in the Congress."

Muslim groups protesting Schwarzenegger movie

WASHINGTON (AP) — American Muslim groups launched a campaign Friday to tell moviegoers that Arnold Schwarzenegger's new blockbuster motion picture unfairly stereotypes Arabs, Muslims and women.

"True Lies," starring Schwarzenegger and described as Hollywood's first $100 million film, opened in major U.S. cities. Its Washington matinee premier was greeted by two dozen marching protesters with placards echoing lines from "the Terminator's" past pictures.

"Open Your Eyes and Terminate the Lies," "Hasta La Vista Fairness," "Not All Arabs are Terrorists, Not All Terrorists are Arabs," "Arnold, Think Before You Act," and "Reel Arabs are not Real Arabs" were among the messages.

The Council on American-Islamic Relations said similar "educational" demonstrations were planned in at least 10 other cities.

In "True Lies," a super-spy and his wife, played by Schwarzenegger and Jamie Lee Curtis, battle fictional Arab-speaking "Middle East terrorists." Reviewers were impressed by the picture's costly and compelling action sequences. Some described other episodes and the plot as funny or silly.

Brazil kicks way to Cup

PASADENA, Calif (AP) — It was a test of nerves as much as talent, stamina as much as skill.

For the first time, soccer's championship came down to a shootout — after all, this is the Wild West — and Brazil beat Italy 3-2 in penalty shots after a scoreless tie Sunday to become the first four-time World Cup champion.

"Brazil is again No. 1," said coach Carlos Alberto Parreira, more relieved he had accomplished his mission than happy with the feat.

Pele led Brazil to titles in 1958, 1962 and 1970, and the nation hungered for another. Italy, another three-time winner, was the final and most difficult obstacle.

"We have done our utmost," Azzurri coach Arrigo Sacchi said. "We have to accept the result."

But few liked it. Imagine Game 7 of the World Series tied after 12 innings and the title decided by a home-run derby. Imagine the NCAA championship tied after overtime and decided by five 1-on-1 contests.

For the first time ever, the World Cup final came down to what many say is a roll of the dice.

"Brazil is a very great team and I think they were luckier than us," Italy captain Franco Baresi said. "I think when you reach the finals and lose, it is horrible, whether on the field or in penalties."

Baresi was one of the Italians who failed with the world — well, at least 2 billion if the estimates are correct — watching.

Shooting first after 120 scoreless minutes, Baresi put the ball over the crossbar. It would have been a fine field goal.

He fell to the field in despair until conformed by Brazil goalkeeper Claudio Taffarel.

"I tried to change the direction of the shot at the very last moment and I missed," said the captain of both Italy and AC Milan, the European champion.

Italian goalkeeper Gianluca Pagliuca stopped Marcio Santos, Demetrio Albertini scored for Italy, Romario scored for Brazil and Alberigo Evani and Branco both connected.

Now came Daniele Massaro, a forward, a man expected to easily convert his kick. Taffarel, a veteran of four seasons in the Italian League, dove to his left and parried the ball away.

"A lot of luck is involved in a penalty kick," Taffarel said. "The goalkeeper normally tries to pass all the responsibility on to the kicker. Since I guessed right, it looked like an easy save."

Dunga, Brazil's captain, made his kick, giving Brazil a 3-2 lead as Roberto Baggio, the world's best player last year, approached the 12-yard mark. Baggio limped through the game because of a sore right hamstring. He had carried the Azzurri through the knockout phase of the World Cup with five goals.

But like Baresi, he kicked a field goal. The Cup belonged to Brazil.

"I was there in body and spirit," Baggio said. "My concentration was good. I don't know why I shot the way I did."

"I did it my way," Parreira said.

Golfers finding ways to beat heat

By DAVE HARGRAVE
Sports Editor

The thermometer soars past 100 degrees, but the golfers are out there.

The major heat wave that's gone through Big Spring this summer has tapered off a bit, but golfing never has, said the city's two golf professionals. Golfers don't give up the game when the temperature rises; they just find a way around the heat.

Some miss the heat by scheduling morning tee times; others grin and bear it. The golfers who challenge the heat have at least one trick. It makes them look funny, perhaps, but you've got nothing to lose when mercury is spilling from the thermometer.

"They just take a cold towel out there," said Big Spring Country Club professional Lanny Turrentine. "The take the towel, soak it on cold water, put it on their head and then put their hat on. They look like Arabs running around the golf course, but it keeps their head and the backs of their necks cool."

"The Arabic look is fitting" considering the desert-like conditions Big Spring has seemed to have this summer. Both Turrentine and Comanche Trail Golf Course professional Al Patterson agree — this summer is about as bad as it gets.

"It's the worst summer we've had, heat-wise," Patterson said. "Let's put it this way — we're selling a lot of drinks."

Turrentine, however, hasn't seen a drop in play at BSCC.

"Play during the middle of the day has decreased the last few weeks, but we've taken a lot more tee times in the morning, and we've had more late-afternoon play. The head count's about at the same place it always is."

Patterson has seen the same situation. "Our turnout has decreased in the midday, but in the late afternoon it always picks up," Patterson said. "It's just really hard to play out there in this heat in the afternoon."

Patterson said he's taken time off in the afternoon to play a few holes, and sometimes the heat makes him wish he hadn't. A cold towel on the head might have been in order. Both pros said golfers playing in extreme heat must drink plenty of water while playing.

The heat causes stress in ways besides temperature for club pros.

"As far as me personally, maintaining the golf course can get pretty stressful. You pump every night all the water you can on the golf course," Turrentine said. "In these extremely high temperatures, we've really been fighting the fungicide problem.... Where we can get water to the fairways, they're holding up very well, but until we get a break from this heat, we just have to do what we can."

Maybe the break is here to stay, but there's such a thing as wishful thinking.

'Monster' eagle putt gives Price British Open crown

TURNBERRY, Scotland (AP) — Nick Price, two strokes down in the British Open and lining up a monster putt for an eagle on the 17th hole, needed something dramatic to happen.

"I knew I had to make it," Price said. "I really couldn't believe it when it went in. I really couldn't. When it jumped in the right side, I almost jumped out of my skin."

"My heart rate must have been 250, and it didn't slow down until that last putt on 18."

The amiable man from Zimbabwe was at the peak of his golfing powers in engineering one of the most remarkable turnarounds in the history of the game's oldest tournament.

A 50- to 60-foot eagle putt on the 17th green at Turnberry — and a tactical mistake by Jesper Parnevik of Sweden — proved to be the critical factors in what Price called "a fairytale finish" to the 123rd British Open Championship on Sunday.

"It tested my heart, my temperament and my character," Price said. They were found to be sound beyond his own wildest imagining. "When you reach down deep inside yourself, sometimes you surprise yourself," Price said. "I didn't know I had it in me to play down the stretch the way I did."

Neither did anyone else. But his 3-3-4 finish, birdie-eagle-par, gave him a closing 66 and made him a 1-shot winner over the stunned Parnevik.

The amazing eagle putt provided the knockout punch, capping a quick 3-shot swing in Price's favor.

The little tap-in for par on the last hole, completing a 12-under-par 268 total, brought tears to Price's eyes and wiped away the haunting memories of the two losses that came on a 6-year cycle.

In 1982 the youthful Price blew a 3-shot lead with six holes to go and lost to Tom Watson at Troon.

Six years later, in 1988 at Royal Lytham, he lost to Seve Ballesteros who, Price said, "was the best player in the world and playing at his very best."

After another six years, however, it was Price hoisting the old silver claret jug.

Is baseball really the American pastime?

Carlton Johnson
Staff Writer

Last Tuesday night, the National League finally came through with a win in the All-Star game, 8-7 in 10 innings, breaking a six-year win streak by the American League.

So far this year, that's the best news I've heard about baseball. I certainly have my doubts that it should still be called America's national pastime.

Football is definitely the sport that seems to be more in tune with America, but the country's national pastime is not football either.

It's earning money. Enough said! I'm not quite sure how or if I understand why baseball became known as America's national pastime, but it's wrong.

Is this why baseball fans are on the verge of sitting through another strike?

Here we have a sport that drives people crazy (right around the time spring training is about to wind up). They can't wait for opening day, but just as fast as the enthusiasm and intensity of the first day reaches a feverish level, it's gone.

I'm not against baseball, but for one thing, the season is too long; second, expanding into three divisions per league just opened the door for very unentertaining divisional playoffs

(in the event that a sub-.500 ball club wins its division and has to face a team that has won 100 plus games).

Looking at where the teams were before the All-Star break, only 10 out of 28 teams were above .500 in the standings.

The best record (.54-33) belonged to the Montreal Expos, one game ahead of Atlanta. The worst record (.35-.54) belonged to San Diego.

Splitting the leagues into three divisions means that we may never see another race like we saw in 1993 between Atlanta and San Francisco. Just think, it's not often that you win more than 100 games and watch the championship series on television.

At the halfway point of the 1994 season, there does seem to be one race in each division, but how long the close races last remains to be seen.

Last year the Chicago White Sox battled Texas for a good portion of the season. This year they're fighting it out in the AL's Central Division with the Cleveland Indians. Can you believe it?

And look! Texas at 42-45 was three games in front of the Oakland A's and leading the AL West.

Maybe I'm surprised about the wrong things, but one thing is clear: Baseball is still an enjoyable game, but it's not what it used to be.

Now the Major League Baseball Players Association is battling team owners over a salary cap, increased minimum salaries and salary arbitration.

Where have we heard this before? If this were the United Autoworkers Union or the AFL-CIO taking a stand for something, maybe there would be reason to get behind a strike, because we would be talking about everyday, average blue-collar employees trying to make a living. Get real.

We're talking about overpaid athletes who boast about a talent that most of them don't have. It's a great game, but (excuse the phrase) swinging a stick at a ball is not worth $7 million a year. By the same token, neither is throwing a football, but I venture to say that football players do a better job of earning what they are paid.

Where basketball is concerned, several people are paid very well also, but I'm not sure that Derrick Coleman is worth the millions he got the New Jersey Nets to pay him. In time, if he closes his mouth, he may become a legitimate superstar.

Face it, the big three in America (football, basketball and baseball) are "bottom line" industries and if you do what you say you can do, you can generally write your own ticket. But on occasion, one side or the other begins to gain too much of that bottom line.

Today, that side is the baseball owners, and the players' union wants what it thinks it rightfully deserves. I don't agree with either side, but a little advice may be in order here. Gentlemen, try living on what average Americans live on for a year and see if your perspective changes any.

Drabek ends lost weekend on good note; Rangers fall

PITTSBURGH (AP) — This time, Doug Drabek couldn't wait to leave Pittsburgh.

He wasn't so eager to depart in 1992, but the Pirates' tight-fisted finances and the opportunity to return to his native Texas convinced him to sign with the Houston Astros.

He didn't need persuading Sunday. After a not-so-All-Star week in Pittsburgh that seemed to last a month, all he wanted to see was Pittsburgh in his rearview mirror and a plane to Houston sitting on the airport tarmac.

"It was a long week," Drabek said.

Actually, it wasn't a week that was too long, but two pitching performances that were much too short.

Cuffed around for three runs in two-thirds of an inning Tuesday in his first All-Star game, Drabek lasted just two innings Sunday as the Astros turned an eight-run third inning into a 9-0 victory over the Pirates.

It wasn't Drabek's bad pitching that was to blame for his shortened outing, but Pirates starter Paul Wagner's.

Drabek was hit with a 92 mph fastball just below the right wrist as he squared to bunt on a 3-2 pitch in the third inning, prompting Astros manager Terry Collins to lift him for precautionary reasons.

"Doug didn't want to come out, but if we left him in, he would have been pretty sore," Collins said. "I can't tell you what went through my head. I was sure it hit him on the elbow."

Drabek probably felt even worse when his premature departure with a bruised right forearm cost him his 11th victory.

Shane Reynolds (7-4), who teamed with starter Greg Swindell to blow an eight-run lead in Pittsburgh's 11-8 victory Friday, earned the win with seven innings of five-hit shutout relief.

Blowing an eight-run lead is something a pitcher wouldn't wish on himself once in a career, so Reynolds wasn't about to let it happen twice in the same weekend.

"The big lead made a difference, because I could go out and be real aggressive," Reynolds said.

Blue Jays 3, Rangers 1
ARLINGTON — Dave Stewart helped pitch the Toronto Blue Jays to the World Series title last fall, but this season he has been ordinary.

Stewart's struggles have coincided with the Blue Jays' fall from grace. But on Sunday night the 37-year-old Stewart, holding a 9.42 ERA over his previous three starts, showed signs of life, shutting down the Texas Rangers' potent offense on four hits over seven innings in a 3-1 Blue Jays victory.

Bothered by a groin pull during his bad streak, Stewart rebounded with perhaps his most effective start of the season Sunday.

"The fact that he's had some problems with his groin has affected his pitching some," Blue Jays manager Cito Gaston said. "But he did a good job tonight."

HOROSCOPE

FOR TUESDAY, JULY 19, 1994

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Tempers explode easily. You might need to rethink a situation. Opportunities to understand another arise. Deciding which way to go is important. Creativity surges and you get ahead of the game. Tonight: Be receptive to a new venture. ***

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): There are some intense moments today. Others do not look at life in the same way you do. Realize what's important, what your priorities are and which way you need to go in a crucial situation. An upbeat approach gets you farther. Tonight: Get in close. **

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Upsetting moments occur easily. Others are just not looking at things the same way you do. Stress involves work and your own anxiety levels. Learn to express your anger more appropriately. A boss may be unusually cranky. Tonight: Be happy anyway. ***

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You might feel a let down. Your energy levels drop during the day, and you do not see situations clearly. Focus on work and getting the job done. A message may be lost. Tonight: Recharge. **

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A creative approach works in reaching a financial understanding. The more upbeat you are, the better the results and the happier you will be. Get ahead of the game while you can. Tonight: Add some naughtiness to your life. ***

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Settle down while you still can, and ask yourself what it is you really want from a partner. As you understand more of what you need and get to the bottom of a situation, you feel more in control. Prepare to take a leap in faith. Tonight: Bring work home. **

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your adjustability is tested. Fatigue might be intense, and you might be out of sorts. You check out a work-related problem and handle it appropriately. If you look at matters differently and manage them positively, you get way ahead. Tonight: Talk about feelings. ***

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Cut expenses and be more honest about your needs. Get to the bottom of a situation and you will gain understanding. Prepare to reverse course. Tonight: Forget creativity; be logical. ***

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Life is unstable at best, and yet you feel very good. Do not let a family member rain on your parade. Use your instincts with a financial partnership. An offer is for real. Get expert advice, learn more and make a solid decision. Tonight: All smiles. ***

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): It is important to understand a situation from a different perspective. Be as upbeat as you can. Understanding another's perspective is critical. Tonight: Get a good night's sleep. *

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Zero in on what's important. A friendship means a lot but may cost you. What are your priorities here? Get ahead by being clear. A work offer could be too good to be true. Ask questions. Tonight: Hang out with your friends. **

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A responsible approach gets you farther. Be aware of what others are asking. Evaluate choices. You gain opportunities to understand where others are coming from. Listen carefully. Tonight: Work as late as you need to. *

IF YOUR BIRTHDAY IS JULY 19, 1994: In order to succeed in the year ahead, you will need to learn to work with high stress levels. Tension can create frustration. An exercise or meditation program would help greatly. Your focus will be on stronger work opportunities. Creativity is your forte, and another of your strengths is your ability to work long, hard hours. Be more optimistic, if possible. If you are single, romance will develop, but it will have low long-term potential. If attached, difficulties could occur, and could involve your in-laws. SAGITTARIUS irritates you.

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Concerned Mom," whose 2-year-old son, "Ricky," liked to play with dolls. We, too, have a son who at that age requested a special Cabbage Patch doll for Christmas. He played with the doll for years, and now, at the age of 12, he still keeps that doll in his room.

Has it made him "funny"? Only if you consider a young man who never leaves for school, hangs up the phone, or goes to sleep without telling us he loves us "funny"; who never allows me to open a door, who always compliments his aunts and sister, who cringes when he hears other children talk back to their parents, who absolutely loves to baby-sit young children, who can carry on an intelligent conversation with adults, who plays baseball and basketball with a vengeance, and is not afraid to clean up the kitchen or show affection in front of his friends — "funny."

His sister, who is in college, says, "We all want to meet someone like Michael." So, relax, "Concerned," and let his nurturing tendencies bear fruit. — GINNY FROM OREGON

DEAR GINNY: The letters for "Concerned Mom" are still coming in. A few samples to further reassure the mother whose son preferred dolls to more masculine toys that she has nothing to worry about:

DEAR ABBY: When my son was 2 1/2, I gave him a doll. He slapped it under his arm as he rode his tricycle up and down in front of the house, where I could easily monitor him through the kitchen window.

One day I saw a rather disagreeable elderly neighbor woman bend over and say something to him, which caused him to run to our front door. When I opened it, he asked, "Mommy, am I a little boy or a little girl?" Of course, I told him that he was a little boy, and since (even at 2 1/2) he spoke very clearly, I told him what to say if this neighbor — or anyone else — questioned him about his doll.

This same neighbor asked my son why he had a doll. I saw her startled face when he looked up at her with his big blue eyes and said clearly, "I'm developing my paternal instincts!"

Incidentally, Abby, both my sons have become wonderful fathers. I might add, my daughter played with trucks as well as dolls.

Yours for better parents ... BETSY MOSS, PHOENIX

DEAR ABBY: In response to "Concerned Mom," I have two sons, Bret, who is 2 years old, and Nicolas, 8 months.

When I was pregnant with my second, I gave Bret a doll from my childhood. Every day, we bathed, fed and dressed the "baby," so that when Nicolas was born, Bret knew what to expect.

Everyone is amazed at how loving Bret is toward his little brother and how much he enjoys helping me with him. Bret also loves to help me cook and clean.

No one would think twice about a girl shooting baskets or playing with cars, but boys are still supposed to remain "boyish." If we give our sons the freedom to express their feelings when they are young, maybe they will feel freer to express their emotions when they become adults. — ROBIN GIDDINGS, ELKHART, IND.

DEAR ROBIN: Your sons are fortunate to have a mother with your wisdom.
