U.S. seeks support for Haitian invasion

WASHINGTON (AP) ating with Haiti's military rulers, the United States is seeking U.N. blessing for the option of a military invasion to oust them. "They must go," President Clinton said Wednesday.

U.S. diplomats are beginning preliminary talks with members of the United Nations Security Council, looking for support for a resolution that would bolster the United States if Clinton decides to invade Haiti, administration officials said. The president has made no decision on invading, but retains the prospect as an option to oust the coup leaders who seized power nearly three years ago, the officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, reiterated.

Clinton and his aides were adamant that there will be no new negotiations with Haiti's de facto rulers despite an assessment by Rep. Bill Richardson,

D-N.M., that Lt. Gen. Raoul Rejecting any notion of negoti- Cedras is flexible and "not as intransigent as he appears to > Richardson, who opposes military invasion but supports Clinton's overall policy on Haiti, suggested, based on a five-hour meeting with Cedras, that the top Haitian general might be ready to "make a move.'

> "If that move is consistent with U.S. policy and can avert an invasion, we should listen," Richardson said.

> Richardson relayed his impressions to Clinton at a White House meeting with other Democratic leaders. Clinton was not swayed.

"If he (Cedras) wants to talk about when he's going to leave, then I'm sure that somebody would talk to him," Clinton said during a photo session at the White House. "But they have usurped power. They agreed to go," in a negotiated pact a year ago. "They have not gone and they must go."

Cedras and the two other top military leaders are the focus of U.S. and international pressure to step down and allow the return of democratically elected President Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

"We expect them to leave and leave immediately," Clinton's special adviser on Haiti, William Gray III, said in an interview Wednesday.

"The international community is not prepared to enter any negotiations other than technical ones related to the departure of the coup leadership," Gray said. Technical discussions would not involve conditions of departure, but might deal with logistics, officials said.

Gray said the United States is working with the so-called Friends of Haiti group -Argentina, France, Venezuela and Canada — and Security Council members "to shape a proposal that will expedite the return of democracy and provide for a secure environment once the coup leaders leave."

Storms provide hidden danger

By CARLTON JOHNSON Staff Writer

You see the lightning flash and hear the thunder roll and you know it's severe weather

July is considered to be one of the three peak months for thunderstorms and tornadoes, and while tornadoes are very deadly storms, people often take less protective action during thunderstorms because they think they have less to fear.

It's not what you see that's the most dangerous, according to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, the National Weather Service. and the U.S. Department of Commerce, but the things that may be developing in the midst of a storm can cause even more damage.

Tornadoes are the most frightening products of thunderstorms and are nature's most violent storms, killing 80 people and averaging 1,500 injuries per year and on occasion sustaining winds over 200 miles per hour. but other elements of thunderstorms are the deadliest.

When compared to hurricanes and winter storms, thunderstorms are relatively small in size and cover small areas, ave aging 15 miles in diameter and lasting an average of 30 minutes, but at any given moment 1,800 thunderstorms are occurring in the world. That's 16 million storms a year. Of the 100,000 estimated thunderstorms that occur each year in the U.S. only 10 percent are classified as severe, and the National Weather Service looks for certain features before classifies a storm as severe. A thunderstorm must produce hail at least three-quarters of an inch in diameter, winds of 58 miles per hours or higher or tornadoes.

Although storms are more likely to occur in the spring and summer months during the afternoon and evening, they can still happen at any time.

Storms often occur in the afternoon along the Gulf Coast, and in southeastern and western states and during late afternoon and evening hours in Plains states.

Severe damage can result from thunderstorms in the form of floods and flash floods - as evidenced by recent disasters in Georgia – straight-line winds, large hail and even tornadoes.

NOAA officials state that every thunderstorm needs the following things to live: moisture, to form clouds and rain; unstable air, relatively warm air that can rise rapidly; and lift, fronts, sea breezes, and mountains capable of lifting air to help form thunderstorms.

During the developing stage of a storm, the high, towering clouds you see are indicating rising air. There is occasional

Dance to benefit arts center

By KELLIE JONES Staff Writer

It is time to get out those dancing shoes and polish up on the waltz. The First Rhinestone and Diamond Gala to benefit the West Texas Center for the Arts is set for Aug. 13 and promises to be an evening of music and fun.

Tickets go on sale next week at the Art Center and the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce for $15 per person or $25 a couple.

"The proceeds from the dance will go to our music scholarship fund. We want to give three scholarships to students at Howard College and will have three major fundraisers during the year.

This dance will benefit a music student, our dinner theater in the fall will benefit the drama scholarship and when Amado Pena is here, those proceeds will be used for our visual arts scholarship," explained WTCA Director Doris Vieregge.

Vieregge says there will be a dance contest with a $200 prize for the first place winner to be decided by the audience. There is a $15 fee per couple to enter the contest. Also, there will be a silent auction from 8 to 11 p.m.

"There will also be a dancing pool where men and women can pay one dollar to dance with someone if they don't have a partner. The person who raises the most money will win a prize," added Vieregge.

VA bus service to help vets

By CARLTON JOHNSON

Staff Writer

The Veterans Transportation Network, based in Big Spring's VA Medical Center, is about to close the gap between the need for veterans to get to the hospital and their means of trans portation getting there by using a fleet of vans and a computerized communication system.

Although the Howard County chapter of the Disabled American Veterans is the headquarters for the transportation network, a DAV spokesman said the network is not a DAV project.

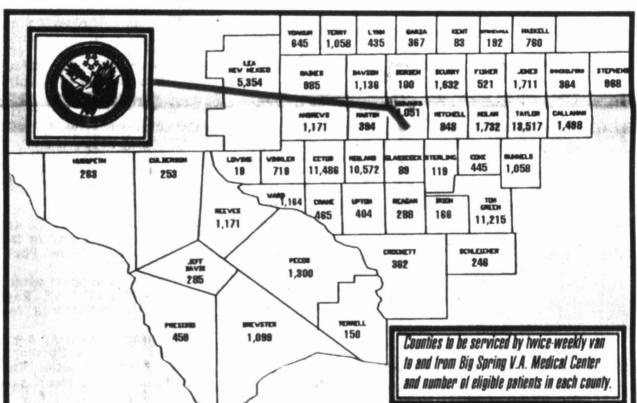

The VTN is run in cooperation with the VA Medical Center and Chief of Voluntary Services Fred Cox and serves the 47 counties in Texas and New Mexico in the VA Medical Center's area.

In the past, the hospital has barely reached a fraction of the veterans in the 47-county area, which has more than 83,000 registered veterans, because of a lack of adequate transportation. But with a network of vara and a computerized system of communication, the VTN will be able to tell when a veteran is due for an appointment, which hospital he/she will need to go to, which doctor to see, etc.

About 150 people will be involved with the operation of the network which will cover an area of more than 80,000 square miles, which is about one-fifth the size of Texas and as large as several of the continental United States.

Currently the VTN has a van in a Midland, Odessa, and Colorado City, two vans each in Seminole and San Angelo and will soon have three vans in Big Spring.

One van in Big Spring will be used for rounds (picking up and transporting veterans), another for rounds and local use, and the third van will be used for special situations such as emergency transfers to any hospital in the network's area.

Said Heidrun Covington, Commander of the Disabled American Veterans Auxiliary: "Most large area hospitals have a transportation system. Our outlying areas need transportation and we want to service

'We have a big area to cover, but the veterans did their jobs and now its time for us to help

Covington also said the network will get veterans to a hospital any way it can. The VTN program hasn't forgotten about the wives and daughters who often transport veterans to the hospital. For those wives and daughters who transport a veteran to the hospital and for one reason or other have to stay overnight (due to testing or hospital admittance), there is Haven House - a place to stay free of

Covington said Haven House is supported by donations and the VA Medical Center is one of the few veterans hospitals to have a facility like Haven

"In the future, we would like to have a Haven House for men who may have a wife who is the veteran and needs to come to the hospital," she said.

One of the main goals of the transportation network is to put a van in each of the county seats of the VA Medical Center service area at least twice a week and have the network in full operation by Christmas.

There are several independent and county groups in the hospital's service area that have vans to transport veterans, but they lack a cohesive umbrella to incorporate all of the cities and counties in such a large area. The VTN will be able to do this, according to a DAV spokesman.

lightning during this developing stage, but little or no rain.

When a storm is in its mature stage, this is the most likely time for heavy rain, hail, dangerous lightning, severe winds, and tornadoes.

Easy to identify, these storms generally produce dark clouds with a black or green appearance and will last an average of 10 to 20 minutes. However, they may last much longer.

During the dissipating stage of a thunderstorm, the danger is not over just because the rain decreases. Strong bursts of wind and lightning remain a danger.

Hail may accompany a thunderstorm. Strong rising currents of air within a storm, called updrafts, carry water droplets to a level where freezing occurs. When the ice particles become too big for the updraft to handle they fall to the ground as hail.

Large hailstones can fall to the ground at speeds faster than 100 miles per hour.

Thunderstorms can also produce downbursts, a sudden burst of strong winds, also called straight-line winds, in excess of 100 miles per hour. These are capable of causing tornado-type damage. These winds may be accompanied by

AUSTIN (AP) - Parents may be sentenced to community service work or fined if their children repeatedly skip school, Texas Attorney General Dan Morales ruled Wednesday.

In a new legal opinion Morales said school attendance was made compulsory in 1915 for children between the ages of 6 and 17, and that children and parents may be held criminally liable for a child's failure to go to class.

"We've given the police and the juvenile courts the flexibility to deal more effectively with problem children, Morales said of the ruling.

"This also provides a stronger incentive for parents to take an interest in the whereabouts of their children," he said.

The opinion was sought by Gov. Ann Richards, who asked whether police officers have the authority to enforce truancy laws.

An amendment to state law in 1993 makes it a Class C misdemeanor for a child to repeatedly skip school.

That amendment also authorized law enforcement officers to take a child into custody if the child is engaged in "conduct indicating a need for supervision.'

The law states that a child's unexcused absence from school for 10 or more days or parts of days in a six-month period, or three or more days or parts of days in a four-week period, constitutes "conduct indicating a need for supervi-

Better deal for who?

After seeing how much money has been poured into congressional campaigns from groups directly related to health care reform, you have to wonder who these bills are really going to benefit.

According to an Associated Press report, $25 million in two years has gone into campaign donations. This amount does not include 181 trips for 85 members of Congress underwritten by the same groups. Congressional travel leaders include Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., and Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Texas, who took 11 trips each in 1992-93.

Along with the trips and campaign contributions, the groups have employed nearly 100 lobbying or public relations firms and spent $50 million for television ads, according to the private Center for Public Integrity, a watchdog group.

It makes you wonder who is lobbying for us, who is taking care of our interest, who is going to get the best deal out of health care reform - us or them?

Cordial job interview for Breyer

By WALTER R. MEARS

AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON - Finally, a Supreme Court nominee who could have been sent to his confirmation hearings by central casting. Stephen G. Brever fit the part, a nominee with the right touch and the right

He should be. He used to write the questions.

While the process isn't over, there's no sign of meaningful dissent to confirmation of Breyer as the 108th justice to serve on the Supreme Court.

President Clinton chose the federal appeals judge from Boston after bypassing him once, in favor of Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg. Clinton turned to Breyer for this second vacancy to avoid the confirmation hassle his initially preferred candidate might have

It was a pragmatic selection, of a centrist, pragmatic jurist with Senate ties of his own. Breyer needed no cram course in dealing with the Senate Judiciary Committee. He worked there, in 1969 and 1970. "It was a pleasure to serve with you when you were the staff director and the chief counsel," Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., told him. "You were a great consensus builder."

That was the mood from the beginning. The ranking Republican on the panel effusively endorsed Breyer. With that, Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., the chairman, banged the gavel and joked that the hearing could adjourn.

But there were long hours of questioning to go, all of it collegial, none of it surprising. Senators do like to talk. Breyer accommodated that, too. His answers didn't take nearly as long as their questions.

"You strike me as an individual who not only is a legal scholar but combines with it the trait that I find somewhat unusual, and that is something of a scientific approach to examining facts," said Sen. Hank Brown, R-Colo. "And I sense in you a willingness to go beyond simply doctrinaire political philosophy and look at facts in making up your mind. "Is that a fair judgment?"

"Goodness, I hope so," said Breyer. "I'm a little biased. I hope so. Thank you.' All the questions weren't compliments, but they weren't confrontational, either, even on the conflict of interest issue critics tried to raise against Breyer for ruling on toxic waste cases while holding insurance investments in Lloyd's of London. Breyer said he'd seen no connection, but acknowledged it was possibly imprudent to hold the investments as a judge, and said he would end them as soon as pos-

Breyer said he'd tried to show "extreme sensitivity" with screening and full disclosure of his investments — his net worth is listed at $6.5 million — but acknowledged, typically, that reasonable people could disagree with him, and some do.

That's Breyer the consensus builder.

He said judges shouldn't legislate, music to conservatives. He said the law has to have a heart, not only a head, lest it become "a sterile set of rules removed from human problems." That fits liberal viewpoints.

"Consensus is important," he tends to play down the individof a Robert Bork, the silence of a David H. Souter, the controversy of a Clarence Thomas. The latter two were confirmed, Thomas by the narrowest Senate margin of any 20th century justice; Bork was rejected.

Those were Republican nominees; Justice Ginsburg in 1993 was the first Democratic choice in 26 years. She was confirmed after four days of placid hearings. Even those proceedings weren't as collegial as these.

Breyer's background certainly is one reason. Another may be that the court no longer seems to be at the point of altering, even reversing, its rulings on such matters as abortion rights and the constitutionality of the death penalty. Breyer said both are matters of settled law, although there still are unsettled questions related to them.

So went the job interview, the last on the way to a lifetime appointment.

Breyer said he writes his own opinions — there have been more than 600 as an appeals judge - with research help from his clerks. He said it rarely took him fewer than three drafts, usually a halfdozen or so, before he was comfortable with every word. He said that kept him at the word processor, most of every work day.

"I've learned the life of a senator is different, and I've learned some of the pressures that you are under," he said. "That's not the life of a judge."

World watches for effect of new N. Korean leader

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) -To the din of whistles from ships and trains, North Koreans bowed their heads today in tribute to their late leader Kim Il Sung. Nationwide mass rallies also marked the public debut of his heir, Kim Jong Il.

"Standing at the head of our revolution today is Comrade Kim Jong Il ... the great successor," the North's official Korean Central News Agency proclaimed.

Kim Il Sung, North Korea's ruler for nearly five decades, died July 8 at age 82 and has apparently been succeeded by his 52-year-old son. Today's rallies were clearly meant to shift the spotlight to the younger

The rallies, like the funeral ceremonies Tuesday, were watched closely for clues about secretive North Korea's official widow of the late Kim - the younger Kim's stepmother appeared to have re-emerged as a political force.

At the biggest rally, official television showed Kim Jong Il on a balcony overlooking a huge square in central Pyongyang, jammed with perhaps a million people. He did not address the crowd.

Official broadcasts of the rallies mentioned Kim Jong Il more often than his father. North-watchers in South Korea said. The broadcasts blared cheerful music dedicated to the younger Kim, heralding the beginning of a new era.

Just what that era holds for North Korea is still in question. North Korea has moved to reschedule high-level talks with the United States over its longrunning nuclear dispute, and ascension was expected soon.

Ships and trains throughout the country were ordered to sound their whistles, and TV showed ferries at the docks with their horns blowing. Trains stopped in their tracks, whistles shrilling, with conductors standing on the rail ties with bowed heads.

Haitians flee from military

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) - Paul-Luc Toussaint fled his home dressed as a woman about 2) years ago to escape a paramilitary group chasing him because he supported deposed President Jean-Bertrand

He's been on the run ever since, sleeping in a different place every night, including places where "only animals" should live.

Monique Leonard has fain fow at a friend's house since fleeing her home at about the same time. She belonged to a women's empowerment group the army deemed subversive Aristide's overthrow.

The two are among hundreds of thousands of Haitians who dare not go home or show their faces because of military repression, says Jean-Robert Vaval, acting director of the Ecumenical Center for Human Rights.

The center tries to help such refugees find shelter and apply for political asylum in the United States.

Repression has gotten worse as the world tightens the screws on Haiti's military coup leaders,

"When there is pressure on the military, there is more repression. Lately there are signs that more people are being killed than before," Vaval said.

Soldiers broke into the office of another human rights group last week trying to seize refugees' records, but left after employees screamed, he said.

Toussaint and Leonard told The Associated Press their stories behind closed doors inside the walled-in refugee center.

Toussaint, 32, has been in hiding since the army started jailing Aristide supporters shortly after the September 1991 coup. He campaigned for the populist priest and belonged to peasant groups in Chardonnieres, his hometown.

Toussaint was jailed and beaten in December 1991. He bribed guards to release him and fled to Port-au-Prince disguised as a woman.

He tried to return a month later, but narrowly escaped a second arrest.

Back in the capital, Toussaint stayed with cousins, but armybacked civilians burst in and beat his relatives. He escaped out a window.

In October 1993, after Aristide failed to return as hoped under a U.N.-brokered pact with the army, the paramilitary showed up at Toussaint's refuge and drove off with him after blindfolding him and tying his

It just seems strange that after nearly a year of trying to get cooperation on the lot clean up at 1600 Bluebird and trying to get information about my 1980 Pontiac from the Police that all of the needed informa-tion/action fell into my lap just one day after my letter was published in the newspaper.

Outstanding!! None of this info had been given to me before. If it had, I would not had to resort to writing to

So in that respect I stand corrected! It is with great appreciation/relief that I am writing to you today.

I do enjoy your column, and look forward to them daily. My heartfelt apologies to the Police and others in the city. God knows there are enough problems to deal with that are far more important. Thanks again

Officials brace for more cholera deaths

GOMA, Zaire (AP) — Officials oversaw the first mass burial of victims of the world's largest exodus today and prepared for more as a cholera epidemic took hold in this town overwhelmed by Rwandan refugees.

Despite assurances of safety from Rwanda's new government, tens of thousands more Rwandans fled across the border today. In the past week, some 1.7 million people have left Rwanda, fearing retribution from victorious rebels.

"A lot of these people are going to die. It is one of the biggest catastrophes I have ever faced," said Dr. Jacques de Milliano, international president of Doctors without Borders. On the road to Goma's airport, bodies filled a mass grave at the edge of a banana plantation. People at the graveside said there were more than 200 bodies in the pit.

On Tuesday, de Milliano reported the first suspected case

"Today there are 30 cases here, 40 cases there, 50 cases over there. Tomorrow it will be 400 cases here, and 600 there," he said today, motioning toward the masses of refugees in and around the town.

to fight the epidemic. Samantha Bolton of Doctors Without Borders said there was no way to estimate the number dying of dysentery, malaria and lack of food and water.

"People are dying from dehydration left, right and center,' she said. "I walked 20 yards to our tent at the Munigi camp Wednesday and saw five dead. There was another when I came out."

The exodus from Rwanda has prompted a desperate relief effort, one burdened by the sheer size of the humanitarian crisis and hampered by the logistics of transporting supplies to the camps.

The Pentagon has said it will begin a new effort to aid refugees. Pentagon spokeswoman Kathleen deLaski said Air Force transport planes and privately contracted aircraft will fly 78 missions to Goma beginning Thursday, carrying medical supplies, food and material to build shelters.

Private aid groups and the United Nations also have set up operations.

Their task is sure to become more difficult. Despite an uncertain fate awaiting the refugees, as many as 3,000 people an hour were reported cross-Relief agencies lack the med- ing the border today in the far ication, staff or other resources southwestern corner of Rwanda.

New Sands coach holds

By DAVE HARGRAVE

Sports Editor

ACKERLY -Sands High School's new head football coach talks tough, and why shouldn't he?

He's won 88 percent of his games. Billv Barnett, 35, started his job as principal/head football coach Monday in Ackerly. If the name sounds familiar, maybe it's because Barnett was in Big Spring last fall coaching in the six-man state championship

BARNETT

Barnett was head coach for Dell City, which fell to Panther Creek in the title game at Memorial Stadium. Barnett has coached in five six-man state championship games - two as a Christoval assistant, two as Christoval's head man and then last year.

"I haven't won it yet," Barnett said. "That's one of the burning desires I have left.'

He seems to have the tools to Ackerly, since the Mustangs lose just two players off last year's bi-district champions. In his years of head coaching - five strong football résumé

at Christoval and one at Dell City - Barnett said he has compiled a 74-10 record. That should gain some players' respect - at least Barnett hopes so. Right now, respect is what he is after. "It was the same way at Dell City - they'd been through the same amount of coaches. I felt that I had to earn the kids' respect before they really would devote themselves to the program," Barnett said. "I know that going through a new head coach every year is tough on the kids. There's not an advantage to having four head coaches in four years, but I think it's something that can be easily overcome, and one thing it shows is that these kids are very smart, because they're going to learn four different systems in four years. But I do so much repetition and drill that I don't think they'll have any problem learning my system." His tough talk? Barnett has seen the Mustangs on film, and he has his ideas.

"I will push them," he said. "From watching them on film, the one thing I really have seen is that they're going to go build a strong season at through a stage with me, that they're going to find out there's going to be points and workouts they're not going to like."

Barnett said he was perfectly happy in Dell City, but when he heard about the Sands job he couldn't pass on the opportunity to get closer to home. He grew up in Fort Stockton and graduated from Angelo State University, where he was a linebacker. He moves to Ackerly with his wife, Brenda, and their two sons - Guy Dean, 5, and Garrett, 3.

The Sands job opened when Bob Keyes left earlier this summer to be principal at Hawley High School. Keyes left both the coaching job and the principal's office at Sands, which made it possible for the school to land Barnett Barnett left Christoval because Dell City offered him the principal's job in addition to coaching duties, and he said he would not have come to Sands as just a football coach.

Donald Bryan, the superintendent of the Ackerly Independent School District, was more than pleased to find Barnett was available.

"We feel very fortunate," Bryan said. "He is probably in the top three or four of the best coaches in six-man football in the state of Texas.'

Officials announced Wednesday that six American League games would not be played in the Kingdome this week because of the threat that more ceiling insulation tiles could fall on unsuspecting fans or players below.

Four tiles dropped Tuesday, prompting postponement of a Seattle Mariners game against Baltimore Orioles. Unwilling to risk the possibility of more insulation crashing down, Wednesday's Seattle-Baltimore doubleheader including a makeup of Tuesday's game - also was postponed, and a four-game series Thursday through Sunday against the Boston Red Sox was shifted to Fenway SEATTLE (AP) - From the part of the season," said Mariners third baseman Tino Martinez.

"Don't we have to play in a neutral stadium?," asked Ken Griffey Jr. "How about Tampa?

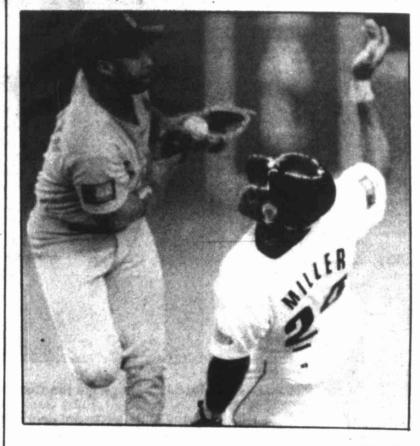

We'll be there in '97 anyway.' That was a reference to Tampa's efforts to lure the team away from Seattle and the Mariners' threat not to renew their Kingdome lease in 1997 unless King County provides them with a new stadium.

Kingdome officials called in forensic engineers Wednesday to try to determine why four tiles fell from the ceiling nearly 180 feet up into the stands behind home plate Tuesday.

No one was hurt in Tuesday's mishap, but it forced the first cancellation of a sporting event in the dome's 18-year history.

Wednesday, team officials announced the Red Sox series would be played in Boston, with "This is just another strange Seattle considered the visitor.

Austin feels backlash after losing tournament

AUSTIN (AP) - Volunteers who helped run the Legends of Golf tournament say the event's move from Austin to California has left them without a promised reward.

After 17 years in Austin, the tournament that is widely credited with helping start the booming PGA Senior Tour announced recently that it was moving to PGA West in La Quinta, Calif.

The Austin American-Statesman reported Wednesday that the tournament has left its volunteers without the annual compensation for their work: a free golf outing at Barton Creek Country Club.

According to volunteers, anyone who worked four or more days during the Legends week was promised, as in years past, an outing that included golf, lunch, soft drinks and contests with prizes.

Players should strike over awful ball parks like Seattle's Kingdome

Duck! The sky is falling!

OK, so it isn't, but it must have felt that way for the folks in Seattle's Kingdome Tuesday haven't heard, Tuesday's game in Seattle between the Mariners and the Baltimore Orioles was rained out.

Dave Hargrave Sports Editor

Rained out? In a dome?!

Basically, yes. Something fell from the sky that postponed the game. The falling game-killer wasn't liquid - it was paneling that fell from the roof - but let's be kind to the already-embarrassed folks in Seattle and call it a rainout. By the way, last night's game was postponed, too, and so is tonight's.

The Kingdome joins these great postponements from baseball history:

- In 1993, two games in the Triple-A American Association fell victim to odd postponements. The New Orleans Zephyrs, booted out of Denver by the Colorado Rockies, had one game bumped back to the future for "field not available." Seems the University of New Orleans wouldn't give up its field like it usually did, the Superdome was booked and the Zephyrs were out of luck. Later that season, a factory sprung a leak next to an American Association game, and the contest was called off because of a "toxic cloud."

. In the 1970s, a game was lit-

Astrodome. Flooding hit the area so hard that no umpires could make the game.

- In 1979, crazy Chicago White

Sox owner Bill Veeck hosted a crazy promotion - Disco Demolition Night. Fans were asked to bring disco records to Comiskey Park, and between games of the doubleheader the fans swarmed the field for a fun-filled, vinyl bonfire. Thousands of now priceless records were killed, as was the second game of the twinbill that cops. Forgot There's no base the White Sox had to forfeit ball commissioner to push the because the disco demolition derby ransacked the playing

Let's hope this doesn't turn into the situation the Montreal Expos suffered through in 1991. Montreal had to play its last 14

erally rained out in the Houston home games that year on the road when a concrete section of Olympic Stadium fell off, and the park was declared unsafe.

> We're talking about Major League Baseball. Lots of crazy things happen during a 162game season, but calling a game because a stadium is falling apart shouldn't be one of them. Give Seattle and Montreal three to five years to build an outdoor stadium. If they don't, move the franchises to other cities.

proper buttons to get this done So it's up to the players. The players are going to strike next month anyway, so hey, fellows:

Why not add the right to play in safe, open-air stadiums to your list of demands?

Summer, kids and drama equals fun

Cace Corbell, pretending to be a lion tamer, and Meghan McLean, pretending to be a lion, have fun at an arts camp for children presented by West Texas Center for the Arts at Howard College.

By KELLIE JONES

Staff Writer

About 60 children are participating in the first summer drama camp being offered by The West Texas Center for the Arts at Howard College.

The camp, called "Summer, Kids and Drama," is a dream come true for organizer Robert Wernsman. Wernsman is currently working on his Ph.D. in Theater at Texas Tech in Lubbock.

"I love Big Spring and drama. I left the newspaper business in January and began attending Tech. I felt like there was a void here without any children's theater. I told Gloria Hopkins about my dreams of acting and teaching and she. told me to go for it and bring it to Big Spring.

"I worked up a seven page summary with the professors at Tech about what I hoped to accomplish. I have gotten a lot of help from volunteers to get this started," said Wernsman.

The children, ages six to 13, will learn a variety of subjects during the 4-week class. The goals of the drama camp are for the participants to feel comfortable on the stage, learn stage terminology, physical/voice exercising and teamwork.

However, Wernsman said, "The main thing is for the children to have fun. I want them to have a sense of the stage. I am willing to bet when the kids go back to school in the fall they will have better confidence in themselves and maybe want to participate in school or church dramas.

"Even if they never get on the stage again, they will hopefully be trained to be a better theater audience and appreciate what goes on in a production," he added.

One of the instructors, Terri Telchik, is teaching a group of students relaxation exercises. role playing and improvisation.

"On the first day, the students drew pictures of anything they wanted to and then the next day, I'll mix up the pictures and have them pick one that they didn't draw. From there, they have to use their creative imagination and come up with a story to fit the picture," Telchik said.

The drama camp will wrap up with the students putting on four or five mini-productions on August 12 and 13. Wernsman says every student will have a part in the production and no one will play a major leading role.

The public is invited-to the productions which will be performed at the Howard College auditorium on Friday, August 12 at 7:30 p.m. and again Saturday at 2 p.m.

'King of Monsters' not quite monster hit

GAME: King of Monsters 2 COMPANY: Takara SYSTEM: SNES DIFFICULTY: Easy

PLOT SUMMARY: The year is 1999 and the hostile alien race, the Famardy, has returned to the planet Earth. Again they're on a mission to destroy all civilization and take over the planet.

Even the world's toughest armies are no match for the technology and enormous size of the invading aliens.

The first time the aliens showed up, the Earth was just barely saved by a ferocious group of giant-size monsters. each hundreds of feet tall. Now only three of them remain.

With no other choice, the world's leaders have called upon the last of the destructive beasts to save their home planet and the entire human race. Now it's up to the three goliath beasts - Atomic Guy, Super Geon and Cyber Woo — to fight through the ranks of the alien army and destroy them once and for all.

The alien onslaught must end or all of humanity is lost forev-

STRUCTURE: King of Monsters 2 is a side-scrolling fighting game where you get to play one of the three monsters in their heroic quest to save the world from alien domination. Each of the three characters: Atomic Guy, Super Geon, and Cyber Woo, have the same number of attacks, and the same amount of health/energy, but they're all very unique.

Atomic Guy is your typical 300-foot-tall super hero, but when he charges up his super power, he can fry an enemy with a blast of electricity or encircle them in a cage of crackling energy.

Cyber Woo is a 30-story high mechanical ape. He can bash enemies with his extendible head or if the going gets tough he can unleash a volley of missiles from his hands.

Super Geon is the Godzilla look-alike. His strong spiked tail is his best weapon, but if he needs to he can breathe out a wall of flame or bite a chunk out of an enemy's chest. King of Monsters 2 can be played as a one player or twoplayer simultaneous game against the computer, or as a two-player fighting game where the two players get to battle it out to see who is the real King of Monsters.

In King of Monsters 2 your character moves across towns (destroying them as he walks over them, of course), through rivers, across deserts, and even under the sea while fighting the invading aliens and searching for their leaders.

Most of the lesser aliens (all the ones that harass you during the level) can be dispatched with a single blow, but once you reach the end of a level you are confronted with one of the leaders of the alien forces.

These bosses aren't nearly as easy to defeat. You can punch and kick them, use your special attacks (the ones that need to be charged before they're used), or grapple with them.

When you grapple with a boss, you're fighting for control over him. Doing this requires fast control pad manipulation and can actually cause you to get calluses on your thumb from moving the D-Pad so quickly.

Once you gain control over a boss, you can throw him, slam him, gore him with spikes, or do all kinds of other mean things to him.

Once you've defeated all the levels of the game you get to do battle with the leader of all the aliens (he's pretty tough). Defeating him means saving the Earth and beating the

The graphics and music are decent on this game. Unfortunately that's about the only good thing I could find.

According to Max Webb, center director, the program clothed nearly 200 students last vear and received approximately $5,000 in financial assistance for the shopping program. Northside hopes to match those numbers this year.

Applications for the shopping program will be taken until Aug. 5. The center will need children's names, addresses, phone numbers, clothing sizes, gender and age. The shopping dates will be Aug. 8-13. The young shoppers will be encouraged to use local clothing

Northside also needs names, addresses and phone numbers of people willing to donate money in support of the program or escort a child on a shopping trip. The number of children assisted will depend on the amount of money donated to the program.

Those who wish to participate in the shopping program, either as donors of time or money or as recipients, should contact the center at 263-2673, Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Yummy-smelling crayons? Blind child's faith stays strong

Six-year-old Amanda Sorrell, from Phoenixville, Pa., reacts after sniffing scented Crayola crayons after touring Binney & Smith's manufacturing plant in Easton, Pa., Monday. The company has introduced 16 crayons containing miniature capsules that burst with the smells of fruit, flowers and fresh air when rubbed on paper or other surfaces.

Crayolas are safe, fun and don't smell like wax

The smells are lime, pine, fresh air, cherry, grape, lemon, orange, strawberry, chocolate, licorice, rose, blueberry, coconut, peach, banana and bubble gum. Scents correspond to colors, more or less.

The crayons are still nontoxic, and they still have that waxy flavor - at least the bubble gum crayon does.

The scent is slight when the crayons aren't being used, but a smell not unlike fruit salad wafts from a freshly opened box. The scents can be reactivated by scratching the completed artwork.

"It was a concern kids would eat these, but we talked to moms, talked to kids, and based on that feedback we realized there wasn't an increased concern with kids wanting to put them in their mouths," Drexler said.

Binney & Smith expects to sell about 20 million Magic Scent crayons this year, or about 1 percent of its annual production of 2 billion crayons.

The smellies, which went on sale today, cost slightly more than regular Crayola crayons.

Smells that didn't make the cut included blue cheese, leather, coffee, new car, skunk, garlic and hamburger.

What do trees do when they're dying of thirst? They cry out loud!

Scientists have recently learned that some trees give off ultrasonic chirps — sounds that are too high for humans to hear — during a drought. And the thirstier the trees get, the more they chirp.

Sounds weird? Not to bark beetles, says researcher Robert Haack. The insects, which attack sick trees, may listen for the chirps.

Haack has been recording the trees' chirps to see if they help the insects tell an unhealthy tree from a healthy one. "When I slowed down the tape to hear the chirps," he says, "they sounded like bongo drums or popcorn popping!"

"No prince on a horse is going to come sweep me off my feet," said Kristin Terry, 12. "Give me something I can relate to.'

Lately, that is exactly what authors have been doing. Elizabeth Devereaux, children's forecast editor for Publisher's Weekly, says many novels for today's teenagers deal with adult subjects. "The theme is usually social and dealt with in the media, like alcohol abuse or child abuse," she said.

Authors of books for teenagers also are writing "about average kids with average concerns," she said.

Devereaux recommends to young readers author Francesca Lia Block. Her series features "hip; likable characters" growing up in Los Angeles. Author Susan Beth Pfeffer takes on the topic of a teenager kidnapped from a noncustodial parent after a divorce. Author Brock Cole has written several books about intelligent teenagers facing difficult situations, including "Celine" and

"The Goats." Nonfiction books are hot in the young adult category, too. The most popular are self-help and issues-oriented books. For example, Puffin is publishing in September a book for teens who want to become vegetarians that will address problems like disapproval from parchild labor in the United States

Random House publicity manager, Frederick Glasser, said books for younger readers are divided into age groups.

Picture books are for ages 3 to 8. Middle grade is for ages 8 to 12. Young adult books are written for the 12 and up age group. Glasser said most young readers are reading well above their age group.

Youngsters play blues at B. B. King's club

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) -Like Dorothy in the Wizard of Oz, 9-year-old Brody Buster is definitely not in Kansas any-

The fledgling blues harmonica player is spending the summer at what his mother calls "Blues Camp 101," sharing a stage whenever he can with the big boys on Beale Street - and at B.B. King's nightclub no

"I'm learning a lot here," he said before a recent performance. "I've learned licks and stuff like that."

And while he couldn't explain what a "lick" is, it was clear when he launched into a harmonica run with the club's house band that he has begun to feel what it means.

Brody began playing the harmonica two years ago and his family is going all out trying to make him a star.

"I never had any lessons. I just listened to records and people on the street," he said. "I want to become famous and get a recording contract and everything.'

His mother, Janet, and sister, Jodie, 8, are spending the summer with him in Memphis where he hangs around for hours at a time waiting for a chance to sit in with the King B's or other Beale Street bands.

"They might call me up. They might not," the sandy-haired youngster said.

His father, Curtis, is back home in Paola, Kan., a stop in the road near Kansas City.

"We're dedicated to seeing how far he can take this," Mrs. Buster said. "There are nights I would just as soon stay home, but he wants to be on Beale Street every night."

While Beale Street is Brody's stop for the summer, he also has made his way on stage to jam with various groups in Nashville, Branson, Mo., and the Kansas City area, according to a publicity packet his mother had on hand in case anybody wanted to know.

Bob Harding, manager of King's club, said he often gives voung blues musicians a chance to perform.

"Anytime you've got a street based on entertainment, there's got to be a certain amount of street characters and street entertainers who may not be the most professional and polished, but they're entertaining and they're fun," Harding said.

Today's highlight in history:

Twenty-five years ago, on July 21, 1969, Apollo 11 astronauts Neil Armstrong and Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin blasted off from the moon aboard the lunar module, leaving behind a plaque which reads, "Here men from the planet Earth first set foot upon the moon, July 1969, A.D. We came in peace for all mankind."
