Moore board looks at A&A, Wright issues

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

The Board of Directors of Moore Development For Big Spring, Inc., met Wednesday afternoon and discussed the futures of A&A Aircraft Refinishers and Wright Fibers in Big Spring.

Depending on any action taken by the board before its September meeting, board president Jim Purcell may have presided over his final meeting as a member of the board. Purcell's term is up this month, and he will be replaced by Bob Scott of Coahoma State Bank on Aug. 31.

Moore Board is currently waiting on cost estimates of a paint booth for A&A that is close to being ready to move in at McMahon-Wrinkle Airpark. Some estimates run as high as $400,000 to $500,000 for an aircraft paint booth, which is required for this type of business to meet EPA standards.

Purcell said, "Five hundred thousand dollars for a paint booth is a little bit excessive." The idea has been raised to look into building a paint booth instead of buying. Building would cost a fraction of what purchasing would.

As for Wright Fibers, the company has yet to supply Moore Board with all of the pertinent information the board needs to meet the Texas Agricultural Finance Authority's request deadline for August.

Wright Fibers has missed the last two TAFE deadlines for turning in additional financial information required to complete its funding request application.

TAFE, an extension of the Texas Department of Agriculture, must have additional information about Wright Fibers to consider a request for an additional $400,000 for working capital. Wright Fibers' first request was for equipment, and according to Moore Board members it could be an additional 30- to 45-day wait for further movement on the project if the company does not meet the August deadline.

Board member Scott McLaughlin said, "The ball is in their (Wright Fibers') court and we need to set our own deadline because we don't want to drag this out forever (getting Wright Fibers to Big Spring). If we can't make it by the next deadline (sometime in September) that should be it. It's not being made clear to us what can or can't be done on the part of Wright Fibers."

The board also went over its proposed budget for 1994-95, which was approved for review

Howard registration begins Aug. 17

By KELLIE JONES
Staff Writer

It is almost time to put away the bathing suits and trade them in for school books.

Registration at Howard College begins Aug. 17, and officials expect at least 1,200 students to sign up for fall semester classes. Right now, students can go for advising to see what classes they need to take.

Returning students can go to the campus for academic advising beginning next week. New students have been doing so this week, with today being the last day. However, Registrar Mike Evans says, "if someone hasn't been here before and wants to attend, we can work something out next week for them to be advised."

New students must take placement tests to see if they need remedial courses.

"We can do some of the testing next week, and there will be a room set up in the coliseum during registration as well," added Evans.

Registration in the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum for all students who have not preregistered will be Aug. 17 from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Aug. 18 from 8 a.m. to noon. On Wednesday, you cannot register unless you have been assigned a specific time. Returning students will be assigned times through a computer, and new students will be assigned times as admission forms are received. Thursday is open registration for all students.

Evans said: "If you preregistered, you cannot change your

Clinton's accusers bring sexual harassment into national spotlight

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

Not since the Clarence Thomas-Anita Hill battle has sexual harassment been more on the minds of America than it is now.

President Bill Clinton has had two women, Gennifer Flowers and Paula Jones, accuse him of sexual harassment while he was Governor of Arkansas.

The battle cry for men is that because the issue of sexual harassment has been brought to the nation's attention, a man can't have fun or make a joke anymore or he'll be dragged into court.

But sexual harassment is not just a man's problem.

According to the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, this is not a joking matter, and sexual harassment is a form of sex discrimination that violates Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

Sexual harassment can occur in a variety of circumstances. Unwelcome sexual advances, requests for sexual favors, and other verbal or physical conduct of a sexual nature - referred to as "Quid Pro Quo" sexual harassment - constitute sexual harassment when submission to or rejection of this conduct explicitly or implicitly affects an individual's employment, unreasonably interferes with an individual's work performance or creates a hostile work environment.

The main factor in determining whether an environment is hostile focuses on whether the conduct "unreasonably interfered with an individual's work performance" or created an "intimidating, hostile, or offensive working environment."

The EEOC will look at the following factors in trying to determine whether an environment is hostile:

- Is the conduct verbal, physical or both?
- How frequently was the conduct repeated?
- Is the conduct hostile or patently offensive?
- Was the alleged harasser a co-worker or supervisor?
- Did others join in perpetrating the harassment?
- Was the harassment directed at more than one person?

The EEOC says sexual harassment includes but is not limited to the following:

- The victim as well as the harasser may be a woman or a man, and the victim does not have to be of the opposite sex.
- The harasser can be the victim's supervisor, an agent of the employer, a supervisor in another area, a co-worker, or a non-employee.

•Unlawful sexual harassment may occur without economic injury to or discharge of the victim.

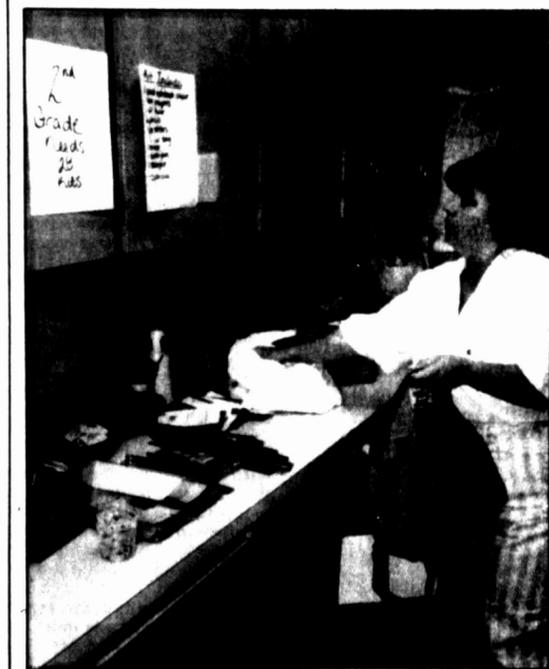

•The harasser's conduct must be unwelcome.

Informing the harasser that this type of conduct is unwelcome and must stop is the best and most direct way to confront the problem according to the EEOC. However, a victim of harassment need not always use a direct method of confrontation, so long as the victim's conduct demonstrates that the harasser's behavior is unwelcome.

How will the EEOC determine whether conduct is unwelcome?

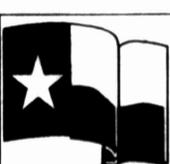

According to the EEOC, when confronted with conflicting evidence as to whether conduct was welcomed, it will look at the record as a whole, evaluating each situation on a case-by-case basis. This method of investigation should determine whether the victim's conduct was consistent, or inconsistent, with the assertion that the sexual conduct was unwelcome.

WHAT DO WE NEED?

Tammie Williams looks at a list on the wall to see what is needed as she was gathering articles for a school kit at the Salvation Army Wednesday evening. Kits will be distributed Sunday afternoon.

Board member Charles Dunnam said, "Technically we're looking at a continuation of existing projects."

McLaughlin also updated the board on the activity of the Business Expansion and Retention Committee, which has the task of actively assisting and enhancing existing businesses, pursuing programs for retaining and expanding the income and employment bases of those businesses, and supporting the citizens of Big Spring in the development of new businesses.

The committee amended and changed the reading of its goals and strategies and presented these changes to the full board for approval.

The meeting also was attended by several members of the City Council, including Mayor Tim Blackshear, who suggested that the city and its economic entities, including Moore Board, think about putting out a newsletter, which would allow all city entities to work together to include listings such as new businesses and housing starts.

McLaughlin agreed with the idea saying, "I think this would be a big advantage to everyone and it would almost force us to do what we talk about anyway. It would also tie us together a little more."

Baby dug up and just dumped

BROWNSVILLE (AP) - Authorities say the body of a baby with a fatal brain defect was buried, then mysteriously exhumed and preserved, and finally dumped unceremoniously three years later near the same grave. "It looks like somebody stole the baby out of the grave after it was properly buried by the funeral home," Cameron County Sheriff Alex Perez said Wednesday. "Then they froze it."

The baby, Victoria Gonzalez, was stillborn at Valley Regional Medical Center April 24, 1991. The baby had anencephaly, a neural tube defect preventing the brain from developing.

Delta Funeral Directors buried her at Santa Rosalia Cemetery a day later, Perez said.

"After that we don't know what happened," Perez said. Investigators are trying to locate the child's mother.

Librarian resigns over controversial Stern book

WESLACO (AP) — City librarian Pam Antonelli has resigned after city officials criticized her for purchasing shock jock Howard Stern's best-selling book "Private Parts" and ordered it removed from library shelves.

Ms. Antonelli would not say whether she was asked to resign or quit of her own accord and would not give a reason for her resignation, the McAllen Monitor reported Wednesday.

The American Civil Liberties Union has threatened to take the city to court to put the book back in the library of the Lower Rio Grande Valley city.

Earlier, Ms. Antonelli came under fire several times from the City Commission and the religious right for her choice of books for the library.

Ms. Antonelli told the newspaper that an earlier newspaper story in which she mentioned that Baptists and other members of the religious right were criticizing the selection of library materials caused her trouble.

Ex-Prosecutor tries to save death row inmate

EL PASO (AP) — A former El Paso County prosecutor who helped send Manuel Fierro to death row is now trying to save his life.

Fierro is scheduled to die by lethal injection in Texas' death chamber Wednesday for killing El Paso taxi driver Nicolas Castanon in February 1979.

Former Assistant District Attorney Gary Weiser has filed an affidavit, saying police withheld crucial evidence during Fierro's 1979 trial.

In the July 13 affidavit, Weiser says he was told by two El Paso detectives during Fierro's 1979 trial that Ciudad Juarez officials had Fierro's parents in custody while they questioned him.

He said in the affidavit that El Paso and Juarez police apparently threatened to torture Fierro's parents unless he confessed to the slaying.

Relatives File Lawsuit In Truck-Van Collision

FORT WORTH (AP) — Relatives of 14 Californians killed when their van was hit by an tractor-trailer rig near Weatherford last month have filed a lawsuit in California against the truck driver and his employer.

The complaint filed in Los Angeles Superior Court seeks unspecified damages from driver Richie Darrell Ware and Refrigerated Transport Inc. of Lancaster, Texas, for the July 3 accident on Interstate 20.

However, attorney Fred Sayre of Newport Beach, Calif., said he believes the lawsuit he filed "is worth in the neighborhood of $20 million" because four survivors watched and heard relatives burn to death.

Attorneys for Ware and Refrigerated Transport declined comment on the lawsuit until they could review the complaint.

However, one of Ware's attorneys said a state accident report misquoted the driver as saying he was asleep or blacked out at the time of the accident.

Van Cliburn's mother dies at age 97

FORT WORTH (AP) — The illness and death of Rildia Bee O'Bryan Cliburn, mother and teacher of the most celebrated American pianist in history, has prompted son Van to halt his first concert tour in 16 years.

Mrs. Cliburn, who was 97, died Wednesday at All Saints Episcopal Hospital with her son at her bedside.

Funeral services were tentatively planned for Saturday and burial Sunday in Fort Worth, said Susan Tilley, chairwoman of the Van Cliburn Foundation.

Mrs. Cliburn suffered a stroke July 28, and when she took a turn for the worse Tuesday, Cliburn halted his tour and chartered a plane home from New York.

Texas Sues Over Costs of Illegal Immigration

EDINBURG (AP) — Texas Attorney General Dan Morales says his office is suing the federal government because he's given up on asking Congress for more money to pay for services to illegal immigrants.

"We do not have the votes in the Congress, in my judgment, to see a legislative or a political effort be successful," Morales said Wednesday.

Arizona, California, Florida and New Jersey already have filed lawsuits claiming that the federal government's inability to control its borders has burdened state and local taxpayers.

Texas' lawsuit, filed Wednesday in federal court in Brownsville, seeks to recover more than $5 billion the state claims to have spent on services for illegal immigrants during the past six years. It also seeks a court order for compensation in future years.

"The legal action that we have undertaken does not seek to deny services. It simply seeks restitution," Morales said.

TRIPLE EXECUTION

Clines was one of three men scheduled to be executed Wednesday in the nation's first triple execution since 1962.

Breast implant case won't go to a jury

HOUSTON (AP) — Dow Corning Corp. has averted a jury trial on whether their silicone breast implants made 18 women ill.

However, it reportedly cost the Midland, Mich., manufacturer millions of dollars to do so.

The settlements were the latest move by Dow Corning, the Midland, Mich., manufacturer that is fighting more than 2,500 breast implant suits filed in Harris County, alone.

Neither Dow Corning nor attorneys for any of the 18 women involved in the Wednesday settlement would divulge their amounts, which halted two suits from going to trial this week.

"As part of the settlement, the agreement will remain confidential," said Mike Jackson, a Dow Corning spokesman.

However, courthouse sources estimated they amounted to millions of dollars.

"We are very pleased," said Richard Mithoff, attorney for Blanche Allen, 53, of Corpus Christi.

Ms. Allen appeared in court in a wheelchair Wednesday.

"I would not go through this poisoning, this illness again," she said. "I wish all these women everywhere ... would never have to go through this."

Ms. Allen had two sets of implants in 20 years and both had to be removed. She said she suffered a host of illnesses, including arthritis, pleurisy, double vision and large red-purple bruises that streak her arms.

Under the $42 billion settlement, women stand to get $105,000 to $1.4 million after lawyers' fees and expenses.

Demonstration of fatal skylight accident leads to another death

DALLAS (AP) — A teen-ager's demonstration of a fatal accident at a Dallas garage turned out to be just a fatal.

Aaron Harvey, 17, died Tuesday after he fell through a plastic skylight and plummeted 30 feet to a concrete exit ramp at the Dal Park garage.

Christian Pogue, 16, of Cedar Hill, died the same way in February.

Harvey and a youth drove to the parking garage late Monday night, where Harvey climbed onto the decorated roof, according to police reports.

Apparently, Harvey then stepped on a plastic skylight, which buckled. He died at Parkland Memorial Hospital in Dallas at about 6 a.m.

"He had figured the other kid had been jumping," said his father, Daniel Harvey. "I guess he thought he was going to be safe because he was just going to stand on it."

Pogue and some other youngsters had gone to the roof because they thought it would be a fun place to ride skateboards. However, the concrete was grooved and prohibited skateboarding.

"They never did any skateboarding," said the Rev. Verl Taylor, a Duncanville minister who knew the youths and their friends. "But the bad thing was that they discovered it was just a neat place to run around."

In February, Pogue somehow ended up on a light and fell seven stories to his death.

"I don't think there's much that parents can do. Teen-agers think they're indestructible," Harvey's father said.

The president of Classified Parking, which owns the garage, said he knows the Harveys.

"These are kids my kids grew up with," George Roberts said. "These are all good kids. It's just illogical."

Roberts said he plans to add more security to the roof.

Sears return a welcomed sight

Sears is re-opening in the Big Spring Mall - an indication that maybe things are turning around for this community.

In the past two years, more than 30 businesses have closed their doors with few new ones replacing them. Yes, we have the Wal-Mart supercenter coming, but what effect it will have on the local economy and business climate has yet to be felt.

Yet, Sears coming back should give this community a ray of hope for the future. There is nothing Big Spring Mall Manager Tammy Watt would like more than to see her mall completely filled.

It is a special feather in our community cap that a business which left Big Spring has noticed things changing for the better here, and has decided to give us a second chance.

Opinions expressed in this column are those of the Editorial Board of the Big Spring Herald unless otherwise indicated.

There are individuals and groups working throughout the community, trying to make it better for all who live here whether it is by cleaning up our city or enticing business to come to Big Spring.

We are all a part of this process, whether we loan our expertise in business or simply take pride in our community.

Through this community effort, Big Spring can triumph.

Closing the book on way of life

It's a story that would seem to have little impact on most of America. Yet, in its own low-key way, it may bear a lesson about how the country is changing - how who we used to be is evolving into who we will be from now on.

Bob Greene
Columnist

Month Club - an organization that delivers titles to its members' homes on a steady and regulated basis - seems a little off-kilter.

In a nation whose culture appears infatuated with, to use the name of a currently popular movie, speed, the Book-of-the-Month Club represents deliberation and order. It became a national institution when reading books itself was a national institution - when the only question about an adult American was not if he or she read books, but what books he or she preferred.

The club's editorial board, gathering for those monthly meetings, set the tone. The writing and publishing of books was a dignified, highly civilized endeavor - commerce, yes, but somehow something more. To people who wrote books, the idea of that monthly meeting was daunting and more than a little intimidating. These were men and women of literature, passing judgment, taking their time, setting the tone.

One reason the board is said to be disbanding is that there's just no time in the book business these days for the luxury of that kind of deliberation. The publishing industry today is not all that much different from, say, the cable TV industry: Decisions about products - and that's what books are - must be made virtually instantly. There is no time for a promising title to wait around until a literary board can convene to weigh its merits - someone has to decide in a big hurry, often overnight.

How does this affect you? In specific ways, probably not at all. Chances are you aren't a member of the Book-of-the-Month Club, and if you are, you'll still get your listings. The publishers will still overflow the nation's bookstores with new volumes - although there is an increasing desire to publish only titles with blockbuster potential - and you will still face your daily choices: TV show? Rented video? Movie? Music? Sports event? Magazine? Book?

Life consists of tradeoffs; to achieve convenience sometimes you must give up texture; to achieve speed sometimes you must give up a certain degree of reflection.

That will stay the same. But as our country moves ever toward the frontier of amusement-on-demand - of being able to press a button to see whatever you want to see, right now, no delay, no anticipation - the kind of America in which an institution such as the Book-of-the-Month Club's editorial board could flourish will fade further into our social history. Life consists of tradeoffs; to achieve convenience sometimes you must give up texture; to achieve speed sometimes you must give up a certain degree of reflection.

No big deal here, really; no need to overstate it. It's merely another sign of an evolutionary shifting. It's about pace - something like the memory of sitting under a tree on a warm summer day, slowly reading a book to savor the words, versus the contemporary reality of grabbing a paperback at an airport newsstand to zip through between takeoff and the business meeting that awaits your landing. Maybe one's no worse than the other. Just - what? - different.

Fuel rods up the urgency in US-Korea nuclear crisis

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) - Corroding day by day in a cooling pond in North Korea, 8,000 spent nuclear fuel rods are adding new urgency to resolving the country's nuclear crisis. North Korea says it must begin reprocessing them by the end of August to avoid contaminating the atomic complex. The process could leave North Korea with enough plutonium to make up to five nuclear bombs.

That's exactly what the United States and its allies in the region want to avoid. U.S. and North Korean negotiators meet again Friday in Geneva to try to reach agreement.

But North Korea's price for accepting international supervision of the reprocessing is high: diplomatic ties with Washington and a modern reactor to replace its aging, Soviet-style one.

"They want to hurry some kind of agreement in the talks based on the package deal," said Cha Young-koo of the Korea Institute for Defense Analyses, a government-sponsored think tank.

"If the negotiations with the United States go badly, in the worst case, they can go into unsupervised reprocessing. That is strong negotiating leverage on the United States."

Washington, however, says there are ways to chemically treat the water in the ponds to stabilize the fuel rods while negotiations continue.

North Korea insists its atomic program is peaceful, but has barred inspectors from the International Atomic Energy Agency from key facilities at its nuclear site at Yongbyon, 65 miles north of Pyongyang.

Without inspections, IAEA spokesman Hans Friedrich Meyer says his U.N. agency cannot say how much fissionable material the North has. "We do not know how much is there," he said.

The CIA estimates that Pyongyang already has produced 22 to 35 pounds of plutonium from past reprocessing, enough for one or two nuclear weapons.

In June, North Korean ruler Kim Il Sung promised former President Jimmy Carter he would freeze the nuclear program while "good-faith talks" progress. But the talks were suspended after Kim's death last month.

Defeated Rwandan army turns against refugees

N'DOSHA CAMP, Zaire (AP) - The remnants of Rwanda's defeated army have turned their remaining muscle on their own backers, plundering among weak and defenseless refugees and frustrating efforts to encourage their return.

Their strong-armed intimidation show the brutal hierarchy among the 1 million refugees and could mark the prelude for a possible counter-attack on victorious rebel forces across the border in Rwanda.

At an abandoned lakeside lodge that serves as one of the command centers for the estimated 20,000 members of the routed government army, many soldiers insisted the fight is not over.

"We will return to Rwanda with guns and knives and give no mercy," said Jean-Paul Dyaraga, an army officer from Kigali on Wednesday. "I will be back in my city."

For the time being, however, the main target of the military are the reeking refugee camps. Soldiers have strong-armed Hutu refugees for their few belongings, including the U.N.-supplied plastic sheeting used for cover, aid officials say.

They leave behind grim warnings: Do not return to Rwanda. They claim the Tutsi-led rebels will commit atrocities on any returning Hutu, the ethnic majority which dominated the ousted government. Refugees constantly repeat the army-supported line - your eyes will be plucked out, your bellies slit.

"The propaganda level is very high and the refugees are very susceptible to this," Panos Moutzlis, spokesman for the U.N. High Commissioner for Relief workers at the airport in Goma, Zaire, load boxes of food from the United Nations High Commission for Refugees onto trucks Wednesday. More than 300 tons of food and medical supplies for the Rwandan Refugees are arriving daily.

Refugees, said Wednesday.

The United Nations denies Tutsi rebels have committed atrocities on the estimated 125,000 refugees who have returned to Rwanda, and is helping set up a radio station to counter the defeated government's propaganda. The station is to start broadcasting in a couple of days.

Rebel forces in Rwanda swept across the last of the areas held by the government last month. Thousands of soldiers and more than 1 million Hutu refugees flooded into Zaire, fearing for their lives.

Many crossed with weapons, and Moutzlis said caches of arms were stored north of Goma. He declined to elaborate.

Details about the strength and resources of the Rwandan army forces in Goma are closely guarded. But some observations and comments suggest the potential exists to mount a serious guerrilla campaign.

"The future for Rwanda is one of fire," said Eliezer Niyitegeka, information minister of the toppled government. "We are ready to become a guerrilla army."

Violence surges in Haiti as soldiers enforce curfew

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) - Since the United Nations authorized an invasion, soldiers have beaten residents and made arbitrary arrests to enforce an undeclared nighttime curfew, witnesses and army sources said Wednesday.

The bodies of two men, both shot and with straps cinched around their necks, were found dumped in a busy street. The incident was condemned by the Clinton administration, which again called on the military-backed government to step down.

Haiti declared a state of siege on Monday after the U.N. Security Council authorized the use of force to oust the army leaders.

The military has enforced a curfew in several communities.

Residents of Cabaret, a market town about 20 miles north of Port-au-Prince, reported that soldiers threatened, arrested, beat and detained people on the streets after dark. Those detained are generally released the next day, the residents said.

In suburban Petionville, soldiers and civilian auxiliaries patrolled the streets, and several people walking after dark were arrested Tuesday night.

Soldiers interpret the state of siege as giving them broader powers to arrest and beat suspected opponents, according to sources close to the military.

The sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said unity meetings have been held in recent days between soldiers and members of the paramilitary group FRAPH, the Front for the Advancement and Progress of Haiti. The military is also encouraging retired soldiers to enlist as auxiliaries.

The corpses found Wednesday were dumped near Port-au-Prince's principal black market for gasoline, a major passage point between the Cite Soleil slum and the city center.

Since the 1991 army coup that ousted elected President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, many Aristide supporters have been slain and their bodies left in public places as a warning against dissent.

On Monday, opposition politician Reynold Georges was shot and wounded. Georges had urged army commander Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras to step down to avoid a U.S. invasion.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Clinton: Violence in Haiti justifies U.N. invasion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration says newly reported violence in Haiti justifies the U.N. resolution authorizing an invasion even as the Senate is urging President Clinton to hold off on military force.

Administration spokesmen on Wednesday blamed the attacks in Haiti, including the fatal shooting of two men found Wednesday, on the military regime that overthrew the country's elected government almost three years ago.

"The shooting of Senator Georges yesterday and the incidents that we're aware of today certainly are very troubling, and we condemn that type of violence, and that type of violence points precisely to the remedy that the United Nations has now adopted," said State Department spokesman Mike McCurry.

The bodies of two executed men were dumped on a busy Port-au-Prince street Wednesday, following the shooting Monday of opposition politician Reynold Georges and an assault on some 40 asylum seekers who waited in line outside a U.S. Embassy processing center.

The U.N. Security Council voted Sunday to authorize force to restore Haiti's democracy.

However, the Senate unanimously passed a non-binding resolution by Minority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., and Sen. Judd Gregg, R-N.H., stating that Clinton must seek congressional approval before any invasion.

At a news conference Wednesday night, Clinton said he was not constitutionally mandated to get Congress' assent should he decide to invade Haiti, and said it would be premature to ask for permission now.

Clinton pushing scaled-down health care reform

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton is insisting that scaled-down health reform proposals moving through Congress still satisfy his demand to put the country on track toward coverage for all. Counting noses on Capitol Hill, he conceded that more ambitious proposals simply won't fly.

Clinton, pressed by reporters Wednesday on the limited reach of Senate-proposed legislation that seeks to cover 95 percent of Americans, nonetheless maintained: "One rock-solid principle remains — private insurance, guaranteed, for everyone."

With the health-care debate entering a critical period, the president scheduled a morning strategy session with his Cabinet today and dispatched

Vice President Al Gore to a Capitol Hill rally with "reform riders" who converged on Washington from a cross-country bus caravan.

In a wide-ranging news conference Wednesday night, Clinton sought to showcase his administration's work on health care, crime and the economy while discounting the distraction of congressional hearings into the Whitewater affair.

On foreign affairs, Clinton offered tough talk against Haiti's military regime, saying he was keeping alive the possibility of military force to oust those "who have trampled human rights and murdered innocent people."

Shrugging off polls showing his popularity slipping, Clinton suggested that "maybe it's partly a function of the times in which we live" or a failure to adequately communicate his accomplishments.

To revive public support for health reform, Clinton begins a nightly series of televised Oval Office addresses tonight urging Americans to demand major health care reform. The TV messages are being promoted by a $1 million Democratic Party advertising blitz in major newspapers and on radio.

At the news conference, Clinton said he wouldn't "get into being a legislator" to mediate Capitol Hill debate over how best to improve health coverage for Americans, millions of whom are uninsured or underinsured.

But he urged the House and Senate to stay in session beyond a scheduled mid-month recess if necessary to pass rival health plans that would later be meshed by congressional negotiators.

Defense budget hits a snag

WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate negotiators completing work on the 1995 defense budget are trying to resolve differences over the Bosnia arms embargo and the B-2 bomber.

Meeting behind closed doors Wednesday, the lawmakers neared an agreement on pushing the Clinton administration to defy the international arms embargo on the former Yugoslavia.

Virtually all other disagreements over the $263 billion defense spending plan were resolved.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., the chief Senate negotiator, suggested that the United States could withhold any financial or technical assistance to the United Nations-imposed arms embargo, according to congressional sources familiar with the negotiations. As a further step, depending on events in Bosnia, the Pentagon could train Bosnian Muslims in the use of defensive weapons and, eventually, provide the weapons themselves.

Whitewater

House grills Altman in hearings

WASHINGTON (AP) — As top Treasury Department officials are questioned in House and Senate Whitewater hearings, President Clinton — who "watched none" of the testimony — is expressing confidence in Deputy Treasury Secretary Roger Altman.

Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen was to testify before the House today, a day after his former Senate colleagues told him Altman and other subordinates gave contradictory and incomplete testimony.

The Senate hearings turn to a host of White House officials, including Margaret Williams, Hillary Rodham Clinton's chief of staff, and Mack McLarty, a senior presidential adviser.

Altman, the No. 2 Treasury official, has emerged as the central figure in the hearings so far because his testimony is at odds with a number of other administration officials.

But he got a boost Wednesday night from his old college buddy, Clinton.

"The secretary of the Treasury has confidence in him and so do I," Clinton told a White House news conference.

Clinton said he "watched none of these hearings" because he's been too busy.

Asked if he was angry when Altman disqualified himself from the Whitewater investigation in February, Clinton said, "The only thing that upset me was I did not want to see him stamped into it if it was the right thing to do."

However, during Altman's testimony before the Senate on Tuesday — and when White House lawyers appeared there Wednesday — senators said the problem was the reverse situation.

Republicans, joined by Banking Committee Chairman Donald Riegle Jr., D-Mich., said it appeared that Altman was pressured by the White House to remain in charge of the Whitewater inquiry that involved his friend the president.

Riegle pulled out a transcript of Altman's 12 hours of testimony the day before. Altman had said he entered a meeting at the White House on Feb. 2, having decided to disqualify himself.

After then White House Counsel Bernard Nussbaum raised objections, Riegle said, Altman changed his mind and remained in the case for several more weeks — until he began facing intense political heat from Congress.

Altman's problems began when he became, in addition to his Treasury job, acting chief of the Resolution Trust Corp.

The RTC has been looking at potential civil and criminal violations involving Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan Association, a failed S&L that may have suffered losses from the president's former Arkansas land deal. It was owned by Clinton's business partner in the Whitewater land venture.

Howard teams, players win academic kudos

By DAVE HARGRAVE
Sports Editor

Howard College's baseball and women's basketball teams keep winning awards long after the season has passed.

ALMENDAREZ

Late Tuesday, the school received word that the National Junior College Athletic Association has named Howard the All-Academic Team of the Year in both baseball and women's basketball. Howard has had more than a few individuals selected to the NJCAA's All-Academic teams in the past, but to the best of the athletic department's knowledge, these team honors are the first in school history.

Howard baseball coach Brian Roper found out Tuesday afternoon when he found the team plaque sitting on his desk at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

"As far as individuals being academic All-Americans, I'd been thinking that we'd like to have one a year, that would be good," Roper said. "But then I got to thinking, someday it would be really nice to win that team deal, and in fact I was telling my dad about that last weekend. Then I get back yesterday (Tuesday), and sure enough, here it is."

Howard women's basketball coach Terry Gray said: "The main goal is to gain a college education, as well as play basketball, and we've shown here that we can win on the court. Now this team award just kind of completes the picture."

The Lady Hawks pulled in a combined team grade-point average of 3.56, while the baseball team's GPA was 3.31.

The awards didn't stop there. Howard's Chris Almendarez, who has signed with the University of Houston, was named to the NJCAA's All-Academic Team. Please see HOWARD, page 7

Hawks stocking up on pitching

By DAVE HARGRAVE
Sports Editor

OK, so half the West Texas world is talking high school football. Why would anyone want to talk junior college baseball?

Good question, with an answer. Howard College is one player away from wrapping up its recruiting for the 1995 baseball season, and the 20-game fall season starts Sept. 10 at Ranger. The Hawks made news last week with the signing of Big Spring High School first baseman Brandon Rodgers, but plenty of other news has passed over the desk of coach Brian Roper.

Some of the news hasn't been good. Howard's top left-hander out of last season's bullpen, Dave Maurer, decided to spend his sophomore season at Oklahoma State instead of Howard. Two prized pitching recruits, San Antonio's Randy Choate and Lubbock's Scott Brand, agreed to come to Howard but then backed out. Choate is attending Florida State, and Brand is taking a year off from baseball, Roper said.

"We had put together an outstanding pitching staff this summer, but some things have happened that we can't control," Roper said. "We decided we were going to try to really load up on pitchers, and we've still got 12 or 13 guys that are going to be good pitchers."

Pitching will be at a premium in the 1995 season because the Western Junior College Athletic Conference has expanded its schedule. WJCA teams will play eight games each against their conference rivals instead of six, so those typical weekend WJCA series will be four games instead of three. Two doubleheaders per weekend will put a strain on pitching and catching.

Howard loses its star catcher of the past two seasons, Chad Morford, but Roper said he's comfortable with the tandem that will split time in those long WJCA series - sophomore Kent Holland and freshman recruit Matt Schuldt. Both are from Sioux Falls, S.D., home of Howard assistant coach Steve Ramharter.

"Steve does an excellent job with recruiting," Roper said. "We've worked since last September on this year's squad, and I think we've got 12 guys from out of state, and they're all from the northern states. That's Steve's neck of the woods."

Freshman who could step into the limelight on Howard's pitching staff include righthanders Mike Kringle and Scott MacKenzie. Kringle is from Seattle; MacKenzie is from Gresham, Ore.

Lubbock Monterey's Shane Smith, a star shortstop this past season, will start his college career at second base, where he could replace Sergio Martinez, one of Howard's main offensive weapons the past two years. Henderson's Brady Mills is a top recruit on the infield, and Weatherford's Will Coleman, an outfielder, has been signed.

Angry players may change strike date

NEW YORK (AP) — Angered by owners' refusal to make a pension payment of about $7.8 million, the executive board of the players' association meets today to consider changing the union's Aug. 12 strike deadline.

"It could be tomorrow. It could be on the 12th. It could be after," Los Angeles Dodgers player representative Brett Butler said Wednesday night as talk of an imminent walkout swept through major league ballparks.

Union head Donald Fehr and his staff were incensed during a contentious 2 1/2-hour bargaining session. Players were angry, too, after owners failed to make the Aug. 1 payment, about one seventh of the $57 million annual contribution under the deal that expired March 19.

"They're upset. There's a great deal of dissatisfaction," Kansas City Royals player representative Jeff Montgomery said, adding that some of his teammates favored an immediate walkout.

"If you would ask the players, they'd be willing to do it tonight," he said.

Eugene Orza, the union's associate general counsel, said the executive board would convene by telephone conference call to discuss what he called "the dastardly deed." Players say they are owed the money because they appeared in the All-Star game last month, but some wondered whether the deadline could be changed.

"I'm not sure if it could be orchestrated in such a short period of time," Paul Molitor of the Toronto Blue Jays said.

It could be tomorrow. It could be on the 12th. It could be after.

During a White House news conference Wednesday night, President Clinton said the government could get involved in the tense talks but he wanted to be cautious.

"I think it would be heart-breaking for the American people if our national pastime didn't get through this whole season," he said. "There may be some other things which can be done, but at this time the situation is sufficiently delicate that I think we need to leave it at that. ... If we can play a constructive role, we will."

Clinton said he hopes there isn't a work stoppage, which would be baseball's eighth in 22 years.

"I mean, the prospect of seeing records that are 30 and 40 years old broken for those of us who like the offensive as well as the defensive side of baseball — I mean this is an exhilarating thing," he said. "And it's a great opportunity for these young players and what they can become."

Atlanta Braves present at the bargaining session didn't mince words. One lawyer in the union said some players used profanity as they attacked management.

Excess baggage?

AUSTIN (AP) — Dallas Cowboys head coach Barry Switzer noticed an early flaw in wide receiver Cory Fleming, who signed early Wednesday afternoon and practiced a few hours later for the first time with the defending two-time Super Bowl champions.

"It looks like he's an athlete," said Switzer of the 6-2, 205-pound receiver drafted in the third round by San Francisco and released before he was ever signed. "But he's a little heavy in the rear end. Looks like he needs to lose about nine or 10 pounds. But that will happen out here."

Fleming was rather amused by Switzer's comments. "That's an inherited trait from down the line," he said. "I told him it won't go away."

Star's season in doubt

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Mario Lemieux, the NHL's most dominating talent, met with Pittsburgh Penguins chairman Howard Baldwin to discuss his future with the team.

Lemieux, still recovering from Hodgkin's disease and years of back problems, isn't expected to report for training camp next month.

Cage signs with Cavs

CLEVELAND (AP) — Michael Cage, a center-forward with Seattle, agreed to a three-year deal with the Cleveland Cavaliers.

The 6-foot-9, 240-pound Cage, who has played 10 years in the NBA, is known as a strong defensive player and rebounder.

Big bats come to Rangers' rescue again

ARLINGTON (AP) — When the Texas Rangers' bats are booming, no lead is safe.

The Rangers wiped out deficits of 5-0 and 7-2 with a 19-hit barrage led by Jose Canseco's two homers and four RBIs in an 11-8 decision over the Chicago White Sox Wednesday night.

"It started out that they had three runs, then five runs and we started telling ourselves it's going to take 10 runs to win this game tonight," Canseco said. "It turned out to be 11."

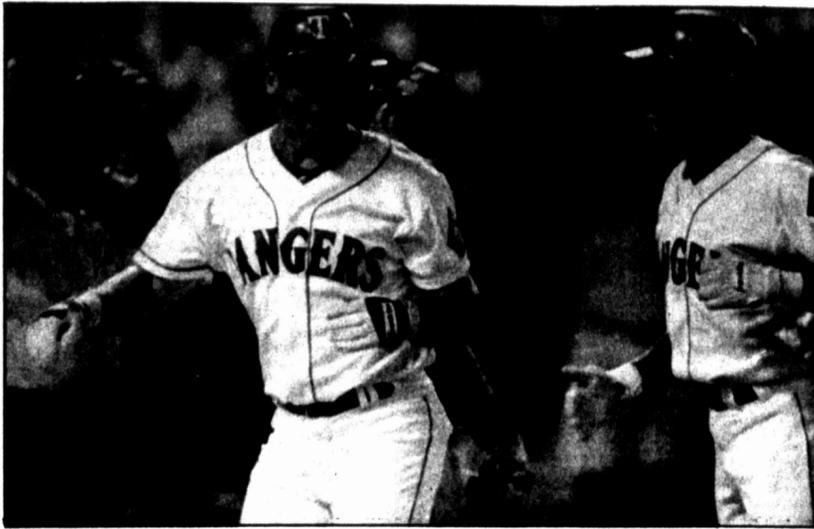

Chicago put up a five-run first but Texas responded with a five-run sixth to tie matters at 7-7.

The Rangers fell behind again in the seventh, 8-7 on Julio Franco's solo homer before rallying again with two-run jolts in the seventh and eighth.

Canseco broke out of a 1-for-19 slump with his 30th and 31st homers of the season, then produced two insurance runs in the eighth with a double.

"Being down five runs, I'm proud of the guys," Rangers manager Kevin Kennedy said. "Our team is not a quitting-type team. We don't roll over. We've got a good hitting lineup. If one guy doesn't do it, someone else will."

Rusty Greer delivered the go-ahead run with a seventh

Texas pinch hitter Chris James, left, celebrates with teammate Manuel Lee after hitting a two run home run against Chicago Wednesday in Arlington.

Inning sacrifice fly after Canseco had tied the game at 8-8.

The Rangers snapped the White Sox four-game winning streak and increased their lead to 3 1-2 games over Oakland in the American League East.

Chicago saw its advantage dwindle to a game and a half over Cleveland in the AL Central.

Texas set a club record, scoring 10 or more runs for the 18th time this season.

Canseco's solo shot leading off the bottom of the seventh off Kirk McCaskill (1-4) pulled the Rangers even, 8-8. Will Clark followed with a single, went to third on Juan Gonzalez's hit-and-run single, and tallied the go-ahead run on Greer's sacrifice fly to left.

That made a winner of Darren Oliver (4-0), the fifth Rangers pitcher. Oliver retired all four hitters he faced, three on strikeouts, then Tom Henke pitched the ninth for his 14th save.

Astros 2, Rockies 1

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Astros were trying not to think about the National League scoreboard while Colorado Manager Don Baylor thought his team didn't pay enough attention to it.

The result was the Astros outlasted the Rockies 2-1 on a two-out, run-scoring single by Andujar Cedeno in the bottom of the ninth Wednesday night.

Both teams had reason to watch the pregame scoreboard since the Astros are chasing Cincinnati for first in the Central Division and the Rockies are chasing San Francisco for second in the West. The Reds and Giants played an afternoon game at Candlestick Park.

When both teams saw the Reds won easily 17-4, it might have put more pressure on the Astros and given the Rockies some inspiration. But it didn't seem to work that way.

"This was a tough win for us," Astros Manager Terry Collins said.

FISHING

While the pace of fishing slowed down somewhat, the big striper catches increased at Lake E.V. Spence over the weekend. One 25-lb. catch was reported, and there were some respectable black bass including one at 6 lbs. Spence reports, where water temperature was 83 degrees, included:

Wildcat Marina - Debbie, Frank Diana and Terry Brown, Odessa, pulled in 20 striped bass, using live shad, ranging from 4-6 lbs.; Cole Mashburn, Odessa, worked with a white jib and plastic worm to pull in a 9-1/4 and 24-lb. striper; Terry McGinley, Robert Lee, used a red shad power worm to make his 6-lb. black bass catch; Terry Brown, Odessa, topped this with a 25-lb. striper caught with live shad.

Paint Creek Marina - Bob Edwards, Odessa, reeled in a 4-1/2-lb. black bass on a red shad worm; Jerry Long, San Angelo, caught 10 stripers trolling, ranging 4-6 lbs.; Anthony Pender, Eunice, N.M., caught a 3-lb. striper.

Lake Ivie reports were much the same, excellent black bass fishing mostly in the 12-16-in. size. They took crank, spinner and all types top-water lures, and results were especially good when fishermen spotted them feeding on shad feeding near the surface. The keeper 18-in. plus bass were in deeper water in early morning or late evening, or in the main body during the day. A few small-mouth bss were mixed in with the blacks.

Some nice stringers of white bass were being taken, again where sportsmen moved to where shad were braking the surface in a feeding frenzy. There were only poor results on yellow and channel catfishing, and crappie catches continued to be meager and this species moved to the deep river and creek channels.

Academic team for baseball, joining Odessa College's Cody Allison as the only Texas players on the team. Roper said each sport has about 30 players named to the NJCAA's All-Academic teams.

Almendarez carried a 3.69 GPA and followed Matt Higgs, who carried a 4.0 mark on his way to an All-Academic selection last season with the Hawks. Almendarez was Howard's student body president for the '93-94 school year.

"Chris was kind of our utility player," Roper said. "He played outfield, all four infield positions, and he played a lot at the end of games because he was our defensive specialist."

Two Lady Hawks received All-Academic honors - Becky Barnes and Angel Spinks. Barnes, who has moved on to West Texas A&M, had a 3.65 GPA, while Spinks, a Texas A&M signee, carried a 3.63. Last season, the Lady Hawks also had two national selections - Anita Wright and Dina

Rozner.

"Both Becky and Angel have that desire, that determination, on the court and in the classroom, to prepare for that job after college. That's just their personality," Gray said. "There's no question that the faculty at Howard College has as much to do with this award as everyone else."

Roper echoed Gray's praise of the faculty.

"We have so few students per professor - I think it was at 22 students per professor last time I looked," Roper said. "When athletes come here, the professor knows their names, knows where they are from and knows they participate in this particular sport, and it helps."

The ice isn't too nice, but skating will go as planned

ST. PETERSBURG, Russia (AP) — The Russian organizers of the Goodwill Games saved face today by winning the battle to keep the already delayed figure skating competition at its original venue.

A new cooling technology, borrowed from the Russian subway system and never before used on ice rinks here, was called in at the last minute and was able at last to produce a satisfactory surface at the Yubileiny Sports Palace.

"The first practice has taken place and it was successful," said Vitaly Mutko, deputy mayor of St. Petersburg and deputy chairman of the local organizing committee. "The figure skating will start (tonight) at the Yubileiny complex."

The announcement ended 24 hours of confusion that the Games' American owners battle with Russian bureaucratic intransigence over whether the event should be moved to the modest SKA rink, a local hockey hall.

In the end, the Russians came through.

"A great deal of progress has been made over the last 24 hours," Goodwill Games president Jack Kelly said. "The quality of the ice appears to be up to standard."

Kelly said the ice-making problems at Yubileiny, which hosted boxing until last Saturday, were solved by a break in the heat wave that has hit St. Petersburg, application of the new technology, and, after days of little progress, a "proper level of management and attention" from the local organizers.

Minor leaguers aren't stars yet, but just wait

The mind's still on vacation. Sitting by the first-base dugout Tuesday at Wolfson Park in Jacksonville, Fla., I was shovel-ing down 50-cent hot dogs and 50-cent cokes when the first-base coach of the Jacksonville Suns caught my eye.

Dave Hargrave
Sports Editor

Ignoring the batter, who could have easily drove a foul liner into my ear, I studied the coach closely. Measured his height, checked his face, watched his mannerisms and it didn't take long to see who it was.

Luis Quiñones. Who? You heard right. Who were you expecting, Ted Williams?

Quiñones has bounced around the major leagues for years as a utility infielder, and he's of particular importance to me because his pinch-hit RBI single in Game 6 of the 1990 National League Championship Series catapulted my beloved Cincinnati Reds into the World Series. He batted for Paul O'Neill, if you can believe that.

I'd seen him play in Cincinnati so many times, and here he was coaching first base for a Double-A team. So he retired, right?

Wrong. Dad filled me in. For whatever reason, Quiñones was playing for the Suns, and sure enough he pinch hit a few innings later. No glory this time - he hit a lazy fly ball to right on a 3-2 pitch.

Quiñones reminded me of a simple truth I already knew: the road between Double-A ball and the majors - The Show - can sometimes be shorter than the drive from the VA hospital to Wal-Mart. The Seattle Mariners' No. 1 draft pick, Alex Rodriguez, had been playing in Jacksonville earlier this season, but he's already in Seattle (or wherever the M's play nowadays).

Look at Oddibe McDowell, the outfielder for the Texas Rangers. He started a promising major league career, playing with the Rangers and the Cleveland Indians, and then he disappeared in Triple-A and Double-A baseball for a few years. Suddenly, he's a contributor for the first-place Rangers in '94.

When you're talking about the ladder to the major leagues, the toughest rung to step past is Class A ball. Most major-league teams have three Class A affiliates, so a player has to advance through a three-team pool to reach Double-A. If a player isn't destined to make the major leagues, chances are good Class A will be the level that broke him.

Once a player is in Double-A, he can smell the majors, and he has a right to (unless his name is Michael Jordan). Granted, a minor-league baseball fan can likely list a litany of players who made Double-A ball and went no farther, but the thrill of watching budding stars outweighs any disappointments. It's so appalling to hear people say, "Oh, I don't want to go to the Midland Angels game - those guys aren't major league."

Please! Here's a partial list of the guys I saw play either for Jacksonville: Randy Johnson, Delino DeShields, Marquis Grissom, Wil Cordero, Larry Walker, Mel Rojas and Bret Boone. The Greenville Braves of the late '80s are the Atlanta Braves of today - David Justice, Steve Avery, Mark Lemke, John Smoltz, Tom Glavine, not to mention ex-Braves Ronnie Gant and Brian Hunter.

Forsan flags spice up games

By BARBARA MORRISON
Staff Writer

FORSAN - All high school football games have certain things in common.

There are the players, the uniforms, the referees, the screaming fans, the band and...the flags.

The flag team, or flag corps as some schools refer to it, is the group of girls and guys who attend the band with multi-colored flags and perform synchronized routines to provide half-time entertainment designed to enhance the effect of the band's music.

While often taken for granted, there is a lot of unseen hard work, effort and determination that accompanies the performance. And, when it comes to one local group of "flags," where there's a will, there's a way.

Forsan High School has a unique flag squad. They are self-developed and self-sponsored.

Bonnie Miller, mother of flag member Terra Proctor, says, "The girls wanted a flag team a couple of years ago, so they made a deal with the school. They earn all their own money for uniforms and they develop their own routines."

As part of their self-motivation, the group of five girls, consisting of three freshmen and two juniors, headed off to a special camp with the designated purpose to teach campers to develop and perform better band routines, with a division dedicated to flag squads.

"It was a neat experience," said Terra, describing the camp staged at San Angelo State University. "We got to meet a lot of new people."

Proctor explained the girls attended classes from 8 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. with an hour for lunch. Special events were organized for the evening including dances. "I didn't dance," said Proctor, "but Stephanie and Esther had a great time!"

Team captain Stephanie Barraza, a junior, and freshman Esther Edmondson weren't the only two to have fun.

At the conclusion of the camp, attended by approximately 60 beginning flag campers, the Forsan squad was announced as the fourth-place finishers in the final competition. Another area squad from Coahoma High School finished third.

So, this year, while attending a favorite football game, enjoy the flags. They, too, are an important part of the presentation.

"Where there's a will, there's a way," is the motto for these self-developed flag team members from Forsan High School. Self-sponsored, they recently attended a camp in San Angelo to help them better their performance capabilities. Triplets provide three times the fun

By KELLIE JONES
Staff Writer

Great things come in threes—at least for one elderly couple who are now the proud great-grandparents of identical triplets born on Father's Day.

Mr. and Mrs. A.C. Preston of Big Spring are the great-grandparents of Kimberly Anne, Christina Joy and Rebekah Marie Lewis, who came into the world about eight weeks early.

"My daughter, Quepha Preston Lewis, has a son, Farley, who's wife just had the babies. They found out in February they were expecting triplets. The mother's first name is Kelly," explained Mrs. Preston.

The triplets were born at a hospital in Springfield, Mo., on June 19. Kimberly Anne weighed three pounds, ten ounces, Christina Joy weighed three pounds and two ounces and Rebekah Marie was born last, weighing four pounds, two ounces.

Three has previously been a lucky number for the triplets' parents. Farley and Kelly dated for three weeks before getting engaged.

"The engagement lasted three months before they got married and they have been married three years. He just turned 33 and they belong to the Trinity Lutheran Church in Springfield," said Mr. Preston.

Farley and Kelly Lewis show off their identical triplets, Kimberly, Christina and Rebekah. The couple live in Springfield, Missouri. The proud great-grandparents are long time Big Spring residents Mr. and Mrs. A.C. Preston.

Mrs. Preston added, "Farley and Kelly did not use any fertility drugs and multiple births do run in the family. My brother's wife had four sets of twins and several of my cousins and aunts had twins. No one has had triplets until now, though."

"We were surprised when we heard they had triplets. No one had told us they were expecting three babies. It's so funny, Quepha tells me that everyone there takes care of one of the babies. They say, 'I got my baby asleep, what about you?'"

The Prestons have lived in Big Spring since 1932 and all four of their children, three girls and one boy, graduated from Big Spring High School.

Mr. Preston worked as a postal carrier for 27 years. After he retired, the couple worked in the real estate business for a while and are members of the First Baptist Church.

Students win recognition for longhorn aid

By VERONICA PUENTE
The (McAllen, Texas) Monitor

EDINBURG, Texas - It's a story that began with a 1-inch plastic longhorn art teacher Viola Dierlam picked up at a garage sale.

At the same time Dierlam introduced the anorexic animal to her seventh-grade art class at South Junior High School, the students were trying to decide what to submit to the National Scholastic Art Awards 1992 competition.

Someone jokingly suggested they create a sculpture of a Texas longhorn, similar to the one the students had scoffed at earlier.

And hence goes the birth-tale of 150-pound Ana la Tejana, a 4-foot-long, 2-foot-tall, white and orange longhorn named after Texas' silver-haired Gov. Ann Richards.

"We named her after our state governor because she (Ana) was going to represent Texas," Dierlam said, referring to the competition that was held at Texas Tech University in Lubbock. "We were really surprised when we got state recognition and then national recognition."

Ana can thank students Caleb Belshe, Carl Brown, Justin Buller and Ben Warshem for her existence, Dierlam said.

FOOTBALL TIME AGAIN!

Warning signs of anorexia, bulimia

DR. ILISSE PERLMUTTER
New York University Medical Center

Anorexia nervosa and bulimia nervosa, eating disorders most often seen in adolescent girls, can threaten the health or life of a child. But knowing the signs of these disorders can help speed the process of obtaining treatment.

Anorexia nervosa is defined as a refusal to eat enough to keep body weight over a minimal average for age and height. Bulimia nervosa is typified by binge eating — rapidly eating a large amount of food in a short amount of time — followed by purging, induced vomiting, fasting, use of laxatives, rigorous dieting or exercise.

The vast majority of cases of anorexia and bulimia occur in teen-age girls, and the reasons for this are as yet unclear.

Teen-age boys tend to be keyed in to their natural hunger and satiety. But young women are thought to be guided more by body perception and consciousness and are more apt to deny hunger to lose weight.

Anorexia and bulimia do not stem from a single underlying cause, but may be the result of several factors occurring over time and which seem to surface during adolescence.

Teens with anorexia or bulimia often avoid dealing with the emotional conflicts that crop up around puberty. Instead they displace their emotions, making weight loss or weight control the central issue. This can result in the distorted perception that being thin is admirable and that no one can ever be thin enough.

Other contributing factors include internal and parental pressure to be perfect, a disturbance in family interactions and a cultural perception that thinness is desirable.

Red flags that may indicate anorexia include skipping sweets, desserts or meals; a compulsive need for exercise and guilt if that is not accomplished; and complaints about weight, followed by rigorous dieting and weight loss in an already slender youngster.

Parents may also be concerned if a youngster who has lost weight continues to wear baggy clothing. This is a common tactic used by those with anorexia or bulimia to hide what they consider an "undesirable" body.

A teen who is bulimic may have all of these symptoms — and in addition may have a ravenous appetite.

Eating disorders can lead to serious medical complications. Anorexia, for example, can result in osteoporosis or loss in bone density through lack of sufficient calcium intake; an absence of menstrual periods; and disorders of the cardiovascular, gastrointestinal and metabolic systems.

Complications from bulimia can lead to an imbalance of salts, known as electrolytes, that are critical to the metabolic functions of the body; trauma to the esophagus; and carotid gland enlargement more commonly known as chipmunk cheeks.

If anorexia or bulimia is suspected, it is important that the child undergoes a complete medical evaluation, followed by treatment for the condition. Treatment may vary, depending on the type of eating disorder and its severity of medical and psychological symptoms.

Treatment focuses initially on stabilizing health, followed by nutritional rehabilitation and therapy. Family involvement is crucial in the goal of helping the teen-ager.

Dr. Ilisse Perlmutter is assistant professor of pediatric psychiatry at New York University Medical School.

New lingo replaces old terms

By PHYLLIS BRASCH
St. Louis Post-Dispatch

Teens had better bite their lips this fall before they say "dorky," "gnarly," "bogus" or "cheesy." The words are history in school hallways.

Fast young talkers on the cutting edge of conversation send the thumbs-down message by saying "weak," "not hard," "that bites" or "stupid."

For thumbs-up, they flip negative words into compliments. So listen again to "mad," "sick," "straight" and "bad." They all exclaim immense satisfaction.

"Bad" is a step above "awesome," said Brian Epstein, according to one of last spring's high school graduates.

Almost everywhere, "hard" translates as generous and instant appreciation. And "cool" is still acceptable as the ultimate stamp of approval, said senior Emily Smith, 17.

Beyond "cool," an expression many parents almost exhausted when they were in high school, teens favor "rad," "fresh," "filthy," "kooky," "crazy" or "dopey" to send the message "hip." And those in the know describe an attractive boy or girl as "fine."

For an ultimate compliment, another high school senior relies on "killer," and a 13-year-old middle schooler turns to "cold-blooded."

A 13-year-old from another middle school counts on "stupid" to register disapproval. She ends phone conversation with "I'm Audi 5,000." A 17-year-old junior says good-bye with "hang tight."

Teens take verbal cues for their latest slang from television, travel, music and movies.

When the Hollywood version of "The Flintstones" TV show hit theaters this summer, "Betty" became a synonym for a good-looking woman. And almost every teen seems to know "Five-O," borrowed from the TV show "Hawaii Five-O," means police officer.

But teens can relax if they fall behind on the latest slang. Most buzz words are short-lived, lasting no more than an academic year, said Larry Sneden, a professor specializing in pop-culture studies at California State University at Northridge. As for other words, it took 20 years before "doo-fus," "dweeb" and "humongous" made it into the dictionary after cropping up in newspapers and magazines.

Book reviews: Kids and other monsters

"Creepy-crawlies Join in truly monstrous follies. Kids will love The ooze and gore, Slurp it up And ask for more."

"Making Friends with Frankenstein: A Book of Monstrous Poems and Pictures" (Candlewick Press, $19.95) is horrible fun (and sometimes gore-ible puns) from Colin McNaughton.

He invites kids in with "The park is dark, The monsters thin, It's feeding time So COME ON IN!" and goes from there. His destinations include The Doom Merchant's shop ("Down in the dumps, At the end of the road to Rack and Ruin") and Jekyll and Hyde Park:

"Don't go rowing! Disembark! You may meet the great white shark. (Jaws truly!)"

He occasionally gets pretty gross, as in his poem about and illustration of a pig-kid who eats a pound of gummy babies with all too predictable results. However, that's no more gross than, say, great green gobs of greasy grimy gopher guts.

'Super Street Fighter' a super game

BRITT and BRIAN WARNER Thomson News Service

GAME: Super Street Fighter 2: The New Challengers COMPANY: Capcom SYSTEM: SNES and Genesis DIFFICULTY: variable PLOT SUMMARY: It's time again for the toughest fighters in the world to prepare for the ultimate showdown.

This year, four new competitors have entered the competition to test their might against the likes of Ken, Ryu, Chun Li and Blanka. These new warriors are: Cammy, the UK Special Forces agent; T. Hawk, the Apache wrestler; Dee Jay, the jammin' Jamaican kick-boxer; and Fei Long, the young judo master.

It'll be a fight of monumental proportions. Does any one of them have the strength, courage, wit, skill, and determination to defeat all the warriors and go up against the feared grand-master himself, M. Bison?

STRUCTURE: This week, we're going to review Super Street Fighter 2 for both the Genesis and the Super Nintendo. While the games are almost exact replicas of the arcade versions, there are some subtle differences.

But before we get into that, let's do a rundown of this game for gamers who don't know what Street Fighter is all about. If you haven't lived in a cave for the past two years, you should know that there are four different versions of this popular game: Street Fighter 2, Street Fighter 2: Championship Edition, Street Fighter 2: Hyper Fighting, and the newest - Super Street Fighter 2: The New Challengers.

With each new game, the action got faster and the characters learned new moves. In SSF2:TNC, the speed level is still as fast as it was in Hyper Fighting, but now there are four new characters. These new characters are all unique and have their own distinct fighting styles.

For those of you who have never played the Street Fighter series - here's a rundown of how the game works. The first thing you'll notice is that you have to make use of six different buttons: light punches and kicks, medium punches and kicks, and hard punches and kicks. The light attacks are the fastest, but do the least amount of damage, the medium attacks are slower, but do more damage, and the hard attacks are the slowest and they do the most amount of damage.

Then there are the special moves. Each of the 16 characters (there were eight playable characters in SF2, 12 playable characters in Championship and Hyper, and 16 playable characters in Super) has his/her own special moves. These moves require exact joystick/control pad manipulation and timing, but they do incredible amounts of damage to your opponent.

That's a basic synopsis of this game. You and the computer or you and a friend face off and battle to the finish.

Komodo Dragons

We read about make-believe dragons in legends and fairy tales. But a real lizard, the largest in the world, can grow to be so big that it is called a "dragon." It can be up to 10 feet long. We call it the "Komodo" dragon, named for one of the four islands where it can be found in the wild. Komodo Island is a part of Indonesia.

Indonesia is in Southeast Asia. It is a country made up of more than 13,000 islands. Komodo dragons are so unusual that Indonesia has declared them to be a national treasure. They are an endangered species. There might be from 2,000 to 5,000 left. We don't know for sure. Scientists are concerned that the area in which they live is too small.

Young Komodos spend some of their time up in trees. Being out of reach protects them from larger animals, especially larger adult Komodos, who might find them tasty treats.

Baby hatchlings bred and raised in zoos may help prevent the extinction of these rare animals.

Just like snakes, these large lizards smell and taste with their tongues.

Disease might kill them off. The entire species could be wiped out by a big natural disaster such as a typhoon.

Hatched in the U.S.A. Zoo experts in this country were thrilled with the very first successful hatching of Komodo dragons outside of Indonesia.

To date there have been three hatchings and 45 surviving babies. These took place at two different zoos, the National Zoo and the Cincinnati Zoo.

These dragons are being given to other zoos around the country. They are serving as an example of how important it is to breed and preserve endangered species.

Adult Komodos Adult Komodo dragons are a dull gray with long necks, strong claws, sharp teeth and powerful tails. Komodo dragons are meat eaters. In the wild, adults are at the top of the food chain. They eat small animals. They are also scavengers that eat dead animals. In zoos, they are fed rats.

Young Komodos spend some of their time up in trees. Being out of reach protects them from larger animals, especially larger adult Komodos, who might find them tasty treats.

All About Reptiles

Reptiles include: Snakes, Lizards, Turtles, Crocodiles and alligators. Lizards: There are about 3,000 different kinds of lizards. Most have movable eyelids and ear openings you can see. Some are legless. Most have five toes on each foot. Some have tails that can be broken off easily. While a new tail will grow, it will not have the bony support the first one did. Alligators and crocodiles: have bulging ears and nostrils that close when they dive. Alligators offer more care for their young than other reptiles. They protect them for a year. The American alligator of the Gulf Coast has made a big comeback. It has been taken off the endangered species list. The crocodile is more aggressive. Snakes: There are about 2,700 different kinds. Snakes have no legs. They use their tongues to taste and smell. They have no external ears, and their eyelids don't close. Meet Thelma and Louise: Usually zoos don't give reptiles names, but Thelma and Louise are so unusual that the San Diego Zoo keepers did. The trouble is... which is Thelma and which is Louise? Corn snakes are quite common in the eastern United States, but two-headed snakes of any kind are very rare. Thelma and Louise have been a big hit at the zoo since 1991. Only the right side seems to eat the twice-monthly meals of two full-grown mice. Turtles: There are about 250 different kinds. Turtles have shells. They have no teeth, but their jaws can be razor-sharp. Some, like this Eastern box turtle, live only on land. Land turtles are also called tortoises and terrapins. Some, like this African soft-shell turtle, live only in water.

Furious mom tells off wedding no-shows

DEAR ABBY: How rude and ignorant can people be? My daughter was married 10 days ago. Despite the fact that both sets of parents are divorced,

Abigail Van Buren
Columnist

everyone got along (as it should be) and had a wonderful time. My complaint concerns "no-shows" - people who RSVP'd in the affirmative and failed to appear. We had the reception at a nice hotel, and limited our guest list to the number of people we could afford to have. We made individual favors for each person, and went to a great deal of trouble and expense to make this day one my daughter and her new husband would remember forever.

Abby, a full one-quarter of the confirmed guests did not show up! Don't people realize that we had to provide the hotel with a guaranteed number of guests two days before the reception, and had to pay for them regardless? If these people had bothered to call and let us know their plans had changed, we could have saved $400.

Abby, please tell your readers to seriously consider their plans before responding to an RSVP, and if circumstances change after accepting, to at least give the concerned party the courtesy of a telephone call as soon as possible.

Please use my name. I am so angry with these people, maybe they will see this letter and know how much hurt they have caused by their lack of common courtesy. -- ARLENE E. DIF-FERDING, SUMMERVILLE, S.C.

DEAR ARLENE: Please be assured that you are speaking for many who have paid a tidy sum for "no-shows." Such insensitivity is inexcusable.

DEAR ABBY: In regard to the letter questioning which side of the bed folks sleep on, and how the baby, or the telephone, may produce that decision:

During a recent visit to the Vatican Museum, our guide informed us that in ancient Rome, the man always slept on the right side in order to have access to his sword for protecting himself and his family.

So, this is not a "silly" question, nor is the question of why men's and women's clothing buttons from opposite sides. The answer can be found in history, as well. --LESLIE BARNES, DALLAS

DEAR LESLIE BARNES: Now I am intrigued. Why do men's and women's clothing buttons from opposite sides? Please write again and let me know.
