BRIEF

Black leaders
consider new focus

DALLAS (AP) — On the eve of a national convention, leaders of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference say blacks still have far to go to achieve anything close to equity in the areas of economic and political power.

The rate of black unemployment today is twice that of whites, just as it was 30 years ago, said the Rev. Joseph Lowery, president of the Atlanta-based group.

The four-day convention opens Tuesday at the Loews Anatole Hotel in Dallas.

"Our agenda right now is one of justice. We are not talking about integration. It cost us in many respects in terms of leadership and business viability," Lowery said Sunday.

Barney no longer
supreme seller

DALLAS (AP) — Although Barney remains a hit on television and videos, the bubbly purple dinosaur no longer tops the sales charts in toy stores, officials say.

"Kids still like watching the show, but the merchandise is dead," says Marion Szymanski of Toy Tips Inc., which runs focus groups to test children's response to toys.

The hot seller lately has been a lion; not a dinosaur.

Ms. Szymanski said preschoolers today want products with baby Simba, the lion cub in Disney's "The Lion King."

Discrimination suits
still to be settled

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Just two of 31 discrimination complaints against the Texas National Guard have been settled, despite a probe into the problem that was completed more than a year ago, the Corpus Christi Caller-Times reported Sunday.

The guardsmen had hoped that a $200 million lawsuit filed against the state 18 months ago would speed settlements.

However, state officials say the lawsuit actually slowed the process. They say settlement offers have been made to the plaintiffs but were turned down.

Frustrated with the lack of action, several guardsmen have fired their attorney, Luis R. Vera Jr. of San Antonio, saying he failed to return phone calls or show up for appointments.

Contractor makes quick warehouse jail conversion

DALLAS (AP) — Ed Parker, a Dallas contractor, specializes in converting warehouses into jails for counties burdened with an overflow of state inmates.

But even though his company already had converted a Tarrant County warehouse into a jail in 60 days and built a three-story addition to a Harris County jail in 90 days, he wasn't sure he was up to a Dallas County job.

Three blocks from the Lew Sterrett Justice Center on the west side of downtown Dallas was a tractor parts warehouse that Dallas County wanted converted, very quickly, into a medium-security jail for 1,008 inmates.

Messing with weevils' sex life could rid farmers of pest

WASHINGTON (AP) — For 10 years, an Agriculture Department scientist has plotted a G-rated future for the once-incurably fertile boll weevil.

"It's really wicked what we can do to (it's) sex life," USDA entomologist and neurobiologist Joseph Dickens said in a recent interview.

The target of his research is a small group of nerve cells inside the hairs lining the weevil's nose. They carry scent signals to the brain that tell the insect when food — or a mate — is nearby.

Dickens' aim is to shut down the boll weevil's sex detection.

He and State University of New York chemist Glenn Prestwich have joined forces to turn the odors that the cotton pest find most appealing into a stable form that can be manipulated to stifle their mating.

It's a simple but sad story for the beleaguered pest.

Sex and food aromas stimulate the brain via a receptor cell, creating a reaction the same way the scent of hamburgers or cologne alerts humans that something or someone pleasant-smelling is nearby.

The chemicals the scientists are developing mimic natural plant or sex scents that stimulate the cells and influence boll weevil behavior. A more stable compound than the natural odor enables them to test the boll weevil's response to their chemical in the field.

The idea is to control behaviors induced or impaired by certain smells.

"We don't know if we can do that yet, but ... on a very limited scale, our results indicate that we can block their response" to the scent that is released when males feed on cotton plants, Dickens said.

The scent attracts females as well as males, he said.

Dickens' nature-based control of boll weevils is a welcome alternative to insecticides currently in use. The pests cost the cotton industry about $300 million each year, most of which is spent on insecticides.

He admits that interfering with mating and feeding is to mess with pretty powerful instincts.

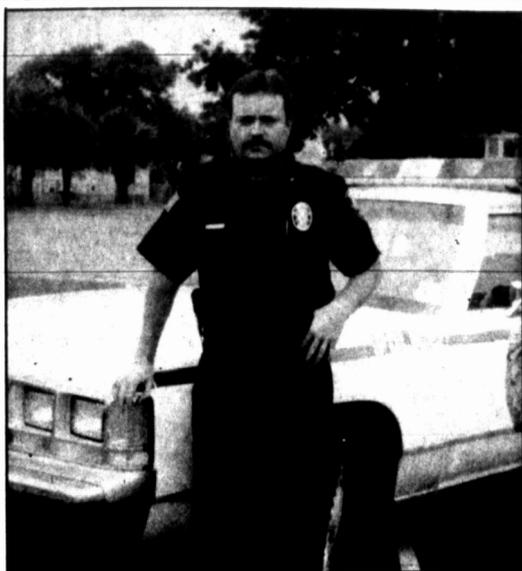

His cell chemical is being patented by the Agricultural Research Service. His previous research on green leaf volatiles has been successful in helping to control the southern pine beetle, a forest pest, and the beet armyworm, a crop nuisance, and Mediterranean fruit flies.

Adding cotton plant scents to the boll weevil pheromone attracts nearly twice as many weevils as with the pheromone alone, he said.

"But if we put pheromone in a trap in the field and I add some linalool, there is a decrease in the number of insects I catch in the trap."

When the two chemicals combine, nerve cell response to odor is diminished, hampering the weevil's breeding reflex when a mate comes courting.

"It can actually detect the compounds via its nose but its brain tells it something else, apparently. So it does, in fact, appear to interfere with the boll weevil's sex life," Dickens said.

Dimmitt Police Chief Dewayne Haney poses by his car near a parking lot where Dimmitt teen-agers often hang out at night. Haney says nighttime vandalism dropped off after the town implemented a curfew for everyone under the age of 17. More and more small Texas towns are adopting the big-city approach of fighting juvenile crime with teen curfews.

Curfews working in rural towns

DIMMITT (AP) — This Texas Panhandle town, fringed by corn fields and bisected by train tracks, typifies any rural scene.

Banners across the main drag promote an annual harvest festival. Downtown boasts just one stop light and a myriad of giant grain elevators. Teen-agers congregate in Mr. Burger's parking lot.

Furthermore — in a move increasingly typical for Texas towns — Dimmitt police make those teens go home at curfew.

More and more places like Chillicothe (population 816), Sterling City (1,096) and McCamey (2,493) have implemented curfews in an effort to curb juvenile crime. Officials credit Dallas and Austin with paving the way.

And they insist that small towns need curfews just as much as cities do.

"There's nothing for them to do," police Chief Dewayne Haney said of the teen-agers in Dimmitt, population 4,400. "The only thing they can do is hang out. And when you've got two or three hanging out (late at night), that brews nothing but trouble."

Dimmitt and other towns that adopted curfews this year claim problems with teen vandalism — graffiti, in particular.

But Haney said vandalism has dropped markedly since March, when the curfew went into effect. It requires those age 16 and younger to get off the streets by 11 p.m. if they have school the next day, or by 1 a.m. if it's Friday or Saturday.

Dimmitt police have written 21 violation reports, Haney said. Teen-agers grumbled.

"They were wondering why if all we did was hang out and talk to each other, and we weren't doing anything wrong, why we had to go home," said Brad Beck, a 14-year-old sophomore.

Jay Jacobson, executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union of Texas, said small towns don't have the crime to justify curfews. He called them political gimmicks that snowball.

"Somebody in the next town sees it, and says that's an inexpensive way to say, 'I'm tough on crime,'" Jacobson said.

Two rich schools vote to share with neighbors

ELECTIONS

Voters in a pair of wealthy Texas school districts have voted to share that tax base with neighboring districts.

In Plano, voters decided on Saturday to share their school tax dollars with nearby districts that are less well off.

Rather than let the state distribute all of the $15 million is it required to share, the voters opted to send $2.5 million of that pot directly to 12 other districts in Collin County.

In La Porte, located on the Houston Ship Channel, school district voters elected to share some of the district tax proceeds with nearby Galena Park to satisfy the state's school funding equalization plan.

Here are some other election results:

—Voters in north Harris County's Spring district approved a $23.9 million bond issue to finance new school construction and renovations. To get that money, they passed another proposition that raises the state-imposed tax ceiling for maintenance and operations from $1.50 to $1.65 per $100 of assessed valuation.

—In Fort Bend County, voters in Stafford Municipal School District, the state's only such district, approved $10.6 million in bonds to build 46 additional classrooms, a multipurpose theater, gymnasiums, additions to the administration building and other items.

—For the third time in five years, McAllen voters told city officials they don't want an extra cent added to their sales tax. The 2,047-to-1,559 vote means the city will have to find other ways to pay for various capital improvement projects.

"For me it's a sad day," McAllen Mayor Othal Brand said, adding that the city must use bond elections to fund proposed projects such as a new police station, a mass transit system and a library branch in South McAllen.

McAllen also was seeking seed money for a medical school, South Texas Community College and an alternative school.

—An extra penny per dollar sales tax was approved by Roma residents. Half the new money will go to economic development and the other half is earmarked for new city projects.

The raise jumps the tax to 8.25 percent, although the hike will come a half-cent at a time in two 1995 dates.

"It's going to give us a big advantage in terms of getting projects started," Roma Mayor Alonzo Alvarez said. "The initial monies should start coming in sometime in April."

—Port Isabel voters said they're willing to pay an extra half-cent sales tax to generate $200,000 for needed services and tourism promotion.

—Two separate plans to raise Pasadena's sales tax by a half-cent were rejected. Both involved citywide improvements and one also would have paid for more police officers.

—Mission voters shifted the distribution of their sales tax, taking it away from economic development to instead spend it on a variety of projects.

"It wasn't really a big issue, like it was in McAllen," Mission city secretary Mona Martinez said. "Ours was not an increase. It was just a change."

—San Benito residents also decided against using a half-cent of existing sales tax money on economic development. They instead want the $450,000 the tax generates to go toward rebuilding the city's infrastructure.

"We can now spend the money to improve our streets and make improvements to water lines and sewer lines," San Benito Mayor Chuck Weekley said.

—The half-cent sales tax in Oak Ridge North passed by only two votes, meaning there would have been a tie had one supporter voted against it. The anticipated extra $100,000 will go toward municipal improvements. Possible projects include a new city hall, community center, park facilities, sidewalks and a water plant.

—The 600-resident farming community of Los Indios can now call itself a town after a vote to incorporate itself was a hit. A formal ruling from Cameron County Judge Tony Garza is still needed before they can become self-governing.

"We congratulate them and, if there's anything they need, they should give us a call," said Harlingen Mayor Bill Card.

—Kountze residents are happy with the way their city government is set up, even if the mayor and council members are bickering.

Weekend travel proves deadly for South Texas drivers

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — It was a deadly weekend on South Texas roads.

Eight people died in two accidents Saturday that left nine others injured.

The first accident occurred about 12:40 p.m. Saturday when a car collided with a pickup on Interstate 37 in Atascosa County. The collision sent the truck head-on into an oncoming van. Four people died and four others were injured.

About four hours later, four members of a San Antonio family died and five more were injured when the van in which they were riding rolled over on U.S. 90 near Uvalde, authorities said.

In the first accident, van driver Paula Saenz, 65, of Alice, died. Also killed were three people in the pickup: driver Jesus Maria Cervantes, 34, of San Antonio; passenger Michael Hernandez, 36, of San Antonio; and passenger Enrique Sarabia, 31, of San Antonio.

The driver of the car, Manuel Robles, 24, of Channelview, suffered minor injuries and was taken to Tri-City Hospital in Atascosa County before being arrested on suspicion of driving while intoxicated, the Texas Department of Public Safety said.

Robles' passenger, Guadalupe Pereyra, 20, of Channelview, was treated and released from Tri-City as was truck passenger Jose Hernandez, 46, of San Antonio, a hospital spokeswoman said Sunday.

Truck passenger Frank Hernandez, 46, of Castroville, was in stable condition Sunday at Wilford Hall Medical Center in San Antonio.

The victims of the second accident were identified as Elvira Garcia, in her late 70s; her daughter, Belen G. Vara, 45; and two grandsons, Robert Garcia, 12, and Andrew Garcia, 10, said DPS trooper Hector Luevano.

Elvira Garcia's sons, David Garcia, 43, and Juan Garcia, 30, were among the injured.

Police dispute claim of no lights when child killed

GARLAND (AP) — Witnesses allege that a police officer was driving his patrol car without lights when the vehicle struck and killed an 8-year-old girl.

Garland police are disputing the allegation.

Cynthia Rivas was struck and killed about 11:15 p.m. Saturday on a busy residential street near her home as she was walking home from a restaurant with her brother, her mother and a cousin, police were told.

"He was speeding; there were no lights, no lights at all," said her mother, Herminia Rico.

Garland police officer Bryan Huschke, who was responding to a burglary call, swerved and slammed on his brakes when he saw the child but could not avoid hitting her, police Lt. Nathan Lashaway said.

Besides the mother, at least two other people said the officer was driving without headlights. Brothers Jose and Gustavo Huerte said they saw a police car speeding without headlights just before the accident.

The Huertes said they didn't see the accident but heard the screams and saw the commotion. Jose Huerte said he was turning onto the street where the accident occurred when they saw the speeding car.

"We didn't think it was a policeman because he was coming so fast," Huerte said.

Other witnesses said the patrol car had its lights on, but no emergency lights.

Interim Police Chief J.W. Barnett said the officer was driving with his headlights on but without his flashing emergency lights or siren. The emergency lights were not required for the sort of call he was on, Barnett said.

Make curfew a success

It may be a big city solution to solving juvenile crime, but for rural towns and cities it is one that seems to be working.

Dimmitt, a typical West Texas town, has implemented a teen curfew and is reaping benefits from it already. According to Dimmitt Police Chief Dewayne Haney, vandalism has dropped markedly since the implementation of the curfew in March.

Big Spring has joined the list of smaller towns implementing curfews for its juveniles. The list includes the towns of Chillicothe, Sterling City and McCamey.

Our curfew is set to begin soon and the hope is it will provide the police a good tool for halting the rise in teen crime.

It is proving to be an effective tool in the smaller towns. Lets make it an effective tool in Big Spring.

If it succeeds here, everyone is the winner.

Ready for tomorrow?

On the "information superhighway," we are all going to go with the flow or get run over.

Within the next calendar year, we will be able to plug the TV set into the backside of the family computer and link up with cable TV lines. Cable modems will be able to move text, voice and pictures 1,000 times faster than phone lines.

Audiovox will allow passengers in the family van to watch while they travel -- on a TV screen only one and one-half inches thick -- games, videos and broadcast TV.

Solar-powered briefcases will include laptop computers AND pocket cell phones AND portable CD players AND fax-on-the-go.

Some of the electronic wizardry that will be available in the new year I can't name for you today because the names for it are not yet in our vocabulary.

Even the educated imagination falls short. Ten years ago, the Federal Communications Commission anticipated a market for 900,000 cellular phones; already there are 16 million -- with 14,000 more being added every day!

Now here comes a wireless competitor, PCS, which promises a phone number that is yours alone, wherever you are anywhere in the world.

Interactive television may or may not draw the interest some investors anticipate, but they dare not ignore it.

There will be some roadkill on the information superhighway. The post office may go out of business altogether.

Freeway Vision right now is allowing motorists in Los Angeles to watch on the instrument panel of their cars a display of area freeways, updating rush-hour traffic every 30 seconds.

If not next year, soon -- science will be programming computers to imitate biological evolution, enabling us to "see the future," to anticipate human weaknesses and vulnerabilities and perhaps avoid them.

Had anybody told you 20 years ago that you would be living with moving sidewalks, that your telephone would answer itself and take messages, that your letter would be delivered from your home or office anywhere in the world in five seconds, had anybody suggested that you would talk to your TV set and it would then automatically tape or replay programs at your voice command ... had YOU heard then all that you'd be using now, you'd have been overwhelmed. Yet one innovative device at a time, you have traveled the information superhighway comfortably.

Indeed, today, it's difficult for us to imagine life without the fax, the copier, the washroom faucet that turns itself on and off.

Now -- fasten your lap strap! We will be traveling the information superhighway at accelerated speed.

But with patience, poise and willingness to adapt, you and I will be sharing some exciting tomorrows.

Congress takes to the sky in military crafts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Last February, four members of Congress hopped aboard an Army helicopter at a hospital in Tacoma, Wash., bound for a news conference at the Boeing Co. plant in Seattle just 25 miles away.

The excursion took 40 minutes, about as long as it would to drive there in a car. But the cost was a lot more than gas money — $1,599, by an Army estimate.

The trip by Reps. Norman Dicks, Jolene Unsoeld and Michael Kreller, and Sen. Patty Murray, all Washington state Democrats, was one of more than 500 trips taken by members of Congress or their staffs aboard military aircraft since early 1993, an Associated Press review of Pentagon records found.

Lawmakers have wide latitude to travel and get an annual allowance to do so. But when Defense Departments regulations allow, they often prefer a military aircraft because it conserves their allowances and frequently comes with VIP service.

On such trips, the Defense Department usually provides congressmen a military escort, meals, lodging and sometimes a car and driver to pick them up at home.

And no detail of comfort is

too small for the military to consider for its VIP travelers, notations in the military records indicate.

For instance, on May 2, 1993, Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, visited Air Force bases in Florida and North Carolina, along with two aides.

A note to the crew suggests the senator is "not a big breakfast person" and adds: "likes chocolate chip cookies."

For a June 1-2 trip by Rep. John Murtha, D-Pa., chairman of the House defense appropriations subcommittee, the crew is reminded to provide food ("barbecue from Country's Barbeque," near Fort Benning, Ga.), beverages ("regular miniatures set" along with half a case each of Lite beer and Becks or Heineken) and reading material (Golf Digest, Golf Magazine, Golf Illustrated and newspapers).

Defense Department regulations say lawmakers generally may use military aircraft "only where the purpose of the travel is of primary interest to, and bears a substantial relationship to (military) programs or activities." Travel for certain non-military purposes also may be authorized by congressional leaders.

The Pentagon provides a plane or pays for commercial airline tickets if it has no aircraft available.

There has been plenty of publicity, and criticism, over the years about members of Congress using military aircraft for overseas fact-finding trips. But the AP review found lawmakers frequently hop Pentagon planes for domestic travel, as well.

Most of the domestic trips were clearly military in nature, such as visits to installations for hearings on proposed base closures.

In the case of the Seattle trip, Pentagon records state the purpose was "an overflight of congressional districts and participation in a public announcement of national interest."

The four lawmakers joined Vice President Al Gore that day to announce the sale of $6 billion in civilian aircraft to Saudi Arabia, a huge boon to the Boeing workforce.

George Behan, a spokesman for Dicks, said the lawmakers asked for military transport to allow them to stay a little longer at a conference in Tacoma.

CHECKING THE PROGRESS

Road Commissioner Mike Clover checks the progress of work on the levee protecting the Mississippi River town of Grand Tower, Ill. Two inches of rain had slowed efforts of volunteers to raise the levee three feet. Federal agencies are refusing to help the town beef up the 2.5 mile stretch of levee so volunteers from the village of 700 are doing the work.

Mom learning to be better parent; children die alone in home fire

CARBONDALE, Ill. (AP) — Camilla Foulks was getting counseling on how to be a better parent. But witnesses said she was at a bar when her bungalow caught fire, killing her three children and five others that she left home alone.

The children, all related, ranged in age from 5 months to 7 years. An 8-year-old girl escaped unharmed.

Police Chief Don Strom said the children's parents had left them with Foulks overnight, believing the 25-year-old single mother would babysit them.

But Foulks left home about two hours before the fire was reported Sunday and returned minutes after authorities arrived to find no adults present at the one-story house, Strom said. Witnesses told police she had been at a bar.

"We have several reports to that effect," Strom said. "We have confirmed some of those, and we're continuing to investigate other potential witnesses that might have similar information."

The cause of the fire was not yet known. It apparently started in a bedroom at the front of the wood house, which sits on a quiet, tree-lined street in this city about 100 miles southeast of St. Louis. There were working smoke detectors in each of the three bedrooms and in the hall, authorities said.

State's Attorney Mike Wepsiec said it was too early to say if charges were likely.

Foulks just moved in Wednesday. On Friday, firefighters responded to a minor kitchen fire, said Susan Metcalf, director of Good Samaritan Ministries, which manages the house for the federal government.

Senators say health reform compromise still possible

WASHINGTON (AP) — The key players in the Senate's health care debate continue to criticize the opposing party's plans to reform the health insurance system, but they insist compromise is still possible.

"Is there an opportunity for compromise? Maybe," Minority Leader Robert Dole of Kansas said Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Sitting with Majority Leader George Mitchell of Maine, Dole said Mitchell's sweeping proposal amounted to government-run health care. It would raise taxes and fail to contain costs, he predicted.

Mitchell said plans by Dole and other Republicans don't do enough to provide health care coverage to all Americans. He chided GOP lawmakers for accepting a government-based insurance plan for their own health care, yet refusing the same for other citizens.

At the end of their informal debate, Mitchell and Dole were asked if they could come together on health care reform.

"I hope so," Mitchell said.

"We're fairly close right now," Dole said with a laugh.

With his plan dead, President Clinton has embraced Mitchell's proposal as the least he could accept. It aims to cover 95 percent of Americans by 2000, requiring employers to pay part of their workers' premiums if the goal is not reached.

Appearing on C-SPAN, first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton said she still believes Congress will pass a health reform bill this year.

"That is what we think will be done," she said. If not, she added, "we'll keep on going" with efforts to reform health insurance.

Woodstock dies with a smile

SAUGERTIES, N.Y. (AP) — Its energy spent, the Woodstock Nation of 1994 lumbered home today from the sloppy festival grounds like a column of walking dead.

They died smiling.

For all the rain and mud, the filthy toilets and lack of showers, the delays and organizational foulups, there were few regrets. Tired, wet and hungry, people left in a sort of grumbling bliss.

"It's been awesome. This is going to go down in history," said Joe Walsh of Richfield, Conn. "I'll remember it — how long will I remember it? Forever, I guess."

But it wasn't all peace and love in this instant city of 350,000.

Some who bought the $135 tickets never got in, stranded in parking lots miles from the site when shuttle bus service unraveled. As many as 150,000 people got in free as security slackened.

Others fled bad vibes.

Gail Tosh, 26, of Baltimore arrived Saturday morning and left just a few hours later without seeing any of the bands.

"It's violent, it's scary," she said by telephone from her mother's house in Syracuse.

Peter Gabriel closed the show early today with "Biko," his tribute to the martyred South African activist, Stephen Biko.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Huge deficit not an inheritance

NEW YORK (AP) — It's not true that Benjamin Chavis inherited a $2.7 million deficit when he took over as executive director of the NAACP, according to his predecessor, Benjamin Hooks.

Hooks says in the Aug. 22 issue of Newsweek that he left the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People with a $600,000 surplus.

"It's not a matter of Chavis versus Hooks," he said. "It's Chavis versus the books."

Chavis has been under pressure to resign for committing up to $332,400 in NAACP money to settle a sexual harassment lawsuit without the consent of the 64-member board of directors.

North Dakota's only abortion clinic targeted

FARGO, N.D. (AP) — Nearly 1,000 demonstrators sang and prayed as they marched on North Dakota's only abortion clinic.

Bishop James S. Sullivan ignored criticism by the clinic's administrator, Jane Bovard, who called the march "incredibly irresponsible" in view of the recent killings at Pensacola, Fla., abortion clinics.

"We had this planned for months," Sullivan said. "We are a praying people."

A doctor and his escort were gunned down July 29 in Pensacola. A doctor at another Pensacola clinic was shot to death by an abortion opponent 17 months earlier.

Two federal marshals, posted at the clinic since July 30, sat in their cars out back.

Babbitt calls for attention to prevention

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt spent the weekend fighting fires, then opened fire on the people who cause them.

Babbitt, who renewed his firefighters' certification this spring, said Sunday that it's time to pay more attention to prevention and education.

"It's kind of ironic, more and more people feel the best place to live is out in the woods away from your neighbors, surrounded by tall trees and chaparral," said Babbitt, who helped battle a 1,300-acre fire near Reno.

"We need to talk about firebreaks and building codes and be a little more serious about that, otherwise the costs will go up," he said.

Overall, the National Interagency Fire Center said, firefighters were battling 26 major blazes that have burned across nearly 300,000 acres in California, Montana, Idaho, Oregon, Utah, Washington and Nevada.

Mexico's ruling party promises clean election

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The ruling party's candidate for president told hundreds of thousands of Mexicans he will win an Aug. 21 election cleanly, vowing as he closed his campaign to break with a past marred by fraud.

Ernesto Zedillo, addressing a throng of chanting supporters in Mexico City's main square on Sunday, vowed his would be a decisive victory for the 65-year governing Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI.

Favored in polls to succeed President Carlos Salinas de Gortari, the candidate said he will not be the one to break the party's 65-year unbeaten streak of presidential victories.

"We call for democracy with dignity, for clean and legal elections," shouted Zedillo, pledging to allow a fair vote as he spoke to a crowd estimated at up to 300,000 people.

Nonetheless, he said his was the winning campaign with a proposal to create 1 million new jobs and launch a war on poverty. He said he would win a "clear majority and a clear mandate" to govern until the year 2000.

Salinas, who launched much-touted free-market reforms, leaves office Dec. 1, limited to a single six-year term ending amid criticism that he did too little too late to bring full democracy.

The PRI has not lost a presidential election since its 1929 emergence, often in elections tainted by fraud allegations. But Zedillo's party says Sunday's vote will be the cleanest ever.

Nonetheless, many domestic and foreign observers are waiting to see.

"A credible election is the issue in this election," said Roderic Camp, a Mexico expert at Tulane University who says a nation embarked on a hemispheric trade treaty with Washington is struggling to open politically.

Still, for many of Mexico's 45.7 million eligible voters, the PRI is the only government they have ever known and any other choice unthinkable.

"Zedillo is the only candidate," said Jesus Alvarez, shouting beneath thousands of helium balloons sent aloft Sunday in the red, white and green colors of the PRI and the Mexican flag.

Polls show Zedillo 25 percentage points ahead of his closest competitor, Diego Fernandez de Cevallos. But every vote will count with one in four voters undecided or uncommitted.

This is an aerial view of Mexico City's main plaza, the Zocalo, Saturday during a campaign rally by Mexican presidential candidate Cuauhtemoc Cardenas of the opposition Revolutionary Democratic Party. All three major presidential candidates conducted massive rallies in the plaza.

Opposition watching for fraud like a hawk

CHILPANCINGO, Mexico (AP) — Opposition candidate Cuauhtemoc Cardenas rallied with supporters in western Mexico on Sunday, saying hundreds of his own poll-watchers will be vigilant for any vote fraud in the looming ballot.

Cardenas said his center-left opposition party will, for the first time, have observers at most polling sites in Guerrero and other key states to ensure it is not cheated by the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party.

"We will be in the voting stations and we will monitor all the votes, not just the votes of our party," Cardenas told some 2,000 supporters who crammed the town square of Chilpancingo, 130 miles south of Mexico City.

Cardenas did not speculate on his prospects in the Aug. 21 presidential election, but he said only "clean elections will give legitimacy to the next presidency."

More than 100,000 Mexicans cheered Cardenas on as he closed his campaign in the capital city's main plaza Saturday with a call to oust the ruling party that dealt him a bruising 1988 presidential election loss.

Cardenas claimed at the time he was cheated of victory by Carlos Salinas de Gortari and has said he fears vote fraud could occur in Sunday's balloting. Cardenas is candidate of the Democratic Revolution Party.

The lanky candidate accepted a necklace of flowers in Chilpancingo, capital of western Guerrero state, and joined his party's congressional candidates at a rally Sunday attended by hundreds of peasant farmers.

He also traveled to the nearby town of Iguala, where critics said the ruling party has sought votes through handouts of fertilizers and cardboard boxes of tortillas and beans.

"This kind of thing is directed at the humble people in the villages," complained Antonio Rodriguez, a former PRI loyalist who said he would turn his back on the ruling party in this election.

One struggling farmer said he was tired of unfulfilled promises by the ruling party of new irrigation canals and farm aid.

"We used to greet these candidates with a big barbecue, but then they would make these promises and we would never see them again," said Cristobal Martinez.

Martinez hails from the Guerrero village of Cuacoyula, one of thousands of rural hamlets key to the voting. As many as one fourth of the 45.7 million eligible voters are undecided or uncommitted.

People heading to the Chilpancingo rally watched as a caravan of more than 70 buses carried PRI supporters the other way on the highway to Mexico City and a rally by its front-running candidate, Ernesto Zedillo.

An estimated 300,000 people attended that rally in which Zedillo vowed to notch a decisive but clean victory for the PRI.

Hundreds of thousands of supporters of Mexican presidential candidate Cuauhtemoc Cardenas of the opposition Revolutionary Party carry a half-mile long banner bearing the candidates name through the streets of Mexico City Saturday.

Thousands head church's call to protest birth control program

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — In a show of force, the Roman Catholic Church mustered thousands Sunday to protest the government's birth control program and to demand a boycott of a U.N. conference on population next month.

Police estimated the crowd at nearly 200,000, smaller than the 1 million some church leaders had expected. The protesters included a large number of students from Catholic schools who said teachers had ordered them to attend.

Former Presidents Corason Aquino and Diosdado Macapagal attended the rally. Mrs. Aquino had said her presence was not a challenge to the government of President Fidel Ramos but an affirmation of "family values."

Churches throughout the city canceled afternoon Masses to encourage a large turnout. Another rally was held in Cebu, the country's second-largest city, about 350 miles southeast of Manila.

During a homily, Cardinal Jaime L. Sin, archbishop of Manila, called on the government to abandon its population program, which is limited to counseling and distribution of free contraceptives.

The cardinal condemned the use of condoms and accused the government of promoting pornography, homosexuality and immorality under the guise of sex education.

He urged Filipinos to reject "the degenerate sexual mores prevalent in so-called developed countries, (which) condition us to accept abortion as a means of family planning."

The cardinal also repeated his demand that the government boycott next month's U.N. Conference on Population and Development in Cairo, Egypt.

Steers hitting hard in workouts

By DAVE HARGRAVE
Sports Editor

A lot of key players from last year's team are gone, but that doesn't mean Big Spring Steer football practices are missing anything.

In fact, they have a little bit extra, if you ask senior wing back/safety Brian Burchett.

"We're getting really physical out here," Burchett said as he walked off the field after Thursday's workouts. "I don't remember it being this physical last year. Everybody's going hard. All of the young guys, they've been going hard. I've been really impressed with them since last season."

Last season is just a memory - a junior varsity memory for many of the new Steers. A Steer fan might find it painful to read some of names that have graduated or left since last season - Wes Hughes, Todd Parrish, Torbin Lancaster, Louis Bustamante, Lonnie Jackson. Those five produced big numbers, but many more players will be missed, including three that were supposed to be back - Harvey Simpson, Timmy Banks and Tedrick McCallister.

Big Spring coach Dwight Butler didn't plan on his fastest runner, Simpson, moving. That put the Steers minus one running back, and they lost a flanker when Banks moved. Banks is back in town, but his status with the Steers is a question mark, Butler said. McCallister quit school, which left the Steers without an up-and-coming star at tight end.

Those losses don't hurt as much as you might think.

"It's made no big deal at all,"

Burchett said. "I think we've made up for it in excess. I don't want to cut down the guys that we're on the team last year, but this year we've got more speed, more strength."

The Steers got a break when Quentin Dickson came back to town. Dickson, a 5-foot-9, 180-pound senior, lived and played football in Big Spring through the eighth grade before moving to Clovis, N.M. He could make up for the loss of Simpson.

Butler said: "Quentin's bigger than Harvey. He's not as fast, but he's a power runner. We're really blessed on that deal, that he moved in."

Daniel Franks, a 6-4, 180-pound junior who's better known around the locker room as Bubba, can take McCallister's spot at tight end, and Burchett (5-10, 170) will be at wing back to fill the hole Banks left.

"With a little more time, Bubba, and he's got two years left, has a chance to be better than Tedrick," Butler said. Keep in mind Butler recently said McCallister "had all the tools to be a major college tight end."

As for Burchett, Butler said: "We played him at wing some, but we made him strictly defense last year because he was so valuable there. He's really made a fine athlete of himself, and he's really worked to improve. His catches have come around 5,000 degrees - he's made some unbelievable catches so far. He's worked all summer, he's gained maybe 30 pounds, and he's going to take advantage of every opportunity he gets."

The Steers apparently have all the tools in workouts, too - at least in Butler's eyes. The lack of returning players has the Steers in a bind, but

Butler has liked the view from his corner the first 10 days of practice.

"We're fortunate to have the caliber of kids to be able to step up and take the place of Harvey, Timmy or Tedrick," Butler said. "The only thing we really lose there is Harvey's speed, but what we lost in speed we gain in size."

The Steers will have other holes to fill in the coming weeks, but so far Butler is pleased with what he's seen on the field.

"We may start slower earlier in the morning, but where a lot of teams fade, in the last few minutes of that last workout, that's when this team plays smarter, plays harder. That's a gift - that's pretty rare from what I've seen. Every day, the second workout is better than the first."

Price laps field; takes PGA title

TULSA, Okla. (AP) - Golf isn't easy. It never is.

But it's getting easier for Nick Price.

"All I have to do is go out and play," he said. "I don't have anything to prove to anyone."

Emphasizing the point, the amiable product of Zimbabwe went out and played better than anyone else has in recent history in the PGA Championship.

Price proved he is the best player in the world today, winning Sunday by a six-shot margin with the lowest medal score ever posted in an American major championship, 269.

Price, who led or shared the lead throughout the tournament, became the first man since Tom Watson in 1982 to score consecutive victories in golf's majors when he threw a front-running 3-under-par 67 at an overwhelmed field at Southern Hills.

Corey Pavin was a distant second at 275, with Phil Mickelson next at 276. Greg Norman, Nick Faldo and John Cook followed at 277. No one got closer than two shots over the last 18 holes, and after Price scored consecutive birdies on the third and fourth holes, no one was closer than four.

Price's victory came on the heels of his triumph last month in the British Open at Turnberry, Scotland, and marked his third Big Four title.

The string - he calls it "my second career" - started with his 1992 PGA victory. It now includes 16 worldwide triumphs in the last 24 months and has established him as the leading player on the planet.

There were indications he was setting new targets, new goals for himself. Asked to define a truly great golfer, Price quickly replied:

"Win all four majors."

Only Gene Sarazen, Ben Hogan, Gary Player and Jack Nicklaus have done that. Price amended his statement to include Byron Nelson, Sam Snead, Arnold Palmer and Tom Watson.

The first qualification could serve as his targets - the Masters and U.S. Open.

The last qualification sounds very much like Price, who has won around the world, now ranks No. 1 and is, without question, the best in the world.

Nick Price hugs the Wanamaker Trophy after winning the PGA Championship on Sunday in Tulsa, Okla. Price defeated Corey Pavin by six strokes.

'Boys, Oilers talk of the town in Mexico City

MEXICO CITY (AP) - Soccer is called football in Mexico. But there will be no confusion when the Dallas Cowboys and Houston Oilers play the American style of football in Aztec Stadium tonight.

The two American teams are known in Mexico, especially the Cowboys, who have their own fan club and a Spanish edition of the Cowboy's weekly newsletter.

An expected crowd of 108,000 would be a record for an NFL game, breaking the mark of 105,840 set in 1947 when the Chicago Bears played the College All-Stars at Soldier Field in Chicago.

"I don't know that 108,000 fans will make any more noise than 100,000," Cowboys quarterback Troy Aikman said. "But the crowd that's turned out for this game sure makes it special for us."

The Cowboys, winners of the past two Super Bowls, and the Oilers, who have been to the playoffs seven straight years, are playing for the second time in the NFL's American Bowl series. The Oilers won in Tokyo in 1992.

The big turnout has NFL Commissioner Paul Tagliabue discussing future expansion possibilities. However, expansion isn't imminent, he said.

"I think response to the game has raised our expectations," Tagliabue said. "This game gives us expectations that it (expansion to Mexico) could be realistic."

Players grumbled about the traffic and long ride to Sunday's practice session, but officials liked the idea of marketing the NFL in the world's most populous city.

"It's going to be big for NFL purposes, and it's a big trip because you're playing the world champions," Oilers wide receiver Ernest Givins said. "But remember, it's an exhibition game."

Aztec Stadium, normally reserved for major soccer matches, concerts and fights, has been converted into a football field, complete with Oilers and Cowboys logos.

But the 12-foot chain-link fence topped with barbed wire remains to keep overzealous fans in check.

More than 550 sports writers and broadcasters have credentials for the game, the 23rd in the American Bowl series that started in 1986 with the Cowboys and Bears playing in London.

The Oilers will attempt to add to their streak of five straight preseason victories.

"The travel isn't as bad as we had for Tokyo and London," Cowboys safety Bill Bates said. "It's just like a regular away (game), not that bad of a flight."

It will be the first NFL game played in Mexico City since 1978, when the Philadelphia Eagles played the New Orleans Saints at University Stadium.

Oilers offensive coordinator Dick Coury, a member of the Eagles staff in 1978, doesn't expect players will have any problems performing in Aztec Stadium's altitude at 7,347 feet.

"The more you talk about the altitude, the worse it gets," Coury said. "I don't think there will be any problems."

Since it's a preseason game, there will be plenty of substitutions so players won't have the exertion of a regular-season game.

NFL rushing champion Emmitt Smith could get his first playing time of the preseason, and the Cowboys also want running back Lincoln Coleman to get plenty of work as he gets back into shape.

The starting quarterbacks, Aikman and Houston's Cody Carlson, won't get much playing time. It will be a game of spotlighting backups.

Cowboy backup Rodney Peete, who had an off performance Sunday against the Los Angeles Raiders, will try to rebound. Bucky Richardson and Sean Salisbury will continue their battle for the Oilers' backup spot.

Unser takes Miller 200, Martin wins Bud at the Glen

LEXINGTON, Ohio (AP) - Al Unser led a Team Penske sweep of the first three positions in Sunday's Miller Genuine Draft 200, which turned on a stop-and-go penalty against his teammate Paul Tracy.

The third Penske team member, Emerson Fittipaldi, who won here in 1992 and last year, was third. Robby Gordon finished fourth and Michael Andretti fifth.

Tracy, who had led all but one lap, was penalized by CART officials for passing Gordon under a yellow caution flag on lap 53. The penalty forced Tracy to make an extra pit stop, then immediately return to the race course.

The pass occurred on the second turn of the track in a narrow area known as the keyhole. Teo Fabi's car had stalled and was off the course with a tow truck blocking part of the racing surface.

Tracy's brakes apparently locked when he tried to slow down. So did the brakes on Gordon's car, which slid sideways, allowing Tracy to get past him along the inside of the track. Gordon quickly recovered and got back into the racing line in front of Unser.

Martin wins NASCAR event

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. (AP) - Mark Martin recaptured his Watkins Glen magic with a dominating victory Sunday in the Budweiser at the Glen NASCAR stock car race.

Winning from the pole for the second straight year on the 2.45-mile, 11-turn road course,

Martin also gained his first victory of the season and the 13th of his Winston Cup career.

Martin, driving for Roush Racing, led 75 of the 90 laps and easily fought off a late challenge from Ernie Irvan, winning the battle of Ford Thunderbirds by 0.88 seconds - about four car-lengths.

Dale Earnhardt, the six-time and defending series champion, finished third, and held the 27-point lead he had coming into the 20th of 31 races this season.

Martin was cruising along with a lead hovering near three seconds when the fourth full-course caution flag waved on lap 81 after Hut Stricklin spun, hit a guardrail and stopped on the track, nearly blocking the racing surface at the exit to turn four.

Stricklin eventually got his engine restarted and drove slowly to the pits, but that yellow flag allowed Irvan to move right up to Martin's rear bumper for the restart on lap 85.

When the green flag waved, Irvan tried an inside move and an outside move as the leaders raced into the first turn. The cars nearly touched, but Martin steadily pulled ahead as they reached the long back straightaway.

"I hated to see that last caution because I knew Ernie was going to try everything he could think of to get by me on the restart," Martin said.

The winner, who earned $85,100 - including a $22,800 bonus from Unocal for winning from the pole - averaged 93.75 mph in a race slowed by caution for 12 laps.

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) - Tramine Lacy gave up 11 walks but only one hit to lead Clute-Lake Jackson, Texas, to a 9-7 victory Sunday over Jefferson City, Mo., in the first round of the 13th Babe Ruth World Series.

In a later game, Manchester, N.H., rode the arm of pitcher Ryan O'Shea to eliminate intrastate rival Concord 6-0 in the 13th Babe Ruth World Series.

In an earlier game, Isaac Precido singled in Anthony Salvemini in the seventh inning to lift Woodland, Calif., to a 6-5 victory over Ashland, Ky.

In the Texas-Missouri contest, Jefferson City rallied with four runs in the sixth inning, but Andrew Andrews came in to pitch for the remaining 1 2-3 innings to secure the victory. Matt Williams took the loss.

Dream Team II wins gold

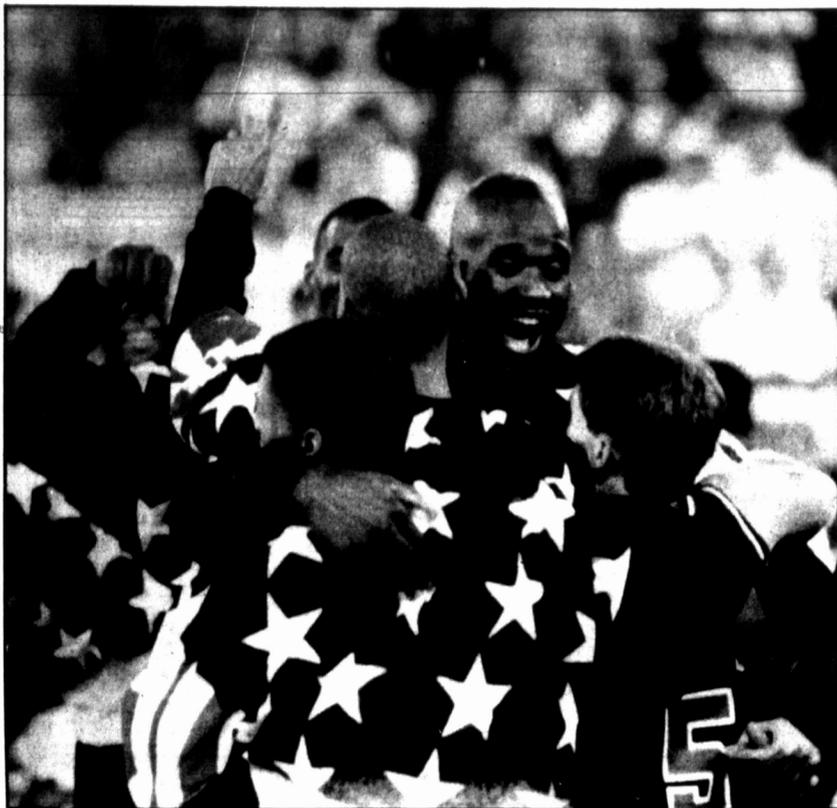

TORONTO (AP) — Not even the original Dream Team had a performance like this.

Dream Team II scored 42 points in the first 10 minutes and 73 in the first half on the way to a 137-91 victory over Russia in the gold-medal game of the World Championship of Basketball.

Scoring 137 points in a 40-minute game — which was 10 more points than Dream Team I ever managed — is the equivalent of 164 in a regulation 48-minute NBA contest. Sunday's outcome gave the Americans a 120.1 scoring average for the tournament, eclipsing the original Dream Team's 117.3 in the 1992 Olympics.

Shaquille O'Neal averaged 18 points and 8.5 rebounds for the tournament and was named Most Valuable Player.

Dominique Wilkins, the oldest American player at 34, led the United States with 20 points.

Baseball, boxing are nothing but major messes

The baseball strike makes you remember - the world is still far from perfect.

Let's take a moment to talk about baseball, then a little boxing.

Call this a grab bag of thoughts and ideas, but I get the feeling the strike will do wonders for football.

From August through mid-October, what other sports capture as many imaginations as football and baseball?

I can see this strike as the focus of many conversations for years to come because the number one question will be: "I wonder what might have been?"

Think about it - Bagwell, Williams, Griffey and several other players were on the verge of baseball history. It has been quite a while since so many players dominated the game at one time.

What else is there to fill the void the strike leaves? Right now millions of fans are probably feeling like CBS did when Fox secured the rights to broadcast NFL football games.

Will the strike cause the spotlight to shift to the minor leagues? Will season ticket holders get a refund? Should there be a change in Major League Baseball's antitrust laws?

There are a lot of unanswered questions to think about, but I have to admit that I will miss baseball too.

I never choose baseball over track, football, tennis or auto racing, but then again, the strike makes you realize that you don't miss something until it's not there anymore.

As far as boxing is concerned, I'm sure that George Foreman is feeling just like millions of baseball fans right about now. If there needs to be regulations anywhere, boxing is the place to begin. The only thing I wanted to see worse than Larry Holmes' final retirement from the sport was George Foreman fighting Michael Moorer.

All of a sudden, I open a newspaper and see the WBA won't sanction the fight and threatened to strip Moorer of his WBA belt even if he fought Foreman for just the IBF title. Give me a break!

How many times in the last 10 months can you remember any two of the top 10 heavyweight contenders fighting each other?

The WBA, IBF, and WBC are about making money, so I know they can't be questioning Foreman's age, 45, or his ability to put up a good fight because he has proven that he can still fight. He's not as fast as he was in 1974, but he still has the power.

Who besides Muhammad Ali can you ever remember hurting Foreman?

Don King and pay-per-view have done irreparable damage to the sport of boxing. I'm just praying for the return of Riddick Bowe. The man did not lose to Evander Holyfield in their title rematch.

I like Holyfield. He was a good champion, but he was given something he didn't win.

Remember Sugar Ray Leonard and Thomas Hearns? They fought three times and Hearns never lost, but we're talking about a subjective sport and the judges saw fit to keep the legacy of Leonard alive longer than it should have been.

Let's look at things for a moment. We live in an imperfect world full of imperfect people, even those people in the world of sports.

The one true champion, a champion without an ounce of competition, except for three or four on-again-off-again players is tennis' Steffi Graf. Unless that small list of others can find the right button to push, Graf may have to start praying for the return of Monica Seles.

Seles is out because of what someone did to her. Who's to blame for the baseball strike?

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Chang wins second ATP

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Michael Chang beat Stefan Edberg to win the ATP Championship in a reprise of last year's final.

Chang, a 6-2, 7-5 winner, is the $1.72 million tournament's first repeat titlist since Mats Wilander captured the crown in 1983-84.

400 runner extends win streak to 35

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Michael Johnson extended his winning streak in the 400 meters to 35 since 1990 at the Pan Africa-USA meet.

Johnson's performance highlighted the final program of the two-day meet, which also included upset victories by Mark Everret in the men's 800 and Regina Jacobs in the women's 1,500, Dennis Mitchell's win in the men's 100 and Gwen Torrence's second triumph of the competition in the women's 100.

Bowe's return marred by controversy

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Riddick Bowe returned to the ring in controversial fashion, hitting Buster Mathis Jr. while he was on one knee and knocking him onto his back.

The punch came in the fourth round, and when Mathis could not continue the scheduled 10-round bout was ruled a "no contest."

Navratilova won't be playing in U.S. Open

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Martina Navratilova, a four-time U.S. Open champion and the winningest tennis player in history, said Sunday she will not compete in this year's U.S. Open.

Navratilova said she doesn't feel she is in good enough shape to play in the year's final Grand Slam tournament, which starts Aug. 29 in New York.

"My 37-year-old body is telling me to play on indoor surfaces, and I think it's time to listen," she said.

"I also need some time at home to rest and get in shape. I've only been home for two days since May, and I want to spend some time preparing physically and mentally for the four or five other tournaments I will play before I retire from singles at the end of the year."

Will wins LPGA event

BEAVERCREEK, Ohio (AP) — Maggie Will had to roll in a twisting 24-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole to force a playoff.

She survived a bogey on the first playoff hole when Jill

Briles-Hinton and Alicia Dibos also bogeyed. Will then won by knocking in a 15-foot birdie putt on the second extra hole Sunday to win the inaugural Children's Medical Center LPGA Classic.

Jacklin wins first PGA event since '72

ADA, Mich. (AP) — Tony Jacklin was invited by a sponsor to play in the Senior PGA Tour's First of America Classic at Egypt Valley Country Club.

Playing in just his fourth Senior Tour event, only five weeks after his 50th birthday, Jacklin won the tournament and $97,500 Sunday afternoon with a final-round 4-under 68.

He finished the tournament, which was shortened to 36 holes after Saturday's round was rained out, at 8-under 136, one stroke ahead of Dave Stockton and two strokes ahead of Jim Albus and the senior tour's career earnings leader, Lee Trevino.

Steers hitting hard in workouts

By DAVE HARGRAVE
Sports Editor

A lot of key players from last year's team are gone, but that doesn't mean Big Spring Steer football practices are missing anything.

In fact, they have a little bit extra, if you ask senior wing back/safety Brian Burchett.

"We're getting really physical out here," Burchett said as he walked off the field after Thursday's workouts. "I don't remember it being this physical last year. Everybody's going hard. All of the young guys, they've been going hard. I've been really impressed with them since last season."

Last season is just a memory - a junior varsity memory for many of the new Steers. A Steer fan might find it painful to read some of names that have graduated or left since last season - Wes Hughes, Todd Parrish, Torbin Lancaster, Louis Bustamante, Lonnie Jackson. Those five produced big numbers, but many more players will be missed, including three that were supposed to be back - Harvey Simpson, Timmy Banks and Tedrick McCallister.

Big Spring coach Dwight Butler didn't plan on his fastest runner, Simpson, moving. That put the Steers minus one running back, and they lost a flanker when Banks moved. Banks is back in town, but his status with the Steers is a question mark, Butler said. McCallister quit school, which left the Steers without an up-and-coming star at tight end.

Those losses don't hurt as much as you might think. "It's made no big deal at all,"

Burchett said. "I think we've made up for it in excess. I don't want to cut down the guys that we're on the team last year, but this year we've got more speed, more strength."

The Steers got a break when Quentin Dickson came back to town. Dickson, a 5-foot-9, 180-pound senior, lived and played football in Big Spring through the eighth grade before moving to Clovis, N.M. He could make up for the loss of Simpson.

Butler said: "Quentin's bigger than Harvey. He's not as fast, but he's a power runner. We're really blessed on that deal, that he moved in."

Daniel Franks, a 6-4, 180-pound junior who's better known around the locker room as Bubba, can take McCallister's spot at tight end, and Burchett (5-10, 170) will be at wing back to fill the hole Banks left.

"With a little more time, Bubba, and he's got two years left, has a chance to be better than Tedrick," Butler said. Keep in mind Butler recently said McCallister "had all the tools to be a major college tight end."

As for Burchett, Butler said: "We played him at wing some, but we made him strictly defense last year because he was so valuable there. He's really made a fine athlete of himself, and he's really worked to improve. His catches have come around 5,000 degrees - he's made some unbelievable catches so far. He's worked all summer, he's gained maybe 30 pounds, and he's going to take advantage of every opportunity he gets."

The Steers apparently have all the tools in workouts, too - at least in Butler's eyes. The lack of returning players has the Steers in a bind, but

Butler has liked the view from his corner the first 10 days of practice.

"We're fortunate to have the caliber of kids to be able to step up and take the place of Harvey, Timmy or Tedrick," Butler said. "The only thing we really lose there is Harvey's speed, but what we lost in speed we gain in size."

The Steers will have other holes to fill in the coming weeks, but so far Butler is pleased with what he's seen on the field.

"We may start slower earlier in the morning, but where a lot of teams fade, in the last few minutes of that last workout, that's when this team plays smarter, plays harder. That's a gift - that's pretty rare from what I've seen. Every day, the second workout is better than the first."

Price laps field; takes PGA title

TULSA, Okla. (AP) - Golf isn't easy. It never is.

But it's getting easier for Nick Price.

"All I have to do is go out and play," he said. "I don't have anything to prove to anyone."

Emphasizing the point, the amiable product of Zimbabwe went out and played better than anyone else has in recent history in the PGA Championship.

Price proved he is the best player in the world today, winning Sunday by a six-shot margin with the lowest medal score ever posted in an American major championship, 269.

Price, who led or shared the lead throughout the tournament, became the first man since Tom Watson in 1982 to score consecutive victories in golf's majors when he threw a front-running 3-under-par 67 at an overwhelmed field at Southern Hills.

Corey Pavin was a distant second at 275, with Phil Mickelson next at 276. Greg Norman, Nick Faldo and John Cook followed at 277. No one got closer than two shots over the last 18 holes, and after Price scored consecutive birdies on the third and fourth holes, no one was closer than four.

Price's victory came on the heels of his triumph last month in the British Open at Turnberry, Scotland, and marked his third Big Four title.

The string - he calls it "my second career" - started with his 1992 PGA victory. It now includes 16 worldwide triumphs in the last 24 months and has established him as the leading player on the planet.

There were indications he was setting new targets, new goals for himself. Asked to define a truly great golfer, Price quickly replied:

"Win all four majors."

Only Gene Sarazen, Ben Hogan, Gary Player and Jack Nicklaus have done that. Price amended his statement to include Byron Nelson, Sam Snead, Arnold Palmer and Tom Watson.

The first qualification could serve as his targets - the Masters and U.S. Open.

The last qualification sounds very much like Price, who has won around the world, now ranks No. 1 and is, without question, the best in the world.

Nick Price hugs the Wanamaker Trophy after winning the PGA Championship on Sunday in Tulsa, Okla. Price defeated Corey Pavin by six strokes.

'Boys, Oilers talk of the town in Mexico City

MEXICO CITY (AP) - Soccer is called football in Mexico. But there will be no confusion when the Dallas Cowboys and Houston Oilers play the American style of football in Aztec Stadium tonight.

The two American teams are known in Mexico, especially the Cowboys, who have their own fan club and a Spanish edition of the Cowboy's weekly newsletter.

An expected crowd of 108,000 would be a record for an NFL game, breaking the mark of 105,840 set in 1947 when the Chicago Bears played the College All-Stars at Soldier Field in Chicago.

"I don't know that 108,000 fans will make any more noise than 100,000," Cowboys quarterback Troy Aikman said. "But the crowd that's turned out for this game sure makes it special for us."

The Cowboys, winners of the past two Super Bowls, and the Oilers, who have been in the playoffs seven straight years, are playing for the second time in the NFL's American Bowl series. The Oilers won in Tokyo in 1992.

The big turnout has NFL Commissioner Paul Tagliabue discussing future expansion possibilities. However, expansion isn't imminent, he said.

"I think response to the game has raised our expectations," Tagliabue said. "This game gives us expectations that it (expansion to Mexico) could be realistic."

Players grumbled about the traffic and long ride to Sunday's practice session, but officials liked the idea of marketing the NFL in the world's most populous city.

"It's going to be big for NFL purposes, and it's a big trip because you're playing the world champions," Oilers wide receiver Ernest Givins said. "But remember, it's an exhibition game."

Aztec Stadium, normally reserved for major soccer matches, concerts and fights, has been converted into a football field, complete with Oilers and Cowboys logos.

But the 12-foot chain-link fence topped with barbed wire remains to keep overzealous fans in check.

More than 550 sports writers and broadcasters have credentials for the game, the 23rd in the American Bowl series that started in 1986 with the Cowboys and Bears playing in London.

The Oilers will attempt to add to their streak of five straight preseason victories.

"The travel isn't as bad as we had for Tokyo and London," Cowboys safety Bill Bates said. "It's just like a regular away (game), not that bad of a flight."

It will be the first NFL game played in Mexico City since 1978, when the Philadelphia Eagles played the New Orleans Saints at University Stadium.

Oilers offensive coordinator Dick Coury, a member of the Eagles staff in 1978, doesn't expect players will have any problems performing in Aztec Stadium's altitude at 7,347 feet.

"The more you talk about the altitude, the worse it gets," Coury said. "I don't think there will be any problems."

Since it's a preseason game, there will be plenty of substitutions so players won't have the exertion of a regular-season game.

NFL rushing champion Emmitt Smith could get his first playing time of the preseason, and the Cowboys also want running back Lincoln Coleman to get plenty of work as he gets back into shape.

The starting quarterbacks, Aikman and Houston's Cody Carlson, won't get much playing time. It will be a game of spotlighting backups.

Cowboy backup Rodney Peete, who had an off performance Sunday against the Los Angeles Raiders, will try to rebound, Bucky Richardson and Sean Salisbury will continue their battle for the Oilers' backup spot.

Unser takes Miller 200, Martin wins Bud at the Glen

LEXINGTON, Ohio (AP) - Al Unser led a Team Penske sweep of the first three positions in Sunday's Miller Genuine Draft 200, which turned on a stop-and-go penalty against his teammate Paul Tracy.

The third Penske team member, Emerson Fittipaldi, who won here in 1992 and last year, was third. Robby Gordon finished fourth and Michael Andretti fifth.

Tracy, who had led all but one lap, was penalized by CART officials for passing Gordon under a yellow caution flag on lap 53. The penalty forced Tracy to make an extra pit stop, then immediately return to the race course.

The pass occurred on the second turn of the track in a narrow area known as the keyhole. Teo Fabi's car had stalled and was off the course with a tow truck blocking part of the racing surface.

Tracy's brakes apparently locked when he tried to slow down. So did the brakes on Gordon's car, which slid sideways, allowing Tracy to get past him along the inside of the track. Gordon quickly recovered and got back into the racing line in front of Unser.

Martin wins NASCAR event

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. (AP) - Mark Martin recaptured his Watkins Glen magic with a dominating victory Sunday in the Budweiser at the Glen NASCAR stock car race.

Winning from the pole for the second straight year on the 2.45-mile, 11-turn road course,

Martin also gained his first victory of the season and the 13th of his Winston Cup career.

Martin, driving for Roush Racing, led 75 of the 90 laps and easily fought off a late challenge from Ernie Ivan, winning the battle of Ford Thunderbirds by 0.88 seconds - about four car-lengths.

Dale Earnhardt, the six-time and defending series champion, finished third, and held the 27-point lead he had coming into the 20th of 31 races this season. Martin was cruising along with a lead hovering near three seconds when the fourth full-course caution flag waved on lap 81 after Hut Stricklin spun, hit a guardrail and stopped on the track, nearly blocking the racing surface at the exit to turn four.

Stricklin eventually got his engine restarted and drove slowly to the pits, but that yellow flag allowed Ivan to move right up to Martin's rear bumper for the restart on lap 85.

When the green flag waved, Ivan tried an inside move and an outside move as the leaders raced into the first turn. The cars nearly touched, but Martin steadily pulled ahead as they reached the long back straightaway.

"I hated to see that last caution because I knew Ernie was going to try everything he could think of to get by me on the restart," Martin said.

The winner, who earned $85,100 - including a $22,800 bonus from Unocal for winning from the pole - averaged 93.75 mph in a race slowed by caution for 12 laps.

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) - Tramine Lacy gave up 11 walks but only one hit to lead Clute-Lake Jackson, Texas, to a 9-7 victory Sunday over Jefferson City, Mo., in the first round of the 13th Babe Ruth World Series.

In a later game, Manchester, N.H., rode the arm of pitcher Ryan O'Shea to eliminate intrastate rival Concord 6-0 in the 13th Babe Ruth World Series.

In an earlier game, Isaac Precido singled in Anthony Salvemini in the seventh inning to lift Woodland, Calif., to a 6-5 victory over Ashland, Ky.

In the Texas-Missouri contest, Jefferson City rallied with four runs in the sixth inning, but Andrew Andrews came in to pitch for the remaining 1 2-3 innings to secure the victory. Matt Roberts took the loss.

Dream Team II wins gold

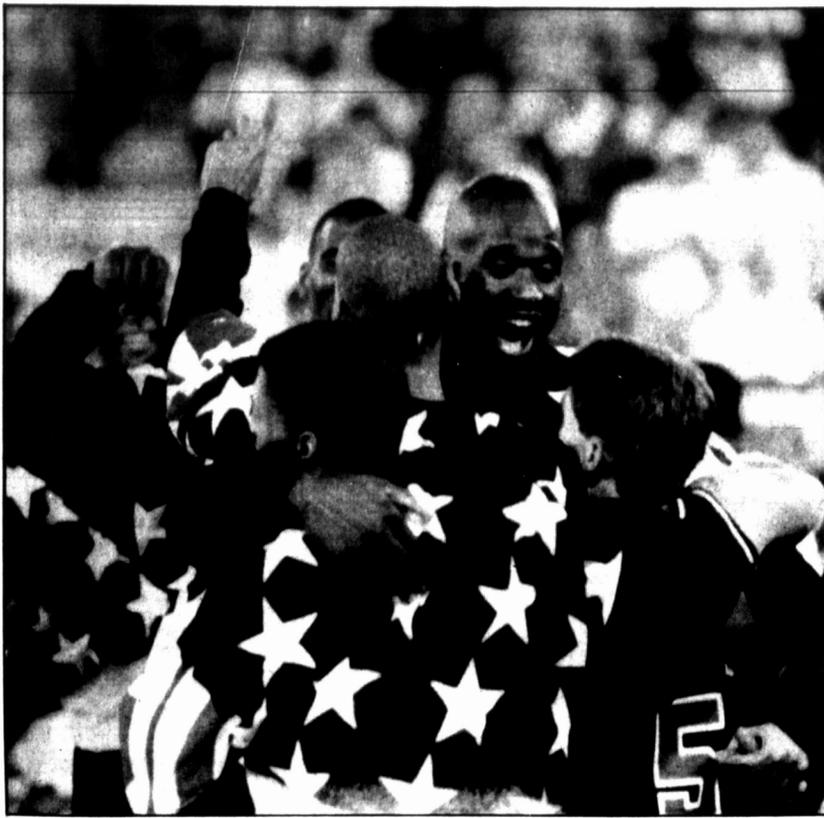

TORONTO (AP) — Not even the original Dream Team had a performance like this.

Dream Team II scored 42 points in the first 10 minutes and 73 in the first half on the way to a 137-91 victory over Russia in the gold-medal game of the World Championship of Basketball.

Scoring 137 points in a 40-minute game — which was 10 more points than Dream Team I ever managed — is the equivalent of 164 in a regulation 48-minute NBA contest. Sunday's outcome gave the Americans a 120.1 scoring average for the tournament, eclipsing the original Dream Team's 117.3 in the 1992 Olympics.

Shaquille O'Neal averaged 18 points and 8.5 rebounds for the tournament and was named Most Valuable Player.

Dominique Wilkins, the oldest American player at 34, led the United States with 20 points.

Baseball, boxing are nothing but major messes

The baseball strike makes you remember - the world is still far from perfect.

Let's take a moment to talk about baseball, then a little boxing.

Call this a grab bag of thoughts and ideas, but I get the feeling the strike will do wonders for football. From August through mid-October, what other sports capture as many imaginations as football and baseball?

I can see this strike as the focus of many conversations for years to come because the number one question will be: "I wonder what might have been?" Think about it - Bagwell, Williams, Griffey and several other players were on the verge of baseball history. It has been quite a while since so many players dominated the game at one time.

What else is there to fill the void the strike leaves? Right now millions of fans are probably feeling like CBS did when Fox secured the rights to broadcast NFC football games.

Will the strike cause the spotlight to shift to the minor leagues? Will season ticket holders get a refund? Should there be a change in Major League Baseball's antitrust laws?

There are a lot of unanswered questions to think about, but I have to admit that I will miss baseball too.

I never choose baseball over track, football, tennis or auto racing, but then again, the strike makes you realize that you don't miss something until it's not there anymore.

As far as boxing is concerned, I'm sure that George Foreman is feeling just like millions of baseball fans right about now. If there needs to be regulations anywhere, boxing is the place to begin.

The only thing I wanted to see worse than Larry Holmes' final retirement from the sport was George Foreman fighting Michael Moorer.

All of a sudden, I open a newspaper and see the WBA won't sanction the fight and threatened to strip Moorer of his WBA belt even if he fought Foreman for just the IBF title. Give me a break!

How many times in the last 10 months can you remember any two of the top 10 heavyweight contenders fighting each other?

The WBA, IBF, and WBC are about making money, so I know they can't be questioning Foreman's age, 45, or his ability to put up a good fight because he has proven that he can still fight. He's not as fast as he was in 1974, but he still has the power.

Who besides Muhammad Ali can you ever remember hurting Foreman?

Don King and pay-per-view have done irreparable damage to the sport of boxing. I'm just praying for the return of Riddick Bowe. The man did not lose to Evander Holyfield in their title rematch.

I like Holyfield. He was a good champion, but he was given something he didn't win.

Remember Sugar Ray Leonard and Thomas Hearns? They fought three times and Hearns never lost, but we're talking about a subjective sport and the judges saw fit to keep the legacy of Leonard alive longer than it should have been.

Let's look at things for a moment. We live in an imperfect world full of imperfect people, even those people in the world of sports.

The one true champion is a champion without an ounce of competition, except for three or four on-again-off-again players in tennis' Steffi Graf. Unless that small list of others can find the right button to push, Graf may have to start praying for the return of Monica Seles.

Seles is out because of what someone did to her. Who's to blame for the baseball strike?

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Chang wins second ATP

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Michael Chang beat Stefan Edberg to win the ATP Championship in a reprise of last year's final.

Chang, a 6-2, 7-5 winner, is the $1.72 million tournament's first repeat titlist since Mats Wilander captured the crown in 1983-84.

400 runner extends win streak to 35

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Michael Johnson extended his winning streak in the 400 meters to 35 since 1990 at the Pan Africa-USA meet.

Johnson's performance highlighted the final program of the two-day meet, which also included upset victories by Mark Everett in the men's 800 and Regina Jacobs in the women's 1,500, Dennis Mitchell's win in the men's 100 and Gwen Torrence's second triumph of the competition in the women's 100.

Bowe's return marred by controversy

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Riddick Bowe returned to the ring in controversial fashion, hitting Buster Mathis Jr. while he was on one knee and knocking him onto his back.

The punch came in the fourth round, and when Mathis could not continue the scheduled 10-round bout was ruled a "no contest."

Navratilova won't be playing in U.S. Open

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Martina Navratilova, a four-time U.S. Open champion and the winningest tennis player in history, said Sunday she will not compete in this year's U.S. Open.

Navratilova said she doesn't feel she is in good enough shape to play in the year's final Grand Slam tournament, which starts Aug. 29 in New York.

"My 37-year-old body is telling me to play on indoor surfaces, and I think it's time to listen," she said.

"I also need some time at home to rest and get in shape. I've only been home for two days since May, and I want to spend some time preparing physically and mentally for the four or five other tournaments I will play before I retire from singles at the end of the year."

Will wins PGA event

BEAVERCREEK, Ohio (AP) — Maggie Will had to roll in a twisting 24-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole to force a playoff.

She survived a bogey on the first playoff hole when Jill

Briles-Hinton and Alicia Dibos also bogeyed. Will then won by knocking in a 15-foot birdie putt on the second extra hole Sunday to win the inaugural Children's Medical Center PGA Classic.

Jacklin wins first PGA event since '72

ADA, Mich. (AP) — Tony Jacklin was invited by a sponsor to play in the Senior PGA Tour's First of America Classic at Egypt Valley Country Club.

Playing in just his fourth Senior Tour event, only five weeks after his 50th birthday, Jacklin won the tournament and $97,500 Sunday afternoon with a final-round 4-under 68.

He finished the tournament, which was shortened to 36 holes after Saturday's round was rained out, at 8-under 136, one stroke ahead of Dave Stockton and two strokes ahead of Jim Albus and the senior tour's career earnings leader, Lee Trevino.

HOROSCOPE

FOR TUESDAY, AUG. 16, 1994

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Watch your temper today, as you are under inordinate stress. Ideas abound, and as a result you see things differently. Be more creative in your approach and less cranky. Learn to detach and understand others better. Tonight: Get some exercise. **

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Use care when dealing with another. Feelings could easily be hurt, causing a rift. Creativity is high, as you visualize life on a different level. Listen to your instincts regarding a difficult neighbor. Tonight: Resist getting into a heated discussion. ***

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Push comes to shove, especially with a partner and finances. Let another know your limits, but do so gracefully. Communications will flow if you negotiate with a partner. One-to-one relating is necessary to get past issues. Tonight: Be easy with a difficult associate. ***

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Mars moves into your sign today, making you volatile, energetic and aggressive. Use the energy positively. Partners seek you out and want to talk through a financial situation. Listen carefully. Tonight: Decide what is important to you. **

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your nerves are frazzled. You lose your temper easily. Let your creativity surge, and be more direct. You get opportunities to knock on another's door. Watch a tendency to get into needless trouble. Stay focused. Tonight: Vanish while you can. *

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Others might make provocative statements. Be careful. Gather information. It would be wise not to take a stand today. A friend who needs your opinion seeks you out. Tonight: Have fun. **

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You are forced beyond your limitations. Detach from your domestic life and view the ramifications. Strong energy gives you an additional push, and you make headway. Be clear about what you want. A friend makes the difference. Tonight: Listen to a family member. **

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Communications are active. You might discover that a change in plans is irritating. Seek out news. Review your options and listen to an authority figure. Don't react. Tonight: Talk through a problem. ***

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be sensitive to a partner who comes through for you and cares a lot. Good communications allow you to look at a situation differently. Carefully evaluate an expenditure that involves a partnership. A talk may be needed. Tonight: Work out stress through play. ***

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Much that goes on is behind the scenes. You will get information if you say little. Make your own decisions on spending. You'll get new financial information. Tonight: Claim your power. ****

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Focus on success and your goals. Delineate what's important to you, and allow yourself to go for the bottom line. A work-related project is stimulating. However, you need to balance your work with the rest of your life. Tonight: Vanish. ***

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A matter that comes your way has you reviewing life and analyzing situations differently. Be aware of your choices. A loved one's viewpoint is clarified. Focus on achieving a successful conclusion to a situation. Tonight: Hang out with your friends. ***

IF AUG. 16, 1994 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Inject creativity into your work in the year ahead. You'll know much more about what you want. Listen to your intuition when dealing with others. Your career will thrive if you are willing to put in the hours. Learn to work through stress and channel a self-destructive streak. If you are single, romance will flourish all year. If you are attached, be careful with your temper - you could say hurtful things - and try to be more nurturing. CAPRICORN interests you.

Grandmother curious about role

DEAR ABBY: My son, a college student, was accused of fathering a child last year. He had been seeing this girl casually. She claims the baby girl is definitely his. My son says, "It's possible" - however, he has no desire to see the child or be involved in her life. (I was informed by the girl's mother after the birth of this child.)

The young mother, who has two more years of high school, has opted - with the help of her parents - to keep the child.

Abigail Van Buren
Columnist

What are my duties, rights and responsibilities - both to my son and to my grandchild? I would like to be involved in the child's life, but I do not want to alienate my son. I would like to hear how other grandparents who have been in this situation have handled it. - ON THE FENCE

DEAR ON: I admire your integrity and generosity; however, your son should first determine whether he is indeed the baby's father.

If he is the father, he should consult a lawyer to learn what his legal rights and responsibilities are. Then, you will have all the rights and responsibilities of a grandmother.

DEAR ABBY: You objected to that 15-year-old girl who wanted to pierce her nose, saying she would be left with an unsightly hole in her nose after the ring-in-the-nose fad passes.

You are wrong, Abby. I was 19 when I had my nose pierced. Now, many years later, the hole has grown over nicely, and nobody would ever guess that my nose was once pierced.

But I still wouldn't recommend telling a 15-year-old girl to pierce her nose. Even when I was 20, my mother wouldn't allow a nose ring in her house. Lucky for me, she never saw the one in my belly button! - PIERCED IN CLEARWATER, FLA.

DEAR PIERCED: Read on for some good news for people who want nose rings as a lark but not enough to take the piercing: DEAR ABBY: Please inform your readers who are interested in wearing nose rings that it isn't necessary to have their noses pierced. There are clip-on nose rings available. I discovered them a few days ago in a jewelry boutique at a local mall.

They are relatively inexpensive (around $5 or $6) and are the perfect solution to a fad that may or may not be around next week. - DALLAS READER

DEAR READER: Thanks for the tip. My guess is that there are now many such "clip joints" where nose rings can be found!

DEAR ABBY: A recent column dealing with proper respect accorded the various doctoral degrees brings to mind an appropriate joke I first heard many years ago:

Two brothers, one a minister and the other a physician, each with the appropriate doctorate, strongly resembled each other. On one occasion, a young woman rushed up to the physician and said, "That was such an inspirational sermon you delivered last Sunday!"

"You have mistaken me for my brother," he replied. "He preaches; I'm the one who practices." - JACK H. STOCKER, PH.D., NEW ORLEANS

What teens need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS, and getting along with peers and parents is in "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. This date in history

Today is Monday, August 15, the 227th day of 1994. There are 138 days left in the year. Today's highlight in history: Twenty-five years ago, on August 15, 1969, the Woodstock Music and Art Fair opened in upstate New York.

In 1918, the United States and Russia severed diplomatic ties. In 1935, humorist Will Rogers and aviator Wiley Post were killed when their airplane crashed near Point Barrow, Alaska. In 1939, the MGM musical 'The Wizard of Oz' premiered at the Grauman's Chinese Theater in Hollywood. In 1944, 50 years ago, during World War II, Allied forces landed in southern France, between Cannes and Toulon. In 1947, India became independent after some 200 years of British rule. Jawaharlal Nehru became India's first prime minister. In 1948, the Republic of Korea was proclaimed. In 1971, President Nixon announced a 90-day freeze on wages, prices and rents. In 1974, South Korean President Park Chung-hee escaped an attempt in which his wife was killed. In 1979, Andrew Young resigned as U.S. ambassador to the United Nations after coming under fire for an unauthorized meeting with the U.N. observer for the Palestine Liberation Organization. Ten years ago: America's Olympic medal winners were honored with a ticker-tape parade in New York, an event marred when a scaffold rail collapsed, injuring about a hundred spectators. Five years ago: F.W. de Klerk was sworn in as acting president of South Africa, one day after P.W. Botha resigned as the result of a power struggle within the National Party. One year ago: Pope John Paul II ended his four-day U.S. visit with a farewell address at Denver's Stapleton International Airport in which he denounced the "culture of death" of abortion and euthanasia. An Egyptian surrendered peacefully after hijacking a Dutch jet to Germany to demand the U.S. release Muslim cleric Sheik Omar Abdel-Rahman. Today's birthdays: Cooking expert Julia Child is 82. Actress Dame Wendy Hiller is 82. Conservative activist Phyllis Schlafly is 70. Playwright Robert Bolt is 70. Actress Rose Marie is 69. Actor Mike Connors is 69. Actress Janice Rule is 63.

Saturday's Puzzle Solved: A grid with words filled in, including 'DALLAS', 'ANTelope', 'Zestful', 'Morse code', 'Et tu, —?', 'Was carried', 'Approval', 'French cheese', 'Polcat', 'River to the North Sea', 'Unite metals', 'Call it —', 'Author Ephron', 'Flank', 'Biographer', 'Ludwig', 'Shelter', 'Bread ingredient', 'Indian weapon', 'Stabbed', 'Family member', 'Muscular contraction', 'Romero or Franck', 'Russian river', 'Cosmetic company', 'Put to work', 'Gratify', 'Heradic border', 'Cosmetic company', 'Pianist Peter', 'Attracted'.
