Commissioners buying current library building

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

The Howard County Commissioners' Court had a small agenda during Monday's meeting, but did vote to approve a resolution to purchase the building now housing the Howard County Library.

The County would like to buy out the remaining six years of its lease on the building which is owned by the government.

Currently, the building can only be used for educational purposes.

The county will now send the resolution to the U.S. Department of Education and according to County Judge Ben Lockhart, if the cost to buy out the lease is more than the county can afford, the county won't bear any obligation because the resolution is a non-binding agreement.

Commissioners also set its next meeting for Tuesday, Oct. 11, instead of the normal second Monday of the month because of the upcoming Columbus Day observance.

Program's goal to teach use of energy

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

TU Electric, with the help of Big Spring Mayor Tim Blackshear, will introduce a new course Wednesday at Goliad Middle School on how energy use affects the environment.

The course, introduced to Texas last year as a pilot, is called "In Concert With the Environment" and introduces a brand new concept, EcoWatts, designed to calculate the environmental impact of a student's daily energy use.

EcoWatt benefits are gained anytime an action is taken to use energy more wisely or preserve natural resources, including car-pooling, changing cooling or heating thermostat settings, restricting water flow, using more energy-efficient appliances, and recycling.

Goliad is among the first schools in Texas to use the course which will begin at 1 p.m. in the school gymnasium.

TU Electric's Big Spring District Manager John Toone said, "This education course is a continuation of our long-term commitment to support programs with the potential to protect the environment."

Blackshear will urge Goliad's seventh-grade science students to protect the environment by changing the way they use energy and natural resources at a kick-off assembly that will include participatory, hands-on demonstrations.

Murray Murphy, assistant superintendent of the Big Spring Independent School District, and Goliad Principal Jean Broughton will also participate in the assembly.

Toone added by encouraging wise energy management, the program also meets the company's goal to keep growth in peak electric load down in order to reduce the need for future power plants and other generating facilities.

Within the next five years, TU Electric plans to make the course available to more than 100,000 students in its service area.

"In Concert" is an interactive, computer-based science curriculum course developed three years ago by EcoGroup Inc. to be used in partnership with electric utilities and has reached 200,000 students in 17 states.

TU Electric provides special training for teaching the course, which was provided earlier this month to Goliad science teachers Deanna Adams, coordinator for the course, Zandra Basham and Linda Battle.

The teachers receiving this training will receive six endorsement credits from the Texas Environmental Education Advisory Committee of the Texas Education Agency.

woman was allegedly raped again, pelted with bricks, stabbed repeatedly with a kitchen knife and hit with a shovel.

Corona admitted to having sex with Ms. Conde, witnessing the murder and helping dispose of the body, but said he did not kill her.

As part of his sentence, Corona must complete 500 hours of community service, submit to regular drug testing, undergo drug and alcohol abuse counseling, obtain a General Equivalency Degree and stay away from Conde's family.

Blackstone, who was recently released from jail on a $250,000 bond, is scheduled to go on trial in November.

Murderous teen run out of town

HARLINGEN (AP) — A convicted murderer whose probation for the death of a 38-year-old woman sparked outrage is leaving town on the heels of his release from jail Monday and numerous death threats.

In March, jurors gave 16-year-old Ruben Corona of San Benito ten years probation for killing Diana Conde, but state District Judge Robert Garza ordered him to serve six months in jail.

On Monday, when Corona was brought before Garza in Brownsville, the judge told him he could have faced longer incarceration.

"Without the jury, you would have gone to prison, because if I had sentenced you, you would have been locked up for a long time," Garza said. "I really hope you change."

Corona's attorney, Joe

Esquivel, told the judge that both Corona and his family have received death threats since his March conviction.

They will be moving to a Central Texas city, a court official said. Corona will work for a construction company, Esquivel said.

Authorities, family members and friends of Ms. Conde were outraged over Corona's sentence. Some speculated that justice could be served only in the streets.

During his trial, Corona testified that he and Joshua Blackstone, 18, found Ms. Conde behind Blackstone's San Benito house Oct. 15.

She told the boys she had been drugged and raped and needed help, Corona said.

Instead, witnesses said the

Stenholm continues pushing boll weevil eradication legislation

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

Despite reports by Phil Boone that he is just a few points behind in the race for the 17th District Congressional seat, Congressman Charles Stenholm said he is continuing to run on his record which is what any incumbent must do in a political campaign.

Stenholm said he doesn't believe his Republican challenger is that close to him and that his record of supporting the president, Republican or Democrat, when he thinks he's right and opposing him when he thinks he's wrong is what voters will look at in the November election.

He is continuing to work on several of his legislative items while campaigning. His office recently announced House and Senate conferees working on agriculture appropriations legislation for the 1995 fiscal year have agreed to increase funding for boll weevil eradication efforts.

Stenholm, chairman of the House Agriculture Subcommittee on Department Operations, said, "After working long and hard to secure increased funding, I am extremely pleased that the conferees accepted the House post-tion to provide increased program support for the national boll weevil eradication effort.

"The Boll Weevil Eradication Program Office, which has relocated to Abilene, and the 12 to 14 new jobs which it brings to the big country, will greatly benefit from this increased funding." Currently there is no timetable for when the headquarters will be set up in Abilene.

According to Stenholm, the House Appropriations Committee had originally designated just over $13 million in funding for the USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service to continue the Boll Weevil Eradication Program; boll weevils have been ranked by the USDA as the single most destructive pest in Texas, Arkansas, and Alabama.

But, as a result of an amendment Stenholm introduced in June, an additional $5 million was directed to APHIS for boll weevil eradication during 1995.

The program is a jointly funded partnership wherein producers contribute 70 percent of the cost, and APHIS makes up the remaining 30 percent.

Studies show that this program returns over $12 in economic benefits to growers and their communities for every one dollar of cost. In areas where eradication is complete, results show the use of pesticides by about 90 percent.

Stenholm's office also announced he is continuing his efforts towards budget reform as well by challenging members of the Senate to consider the Common Cents Budget Reform Act, the bipartisan legislation he introduced earlier this year to reform the budget process and control federal spending.

He said, "The House has passed three out of four provisions of the CCBRA, and now it's up to the Senate to act on these provisions which have

Family appeals to kidnappers to return abducted teen-ager

ARLINGTON (AP) — Relatives and friends of a teenager apparently abducted in a break-in while she was making a frantic 911 call issued an appeal Monday to her kidnappers while police searched for clues to her attackers.

Police and the FBI were checking out a report that Lisa Rene, 16, may have been watched by three men wearing camouflage clothing. Residents of her apartment complex said the men had driven by the apartments in recent days.

Investigators also said they believe the kidnappers targeted the teen for a reason — that someone was out to get her or her family.

assumption with what we've got to go on."

Ms. Rene's attack and disappearance were recorded on an emergency line.

"They're trying to break down my door! Hurry up!" Ms. Rene told the 911 dispatcher at 8:11 p.m. Saturday.

The dispatcher then heard a scream. When police arrived at 8:13 p.m., she was gone. The sliding screen door of the apartment was smashed in, and glass shards from the door were found on the carpet.

Ms. Rene can be heard on the 911 recording talking to someone and asking who they are. A man answers, "I'm with the FBI."

A muffled scream is heard seconds later, with the man saying, "Who you on the phone with?" The line then went dead.

Investigators interviewed relatives Monday night to determine a possible reason for the abduction.

"We do think that. We definitely think that," Arlington police spokesman Dee Anderson said in an interview with KXAS, a Fort Worth television station. "That's an assumption on our part, admittedly, but I think it's a good Broughton said the course adds an innovative teaching style that encourages interactive education methods.

"Its computerized projects, hands-on demonstrations and investigative nature adapt to the learning styles of today's middle-school child and are right on target with some new approaches we are taking at Gollad."

In Concert With the Environment provides students with comprehensive information about how natural resources are converted into energy for home, transportation and other uses and how these conversions affect the environment. Students complete an individualized energy audit to gather data on their family's use of energy.

Student input their research data into a computer to generate a personalized action plan that shows how many energy dollars can be saved and how many EcoWatt Benefits can be created by changing the way they and their families use energy.

The course has been scheduled for the week of Oct. 6 through Oct. 10 at Gollad and parental involvement is encouraged.

received strong bipartisan support."

Stenholm and 115 other House members sent a bipartisan letter to Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell encouraging him to bring this legislation before the full Senate for consideration before the 103rd Congress adjourns.

The House passed three of Stenholm's budget reforms earlier this year including preventing "emergency" spending bills, such as earthquake or flood assistance from adding spending for non-emergency measures; requiring that increased spending on government programs be measured against what was actually spent the previous year, and not on an inflated baseline; and requiring Congress to vote on the budget cut proposals proposed by the president, rather than ignoring them as current law allows.

Stenholm said, "These budget reform provisions were passed by the House in true bipartisan spirit and reflect the will of the American people to control spending."

NEWS IN BRIEF

He has a mighty has name to drop

AUSTIN (AP) — He's running on his own. But gubernatorial challenger George W. Bush can drop a mighty big name whenever he chooses.

As the eldest son of the former president, Bush gets a chuckle from audiences when he mentions his father.

"I knew I had a big job ahead of me when I first got going, because I had to show people in Texas there was another George Bush," he says.

Bush is one of two former first sons on this year's ballots. Younger brother, Jeb, is the GOP nominee for governor in Florida.

School construction funding plan approved

AUSTIN (AP) — A special Senate committee has approved a plan to fund public school construction, but the proposal is being called inadequate by a lawyer for poor school districts.

The recommendation by the Senate Interim Committee on Public School Facilities would cost an estimated $261 million over the next two-year budget period.

It would fund the debt service on about $2 billion in new construction debt, said Sen. Teel Bivins, R-Amarillo, head of the Senate Interim Committee on Public School Facilities.

After a report is finalized, the recommendation will go to Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, who presides over the full Senate. The Legislature meets in regular session in January.

Al Kauffman, a lawyer for property-poor school districts that 10 years ago sued in state court over education financing, said there are positive aspects to Monday's proposal but that it doesn't go far enough.

'Cultural chasm' creates the misunderstandings

DALLAS (AP) — Misunderstandings between black and Korean Americans stem from a "cultural chasm," according to a minister who has organized daily picketing outside a Fort Worth store where a black man was killed.

"On the one side, there is a fear level; on the other side, there is frustration," said the Rev. Michael Bell, chairman of Tarrant Clergy for Inter-Ethnic Peace and Justice.

"African-Americans are frustrated because of how they are treated. Asian-American store owners are afraid because of what they've seen and hear about us," he told The Dallas Morning News for a story in Tuesday's editions.

The remarks come after the Sept. 16 shooting death of Darrell Bivins outside one such convenience store in an eastern Fort Worth neighborhood, called Stop Six.

Store owner Jason Noh told police he shot Bivins because he shoplifted at his store earlier this month and ignored a warning not to return.

Teen arrested in girl's brutal slaying

DALLAS (AP) — A 14-year-old boy who reported the abduction of a 13-year-old girl was in police custody today, a suspect in the girl's brutal slaying.

The battered, slashed body of Carla Farmer of Garland was found Sunday on the roof of a north Dallas convenience store. Police said that she apparently had been sexually assaulted.

The youthful suspect, whom police have not identified because of his age, had accompanied Miss Farmer to the store after a party and then reported that she had been abducted, police said.

The boy was arrested Sunday night and was expected to be charged with juvenile delinquency-murder as early as today, said police spokesman Ed Spencer.

Recovering from helping, man wants to continue

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Jon Kirkland Bonham took a moment to befriend a youngster in trouble and wound up getting shot 11 times.

Now, it's the thought of continuing to help young people that's helping him recover.

The YMCA basketball coach — who occasionally uses a cane but appears remarkably healthy — says that lining up new sponsors for next spring's basketball season helps take his mind off the anger and pain.

"It's just something I have to do," said Bonham, 25.

"Coaching and teaching the kids about the sport and teaching them about life and trying to give them a positive role model, it's fulfilling. Sometimes I think I get more from the kids than they do from me."

Three months ago, Bonham was out driving at midnight to satisfy a craving for ice cream. He saw Leocadio Martinez, then 14, sitting in a parking lot.

"He looked far too young to be out there at that time of night so I offered him a ride home," Bonham recalled in Monday editions of the San Antonio Express-News.

As Bonham drove, Martinez pulled a gun, directed him to a residence near Lackland Air Force Base, tried to rob him and force him into the trunk.

"I thought, 'I'll be damned if I am going to let him shoot me and dump my body somewhere.'"

Bonham lunged at the .380-caliber semiautomatic, but it went off. He didn't know he'd been shot in the abdomen until he saw the blood.

He took off running.

The commotion had caught the attention of Bexar County

Sheriff's Deputy Steve Montalvo, who lived nearby. But before Montalvo could act, Martinez had caught up to Bonham and leveled the gun.

"I looked up and saw Leo with the gun in two hands, pointing it at me. He had no expression on his face. I thought, 'Oh, my God.' He just started firing. I didn't even feel being hit, I just felt myself bleeding."

Richards say latest ad campaign brings good news

Democratic Gov. Ann Richards says her latest television commercial is something that's overdue in this year's campaign: good news.

"All we get from my opponent is doom and gloom — misrepresentations and distortions — about what is going on in Texas," Richards said Monday.

In announcing her ad touting Texas' "comeback," Richards said some of the positive news is that personal income is up 30 percent since 1990, housing starts are up 100 percent, consumer spending is up 22 percent and a record 7.7 million Texans are working.

The ad also notes that state government ended the most recent budget year with a $2.2 billion surplus.

"The Texas economy is currently the envy of the nation. Since 1990, we have led the nation in job growth. Our school students are doing better and we are attacking the problem of crime. There are almost twice as many criminals behind bars today as there were the day

I took office," Richards said.

Not surprisingly, Bush's campaign saw things differently and said the governor's comments and commercial left out some key ingredients.

Bush spokesman Reggie Bashur said violent juvenile crime has risen while Richards has been in office and that the governor permitted early release of convicted felons, something the Republican pledges to stop.

Activists want nuke plant to be shut down

FORT WORTH (AP) — Anti-nuclear activists have renewed their call for the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to shut down TU Electric's Comanche Peak nuclear power plant.

In a petition filed Monday with the NRC in Washington, D.C., the activists urged that the plant in Glen Rose, about 45 miles southwest of Fort Worth, be closed because of concerns over its fire protection system.

The petition calls for a shutdown "until corrective action is taken."

Plant critics cite an NRC inspection report that list several deficiencies in TU Electric's attempts to improve fire protection at Comanche Peak.

TU Electric made the improvements because the fire insulation used to protect key cables at Comanche Peak and other nuclear plants was certified for use based on test data later found to have been falsified.

The utility company responded by rewinding cables with more fire retardant.

Although the NRC report on the improvements found several deficiencies, it concluded that the mistakes were not serious violations.

Plant spokesman Frank Shantz defended company efforts and expressed confidence that the improvements offer adequate fire protection.

The Reactor Watchdog Project in Washington, which joined Citizens for Fair Utility Regulation in the petition, is not expecting the NRC to grant its request.

Paul Gunter, head of the Reactor Watchdog Project, said his primary goal is to prod the federal agency into dealing more aggressively with the use of questioned insulation.

Facing the problem only way to make headway to solution

Community leaders have been gnashing their teeth over the recent publicity Big Spring received concerning our alleged "gang" problem.

A main concern was the impact this publicity would have on the city's ability to attract business to our community.

We need new businesses here in Big Spring, but we can't afford to turn a blind eye to any problem facing this city, whether it is gangs or simply making our town more attractive.

If anything is to be learned from this latest flap it is people are more appreciative of officials who acknowledge a problem and actively seek solutions. It only stands to reason that business people looking to re-locate would also be more appreciative of a city who is looking to resolve its problems.

The only way to solve a problem is to confront it and find a way to make it go away. That's what the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce's Proud Citizens Committee has done. They have taken the problem of an unattractive town and are making strides to clean up our city and present a new and better look to visitors and residents alike.

That is problem solving. It will work with the other problems facing our city aside from attracting new business.

Burying your head in the sand doesn't even work for the ostrich, who still gets run over by problems it pretends not to see.

As it seems to only get worse each day, not only here but across the nation, we can no longer afford to pretend it doesn't exist or that we are safe in a small community.

Unfortunately, small communities are becoming home to many of the types of problems thought only to be found in big cities such as gangs.

We may not be overrun by gangs now but we could be at any point. What can keep this from becoming a certainty is a proactive approach to this problem and all problems.

Soldiers take police station

221 refugees return home

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — For three years, Haitians avoided or hurried past the notorious police station where the coup against President Jean-Bertrand Aristide was launched.

When U.S. troops rolled to a stop Monday outside the building where so many Haitians were jailed and tortured, an emboldened and jubilant crowd of thousands of Haitians gathered to cheer them on.

"I wasn't scared. The Americans were with us," said one man. He identified himself only as Casseus, age 36, just in case the tables are turned and Haiti's hated police somehow hang onto their old powers.

It was from that same yellow-walled precinct building that Port-au-Prince police chief Michel Francois, then a captain and now an army lieutenant colonel, kicked off the Sept. 29, 1991 coup.

The Americans entered the building Monday to discuss security with police. The festive gathering outside didn't last long, but it showed Haitians' increasing optimism that some sort of rule by law was being enforced, and that Aristide really may be coming home next month as planned.

American troops, some 10,000 in all, have occupied Haiti to help pave the way for Aristide's restoration. The outpouring of support for the U.S. soldiers has been effusive in the impoverished nation, where many are eager to put behind a legacy of brutal dictatorship in favor of democracy they have never known.

In other developments Monday, the first 221 Haitian refugees to return voluntarily from the detention camp at the U.S. naval base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, arrived. An additional 142 — of the roughly 14,000 there — were due back today.

Haitians dismantle tin roofing from the police barracks in Cap Haitien Monday. Calm filled the streets today in the city after a hectic weekend where U.S. Marines took over military installations throughout the city.

President Clinton, meanwhile, lifted travel, economic and most other U.S. sanctions against Haiti, and urged other nations to follow suit. The aim of the trade embargo was to oust the army commander and coup leader, Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras, and restore Aristide.

The U.S. military occupation of the troubled Caribbean nation began a week ago, and troops have fanned out inside and around the two biggest cities. Marines are disarming some police barracks, and military police are stationed at others to prevent human rights abuses.

The United States also announced a cash-for-weapons program to start today, hoping to encourage more Haitians to turn over guns taken from the hated Haitian army and police to U.S. troops. Prices ranged from $50 for a handgun to $300 for a rocket launcher.

Many Cap-Haitien residents seized weapons from security forces Sunday, apparently prompting Haiti's military-installed government to issue a statement Monday urging citizens to surrender the arms at Haitian military outposts.

Falling apart at light speed

CLEARWATER, Fla. — The faces of Robert Sandifer, of Jimmy Carter, of Bill Clinton — there they were, inescapable to the nation's travelers, placed in front of those travelers as if, by missing the chance to see those faces, the travelers would be less well-equipped to get through their days.

A month ago, few people outside his own squalid Chicago neighborhood knew who Robert Sandifer was. By dying, though — by dying after having been accused of killing — the 11-year-old boy became, for a blink of an eye of news eternity, a figure with the same relative weight as the former president and the present president. At least you would think so as you walked through Tampa International Airport.

For there was Robert Sandifer's young and tragic face, staring off cover after cover of Time magazine, the magazine covers arranged in splashy promotional displays in all the airport's newsstands. It's a fair bet that Robert Sandifer never read a copy of Time — the magazine that has, over the years, placed everyone from Franklin Roosevelt to Adolf Hitler to Hugh Hefner to Richard Nixon on its covers — but whether he knew of Time magazine's existence was irrelevant. Here he was — dozens of him, scores of him, hundreds of him if you were to take the time to walk past every newsstand — greeting the travelers.

Why? The simple answer you already know: Robert Sandifer — by being 11 instead of 13, by reportedly being executed by his own gang to keep him from talking, by being an accused murderer as well as a victim of murder — became a symbol of the horror of crime by and against children in U.S. cities. He fit all the criteria to become national news.

So that's the most obvious reason why Robert Sandifer stared out at all the travelers, who, if the boy were still alive, or if his death had come at the age of 15 or 16 instead of 11, would never be aware of his existence. The broader reason, though, is no less vexing, and potentially even farther reaching.

The reason he was there is that, as we package news ever more efficiently, as new competitors with other news for the national attention, the citizenry has begun to take for granted being presented the news right in its collective face, full time, everywhere, around the clock. A TV set in the airport showed, live, President Clinton as he made decisions about Haiti; Clinton on Haiti was newer news than Robert Sandifer.

The hotel where I am staying — a hotel in Clearwater that was constructed in 1897 — feels like U.S. social history along every step of its hallways. It feels like an America of scale and leisure and measured pace. The rooms in the hotel are not centrally air-conditioned, each room is equipped with a ceiling fan — and each room is also equipped with a 60-channel cable television monitor. So as the ceiling fans turned round and round the other day, there was Jimmy Carter — that instant — arriving in Haiti with Colin Powell and Sam Nunn, Carter becoming newer news than Clinton, and the people in the old hotel, people all across America, people all over the world, were seeing the faces of Carter and Powell and Nunn at the same moment the people on the ground in Haiti were seeing those faces.

We have perfected the mechanics of this; we have perfected the techniques of delivering everything everywhere right now, no delay at all, of casting aside the notion that there is any argument to be made for patience and studied deliberation. On the airplane down here I noticed, as I do on most flights, business travelers using the phones on the planes to call their voice-mail systems back at work, to punch in their access codes, and thus to activate the machines — and to receive, six miles in the air, messages or instructions they once might have waited hours, or days, to learn about.

Such delays are no longer necessary, thus no longer tolerated. Whether the world functions any better now that the news is always with us — this is a different question. The commentator in Haiti said that the crowds on the street were "decidedly anti-American," and I noticed that some in the decidedly anti-American crowd wore Boston Celtics T-shirts, some wore hats bearing the logos of U.S. sporting goods companies. The world moves at the speed of light, and Robert Sandifer's week on the cover of Time was almost up, and Jimmy Carter walked into a building in Haiti as, on the west coast of Florida, the ceiling fan made slow and endless circles, going nowhere.

Wants to share good experience

Praise to the VA Hospital. I would like to share an experience I had last Friday, Sept. 9. In regards to the Big Spring VA Hospital - my husband, first of all, is an honorable Disabled Veteran. We are from another city. I can not put in perspective the right words for the "code blue" team. They worked on him 4 1/2 hours. I still have a husband due to their expertise. This is something that will linger with me until my last day. My special thanks to one of the patients in the ward named Rip. My special thanks to show you how these Veterans feel for one another. They're all brothers and sisters. I think the staff needs to be praised instead of degraded. I am so grateful for Big Spring for letting us come to your town. Everyone here was so gracious in my trying hours. I was not left alone they help us wives keep our sanity. I love these people here. I just wanted to give something back-even if it's only a lot of love and a special thank you everyone.

Meals on Wheels volunteers needed

Once again we must appeal to some good folks of Big Spring. Volunteers are needed to help deliver meals on the Meals on Wheels program. If you spare about one hour per day, one day per week, you are needed. Gasoline money is available if desired. Many of the folks that receive these meals daily are alone. About the only visitor they see are these volunteers that deliver these meals. This is a privately funded project, no state or federal funds are needed. But volunteers deliver the meals to the ones that need this service. So if you can enter these homes with a cherry good morning and a ready smile you are needed. Remember only about one hour per day, one day per week. If you are interested please call the chairman, Jesse Hernandez, 263-4303 or the office manager, Imogene Smith, 263-4016. Thank you very much,

NEWS IN BRIEF

Yeltsin museum open in Russia

MOSCOW (AP) — Russia, which once had scores of Lenin museums throughout the land, will get its first Boris Yeltsin museum next year in the Russian president's home village, a newspaper reported today.

But local authorities in the central Russian village of Butki still haven't bothered to tell Yeltsin about their plans, the English-language Moscow Times said. And there's one other problem: The people who live in the house where Yeltsin was born in 1931 and lived for more than a decade don't want to move. So villagers will put the museum in a house belonging to Yeltsin's aunt.

Sri Lankan soldiers launch major strike

PALALY, Sri Lanka (AP) — In the first major strike by the government since agreeing to peace talks with separatist rebels, hundreds of troops attacked a rebel-held town, killing at least 20 Tamil guerrillas, the military said Monday.

Two soldiers were killed and 23 wounded in the fighting Sunday in northern Sri Lanka, and the rebel death toll could be as high as 75, said Brigadier Asoka Jayawardene. There was no independent confirmation.

Rebels said four guerrillas and four soldiers were killed. Government planes and helicopters also killed six civilians and wounded 30, the rebels announced over the radio.

Rocket attacks kill 12 in Kabul

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — Twelve people were killed by rocket attacks today in a western suburb of Kabul where rival Shiite Muslims have been fighting nearly two weeks.

The victims included four medical students who died when a military hospital was hit. An additional 106 people were wounded in the attacks near the capital, officials at several hospitals said.

Deadly plague escapes to New Delhi; 52 dead

SURAT, India (AP) — The first cases of pneumonic plague were confirmed outside this stricken city today, more than 700 miles away in the capital, New Delhi.

Since the disease broke out in Surat a week ago, at least 52 people have died. The 400,000 residents who fled appear to be spreading it to rural areas of Gujarat state.

Meanwhile, in the neighboring state of Maharashtra, another form of the illness — bubonic plague — has spread from villages where it broke out last month to Beed town, officials said.

No deaths have been reported, but 90 people with bubonic plague were treated in rural areas, and 31 cases are now in Beed.

The first plague cases in India in 30 years were spread by fleas from infected rats or germs from sick people.

Despite the spread of the disease, the World Health Organization says it is too early to say India will suffer a plague epidemic.

The pneumonic plague and the bubonic plague — a less deadly form of the disease that ravaged 14th-century Europe and Asia as "the Black Death" — can both be cured with antibiotics.

But the diseases could strike India's many rural areas, where millions of poor people have no access to medicine or doctors.

Many of the people who fled Surat last week went 160 miles south to Bombay, but the first cases of pneumonic plague outside Surat were reported today in New Delhi, 730 miles to the northeast.

Six people who had fled Surat were recently admitted to the Infectious Diseases Hospital in New Delhi, and two of them tested positive for pneumonic plague, said a doctor in the control room.

At the capital's train stations today, loudspeakers ordered arriving passengers with plague symptoms to report to doctors working there around the clock.

Trade pact not expected by Friday

TOKYO (AP) — Japan and the United States are not likely to hammer out a trade pact before a Friday deadline, Trade Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto said today.

"I have no intention of making any new proposals or changing Japan's current position," Hashimoto said only hours before departing for Washington, where he was scheduled to hold talks with Commerce Secretary Ron Brown and U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor.

The Clinton administration says failure to reach an agreement in the 15-month-old trade talks by Friday would set the stage for sanctions.

The two sides have been holding talks on Japanese government purchases of medical supplies and telecommunications equipment; autos and auto parts; access to Japan's insurance market, and sales of U.S. glass.

Hashimoto described the negotiations as bogged down, with both sides unmoving.

If the talks fail, it will be the second time this year the two countries have been unable to meet U.S.-set deadlines for reaching accords meant to reduce Japan's $60 billion trade surplus with the United States.

Hashimoto said he told U.S. Ambassador Walter Mondale earlier today that the main sticking point is numerical targets.

Throughout the trade talks, the United States has pressed for accords that include ways of measuring progress in opening Japan's markets. The Japanese insist that amounts to managed trade.

Hashimoto did assure Mondale that Japan would try to compromise in measuring market share in government procurement, but not the private sector.

NEWS IN BRIEF

IRS is looking for you - to give, not take

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service is looking for 92,200 taxpayers to share $54 million in refunds. The IRS said Monday the taxpayers need only let the service know where to send the checks, averaging $584 each. Each year, thousands of taxpayers miss their refunds, often because they move and fail to notify the IRS of their change of address on Form 8822 or because the service incorrectly read their name and address. The vast majority of taxpayers make sure they get the money coming to them, on time. During the last filing season, 75 million received checks averaging $1,000 each.

New era of cooperation between U.S. and Russia

WASHINGTON (AP) — Proclaiming a new era of cooperation — but not total agreement — President Clinton and Russian President Boris Yeltsin are ready to forge closer economic ties and pledge further reductions in nuclear weapons. Yeltsin arrived in the United States with his standing strengthened by a Russian economy that is pulling out of its disastrous state of a year ago. The Russian president was hoping that the sharp reduction in inflation and his government's budget deficit would help attract new Western investment. After a formal welcome today on the White House South Lawn, the emphasis was on foreign policy and security issues for the opening sessions of two days of talks between Clinton and Yeltsin.

No help from Clinton
in defending experiment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wisconsin won't get any help from the Clinton administration when it goes to court to defend a new experiment aimed at discouraging low-income families from moving to the state. The Department of Health and Human Services approved the cost-cutting pilot project under former President Bush to test whether Wisconsin had become a "welfare magnet" because of its generous public benefits. Legal Action of Wisconsin has sued to stop the project in federal court, claiming that it unconstitutionally infringes on the rights of the poor to travel and migrate freely. A similar welfare experiment in California was rejected by a federal appeals court on those grounds. Wisconsin launched its "two-tier" experiment in July.

Reimbursement is not a defense for taking perks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The independent counsel investigating Agriculture Secretary Mike Espy says reimbursing private businesses for gifts or the government for private perks — as Espy is doing — is no defense for taking them in the first place. "It's consistent with the law: Repayment after disclosure of a crime isn't a defense to a crime," Donald C. Smaltz said Monday in an interview from his Los Angeles law office, as he prepared to begin his investigation of Espy. Speaking of a general legal principle, not of any conclusion in the Espy case, Smaltz said: "If somebody robs a bank and pays back the money, it doesn't mean he didn't commit the crime."

Republicans uniting under politically
popular manifesto

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tantalized by their first shot in four decades at taking control of the House, Republicans are looking to unite their candidates behind a politically popular manifesto calling for tax cuts, term limits and a balanced budget amendment. More than 300 Republican candidates, two-thirds of them running as challengers or seeking open seats, were gathering today on the Capitol steps to sign a "Contract with America" pledging speedy action on a 10-point platform if voters give their party a House majority for the first time since 1954. "A campaign promise is one thing. A signed document is quite another," the paper declared. But the event, designed to capitalize on what is shaping up as a bad-news election season for Democrats, also holds risks. Its unveiling was linked to a half-million-dollar fund-raiser that could be a public reminder of the insider politics that polls show voters disdain. Even so, the event on the Capitol steps today has Democrats worried. For two weeks the party in control of Congress has bashed the plan, calling it irresponsible and a return to a Reagan-style budget that would reward the rich, penalize senior citizens and deepen America's debt. The GOP plan is familiar campaign-trail fodder. Tax cuts, tough action against crime, welfare reform, the balanced-budget amendment and term limits are among its promises. But Republicans hoped the agenda would help soften the perception the GOP has become a party of naysayers with no positive program of its own, and appeal to voters tired of Washington gridlock. The GOP often has sought to link its House candidates together under national election themes, but with mixed results. This year's effort represents a new level of coordination. "It may succeed, because there is a clear contrast about who is in power — who the insiders are, and who the outsiders are," said Stuart Rothenberg, publisher of a political newsletter that focuses on congressional elections. Because of voter anger — only about 20 percent of Americans believe the country is headed in the right direction, polls show — "it's worth a roll of the dice," Rothenberg said. Some Democrats see in the contract an opening for criticism. In Arizona, Democratic nominee Chuck Blanchard, a state senator, already is pointing to the GOP agenda as a sign his opponent, state Sen. Matt Salmon, is tied to Washington and lacks independence.

Pleasant scent of bread
may help to create smog

NATICK, Mass. (AP) — There's nothing like the smell of baking bread to stir memories of warmth and comfort. Well, forget that. As it turns out, that pleasant scent threatens the environment — the chemical that wafts the delectable essence across neighborhoods near large bakeries may help create smog. Bread factories around the country may soon be called upon to limit their odorous emissions as states work to meet federal clean air requirements. That means no more bread smell. "You drive down the highway and you hope the smell will be there," said Phyllis Davidson, a customer at the second-day bake shop outside the Wonder Bread factory in Natick, which may have to install equipment that would do away with the aroma. "It's like waking up to the smell of coffee brewing or bacon cooking. It's homey," Davidson said. When bread reaches 174 degrees Fahrenheit — when it's baked to perfection — it emits ethanol as a gas. Ethanol is a volatile organic compound that contributes to ozone buildup close to the ground. The 1990 Clean Air Act gives states until November to submit plans for reducing ground-level ozone. By itself, ethanol is harmless alcohol, said Anne Giesecke of the American Bakers Association: "It's the same as what people would exhale in a bar on Saturday night." But when ethanol hits sunlight, it breaks down into its basic components, including oxygen, and forms ozone. High in the atmosphere, the thinning ozone layer allows dangerous ultraviolet radiation to seep through to earth. Close to the ground, too much ozone means smog. Ethanol is turned into carbon dioxide by equipment already in place in Wonder Bread factories in New Brunswick, N.J., Philadelphia, San Francisco and Pomona, Calif., said Keith Schopp, a spokesman for St. Louis-based Ralston Purina, which makes Wonder Bread.

A sign placed by media crews is displayed on the NBC tower scaffolding erected for coverage of the O.J. Simpson double-murder trial on the first official day of the trial Monday. Television crews have constructed extensive scaffolding in a parking lot across the street from the Criminal Courts Building in Los Angeles.

Sequestration biggest concern for jurors in Simpson trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The bleak prospect of sequestration was the biggest concern for the first wave of O.J. Simpson's potential jurors. But as the judge questioned, cajoled and even offered to pull strings, many had a change of heart about spending up to six months in the courthouse and a hotel. "I thought about it," one man said. "Sequestration... It was like when Indiana Jones looked into the pit and said, 'Snakes! I can do anything but snakes.'" "I've spent a lot of time in windowless buildings," he told Judge Lance Ito, explaining that he had recently retired. "I thought I was through with that. I've had 20 years of partial sequestration." Asked if he would fill out a questionnaire and try to serve, he assented, but added: "I'm still worried about the snakes." The man was one of 100 potential jurors who received 75-page questionnaires Monday, and are to return Oct. 12 to answer Ito's questions on their backgrounds and beliefs. Another 250 potential jurors were to appear today. All potential jurors are identified only by number. Of the 219 jurors summoned by mail to appear Monday, 212 reported. Outside the courthouse, they ran a gantlet of news crews, demonstrators and entrepreneurs hawking everything from T-shirts and caps to buttons reading: "O.J. Juror Reject, Didn't Make the Cut." The potential jurors gathered in a large 11th-floor jury assembly room. Ito introduced the players in the case, including Simpson, who stood and said, "Good afternoon." "This is probably the most important decision you'll make in your personal life," Ito told the group. "It's the most important decision of any American citizen. I need a fair jury." The first person questioned was No. 0032. Simpson wore No. 32 as a college and professional football star. "I don't know if this is an omen," Superior Court Judge Lance Ito said, eliciting a smile from Simpson. No. 0032 made the first out.

Guns, junior high students are coming

WASHINGTON (AP) — Junior high students are more likely than high schoolers to be involved in weapons offenses at big city schools, but drug and alcohol abuse is more common among the older teens, urban educators reported today. Two percent of teachers in the cities' public schools feel unsafe during the day, twice as many as in the suburbs, the Council of Great City Schools said. After school hours, the figure jumps to 15 percent in the cities and 5 percent in the suburbs. In a 1992-93 report card on the state of urban education, the council said more than half the school systems it represents have gang and crime prevention programs; all the districts have programs to address drug and alcohol abuse. The council asked school superintendents to assess their progress toward meeting a set of eight education goals. Based on that survey, the council said that although some improvement has been made in such areas as parent involvement, big-city school systems still have a long way to go to meet goals on student achievement, teacher recruitment and building repair. "Nowhere does the national resolve to strengthen our children's education face a tougher test than in our inner cities," said the council's executive director, Michael Casserly. "In the nation's largest urban areas, every problem is more pronounced, every solution harder to implement. From teacher shortages to drug abuse, from dilapidated buildings to dropouts, urban schools, their leaders and teachers face challenges each day that would overwhelm any organization, public or private."

Buffalo bullies Broncos; Elway losing his magic

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — The Denver Broncos used to win these games, remember?

John Elway would move his team downfield with the clock ticking away, and one chance at the end zone would usually be enough.

Not this year. For the third time in four games, the Broncos had a chance to win a game in the final minutes but Elway couldn't deliver. On Monday night, the ball slipped out of his hand — again — and the Buffalo Bills held on for a 27-20 victory.

"A quarterback's not Superman," Denver running back Glyn Milburn said. "He's not going to see everybody open every time. He's got people flying around. It's a tough thing."

Elway may not be Superman, but they used to share a phone booth.

By the Broncos' count, he has engineered 32 game-saving, fourth-quarter drives in his career. But the only one in the last two years was a three-play, 11-yard drive with more than 10 minutes left against Kansas City last year.

And the three times he has been called upon to repeat the heroics this season, he hasn't.

—Against the Jets, Denver had a chance to take the lead late in the game but had to settle for a field goal. The Broncos lost in overtime 25-22.

—Against the Chargers, Elway led the two-minute offense to the San Diego 3. He rolled out and went to throw, but the ball slipped out of his hands and was picked out of the air by Junior Seau. Final score: San Diego 37, Denver 34.

Denver Bronco quarterback John Elway takes a seat on the turf in the third quarter against the Buffalo Bills Monday in Buffalo. The Bills beat the Broncos 27-20.

—And now, against Buffalo, the ball slipped out of Elway's hands on a fourth-and-2 with 21 seconds and sailed high over Cedric Tillman's hands and through the end zone.

Bills quarterback Jim Kelly said he was having the same problem on the rainy night.

"It slipped out of my hands probably seven times," he said.

Team leaders must be 'set' in their ways

By STEVE REAGAN
Sportswriter

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is another in a continuing series examining different facets of the game of volleyball in a football-crazy area.

Part IV: The Distributor
Almost every team sport requires a facilitator, a player who makes it easier for others on the team to do their job.

Soccer has the goal-tender, football has the quarterback, basketball has the point guard and baseball has ... well, those folks are on strike, so forget them.

Volleyball is no different from these sports. It too needs a key figure to make life easier for everybody else.

Ladies and gentlemen, meet the setter.

As the title implies, the setter in volleyball "sets" the ball to other players, laying it out in a manner where the hitters (or killers) can strike it to best advantage.

But a setter has to be more than just a table-setter. The position requires a player who is aggressive on the court, a team leader, able to stay with the flow of the game, able to see her own team's — and the opponent's — strong and weak points, able to play defense and, perhaps most important, unflappable.

It also doesn't hurt if the person is a bit deaf.

"You get yelled at for everything, by everybody," Big Spring High School Lady Steer Angie Powell said. "If the hitter gets a halfway decent set, but blows it, it's your fault. You could have set it a little closer, or a little higher. But you learn to just blow it off and go from there."

There were strong signs that the start of the season will be delayed. The Anaheim Mighty Ducks canceled their hotel reservations in Dallas for Friday and the Boston Bruins were looking into booking ice time for playoff hockey in July.

Bettman said a decision will be made Friday so that 12 teams have time to cancel their travel plans to opening-night destinations for Saturday's scheduled start of the season.

The NHL and NHL Players' Association are to resume negotiations today. If they pick up where they left off on Monday, things look bleak.

Negotiators for owners and players met in large and small groups trying to find common ground for a collective bargaining agreement on two of three key issues — a tax to help small market teams and salary arbitration.

The issue of a rookie salary cap was not discussed.

Volleyball for the Volleyball challenged

"The setter pretty much determines your offense," BSHS coach Lois Ann McKenzie said. "The hitter is never going to take the blame. 'There was something wrong with the set,' is what they'll say."

A thick skin is not just helpful, it's downright necessary, because so much depends on the setter.

"They set the tone for the whole game," McKenzie said. "If a setter's on, the hitter gets the ball. If a setter's off, you're in trouble."

If a team has a really superb setter, or is weak in the position, it might go with only one setter in the rotation. The Lady Steers did that two years ago when they had all-district player Cassie Underwood at the position.

This year, however, the Lady Steers use a formation similar to most teams in that they use two setters. Powell and fellow senior Kristi Birrell are the mainstays at the position for Big Spring.

Birrell said the position wasn't her first choice when she came out for the sport in the seventh grade.

"No it wasn't. But the coaches told me, 'You have long fingers, so that's going to be your job.' And I said OK," she said. "But I like it. I think it's the best position. We have to be in the game at all times. Some hitters don't have to be in the game, if they're off. But a setter has to be in the center of things."

Birrell, who's also a point guard for the BSHS girls' basketball team (a natural-born facilitator, it seems), doesn't mind the pressure that goes with the position.

"My team is counting on me," she said. "If don't get a set, I just have to shake it off and try harder."

Nebraska star's season may be finished

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Second-ranked Nebraska is facing the prospect of finishing the season without quarterback Tommie Frazier, who has a blood clot in his right calf.

FRAZIER

"It could be a few weeks, but it could be the season. At this point nobody knows," coach Tom Osborne said Monday, revealing that Frazier was admitted a day earlier to Bryan Hospital.

Team doctor Pat Clare said the blood clot was being treated with enzymes and blood thinner. The clot has shrunk 25 percent since treatment started. An average person is treated with blood thinners for two to four months, he said.

"He's responding very well," Clare said.

Frazier, a junior and key to Nebraska's option offense, will miss Saturday's game against Wyoming, Osborne said. Brook Berringer has been Frazier's backup.

Quarterback coach Turner Gill said he spoke with Frazier on Sunday.

"Basically I said he should just hang in there and try to keep his spirits up," said Gill, a former Nebraska star. "It's a down time for you right now, but you've got the best medical people to help you and something good will come from this."

Frazier left practice Sept. 19 on a stretcher with ice bags attached to his calf, but practiced full time the rest of the week.

"We knew he had a bruise and was sore, but then you get that every week," Gill said.

On Saturday, Frazier was not declared the starter for the Pacific game until after pregame warmups. Osborne pulled Frazier and most of the starters early from a game Nebraska won 70-21.

Frazier played in only two series. He led two touchdown drives that took 1:45 and 1:32 in the first six minutes.

Orioles excuse Oates

BALTIMORE (AP) — When open the 1995 baseball season, there will be a new manager in the dugout.

Johnny Oates was fired Monday by owner Peter Angelos, becoming the third manager to be fired since the strike.

Oates, who led the Orioles to a 63-49 record this season, failed to produce the results Angelos expected from a lineup bolstered in 1994 by the addition of six high-priced free agents.

Angelos openly questioned several of Oates' decisions last year and questioned his ability to lead the team. Rumors of Oates' dismissal began in May, and intensified in early August when the Orioles fell 10 games behind the first-place New York Yankees in the AL East.

An October without baseball? Not even football fills the void

An October without baseball boggles the mind. Baseball is a spring and summer game. The coming of spring wasn't official at my house until the first game of catch. In the summer, baseball was everything - it's what you played, what you watched, what you talked about. Still, when you think about the greatest baseball moments - the ones where you remember where you were at the time (like the JFK assassination) - when did they happen?

Dave Hargrave
Sports Editor

In October 1977, I was an 8-year-old who loved the Cincinnati Reds and hated the Los Angeles Dodgers. In 17 years nothing has changed, but that one October night was one of the rare occasions I was a dyed-in-blue Dodger supporter.

Hey! They were playing the New York Yankees!

If I'd rooted for the Yankees, Dad wouldn't have let me watch the game with him. Dad grew up during the days the Yankees seemed to win the World Series twice a year. More than once Dad told me his true feelings.

"I'd root for the Russians against the Yankees."

Well, the Russians, the U.S. Army and the Mighty Morphin Power Rangers couldn't have beaten the Yankees that night. New York's Reggie Jackson - a man I'd been conditioned to hate - swung his bat three times.

He hit three home runs.

I didn't want to cheer, but Jackson's hitting overwhelmed this 8-year-old, and the endorsements that followed added to the snowball effect.

Remember 'Reggie,' the candy bar? Remember ReggieVision? Par-sonic hired Jackson to hawk his little black-and-white TVs, and the commercials had the Yankee Slugger pulling TVs out of refrigerators.

Today, Jackson is one of my heroes. Sure, he often comes off as a pompous jerk, and he owns more cars than I do baseball cards, but you have to like the guy that stuck the baseball hook in the water and reeled you in. Since that October night, I've watched thousands of baseball games, and part of the attraction is waiting to see if I'll ever see another performance like Jackson's.

Never have. Saw Al Martin of the Buffalo Bisons hit three dingers in a minor-league game in Louisville, but that wasn't the World Series.

Speaking of the World Series...Oh, that's right. No one is speaking of the World Series because there won't be one this year. Rawlings, the sporting goods manufacturer, made 5,000 commemorative baseballs to be used in the 1994 World Series. Can you imagine how much a ball from a phantom World Series will be worth in 10, 20 or 50 years?

No, and it's hard to imagine how an October without baseball will affect this country's love for the game. In recent days, the Public Broadcasting System has soaked the airwaves with "Baseball," a nine-part documentary telling the history of the game in America, and loads of other baseball programming.

It's pure torture. It's reminding every baseball fan of what we're lacking right now, at this moment. If PBS had shown "Baseball" in June, or April, that would have knocked enough sense in baseball's bigshots to save the season.

But it's too late. Father and son will be sitting in front of the television one night channel surfing, and who knows? Maybe the son will find that magical moment, one he'll remember for the next 17 years.

Watching "The Simpsons."

SEPT. 28, 1994

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You are playful as you deal with a domestic matter. Be aware of bottom lines. You enjoy being close and open with a family member. Finances flourish because of a partnership. Your instincts are right on. Tonight: Whatever it is, do it at home. *****

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You become talkative. Partners care for you and let you know. Communications are extraordinary, bringing you things that you hadn't dreamed of. Focus on success and making your desires real. Tonight: Ask, and you shall receive. *****

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You are on financial alert. Others might not understand where you are coming from with funds, but they will when you explain. Career drive and odds for success are strong. You attain what you need. Tonight: Watch spending. **

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You are full of fun and games. Your creativity is high. Your understanding builds rapport with a loved one. Determine your priorities. A positive approach allows new things to occur. News from a distance is important. Tonight: Be the personality kid. *****

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Much that is going on is subconscious. Trust your judgment to make what you need happen. Remain optimistic. Do not underestimate another's role in your life. A family member cares a lot but needs attention. Tonight: Vanish with a favorite person. ***

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Express your deeper feelings. Problems can be solved surprisingly easily. Awareness of bottom lines makes you and another happier. Focus on success, happiness and gaining friends. Tonight: You make the decisions. *****

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A responsible approach toward finances succeeds. A co-worker has an appealing offer. Success comes through endurance, a positive approach and long-range thinking. Be clear about your work role. Tonight: Work late. ****

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your openness to change can make a difference. Another

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Creativity surges because of your willingness to gain understanding. Being clear about choices. You do well because of who you are and how you decide to handle stress. Good news comes your way. Tonight: Go to the movies. *****

IF SEPT. 28 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: It could be a very exciting year. You'll perceive life freshly. Your ability to get down to the real issues will bring financial and professional gain. Your expanding community image will push you ahead. Success will be favored all year, but especially through the holiday season. If you are single, you'll meet people through day-to-day contact. Show your true feelings. Don't try to buy others' affection. If you are attached, look at what is important in your relationship; your partner might need to discuss priorities. CANCER pushes you hard.

THE ASTERISKS (*) SHOW THE KIND OF DAY YOU'LL HAVE: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult.

Be kind; spay or neuter your pet

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the woman who was embarrassed to ask whether her tomcat could mate with a rabbit:

What she should really be embarrassed about is owning an unneutered male cat.

While it is true her cat cannot father "kittirabbits," unless he is neutered soon, he will undoubtedly be responsible for helping to produce many kittens, thereby contributing to the disgraceful situation of millions of animals being put to death because there are no homes for them.

In addition, Abby, when her tomcat is neutered, he will make a much more socially acceptable pet -- and will stop trying to get funny with the bunny. -- MARGARET MARSHALL IN SEATTLE

DEAR MARGARET: Your point is well-taken. And while we're on this important subject, all dog owners should have their pets spayed or neutered so that unwanted puppies won't have to meet a cruel end.

A well-to-do animal lover in Los Angeles contributes generously to the local Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (SPCA), requesting that her contribution be used expressly for spaying and neutering. Perhaps others may want to do the same.

P.S. Sandy and Bob Miller of Ellicott City, Md., sent me an interesting chart distributed by The Maryland Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals:

"Two uncontrolled breeding cats -- plus all their kittens and all their kittens' kittens, if none are ever neutered or spayed, add up to: first year: 12; second year: 66; third year: 362; fourth year: 2,201; fifth year: 12,680; sixth year: 73,041; seventh year:

420,715; eighth year: 2,423,316; ninth year: 13,958,290.

Boggles your mind, doesn't it? DEAR ABBY: A remarried widow wrote complaining about sleeping with her husband's two dogs, who kept her awake. You replied that maybe he should try to train the dogs to stay in a basket by the bed. From my experience, that will be hard to do.

During my college days, I had a little dog that slept with me in my sleeping bag. We were both freezing in a trailer. Years later, I left her with my Gramma when I was going to be out of the country. Gramma asked me to train her to sleep in a basket before I left. The pooch didn't understand, so I decided Gramma could set the new rules for the new place.

I returned a month later and found little black doggie hairs between Gramma's sheets. "What's this?" I asked. "Well," Gramma blushed, "it was easier to teach an old Gramma new tricks." -- S.K. CHEW, OREGON

DEAR ABBY: This may not help "Stumped in Delaware," who didn't know how to tell a man his zipper was open, but readers of your vintage (and mine) will surely enjoy the laugh.

My father, as he became older, also became slightly forgetful about zipping himself up. When this happened, Mother came up with a great reminder. She would softly sing "Zippity Doo Dah" as she went about her work or recreation.

It worked immediately -- every time. -- LOVE MY MEMORIES IN MENLO PARK, CALIF.
