

ONE OF THE REASONS

We feature clothes from the House of Kuppenheimer. It that we are able to secure such a wide variety of fabrics and styles, many of them exclusive and restricted to this large house alone. Naturally this gives us an advantage which we are quick to pass on to our patrons. Lots of men buy at this store, because as they tell us, "We can get something different here." They know they don't look over the same old patterns season after season, the same monotonous designs. Right now we have some especially pleasing models, shapely, full of snap and life. Some of the quiet color harmonies in the cool grays and browns are decidedly novel. We would like to have you see them and you needn't be afraid of any one coaxing you to buy.

MOUNTAIN CLIMBING IN SWITZERLAND

VILLAGE OF ST. MORITZ

THE world-over Alpine societies have prepared the itineraries for the year, and this article will have reference to some of the more important projects outlined by the various sections of the great Swiss Alpine club, writes John Ritchie, Jr., in the Boston Transcript. The homes of its many sections are in the midst of the snowy mountains and with important peaks within easy striking distance and a wealth of guides, professional and amateur, to lead the parties and three-quarters of a hundred club huts and hotels in which the members have some matters in the way of precedence, there is little wonder that not less than four or five hundred ascents are planned for the current year. Each one of the sixty or sixty-five sections has its own itinerary, some of them, the least ambitious, with half a dozen trips planned, while the most important ones have in general a trip in each month of the year.

Bachtel and Berne are the sections that this year present the most imposing outlines of the trips; the latter with no less than 17 in its itinerary and the former with 14, two of the peaks at 8,000 feet, five others above 9,500 and one of these, the Wetterhorn, rising to above 12,000 feet altitude. The Berne section began its walks with a ski tour in January to the Abenberg and a month later to Selkühl. The March outing was to Hochwang above the Langenthal and a fortnight ago there was a climb to Beichen.

High Climbing in June. May has three items on the list. Sommerau, in the westerly extension of the Jura mountains, not far from Basle, on May 12; four days later a joint meeting with the clubs of central Switzerland in the Oberland, and towards the end of the month, May 26-27, a Whit Sunday trip in the Jura in the vicinity of Doubs. In June the higher climbing begins with the Dent de Brenjalre (7,243 feet) among the northern foothills of the Bernese Oberland. July, August and September have two ascents each, early in the first named month, the Suleck (8,013 feet) in the ranges to the west of Lauterbrunnen, while July 20-21 will be devoted to the ascent of the Golden Horn (nearly 12,000 feet) in the Kander region. The early August trip, 24, will be to Monte Rosa and in the middle of the month to the Hangelscherhorn. September will open with a joint excursion of this section and that of Basle to the Chasseral (5,330 feet) and October, November and December will have each of them a trip to some less important mountain top.

The Bachtel section began its good work for the year on January 7 with a reunion with neighboring sections on the Bachtel, one of the minor elevations of less than 4,000 feet overlooking the lake of Zurich, and in February there were ski tours to neighboring heights. On May 27 there will be a "family party" to a lesser peak near the lake of Zurich, and in June the heavier work begins. June 2 or 9 will be the Stenapfingel (7,900) and June 23 or 30 the trip will be to the Claridenstock (10,700 feet) in the ranges just south of the lake of Lucerne. Piz Rotondo, a couple of hundred feet lower, one of the St. Gotthard mountains, is the task for July, while within the first two weeks of August the Wetterhorn at above 12,000 and Garmisch are alternatives, the club uniting again on August 18 or 25 on the Piz Platta, above 11,000 feet in the Spiggen region. September, and the three following months, offer less important climbs, being respectively Hochwang, Kopfstock, Regelsstein, and Etzel, the latter of the height of one of the Sandwich peaks in the White mountains, and offering no extended view and being but half an hour above a comfortable inn suggests rather the sports of the ski than real Alpine work.

Joint Trips Planned. These two itineraries may serve as a sample to show the kind of mountain climbing it is that forms the summer amusement of so many of the Swiss clubs. There is a continual setting forth of excursion parties, largely over Sundays, in every part of the country, the comparative smallness of Switzerland giving to every club the opportunity to carry its climbing into any part of the mountains and affording the chances of a number of joint-trips. There are a number of joint trips, the clubs of central Switzerland forming one group in the Oberland and another gathering being of the eastern sections. Section Aarau has in its itinerary Todt, Diablerets, Monch and Urvogelstock with a trip in which the women are to join on November 3 at Zeglingen which will be an excursion with the Lindenberg section. The Basle is to have July 5-7 a three-day climb in the Goschenen mountains, two nights in huts, one of them the Trift cabin, with intervening climbs to the Sustenborn (11,500 feet) and the Thieralpstock, coming down to Meiringen. The Blumalp section will join with Oberland sections in a meeting at Interlaken on May 16, and in August will ascend the always difficult Finsteraarhorn, the highest peak in its district. The Chaux-de-Fonds section, the seat of which is but a short distance from Lake Neuchatel in the very heart of the Juras, has a program for the year of no less than 25 trips, largely in its own territory. The Wildstrubel, the Aigüille du Tacul in the Chamouni district, the Grande Foudre and Veilan are in its list of the higher and more distant summer trips. The Grindelwald section, as might be expected from its remarkable location, has a series of important outings in which the Jungfrau railway is an important factor. The members will attend the general meeting in Interlaken in May, in June its trip will be to the Gargel hut along the plateau of the Monch and in July from the Jungfraujoch station down the great Aletsch glacier to the Concordia hut, returning by the way of the Finsteraarhorn.

Record in Frugality. A man named Joseph Spitzberger, who died in a Vienna hospital recently, left a fortune of over $500,000 to the Jewish community for the erection of a children's hospital. Spitzberger was formerly the cashier at a mill. He acquired his wealth by the utmost parsimony. He lived in a small garret which was never heated or lighted, as he always went to bed at dusk. His meals were stale bread and tea without sugar, eggs and fruit being rare luxuries. He never smoked and abstained from drinking wine or beer. He never rode in a tramcar or made excursions, and he never saw the inside of a theater. His greatest parsimony probably was that he never bought a newspaper, but got his news by reading the sheets posted outside the newspaper offices. He mended his shabby second-hand clothes himself and was his own laundress. Thus he managed to accumulate almost the whole of his income, and increased his capital by successful speculations. Even when wealthy he continued to lead the same frugal life, never spending a farthing on amusement or things which he considered unnecessary.

Mystery of the Loco Weed.

The Department of Agriculture has been conducting a most remarkable series of investigations of the strangest and most dreaded plant in America—the poison loco weed of the western stock ranges which has killed millions of cattle, sheep and horses, and whose deadly effects scientists have been trying to counteract for more than 20 years.

Determined to find if possible, the cause of the loco weed's deadliness, an expert in poisonous plant investigations of the bureau of animal industry has been located with assistants at Hugo, Colo., engaged in an exhaustive investigation. He has ascertained that it is possible to prevent the ravages of loco if the cases are taken in hand for treatment in time. Stock so cured will be immune from loco weed thereafter, in most cases. Even though they may eat the loco weed again they succumb to its effects much more slowly. The expert has also found that the common rattle weed, or white loco, which has been regarded as comparatively harmless, is fully as virulent as the purple loco—a fact which may aid materially in preventing the ravages of the dread disease among cattle.

The weed which has brought ruin to many stockmen and which contributes not a little to the nation's beef problem, is particularly common on the vast cattle ranges of the west. It is a drought resisting plant, which intensifies its deadly effect. It grows in bush form, a foot high, and from one to two feet in diameter. The leaves are broad and green and the plant, with its flowers of white or purple, makes a pretty effect on the prairie. In times of drought, when other plants wither and die, the loco weed flourishes greener than ever. Usually cattle will avoid the weed when there is plenty of other food, but when food is scarce, owing to lack of rain, they begin to nibble the loco. At first they consume it in small quantities as their natural inclination is to reject the loco as food. But soon the taste is acquired and then the stock will eat it in preference to anything else.

Fry Chicken in Cottolene

The best fried chicken you ever ate can be made with Cottolene.

Cottolene can be heated to a much higher temperature than either butter or lard, without burning. It fries so quickly that little of the fat is absorbed, preventing the food being greasy. For this reason, Cottolene-fried food is more healthful than food fried in butter or lard.

Cottolene is more economical than lard—goes one-third farther; costs very much less than butter.

The Texas Game Laws

Austin, Texas, Oct. 18.—As the open season for game approaches, the game, fish and oyster department is being besieged with inquiries regarding the terms of the law and when the season opens. Chief Game Warden Cox said that hunters are writing by the score about the hunting season. The bird season opens on November 1 and the deer season on December 1. As it is impossible to answer all of these inquiries Mr. Cox has prepared a brief summary of the law for the benefit of those contemplating hunting this season. The non-resident county license is $1.75 and the non-resident state license is $15. Following is the summary of the game law as announced by Game Warden Cox:

Section 1—All the wild deer, wild antelope, wild Rock Mountain sheep, wild turkey, wild ducks, wild geese, wild grouse, wild prairie chickens, wild Mongolian or English pheasants, wild quail or partridges, wild doves, wild pigeons, wild plover, wild snipe, wild jacksnipe, wild curlew, wild robins, wild Mexican pheasants or Chacalca, and all other wild animals, wild fowls, within the borders of this state, shall be and the same are hereby declared to be the property of the public.

Game Birds—Turkeys, ducks, prairie chickens, geese, grouse, Mongolian or English pheasants, quail, doves, pigeons, plover, snipe, curlew, robin and Mexican Chacalca.

Unlawful at any time—To kill, catch, have in possession, deal or sell, or to buy, sell or offer to sell, or to ship any other than a game bird except as specially permitted. And no part of plumage, skin or body can be sold or had in possession for sale.

To take or needlessly destroy or have in possession nest or eggs of any wild bird, except as specially permitted. Following are exempt: English sparrows, hawks, crows, buzzards, blackbirds, rice birds and owls.

To sell, offer for sale, have in possession for the purpose of sale, or birds or fowl mentioned in Section 1 and 2 of the game law.

To destroy wild geese or ducks except with ordinary gun shot from the shoulder.

To kill, trap or ensnare wild fowl, male deer or spotted fawn at any season of the year, or have in possession.

To hunt any game mentioned in Section 1 with hunting lamp or lantern.

Unlawful for five years from 1907—To kill, take or destroy any Mongolian or English pheasants, prairie chicken, antelope or Rock Mountain sheep.

Passing of the Lumberjack

LOGS IN NORTHERN MICHIGAN

EVERY frontier region has its peculiar characters. On the plains the cowboys; in the mining regions, the miners; and in the timber regions, the lumberjack. While the work of the lumberjack is not so spectacular as the "round up" and "bronch busting" of the cowboy, he is an interesting and picturesque character who is rapidly disappearing with the vanishing of our forests. In the time of his glory he is the fellow well met who has labored all winter in a lumber camp, saved a few hundred dollars, gone to the city in the spring and perhaps in less than 48 hours after landing is minus his roll of bills and has nothing to show for it except a headache and a very indistinct recollection how he came by that. With the lumberjack will go the lumber camp, the camp "cook," the "dunkie," the "boss" and other worthies.

From Michigan to the Pacific coast are found the lumber camps, employing at seasons of the year thousands of men. These lumber camps, small communities in themselves, have their unwritten laws and regulations, differing more or less in the several states.

A few years ago the writer with a crew of men was sent out early one fall to a lumber camp to cut basswood for a bedding firm. The cook with a few of the lumberjacks had remained in camp during the summer of 1906, but all the formal customs of the camp were preserved. We looked upon this excursion into the woods for the purpose of cutting wood as a sort of late summer vacation, and were accordingly in high spirits. When the horn blew for the first meal we rushed boisterously into the cook's shanty and seating ourselves at the table began to talk and joke. The lumberjacks looked at us with a sort of awe and then glanced at the cook.

Cook's Commands Obeyed.
"No talking at the table," the cook fiercely called out as he glared upon us. This command, so sudden and unusual, was strictly obeyed during the meal. At first we took it to be a rebuke for our noisy way of entering the cook shanty, but after the meal was over we were informed that talking at the table was a serious breach of the regulations and that we had better abide by the rule.

The privileged character in camp is the cook. Within his domain his authority is supreme. The saying that the way to reach a man's heart is through his stomach holds good in the lumber camp, and a cook can make or mar the efficiency of a crew of men by the quality of his cooking.

In Wisconsin and certain parts of Minnesota the lumberjacks enter the "cook shanty" at meal times with a sort of reverence. Next to the "boss shanty," it is the holy of holies. When the door is reached all conversation ceases and the men silently file in and take their places. The head of the table is always reserved for the boss. Not a word is spoken at meal time, except when victuals are asked for. Meal time, instead of being a social hour as it is in society, is with the lumberjack a time of silence, if not of meditation. The origin of this rule has been variously explained. The most plausible explanation is that the lumberjacks might inadvertently drop some remark reflecting upon the cooking, and thus insult the dignity of the cook.

In Washington, at least in some of the camps, no such rule exists. At meal time the men indulge in all kinds of rilleries, not even excepting the cook.

Where They Sleep.
In all camps the meal hours are announced by blowing a horn, or more generally, by striking a large triangle made especially for this purpose. At the signal the camp awakens with men rushing from the bunk houses to the cook shanty.

The lumberjacks sleep in bunk houses. During the evening they sit along their bunks smoking and conversing. Sometimes a boxing or wrestling match is arranged. By nine o'clock all lights are out and the man who has the temerity to keep his light burning after that hour will be lucky if some boots or socks do not find their way in his direction.

The bunk houses are sometimes models of cleanliness, but the lumberjack is like average humanity and if no external influence is brought to bear upon him he does not make much of an effort to keep himself clean. Unless the management makes rules or the funkies carefully attend to his duties in keeping things clean, the bunk houses are apt to become filthy.

Sunday is wash day, and if a stream or river is at hand the lumberjacks can be seen lined up along the bank "bolling up." In this operation they violate the rules of the house wife when she does her laundry. Instead of rubbing the clothes and trying to free them from dirt first they boll them all at once. The result is that though the clothes may be clean, they certainly do not look it. Bolling the clothes has at least one good effect. It annihilates any vermin that may be in them.

When spring comes and the snow disappears the camp breaks up. Woe to the town that in the early days was located near a lumber camp! The lumberjacks released from all restraint, swooped down upon the town and it was a wild time for a while. With the advent of civilization and law and order these raids of the lumberjack have become a thing of the past. Time has had its mollifying influence upon the lumberjack, seasoning him and making him more law abiding, but he is still to a great extent the free shiftless being who, when he comes to the city, is the victim of the saloon keeper and the crook.

TRACED TO RACING STABLES
Clang Phraac, "Getting His Goat," So Popular Now, Had Origin in Actual Occurrence.

Unlike many other vivid or picturesque slang expressions, which enrich and enliven the English language, but the source of which is either obscure or totally unknown, the origin of the phrase, "to get his goat," can fortunately be traced. Until it came into popular use, about half a dozen years ago, the phrase was confined to racing stables and to running horses and was part of the language of the racetrack.

It was formerly the rather widespread custom among owners of racing stock to keep a goat in the same stall with a horse, either from the superstitious belief in manes or from the more scientific belief that the goat imparted some of his strength or magnetism to the horse. Ardent friendships have been known to spring up between goats and horses living thus in close intimacy and sleeping together.

When a horse that had the companionship of a goat chanced to win the jockeys would attribute his success to the influence of the goat, and it happened more than once that a stable boy would "get the goat" of the winning horse by entering the stable surreptitiously at night and taking the animal to the stall of his own favorite. If the horse that was deprived of his goat friend should lose the next day and the other horse should win, that would, of course, strengthen the belief in the efficacy of the goat.

The practice of relying on goats to help a horse win a race is said to be dying out, but it has left behind one of the most expressive phrases, which seems destined ultimately to become as respectable as any English idiom.

ASSAULT ON COLONEL DEPLORED BY WILSON

raise his hand against the peaceful orderly, the just, the open determination of public offices.

"I came out to fulfill the engagements of this week with a very great reluctance, because my thought is constantly of that gallant gentleman lying in a hospital at Chicago. Mr. Roosevelt did a vast deal to wake the country up to the problems that now have to be settled and that he might have been stayed in his attempts to discuss the settlement of those questions by a band of violence is a thing which every American must deeply deplore and feel ashamed of."

"At the same time there are these questions to be settled. There is the great life of the country to go on and we can not afford to have it go on without guidance.

"My indictment against the Republican administrations of the past is that under them we have done no whitener; we have drifted. We have been without pilots; we have been without charts. No man has laid down any intelligible course and in these latter years we have been absolutely paralyzed. A Democratic House, a Senate mixed of Democrats and Republicans and near-Republicans; men who had revolted against the policy of the Republican party and were coming very slowly around to the position which their Democratic colleagues had long occupied and even a President unwilling to see even a united House, when they could on rare occasions unite, accomplish anything to change the existing order of things a President who, though he had condemned one of the most conspicuous schedules of the present tariff, was not willing that the Congress should change it, but only willing that it should be changed under the advice of a board of his own appointment; a singular situation, my fellow-citizens; a situation where the President withholds his assent from the very kind of reform, the very specific reform which, not in its details, but in its general purpose he had himself endorsed, showing that what you are asking to do, in being asked to vote for a Republican administration, is one or the other of two things:

"You are either asked to drift under no guidance at all, or you are asked to stand still absolutely. America can not stand still, whether she could afford to or not.

"Don't you catch the sound of the wind in the air; don't you hear the murmurs of the great multitudes of men who say, 'prosperity? Who is enjoying prosperity? The blessing has not reached us. We do not find our wages going up, we find it almost impossible to pay our bills and when our wages do occasionally go up, the prices go higher and the wages can not keep up with the prices. Prosperity! Yes, on the part of men who are reaping the harvest at the top; but no much of it percolates to us."

Hearing an illuminated parade, Gov. Wilson was given a great reception in the streets here last night. He addressed a big crowd at a theatre, as well as an overflow meeting and was greeted with loud cheers everywhere.

The Governor referred in his speeches to Republican billboard advertisements, showing a picture of President Taft and surrounded with campaign arguments.

"One phrase in that advertisement sticks in my memory," said the Governor, "that is: 'It is better to be safe than sorry.' It is also better to hug a base than to steal it. But I would rather be courageous than sorry. I would rather espouse a great cause and lose than to be ashamed to espouse any cause at all; I would rather risk my fortune than sell my liberty."

The Governor talked at length on progressive principles. "I take my hat off to Bob La Follette," he said. "He has never taken his eye for a single moment from the goal of the true progressive, in spite of every temptation."

Five Men Make Discoveries in Rainier National Park.

Two Members of the Party Barely Miss Death on Rocks at the Bottom of Ice Slide—Crawl Over 17 Glaciers.

CLIMB TACOMA PEAK

Five Men Make Discoveries in Rainier National Park.

Tacoma, Wash.—Five mountain climbers, headed by Prof. J. H. Flett of the Tacoma high school, have completed an exploration trip around the peak of Mount Tacoma, in Rainier National park. Two of the climbers barely missed death on the rocks at the bottom of steep snow and ice slides. A hitherto unknown route around this, the most massive and highest mountain peak in the United States, was followed, and unmarked glaciers were crossed and unnamed peaks scaled. The complete circuit of the mountain was made in seven days.

Subject of German Emperor Finds Odd Angle in Naturalization Law.

Seattle, Wash.—Although Albert H. Their child was born in that city, but on land under the protection of the German flag, making him a German. Young contended that as a German he was entitled to naturalization in the United States, but Naturalization Examiner John Speck Smith resisted his application under section 2169 of the revised statutes, which provides that only aliens who are free white persons or who are of African nativity or descent may become naturalized.

FOREST HILL, the Magnificent Estate of John D. Rockefeller

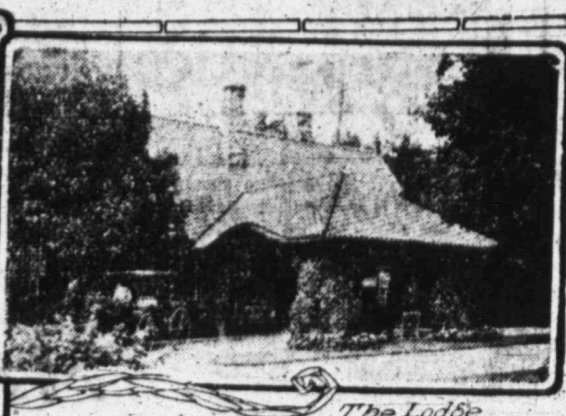

Blooded cattle at the Ohio Estate of John D. Rockefeller

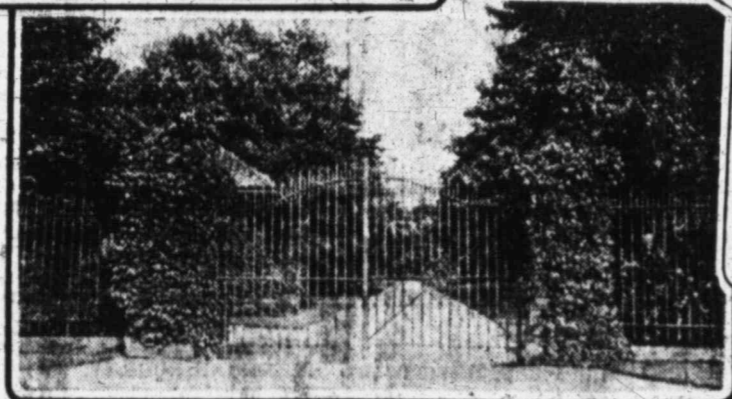

The Private Lake at Forest Hill

The Lodge at the Main Entrance

Main Entrance to Forest Hill

The Rockefeller Mansion

A LARGE proportion of the reading public has been treated to something of a surprise in connection with the newspaper accounts of disturbances at the John D. Rockefeller estate at Pocantico Hills, near Tarrytown, N. Y. The surprise came not so much from the rather sensational disturbances at the New York estate, with its incidental rumors of Black Hand plots, as from the announcement that the richest man in the world, pending the unsettled conditions at his eastern country seat, "remains in seclusion at his magnificent estate at Cleveland."

Outside of northern Ohio there was, figuratively speaking, a general rubbing of eyes on the part of the people who take more or less interest in the doings of the Standard Oil millionaire. They had never heard most of them, of this "magnificent estate at Cleveland." To be sure, they were aware that John D., alike to all the Rockefeller clan, had come from the metropolis of the Buckeye State—that is, Cleveland was the base of operations from which he reached out for new worlds to conquer—but it was the general impression of most of these casual onlookers at current events that our wealthiest citizen had only a more or less commonplace city home in Cleveland. That impression was all very well as far as it went. John D. Rockefeller has a "town house" in Cleveland just as he has in New York City, although he occupies the former much more seldom than he does the latter—sometimes no more than one day in a year. But the Oil King has a second home at Cleveland and it is this remarkable, though comparatively little known habitation, which has been thrust into the limelight by the suddenly perturbed conditions at Pocantico Hills. Furthermore, this unexploited Cleveland estate is pre-eminently the favorite residence of Mrs. Rockefeller and Mr. Rockefeller's preference for it is almost as strong as is that of his wife.

"Forest Hill" this estate is named, and the title is, perhaps doubly appropriate, since Cleveland has long been known as the Forest City. "Forest Hill" is unique among American residential properties. Nowhere else in the length and breadth of our land can you find an estate of like magnitude set down in the midst of a populous and rapidly growing city. Why this Rockefeller "homestead"—the richest man has always regarded it in that light—would, if broken up into city lots, be worth several million dollars, taking no account at all of the present improvements. Only a man with the limitless money resources of the long time head of the Standard Oil would be able to indulge a fad for a country place within reach of every city convenience, yet affording such isolation that its occupant need never hear the whirr of the trolley cars, the honk of the motors and the thousand and one noises incident to urban existence.

But it is not for the sake of city conveniences in rural surroundings that John D. Rockefeller maintains this, perhaps the most valuable of all his residences. Rather is it for the sake of old associations and the fact that it enables him to enjoy a summer and autumn climate—swept by Lake Erie breezes—that is much to his liking. And, of course, "Forest Hill" was not a city oasis when Rockefeller acquired it. Then it was suburban if not actually countryified, Cleveland, extending eastward with in all but mushroom growth, reaching out to and has now all but surrounded Forest Hill with paved and thickly populated streets. Yet, thanks to nature's barriers rather than to human guards the Oil King and his family are able to obtain at this retreat a degree of rest and seclusion that would scarcely be considered possible when we take into consideration the fact that the front gate of the estate opens upon Euclid avenue—long renowned as a beautiful residential thoroughfare, but in this age of the automobile known to fame as one of the busiest motor highways in America.

As a visitor walks or drives through the Forest Hill estate he is impressed over and over again with the appropriateness of the name. Nowhere in the United States can there be found more beautiful woodlands. To be sure, it is nature with her hand compo to use a familiar term. The trees display no dead or broken limbs and there is an absence of underbrush, so that the pedestrian may walk in peace and comfort in any section of the woods, but, on the other hand, nature has been, in so far as possible, left to her own resources. There are thickets that suggest the primeval forest and shadowy ravines with tumbling streams that savor of the wilderness. All this is in accord with the definite policy of John D. Rockefeller. Nature has been assisted wherever possible, but never seriously interfered with. Many of the foreigners who have been entertained at Forest Hill and who have come from countries where formal gardening is a fetish have marvelled that the richest man in the world should not have utilized his wealth to create a masterpiece of English or Italian gardening at Forest Hill. But Mr. Rockefeller has remained unmoved by their arguments. His gardeners at the New York estate have been permitted to indulge in some frills of this kind, but at the Ohio place only the "American school" of landscape gardening has been tolerated.

The Forest Hill estate is an oblong tract, somewhat triangular in form. The estate proper comprises 460 acres and the adjoining "farm" adds 200 acres to the total. The property, in its greatest dimension, has a length of nearly two miles and more than two-thirds of the estate is heavily wooded and so rolling in character as to provide those deeply cut ravines that add so much to the picturesque quality of the place. The estate is well fenced and there is a lodge at the main gate where a witty Irishman who has been in the service of Mr. Rockefeller for more than a score of years scrutinizes "the credentials of every visitor, but there is little trespassing and there is no obstructive cordon or armed guards such as are conspicuous at the New York estate where John D. Rockefeller, Jr., is master in the absence of his father.

As might be expected, the estate at Forest Hill has a golf course. There is an aggregate of more than seven miles of roads on the estate—mostly stone ballast with gravel dressing—and there is nothing abroad to surpass them for the comparatively light traffic for which they are designed. But most of the Forest Hill roads are narrow and for this and other reasons the Standard Oil magnate will not permit automobiles other than his own to enter his grounds except on special occasions and by special permission. John D. Rockefeller is one of our rich men who has succumbed completely to the automobile hobby. He owns several cars of various types; has provided a neat and simple but commodious garage at Forest Hill; and has accorded motoring a place second only to golf as his pet pastime—but for all that he will not risk jolting on his Cleveland estate and indeed, he makes use of a motor hired to be more than likely to "instruct the driver to leave and enter the grounds by the rear gate, thus avoiding the network of private roads with their many sharp curves. Speaking of Mr. Rockefeller's golfing propensities it must be noted that a nine-hole golf course is a feature of the Forest Hill estate. And such a course as it is. The richest man probably plays more golf at his Cleveland estate than at any other place—excepting his annual winter sojourn at Augusta, Ga., and so the links may be kept in perfect condition. To make them absolutely so a small fortune was spent on this golf course only this past spring. At each tee, hundreds of dollars have been expended in installing a system of drainage that has yielded a hard, firm turf that is a delight to every golfer who has opportunity to play over the course—and John D. Rockefeller is rather generous in the distribution of the coveted pastboards that enable his friends to make use of this model playground. Near the golf links, a reminder of bygone days, is a section of the half-mile private race track which was constructed by Mr. Rockefeller in his younger days when he had a penchant for trotting. In this same part of the grounds, too, may be seen a row of trees, planted by John D., Jr., entirely in accordance with his own ideas, which he was a very small boy.

At the highest part of the Forest Hill estate there is a private lake that covers seven acres and adds greatly to the attractiveness of the place. A white boathouse shelters among other craft a wonderful diminutive motor boat which John D. Rockefeller had constructed for his favorite grandson and which that proud youngster can operate unaided. On the shore of the lake is a tower and windmill—retained now only for the sake of appearances, but thereby hanes a tale suggestive of the proverbial shrewdness and thrift of the head of the Rockefeller clan. As our readers doubtless know, it is the special weakness of the average man who acquires a country seat or a vacation home to install a model private water power and lighting plant. But not so Mr. Rockefeller. He has these things in days gone by when he literally had to have them, as he speak, but now the city utilities have been brought within his reach he has had recourse to the city water supply and the commercial current of the city is used for the electric lamps which illuminate the Forest Hill residence and grounds.

The residence, by the way, is somewhat overshadowed by the magnitude and beauty of the grounds. Architecturally the mansion is not nearly so impressive as that at the Pocantico Hills estate, but then Mr. Rockefeller did not build it. The tantalizing structure had been used as a sanitarium before the Oil King acquired it. Some of some critics that it look like a hotel, and he merely continued the existing building, making such alterations as he found necessary from time to time. For all that the house is a thoroughly comfortable one and only recently Mr. Rockefeller, possibly in confession of his advancing age, had constructed an extensive sun parlor which commands a splendid view over the entire countryside and Lake Erie beyond. This sun parlor will make the Forest Hill mansion a congenial residence until late in the fall or early in the winter. Ordinarily the Rockefeller household has arrived at Forest Hill in May or June and remained until September or October, but this year, as above mentioned, the richest man plans to continue his stay much later than usual.

The addition to the residence and the work on the golf course comprise but a small portion of the campaign of improvements which have been carried out these past few months under the personal direction of the Standard Oil wizard and in planning which he has manifested all the enthusiasm that might be expected from a much younger homemaker. And, as evidence of how thoroughly up to date is this veteran financier it may be cited that he is as keen as anybody regarding the advantages of concrete—the twentieth century building material. Fifteen bridges have been provided on the Forest Hill estate and although they are stone-faced for the sake of harmony with the landscape, all the more recently constructed bridges are primarily of concrete construction.

Extensive improvements have also been carried on lately at Mrs. Rockefeller's favorite nook—the Lily pool. This is a truly idyllic spot in a soothing sylvan setting and here the mistress of Forest Hill loves to come and sit by the hour on a rustic seat so placed as to command a view of the pond and the miniature waterfalls in the tiny stream which discharges into it. That no expense is spared in accomplishing things at Forest Hill is attested by one detail of this Lily pool. Pipes have been laid connecting the pool with the steam heating plant on the estate and thus the waters of the pond are warmed to a temperature which permits the cultivation of the Egyptian Lily and other rare aquatic plants.

There is a five-acre vegetable garden and a half-acre flower garden at Forest Hill and these are supplied as sources of supply for the Rockefeller household by the "farm" which is all that its name implies and which in its relationship to the remainder of the estate is a wheel within a wheel.

You Can Be a Better Cook

It isn't all in the "knack." The utensils you use go a long way toward making your food fine and appetizing or ill-cooked and indigestible.

It's impossible to make the best cookery in utensils that quickly scorch or crack and scale off, rust and corrode. And such utensils are dangerous. Authorities say that cancer comes of eating particles of glass chipped off from ordinary enamel ware when hot.

The heat expands the iron frame but the coating of glass—which is all enamel ware is—does not expand so fast, consequently it breaks and gets mixed with the food.

There is no such danger from food cooked in up-to-date

Black Patti Company Here Wednesday

The Black Patti company in Captain Jasper, which comes to the Wichita Theatre Wednesday night October 23 is one of the largest and oldest negro companies on the road today, being in its seventeenth successful season. The principals are conceded to be the pick of the colored performers in the country and together with the chorus give a very pleasing performance.

The book and music of Captain Jasper is the work of Will Cooke, comedian with the Black Patti company and is said to contain abundant material to amuse and entertain. The Birmingham, N. Y. papers in speaking of the performance given at the Stone Opera House by the Black Patti company said that Captain Jasper was the equal of and superior to many musical shows given by entirely white artists. If you enjoy good music, good comedy and an elaborate stage setting, don't miss seeing Captain Jasper when it comes to the local playhouse.

TOWN LIKE COMMISSION TO ASSIST FARMERS

B.B. CAIN

Dallas, Texas, Oct. 18.—Mr. B. B. Cain, president of the Texas Commercial Secretaries and Business Men's Association, has recommended the organization of a Farm Life Commission to study agricultural problems. Mr. Cain, in connection with Mr. Peter Radford, president of the Farmers' Union, has made a searching investigation into the agricultural needs of the state. In discussing this subject before the annual meeting of the Commercial Secretaries Association, at Houston recently, Mr. Cain said in part:

"A sale of any commodity at less than cost of production is an economic waste and almost approaches a crime. After studying the subject I am firmly convinced that any permanent successful plan for the raising and marketing of farm products is practically impossible without strong organization."

"I am so deeply impressed with the importance of aiding the producer that I present for your consideration as the special feature of our work for the coming year, the creation of a Farm Life Bureau, whose duty it shall be to co-operate with the Farmers' Union, if possible, and make a thorough study of farm life and farm problems with the single purpose of making the business of farming, fruit growing and truck raising more remunerative and the environment of that class of citizens more attractive."

The Commercial Secretaries will organize the commission at an early meeting of the executive committee.

McAdoo Replies to Perkins.
New York, Oct. 18.—W. G. McAdoo, acting chairman of the Democratic National committee, yesterday received a long open letter from George W. Perkins, chairman of the executive committee of the third party. In his letter, Mr. Perkins quoted a dispatch from Chicago to the effect that Gov. Wilson had protested against making any more speeches in this campaign and was going to retire to Princeton. Mr. McAdoo replied as follows:
"Replying to yours of the 11th inst.: don't worry! Governor Wilson will

WILL WICHITA FALLS LOSE ITS FRANCHISE?

Denison Paper Says it is Uncertain Whether this City Will be Allowed to Hold Place

That the Texas-Oklahoma League will be larger and stronger this season than last seems assured. Already several new towns have intimated their intention of seeking berths in the league. The T-O League was one of the few brush leagues which finished its playing schedule last season. This fact alone has shown several of the skeptical towns that the league is organized on a firm basis. That Denison, Sherman, Ardmore and Durant will have organized ball in 1913 is assured. Then Hugo and McAlester, Okla., are anxious to get in. McKinney which started the season but dropped out at the end of the first series, is said to be seeking a franchise. Gainesville and Paris are mentioned favorably. The latter was in the South Central League last year but is said to be dissatisfied with the class of ball played and the long jumps necessary to cover the circuit. Bonham and Wichita Falls, members of the T-O League for the past seasons, are a trifle doubtful. Those who have backed the Bonham franchise for two seasons declared several months ago that they were through with the game, it being entirely too expensive individually. But it is believed that the Fannin county town will be in the league again this year. The Wichita Falls situation is a peculiar one. Doubtless the town will be an applicant for a franchise but whether the league will admit them is another proposition. Wichita Falls is 130 miles west of Denison, which is considered the center of the circuit. To make the jump is expensive and tiresome and there is little, if any chance to break it. Then the patronage at Wichita Falls has always been poor and it was necessary on several occasions for the club to pay the visitors the guarantee money. It is expected that there will be a meeting of the representatives of the towns seeking franchises early next January in Denison when some definite steps will be taken for the league's organization.—Denison Herald.

Considering the fact that Wichita Falls promoted and organized the league and by putting up cold cash on more than one occasion kept it from dissolution, it is hardly probable its franchise will be revoked.

McAdoo often enough and say enough during the remainder of the campaign to keep his friends satisfied and his enemies discomfited. I am not surprised that you do not like Governor Wilson's speeches. None of his opponents do; but we cannot help that. Governor Wilson has a peculiarly effective way of handling the issues and I do not think he needs any help or suggestions. Please do not hesitate however, to submit any new suggestions that may occur to you."

What is believed to be the lightest practical automobile is a new electric car weighing but 550 pounds but powerful enough to carry two persons at a speed of twenty miles an hour.

FOR THE WINTER DAYS

METHODS OF PUTTING UP ALWAYS POPULAR APPLE.

Canned. They Are a Welcome Addition to the Cold Weather Menu—Preserved Crab Apples—Ingredients with Apple Butter.

Canned Apples—Peel one-half peck of tart apples, cut them in quarters and remove cores; as soon as prepared, put the apples into cold water to which the juice of one lemon has been added. Have ready five pints of syrup, put the apples into five quart jars, fill them up with the syrup, close tightly, and place the jars in a boiler with the water coming to within an inch of the top of them, and cook about twenty minutes.

For the syrup, put three and one-half pounds of sugar and two and one-half pints of water in a preserving kettle, stirring until nearly boiling and always removing the scum that rises. Use as directed.

Preserved Crab Apples—Remove cores from two quarts of sound crab apples, using a small apple corer; then immediately drop the apples into cold water to keep them from discoloring. Put into a preserving kettle two pounds of sugar and one pint of water; let the syrup boil a few minutes, removing scum the while, and then put in the apples, letting them boil until tender without losing shape. Put the apples carefully into jars, fill these up with the syrup, seal and set away.

Apple Butter—Wash and cut up without peeling one-half peck of tart apples; put them in a preserving kettle, adding one quart of cider; cover the kettle and boil the fruit until tender. When cooked, remove the fruit from the fire and rub it through a sieve; return the pulp to the kettle, place it over a slow fire and boil it thirty minutes, stirring all the while. Then measure the pulp, and to each quart put two cups of sugar; also add one-half teaspoonful each of ground cloves and cinnamon and boil twenty minutes. Put the sauce into stone or glass jars and seal them tightly.

Apple Sweet—Peel and cut one-half peck of large sweet apples into halves or quarters and drop them at once into cold water, then place them in a preserving kettle, covering them only with water, and boil until tender. Then remove the apples from the kettle and lay the pieces so as not to break them up on a large flat platter.

In the meanwhile place two pounds of sugar and two pints of water over the fire, adding the juice and peel of two large lemons. When the syrup boils put in the apples and cook them five minutes more. Fill the jars with syrup after the apples are in them and seal.

Ginger Apples—Peel one-half peck of medium-sized tart apples and cut them into quarters; remove cores and drop apples at once into cold water, adding the juice of one lemon. Pick over and wash two ounces of green ginger and then cut it up into small pieces.

Place the preserving kettle with three pounds of sugar and one quart of water over the fire, drop in the ginger and boil five minutes; then put in the apples and cook them until a straw will pierce them easily. Remove the apples with great care from the kettle and put them in the same manner into the jars, continuing to boil the syrup for ten minutes after the fruit has been taken out. Fill the jars to overflowing with the syrup, cover, and set them upside down until cold. Instead of green ginger, one-half ounce of tincture of ginger may be used.

Help in Peeling Onions.
The merest briefest from a Chicago coworker takes another pebble (and not a tiny bit!) out of the path.

"Before beginning to peel onions, grease your finger tips liberally with butter or lard or dripping. Then grasp the knife and go on with the dreaded job! Not a trace of odor from the onion or garlic will cling to your hands, provided, of course, that you avoid handling the onion with any part of them except the fingers."

Banana Soup.
Mash six ripe bananas, then rub them through a sieve; add twice as much cold milk, sweeten to taste, add a pinch of salt and the grated rind of one lemon; bring to boiling point, then add one heaping teaspoonful of arrow-root or cornstarch mixed smooth with a little cold milk; stir till boiling, then allow to cook for eight minutes, stirring constantly; let cool, then add two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice and place on ice. Serve in bouillon cups.

Canned Pineapple Fritters.
Drain the slices of pineapple from the sirup in the can; sprinkle with kirsch and let stand an hour, then dry on a cloth. Dip the slices, one at a time, in fritter batter and fry in deep fat to a delicate amber tinge. Drain on soft paper. Serve at once with a hot sauce made of the sirup from the can.

Baked Potatoes.
Thoroughly wash 12 good sized potatoes, make a few small slits in them, but do not peel. Place in a paper bag with one tablespoon of water; cook from 40 to 60 minutes, according to size.

Vinegar for Lamp Burners.
Boil your lamp burners in weak vinegar to clean them and the light will be much clearer.
