AN OPEN SWITCH FIFTEEN KILLED

PASSENGER TRAIN ON C. H. AND D. CRASHED HEAD ON INTO FREIGHT ON SWITCH

WRECK CAUGHT AFIRE

But Was Extinguished by Indianapolis Fire Department—Injured Imprisoned Several Hours

By Associated Press. Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 13.—At least sixteen persons were killed and fourteen seriously hurt early today when an in-bound Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton passenger train ran into an open switch and crashed head-on into a freight train in an Indianapolis suburb.

The train was coming from Cincinnati at the rate of forty miles an hour. The wreck caught fire, but was extinguished before any damage was done.

Most of the dead were found in the wreckage of the first car which telescoped the baggage car. The engineer of the freight train escaped by jumping, but the engineer of the passenger was killed.

Firemen and police worked at the wreck two hours before the first body was found. Holes were chopped in the tops of the cars and the injured supplied with water for which they cried pitifully.

The passenger train, No. 36, is reported to have had a clear track, but did not close the switch after the freight cleared the main line for the passenger train.

The head brakeman on the freight train said the switch had been left open by one of his men.

Albert Seed of Louisville, one of the passengers told of his remarkable escape. He said:

"I was awake. I felt chilly and was putting on my overcoat, when suddenly I heard a crash and the next thing I knew I was sitting beside the wrecked train. I could hear men and women crying for help, and with the aid of others I found an axe and chopped a hole in the side of a car.

"Firemen soon arrived and began carrying out bodies."

The noise of the collision aroused the neighborhood. Many homes were thrown open and the injured carried in and given first aid treatment. The two engines were almost completely telescoped. They reared up when they came together and were so wrecked that it was not until after daylight that the body of the engineer of the passenger train was found in the cab. He had stayed with the engine, trying to bring his train to a halt.

The baggage car was badly splintered and the two passenger coaches just behind looked like piles of kindling wood. They were completely telescoped. The entrance between the cars was so jammed that holes had to be cut in the sides and top to take out the dead and injured.

Wreck On Brownsville Line. By Associated Press. Corpus Christi, Texas, Nov. 13.—Ten passengers were injured, three probably seriously, when a passenger train on the St. Louis, Brownsville & Mexico Railroad was wrecked two miles north of Sinton early this morning.

The train was en route from Houston to Corpus Christi. One woman, it is reported, had her back broken and cannot live. A relief train bearing the injured, is due here this afternoon and meanwhile names and details are not available.

One Killed in Pile Driver Accident. Bastrop, Texas, Nov. 13.—A. H. Turner, a brakeman, is dead and W. R. O'Conner a freeman is injured as the result of the wrecking of a steam pile driver on the Katy road here Monday. The injured man was taken to Dallas.

Final Ceremony Today in A Most Unique Wedding

The final link in one of the most unique weddings on record was forged early this afternoon when Harry Ten Brink of this city and Miss Helena Swartz, late of Amsterdam, Holland, went before Rev. Father Dolje and were married.

Although this ceremony completed the formalities required under American laws, the couple have, as a matter of fact, been married for a number of weeks—ever since each, Ten Brink in Wichita Falls and Miss Swartz in Amsterdam—went before the authorities and signed a declaration of their intention to marry the other. Then, under the laws of Holland, Miss Swartz became Mrs. Ten Brink, and as a married woman, she was able to secure a passport from her native land to this country, something she would have had considerable difficulty in securing, had she been married.

Several weeks ago the young woman sailed for this country and was met at Galveston by Mr. Ten Brink. They reached Wichita Falls early this morning and this afternoon, with the assistance of Father Dolje, they completed the strange ceremony.

The bride comes of a substantial Dutch family and is a winsome, pretty young woman. The groom has been here for some time being storekeeper for the Wichita Falls Route here. Mr. and Mrs. Ten Brink feel that there has been enough traveling for the present, and they will at once make their home in the Christensen cottage on Ninth street.

Father of Wichita Falls Celebrates 83rd Birthday

Judge J. H. Barwise and wife. (Mrs. Barwise died nine years ago).

The eighty-third birthday of Judge J. H. Barwise Sr., was celebrated today at the home of his daughter, Mrs. A. H. Carrigan, corner of Eleventh and Austin streets, with a dinner at which all his sons and daughters were present together with their wives and a number of the grandchildren.

Judge Barwise is the "Father of Wichita Falls" being the first permanent settler on the site of the city. He came here with his family in 1880. Their first home was a two room house that stood on the site now occupied by the Job Barnett building.

There was no railroad here then and the country around Wichita Falls was one great pasture. For some time Judge Barwise was the only man of legal knowledge in the settlement and he drew up all the conveyances and contracts as well as arbitrated all the disputes of the little town. Later after the courts was organized he served three terms as county judge.

Judge Barwise was born in Cincinnati later going to St. Charles, Mo. From St. Charles he came to Texas settling in Dallas county and coming to Wichita Falls in 1880 where he has since lived.

The Barwise family has been an important factor in the commercial and social life of the city and in the early days the Barwise home was the center of culture in the little town. His wife who was a companion of helpfulness and inspiration in the trials of the pioneer life, died about nine years ago.

Judge Barwise is the "Father of Wichita Falls" not only in the sense of being a pioneer but also as the first promoter of the usefulness of the community spirit which has done so much to make Wichita Falls the city it is. Judge Barwise in the early days was ready to contribute generously to anything for the advancement of the common interests of the town whether it was the building of a church or to secure a new railroad or a new industry, his contributions amounting to a considerable fortune.

He set an example in this practice that has been followed by others and has made the spirit of Wichita Falls famous throughout the country.

Present at the birthday dinner today were the five sons and the daughter of Judge Barwise including Tom and Marshall Barwise of Electric, Frank Barwise of Dalhart; Joe Barwise, of Fort Worth; Myron Barwise and Mrs. A. H. Carrigan of this city.

CLEAN LANGUAGE CAMPAIGN ORGANIZED

Purpose of Movement—Launched in Chicago 's to Check Indecent Speech

Following the lead of Wichita Falls a campaign against profanity has been taken up in Chicago. A Clean Language League has been started there with the purpose of checking indecent speech. The Wichita Falls method is to yank a man into the city court. After Mayor Bell assesses the fine and gives the offender a talk it isn't necessary for him to join a league to guard his expressions on the street pretty carefully.

Officers of the Chicago organization say the tendency toward profanity has reached its height and blame lay public opinion.

Dr. Thomas H. Russell, Chicago publisher, secretary of the league, announced (Continued on Page 4.)

SCHOLARSHIP RULE BEING ENFORCED

High School Rule Has Probably Weakened Football Team, But Has Made Players Studious

High school boys who do not "pass" in at least three studies cannot play on the school's athletic teams, since the Athletic Association was organized, and the force of this rule was keenly felt recently when four of the football players were barred from playing against Henrietta. The rule is to be strictly enforced and the boy who doesn't study hard enough to keep up can't be on the team.

Superintendent Carpenter has plans for organizing this and other high schools in this part of the State into an association of conference, to have football and baseball schedules and track meets. He believes that the other towns in this section will enter into the movement and that games will be increased both in quantity and quality, thereby.

Arrangements will possibly be made with the Christian team for a game here on the following day with the Wichita Falls high school team, which will furnish good sport for football fans on that day.

Out of sixty-eight property owners on Tenth street who have been asked to sign the petition for the paving of that thoroughfare from Ohio to Denver, only four have refused to affix their signatures, and while little work has been done on the matter, owing to other affairs, the prospects for having the improvement made are considered good. With the exception of seven or eight, all the property owners have been consulted about their paving and fully eighty per cent of them favor the paving and have indicated willingness to pay their pro rata of cost.

QUICK JUSTICE FOR MURDERER

MADISONVILLE MAN BEGINS LIFE TERM FOUR DAYS AFTER HE KILLED SWEETHEART

PARENTAL OBJECTIONS

Angered Clifton Plunket and Calling on Girl of His Choice With License in Pocket he Killed Her

By Associated Press. Madisonville, Texas, Nov. 12.—Clifton Plunket, who on Saturday shot and killed Miss Irvan McWaters, a sixteen-year-old girl who had promised to marry him, was placed in the penitentiary at Huntsville to begin serving a life sentence shortly after midnight last night.

Plunket was angry at parental objections to the marriage. When he shot the girl he had a marriage license in his pocket. In less than four days after Plunket had been arrested, he was indicted, tried and taken to the penitentiary. He pleaded guilty.

Plunket went to the home of John Ferguson Saturday and after calling for the girl, shot her with a revolver. The bullet struck her in the face and she turned and ran. He fired again and the second bullet passed through the girl's heart. Ferguson rushed into the room and knocked Plunket down. Plunket pleaded to be killed. Ferguson took him to Midway from where he was transferred to Madisonville on Sunday.

The indictment and trial quickly followed.

A DESPERATE SORTIE

Turks Make Spirited Attack on Besiegers at Constantinople But are Driven Back

By Associated Press. Constantinople, Nov. 13.—There is good reason to believe the Turkish government has decided to negotiate directly with the Balkan allies, as the mediation of the powers seems to be fruitless.

Powers Will Offer Mediation to Balkan Nations. London, Nov. 13.—All the European powers have agreed to the Turkish proposals of last week, that they should inform the Balkan nations of the Turkish request for mediation and to inquire from them whether they are willing to formulate the terms on which the negotiations can be opened.

Steps in this direction are about to be taken by the representatives of the powers.

Desperate Sortie, By Turks. Sofia, Nov. 13.—A desperate sortie was made by the Turkish garrison at Adrianople, according to a newspaper dispatch. After five hours fighting, the Turkish troops were driven back by the Bulgarian besiegers. The Turks lost heavily.

Russia Does Not Intend to Go to War By Associated Press. St. Petersburg, Nov. 13.—Russia does not intend to go to war over the question of Serbia obtaining a port on the Adriatic Sea, according to the Russian foreign minister.

CHURCH LADIES WILL HOLD A "KIRMESS"

The Ladies Aid Society of the First Presbyterian church are arranging to hold a "Kirmess" in the basement of the Kemp and Kell building, afternoons and evenings of November 22 and 23rd at which they will have various amusements and exhibits and sale of fancy work. Also exhibits of relics, pictures, etc.

They will also serve oysters, cake and other refreshments.

A "Kirmess" in the older German provinces is an annual gathering of the people for the purpose of exchange and barter and the meeting of old friends and a general jollification. The word itself originated from the word "kirche" (church) and "mess" (feasts). These old customs are yet carried on in many parts of Holland. The Americans have modernized the "Kirmess" and its name, calling it a fair.

BAPTIST MESSENGERS WILL MAKE REPORT

Mother Sells Blood to Buy Food for Children

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 13.—Deserted by her husband, with no money for herself and 7-year-old boy twins, and herself ill in a hospital, a mother gave up a quantity of her blood in order to obtain funds for the boys' support.

and the story of her sacrifice became public today when Detective Thomas Quirk returned from Viheland, N. J., bringing with him Charles Leroy Brown, the husband and father, who has been indicted by the grand jury here on charges that he deserted his wife and failed to provide for his family's support.

According to Detective Quirk, Brown last March deserted his wife and boys and disappeared.

Until about three months ago the mother worked to provide for herself and little ones. At that time she was removed from her home to a hospital and in a few days was the mother of another bouncing baby boy.

During her illness her small savings had slowly dwindled until she had but a few pennies left, and it was while she was a patient that she sold a quantity of her blood for $25 in order to pay the board of her other children, who were being looked after by friends.

Learning one day that a patient in another institution was in a serious condition, and that the only hope of the surgeons was in transferring healthy blood into the body of the patient, Mrs. Brown offered to sell her blood. The surgeons were notified of the offer and in a short time an examination of her blood was made.

The result was that her blood was found to be very healthy and a vein in her left wrist was opened and the blood taken. Mrs. Brown stood the operation well and in a few weeks weeks was able to leave the institution.

In the meantime the case of the mother and children was brought to the attention of the state's attorney and the husband was located at Vineland.

The authorities there refused to arrest the man, it is said, and after extradition papers had been prepared Detective Quirk went to Bridgeton, N. J., and swore out a warrant for Brown, then went to Vineland and arrested him and afterward locked him up in jail at Bridgeton, while he went to Princeton to have the papers honored by President-elect Wilson.

Mrs. Brown, 24 years old and pretty, said last night:

"I don't know for whom it was I gave my blood. The operation took place in July or August last. Doctors told me of an ill woman who was in need of blood. I volunteered. Even though a local anaesthetic was given my left arm, I still felt the pain, but I wouldn't back out. It was all for my children's sake. I was on the operating table from two and one-half to three hours, I think."

A CITIZEN OF VIGOROUS CHARACTER

Death of R. E. Nutt Removed Man Who Embodied Best Traditions of the Pioneer Texans

In the death of R. E. Nutt Sr., Monday afternoon there passed a character that embodied many of the best traditions of the pioneer Texans. Although Mr. Nutt had lived here only a few years yet he was known to many as a man of great kindness and unerring justice.

In his extensive dealings here in the handling of his estate which included much real estate in the city he became known as a man of justice and absolute honesty. Friends who knew him intimately say that in his appraisal of any matter involving a moral issue his judgment was unerring.

Mr. Nutt was a young man when war with Mexico broke out and was one of a company of youths being drilled to go to the front when word came of the end of the war. He came to Texas in 1857 first settling at Bastrop and later going to the Beeville country where Mr. Nutt bought a big ranch which was the beginning of his fortune. He joined a Texas regiment in the Civil War and served the Southland well during those troublous times returning to his ranch after the war.

For fifty years he lived in the Beeville country and became one of the best known and most influential men of that section.

It was the custom of the family to celebrate Mr. Nutt's birthday, June 29th with a monster barbecue to which the people came from many miles around. When Mr. Nutt moved to Wichita Falls this custom was continued on a smaller scale and there are many Wichitans who will remember these occasions with much pleasure.

As tokens of esteem there were many beautiful floral tributes on his bier when his body was taken to his old home near Beeville for burial in the family burying grounds yesterday. The body was accompanied by the train by members of the Masonic fraternity and the order of Knights Templar.

A special car was chartered to carry members of the family and other relatives and friends to Beeville.

GIRL'S DREAM HAS TRAGIC END

DAUGHTER DREAMING OF ROBBERS SHOTS MOTHER ABOARD SLEEPER

THE BULLET WAS FATAL

Mother and Daughter Were on Way to City to Buy Wedding Trousseau For Daughter

By Associated Press. Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 13.—A speeding Pennsylvania railroad express became the scene of a tragedy today, when Miss Gladys Myers shot and fatally wounded her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Myers, having mistaken her for a robber.

The shooting occurred some distance north of Philadelphia and the train continued on to Trenton, where Mrs. Myers was hurried to a hospital where she died.

Mother and daughter were traveling from Salem, Virginia to New York, to buy a wedding trousseau for the daughter.

Miss Gladys and a train passenger, M. H. Cuthbert of Lynchburg, Virginia were held by the Trenton authorities, pending an investigation.

Miss Myers was so hysterical she could scarcely tell a connected story. The police were disposed to accept her statement that she shot her mother in mistake for a robber, although contradictory statements made by Cuthbert and Miss Myers lend an element of mystery to the affair. Cuthbert says he did not know the Myers and only volunteered his services to them after the shooting. Miss Myers is said to have told the Trenton police that Cuthbert was traveling with herself and mother.

According to the Trenton police, Miss Myers said she suddenly awoke and heard a noise as if someone were climbing into her berth. Believing she was in danger, she fired. Her mother who was returning from the women's retiring room, received the bullet. To the police Cuthbert said that he happened to be traveling in the car behind that occupied by Mrs. Myers and her daughter. He said:

"As the train approached the Delaware bridge south of Trenton, I went to the first platform of my car, intending to get off the train for a few minutes at Trenton. I believe the shooting was entirely accidental. As the train passed through the village of Coryden, Pennsylvania, at 5:30, I heard the noise of a shot in the car ahead. I quickly opened the door and saw Mrs. Myers lying in the aisle in her night dress.

"Her daughter was standing beside her, shrieking in great distress. I've shot my mother; get a doctor," she called. She was hysterical. We had trouble in getting her quieted. The car porter, the conductor and several passengers carried Mrs. Myers into a drawing room compartment and we stopped the flow of blood as best we could until Mrs. Myers was removed to the ambulance at Trenton.

"Miss Myers told me she dreamed a burglar was pulling aside the curtain of her berth and that she reached under the pillow, got the revolver and shot her mother. Miss Myers said she was startled and fired before she was fully awake."

RAILROAD COMMISSION APPEALED TO BY KELL

Asked to Secure New Construction of Interstate Body's Rule

Austin, Texas, Nov. 13.—Frank Kell of Wichita Falls yesterday impounded the state railroad commission to enter into an active campaign for its reconstruction from the interstate-commerce commission of its milling in transit regulations concerning the states governed by the western classification and other states in the milling section.

It was represented to the commission that the construction placed by the railroads on the interstate-commerce commission's rule meant the end of the milling business in this section except at primary points, unless there is a reconstruction of the rules, for the present interpretation means a rate which is double what the rate should be or the sum of the locals.

There was held at Fort Worth a conference with regard to this matter. Sam H. Cowan and Senator Long are attorneys in the case asking for a different interpretation of the rules. Mr. Kell has milling interests at Wichita Falls.

PICKING JURY IS A SLOW TASK

Only Two Jurors Accepted From Venire of 200 Summoned for Speed Trial

By Associated Press. Fort Worth, Texas, Nov. 13.—The slow task of picking a jury was resumed in the J. B. Sneed murder trial this morning. The first venire of 300 is being rapidly exhausted and it is now certain another will be necessary. Out of the first two hundred questioned only two were accepted as jurors. This indicates the remainder of the week will be required to fill out the list. Judge Swayne announced this morning that longer (Continued on Page 4.)

A residence block located between 10th and 11th streets and Denver and Baylor avenues, was purchased this afternoon by Messrs. J. A. Kemp, Edna Boyd and J. C. Ward from Morris Perot, Jr., a non-resident property owner who resides in Philadelphia.

This is regarded as a very choice residence block, and the Times understands it is the intention of the purchasers to subdivide and place it on the market at once.

His Old School Teacher Tells of Wilson's Boyhood

(Waco News)

That everybody in Columbia, S. C., where Woodrow Wilson was reared, believed he would be a great man, that he was obedient in school, loved old people, was a student of nature from his earliest years, at the head of his classes, universally loved by young and old, and comes of stock known for their unvarying faithfulness to duty and fidelity to their friends, were some of the good things said by Mrs. T. J. Corlew, of near Axtell, who formerly taught the president-elect in Columbia when he wore knee breeches, and continually kicked holes in the toe of his shoes—when he wore them.

"When they began to scorching each other so in the campaign, I couldn't stand it any longer," said the aged teacher yesterday as she chatted with a representative of the Morning News in an office of the Farmer & Merchants Bank, Austin and Third streets.

"I sat right down and wrote him, and I said: 'Woodrow, you let the others do that sort of thing, but you keep out of it. Don't you throw a single mud ball in this campaign. And what do you think he answered?' He wrote: 'I am going to keep out of it.' He did. That's always been the way with Woodrow; he was the peacemaker at school and he could settle anything, no matter how lively the dispute might be," said Mrs. Corlew.

Clad in a black dress with hat to match, both of which had seen better days, Mrs. Corlew's quavering voice continued the story with but one interruption, and that was when he husband, tottering and infirm and nearing his eightieth year, stepped from the buggy. She went to see that no automobiles ran over him, explaining, "He's getting mighty infirm."

"I'll tell you," she said, laughing, "when election day came around told the old man that he had to go out and vote, and vote right, at that I told him if he didn't put a ballot in the box for Woodrow Wilson, I'd get a divorce and that quick, too. You ought to have seen the way he hustled out to the polls. He knew meant it."

"Yes," chuckled her husband, "you bet I did. And I was with General Forrest for three years—was wounded in the shoulder, too," he added, reminiscently, as if fully realizing how changed are the times, so far as war man is concerned.

Mrs. Corlew says she remembers well when Rev. Joseph Wilson, with his family, came to Columbia from Augusta, Ga., and took charge of the First Presbyterian church. She was then Miss Jane Wade and taught what would now be considered the second grade in the public schools. Woodrow was entered in her grade.

She said she had no trouble with him at any time, as he was a good boy. Some of the scholars then called him the "preacher boy" she said, because they thought he was too good and knew his lessons too well. In spite of his nickname, she said, everybody loved Woodrow and she said he would be a great man some day. His sisters, Marian and Annie, also were popular. Annie now lives in Raleigh, being the wife of Rev. George Rowe.

When Woodrow studied his lessons she said he was nearly always to be found seated in some nook of his mother's beautiful flower garden, where he could enjoy the flowers and watch the bees and insects between lessons.

"One of the strange things about the president-elect was that when a little fellow he always carried an umbrella. He said he did this so he could help the old people he met, and it was by no means an uncommon sight to see little Woodrow and some man or woman bent double with age, going down the street together in the most charming and friendly way you can think of."

"I remember, too, that on Friday evening, I think it was Friday, the ladies' sewing circle of the First Presbyterian church was wanting to gather at the same time the young folks would assemble for a tea. You could frequently find Woodrow right in the midst of the old folks. He liked the young ones all right, but he liked the old ones best."

Continuing, she said:

"I really don't think the president-elect ever was a real boy. He was too serious, too deep. He always seemed like an old man to me, even while I taught him. I knew him steadily for twenty-five years, and often, while boy and young man, have heard it redited he would make his mark in the world."

"Well, for a while he passed entirely out of my life, until he went to Princeton. After that I wrote him once, and we struck up a correspondence, which we have kept up ever since. I suppose you know of some of his most famous works. He has sent me several of them."

Speaking of the members of the family, she said, "He sprang from English stock, all the people being of the educated class for many years before his forefathers moved from London to this country. His aunt," to whom Mrs. Corlew referred to affectionately as "Aunt Velle," was a great philanthropist. She had some money and out of her own property she gave $2,000 for the erection of Young Men's Christian Association here."

Mrs. Corlew says Woodrow is an evolutionist and that is her belief, she says he is going to evolve this country, anyway, if he hasn't already done it. She thinks his book on political economy to be the finest thing ever written on the subject. She says Dr. James Woodrow, who was then a professor in the Presbyterian Theological Seminary at Columbia, nearly broke up the whole school when he announced that he believed in the Darwinian theory, but that times have changed, as a man may now be an evolutionist without being thought insane.

Believing in astrology, Mrs. Corlew says she read the stars and was certain that Wilson would be elected. After his nomination, since which time she has heard from him, she wrote him telling of the good fortune which awaited him at the polls. She says the president's oldest brother is now a bookkeeper, and that the second is a professor at Chapel Hill, North Carolina.

Mrs. Corlew's grandfather, George Wade, was one of the incorporators of Columbia, S. C., more than 150 years ago, and he built the first stone dwelling in that city. She is nearing three score and ten years of age. Her grandfather also was a captain in the Revolutionary army.

She came to Texas as teacher a teacher leaving Columbia. She first taught in Mississippi, after leaving home but was on her way to Sherman where she expected to teach when she stopped over here, met her husband and they were married. They now live near Axtell, on the Axtell road, on a farm of 142 acres, they have a little money and are happy and contented.

Work Will Start Next Week On Peoples' Ice Co's New Plant

Work will start next week on the new $100,000 plant of the Peoples Ice Company. It will be built across the track from the site of the present plant and is expected to be completed and in operation by April the first of next year.

Contracts for the building and the machinery were let last week. The building which is to be of all fire-proof construction, concrete and steel will be erected by the Gilson-Knight Construction Company of Kansas City. This company is the one that built the Adolphus Hotel at Dallas and also has the contract for a million dollar structure at El Paso. The floor dimensions of the main building will be 126 by 150 feet. The ice storage room will have a capacity for ten carloads of ice.

The Vilter Manufacturing Company of Milwaukee has been awarded the contract for the installation of the ice making machinery. Two machines will be installed, one with a capacity of 65 tons and the other 35 tons daily.

The building will have trackage on two sides and along each side will be steel and concrete loading docks. These docks will be equipped with automatic dumping devices and will be equipped with electric hoisting machinery for the loading of refrigerator cars.

Two huge boilers with 500 horse power capacity will generate the steam for the plant. The plant will have a smokestack 90 feet high and eight inches in diameter at the base.

It also will be constructed of concrete and brick and will be the tallest and largest stack in the city.

The Robert M. McCandlish Engineering Company of Kansas City are the consulting architects and engineers for the plant. Machinery salesman and experts in this line say the plant will be the most modern in the entire Southwest.

BUGSCUFFLE BUDGET

Editor Daily Times:

Bugscuffle is in a perfect boil. The cause of the commotion is the discovery of oil on the nearby farm of old man Seets. The old man was digging a well in his horse lot when he made the find. He got on his mare and came to town just as fast as that nag could carry him and rushing into the store of Squire Yukes, he told his tale, and asked the Squire what to do about it. Now we have but one telephone line for the whole town and on it are fifteen subscribers. The result is that when any number rings, all the people on the line can get onto what is being said. So when Mr. Seets had finished telling the Squire about his oil well, Mr. Yukes called up Col. Jim Jawsmith and asked him to get Dr. Pellet, Mr. Ponder and old Bro. Bugle and come to his store at once. He made the mistake of hinting to Col. Jim what was up; and by the time the four gentlemen named by the Squire had gotten to the Squire's place the whole town was crowded with an excited throng of anxious enquirers about the oil well. It took nearly forty minutes for the Squire to get the crowd quiet enough to listen to anything. When he had succeeded in this, Col. Jim Jawsmith took the floor and addressed the assembly. The following taken from the Weekly Bug's report of that speech will give the reader some idea of how Col. Jim was worked up and how his oration worked the rest of us up:

"This day, fellow citizens, the town of Bugscuffle has come into its own. I say the town; for the wonderful find near the habitation of old man Seets is not simply his find, but the glory of it and the real material wealth of it belongs to every member of this community. For why and how? Why, fellow citizens, every man here and every woman here and every child here will take some degree of stock in what henceforth is to be known as the 'Universal and Unlimited Oil Company of Bugscuffle.' Old man Seets, as is becoming, will be the chief stockholder; but such is the altitudinous and unparalleled munificence of that man's mind, that he allows all his neighbors to share in the glorious and hilarious prospects that float before his own delighted and intoxicated vision; and when we have arrived at the apex and topographical summit of our fondest expectations—when, in other words, we have perfected the thorough organization of this wonderful company, even the infants at the breasts will be sharers in the magnificent property that is destined to enrich and redress this whole, complete and entire community. As I stand upon this sugar barrel today, I have sweet and dulcific visions of the oncoming wide-sweeping future. I behold the proprietor of this magnificent temple of commerce—the honorable Squire Yuke's store—I see in fancy that worthy, uncorruptable and uncrowned king among men, the president of one of the most prosperous and imperishable properties in all that magnificent domain lying west of the Great Father of waters. I behold Dr. Pellet as treasurer of that resplendent corporation; I note that ready writer, the scholarly Von Dungs, as scribe or secretary. As first vice president I behold the simple and democratic form of old man Seets, while looming large and resplendent in the focus of my inner eye, I deary, as chaplain and spiritual advisor, the reverend and respected form of that Prince of Pulpiters, the great, the eloquent, the crowd sweeping and soul enrapturing Bugle! The vision grows, and as its mighty mysteries unfold, I catch the view of domes and spires and blazing minarets that snatch up the glooms of the rising sun, fling them athwart the azure empyrean and then dash them against the waves of the western sea until the white capped billows and heaven invading spray shall furnish a shower bath to ink, ebon and ancient Night. Bugscuffle!

"Its very name shall in time become another name for wealth, and culture and fame and fortune. Her sons shall ride in the gilded automobiles of prosperity; her daughters shall flash with the diamonds of 'Ormuz and Igd.' Her patriarchs shall smoke the meresham pipes of plenty and her matrons shall wear the habiliments of—of—of—whoopedoodle!"

At the close of this address the crowd, which was wild before, was now a mass of raving maniacs. They hugged each other, they wept, they shouted, they rushed forward and gathering about the Colonel, lifted him high in the air and bore him to the lemonade stand of Dutch Bunker, and almost strangled him with the votive offerings of that refreshing beverage. When order was finally restored, Squire Yukes informed the people, in a few dignified and well chosen words, that any one desiring to subscribe for stock in the oil company now in contemplation, might come forward and give Prof. Von Dungs his name. There was a general rush; and when the books had been finally closed, it was found that $27.50 had been subscribed. It was a great start; and when the crowd had dispersed, the directors, (who in the meantime had been chosen) elected the officers according to the plan and with names mentioned and outlined by Col. Jim in his speech.

But this oil excitement was not the only thing that has set the blood of Bugscuffle to tingling. Some boys out hunting for coons and such, said they had seen what they believed to be gas—natural gas—issuing out of the ground about a mile from town near the farm of Mr. Bumbel. We have not yet looked into that matter, but there is considerable interest manifested in the possibilities of that find. We were all so tired on the day we organized the oil company, that we must need take some rest before we entered on another strenuous day. Just what comes of all this I will write you later. In the meantime, Bugscuffle is on a boom. Let Wichita Falls and all other western towns look to their laurels. We are on the march. Twenty more people came to live with us last week. Four families from Dallas bought lots and are going to build here.

The following personals and locals, taken from the Weekly Bug's last issue, will conclude this letter:

An old duck from Wichita Falls, by the name of Hunks, has bought two lots from old man Bunker and will put in a second hand furniture store in a few weeks.

Sis Ponder and a young lady from Iowa Park, Miss Bet Grudle, spent the night with Nan Seets two days since.

A "huddinger." That was the big Wichita Falls, were out visiting the Misses-Wunk last week. Some think those two old bachelors are likely to get hitched up with some of our Bugscufflebels. A young merchant of your city, by the name of Sweeton, and one also by the name of Wood, have been paying a good deal of attention lately to the Bumble girls—Misses Pud and Dinkie. Some think there is likely to be "something doing."

Some Stiggins a poor booze fighter, who belongs to a good family and who has a wife and three nice little children, was found drunk in old Squire Yuke's hog pen last Saturday night. He had just returned from Wichita Falls. Poor Mrs. Stiggins!

Quite a crowd went over to the Falls to hear Morris Shepard last Sunday. That speech of his in the Methodist church on Sunday night was what Col. Jim Jawsmith calls a "huddinger." That was the biggest congregation we ever saw in this country and we have seen some big ones.

Will write more anon, whatever that means. Yours truly, JOSH BAGGS.

"The Goose Girl."

"The Goose Girl." George D. Parker's dramatization of Harold MacGrath's novel of the same name, which will be the attraction at the Wichita Theatre Tuesday night is a far more pleasing play than is usually offered local theatre-goers. Unlike other plays derived from popular novels, none of the effectiveness of the story is lost in the efforts to faithfully carry out the story of the book. To those who have read and enjoyed the novel, it is all the more pleasing as a play. None of the heroics are lost, none of its romance curtailed and little of the higher qualities missing. From a dramatic standpoint, "The Goose Girl" easily takes its place with the best offerings placed before theatre-goers. The play is consistently written and reveals in thrilling dramatic scenes and situations which are no confined to one or two particular acts, but are spread throughout the entire four acts of the play. The dramatization of the book is an admirable one, far in excess of what is usually presented.

Lathes, drills and other machinery for the Curtin automobile and machine shop are being installed in the building erected for the plant on Ohio avenue between Sixth and Seventh streets. The plant will be modern and thoroughly equipped.

MRS. MCGILL BROKE DOWN

Gives the Real Facts in Regard to Her Case and Tells How She Suffered.

Jonesboro, Ark.—"I suffered a complete break down in health, some time ago," writes Mrs. A. McGill, from this place. "I was very weak and could not do any work. I tried different remedies, but they did me no good. One day, I got a bottle of Cardui. It did me so much good, I was surprised, and took some more."

Before I took Cardui, I had headache and backache, and sometimes I would cry for hours. Now I am over all that, and can do all kinds of housework. I think it is the greatest medicine on earth."

In the past fifty years, thousands of ladies have written, like Mrs. McGill, to tell of the benefit received from Cardui.

Such testimony, from earnest women, surely indicates the great value of this tonic remedy, for diseases peculiar to women. Are you a sufferer? Yes? Cardui is the medicine you need. We urge you to try it.

Jack Johnson has announced his intention of going to Russia, but the date for his departure is not yet settled. At last accounts Jack was occupying a cell in a Chicago jail, and by the time Judge Landis puts the finish to him it may be several years before the negro pugilist will have an opportunity to start on his Russian voyage.

It's a long way to go back for a basic reason, but we believe one big reason for heavy or excessive judgments against the railroads is the accommodations the traveling public of ten meets with at the hands of railroad employees. On a train not long since, as an instance, a gentleman was reading. It wasn't more than 10 o'clock, but the officious negro porter came through and began turning down the gas lights. The gentleman politely requested the negro not to turn down the light under which he was reading. The porter mumbled something about the company requiring the lights turned down, and refused to accommodate the passenger. Now the gas that would have been used might have cost the company a cent. The incivility of that negro porter may, in time to come, cost it several hundred dollars. Such instances as this, many of them, are not only more aggravating, are common. They largely account for the juries assessing heavy damages against the company when opportunity offers because one or more members recall that they, too, have received unjust or uncivil treatment that was wholly unbecoming for the public to the railroads, however, it should be said that they are systematically getting rid of the uncivil employees. It usually takes only about one complaint of outright incivility or insolence to get the offender discharged. But there are too few to complain, for the "class" of employees who think the public is something to be endured and not accommodated has not yet disappeared from Texas railroads—not by a long sight.—Denton Record and Chronicle.

The Times has often thought that if the Texas railroads would try and give the traveling public accommodations for which it pays for, the railroad damage suit industry could be put on the blink a sight quicker than by hiring lobbyists to secure favorable legislation. Texas people are sick and tired of Texas railroads bringing down from the North and East second hand, worn out and worked over passenger coaches and equipment for them to ride in, and so long as the roads continue to do this way they may expect to get the hot end of the stick when in court. Without the least doubt, thousands of dollars are paid out wrongfully in judgments against railroads as results of damage suits, and the cause for these unjust and excessive verdicts in those cases are due to the fact that the railroads themselves have not used that care they should in taking care to give the traveling public that for which it pays a fair and just price.

A special from Houston to the Dallas Times-Herald under date of the 11th says that Governor Colquitt will be relieved of the necessity of appointing a successor to Senator Joseph W. Bailey, as the Senator will not resign until he shall have first made certain that the legislature will confirm the appointment of Colonel R. M. Johnston to succeed him. This means if it means anything, that Senator Bailey will not resign, as it would be very inconsistent of the present legislature to confirm the appointment of Col. Johnston, who is not in harmony with the platform adopted by the Democrats in convention at Houston on the tariff question, and if he should be appointed and the legislature confirm his appointment, it would only be a compliment to Senator Bailey and Col. Johnston, but could not be taken or accepted as the real sentiment of the Democrats of this state. While Col. Johnston, through his paper, the Houston Post, supported the Democratic presidential nominee, so far as this paper is aware, he still holds to the view he had on the tariff question before either the Houston or Baltimore conventions. Texas Democrats, by an overwhelming majority, endorsed Wilson, and now that Wilson has been triumphantly elected, his hands should not be tied by states that have endorsed him by placing men in the United States Senate that might cause him embarrassment or trouble, even though the time Mr. Johnston would serve would not extend beyond March 4th of next year. The members of the legislature, however, may view this matter in a different light. It is known that a majority of them, while not endorsing the views on the tariff question held by Senator Bailey and Mr. Johnston, are friends and admirers of both, and they may, at the request of Senator Bailey do as he wishes, by confirming the appointment of Mr. Johnston to succeed him for the balance of his unexpired term. Should the legislature do this, however, it will be viewed in a wrong light. Mr. Wolters, who campaigned the state as a candidate for the senatorship to succeed Sen. Bailey held the same views as the junior senator, and he was defeated by Hon. Morris Sheppard, whose views on the tariff coincide with the Democratic platform adopted at Houston and at Baltimore. It would be just as consistent for the legislature to confirm the appointment of Mr. Wolters as it would be for it to confirm the appointment of Col. Johnston.

THE MAN WHO MADE IT POSSIBLE

On Tuesday night when the result of the overwhelming Democratic victory became known and the Journal flashed on its big stereoscopic screen the picture of Wm. J. Bryan, across the top of which was written the words—"The man who made it possible"—a great cheer went up from the assembled spectators in emphatic approval of the sentiment expressed. That cheer has an echo in the hearts of the vast majority of the American people.

To those, who for 16 years, have "kept the faith," the true value of Mr. Bryan's leadership and service to the Democratic party has always been apparent, and it is gratifying to them now, as of course it must be to him, to know that the great mass of citizenship everywhere recognizes the worth of his unselfish devotion to the cause of clean politics and progressive reform.

For 20 years, or ever since Mr. Bryan, then almost a boy, entered congress, he has fought for the deliverance of the party and the people from the grip of the money changers. He has led the fight for tariff revision, for direct election of United States Senators, for state and presidential primaries, for publicity of campaign contributions, for direct legislation within the states, and for other reforms whose purpose was to give the people control of their own government.

The Great Commoner's greatest victory was when he secured at Baltimore the nomination of a man who represented the things for which Mr. Bryan himself had battled and thereby made possible the magnificent Democratic victory of last Tuesday. It seems to be a singular anomaly of fate that the men who lead great reforms must frequently step aside and see others enjoy the official fruits of victory when success is finally achieved.

This at least is the case with Mr. Bryan. But no man could take the situation more philosophically than he and none, it is certain, is more rejoiced over Woodrow Wilson's election than this great Democrat whose work for twenty years and whose defeat of the bosses at Baltimore made that election possible.—Pensacola Journal.

PICKING JURY IS A SLOW TASK

court sessions will be held to expedite the choosing of the jury. Three deputy sheriffs were sent out to summon two hundred new talesmen. Only one additional juror was selected Wednesday out of thirty-five men examined. He was J. C. Gathler. Judge Swayne adjourned court at 11:30 until 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, when the two hundred new talesmen will report. Judge Swayne announced his decision to deal severely with men who discussed the Sneed case with veniremen or talesmen.

When J. J. Waters, a farmer, said that Joseph Nobles of Lakeview, whose guest he was when he came to Fort Worth to respond to his subpoena, had talked to him about the case, Judge Swayne issued an attachment for Nobles. Nobles was brought into the court room and admitted he had expressed his opinion as to Sneed's guilt or innocence, knowing that Waters was a venireman. The court rebuked him, made him promise to report any other similar violations and discharged him. Judge Swayne said:

"From now on, I shall fine every man that talks to a venireman regarding this case."

Disinterested lawyers heard Wednesday that the defense will introduce entirely new evidence in the second trial, which was disclosed following the killing of Al Boyce Jr., at Amarillo. Counsel for the defense denied this, but Cone Johnson, one of Sneed's attorneys, admitted that several new witnesses will testify.

Judge Johnson urged Judge Swayne to order six hundred new talesmen, but the State insisted that two hundred were sufficient.

GANALEJAS SLAYER AN ANARCHIST

He Had Been Expelled from Buenos Ayres on Account of Agitation—Will Recover from Self-Inflicted Wound

Madrid, Nov. 13.—The body of the assassinated premier, Canalejas, lay in state from an early hour today in the Chamber of Deputies.

The assassin, Manuel Cardenas, who will recover from his self-inflicted wounds, is a man of distinguished appearance. He has regular features, is smooth-shaven and has luminous eyes. When arrested, he had several manuscripts in his pocket. One, inscribed "The International Conflagration," another was on the anatomy of the human stomach. He also carried an astronomical book and a photograph of a woman on which was written, "To my unforgettable Manuel."

Cardenas was expelled from Buenos Ayres last March on account of his participation in anarchistic agitation. He left Paris ten days ago for Madrid. The Paris police notified the Madrid authorities of Cardenas' departure and informed them of an article he had written against King Alfonso for an anarchistic paper in Paris. The Madrid police, however, did not know that Cardenas had arrived in the Spanish capital.

The assassin once worked at his trade as a painter in Tampa, Florida, for some time, having gone there from Havana. He left Tampa as recently as January.

CURRENT COMMENT

Wilson's Foreign Policy.

Certain important European journals indulge the hope that the election of Wilson to the presidency of the United States will "lessen the aggressiveness" of the great Republic towards its Latin-American neighbors. The history of the Democratic party, now victory in the Northern Republic, does not justify a hope of the adoption of any mollifying policy. A deep concern for the rights of American citizens living abroad or doing business with foreign countries has always characterized Democratic administrations.

During the presidency of Grover Cleveland there was shown a marked interest in the protection of the rights of American citizens living outside the Republic. It was not Mr. Cleveland's idea that Americans could be butchered with impunity to make a bandit's holiday. Certain secret chapters in the history of Mr. Cleveland's two administrations remain to be printed. We can say that when they are published they will not justify the opinion that Democratic statesmanship is of the weak-kneed variety. Yet Mr. Cleveland was scrupulously just towards the southern neighbors of the United States. Any adept in the study of human physiognomy will not fail to find in the strong lines of Woodrow Wilson's face sufficient assurance of his capacity to maintain prestige abroad. He will be generous but he will be firm and just.

The broad features of the foreign policy of the United States with respect to Latin-America will not be deviated from, as to Cuba, the American policy is fixed by the terms of the Platt amendment to Cuba's constitution. And as regards Central America, the latest interpretation of the Monroe doctrine makes it the duty of the United States to maintain order there; in other words, to leave no pretext for the armed intervention of European powers. Whether they will like it or not, Central Americans are to be protected against the consequences of their own violent temperament. Besides, they are near neighbors of the Panama Canal, and order must be kept in that vicinity.

With regard to Venezuela the preceding statements equally apply. That country was in sore distress during the administration of Mr. Cleveland. Great Britain was claiming some of her gold-bearing territory, when Mr. Cleveland intervened and Lord Salisbury was eventually persuaded to submit to arbitration. For a time, Americans were the most popular foreigners in Venezuela; there were banquets galore, revelry by night and champagne flowed like water. But presently the merry mood of the Venezuelans changed to one of resentment and suspicion and Americans were ostracized. All this makes no difference in the permanent policy of the United States towards Venezuela. Uncle Sam will protect that country against itself, for it is also a near neighbor of the great canal.

As to the remote South American nations, their relations with the United States are very satisfactory; they are as safe from American "aggression" as Russia or Italy.

Should Mr. Bryan become Secretary of State in Mr. Wilson's cabinet, his influence would undoubtedly be for peace; but he also is no mollycoddle. He has proved himself a resolute political fighter. Like Mr. Wilson, he is generous and he is just.

No nation has anything to fear from the coming administration at Washington, so long as it protects the lives and property of American citizens. The Wilson administration will be exceedingly occupied with domestic reforms, but be very sure that it will keep a weather eye out for American interests abroad. That is the immutable tradition of the Democratic party.—Mexican Herald.

The Case of Captain McDonald.

Among the victorious staff that crowds closer now than ever around Governor Wilson, there is one who walks, it is said, in something of regret. Brave Captain McDonald or Bill McDonald of Texas, as his friends call him, is reported to be grieved because secret service men are to take his place as the guard of the President-elect. He has been the steadfast companion of the Governor through the campaign, and neither the one nor the other is pleased with the thought of separation.

It may be that separation is not inevitable. The Governor is a man of resources and the captain is a man who knows not fear. Between the two of them it should be easy to master the situation. It has been said of the captain by his Texas friends and companions that "he would charge hell with a bucket of water." To a Ranger of such daring there should be nothing fearful in any secret service rivalry. To a president-elect of tact and cleverness there should be nothing impossible in the way of cutting red tape.

There is no compelling reason why either the Governor or the country should lose the companionship of Captain McDonald. He would be an ornament to the presidential staff and add

THE BERKEFELD FILTER

BACTERIOLOGICAL tests have conclusively established the fact that great Typhoid and Cholera epidemics were caused by the use of impure drinking water. The following Typhoid epidemics of Europe are but a few of those on record: Zurich, 1884; Berlin, 1887; Altoona, 1889; Gelsenkirchen, 1901; and the Cholera epidemic of Hamburg, 1892.

The Typhoid epidemic at Gelsenkirchen has demonstrated that even a good sand filtration plant does not prevent all danger. The water from wells is dangerous because the feed waters of such wells cannot be controlled.

While boiling undoubtedly kills the poisonous germs, it renders the water unpalatable by expelling the dissolved gases which help to give the water its gratifying taste and freshness. In boiling, some water evaporates, and the result is a concentrated dirty solution.

The peculiar properties and microscopic construction of this earth (composed as it is of the siliceous skeletons of diatoms) render it peculiarly suitable for the purpose of filtration. The form of these minute skeletons of diatoms (ladder like and interlacing) gives an enormous number of exceedingly small pores, thus affording a free passage of the liquid and at the same time stopping that of the minutest suspended organic or inorganic matter. The great difficulty to be overcome has been the formation of a solid substance of this deposit thoroughly annealed together.

This was the invention of Mr. Berkefeld, and the result is a hollow filtering cylinder completely closed at one end and the other end fitted into a metal headpiece. The water passes through the walls from the outside to the interior, leaving all the impurities on the exterior surface, and passes out through the small outlet in the metal headpiece.

The accumulated impurities can be easily washed or brushed away with a sponge or soft brush. At each cleaning a thin surface layer of the material itself will be brushed off, together with the accumulated dirt. By this the pores of the cylinder are reopened and the cylinder regains its original filtering capacity.

The Berkefeld Filter Cylinder can be sterilized by boiling in water one hour.

The advantages of the Berkefeld Filter over all others are:

1. It is Positive Germ Proof.
2. It can be easily cleaned and sterilized and can be kept in a state of germ-proof efficiency.

Again we are introducing a real good filter, a filter that has been adopted for field use by the Armies of the United States, England, Germany, Austria, Italy, Russia and Japan. They are used by the New York Health Department for filtration of Toxin for Antitoxin. The Berkefeld Filters are now displayed in our show window when also a infusorial earth stone is shown filtering a highly colored water by mere gravity. The result is marvelous. After you see this Berkefeld filter you will be tempted to throw your old filter out and buy a Berkefeld. They are sold by

Acreage Near Town

Will become very valuable some day with the growth of Wichita Falls. We can sell you the cheapest acreage around Wichita Falls in blocks of 2 1/2 acres each for $300, and on monthly installments. Think of it—the same as fourteen city lots for less than $25.00 a lot if the same land was divided into lots. This land can be irrigated and makes an ideal place to work in town and supply your own table by raising chickens, a garden, orchard and keeping a cow. Many others are doing the same at Southside Acres where we are selling acreage tracts at less than any acreage the same distance from the heart of the town can be bought.

Southside Acres is 1 3-4 miles east of Postoffice and adjoins the City of Wichita Falls on the southeast corner.

More than half of the Addition has been sold and the remaining tracts are going fast. Let us drive you out while you can get choice locations.

Think Human Tears of Value. In Persia the past and present are linked by the belief that human tears are a remedy for certain diseases. At every funeral, each mourner is given a sponge with which to mop off the eyes and cheeks. After the burial the wet sponges are given to a priest, who squeezes the tears into bottles, which he keeps for curative purposes. This is one of the most ancient of eastern customs. See Fifty-sixth Psalm, verse eight, where David says: "Put thou my tears into thy bottle." This custom is still followed in Persia.—From Bombaugh's "Facts and Fancies."

PENSION ANNOUNCEMENT HEARD WITH INTEREST

Employees of Southwestern and Western Union Beneficiaries of Pension System

Employees of the Southwestern Telegraph and Telephone Company and of the Western Union and Western Electric Companies are much interested in the pension plan announcement recently made.

In part this announcement said: "Male employees who have reached the age of 60 years and who have been twenty years or more in service, may retire on pensions. They may be retired at the option of the company when they have reached the age of 55 years and have been twenty-five years or more in service. The pension age of woman employees is in each case five years younger than that of male employees. Any employee who have been thirty years in service, regardless of age, may be pensioned on the approval of the president of the company.

"The amount of the pension is automatically based on the years of service and the amount of pay and will be 1 per cent of the average annual pay for ten years, multiplied by the number of years in service. Therefore, a man who had been thirty years in service would get 30 per cent of the average salary which he had been receiving during his last ten years of service. No pension will be less than $20 a month.

"In case of accidents occurring in the performance of work the employee will receive, for total disability, full pay for thirteen weeks and half pay for the remainder of disability up to six years.

"If the disability is temporary he will receive full pay for thirteen weeks and half pay until able to earn a living, not exceeding six years.

"Employees who are disabled by sickness or accident outside of the regular course of duty after ten years or more in service will receive full pay for thirty-nine weeks. If from five to ten years in service, full pay for thirteen weeks and half pay for thirteen weeks. In two to five years in service, full pay for four weeks and half pay for nine weeks. In the case of employees who have not been two years in service, heads of departments will be permitted the same discretion as heretofore in continuing pay during temporary illness.

"In the case of death resulting from accident in and due to performance of work for the company an insurance amounting to three years' pay will be paid to the dependents of the employee, the maximum payment being $5,000. In case of death resulting from sickness or from accident outside the business the payment will be one year's pay for employees who have been ten years or more in service and one-half of one year's pay for employees who have been from five to ten years in service, the maximum payment being $2,000.

"If any state statutes provide for more liberal compensation than is provided under the benefit plan the statutory provision will prevail. Where the employees have legal rights, as in some accident cases, they will have the option of exercising such rights or accepting the company's benefits.

"The administration of the funds will be in the hands of employees' benefit committees of five, to be appointed by the board of directors of each company."

This pension system conforms to the plank of the national platform of the Progressive party providing for industrial pensions, placing the burden on the industry.

THE WORLD HAS FORGOTTEN HIM

An Ohio Prisoner Can't Remember Own Name and His Record Cannot Be Traced

Cincinnati, Nov. 13.—Can a man be lost? Can all traces to his identity be irretrievably erased that only his personal, but unidentified, presence in the flesh remains to tell the story of his obliteration from the life records of the state?

To both questions "yes," as witness the tragic story which was unfolded in the court of Judge Lueders yesterday. The case of Prisoner No. 12488 rivals the old story of the "Man in the Iron Mask."

Any chance of restoring this victim of criminal justice to his family, if he had any, to his estate, if he has any, to friends, if any survive after a lapse of thirty-four years of record time, apparently destroyed with the burning of the Cincinnati courthouse in 1884. Today he is at Longview Hospital, where he was sent by Judge Lueders, a mental wreck, stooped in form and hoary with age.

As a young man Prisoner 12488 was committed to the Ohio penitentiary from the courts of this county in 1877 for forgery, to which charge he at that time entered a plea of guilty. He gave the name of E. A. Dickerson. He was under sentence for one year, but before that period elapsed his mind gave way and he was transferred to the state hospital for the insane because the penal institution at that period had no place where insane prisoners might be cared for. From that time until now he has been dead to the world.

The warden explained that after this man's transfer to the state hospital he was simply lost from record. His term in the penitentiary expired on November 14, 1878, but he never was released. He was not sent back to this county, but has remained during all of these years an unidentified inmate of the institution to which the prison authorities of that day committed him.

Responding to the letter of the warden, Judge Lueders at once sent a deputy sheriff to Columbus and the deputy returned yesterday with Prisoner 12488. When taken before the judge the man was asked his name.

"Schippe," he replied while his dazzled eyes rested upon his questioner with almost childish wonder. "How do you write that?" inquired an examining doctor at the same time extending a lead pencil to him. No. 12488 made a motion as though to take the writing implement, then withdrew his hand and with a flourish of his arm as though forming letters rolled: "You write it round that way."

"What is your mother's name?" That magic word appeared to rouse him for a moment from his mental torpor, but he replied only: "You will have to ask the guard."

Every Claim Is Backed By Local Testimony. Mrs. Mary Beck, 712 Seventh St., Wichita Falls, Texas, says: "Although I really do not like the idea of my name being used publicly, I feel that it is my duty to let every one who is suffering from kidney trouble know what a blessing Doan's Kidney Pills were to me. For years I suffered from kidney trouble, having pains in my back and side and irregular action of the kidneys. I steadily grew worse and about three years ago the trouble reached a climax, when I had to take to the bed. For three months I was helpless and six local physicians said that I had Bright's disease. I was discouraged. About that time a friend suggested that I try Doan's Kidney Pills. I confess that I had no faith in them but as a last resort, I took them. From the first I began to improve and by the time I had taken the first box, I was much better. Four boxes entirely cured me. That was three years ago and since then, on several occasions, I have used Doan's Kidney Pills. It gives me the greatest pleasure to publicly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills." For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

One man has even taken out a patent for paper thread to be used in sewing shoes, and a brand of artificial silk is made on a basis of paper pulp. And the use of paper in industry may be indefinitely extended. It is employed to make imitation porcelain, for bullets, shoes, billiard table cloth.

BOXING EXHIBITION NOT VERY EXCITING

Friends of "Jinks" Mode, However, Were Pleased at His Showing Against Fort Worth Man

Local followers of the boxing game gathered at the Wichita Theatre last night to witness three bouts the piece de resistance of the program being a six round exhibition between Pete Shaughnessy of Fort Worth and "Jinx" Mode of this city.

From the viewpoint of artistic pugilism and boxing finesse, the exhibition was probably a good one. From the viewpoint of excitement and real scrapping it was about as satisfying as a croquet game in the backyard of the Home for Decept News-papemen. There was a deal of clever boxing, and all that, but if pugilism is anything like the moving pictures last night's exhibition fell far short of it.

Mode's work was very pleasing. He was quick on his feet and seemed to know how to defend himself against Spaghnessy's quick punches and to put a good deal of steam behind his own blows. As to what chance he would stand in a real fight against a man of his own weight, the writer is not sufficiently an expert to say. Shaughnessy is considerably lighter than Mode, but remarkably fast on his feet and a well trained clever boxer, whom one imagines could make himself known in a contest with anyone of his weight.

to perform and this bout started brisk and sharp enough, but slowed up considerably toward the end, as both combatants tired rapidly. Hooper had the best foot work but the Californian excelled when it came to in-fighting.

Between these two bouts Shaughnessy was presented and gave a very pretty exhibition of rope-skipping. Whirling the rope so rapidly that the eye could not follow it, he gracefully stepped and side-stepped, backward and forward and side ways, in a manner that would have brought dark despair to any rope-skipping school girl if there had been any present. Shaughnessy next gave a "shadow boxing" exhibition which consists of knocking the stuffing out of an imaginary opponent. This was pretty, but not very exciting.

TALES OF THE MISSISSIPPI

St. Anthony Falls. Taken before Falls were Ruined by the Mills

Red Wing Named after Old Chief Red Wing, Even Bluff in Distance Maiden Rock Lake Pepin

Trempealeau Peak

EVERYONE knows the Mississippi is "the Father of Waters," that it is a commercial stream separating the east from the west, that it is periodically the subject of much discussion as to the increased depth of the channel, breaking of levees and other present day needs, but few associate this mighty river with the innumerable Indian legends that cluster around its banks, or the part it has played in the history of nations and strenuous warfare. Though the banks of the upper river are so beautiful that they charm every beholder, the historian enjoys the stream because of the stories that cluster around most of the pinnacles and bluffs. These legends and stories have so far never been collected but they await the Mississippi lover who will make them his own.

and Lake Winnebago. A portage was required to reach the Wisconsin river, and drifting down its broad expanse they came at last to where it mingled with the Great River whose wavelets sparkled in the sun as the waters flowed to the south. They had found the river famed in Indian tradition and with tears of joy and thanksgiving they planted the cross on the banks whose beauties have remained practically unchanged from that day to the present. True, it had previously been discovered by De Soto from whom today a village is named and who was buried in its flood; but the credit of exploration belongs to Marquette and Joliet.

Father Hennepin is said to have been the first white man to see the Falls of St. Anthony which now turn the largest flour mills in the world. They are in the heart of a throbbing city, but far back in prehistoric times they were larger than Niagara, and in early days they were a famous meeting place for the Indians who loved the seething waters which then plunged over a precipice. Not far away in St. Paul are famous Indian signal mounds on the banks of the river where the redmen watched the surrounding country and built signal fires that could be seen for miles around. There are strange weird tales of the warfare between Chip-pewas and Ojibways, and all this part of the river is associated with Indian life and deeds.

No spot on the upper Mississippi is more romantic or historical than Fort Snelling, the pioneer fort of early days built at the confluence of the Mississippi and Minnesota rivers, to protect the early settlers and trappers. If the walls of the fort could speak what stories they could tell of early days! The fort was founded in 1819 by soldiers from Fort Wayne, and at that time it was surrounded by a high wall as a protection from the Indians. In 1826 a party of Chip-pewas were murdered in their lodges by the Dakotas who had sent proposals of peace to their camp. A party from the fort captured the guilty Indians, who were confined in the guard house and later were handed over to the Chipewas to run the gauntlet. They were turned loose at sunset and fled for their lives, and as one after another fell before the fire of their enemies' rifles, their bodies were thrown over the cliff into the river below.

This is only one of numerous Indian happenings around this old fort which is associated with many distinguished names. Zachary Taylor was in command for some time and one of his daughters eloped with Lieutenant Jefferson Davis.

Going down the river at Lake St. Croix one may view the "meeting of the waters" referred to in Hiawatha and forty miles below Minneapolis there is a bluff of peculiar shape—Diamond Bluff—from which a river town is named. In this vicinity, too, is that peculiar widening of the Mississippi called Lake Pepin, said to be the crater of an extinct volcano, which extends for twenty-two miles, of which is a scenic gem.

Here is Point-no-Point, named by the river men because from the distance a point is visible which disappears on close view. Nearby is Maiden Rock, eight hundred feet high, from which the Indian maiden Winona took her lover's leap. There are many versions of this legend but one of the best known tells how the most beautiful princess among the Dakotas was Winnetka, daughter of Chief Red Wing, and whose tribe was at enmity with the Chipewas. This Dakota girl had given her heart to Wanabozah, Chipewas chief, and hence a foe to her tribe. Red Wing summoned his chiefs to council and declared war against the Chipewas, offering his daughter's hand to young Wazikcoet, of the Dakotas, if he would aid him. All summer Winona feared lest her lover should be slain and she would be obliged to marry the man her father had chosen. At last when the sun was red on the hills Winona heard the signal—a bird call. Stealing from her wigwam she hastened to meet the Chippewa chief and flew to the river's brink, where his canoe was hidden. But the jealous Dakota had dogged their footsteps and uttered a shrill war cry. Out poured the warriors in hot pursuit and Winona's lover fell pierced by arrows. Then the maiden's reason fled and with super-human strength she leaped on the body, rushed to the top of the hill and leaped far out. The angry spirit of the lake threw lover and maiden against the base of the rock and they were never seen again.

So runs the legend, and it is such stories that make the Mississippi more than a mere river. For instance, there is a town of Wabash named after Wabash, a long and illustrious line of Sioux chiefs, and not much farther down the stream there is a towering bluff which the Indians regarded with awe because it resembles the face of a man and they thought it the likeness of the Great Spirit whom they worshipped. It is said human sacrifices were offered and signal lights were flashed from its top. All along this section of the river there were bloody conflicts for it was considered neutral ground, and when a Sioux, Chippewa or Dakota trespassed, retribution followed. Another interesting spot is Sugar Loaf Bluff, a high pinnacle with smooth sides said to have been caused by an Indian chief who played ball against them. A few miles farther on is another detached peak, Trempealeau Mountain, the name being given by early French voyagers because branches of the Mississippi surround it and, hence, it is "la montagne qui tempe a l'eau." The little town of De Soto, with its historic name, boasts the grave of Minnehaha situated on top of a tall bluff.

Many Indian legends also cluster around the town of Prairie du Chien, or "Hill of the Prairie dog," oldest town of the river, though the place is not exactly where Marquette say the prairie dogs. One can easily imagine the Indians on these bluffs, high Saracen watch towers, often six hundred feet and colored by various mineral deposits, peering into the distance for some enemy or white man. One of the most interesting of these pinnacles is near Alton, where Marquette say the pictograph of a huge pinnacled bird carved on their surface. To this day they are called Pinnacled Bluffs.

Associated with the Indians of the river were the early French voyagers whose names are commemorated in various places. There was Julien DuRoi, who came with friendly Indians and made a settlement where were lead mines, calling it "The Mines of Spain." He married the daughter of an Indian chief and was called by the Indians "Le Petit Nait." The Little Nait, because of his short stature and dark complexion. He died in 1810, and the city that bears his name has a monument erected in his memory. Other places are forever linked with the war of 1812. At this time the English, with the help of their Indian allies, captured a fort and held it until peace was declared. The ruins still remain of Fort Crawford, where Zachary Taylor, afterward President of the United States, once commanded, and where Jefferson Davis served as lieutenant in the regular army.

Jefferson Davis was also second in command when a battle was fought near the present little town of Victory, at Battle Hollow. Abraham Lincoln was a captain of militia and the victory in August, 1832, annihilated the forces of the celebrated Black Hawk, chief of the Sacs and Foxes. Battle Island can be seen from which he escaped to be captured several days later. Coming to later times there are places like Natchez, Baton Rouge and Vicksburg, all historical, as well as the queen of America's foreign-like cities, New Orleans, with its early history, its Canal street and French quarter.

Religion, too, has played its part on this river. In one of the most picturesque sections Joseph Smith founded Nauvoo, on what he claimed was the original site of the Garden of Eden. In 1846, it had 16,000 people, but sentiment was against them, they were driven out and started the long trek across the wilderness to the present Salt Lake City. Joseph and Hiram Smith were captured, and put in prison at Carthage and a crowd later broke into the place and slew the captives. The handsome temple was destroyed, and by a curious coincidence, Nauvoo later became the seat of a sect of French Socialists, calling themselves "Icarians." Nauvoo to true Mormons is what Boanaros is to Buddhism and Mecca to Islam, though the quiet little village of today gives no hint of the tragedies enacted there.

BUSINESS DIPLOMACY.

That "Sorry, but That is the Rule," Cost One Bank. The making of rules for the carrying on of business is a good proposition, but ironclad rules sometimes interfere as much as they help. A New York banker declared recently: "Here is an illustration: 'One of the depositors in my bank had saved many years. His bank book, tattered and yellow, was full to the last line with entries that extended practically since his wedding day. And when the time came that he must take out a new book he asked to save the old one. 'Sorry,' the teller said, 'but it's a rule of the company that when a new book is issued we must take up the old one. 'But you don't understand,' the depositor argued. 'That old book is nothing to you. It is worth a whole lot to me. Many's the night my wife and I have sat up with that, looking over the entries, planning for the future when all the additions we had aimed would be made in it. We've seen our little account grow from $100 to $100,000, from $100 to $1,000. The old book has been a sort of Bible to us. It has represented our every hope in life. We have planned by it, dreamed by it. May I not keep it?' 'The clerk smiled sympathetically, but shook his head. 'I cannot violate one of the ironclad rules of the establishment,' he answered, and the man turned away. 'A month went by, and then one day a check for the man's entire balance came into the bank. He had transferred his account to another institution. The matter came to my attention some way, and I heard the story of the torn and tattered bank book. That night, in the little bulletin which we send around our place, was a notice that was written by me: 'Hereafter there shall not be an ironclad rule in this bank that is too strong or too heavy to resist breakage. Kindly consult the cashier on matters of diplomacy in the future.'—New York World.

WOMEN OF FRANCE.

They Are the Bosses Even Though the Men Won't Admit It. The women of France have been described as the backbone of the French nation. The remark applies more to the middle class than to the aristocracy. The bourgeoisie, truly it behooves to her husband, is in fact more often a manager and as a rule efficient in that capacity. It is she who carries on the little shop, while her husband, perhaps nominally the head, runs errands at her bidding. Not that the Frenchman would admit that; nevertheless it is the truth. It may be, too, that he has business interests elsewhere as well. Thus he may work for the railway or for some other enterprise. In Paris one enters an attractive little picture or jewelry shop on the Rue de Rivoli. A smiling Frenchwoman comes forward to engage the tourist into buying all sorts of fascinating things he really doesn't want. It is the sales of the shops where are sold to-day supplies and postcards, and a man to be seen except as a purchaser. If one ferrets out a little hardware store and goes in to buy rope or nails or anything of that sort, there may be a woman, the proprietor probably, to whom or just what is desired, but even then his wife sits at the desk, guarding the money drawer and keeping a close watch over all that is happening. Likewise at the butcher's and the grocer's the case is the same. At the grocer's, where she gives out change and keeps the accounts. No mere birding is to be trusted with such weighty matters. All customers should stop to greet the mistress of the shop as they enter and just as no account forget their "bonjour, madame" on departing. These little courtesies are among the essentials with the French, and if the foreigner forgets or neglects them he frequently fares badly.—London Spectator.

The Human Voice.

One's surprise at the fact that no two persons' voices are perfectly alike ceases when one is informed by an authority on the subject that, though there are only nine perfect tones in the human voice, there is the astounding number of 17,292,182,044,143 different sounds. Of these, fourteen different voices produce 16,282, and thirty different tones produce 17,741,821, while all in co-operation produce the total given above.

Unconscious Sarcasm.

A Scotch visitor to the Carlyles, in Chevy Chase, was much struck with the soundproof room which the sage had contrived for himself in the attic; lighted from the top, and where no sight or sound from outside could penetrate. "My dear, this is fine," cried the old friend, with unconscious sarcasm. "Here ye may write and study all the rest of your life and no human being be one bit the wiser."

Not to Be Bitten.

Andrew Cherry, the actor, once received an offer of an engagement from a theatrical manager who had not previously treated him very well. "I have been bitten by you once," he wrote, "and am resolved that you shall not make two bites of A. Cherry."—London Telegraph.

Consistent.

"That big fellow certainly does act in a very silly way." "Perhaps, being stout, he thinks to watch if his conduct ought to be fatuous."—Baltimore American.

Individuality Once More, a Force in Millinery, Declares a London Writer

"Hats with even small brims drooping downwards rather of the mushroom pattern are very favorable for the spectacle and pine nez wearers," said a milliner recently, "whereas others that are brimming are set back from the brow, leaving it exposed, give the face in general and the profile in particular quite a ludicrous look—so startled and precipitant."

"Little children who wear glasses are probably the most difficult to make picturesque, but their spectacles are usually large, strong and painfully assertive looking in consequence. And their noses are so small."

"Talking of noses reminds me to say that the nose which is long and slightly hooked may be the sign of a strong character, but is certainly difficult to 'hat.' Regarded in profile it overwhelms the rest of the facial outline completely."

"My resource in such difficulty is a large-hat with a shady brim, beautiful and cunningly modeled."

eminently fashionable I am obliged to temporize and bow to the mode's decision and my customers' preferences. Nevertheless, I preserve the downward droop of the brim to minimize the effect of the prominent nose. Try the reverse design, with the closely fitting brim carried upwards, and you will see the difference at once.

"It is real joy, once more, to hat the little face with the tip-tilted nose, the nose that used to 'sing' by poets and praised by novelists when the piquant heroine was in fashion. For the small hat does so truly well suit it when cleverly chosen."

"I like to provide for such a profile a small felt hat to be worn just a trifle on one side, only a trifle, but with a sufficient 'lift' to emphasize the nose reticence, which under such conditions looks most piquant."

Of late the milliners have had to use all the means in their power to disguise the tip-tilted nose, and the extinguisher hat, which certainly made all faces of a strange family resemblance, brought it into line with the rest. Now that the profile is cultivated again, however, the case is altered and character is studied. The open countenance is once more revealed in all its sweetness and beauty."

It is naturally the woman whose profile is classical in its purity of outline, who is a source of the greatest pleasure to her hatmaker. She can wear anything and always look charming

But her best choice is not this small hat, strange as that may appear.

Though she has no regularity of feature to disguise, the perfect purity of her profile is apt to look just a little cold, or even insipid, unless there be some halo-like frame above it.

It must be a simple hat that is ordered, nothing frivolous nor overburdened with trimming will be suitable. No; the perfect hat for the perfect profile is made of velvet; it has a clearly defined brim gently curling upwards at one side to show the hair, and the feathers that trim it, though they may be as rich as money can buy, must be placed with obvious unconcealment, quite flat on the lower crown.

"It is her riding hat that the girl with the clear-cut, classical profile looks her best," declared an eminent authority, "and by her riding hat I mean the silk, the bowler, the summer Panama, or the sailor shape. All are manifestly severe and absolutely becoming."

The girl with the tiny face who has been overwhelmed of late by the magnitude of her gargantuan hats will find herself very well disposed towards the closely fitting fur-skull caps of this winter, with their feather extensions. They are eminently becoming to the type of profile that may be called expressively "fascinatingly impertinent," but would not in the least suit the other types of countenance.

PATENT MEDICINES Flourished twenty years ago when the daily papers carried a life size profile of Hiram Hayricks, of Hogtown, whose testimonial avers that he had been an invalid for seventeen years and after taking seventeen bottles of Dr. Fakers Purgatum he can tell ice cream from plug chewing tobacco without his glasses and is the owner of an appetite that makes a hobo look like an infant with stomach trouble. In most cases when you separated yourself from good coin for patent medicine it was a revised version of the fool and his money. Different now, the best and most effective remedies on the market are not patent medicines. You are welcome to the formulas from which they are made. The Dikes household remedies are not patent medicines. We can give you the formula of every one of them and they are made by the same people who have for fifty years been foremost in the manufacture of prescription goods and antitoxin. Their laboratories are the greatest in the world and their workers the most skilled. For sale by the

OUR LINIMENT DO THE WORK

The pain caused by a bruise is simply nature's way of letting you know that many little blood vessels are broken and that the congested blood needs help in moving along. IN CASE OF A SPRAIN the circulation must be stimulated not only to prevent congestion but to furnish material for repairing the injury. It is impossible to treat such injuries from the outside, but our liniments are the ideal external applications for all such troubles and the rubbing necessary in applying them helps stimulate the circulation. You should never be without a good liniment, for the sooner they are applied after an injury the easier it is for them to do their work.
