Cool Clothing For Men

At Less than Regular Price

Having the right clothing is an extremely important factor in a man's comfort, especially such days as we have been having this week. Doubtless there is a great deal more weather of the same kind ahead of us. One must have clothing which is cool and light weight, yet always presentable. We have that kind of clothing and the most interesting part of the story is that we have it for much LESS than usual cost.

GRAND JURY IS NOW IN SESSION

KILLING OF CHARLES YEARY AND DEATH OF YOUNG GIRL WILL BE PROBED

BAWDY HOUSE CHARGE

Judge Martin Declares Fight is On Between Whores and Pimps and Law and Order

In addition to charging the grand jury to investigate the killing of Charles Yeary, and the death of a Wichita Falls girl in connection with which Milton J. King is charged with murder in a complaint, Judge Martin in the district court Monday morning called the attention of the inquisitorial body to alleged bootlegging at Electra, assaults with intent to murder, alleged violation of the new law making assaults with prohibited weapons a felony, the continued existence of bawdy houses in the city and the sale of liquor in such houses in violation of the law.

Judge Martin laid special emphasis upon the bawdy houses, taking occasion to compliment the grand jury for its good work at the former session, and complimented also the work of the county attorney in the prosecution of such cases.

He cited the fact that out of 14 trials of indictments in bawdy house cases returned by the grand jury at its former session there had been 13 convictions. He said this fact showed that the grand jury had done its work well, and that the county attorney had done his duty well, and that the citizenship of Wichita county was standing behind the grand jury.

Charging the jury in connection with the bawdy houses he said:

"I am informed and believe these houses are still running in Wichita Falls. It's a fight and the fight is whether the whores, thugs and pimps will run Wichita Falls or whether the forces of law and order will run it. For my own part I promise to use all the power at my command to see that the forces of law and order triumph. I ask you to use yours likewise. I believe the county and district attorney will use theirs. I know from the fact that there were 13 convictions out of 14 cases tried that the citizenship of Wichita county will do their part.

"You know and know full well what a disgraceful thing it is for such vice to be flaunted before visitors right at the entrance of our town where everybody must see it.

"I have learned that since the 9-20 closing law became effective these people have done a thriving business in the sale of intoxicating liquors after the saloons have closed, and that there are persons black and white engaged in bootlegging in Wichita Falls. It's a wrong not only to society but also a wrong and an injustice to the licensed dealers in liquor that should not be tolerated.

He called especial attention to the new law enacted by the last legislature making it a felony to assault another with a prohibited weapon such as a revolver, stunner, slung shot, knife, dirk, etc.

J. W. Block who was appointed foreman of the grand jury at its formation session continued in that capacity.

Buddhists of Japan

TEMPLE GATEWAY

ONE of the most striking figures in Japanese history is that of Robo Daishi, the great Buddhist teacher, who was born in A. D. 774. His ardent desire for enlightenment took him to China, where he sat at the feet of the most eminent Buddhist scholars of the day, and brought back much that was new to the Buddhists of Japan. I had long wished to visit the famous monastery founded by Kobo Daishi on Mount Koya, but was uncertain as to how I should carry out my wish, writes Susan Ballard in the East and West Review, until an American gentleman, who was searching Japan for Buddhist art treasures, gave me the necessary information.

He told me that the monastery consists of a number of separate monasteries, each with its independent rule and presiding abbot, the whole being under the jurisdiction of a lord abbot. The monasteries are bound by their rule to "take in all wanderers," but my friend offered me an introduction to the particular monastery where he had himself stayed on more than one occasion.

Armed with this introduction, I wrote to the abbot, whose name he gave me and asked if it would be convenient to them to put up two ladies for a couple of days. I at once received a most polite reply, saying that if we could be content with what accommodation they had to offer they would be pleased to receive us.

Fed Entirely Upon Vegetables. When we got to the top of the mountain, white walls gleamed in a ghostly way through the darkness, and we at length arrived at our destination. Taking off our shoes we stepped up into the monastery and were at once led by white-robed priests through needless matted rooms to the very back of the building, where were the rooms reserved for special guests. The room into which we were shown was bare of all furniture except for two large red crepe cushions for us to sit on, with a lamp in front of each. The sliding screens were very elaborately painted, and there was a fine bronze ornament on a shelf.

One evening meal was presently brought in: it was served in old china on red lacquer stands. We had different china at each meal during our two days' stay, and the priests seemed to take pleasure in pointing out the peculiarities of the different makes of china. Food on Mount Koya is a problem. We had been warned that no meat, fish or eggs were allowed; absolutely nothing but vegetables. Our meal looked delicious, but was most unsatisfying, and the moment it was cleared away we fell to eagerly on the bread we had brought up with us.

The next morning I had a conversation on the food question with the attendant who brought our meals. He volunteered the information that eggs could be bought if we wanted them. I asked if meat was strictly prohibited; he said that, of course, the priests never touched it, and they did not like its being brought into the monasteries, but they knew that it was difficult for visitors to get on without meat, so if they did bring it with them, well, the priests looked the other way.

We were much relieved to hear that the priests had learned the gentle art of looking the other way, and we quickly produced out tin of tongue and the hot water, ostensibly brought for tea, turned into consomme. We were, however, careful to wash our

NO LONGER DOES LOWER HOUSE KOW TOW TO THE SENATE

CHANGE IN ATTITUDE

Amendment Change for Direct Election of Senators a Contributing Cause

Washington, July 28.—The Senate is losing its dignity. And the House is losing its awe of the upper body. This is the new sentiment to the Senate's startling attitude today of the House toward its senior, somber and dignified congressional partner. It is a recent development. It indicates a new viewpoint, particularly for the Senate.

Our "country" the impression hasn't gone forth so strongly as in Washington, that the Senate has ceased to be the Pooah-dah of the capital. The House is perking up and literally showing the Senate "where it gets off"—at times, when it can. For countless generations the Senate has assumed or at least promulgated the role of being the "body of holies," the King pin, the creme-de-la-creme of all that is dignified, staid, exclusive and self-satisfied. The House was allowed rarely to touch the smaller and more bou-tou Senate.

Today the self-assertiveness of the House as the peer, the equal and sometimes the "boss" of the Senate is one of the most striking and in some respects amusing features of the "new politics."

The "lower House" has been the familiar name given the House of Representatives. It has tamely submitted to the ignominy of the popular sobriquet for years. Now it has rebelled. It is assuming and getting equal dignity and consideration with the senate.

The new constitutional amendment for election of senators by popular vote is the cause.

The House now feels that the Senate is in the same line on the "new" and "old" terms as are its members. No more does the House think and feel that the Senate is the "patrician" branch of Congress.

Evidences of a New Era

Evidences of the new era in congressional decorum are constantly cropping out. For years the word "senate" or "senator" was spoken with bated breath in the house chamber. In fact, custom and unwritten law prohibited any member of the House from referring in sarcastic or complimentary terms to the Senate or any member of the upper House.

Today all this is changed. Representatives, upon every occasion, are whacking the Senate whenever a senatorial head shows that any member thinks needs a lift. No famous "senatorial" courtesy deters any member of the House from sending a few disparaging remarks, in or out of school, regarding the north end of the capitol.

Like the House, the Senate has become "politicized." It is now up against the same task of seeking reflections from the "plain people" just like the House members. The ermine and togas of the Senate are no more secure, sacred or certain than those of the House.

This feeling is permeating the House. Frequent outbursts of caustic criticism of the Senate, some Senate committee or some individual senators are becoming more frequent in the House. Recently several representatives joined in lambasting the Senate obnoxious committee for alleged examination of witnesses in secret.

ATTENTION CALLED TO PRESS MEETING

Bridgport, Texas, July 28.—By direction of the executive committee, recently convened in Wichita Falls to prepare a program for the annual convention of Northwest Texas Press Association, said Association is hereby called to meet in the city of Memphis, Tenn., on Friday and Saturday, September 19 and 20, 1913, the sessions to be held in the Carnegie Library, beginning at 10:30 a. m., September 19.

Secretary Durhan having resigned in account of illness and a press of their duties, I will shortly announce the appointment of his successor. Meantime, I earnestly request the cooperation of the press in giving widespread publicity to the convention, to the end that we may have an excellent attendance—and do justice to the splendid hospitality of one of the finest little cities in Northwest Texas. Memphis never does anything by halves, and she will entertain us again as well as she did last year, which is well enough for anybody.

LIGHTNING-HITS FIVE TIMES IN SAME PLACE

Fort Smith, Ark., July 28.—In an electrical storm Saturday the home of J. W. Baxter of Fayetteville, a member of the State Legislature, was struck by lightning five times within an hour. The first bolt knocked off a chimney. The second entered through a telephone and knocked Baxter unconscious. Scarcely had he recovered before the third knocked his wife senseless. The fourth stunned his mother and the fifth buried the house from its foundation.

To Protect the Birds

Rome, July 28.—An announcement was made today at the International Institute of Agriculture, which was founded by King Victor Emanuel on the suggestion of David Lubin, of Sacramento, Cal., of a world-wide propaganda for the protection of all birds that are beneficial to the farmer in destroying insects and crop destroyers. The campaign, according to the plan announced today, will be started simultaneously in all of the fifty-three nations which have permanent delegates at the institute.

HENS SIGN THEIR AUTOGRAPH

Staten Islanders Have a Most Ingenious Scheme for Keeping Track of the Work of Egg Layers.

Make your hens sign their autograph every time they lay an egg. This is the very latest wrinkle in poultry farming. Two Staten Islanders devised it. These two farmers put their wits together and devised an apparatus so simple that even the silliest of hens can work it, for she works it all unbeknown to herself. The first thing they did was to attach a piece of crayon by a clip to the leg of each hen, just as a steel spur is fastened to the leg of a fighting cock. This is for her to write her autograph with. Each hen has a different colored crayon, or even if there are not enough colors to go around two crayons can be attached.

Now for the nest. When the hen feels like laying an egg she must walk up a short incline plane to reach the nest. Her weight releases a trigger which makes two wire gates drop. These will open outward at a touch from her head; but not even a big Cochon China rooster could open them from the outside. So no other hen can enter and cause confusion by laying another egg in the nest. When the hen has done her duty she walks down the inclined plane to get out. Reaching the gate, she has to crouch a little in order to swing it open. This brings the crayon on her leg into contact with the surface of the inclined plane. The streak it draws thereon is the hen's autograph and proof that the egg in the nest is hers and not that of any other bird.

Hunters After Valuable Black Fox

Hunters in Weid, Mo., say that there is in that section a beautiful black fox bearing a charmed life. Many of the local hunters are crack shots, but they have fired shot after shot at the fox without effect. Those who have seen the fox say that it is unusually large. The skin is estimated to be worth from $500 to $1,000.

Orchid Hunt in Brazil

A BRAZILIAN FOREST

VOYAGING up the Amazon on an ocean going steamer, one is always far above the surface of the water, one is always hurrying rather noisily on, and so necessarily but very little of the life of the great river is seen. Passing through the narrows above Para, the forests can almost be touched on either side of the steamer, but after that one shore is always very distant.

There is something mysterious about the river; canoes laden with forest produce, a brightly plumed macaw perched on their prow, come smoothly to the town; river steamers with their burden of evil smelling rubber, a few brilliant orchids tied to the wheelhouse, make fast to the wharves, and always there is that sense of the unknown, the bright, the elusive. A desire to overcome this feeling of remoteness, writes a correspondent of the London Times, determined me to embark in a canoe and journey out on the yellow waters of the Amazon and through dim forest hung channels to the black waters and white sand strewn beaches of the Rio Negro.

The difficulties I encountered were immense. All my Brazilian friends warned me of the dangers and hardships of such a voyage, and I found that prohibitive prices were asked for the hire of even the most unseaworthy craft. Eventually I secured a boat, and built a tield or hood over one end, took my provisions on board, hoisted a sail and set off. My crew consisted of a Portuguese boatman and a Japanese.

Pests of the River Amazon.

Sailing slowly down the river, the boat kept very close to the bank and slid along noiselessly. As the day wore on the wind died down and the heat became intense. A black fly called motuca appeared in great numbers and inflicted painful bites. We landed to fight a fire and cook lunch. Small dry sponges hung in the branches of the shrubs that had been long submerged, yellow butterflies were drinking in companies of 50 or more at little pools left on the sloping shore. Huge yellow and black hornets came around us and at first frightened us, but we soon learned to look on them as friends when we found it was the motuca flies that they were hunting, not us. After hardy had a motuca settled when it was pounced upon and borne off.

All insect pests were said to be far worse on white water rivers than on black water ones, so we hastened to leave the Amazon, so as if possible to sleep that night on the shores of one of the lakes lying between that river and the Rio Negro. A breeze sprang up and took us up the river slowly enough, as the current coming down was very strong, but when we turned up a stream leading to the Rio Negro our progress ceased, the sail was lowered and we took out the oars.

It proved to be very hot work. Shut in by the immense forest trees, no breath of wind came to us, and we were very happy to come to a small lake with a place on its shores free from brushwood on which we could camp. My companions slung their hammocks from branches of trees, carefully arranging their mosquito nets to protect them at night. A little way from them, a yaji from the water's edge, I placed my mattress and eased it in with a mosquito net on poles cut from the forest. We then strolled off in search of the unknown.

There is a curious atmosphere of suspense or hush in the Amazon forest; the light only reaches one after being filtered through greenery. The wide leaves of the wild banana and the frequent palms give a very tropical air to the scenery. Noises are few; occasionally a large bird will utter its call, an iguana will rush through the rustling leaves, or some monkeys will chatter as they swing through the creepers overhead. Brilliant metallic blue Morpho butterflies fit silently through the more open places, and the tracks of night wandering animals can be seen on the ground.

The little footprints of cutias and geas are present on the finer ground, and the curious serrated lines made by the plates of both crocodiles' and turtles' armor occur nearer the water's edge. Ants swarm on the trees, and nearly all inflict painful bites, and there are several kinds of wasps and bees, which either suspend their nests from twigs or else build in rolled up leaves; all would seem to be the guardians of orchids and to do their utmost to repel the despoiler.

Ants as Guardians.

Some orchids always have their roots in ants' nests, and one kind, which I subsequently obtained at the cost of an aching head, had a little hole at the base of each pseudo bulb in which a large black ant had its habitation and of which it proved a most faithful guardian. The orchid turned out to be an orchid, with delicate sprays of yellow flowers thickly spotted with chocolate brown.

My companions had been searching for turtle eggs, but without success, and we cooked a supply of curry and rice, and had as dessert a plentiful supply of passion fruit.

It was six o'clock and darkness was falling. I made haste to bathe at the brink of the river and then to get under my mosquito curtains. And not a moment too soon. As the light faded with a soft suddenness of the equatorial regions, insect life emerged for its nocturnal loves and feasting, its dances, music, flights and battles. And for many of these reveals blood, and especially human blood, is a longed for prize. If an incautious hand of a restless foot were pressed against the curtain for a moment, a cloud of mosquitoes immediately settled on it and drove their relentless trunks into the veins.

No European who has not himself seen them could credit the myriads of mosquitoes which haunt these forest streams, and as the few inhabitants of these regions are all suffering from malaria, great care has to be taken. The noises that all these insects made seemed to rise and fall in waves of sound, now becoming intensely shrill, now dying away to comparative stillness. My companions had fallen asleep in their hammocks; from the river were heard only faint rippling sounds, and I composed myself for sleep. Never was there a greater delusion, it was indeed a null chance.

Mysterious scampings came from the edge of the forest above me; a great splash came from the river and close at hand something rose, splashed, moaned and sank. Hats squeaked and blundered against my nets, creeping things left the river and scuttled over the sand. It was too dark to see anything; the sound of all this unknown activity had a curious effect on the nerves and vivid stories of great snakes, of jaguars and crocodiles came to the mind.

JAPAN IS RICH IN WORDS

It Has More Than Nine for "I," to Be Used According to Circumstances.

There are great differences between the richness and poorness of words in the different countries. Japan is certainly richer in its words than England. Just for example, we have more than nine words for the word "I." The emperor alone calls himself "Chin," and all his subjects call themselves "Watakushi," "Washi," "Ore," "Boku," "Sesha," "Soregashi," "Boku," "Ya," etc., according to circumstances. The second or third person changes as much as the first person, "I," and all the verbs accordingly. When I started to learn the English, first time, I asked my American teacher: "What shall I call myself before the emperor?" He said "I."

"Then what shall I say before my parents?" "I."

"What shall I say before my man friends?" And before my woman friends? "I."

"I was quite astonished and said: 'How simple, but how rude to the English language!'"—Atlantic Monthly.

HUMPHREY'S BILL TO PRISON REFORM

Throckmorton Representative Introduces Measure Which He Says Will Save $15,000 Monthly

Austin, Texas, July 25.—Representative R. H. Humphrey, who is vice chairman of the penitentiary investigating committee, has introduced a bill to effect an immediate reform on four points about which there is little if any difference of opinion. In his judgment, after a close study of the figures, he believes a saving of $15,000 a month will be effected in this matter alone.

What is Proposed.

Following are given the four sections it is proposed in the bill to enact:

Section 1. Repealing convict per diem article.

Sec. 2. Except in case of extreme and unavoidable emergency, no labor shall be required of any prisoner on Sunday except the feeding of live stock, cooking and other similar incidental and necessary work.

Sec. 3. Prisoners shall be kept at work under such rules and regulations as may be adopted by the prison commission.

In going to and returning from work, prisoners shall not be required to travel faster than a walk. No greater amount of labor shall be required of any prisoner than his physical strength will reasonably permit, nor shall any prisoner be placed at such labor as the prison physician may pronounce him unable to perform.

SCHOOL HEAD FOR SIXTY YEARS

William G. Cottingham Appointed Superintendent in 1853 at Easton Still Holding Job

Easton, Pa., July 25.—Sixty years superintendent of the school of Easton is the unique record of William G. Cottingham, appointed by the city fathers in 1853. It is believed the record has not been equaled in any other city of the country.

Although few school superintendents can point to a term of service within five or ten years of this record, there are a number who have served notably long terms. In the city school system of the bureau of education report W. R. Hood gives the following interesting statistics:

Superintendent James M. Greenwood, of Kansas City, Mo., is retiring this year after thirty-nine years of service. Superintendent Glass of the Lynchburg, Va., public schools has served in that capacity since 1873. Superintendent Phillips has been head of the Birmingham, Ala., schools since 1882. Superintendent McClintock has served at Oakland, Cal., since 1883. Jacob A. Shaw was appointed superintendent of public schools 24 years ago, and he is still serving in that office at Columbus, Ohio. Henry Snyder any of the provisions of this section shall be dismissed from the service.

Sec. 4. When a prisoner is entitled to a discharge from prison he shall be furnished with a written or printed discharge from the prison commission, with seal affixed, signed by the chairman of the board of prison commissioners, giving prisoner's name, date of sentence, from what county sentenced, amount of commutation received if any, the trade he has learned if any, his proficiency in same and such other description as may be profitable. He shall be furnished with a decent outfit of citizen's clothing of good quality and fit, two suits of underwear, $5 in money in addition to any money held to his credit, and transportation to the nearest depot from whence sentenced, or if such prisoner prefers he may receive transportation to any other point of equal distance as the nearest depot to the point from whence sentenced.

FERTILIZER SALES HAVE BEEN DOUBLED

Texas Farmers Used 76,000 Tons During 1912-1913—State Chemists Report

College Station, Texas, July 25.—There has been an unprecedented demand for fertilizers during the season 1912-1913, according to figures compiled by Dr. G. S. Frazer, state chemist to the Experiment Station at Agricultural and Mechanical College. During this year 76,000 tons of fertilizer have been used in Texas.

This is almost double the quantity used in 1911-1912, the record for that year being 44,766 tons. This amount, however, was eclipsed in 1910-1911, when 62,985 tons were used. The cause of the low consumption in 1911-1912 was the wet season, the farmers being unable to put the fertilizer in.

Acid phosphate is the favorite and best fertilizer, says Dr. Frazer. Most of the fertilizer used in East and North-east Texas, very little being used in the southern portion of the state. The state chemist's office is a clearing house for fertilizer information. During the past year Dr. Frazer has written more than 1500 letters in answer to queries along this line.

Bulletins 112 and 149, dealing with fertilizers, have been in steady demand, and following an article published in the daily newspapers telling of the publication of these bulletins 700 inquiries were received in four days and within 10 days more than 1000 requests for the bulletins had been received.

JESSE R. GRANT HAS SUED FOR DIVORCE

San Francisco, July 25.—Mrs. Jesse Root Grant, who is living with her mother and son here, showed much surprise when informed that her husband is suing her for a divorce in Reno, Nev.

"This is the first information I have received regarding the divorce action taken by my husband," said Mrs. Grant. "I am surprised that he should have charged me with desertion. I have never left my children nor my home except to go to him. If there has been any desertion it is then on his part. You might say that the separation dates almost from the time of our marriage thirty years ago, since which time he has been away on mining business in many parts of the world. Mr. Grant has known that I was here. He has not seen fit to come here. It has been two years since I have seen him. I do not know whether or not I shall fight the complaint."

Beyond His Ambition.
William G. McAdoo of New Jersey tunnel fame was leaning back in his chair at his desk the other day, when a woman was ushered in by the office boy. "This is a pleasure," she said, sitting down in the chair near him, "a pleasure that I have often looked forward to. Words cannot express the impression that men like you make on me. Why," she went on, "the McAdoo tunnels will be your monument." At this point Mr. McAdoo broke in: "Pardon me, miss," he said, "but I don't care to have such a large monument."

Blind and "Broke" Man Has No Regret for Squandering His $250,000 Fortune.

Kansas City. - Jack Rickart, after a life of riotous living during which he got rid of $250,000, is now at fifty-two blind, penniless, rheumatic and under jail sentence for selling beer without a license, but not repentant.

"Let me tell you, boy, she would go the same old way," he said. "Prosperous times can't last always, and when the tide turns I'm willing to take mine with the rest."

"I started life out in California digging stews. In those days everybody drank and gambled. I followed the rest. I was still young when I came to Kansas City. I started in the gambling and saloon business. Later I moved to the West Bottoms and opened 'The Freightier' in James street. Money came in like water. Life in those days was worth living; hundred-dollar bills were no more than so much dirt.
