EXPECT ARREST IN DALLAS CASE

AUTHORITIES HAVE EVIDENCE ON WHICH THEY EXPECT TO MAKE ARREST

GIRL'S UNCLE ARRIVES

Is Clothed With Detectives and Sheriff—Man With Bloody Shirt Suspected

Dallas, Texas, July 31.—Apparently baffled in their attempt to throw some light on the murder of Miss Florence Brown, the police and detectives today refused to make public any new information which they may have been able to learn. They contented themselves with the declaration that they hoped soon to make an arrest.

Robinson arrived Thursday forenoon. Anxious that he should not make any public statement before they had talked with him, detectives attempted to board his train at a suburban station but failing to do so they hurried back to the Texas and Pacific station. They missed him also at this point and followed him to the home of Mrs. Brown, mother of the murdered girl.

Confers With Authorities. Chief of Detectives Tanner and home talked with Mr. Robinson more than an hour. The result of their interview was not divulged. Leaving the Brown residence Mr. Robinson went directly to the office of Sheriff Brandenburg. He was closeted with the sheriff and U. S. Marshall W. J. McDonald for nearly an hour.

Make Statement Today. To a reporter Mr. Robinson said he came from the sheriff's office, "I cannot make a statement now; I may have something to say later in the day or tomorrow morning."

From the attitude of the officers and the movements of Mr. Robinson it is believed that he has brought important information and strengthens the hope that an arrest is soon to be made of the guilty person.

Young Man With Bloody Shirt. One report that is being thoroughly investigated is the statement that a young man shortly after 9 o'clock on the morning of the murder appeared at an Elm street clothing store and bought a new shirt. His face was scratched and his shirt was torn and bloody. On being questioned by the clothing clerk he said he had been in a fight. He refused to make any other statement.

Saw Man in Office. One of the most tangible and possibly important pieces of information given by anyone in connection with the murder was committed during the period between the time Miss Brown arrived at the office and the finding of her body was given by A. M. Vaughn, real estate dealer, with offices on the same side of Field street and just a few doors north of the Robinson-Styron place of business.

This statement describes the appearance of a man Mr. Vaughn saw standing in the front office less than twenty minutes before the girl's body was found.

Mr. Vaughn, accompanied by his wife, left the abundant interurban car, due in Dallas at 8:30 o'clock, at the intersection of Field and Commerce streets, between 8:40 and 8:45 o'clock, the car being just a few minutes behind schedule time. Mr. Vaughn said:

Details Mr. Vaughn said that he saw a man standing at a little telephone table. This man had his face turned toward the south and about at an angle of forty-five degrees from the front door.

BIG REDUCTIONS IN NEW RATES

PARCELS POST WEIGHTS INCREASED AND RATES MUCH REDUCED

EFFECTIVE AUGUST FIFTEEN

Reductions Effect Local Rate in Fifty and One Hundred Mile Zones

Reductions in parcel post rates and increase in maximum weight from 11 to 20 pounds for zones one and two are announced in an order received by the Wichita Falls postoffice from Postmaster General Burleson. The order becomes effective August 15.

How large is the reduction is seen in the difference in rates from 11 and 20 pounds under the new system. The rate for 11 pounds is 35 cents in the first zone and 46 cents in the second zone. Under the new system of rates, the postage on 11 pounds will be 15 cents in both zones. The rate on 20 pounds will be 24 cents in both zones.

The lowering of rates is in proportion to the charges that has been on 11 pounds, or a reduction to nearly one-fourth in the present rate. Fifteen cents will be charged for local delivery of 20-pound packages.

Weights on packages weighing less than two pounds will not be charged. The lowering of rates is in proportion to weight. A three-pound package has been 11 cents in the first zone and 14 cents in the second zone. Under the new system the rates will be 7 cents in both zones; and a local rate of 6 instead of 7 cents will be charged.

Applicable Throughout United States. No change in rates in the zones above two are made. The increase in maximum weight from 11 to 20 pounds, however, is applicable to all parts of the country.

The system is based on a charge for one pound of 5 cents, if not intended for local delivery, and an addition of 1 cent for each additional pound when delivered in the first and second zones. The first zone is a radius of fifty miles from the sending office, and the second zone is a radius of 150 miles from the sending office.

Under the system of rates effective Aug. 15, charges for delivery in the first and second zones do not vary. Thus, the rate for twenty pounds is 24 cents in both the first and second zones, but is 16 cents for local delivery. The increase in rates for distance, in the radius between 150 and 300 miles of the sending office.

An important feature of the new order is a reduction in insurance charge. Under the present rates the insurance fee is 10 cents with a limit of $50 insurance. Under the new regulations the insurance rate will be 5 cents if the insurance carried is not more than $25.

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

MENEALUS AND OTHER SENATORS INTRODUCE RESOLUTION FOR SAME IN 1915

SECOND MONDAY IN APRIL

In the House Burgess Mexican Revolution Resolution is Defeated

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION RESOLUTION.

Austin, Texas, July 31.—After the Senate convened this morning a joint resolution by McNealus and eleven other senators to call a constitutional convention for the second Monday in April, 1915, was introduced. Action on the resolution was postponed.

Austin, Texas, July 31.—Mexican revolution scenes were transplanted today in the House of the Texas Legislature during the course of discussion on Burgess resolution on the Mexican revolution. The House went into an uproar and the speaker was unable to keep order, and so fast did questions of parliamentary procedure arise Representative Wiley-Kennedy who was in the chair frankly acknowledged that he was stumped.

For several minutes no one was aware what was happening but the sergeant at arms finally restored order and further consideration of the resolution proceeded.

New bills introduced today included one by Hill to regulate the granting of permits to foreign corporations to do business in Texas; by Spann, Allison and Duffie a court procedure bill to the effect that only material witnesses in felony cases should be allowed to testify, and endeavoring to straighten out the tangle resulting from the action of the regular session in connection with the bill for the pay of witnesses.

BURGESS RESOLUTION DEFEATED.

After an extended debate of the minority adverse report of the committee's report on the Mexican revolution resolution the vote on the resolution was taken and the final ballot was 54 ayes and 62 noes and the Burgess resolution calling upon the United States government through the present administration to carry out the platform pledge of the last democratic national platform for the protection of American citizens in foreign countries was defeated.

KATY BOILER MAKERS GIVEN AN INCREASE.

By Associated Press. Washington, July 31.—In a conference yesterday between boiler makers and helpers and apprentices with Katy officials the men were granted a raise of two cents an hour in their wages and better working conditions. These concessions will apply to the whole Texas Katy system.

NO BILL AGAINST MILTON J. KING

GRAND JURY DISMISSES COMPLAINT OF MURDER AGAINST BYERS MAN

CHARGE IS NOT SUSTAINED

Grand Jury Also Fails to Return Indictment Against Wichita Falls Physician

"No bill" was voted by the grand jury against Milton J. King who was charged in a complaint with murder in connection with the death of a Wichita Falls girl, a year ago. After a two days investigation of the case the grand jury voted unanimously on the first ballot to discharge King and also voted no bill against a Wichita Falls physician whose name had been connected with the case in a statement made by a Byers physician and which the charge against King was based.

King's arrival a few weeks ago a year after the death of the girl whose name was connected with the case created a sensation and his friends here and at Byers will be glad to learn that he has been exonerated by the grand jury.

GRAND JURY TAKES A RECESS

RETURNS INDICTMENT OF MURDER AGAINST J. V. JACKSON AND GEORGE CHILTON

RECONVENE ON MONDAY

Expected Bawdy House Situation Will be Taken Up at That Time

The grand jury recessed until Monday today after returning a number of indictments including two that charge murder. These are indictments against J. V. Jackson in connection with the killing of Charley Yeary here about two weeks ago and against George Chilton in connection with the death of a man named Dixon in an oil camp near Burkburnett last month. Both of the men indicted are now in jail. Jackson is slowly recovering from the effects of a deep gash in the back inflicted with an axe by a third man. No statement was given out as to what action, if any, had been taken in connection with the man who threw the axe.

LIVELY TILT IN THE LOBBY INVESTIGATION

Effort of Examiners to Throw Mud at Witness Stopped by Committee

Washington, July 31.—Martin M. Mulhall's cross examination by attorneys representing the National Association of Manufacturers today began with a lively row between Senator Reed and Attorney Robert McCarter, representing the association. McCarter insisted on asking all the questions himself and Reed insisted that they go through the committee. Chairman Overman ruled in favor of Reed.

McCarter precipitated the outbreak by asking Mulhall if he had not been discharged from the Cleveland police force about twelve years ago because of an offense against the state laws. Mulhall replied that he had been discharged for political reasons and exclaimed, "I was advised by friends to refuse to answer your questions. I want counsel. I insist on having counsel and refuse to go on until I have. I will go to jail before I will answer questions about my life twenty-five or thirty years ago."

SUPT. ANDERSON IS QUESTIONED

STATE BRINGS OUT FACT HE WAS GIVEN GENERAL SUPERINTENDENT FOR ALL KATY LINES

WEST ON STAND TODAY

Passenger Fares From Katy Points to Points on Northwestern Involved

Dallas, Texas, July 31.—In Thursday morning's hearing of the Katy consolidation suit counsel for the state brought out the fact that prior to April, 1913, H. F. Anderson, general superintendent of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas, held the same position with the various lines named in the suit with the possible exception of the Wichita Falls and Wellington Railway. He made his headquarters at Dallas and received one voucher for payment for his services with all the lines. This, he said, he believed was issued by the treasurer of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railway Company of Texas.

Assistant Attorney General Luther Nichols says that if these railroads were operated as separate lines the state law would require that they have general superintendents residing in the same city as their headquarters.

W. G. Crush, general passenger agent of the Katy, was questioned, this afternoon as to passenger rates applying to points in West Texas on the Wichita Falls Route. He was ordered to produce copies of the tariff rates going back as far as 1908.

LIVES ON SIX CENTS A DAY.

London, July 31.—Here's the menu of F. J. Cross, a food reformer, who by experimenting several months on himself, has solved the high cost of living. Cross's food supply for a week was three loaves of bread, one pound of meat, pound of rice, five ounces oleo margarine, two ounces lard, half pound potatoes, half pound sugar, cent and half's worth of tea, pepper and salt.

WADSWORTH HERE TO BID ON PAVING.

Chas. S. Wadsworth, the well known paving man, is in the city to present a proposition to the city council tonight for the paving of Tenth street. Mr. Wadsworth was formerly manager of the company that put down the wood block paving here, but is now interested in the Southern Westrumite Co. as general manager. Mr. Wadsworth says that he is proud of the work his company did here and although he has been given that line of work, he still has many nice things to say of the block paving. He says the only drawback to it is the price. Since paving companies began using yellow pine the lumber dealers have been boosting the price until it has ceased to be an economical paving material. He says that the Westrumite has all the advantages of the blocks and owing to the simplicity of its process he can save the city thousands of dollars by its use.

SUFFRAGISTS INVADE CAPITAL

DELEGATIONS REPRESENTING EVERY STATE IN UNION IN ATTACKING FORCE

PARADE IS GREAT FEATURE

Suffragettes Make Personal Appeals to Every Member of Congress

Washington, July 31.—An army of peace invaded Washington today and laid siege to the Nation's legislature. The object of the "attacking forces" was complete suffrage for women to be granted by a Constitutional amendment. The demonstration was the greatest display of suffrage strength the Capital City has yet seen. Before the day was over, at least two fair invaders had "engaged" each representative and senator in a personal appeal for the immediate consideration and passage of a Constitutional amendment which will place women on political equality with men throughout the United States.

Delegations representing every state in the Union were in the line of march. The paraders were afoot, on horseback, in carriages and on floats in classic costumes. When the parade began there was every indication that the Washington police department would not repeat the mistake it made on March 3, last, when insufficient patrolling of the streets permitted hoodlums to break up the parade by assaulting the suffragettes and on floats in which young and elderly women alike were trampled and in some cases subjected to insult.

The paraders made the pilgrimage to Washington by automobile, by boat gathered thousands of signatures to a petition and Congress to immediate favorable action on the proposed measure to give them the vote. On floats representing the various states the women and girls were costumed to represent the figures in the seals of their respective states.

Early this morning the suffrage forces were mobilized at the Camp Maryland town of Hyattsville, eight miles from the Capitol Building. Mayor Harry Shepard delivered an address of welcome when the pilgrims reached the town park where a grand review was conducted by Miss Alice Paul and Miss Lucy Burns and the Congressional committee. The suffrage colors were run to the top of a tall flagstaff the moment the first delegation, travel-worn, stepped into the reviewing grounds. An orderly crowd of several thousand witnessed these preliminaries.

Among the paraders were Miss Jeanette Rankin, president of the Montana Suffrage organization, with a party which came all the way by automobile; Miss Harriet May Mills, president of the New York Association, who has just completed a tour of the Empire state in connection with the Massachusetts Political Equality Union, who recently led a campaign of the New England states, and Mrs. Frank M. Roessing, president of the Pennsylvania suffragists.

A delegation of men of usual numbers was led by C. R. Rand, president of the New York Men's League, whose party had presented plays and given dances in a "swing around the circle" cause. Champlain L. Riley of Plainfield, N. J., who held meetings at Ocean Grove and other New Jersey points en route here, headed another large delegation of men. The brigade headed by Miss Mabel Vernon has just completed a "sweep" down the Jersey coast in a series of roller chair parades at all the resorts. Miss Margaret Foley, heading one of the Massachusetts delegations, carried a banner which has been torn from her hands during the "March moles" and afterwards "recaptured."

Mrs. Inez Gilmore, the magazine writer, and Mrs. Glendower Evans, both of whom were chiefly instrumental in having the minimum wage law passed in Massachusetts, were among the Massachusetts delegation.

Forty automobiles, gaily decorated, were sent out from Washington to escort the pilgrims to the Capitol. Wives of Senators and Representatives and government officials formed the escort party. With a band leading, and state banners mingling with the national party colors of yellow and white, the parade moved along New York avenue to Fourteenth street northwest, south on Fourteenth to Pennsylvania avenue and east on Pennsylvania avenue to the Capitol steps.

Members of the Senate Woman's suffrage committee met the petition bearers and rode with them to the Capitol. At the Capitol the parade was disbanded and a cloud of women fluttered into the senate wing of the Capitol building. The dignified hush of the imposing marble room just off the senate chamber was broken by the demands of the women that their cards be taken to the senators from their states. The pages were busy for an hour hurrying the senators from the chamber to meet the women with the petitions.

After the petitions had been presented seats were reserved for the woman suffrage supporters in the gallery and on the floor of the senate.

While the demonstration was made ostensibly for the purpose of presenting petitions urging action during the present session of Congress, the real

Dope Selling, Bootlegging, Gambling, and Red Light District Must be Driven Out

(Lawton News-Star)

Bootlegging, gambling, "dope" selling and the "red light" district must be driven from Lawton—and right now—before the opening date of Lawton's twelfth anniversary celebration—

At least that is the demand of the recently organized law and order league which proposes, through its secret committee of ten vigilantes, to help do the work of suppression.

Officers Agree to Help.

Determined not to "let any grass grow under its feet," the new organization, which has been in existence only since Sunday afternoon, sent a special committee of twenty men to confer with county and city officials this morning.

They assured the officers that their mission was entirely friendly; that they came with no spirit of criticism, but to offer co-operation in the enforcement of law; and they received the promise for which they came—a promise of co-operation from the officers.

Doubt About "Red Light" District

At least full co-operation was assumed in the suppression of bootlegging, gambling and "dope" selling.

A snag was struck on the question of the red-light district.

For, recalling the experience of four years ago, when J. A. Fain, as county attorney, attempted to abolish the segregated district, Henry Warren, commissioner of public safety, refused to agree with the policy of the committee on that question.

He is willing, Mr. Warren said, to keep the woman of east and under the strictest surveillance, as he has been doing, but to close up their houses, as the committee proposes, he declared, would only scatter the women around in the residence districts and rooming houses and make conditions worse than ever.

On this problem, then, the law and order league is in doubt as to what can be done.

The special committee held out for the league's demands for complete suppression and the county officers indicate that they are willing to act but in case of a clash of county and city authorities, it is realized that the result will be unsatisfactory.

DIAMOND IN THE ROUGH

By G. A. PRATT.

We were enjoying the change from the stuffy city and the smoke and the dirt and the hemmed-in flat and all that sort of thing. The spot was a most beautiful one and in a state of nature which left nothing to be desired. We were boarding at the farmhouse of William Higgins—popularly known among his neighbors as "Bill."

All this, however, has nothing to do with the love story of Hannah, the domestic servant in the Simphas family, which was thrust upon our attention and which was the occasion of a controversy as violent as we ever permit in between ourselves.

We were loafing peacefully in the orchard, Fannie in the hammock and I lying flat on my back on the soft grass, eyes closed and enjoying the fragrance of a tip-top Havana, when my soothed and peaceful nerves were startled by a voice—a voice speaking to Fannie.

"Ye see, mum, I'm engaged to Hiram—he works over on Higgins' farm"—these were the first definite words I caught. "And Hiram sets a powerful store by clothes and style and fixin's—and I don't know much about them things—and—I thought—maybe you'd help me with a weddin' dress that would please Hiram. You see he wants to get married in the Lutheran church, and I want to be just as scrumptious as I kin—and mum I've got near $200 saved up an' I'm goin' to spend enough of it so Hiram won't be ashamed of me. Would ye please, mum, tell me whether to get a dress from this polky old lawyer or take the dress?"

"Fannie," said I, after Hannah had vanished, "it seems to me that here is the opportunity to do some fine work for philanthropy and religion and humanity and—and all that sort of thing—don't you know?"

"What do you mean," asked Fannie. "You are forever looking after romances and all that sort of thing—and here is one ready-made under your very nose."

"Yes," said Fannie, rather coldly. "Fannie," I said severely, "this girl is a diamond in the rough, one of these daughters of nature who without education, culture, tradition and all that, still have the primitive instincts of the race and arise upon occasion to the great acts and the great sacrifices. Did you hear the very delicate sentiment she uttered to you? Without knowing why or how she yet appreciated with the most tender womanly instinct that Hiram desired clothes and nice things—and she is going to make great sacrifices for him."

My wife not responding, I resumed the theme.

"You see, my dear, while you are literary and all that sort of thing, really you do not see the ultimate philosophy of the race. That type of girl really represents the virility of the race—from a feminine standpoint. She is a diamond in the rough. The girls we see—the cultured, educated persons who beyond our standpoint are merely the excrescence—the overdone ones, as we might say. But this woman is one of the products of nature, pure and simple. Love with such girls could not be disloyal or treacherous. When they love, they love, now and forever. They are natural—therefore true and loyal. Fannie, I am surprised that you do not detect the eternal truth underneath the blue calico jacket of the lady—lady, do you hear, who just left us."

Ten days later we were looting about in the same environment when Hannah again flashed across the vision of our dreams. There was a man with her, too—and a good, husky specimen of a man.

"This is my man," she said, with a bridal simper. "Ben, this is the lady who told me how to get up my weddin' dress."

My wife greeted both very nicely, but I refused and lay with my eyes closed. Presently I heard Fannie say to Hannah very low—the bridegroom having separated himself from his bride for a fleeting moment:

"But Hannah, I thought his name was Hiram and that he was tall and dark."

"Oh, Hiram," responded Hannah. "Yah—didn't ye see where he was killed in a train wreck last Tuesday? And I had the dress all made—an' Ben has been pestering me for months—so I just concluded to hook up wid him."

The happy pair passed on. I looked at my wife and she looked at me from under lids that I thought concealed a grin and some sarcasm. Whereupon I arose and departed with some dignity.

As I left I thought I heard her murmur, "A diamond in the rough."

But when I charged her with it very sternly, she denied it—very loudly. (Copyright, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Only One Chance.

"Did you notice that woman who just passed?" inquired he.

"The one," responded she, "with the gray hat, the white feather, the red velvet roses, the mauve jacket, the black skirt, the milk ribs and the sweater spots?"

"Yes."

"Not particularly."

What Concerned Him.

"I admit," said Mrs. Flimgit, "that my gown is rather decollete."

"I don't care," replied her husband; "the more decollete it is the less it here is for me to hook up the back."

Demagogery is the thief of progress.

TAKES ODD JOURNEY

In the Gloom Above Houses of Parliament.

Writer Felt That Dark, Noisy Corridor Was Nearest Approach to Hades He Should See While Alive.

I have just had a curious experience, writes a correspondent. I was invited to take a walk over the upper part of the Houses of Parliament, and having been through once, I must confess that I never want to repeat the experience.

We went in through the door in the corner of the central hall. After a little waiting, our eyes grew used to the gloom, and we ventured to move a few yards forward, only to stumble as we went over the metals of a trolley railway laid upon the floor at our feet. Someone somewhere a long way off switched on a light which sprang up at the end of a corridor that seemed miles and miles away—a little flicker of light at the end of a tunnel of gloom. We could see the metals of the railway going on and on ever so far, and I was not at all surprised when I was told that it went over the entire roof of the Houses of Parliament. Its use is the mere mundane one of carrying coals, which are put in trucks and wheeled to wherever they are needed in the building.

Another light is switched on for a moment to point us to where a little flight of stairs leads over the dome to a dark, gloomy room guarded by a heavy iron door. We go through the iron door and find ourselves in a little chamber, from where, leaning over a balcony, you can look right down on to the floor of the central hall itself.

We emerge again and mount another flight of stairs leading a little way across the dome and here for the first time we notice a peculiar noise. It is like the roar of a huge traffic, so crushed together that it is impossible to distinguish the sound of any wheel or the tap of a horse's foot. This noise is really the noise of all the winds of all the world which rush into this tower through the openings and rush round and round again in their efforts to get free. Even on a mild day the noise is so much that conversation in ordinary tones is difficult. What it must be like on a wild day can easily be imagined.

The whole place is eerie beyond understanding, and I could not help giving a little shudder as I stepped gingerly down the narrow, open stairs.

We went cautiously along the endless corridors, their blackness accentuated rather than relieved by the occasional switches of light which my companion gave me, and over as we walked there came with us the voice of the imprisoned winds, moaning and moaning for their freedom.

"Steady," says my companion, suddenly, and I pull up short, feeling that I had dared too much in taking the lead, while he fumbled along the wall in the darkness to find at length a light. "Click!"—the switch is down, and as the light comes I step hastily back. Before me yawns a chasm, and if I had gone forward another step I should have been over. I look again. It is not so deep as I had thought; in fact, not much more than six feet deep, but the hole is long and broad, and looks like an empty swimming bath.

Here, in this abyss of gloom, the police keep the most important night watch of the House of Commons.

The chief task of the policemen in this home of the sparrows is to guard against the danger of fire.

Though I had climbed to get there, I felt that I was in the nearest approach to hades that I shall ever see alive.

Tombstone Crushes Boy.

South Norwalk, Conn.—Lloyd Cave, a choir boy in St. Paul's church here, was mortally injured recently when, in playing in the yard of the church, he overturned a tombstone. It fell on him, pinning him to the earth.

Cave's companions were unable to remove the stone, and it was only after the Rev. L. B. Howell and other men had arrived that it was lifted.

The boy was unconscious. Dr. W. J. Tracey found that his skull had been fractured and his back injured, perhaps broken. He was removed to Norwalk hospital.

Urge Importance of Missions. Camden, N. J., July 31.—"Importance of Mission Study Classes" was the topic of the principal address today at the sessions of the annual Camden Camp. The Rev. Lawrenson Corbett of Millville, N. J., was the speaker. He pointed out that the standard of work of missionaries in both home and foreign countries could be increased fifty per cent if the missionaries attend regular classes for from six months to one year previous to their taking up their duties. "Missionsary instruction in the Home and Church" was the subject of an address by the Rev. Alfred Smith D. D. The Rev. Alphas G. Kynett of Philadelphia, was another speaker at today's session.

CORNERSTONE OF CHURCH LAID

IMPRESSIVE CEREMONIES AT TENDED SERVICES AT FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH SITE

ADDRESS BY DR. J. W. HILL

Stone Laid by Masonic Order With Their Beautiful Rites at 11 O'Clock

The cornerstone of the First Presbyterian Church now under construction at the corner of Tenth and Blue streets, was laid this morning at 11 o'clock by the Masonic order of this city.

The usual Masonic ceremony was employed on this occasion and in the absence of the pastor, Dr. J. L. McKee, the address was delivered by Dr. J. W. Hill, pastor of the First M. E. Church, South.

Many of the members of the church are out of the city and perhaps it is due to this fact that the attendance was not so large.

The ceremonies were opened with prayer by Rev. Frank, followed by the reading of a lesson from the Holy Scriptures by Dr. Hill. A list of the contents of the copper lined box that was to be sealed and placed in the stone was then read consisting of the Holy Bible, Confession of Faith, history of the church in Wichita Falls, list of officers and members of the church, list of officers and teachers of the Sunday school, list of members of the ladies aid society, a copy of The Times of date May 5th, 1912 and the manuscript of Dr. Hill's address on this occasion.

The Masons then took charge and carried out their part of the program in the usual manner, depositing in the box a list of the membership of the lodge, a 1913 nickel, an apron, wine, corn and oil.

Dr. J. W. Hill then delivered a most able address which is as follows:

Dr. Hill's Address.
My Christian friends and fellow citizens:

The occasion which calls us together or here is fraught with consequences unless by the wisest of us and furnished a beginning, the end of which in its last final results, we sincerely hope may touch and influence conditions and men in the last day of this earth's history.

"Saint Paul declares the church to be the body of Christ, and that with reference to the realities of time and eternity it is, 'the pillar and ground of truth.' It is the conservator and repository of the truth as it is in Jesus; and is the only society on the face of the earth armed with the Great Commission. 'Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature.' All philanthropic and eleemosynary institutions; all public and ethical culture societies; every variety of club and association among men for the special and general benefit of the race owe all that is in them to the church. It is the approbation to the principles of that Gospel which the church of God is specially commissioned to preach, and without which all merely human societies are soulless and unstable, and must eventually perish from the face of the earth. Sunday after Sunday in our public services we declare among other things that 'we believe in the Holy Catholic church.' By this, we do not mean that we believe in the Roman church or the Methodist church or the Presbyterian church, or any of the churches which divide the Christendom; but by Holy Catholic church we mean the entire body of blood washed believers, extending from Abel to the last man who have trusted in Christ as the Son of God for salvation and have received and accepted His will as their own and His spirit as their guide in their voluntary and loving service to the race. It is this body, this invisible church—this kingdom of God (the cometh not with observation)—the whole family in Heaven and in earth.

It is the aggregate and sum of a blessed inheritance of God, whence the spirit and purpose and work the answers the prayer of our Lord, that His disciples might be one, even as He and the Father are one. The members of this Holy Catholic church be long in less or greater numbers to all the denominations into which Christendom is divided. Any while they differ in some things, more or less, in the great essentials, they are one. Perhaps they are divided into too many companies. If so, time and the wisdom of experience will rectify this situation. One thing, however, his brethren should follow Him. The union of all who profess to be Christians is subversive of all the principles and practices to which these Gospels stands committed. In the dark age when organic union was most thoughtless, the spirit of Jesus was least seen and observed by those who pretended to follow Him. The dumb screw and the rack, the stake and the gallows and all the other means employed by pretended orthodoxy against honest and conscientious dissent; the ecclesiastical dungeons; and all the horrors of the Inquisition—these were not products of Christianity, (quite the reverse, indeed) but the outgrowth of a condition in which the strength and power of one great universal mass invited the ambitious and unscrupulous to take their places in the forefront of those who were supposed to be the servants and shepherds of God's people. Instead of humility and self-sacrifice, there was arrogance and pride; and he who had been called out for the simplicity of apostolic Christianity, was declared to be a heretic and was sent to the stake.

"But the blood of the martyrs was the seed of the church—the real church—the company of God's people—the Holy Catholic church—the church which, though divided into different schools and denominations, contains the heaven of life, and without which—the most cultured nation could drop back into savagery. During all the long struggle of these children of God there have been those who opposed them with heresies and had intended to substitute the principles of the Gospel of Christ. The marring mark of any deadly heresy, is its denial of the Divine Sonship of Jesus and His power to save from sin. The Apostle declares that 'He is the only name given under Heaven among men whereby we may be saved.' Mark the language. Not the Virgin Mary, not the Apostles, not priests and preachers—but Christ. As Jesus has received Him, says John, so then shall we receive Him, because He is the Son of God, even those who have been on His name. The visible church has been defined as a congregation of faithful men, in which the pure word of God is preached and the sacraments of Christ duly administered. 'These sacraments are two—baptism and the Lord's Supper—representing the two great events in the history of redemption—the death of our Savior for our sins and the pouring out of the Holy Spirit as the agent and instrument of our spiritual regeneration. Where these essential elements of a true church are found, here, all things else being equal, a real Christian may find a home and duty to employ himself in the work of the Lord. For such a church we are laying the cornerstone on this memorable and solemn occasion. Such a church, though of a different name, I have the honor myself to belong. That either of these churches, or any other single branch of divided Christendom, should pretend to be the exclusive 'body of Christ,' is to my mind supremely folly and smacks of narrowness and a bigotry inconsistent with common sense and Christian charity. I might go farther and say that such pig-headed presumption is also inconsistent with the broader and more cultured mind of the men of the present day. The spread of general intelligence and culture, and the broader and more Catholic exercise of common sense and common honesty, is driving the sectarian elliger farther and farther back into the shades of ignorance and superstition. And I thank God from the bottom of my heart that I have lived to see the day when, without surrendering individual preference and he God given right to worship Him after the dictates of my own conscience, I can grasp the fraternal bond which binds us as members of another communion and feel that he recognizes me as I recognize him, as a fellow prisoner and soldier of Jesus Christ.

"And a concrete illustration of this happy Christian charity greets our eyes today, as the minister of one denomination comes forward to lay the cornerstone for the church home of another, and breathes a blessing upon the congregation, with the fervent hope and earnest expectation that the house which his brethren are erecting to Almighty God may become a real Bethel, where many yet unborn shall see in vision the dream-ladder leaning against the sky and the angels of God descending and ascending upon it. I am sure that I speak the sentiments of every real Christian here today, and of every well wisher of the world, when I say that we are in the spirit of prophecy, I bespeak for these brethren of the First Presbyterian Church of Wichita Falls a prosperous, continuous and fruitful history in their effort to lift up the altar and to guide the feet of the wayward into the paths of everlasting peace. May the cherubim above the mercy seat stretch out their wings forever and may the bright shekinah be burning symbol of the ever-living God remain within this tabernacle. May the children's children of these the surround me here in the witness of the truth of this day's prophecy. And that earnest and sincere spirit of brotherly love and Catholic accord we ever remain between these two and all other branches of the Holy Catholic church."

WOMEN SUFFRAGISTS INVADE THE CAPITAL

Object of today's "request" was far more serious. The national leaders of the movement now count their "strength in Congress" as nearly double that of a year ago. There are 18 Senators from suffrage states, two from Illinois which has partial suffrage and a dozen from non-suffrage states who are favorable to their cause. Among the latter are Senators Hollis and Gillinger of New Hampshire; La Follette of Wisconsin; Clapp of Minnesota; Owen of Oklahoma and even the ultra-conservative Penrose of Pennsylvania. In the House, the friends of woman suffrage are legion. Several members of the cabinet are known to favor woman suffrage and a majority of the "cabinet ladies" have openly expressed favor of the cause.

The banquet at which the pilgrims were welcomed was to have been held at the exclusive Chevy Chase Club but the club managers vetoed the plan and it was held instead at the Brighton. The dinner was the most widely patronized politico-social affair ever held here, scores of Congressmen and their wives being among those present.

Wichita Falls, Texas, July 31, 1913

Even if you are not able to meet your debts, that's no reason to be discouraged. Just look at "grand old Texas." That should bring comfort.

Congressman Beall of the Dallas district, says that he will not again be a candidate for his present job, but might be induced to consider a Democratic nomination for governor. There are lots of others in the same fix.

The Austin correspondent of the Fort Worth Record states that it is certain that Governor O. B. Colquitt will be a candidate for the United States senate to succeed Senator Culberson, who is in bad health, and, according to the same authority, may resign before his term expires. If Colquitt offers for senator there is surely to be a lively contest for the place, though it is not known yet who else believes that in case Mr. Culberson's seat is vacated, ex-Governor T. M. Campbell is the strong man in Texas that could possibly be induced to make the race against Governor Colquitt. Campbell has been cursed from center to circumference of the state by a certain political faction, but he made good as governor and accomplished practically everything that he attempted while in the executive chair, while Governor Colquitt has fallen down on practically every proposition that he has attempted to put through. Campbell and Colquitt are on opposite sides of practically every issue that is before the people of the state, and should both offer for the United States senate next year there will be a battle royal, and the small fry with senatorial aspirations had as well stay out of the game. The prospect of such a contest should swell the poll tax payments considerably and voters will get the worth of their money in the entertainment provided.—Wills Point Chronicle.

As the Times understands it, Gov. Colquitt's senatorial aspirations were based upon the rumor that the health of the senior senator was bad. It has since been learned that Culberson's health is good, and he has no intention of resigning. That put an end to the Colquitt senatorial boom. It is dead, and there's no use to talk about a successor for Culberson until Culberson indicates that he does not want the job.

PATHS WEEKLY LYDIA MARGARET TONIGHT

Adam E. Patterson, a Muskogee negro, who voted and worked for the success of the Democratic National ticket, has been appointed Register of the Treasury, and if his nomination is confirmed his signature instead of that of another negro who has held the office under Republican administrations will adorn all currency issued by the National government. Senator Vandaman of Mississippi is fighting hard the confirmation of this appointment, and in this he is joined by other Southern Senators who do not believe that this is a proper office for a negro to fill. "Alfalfa" Bill Murray, congressman-at-large from Oklahoma, when interviewed on the subject, had the following to say: "Well, the nigger landed. "Did you endorse him?" asked a reporter. "Not on your life," said the Sage of Tishomingo. "It's a custom to give the place to a negro but right now is a good time to break that precedent," he continued. Pulling a dollar bill, bearing the signature of the present negro register of the treasury, from his pocket, Murray said, "It costs $8,000 a year to put that nigger's name on the currency. There is no law for it and I intend to offer a resolution in congress to stop it."

Woman's Efforts Brought About Settlement of Railway Strike

Mrs. J. BORDEN HARRIMAN

(New York Herald)
Some of the other actors in the affair appear either ignorant or doubtful of the part played by Mrs. J. Borden Harriman in the negotiations by which the Newlands Mediation and Arbitration Bill was passed by Congress and an immediate strike of conductors and trainmen of Eastern railroads averted. This was to be expected. It is always so. There are half a dozen versions of President Roosevelt's settlement of the anthracite coal strike of 1902. As at a fire half a dozen persons claim to have turned in the first alarm, half a dozen men will tell you that they induced Mr. Roosevelt to intervene.
That President Wilson's action in bringing together at the White House the representatives of the railroads and the dissatisfied brotherhoods as well as the representatives of the National Civic Federation, a friend of both, averted the strike there is no doubt. To Mrs. Harriman do those in authority accord the credit for awakening the president to the full seriousness of the situation. Her alarm and her suggestions put in motion the administration's powerful influence. When the problem was focused in the White House public opinion from one end of the country to the other cried:
"The public's right should be considered. There must be no strike."
No desire exists in Washington to detract from the potency of the efforts of Seth Low, to whom both trainmen and railroad presidents conceded the duty of stating to the president their view of the legislation that should be enacted.
Without the spirit of mutual conference which men like Mr. Low, Ralph M. Easley, also of the Civic Federation; A. B. Garretson of the trainmen and the others displayed, no law would have been enacted, hostilities would have increased and a strike would have halted Eastern railroad traffic, disorganized industry and thrown one hundred thousand men out of employment.

Made a Demand for Millions.
These dangers were apparent when the conductors and trainmen, observing the recent success of the engineers' demand for more wages, demanded increases amounting to 17 million dollars a year. The railroads replied that their present revenues would not stand the added burden unless they were permitted to increase rates. Negotiations rapidly drifted toward an impasse. Mediation and arbitration was suggested under the Erdman act. It provided that in railroad disputes the chief judge of the commerce court and the commissioner of labor statistics should act as a board of mediation. Many railway strikes had been averted by Judge Knapp of the commerce court and C. P. Neill, commissioner of labor, for many years under the department of commerce and labor and recently commissioner of labor statistics under the newly created department of labor. But Mr. Neill recently resigned and his place had not been filled. Both the railroads and the conductors and trainmen felt that the machinery of the Erdman act, while sufficient for a dispute on a single line, was inadequate for a great dispute between all the trainmen and railroads in the vast Eastern territory now affected.
Moreover, the chief judge of the commerce court was engaged in his bench duties. The commissioner of labor statistics, formerly a detached and independent official, had now been drawn into the department of labor, which was created at the behest of the labor unions and headed by one of their own number.
The National Civic Federation, appreciative of the difficulties of both parties to this dispute, prepared and Senator Newlands of Nevada, chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce committee, introduced a bill providing for the appointment by the president of a commissioner of mediation and an assistant. They were independent of any department, and the two other persons whom the president may designate from within the service were to constitute a board of mediation. Further to assist peaceful adjustment of labor disputes, provision was made for the creation of boards of arbitration. This measure readily passed the Senate. In much the same form it was introduced in the House by Representative Henry Clayton of Alabama, chairman of the judiciary committee.

At this juncture the secretary of labor intervened. He threw his influence behind an amendment requiring that the commissioner of labor statistics of his department should be a member of the board of mediation instead of leaving the selection freely to the president. Sympathy for organized labor is strong in the House where Mr. Wilson served before entering the cabinet. So long as he recommended this amendment there was little chance of agreement to the Newlands bill as passed by the Senate.
Mrs. Harriman Went to Work.
And without a new mediation and arbitration bill, insuring absolute fairness and comprehensive consideration of all issues, little hope existed for peaceful adjustment of the fight.
This was the situation on the fourth of July when Mrs. Harriman intervened. Others may equally have appreciated the crisis, but the president and his secretary, J. P. Tumulty were not among them. Secretary Wilson had made no call on the president for intervention. The president was speeding from Gettysburg to Cornish, N. H., and Mr. Tumulty was resting in a newly leased cottage at Avon.
Mrs. Harriman called him on the telephone as he was watching skyrockets and roman candles, how she came to Avon the next day and apprised him of the deadlock over the Newlands bill and the hopelessness of averting the strike unless it was broken and how Mr. Tumulty interested the president in the suggestion of a conference of all parties in interest at the White House has been told.
As a member of the American Civic Federation Mrs. Harriman was in close touch with both employer and employee and she had long possessed the confidence of the labor leaders to an unusual degree. Her eminent social position gave her close touch with the railroads. Active participation in the presidential campaign of 1912 as head of the Woodrow Wilson Women's League sharpened her appreciation of the power of public opinion.
No man was ever more closely in touch with the various phases of a difficult situation. She appraised its full value the feeling of the public that it had some rights in this situation. Newspapers, which on the coast were pointedly observing that neither railroads nor their workers had the right to tie up traffic and inflict injury on public comfort, new industry and national prosperity. The problem was to bring this principle fully into play. It would be lost in the timidity of a congressional debate involving organized labor. President Roosevelt's intervention in the anthracite strike of 1902 showed how quickly public opinion would rally behind a president speaking to the vast interests of the Nation not directly involved, but vitally affected by strikes affecting coal mines or railroads.
How specifically Mrs. Harriman set forth these considerations to Mr. Tumulty probably will never be known, but her realization of them is apparent from her suggestion to the president, whom she well knew and who only recently had made her a member of the United States commission on industrial relations. Nor was her warning and recommendation conveyed in a merely general way. She brought with her to Avon a page type written statement, "written like a lawyer," according to one who saw it. Every essential detail of the problem was there set down. In addition Mrs. Harriman had positive confidential information that the conductors and trainmen meant business. Although they had not yet voted, she knew that the vote would favor a strike if the railroads did not favorably respond to the demands for a wage increase.

The story of how Mr. Tumulty conferred with Secretary Wilson by telephone and obtained his indorsement of the White House conference idea, the president's approval of it and Secretary Wilson's arrangement of the details need not be reviewed here.
A Hitch in the Plans.
But after the invitations for the conference had been extended the representatives of the trainmen at New York suddenly declared they would not go to Washington. It would be no use, they said, to talk over even with the president the proposed new mediation and arbitration legislation. The insistence of the secretary of labor on amendments to the Newlands act, they said, satisfied neither the railroads nor the trainmen.
Whether Mrs. Harriman had anything to do with this surprising declaration can only be conjectured, but it served to place Secretary Wilson in the attitude of preventing an agreement and the enactment of a law under which neither side easily could refuse to arbitrate. It should be remembered that Mrs. Harriman's objective was to obtain the enactment of a new mediation and arbitration act. Two days before the conference was held it became evident that Secretary Wilson would not insist upon the amendments. The representatives of the conductors and trainmen did come to the White House conference and Secretary Wilson did withdraw his proposals in deference to the unanimity of opinion in the part of the president, the railroad presidents, the conductors, trainmen and the Civic Federation officials.
From the night of the fourth of July until the White House conference Mrs. Harriman kept in close touch with the administration, frequently calling Mr. Tumulty on the telephone, sending him information and maintaining close touch with all sides of the controversy. Yet she did not attend the conference herself, did not figure in the newspapers. Her work was entirely behind the scenes. The more effective for that reason. It was the White House that disclosed her as a potent influence in the adjustment of the crisis. This was done evidently as a generous recognition of the woman's part. The men already had been revealed in their various roles. It came, too, as a vindication of the president's appointment of Mrs. Harriman to the commission on industrial relations.

Old Time Fair For New York City.
New York, July 31.—The glad cry of the trolley man and all the other attractions of the time honored country fair will be heard and seen and soon at the old Empire City race track grounds tomorrow. The Great New York Fair will continue through the month of August. It is expected to be one of the greatest agricultural and live stock exhibitions ever held on the Atlantic seaboard. It is claimed by the managers that here will be brought together the largest number of exhibitors of animals and products in an event of like nature in America. Many thousands of farmers have entered live stock and products of the farm. Practically every state on the Atlantic coast will be represented.
Brownsville—According to data compiled by the St. Louis, Brownsville and Mexico Railway Company 2,538 cars of truck have been shipped from the Gulf coast country so far this year. Compared with 1912 this is an increase of 190 cars. The shipping season is practically closed.

NEW YORK MEN SUPPORTED BY THEIR WIVES

New York—Fifty thousand women in Greater New York are today supporting husbands or other male relatives, says Mrs. Alma Webster Powell, B. A., M. A., LL. D.
Rev. Howard Mellish declares that unless economic conditions are changed the number will be doubled within the next five years.
More than one-half will be independent means who have married men with the expectation of supporting them, as is the assertion made by the New York Sunday World.
Such is Mrs. Powell's statement, based upon her own personal knowledge and observations of the present trend of the times.
It is an acknowledged fact among all statisticians that one-fifth of the population of the city consists of women wage earners.
From the Women's Trades Union comes the statement that of the 5,000

Some by Singing.
100 self-supporting women in the entire country New York city furnishes 500,000—an increase of nearly 200,000 since the publication of the 1900 census.
More than 100,000 of these self-supporting women are married.
By eliminating the number of those who are widowed and divorced, in both of which cases the percentage of increase has not been proportionately large, there still remains the very conservative total of 50,000 women in the fields of labor and business whose hard earnings are expended upon 50,000 men.
Statistics Not Available.
Of the estimated other 50,000 women of independent means who successfully maintain husbands in a manner suited to their station in life, detailed statistics cannot be secured.
Rev. Dr. Anna Shaw cites as the principal reason for the lack of such statistics governmental discrimination in favor of the men at the time the recent census was taken.
So far as is known, the subject of husband-supporting wives has never before been brought fully to the attention of the public.
The men will not admit it. The women do not want to admit it.
Both have pronounced and separate reasons for not wishing to appear conspicuous.
The figures quoted are the result of a careful and systematic canvass of agencies, organizations and individuals whose work would naturally touch upon the subject. They represent logical deductions from the compiled statements of prominent social, philanthropic, scholastic and public figures.
Capital seldom enters where home folks fear to tread.

WHAT IS WESTRUMITE?

Westrumite is a Modern Form of Street Pavement

It is as durable as wood blocks, noiseless as a rubber heel, and its low cost brings it within reach of all. CITY CIVIL ENGINEER
Peter J. Lyons, City Civil Engineer
Hammond, Indiana, March 21, 1913.

Mr. H. J. Mitchell, Esq.,
Houston, Texas

Dear Sir:—
Your letter relative to "Westrumite" pavements in the City of Hammond, Indiana, addressed to Mayor Smalley, has been handed to the writer to make ready to same. The first "Westrumite" used here, Bauer Street, was constructed in the year 1908; there were six streets constructed in the year 1909. All of the above streets were constructed on a rolled stone base and last year there were twelve streets of this form of wearing surface constructed, and four others still under construction, on a concrete base. All of the above streets are now in fine condition; not one cent of repairs has been made on any of them. They are dustless, noiseless and impervious to street liquids, and they are very smooth in appearance. The material is laid out, so that if any repairs become necessary because of the wear, water of rain pipes, the same can be made by an ordinary street laborer at a nominal cost, no expensive intricate machinery being necessary. All street work in our city is done by the invitation of the property owners, and under our laws four different forms of wearing surface pavement must be advertised for, and after bids have been received for same, the majority of the resident property owners select the form of wearing surface for their street.

The fact that there are so many solutions made of this form of pavement by the resident property owners, perhaps, is the strongest argument that can be made.

Perhaps if you could see your way clear to come up this way and see the streets, you could gain the best opinion of them.

Very respectfully,
(Signed) PETER J. LYONS,
City Civil Engineer.

CITY OF BRYAN
Executive Office
Bryan, Texas, July 28th, 1913.

W. H. Kirkland, Esq.,
Houston, Texas.

Dear Sir:—
Having been requested by The Southern Westrumite Company to write you regarding my investigation of Westrumite Pavement, I take pleasure in writing you result of my investigation, which I assure you, was very thorough.

In company with me on this trip of investigation to Hammond, Ind., Whiting, Ind., East Chicago and Indiana Harbor, were four members of our City Council, Messrs. Daily, Haaswell, Vick and Loy, our City Engineer, Mr. A. N. Adams and Consulting Engineer, Prof. J. C. Nagle of the State A. & M. College. The arguments put up by representatives of The Southern Westrumite Company greatly interested us and we felt that if the pavement was really what it was represented to be that we wanted it in our city in preference to anything else, while the Council and myself were sitting and anxious to have a definite, well-documented opinion in matters of this kind should not be entirely dependent upon, which caused us to employ Mr. Nagle as a consulting engineer.

Upon our return and promptly upon hearing Prof. Nagle's written report, the council by unanimous vote authorized our office, work to The Westrumite Company.

We saw upon this trip Westrumite streets under construction and at all ages up to six years. A street in Hammond six years old showed to be in better condition than any other pavement of equal age that we saw anywhere.

Mr. Peter Lyons, the City Engineer of Hammond, personally informed us that no repairs what ever had been made on same. I could state much more about The Westrumite Pavement we saw and other pavements examined in the cities named, also in Chicago and St. Louis, but can best express my opinion by stating that I candidly believe that The Westrumite process comes nearer than any other known of solving the street paving problem for all classes of traffic.

Yours truly,
(Signed) W. W. HARRIS,
Mayor.

Silos Will Revolutionize The Livestock Industry In Texas

By W. D. Hornaday in Houston Chronicle.

Imagine a jar or can containing 750 tons of delicious fruit or vegetables. It would be a curiosity well worth seeing. There are many cans of this size scattered all over the country, but it happens that instead of them being filled with food for human beings they are used as receptacles for green forage stuff for live stock. They afford cattle a winter pasturage.

One of the most remarkable features of the agricultural development which is now going on in the West and Southwest is the attention that is being given to the erection of silos. This method of preserving green feed stuff promises to revolutionize conditions upon the farms and in the ranch territory of an enormous scope of country. Not only are silos being built upon the smaller stock farms, but they are being put to valuable use upon many of the larger ranches.

It is now not unusual to find batteries of five to 20 silos each, with a capacity of 100 to 750 tons, upon a ranch. The adoption of this plan of storing forage crops, such as corn, kafir corn, milo maize, cowpeas, alfalfa and other products promises to have a wonderful effect upon the live stock industry within the next few years.

Great Demand in Texas

So great has become the demand for silos in Texas that four large plants for manufacturing the material that enters into their construction have been established in that state in the last few months, and similar factories are being put up all through the West and Southwest. In regions far removed from what was considered the proved agricultural territory a few years ago silos are being built and crops of kafir corn and milo maize raised for the purpose of being converted into silage and used to feed the live stock during the winter season.

The merits of silage as a food product have become so well recognized that upon one ranch in South Texas embracing 300,000 acres of land there are now located 42 of these modern conservators of feedstuff. This simply illustrates the extent of the new movement.

and milo maize are said to be more suited for silage than any other crop, for the reason that they are drought resisting.

The cost of producing silage varies, some farmers estimating it at about 50 cents a ton for cutting and preserving. This is increased when the cost of cultivation, revenue on the land and other items of expense are considered, making an approximate total of $1.75 per ton.

In view of the fact that corn is used more than any other product for making silage a description of the method which is followed in handling this crop may be of general interest. The same method to a large degree applies to other forage products. The entire corn stalk, including the ears, is run through a power cutter and cut into one-half-inch lengths. These cutters usually have a capacity of ten to fifteen tons per hour. Several teams are required to haul the corn from the field.

Upon many farms corn binders are used to read the stalks. Most silos range in height from 20 to 60 feet. The one-half inch length of the stalks, including the leaves and ears, are carried into the silos through the top by means of a blower and funnel running from the cutter. In a silo 30 feet high the silage settles about eight feet after standing two or three days. It is often then refilled to its full capacity.

Men "Pack" Green Silage

In order to prevent the air from getting in through any possible holes in the falls special care is taken to pack the green stuff closely around the sides. Usually one or two men work in the silo constantly while it is being filled, their duty being to distribute and pack the silage. Water is usually run into the blower after the last few tons are placed in the silo, and this has the effect of forming an air-tight layer on top, thus preventing the product from spoiling. Where the tops of the silos are open tops are often sown upon the top layer of the silage and it soon spreads and forms an air-tight cage.

It is well known that silage makes high quality beef. The fact is being impressed upon the stock farmers all over the country. It is claimed that a saving of $1.75 to $2.25 per 100 pounds on the cost of producing beef can be had by using silage. During the past season silage fed steers topped the Chicago, Kansas City, South Omaha and New York markets. Several incidents of this kind are noted.

Prof. H. M. Cottrell, for many years a well known agricultural scientist at Manhattan, Kan., says that the waisting of corn stalks and leaves amounts to many millions of dollars annually, which might all be saved by converting the forage into silage.

Some of the special points which recommend the adoption of the silo method of preserving green forage are as follows:

It encourages stock farming; it enables the farmer to grow such crops as he is certain will always give a yield; it usually requires less labor to cultivate crops that are suited for silos; silo crops are taken from the land early in the summer and often-times a second crop may be placed on the same land, and where this is not done the land is ready for early fall plowing.

All silos are built round. Various kinds of material, however, are used in their construction—stone, brick, steel reinforced concrete, concrete blocks, hollow tile and wooden staves. The average cost of stave silos is said to be between $1 and $2 per ton capacity, while the average cost of concrete, brick or stone runs from $2 to $3.50 per ton capacity. The cost, however, depends, to some extent, upon the locality or section of the country.

Must Be Fed Every Day

It is necessary to feed at least two inches of silage per day to prevent the top from spoiling when exposed to the air. This requirement should be taken into consideration in erecting the silo so that its height may correspond to the quantity of feed which is to be used. A full grown cow or steer is fed about 50 pounds per day. Silage weighs about 40 pounds per cubic foot.

It is claimed that the underground type of silo is well suited for the semi-arid parts of the country, particularly Western Oklahoma, Western Texas, Eastern Colorado, New Mexico and Arizona. It can be constructed at a cost of about $1 per ton capacity. It is especially adapted to the high wind and cyclone regions, as it can not be blown down.

It also possesses the advantage of not requiring expensive machinery for filling it. Several of these subterranean silos have been dug during the last few years and they are said to be proving very satisfactory. The hole about 16 feet in diameter and 32 feet deep and will hold 100 tons of

New York, July 31.—They are beginning to agitate in the East, which means that after the agitation has worn off and they get down to the bite, there may be some reform in the ancient and honorable sport of rowing. There is a movement under the surface to cut down the distance rowed by young hopefuls in the big yearly eight oared races run off annually in these parts. There have been such movements started times out of number, but this year it really looks like something would be really done. This applies not only to the races laboring through at Poughkeepsie but the annual Yale-Harvard race. Statistics have established that, taken through and through, youngsters who undergo the terrific strain incident to a four mile race do not live as long as the athlete who is not subjected to such a grind, or the man who doesn't mix in athletics at all.

The idea is therefore to conserve a few years of our young men's lives for work that produces something more useful than hollow overtaxed hearts. If the movement is successful, the big races will be cut to three and possibly two miles before many more are rowed. It's that "fast mile" of silage, which is sufficient to feed from 25 to 30 head of cattle for six months. The wall of the hole is cemented with a thickness of one-half to three-fourths inch.

NO PUZZLE FOR HER

By ALLIE YOUNGER.

The sharp-nosed man looked dubiously at the retreating figure of the stenographer.

"I'm in a quandary what to do with that girl," he said. "I don't know whether to fire her or raise her salary. I don't know what to make of her. She is the quintessence of either innocence or deceit, I can't figure out which. Any way, she's got me into a pretty pickle."

"About two months ago some misguided member of a certain benevolent society sent me two tickets for a charity ball. I was surprised to get those tickets, for I supposed everybody who knew me knew my sentiments in regard to charity.

"I don't believe in it. I don't believe in giving things away. I have to work for every cent I have and I expect other people to do the same thing. To my mind these folks that dance for charity and sing for charity and cut all sorts of diodes for benevolent purposes are only degrading the masses they are supposed to benefit. I had expressed this opinion so often that it was amazed that anybody should ask me to countenance a benevolent scheme by buying tickets for a ball. Naturally, I hastened to send the tickets back. I put them into an envelope and handed them to the stenographer.

"Here, Miss Drew," I said, "you know what to do with these."

"Yes, sir," she said. "Thank you."

"It struck me then that there was no occasion for her to thank me for requesting her to perform her regular routine of duties, but I didn't give the matter a second thought until three weeks later, when a representative of the benevolent society called to collect $10 for the ball tickets.

"But I didn't use the tickets," I said. "I don't believe in charity."

"I beg your pardon," he said. "They were used. Here are the numbers sent you and here are the tickets bearing the same number which were taken in at the door. If you didn't want them you ought to have returned them to us at once, as requested in our communication to you."

"But I did return them," I argued. Then I called in the stenographer.

"Miss Drew," I said, "didn't I give you two ball tickets some time ago to be returned to the benevolent society?

"Why, no," she said, "you didn't say anything about returning them. You simply said I knew what to do with them."

"And what did you do with them?" I asked.

"I went to the ball," she said. "I thought that was what you meant."

"I was furious, but I saw the benevolent society had the drop on me, and I paid the $10. The worst of it is the girl seemed so sweet and innocent and sorry that I haven't had the courage either to discharge her or deduct the money from her salary. I can't make up my mind to this day whether she really thought I meant to make her a present or whether she notified the society to send me the tickets and then deliberately worked me for a good time. But, whatever her motive, there is one charity organization in town that is now growing fat off $10 of my hard-earned money."

Thought He Liked Flattery.

One of the witty occupants of the judicial bench in England is Judge Rentoul, the North-country Irishman, who presides at the famous court, known as Old Bailey. The judge has just been telling another good story against himself. Once he went on a political mission to Wales, to tell the voters what to do. He spoke first, and in English. All the subsequent speakers, however, used Welsh as the medium of their thoughts. As a matter of policy he applauded strongly whenever there was a clap among the audience, although he could not understand a single word that was said. "I learned afterwards," said Judge Rentoul, "that every time I applauded a speaker it was when he had paid a strong personal compliment, either to myself or to my speech."

Speaking Literally.

A famous sculptor was seated at a dinner next to a fair but frivolous young lady, and it was soon evident that he was not very favorably impressed by her idle chatter.

"What kind of a figure do you most admire in a woman?" she inquired, with the air of one angling for a compliment.

"Almost any kind, as long as she is not a figure of speech," he replied briefly.—Judge.

Not Crazy.

Friend—"Well, Aunt Alice, how is your old man getting along?" Aunt Alice (whose husband is an inmate of the Soldiers' Home)—"Polly, child, polly. The only way they can keep him in the hospital is by putting a Mother Hubbard on him. He just wants to wander an' wander aroun'."

Friend—"Why, he is not crazy, is he, Aunt Alice?" Aunt Alice—"No, child, he is not crazy; he's just done gone an' lost his min'."—Judge.

Not a Mistake.

"That judge made a mistake when he married us."

"That so?"

"Yes, he ended the ceremony with: 'And may God have mercy on your soul.'"

"He knew what he was about, all right. He's married himself!"

Of the many causes that produce headache, eyestrain is, perhaps, the most common and the most important. Headaches from eyestrain are extremely persistent, and are productive of many derangements of the general system. Any disturbance of the relation between the anatomical structure of the muscles of the eyes and its curved, transparent surfaces would cause the act of seeing to be attended by great strain, either in the organ of vision or at the center of the nerve supply. Nature does her best to remedy this strain by exerting an additional amount of muscular effort, which results in fullness of the blood vessels of the head. This causes the brain to become irritated and dull, and headache is the natural consequence. No amount of drugging will alleviate this condition, since the cause resides in the visual organs, and unless the disturbance is corrected by properly fitted glasses the headache will continue. Let us remove that eyestrain.

MILLIE AND LILLIE.
 A pair of twin song birds doing a kick and scream act with the Frizky Chicken Dramatic Company which was the most brilliant aggregation of murderers of the histrionic art on the tall grass circuit once breezed into a pill emporium to start something in the perfume department. The entire force of pill mixers dropped everything surrounded these wuspy waisted peroxide confections and showed them more attention than is usually accorded a new colored minister while the natives stood around and walked on each others' heels begging for a chance to put a hot box on the cash register but failed to qualify for attention until the Dolly Grays were gone.

Now we do business just like this only DIFFERENT. Our programme is to treat everybody right and that means to treat everybody alike. There are no amateurs in our store. We have gazed across the plate glass at passing humanity until we can tell whether you want to buy a dime worth of safety pins or four dollars worth of glad smelling toy water with blinders on. We give you what you ask for. We know you can tell perfume from soap and that you know what you want.

no one in the Robinson & Styron office and no car standing in front of the place. He said:

"My brother and I and his son, with Ford Adams, a traveling salesman, left Winnetka Heights exactly at 8 o'clock in an automobile and came directly to the office. I remember the exact time we left the corner of Winomere and Adele streets as 8 o'clock, because Adams asked the time and remarked that he might miss a car if we didn't hurry. We came directly to the office and the trip could not have taken more than ten minutes. "I don't remember seeing a car in front of the office across the street. I went to my desk and sat down and began reading my mail. I frequently looked out the front door, as is my custom. I guess I glanced across the street a hundred times while I was sitting there. I noticed that the door to the office was closed when I came in. It couldn't have been later than 8:15 when I got to the office and it might have been five minutes earlier than that."

John A. Hiett, also of the same firm, said that he left the office just ahead of C. S. Newton and that it could not then have been earlier than 8:30 o'clock.

"As I went out I saw the girl standing in the door of her office," he said.

Mrs. J. R. Brown, mother of the murdered girl, who was prostrate with grief for hours after receiving information of her daughter's terrible death, was yesterday very much improved and able to discuss the crime in a collected manner. Both she and the father, Patrolman Brown, expressed the wish that if the murderer of their child was found there be no attempt to mob violence by citizens who sympathize with them.

Parents Opposed to Mob.
 "If I could catch the man who killed my daughter there wouldn't be any need for a mob," the father said. "Hanging is too good for him and the penitentiary won't do. But I don't want any attempt made to mob him if he is caught. My wife shares this wish. She is of a Christian disposition and realizes that while our child is gone, there is no need for a mob to take justice into its hands. There are other ways that are better."

LOVE—LIFE—HOME
 "Dust thou art, and unto dust returneth Was not spoken of the soul."
 How strong and faithfully does every good and noble life bear out the above sentiment from the Poet's Pen. Man and woman pass through this life battling with conditions and yielding to environments as nothing else does. Each have their circle of friends and loved ones. Each their joys and their sorrows; each their creeds and desires while playing an important part in our actions comes greed, avarice, misfortune and penury.
 What emotions fill the human breast as varied as life itself. So thrilling that no hand however skilled can picture it; so tragic that no human tongue however voluble can express the heart rending emotions that wring bitter tears from human eyes. So full of hope that we place angel wings on human form and halos of light around their mortal head.
 All thanks to Pandora! Hope points above where wailing loved ones see the way to a brighter and better life beyond.
 One MEMORIAL tell the full story of LOVE, LIFE, HOME, COMPLETELY and EVERLASTINGLY.
