INVALIDITY OF IMPEACHMENT ACT MAY SAVE GOVERNOR

SULZER REFUSES TO GIVE UP SEAT

REMAINS IN EXECUTIVE CHAMBER—MRS. SULZER'S ILLNESS MAY CAUSE DELAY

DIDN'T REALIZE GRAVITY

Governor's Wife More Seriously Trying to Aid Family Finances—When she Speculated Last Year

By Associated Press. Albany, N. Y., Aug. 14.—Two claimants for the office of governor sat in the capitol today, each attempting to conduct the State's affairs from his own chambers. Governor Sulzer sat in the executive chamber on the second floor of the building. He is going to sit there every day, according to his friends, disregarding the impeachment proceedings, which he regards as unconstitutional.

The army of State employees is demoralized. Department heads are at a loss to know whose instructions to follow. Mrs. Sulzer is very ill with a temperature of 102, and her illness is so serious as to be regarded as critical, according to an announcement made today by the governor's secretary. Two additional specialists were summoned from New York today to attend her.

In the opinion of some of the governor's friends the court of impeachment will never sit in judgment on his case, and Mrs. Sulzer will be saved the ordeal of examination at the hands of counsel for political interests opposed to her husband.

Mrs. Sulzer, far from acting with intent to do wrong, was entirely unconscious of the gravity of her offense when she bought stocks with a part of her husband's campaign contributions, said a close friend of the Sulzer family today. This friend added:

"On the contrary, she thought she was doing a sensible thing. Her husband was involved in debt when he began his campaign for the governorship. He had saved nothing during the years he was a representative at Washington. He is not a business man, and his wife thought she was doing well for him by putting away something for a rainy day, even without his knowledge."

The governor's friends, who believe the court of impeachment will never convene to try his case, base their opinion on the plan of his counsel to have the court review the constitutionality of the impeachment proceedings before September 18. They say this review probably will be started by mandamus proceedings.

The impeachment articles against Governor Sulzer, as passed by the State assembly, make a document of over 4,000 words.

They charge the governor with violating penal laws of the State, not only in connection with the filing of an improper and incorrect account of his campaign expenses and diverting campaign contributions to the purchase of stocks, but also in connection with his alleged effort to prevent witnesses from testifying before the Frawley committee. He is charged with attempting to manipulate the stock market by attacks on the exchange. The articles are in substance as follows:

1. That Gov. Sulzer, in filing his statement of campaign expenses, set forth that his total receipts were $5,469 and his expenditures $7,724; that this statement "was false and was intended by him to be false and an invasion and violation of the statute of the State"; that his list of receipts to include eleven specific contributions ranging in amount from $100 to $2,500; that the governor's false statement made "wrongfully, willfully and corruptly" caused "great scandal and reproach of the governor of the State of New York."

2. That Gov. Sulzer attached to his statement of campaign expenses an affidavit declaring that the statement was in all respects a "full and detailed statement of all money received or contributed or expended by him directly or indirectly." That this affidavit, duly sworn to by the governor, was intended to "defraud" and "supplant" the truth, and that he was "guilty of willful and corrupt perjury."

3. That Gov. Sulzer, "unmindful of the duties of his office, was guilty of mal and corrupt conduct in his office as governor and was guilty of bribing witnesses." The specific charge is that while the Frawley committee was investigating the governor's expense account, he "fraudulently induced" three witnesses (his campaign manager, a personal friend, and a stock broker) "to withhold their testimony from said committee" and that in so doing he acted corruptly and he was guilty of a felony.

4. That the governor was guilty of "supplanting evidence" in violation of the State penal law. The specific charge is that while the Frawley com-

TWO LYNCHED IN OKLAHOMA TODAY

WATERMELONS THE CAUSE

MARTIN H. GLYNN

By Associated Press. Ardmore, Okla., Aug. 14.—Watermelons were the indirect cause of two lynchings at Pauls Valley, Oklahoma, last night. According to reports received here today, Sanders Franklin and Henry Ralston, negroes, were taken from officers who were on their way from Ardmore to Pauls Valley where they were to be tried for killing two white men. The negroes were hanged to nearby trees. They had been in jail here for safekeeping. Franklin shot a white man to death in a dispute over the price of a watermelon, and Ralston shot and killed a white boy whom he found in his watermelon patch.

By Associated Press. Fort Smith, Ark., Aug. 14.—Whether or not Governor Hayes grants or has granted a respite to Omer Davis, aged 18, sentenced to hang at Fayetteville for the murder of Nellie Moneyhun, daughter of a minister, who was shot to death at her home February 2, last, Davis will not hang today, the date set for his execution.

Sheriff Cudde of Washington county said he was advised by telephone last Monday by a person who represented himself as the governor's secretary, that Governor Hayes had granted a respite and he did not build a scaffold. Governor Hayes says he granted no respite but is considering applications for one today.

By Associated Press. Dallas, Texas, Aug. 14.—Miss Bortha Neece, aged twenty-four, is dead and Robert L. Adams, aged forty-three is not expected to live, having a bullet through his spine, as the result of a shooting at Adams' farm home ten miles east of here last night. Mrs. Neece, Adams' injured man's wife, lies prostrated at her home after having been released on $1000 bail today.

Mrs. Adams made a statement that the Neece girl has been visiting at the house for two weeks. She said she found her husband and the Neece girl together and after warning them she was going to shoot, opened fire. Only two shots were fired, the first taking effect in Adams' back, the second entering the girl's abdomen.

Her death was instantaneous. No one else was at the house at the time except Mrs. Adams' two children who were asleep.

The best maneuvers in the competitive drilling for the various costly prizes was included in the morning and afternoon program at the great temporary stadium. Specially elected judges will present the coveted prizes late this afternoon and tonight the Conclave Ball will be held at the auditorium. It is expected that at least 1,000 couples will participate in the dancing and that between 10,000 and 15,000 will be in the galleries.

The final sessions of the Grand Encampment were held this afternoon at El Jebel temple. Thousands of the visiting Templars will leave Denver after the ball tonight. Many will go directly to their homes, but the majority will wait over a tour of sight-seeing before returning homeward. Nearly 2,000 of the visitors and delegates came to Denver in automobiles. Most of these left this afternoon.

The management fired a waitress and the others struck because one of the union rules for which the restaurant stood, had been violated. The management wished to replace the waitress, but the waitress' union objected and trouble began. The police at last had to close the shop to stop a threatened riot.

WILSON OPPOSES SENATE RECESS

1200 SOLDIERS KILLED IN FIGHTING AT CANTON

Government Troops Join Rebels in Pillaging of City and Much Looting Results

By Associated Press. Canton, Aug. 14.—Twelve hundred were killed in the fighting in Canton yesterday. Pillage is in progress everywhere. Half of the government troops have joined the rebels, and together they have looted the principal goldsmiths and silversmiths' stores.

Local officials and army officers are powerless, owing to dissension among themselves.

By Associated Press. Canton, Aug. 14.—President Wilson today informed democratic senators he was unalterably opposed to any recess of the Senate between the time the tariff bill is passed and currency taken up. He made it plain that he believed it the duty of the democratic party not to hesitate in its program of legislative reform, but to dispose of the tariff and currency during the present session, so that the December session may take up promptly anti-trust and other important legislation carrying out platform pledges.

The president communicated his views through Secretary Tamm, who got in touch with most of the democratic senators and decided that a substantial majority are in favor of immediate legislation and no recess. Incidentally the president took a strong position on the question of legislative agreements between democrats and republicans in Congress.

He believes that the democrats, as the dominant party, should proceed with determination and not trade with the minority.

The fact that republican senators had informally agreed to speed up consideration of the tariff bill if a recess were assured after its passage, prompted the president to urge that business throughout the country demanded early action on the tariff, regardless of whether any vacation or recess was promised in return.

By Associated Press. Austin, Texas, Aug. 14.—The hope of the big prohibition majority of the House for liquor legislation at this session faded away this morning when word of the passage of the bill by the Senate was received.

The bill has ninety-six sections and practically every member of the House agrees that it will consume the remaining three days of the session.

They must forego the restrictive measures which had been scheduled for passage and which the governor had submitted or they must turn down this problem and practically slap the Farmers' Union in the face at the same time.

When the vote started, there was some hesitation but before many names were called they began to flock to the warehouse proposal.

The Warren penitentiary bill, as substituted for the Humphreys House bill, finally passed the Senate this morning. It is expected to go to free conference tomorrow. The bill by Henry of Wichita relating to the governing of the state school for the training of juveniles at Gatesville, also was finally passed.

WILL DISCIPLINE HENRY L. WILSON

BRYAN SEES PRESIDENT

Embassador's Term Not Over Until October 14 and Utterances Have Aroused Washington

By Associated Press. Washington, Aug. 14.—President Wilson and Secretary Bryan conferred today on the statement issued by Ambassador Lusk of London, which reported views of the British foreign office on recognition of the Huerta government in Mexico. It was learned that some action to discipline Mr. Wilson was decided on and it was said a sharp reprimand was the most likely form for the discipline.

What Ambassador Wilson's views are known at the British Foreign Office to be at variance with those of the Washington Administration, but President Wilson is said to be disposed to not permit any attacks on the British Government from an official of the United States, which the ambassador's remark would continue to be until Oct. 14.

Administration officials took particular exception of the ambassador's remark: "If this statement really emanated from the British Foreign Office, it is at variance with its traditions and with the character it has maintained before the world for two centuries."

It was pointed out that should the British Government's statement prove authentic, which is believed here to be the case, the American Government would be in the embarrassing position of maintaining an official who had criticized a friendly Nation. Disapproval also was voiced in Administration circles of the ambassador's reference to the recognition of the Huerta Administration by European Governments "after waiting vainly for the recognition of the Government of the United States, which they universally thought should be accorded."

Official notice had not hitherto been taken of the ambassador's criticism of the American Government's policy as expressed in published interviews, but Secretary Bryan decided to inquire of Ambassador Wilson, who is now in Washington, whether he had authorized the statement given to the newspapers by him.

Mr. Wilson said: "If this statement really emanated from the British foreign office, it is at variance with its traditions and with the character which it has maintained before the world for two centuries. I doubt the genuineness of the statement as to a purpose to rebuff unworthy of the British foreign office. As this existed at the time of this recognition only a provisional government in Mexico, the Government of Great Britain could naturally recognize nothing but a provisional government, which it did exactly in the same manner and practice as the same phraseology in all other European Governments. That Great Britain was moved to recognition by its desire to obtain the restoration of order is most likely true and I believe this factor was the determining one with all Governments which followed the example of Great Britain, though most of them recognized the Mexican Provisional Government at a much later date."

"The action of the government of Great Britain was not, in the slightest degree, affected by the so-called 'Conspirators' speech' made by me on behalf of the diplomatic corps. This address was not drawn by me, but by the Spanish and British Ministers at the request of the entire resident diplomatic corps."

"I purposely declined responsibility for the address, in the form in which it finally appeared, it was the expression of the views of the entire diplomatic corps representing governments of which none at that time had recognized the provisional government. For more than a month after this recognition the British Government maintained an attitude of hostility towards the Government of Gen. Huerta and when final recognition was accorded it came as the result of a complete reversal of policy."

By Associated Press. Windsor, Vt., Aug. 14.—The appearance of the big, purring cars from Harla Kaendens House, where the president's family are spending the summer, on the streets and roads about here, do not create the excitement and comment that they first did. At first when the natives recognized the "White House" automobiles they perked up considerably at an opportunity to see the First Lady of the Land and her daughters. But for the president's family who rode the whole household came here for rest and as much vacation as they could get, and in order to carry out this principle she lets the servants go for the night and occasionally take a short spin after dusk in the White House machines. The women servants are given considerable "time off" which they generally spend at the "movies." They spend most of their spare time playing the ancient and honorable game of pool or billiards at the one estimably respectable pool and billiard parlor in these parts.

SIMMONS WANTS VOTE ON TARIFF

REPUBLICANS MAY FILIBUSTER TO PREVENT ACTION ON CURRENCY BILL

Effort to Secure Vote on Tariff Bill on August 25 Is Blocked by Republicans

By Associated Press. Washington, Aug. 11.—An attempt by Senator Simmons, leader of the democratic tariff forces, to arrange for a vote on the tariff bill in the Senate August 25, was blocked today by the Republican leader, Senator Gallinger.

The Democrats refused to say whether they would insist upon taking up the currency bill after the tariff bill was completed and the Republicans refused to say whether they would filibuster against the tariff until assured that the currency bill would not be pressed.

Yesterday's debate on the free listing of wheat came to a climax late in the day, when Senator Borah of Idaho, referring to the counterbalancing duty which the Democrats had proposed, asserted it was the same as Canadian reciprocity passed by the Republicans to the betrayal of the farmers of the country.

"We have heard a great deal of discussion," said Senator Borah, "about the disposition of the present incumbent of the White House to enforce his tariff ideas upon congress. I am not going to discuss them. I only want to say that the Republicans had voted their convictions when Canadian reciprocity passed this body, there would not have been ten votes for it on this side of the chamber."

"That was a disaster, a treacherous betrayal of our loyal constituency as a great political party ever had. Now, we have the same principle as reciprocity embodied in this bill. It does not impeach the Democratic party of inconsistency, as it impeached us, but I believe it will have the same effect."

Reverting to England for an illustration of what free trade has done for the farmer, Senator Borah presented statistics to show that in 1866 there were 3,126,000 acres in wheat in England, and only 38,000 acres in barley in 1866 and only 36,600 acres of wheat in England. This ratio continued Senator Borah asserted would mean "ultimate destruction of the British Empire."

Back to the Farm. "So long as the people are crowding to the cities and those congested centers are becoming more deplorable day by day, it is the duty of the American government, not only through this legislation, but in every other way, to encourage the people to enter the agricultural field. I am in favor of a bounty if necessary, to encourage the agricultural community."

Senator Williams declared he did not want to see the American government rob the poor in order to enrich the landlords, and he believed and hoped the result of free listing farm products would lower the price of bread and meat, and open the Republic's party had been fooling them about the virtues of protection for years.

Senators Smoot and Bristow contrasted the action of the Democrats on wheat with that on rice, which in the pending bill, is made dutiable at 1 cent a pound; for the former suggested that the fact that rice is a southern product might account for this.

Wichita county will get a total of $33,136 from the state board of education for support of this county's schools, according to the apportionment just made by the board. The per capita apportionment this year is seven dollars, as compared with $6.85 last year.

The scholastic population of this county is 4734, according to the census completed recently, giving a total of $33,136 for this county. The Wichita Falls district, with a scholastic population of 23538, will receive $16,513; the Iowa Park district, with 153, will get $1071; the Burk Burnett district, with 223, will receive $1561, while Electra's apportionment, on her school population of 415, is $2995. The remainder is distributed among the various other districts in the county, each according to the number of children.

Owing to the marked increase in the scholastic population of this county, and the advance in the per capita apportionment, Wichita county will get far more than ever before this year.

PITCHER WALTER JOHNSON MASTER OF THEM ALL

New York, Aug. 14.—Walter Johnson is the master of them all.

"Johnson is the greatest pitcher of the era—a harder man to beat upon an average than any pitcher who ever lived. The man whom batsmen fear more to face than any other, and face with fewer results, is Johnson."

So says Grantland Rice, in an article in Collier's, comparing three world-famed pitchers—Johnson, Mathewson and Walsh.

As to why Johnson is the greatest Grantland Rice summed it up once in seven lines of verse which was printed some time ago.

How do they know what Johnson's got?

Whether he uses a curve or not—Big Ed Walsh or "Matty."

How can they tell how his outshoots fall? Whether his incurve's big or small

How can they tell what he's got on—the ball? Nobody's seen it yet."

Clark Griffith, himself once one of the great pitchers of the game, told Grantland Rice for the same article why Johnson is better than either is the brainiest pitch I ever saw. "I know," said Griffith, "what Combs, my think of Walsh and what McGraw thinks of Mathewson. Walsh is a wonder for work and Mathewson is the brainiest pitcher I ever saw. But I have a good reason for believing that, all around, Johnson is greater than either, greater than any pitcher that ever lived. The reason is a simple one—place all three of these men upon teams of equal strength in the same league, worked to their limit, and Johnson would end the season with more victories and fewer defeats than either. He is a harder man to beat than any other man, all other conditions being equal, and this is the final test.

"Johnson has yet to be sent at top speed over the full route, as Walsh and Mathewson have. This is so for the reason that up to 1912 he was working for a seventh place club where it would have been worse than foolish to risk wrecking his arm. Yet in 1911, when Washington finished seventh, he won eleven straight games where other good pitchers were finding it hard to win two straight.

"In 1912, when we had a chance, I worked Johnson in his turn to save him up for the stretch in case we were close enough to make a desperate fight for it. He came to me every other day in case I needed him to win. But we were too far back in September to run this risk. Yet throughout the year there was not a game where I sent Johnson out to win—and I pressed the necessity of winning for me and deliver the goods. I sent him against Walsh several times and it is my recollection that he beat Ed every start but one. Joe Wood beat him twice by shutting us out. Wood had an older, steadier club to work with, and where Joe was pitching his head off, Walter was working at an average pace.

"No man living ever had Johnson's speed. I have seen most of the good ones in my day. Rustie, as fast as he was, was not his equal in this respect. Neither was Waddell. Neither was any other man who ever threw a ball. But don't make the mistake of thinking that Johnson has nothing but rife ball speed. He has the head and the heart to go with it. He knows where to pitch and why to pitch and how to pitch. He has a curve ball that breaks like a flash and control to meet any situation.

"I have still one argument to make in Johnson's behalf. Ask any ball player that ever faced all three—on the Boston Red Sox and the Philadelphia Athletics have done—ask any of these which of the three is the hardest to hit. The answer will be Johnson. Ask any umpire who has worked behind all three in big games—as Evans, O'Laughlin and others have done—who has more stuff than any pitcher in the world. There won't be even a moment's hesitation. They'll tell you that Johnson stands alone—that he has no equal, and that Walsh and Mathewson, as great as they are, haven't the stuff to compete with this young giant from the West who I know is beyond all argument the best word in pitching who is harder to hit than any pitcher who ever threw a ball."

SAND AS CURE FOR STOMACH TROUBLES

Prominent Muncie, Indiana, Man Testify to Efficacy of "Sand Cure" in Own Case

Muncie, Ind., Aug. 14.—Sand—parboiled, baked or fried—has cured stomach trouble for George W. Cromer, former congressman from the eighth congressional district; John Fitzgibbons, president of the Muncie Ornamental Iron Company and H. W. Long, lawyer, and twice prosecuting attorney of Delaware county. Today, despite much laughter that sometimes greets them when they tell the stories of their recovery from indigestion, dyspepsia and other stomach troubles, they are spreading the gospel of sand.

Fitzgibbons read of the sand cure in a Chicago newspaper and tried it out. It worked wonders for him. It was much the same way with Cromer and Long. With only half faith, but desperate from years of suffering, they tried out the sand cure and declare they are again sound and whole in the regions of the stomach and that their general health has been improved seventy-five per cent.

"But why the different treatment of the sand?" Fitzgibbons was asked. "I can't explain it. Raw sand will do the trick for some people. Baked sand will do it for me. Another might have to have the sand parboiled, steamed or fried. Just look me over. Before I took the baked sand cure I was nervous, generally run down, and subject to violent attacks of stomach trouble which made me worthless at my desk and a nuisance to my friends and my family. If there is anyone in the world who feels better than I do these days or who can stand more work and be pleasanter about it than myself, I'd like to get a look at him. The sand I use is the common ordinary sand with the dirt picked out."

Oil Men Take Steps to Secure Attention for "Dutch," Well Known Character Here

As a result of efforts in his behalf by some of the oil men, the partially paralyzed deaf man who has been a more or less familiar object on the streets for some time past, will soon receive medical treatment in the hope of restoring him to health.

The man's name has not been learned, as he is unable either to speak or write it. He is known as "Dutch." He was injured near Burk Burnett more than a year ago while at work on the Magnolia Petroleum Company's pipe line, receiving a blow in the head that paralyzed one side of his body. It is believed that there is a pressure on the brain as a result of the injury to the skull and that a cure is possible.

ITALY CELEBRATES BIRTH OF VERDI

Natal Anniversary of Famous Italian Emperor and Dramatist is Celebrated

Parma, Italy, Aug. 14—Italy's national celebration of the anniversary of the birth of Verdi was formally opened here today and will continue until October 15. The house in which Verdi was born here was opened to the public this morning with elaborate ceremonies, as was also a national theatrical exposition, devoted entirely to the history and development of the stage from the days of the early Greeks and Romans down to the present day. A goodly section of the exposition is devoted to the works of Verdi.

Beginning today there will be daily concerts of the opera composer's music. Choral societies from all over Italy have planned pilgrimages here to give concerts and enter in the competitions which have been arranged for the purpose of popularizing Verdi's music. An opera season will be begun the first week in September in the Royal Opera House at which all of Verdi's masterpieces will be presented in their chronological order under the direction of Campinini, of the New York Metropolitan Grand Opera House, who was born at Parma. The casts will include practically every great opera singer in the world today, all of whom have donated their services for the centenary celebration.

Later in September an immense concert hall, the largest in Italy, to be known as "Sala Verdi" will be opened, and a national monument to Verdi unveiled. The culmination of the ceremonies will come on October 10, the anniversary of Verdi's death when a world wide pilgrimage will be made to the tomb of the composer at Milan. Assurances already have been received that the principal musical societies of practically every country will be represented at this pilgrimage.

Magician's Tricks Made Plain

No feat of magic, no sleight of hand, no illusion before or since ever attracted the attention that Heller's great "Second Sight" did some thirty smoothly turned but perfect per-entertainer went about freely among his audience while his beautiful sister, Haldee, sat on a couch on the stage, blindfolded, and read the dates on coins, named objects shown to Heller by the audience, repeated passages from books, opened by anyone and did all manner of other mystifying things. It was certainly amazing.

Nothing like "Second Sight" had ever been seen before. Plainly there were no confederates because Heller always smilingly asked the best known people among his hearers to assist him. Scores of articles were written about his feats and many were the explanations which he explained. Scientists even thought that Heller had solved the mystery of thought transference. Nonsense! It was nothing but the simplest tricks smoothly turned by that performer. Most mystifying of all, just as one imagined he had caught the secret of things Heller would reach the same result in a wholly different way, turning the would be student of his black art completely off the track.

Today Prof. Francis J. Martinka, a retired magician, has the sofa in his New York home on which Mlle. Haldee used to sit. It was part of the trick—the best I ever saw and one of the easiest.

To begin with Heller used four different means—key words, a confederate, sleight of hand and an apparatus that any boy could make. How it is done. In the average audience there are certain articles one can always find—programas, opera glasses, watches, handkerchiefs, rings, pins, eyeglasses, fans, gloves, coins, bills, visiting cards. Heller and his sister had keys for all these common things and hundreds more for less common ones. An inflection of a word, a pause—a dozen different little ways indicated the article. But just as the astonished beholder of the mystery began to think he had the secret, Heller would merely pass rapidly about, touching articles and there and saying nothing, while Haldee just as rapidly named them, though blindfolded and her back to the audience. Easiest of all. They merely had a prearranged list of things to be found in any theatre audience and Heller touched each in proper sequence—fan, glove, hat, eyeglasses, jacket and what not. You wore them all off the track if you thought his spoken words conveyed to Haldee his meaning; yet they did—at other times.

Concealed beneath the stage was a real confederate—Heller never stooped to one of the audience—with a powerful pair of field glasses. As Heller held up other articles the man below saw them and whispered to Haldee through the speaking tube which ended in the sofa—Martinka will show you the tubed sofa any day. Nothing wonderful about that! Now something even more mystifying—reading from a book held by one of the audience. I remember well—Heller used "Helen's Babies," the best book of the day.

"Won't you be so good as to cut the leaves?" he would ask of some widely known person in the orchestra, handing him an ivory paper cutter. The obliging person slipped the cutter between the leaves while Heller smiled and murmured: "Just to show there isn't any collusion," he'd add, turning to some one else. "I'll ask this woman to open the book where the gentleman put the paper cutter and follow Miss Haldee as she reads."

Of course other persons near the woman could look over her shoulder. To their blank amazement Haldee would gibberly recite the words in the book before their eyes. Wonderful! Fiddlesticks! Heller merely had two paper cutters. As he stepped away from the gentleman who cut into the book he turned it upside down and presented the volume with the other paper cutter inserted where he wanted it. Of course Haldee had memorized that page and ran it right off. So simple!

So with her reading of sealed letters, Heller had a set of steps, down which he ran to get among the audience. You didn't notice it, but he never used the particular step. It was made of cardboard and had a little trap in it.

Heller asked people to write anything they pleased and seal the slips up in envelopes, which he gathered up on the steps in full view. Somebody under the steps merely extracted the envelopes through the false bottom of the box, opened them with a little alcohol and whispered the answers up the tube to Haldee. Presto! she read aloud what was on the slips when the envelopes were taken out of the box and held up. So simple!

Another mystery Exploded. From time immemorial the raising of the human body in the air without support has been the aim of all necromancers. Heller called his act "Lecitation," and it was a wonder. But so simple, like all the best illusions. A beautifully robed woman entered the stage, reclined on a couch, was apparently hypnotized and then slowly rose in the air in full view of everybody, assuming any posture the magician chose to fix in.

Heller, now retired, was a very clever person. No stage hands were allowed behind the scenes during his act, not even scene shifters. He had brought his own assistants. He had an employe on the Otis Elevator Co. working for months contriving an apparatus light enough to take on the road—it was a marvel of ingenuity. Forty-five fine wires, a series of springs, a steel harness, a set of weights and a windlass, all of which could be packed in two trunks, made up the trick.

An audience can see one or two single wires. Heller confessed to me after I had solved his illusion, but they can't see thirty or forty because they blend in the background. Which is true. And that was his whole secret. Behind his couch was a striped background in which the wires blended perfectly. Hidden in the soft cushioning of the couch was a finely made steel harness to which were fastened thirty slender wires. These went up through the ceiling from the S bar back of the harness, connecting with a windlass behind the scenes, by which the subject was raised and lowered at will. The S bar is always a prime necessity in any levitation act because it enables the operator to step behind the subject or pass a hoop completely around the body.

Now if the harness was raised by the thirty wires the woman in it would tip forward the moment her body left the couch. So there is a counterbalance running beneath the stage by fifteen more wires, which keeps the whole thing horizontal. The rest is easy. You can't see the wires and there is no hole in the background through which a steel bar might be poked to support the beautiful woman. Result—mystery!

WICHITANS TO USE AUTO TO BRING HOME THE FISH

Party Camping at Lamont, Colorado, Writes of Sleeping Under Four Blankets at Night

A bunch of Wichitans is camped on the Thomas River near Almont, Colorado at present, the party including Ed Walsh, P. C. Mackie, J. J. Kierst, Dr. H. A. Waller and son. They seem to be having a large time, judging from the following which The Times has received.

"We pitched camp on the wild and roaring Thomas River about a half mile above Almont at an altitude of eight thousand feet. Our camp is in a little valley about three hundred yards wide and the mountains rise eight hundred feet straight up, with snow on some of the peaks. The air is cool and bracing; we sleep under four blankets and could use a gas-buster to good advantage. We have three rivers to fish in—the Gunnison, Taylor and East Rivers, and all that keeps them from being solid ice is that the waters run so fast that the friction against the rocks which break from pebbles to some as large as a house, prevents it.

"Ages ago, they must have taken a high dive of a thousand feet or so. Our kitchen is only two or three feet from the river, which acts as our larder. We have to keep our booze wrapped up in a trunk to keep it from turning hard. We have several neighbors camping along the river. The ladies wear trousers and high laced boots and winter underclothes and wooden shoes. We can pick wild raspberries and gooseberries and there are lots of plums and wild roses.

"Everybody has a good appetite. We take turn about cooking and have a table fit for a king. Fishing is fine. You put on a pair of wading boots that reach up under your arms in the front and have a ten foot elastic boot pole with automatic reel and 150 feet of line, with a royal coachman, a grayback and a professor fly. You use your pole like a whip, at the same time making a noise like a fly. You carry a net to hold your trout, but you carry it mainly to help you stand up in the rushing water from three to five feet deep. Your reel is strapped to your waist to hold your catch and it is also used for ornament.

"We have a little tin stove, set up on an altar which we built of rocks and dirt. It has a pipe about five feet long. Ed has just pushed a twenty-foot pole into the fire box and as the pole burns we push it further in and chopping is unnecessary. We have a kitchen cabinet, table and benches which we made out of boxes. We will stay a month. Joe has fallen in the river three times so far and is not through yet. We will hire a car to haul our fish back. All enjoying good health."

MILAN STRIKERS LOSING HEART; TROOPS ARE BUSY.

Milan, Aug. 14.—Leaders of the strike agitation here are already showing signs of pessimism. They have believed that all the workingmen of Italy would rise, but reports from the provinces indicate that few of the workers have struck. Turin, Venice, Naples and Bologna are quiet.

Even the leading Socialist newspaper, Avanti, admits today that the general strike is dying and that the national agitation has been only sporadic, owing to the strong repressive action of the police, who arrested or put to flight everyone bearing the appearance of a "striker."

Two Views Of Katy Suit

ATTORNEY GENERAL ANXIOUS TO TURN LOOSE

(James Hayes Quarles in Waco News) In the morning News of issue August 9 I stated that the assistant attorney general in charge of the state's suit against the Missouri, Kansas & Texas railroad company of Texas appeared to be trying to find a way to turn loose.

BEES ARGUMENT FOR GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP

(John H. Stokes, Wichita Falls) I note by the papers that the Katy system will suspend all improvements because the government is prosecuting them for violating the law. Their attitude is this: "If you don't let us do as we please we will let our roads run down and endanger the lives of the trainmen and the passengers that ride on our lines."

LITTLE CHANCE FOR WOMAN SUFFRAGE AMENDMENT NOW

(By Congressman Clyde H. Tavenner in the Houston Chronicle) What chance is there for passage by the present congress of the woman suffrage amendment to the constitution? This is a question being asked by enlightened women in all parts of the United States.

Wichita Falls, Texas, August 14, 1913

Guilt though he may be, censure of the offenses of Governor Sulzer of New York will be softened by the knowledge of his many good acts as governor, and his fearless fight against Tammany.

NEW YORK DOESN'T LIKE IT

The New York Journal of Commerce is not pleased at Secretary McAdoo's plan to add the crop movements of the West and South by deposits of United States funds to the extent of $50,000,000.

This money has been borrowed heretofore at higher rates of interest from the banks of New York, Chicago and Boston, and, of course, the New York view is that the treasury ought not to deprive them of the profits of this business.

The banks of New York, Chicago and St. Louis especially have under former administrations enjoyed the use of treasury money free of charge and have loaned it to the country banks at a profit to the Wall Street brokers.

But the Journal of Commerce ought to remember that one of the banking reforms most needed is that which will emancipate the interior banks from the domination of New York.

Secretary McAdoo has simply met an emergency in a practical way, and in a way that will prove advantage to the producers without in any sense injuring the government or any legitimate interest.

How can a statute legalize that which the constitution says should not be done? If the argument and opposition to the merger was made upon proper construction of the constitution...

The truth of the matter is that the further into the Katy suit the attorney general and his assistant inquired, the further away from success they found themselves.

When the Katy merger bill was pending in the legislature, President Schauf agreed that the Katy proposed to make certain improvements; that certain extensions were to be built and new rails laid in several directions.

Therefore the merger went through without these things. I have it from the most excellent authority that the engineers of the Katy were ready to commence work on the extensions...

Is Expensive Litigation If the attorney general's office now abandons the suit and acknowledges by that abandonment that it brought the action without good and sufficient cause...

Read the history of this state and see whether Texas has encouraged railroad construction or not. I make this assertion, and if there is one who can contradict it I would like to have the facts.

SCRUBBING THE OIL SANDS Oil City Derrick. A practice has been introduced into the Bradford oil field, which would seem to promise the complete elimination of that territory in a few years from the producing list.

Suppose you should send your boy into the garden to hoe and he should disobey your orders. And then, when you threatened to punish him, he should tell you that if you didn't let him go fishing he'd cut out all the beets and onions in the garden.

When a corporation refuses to obey the law unless the government allows it to rob the people to a certain degree (and that all the traffic will be carried) and threatens to kill and maim a portion of the public unless it is allowed to smash them up, is it not time for the government to take charge of that industry and operate it for the good of the public?

Railroads are public carriers. They are recognized as such by the law. In times past extensive land grants and large appropriations have been given them by the government to encourage extension and improvements and if they suspend improvements and if they breach a public trust?

Suppose you, as an individual, should entrust a division of your business to some company and they should not manage it properly and when you reprimanded them for it should become defiant and threaten to let everything go to rack if you didn't let them have their own way?

What do you think about it? done. The Bradford producer, however, has reversed this plan, and, as one of them said recently "is praying for the flood to come."

A careful study of the workings of this plan would be of great value to oil operators in other fields. That water drives oil before it is known by its action in the old territory along Oil Creek.

Many Attend Services for Officer Who Was Killed Monday—Conducted by Moose

Hundreds of friends and citizens were gathered at Riverside cemetery Wednesday afternoon to pay the last rites to Policeman Sterling B. Morris. The funeral had been announced to be held at the residence but on account of the condition of Mrs. Morris who is the mother of a two weeks' old infant, the service was transferred to the cemetery. It was conducted by the Moose lodge of which the deceased was a member. Rev. J. L. McKee was the officiating pastor.

A number of relatives from out of town were here to attend the funeral including Sam R. and Walter Viney of Haskell, Will Viney of St. Jo, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Halbert of Mt. Pleasant, Clarence Davis of Amarillo, T. R. Davis of Guthrie, Texas, and Mrs. M. E. Smith of Cooper, Texas.

MAY CONSIDER POLICE APPOINTMENTS TONIGHT

Matter to be Scheduled to Come up For Attention of Council But May Be Delayed

Consideration of police appointments will be taken up by the city council at its meeting tonight if the program ordered by council at its meeting last week is carried out. The council then instructed the chief of police to submit a list of the names of the men on the police force as now constituted for confirmation or rejection.

Since this meeting the tragedy in which one policeman was killed and another is in jail awaiting a grand jury investigation of the killing has come up and whether this will cause a postponement of consideration of police matters by council is not known.

NEGRO'S BOAST BRINGS HIM WOUND IN THROAT

White Man Arrested on Assault on Murder Charge Following Fight in Saloon

A negro whose name was not learned was slashed across the throat with a pocket knife by a white man last night. The rear of the Princess Bar was the scene of the cutting. The negro is reported to have come into the saloon and to have announced that he was from Oklahoma and had killed a man. He was then attacked by the white man.

A long gash was cut at the side and in front of his throat but no arteries or veins were severed. The negro ran to the Kemp and Kell building where he found Dr. Bell who sewed up the wound. Roy Severance was arrested in connection with the cutting and is being held to the grand jury on a charge of assault on murder.

Mrs. Sterling B. Morris, widow of the policeman killed Monday night and mother of a two weeks' old infant who was in a serious condition from the shock of her husband's death, is now reported much improved.

AMENDMENTS ADOPTED AT OKLAHOMA ELECTION

Complete Returns Show That all of Propositions Submitted to People Carried

Oklahoma City, Okla., Aug. 14.—Full returns on the special election of Aug. 5 show that all propositions carried. The high record was on the miners' referendum, 94,904 votes having been cast for and against it. Results on the five questions were as follows:

Section 9—Yes, 59,437, no 35,115; constitutional majority 11,984. Miners' referendum—Yes 73,345, no 21,559; individual majority 51,786. Tax distribution—Yes 63,320, no 30,295; constitutional majority 15,887.

Authorizing counties to abolish township form of government—Yes 50,634, no 39,690; constitutional majority 3,181. Reduction of state board of agriculture—Yes 67,067, no 25,947; constitutional majority 19,614.

All questions save the miners' referendum were required to obtain an affirmative vote equal to a majority of all the votes cast in the election. Word came from Bartlesville that that county would contest the result of the election on the tax distribution measure.

Governor Cruce will ask the attorney general for an opinion as to his duties under the board of agriculture amendment. The present board will take no action until the governor's appointees undertake to oust them from office, then the amendment will be questioned because it was submitted to a vote earlier than forty days after passage by the Legislature.

RED RIVER IMPROVEMENT PROJECT NOT FAVORED

Government Engineers Report Adversely on Plan for Reforestation Along Banks

Government engineers have reported unfavorably upon the plan to undertake improvement of Red River from the mouth of the Big Wichita, in Clay county, to the mouth of the Washita River, near Denton. This renders it improbable that any government work will be started on Red River in this section for some time.

The improvement contemplated was to have begun with reforestation of the land along each side of the river, where the trees have been cut down. The ultimate idea of the work was to make the stream eventually navigable from the mouth of the Big Wichita to the Mississippi River. It is not likely that any work of this kind will be approved for some years.

INDIAN YOUTH TRYING TO LOCATE FATHER'S SISTER

Says She Was Separated From Her People During Battle With the White Soldiers

In an effort to learn the whereabouts of his father's sister, an Indian boy at Emerson, Oklahoma, has written Postmaster Bacon for information regarding her, having heard that she was somewhere in Texas. The letter indicated that the woman disappeared many years ago.

"Long, long time ago, during the old times when the Indians were wild and had wars with the white people, this woman was going with the war party, with her man. While they were going on their way, a snake bit her on her foot. Just when the men were carrying her on there came a company of soldiers. This man of this woman's put her in some tall grass and told her to sit there; so those men ran away from this woman and left her sitting there, as they could not help themselves.

"Then the soldiers came and got her and after the battle was over, the Indian men came to where they had left her to see whether she was still there. She was gone. So that was the way she went. Somebody that knew her saw her in town here long time ago. This woman's name was He-Ma-Ko. She was my father's sister. One of her sister's names was Gus-See. She is in some place in Texas."

Pretty Young Nurse Fights For Freedom On Charge Of Fatally Poisoning Doctor She Loved

Utica, N. Y., Aug. 12.—Miss Emma E. Krill, the pretty young nurse whose love for Dr. Stanley E. Tron led her into her present difficulty, denied emphatically that she poisoned him with morphia and will fight for her freedom. A New York lawyer has taken up the case, although Miss Krill is reported to be without money, and will attempt to gain her release. She and Dr. Tron lived together, and the nurse refuses to say whether they were married or not. The supposition of the police is that they were never wedded, but that the doctor had promised to marry the girl. His delay or refusal to do so coupled with the fact that he was planning to go to Europe alone is given as the motive for the murder. The police have revealed Miss Krill's love tragedy by consulting her letters and effects. It is claimed that the evidence warrants the nurse being tried for murder.

DANIEL KENYON'S FORTUNE :: By E. L. Bacon

WHEN Daniel Kenyon, cashier of the Elm City Bank, bought an automobile his neighbors, the Simpsons, who had lived next door to him for twenty-five years, during which time they had been under the impression that they knew all the ins and outs of his private affairs, were surprised and bewildered by the sudden burst of extravagance.

"How the deuce can he do it?" exclaimed Henry Simpson, as he gazed out of the window at the car that was chug-chugging in front of Kenyon's house. "He's not content with a runabout; he's got a big touring car. And on twenty-five hundred a year salary! It beats me!"

"He's been working for the bank close to thirty years," suggested Mrs. Simpson. "Don't you suppose he's saved something in all that time? Anyway, there's the five thousand his uncle left him. That ought to be enough for an easy life."

"You ought to know Dan Kenyon well enough by this time to realize he's not the kind to spend half his salary for a toy-machine," declared her husband. "I'll bet that car cost his year's salary at least. And as for saving, you know how much chance he had to do that. His salary wasn't but two thousand till a few years ago, and his wife had been an invalid for fifteen years when she died, with her bills running up high. Not much chance for big savings there."

"Well, he's surely the last man I'd have suspected of such an extravagance," said Mrs. Simpson. "He's never been the kind to think of luxuries. Why, he's always scratched every penny. He must have made a lot of money somehow."

"Small chance of a man in this gossip town getting hold of a lot of money without everybody knowing all about it. Anyway, Kenyon's never been close-mouthed about his affairs. He's never been ashamed to let his friends know about himself. Why, it was only six months ago that I heard him say the five thousand he got from his uncle's estate was pretty near all he had in the world. And he's got the reputation of being as truthful a man as ever lived. So, what in blazes is he doing with a touring-car?"

"I heard him say the five thousand he got from his uncle's estate was pretty near all he had in the world. And he's got the reputation of being as truthful a man as ever lived. So, what in blazes is he doing with a touring-car?"

"What do you suppose Mr. Kenyon has been doing?" she exclaimed.

"Been buying an auto," said her mother, with a touch of peevishness. "Didn't you suppose we knew that by this time? If he can afford an auto, he ought to be going around in a gold chariot. But I guess your father would have a fainting spell if either of us happened to hint at a horse and buggy."

"He's been getting more than an auto," announced Mrs. Simpson. "The Beldens are going abroad, and he's rented their house, furniture and all, and the garage in the rear for his machine. Where on earth has he been getting all the money?"

brought him no peace of mind, for he looked more careworn than ever. He was not much more than fifty, but it was plain that old age was coming over him very rapidly. New wrinkles had come into his face, and his hair was fast turning white.

His daughter spoke freely to her friends about her father's sudden prosperity, but she never went into the details regarding his affairs.

"No man ever deserved success more than he," she said. "He has worked so hard for so many years, and yet, with everything against him, he has always been an ambitious to get to the top. I was always sure he would win some time. Year after year I've told him so. And he would always say: 'Yes, Clara, I'll win out some time. I don't care about money myself, but I want you to have it—to have all the things that money can buy. You're the kind of girl that ought to have them.' I don't want to see you dragging through life without them. He could read me like a book. He knew all my weaknesses. And he knew all the time, no matter how hard I might try to hide it from him, that I hated to be poor. He knew how I chafed under it, how I longed for all the things that more fortunate fathers could give their daughters. I'm a selfish, frivolous girl, I know, and now that all this money has come, and I see how old and worn my father looks after having worked so long and so hard to get it, I almost hate myself."

Apparently she had never wondered for a moment where the money had come from. She had no head for business matters, and had only a vague idea of what her father's duties were at the bank. Wealth had come suddenly as the result of long years of hard work; that was all she knew about it, and she was not inquisitive regarding the details of the achievement.

But her lack of curiosity as to how her father had accomplished so much did not extend to his fellow townsmen. For many a week it was the chief food for gossip among them.

People wondered why Kenyon still stuck to his twenty-five-hundred-dollar job in the bank since his rise in the world. They wondered, too, why such a worried look had come into his face. There were still other things that perplexed them. One was the very evident fact that not only was Kenyon himself showing signs of being under a hard strain, but his daughter, too, was beginning to look worn and troubled in the first flush of prosperity she had not shown it; but now it was rapidly becoming more and more apparent.

She went out less among her friends, and the entertaining that she had been in her new home gradually came to an end. Before long she was very seldom seen outside of her own door. Her father, too, was becoming silent and dismal. Even the motor car lay, day after day, in the garage without being used.

amounts to. It would take a fortune of something like two hundred thousand dollars to bring him in enough of an income for that, and it's plain that he's not been looking for any such sum. Now, where's all the money coming from? He must have piles of it, for he's not the man who would spend all his income. All his life he has lived well within his means, putting aside a few dollars every month for a rainy day. You might say he's been accumulating, but I have good evidence that he didn't have but a few thousand dollars in the world a few months ago, and it would take a Napoleon of finance to make a big fortune in the stock market in that space of time on such small beginnings. What's more, he can't be believed to have been in when he never goes anywhere but to the bank. I've had him watched."

"Well," said Simpson, "it's your affair, not mine. All I can say is that I don't understand it. Kenyon has always had faith in his honesty."

"I'm not saying anything against his honesty," snapped Berger. "I'm just wondering what's all this about. He's been robbing the bank for years, and they've caught him. I've seen the books gone over, and they're straight. He couldn't foot the expenses of his accounts for a dollar."

"If I were you I'd ask him," suggested Simpson. "That's the simplest way."

"That's just what I've done," said Berger. "And he told me it was his own affair, and that as long as his accounts at the bank were straight I ought to be satisfied. Said I needn't believe him even if he did tell me. Now, I've always liked Kenyon. He's a good cashier and I'd hate to lose him, but all this gossip isn't good for the bank. What's more, even if I have faith in him myself, some of the stockholders are in a mighty suspicious frame of mind in spite of what the books show."

Berger continued for weeks to pry into his cashier's private affairs, although he gained very little enlightenment from the effort. But one thing his detective found out was that Kenyon's daughter had become alarmingly ill.

"That didn't seem to have any bearing upon the mystery of her father's absence, but it might account, perhaps, for the rapid change that had come over him for his haggard features, his heavy eyes, and his constant expression of anxiety and dread.

"Her case is hopeless," he told some inquiring friends. "The disease has been developing steadily for a long time. She may linger on for weeks—perhaps months—but the specialists tell me it's incurable."

It was almost a year from the time that Kenyon had started his neighbors by moving into his new home that his daughter died. And it was only a few hours before she passed away that he received notice that the bank would require his services no longer. The protests of the stockholders had grown too strong for Berger to withstand.

The day after the funeral Kenyon walked into Berger's office at the bank. In one luxurious year he had become an old man, white-haired, emaciated, blind, and heavy, deep-set eyes that regarded Berger peered out from a face white and drawn.

"Mr. Berger, I've come to set my mind at rest. I don't care whether I have to give up my place or not. I've passed the point where anything matters one way or the other. But I've been under suspicion here, and as an honest man I want to keep my reputation clean."

"You've been wondering where I got the money to live as I've been doing the last year. I'm going to tell you. A year ago I had five thousand dollars, inherited from an uncle. I had three thousand dollars I had saved the savings of thirty years—thirty long hard years of toil. There wasn't a year when I didn't save a little, even when I was getting only twelve dollars a week. That made eight thousand dollars. Mr. Berger, and I raised a little more on my life-insurance. I got a few hundred more by selling some jewelry my grandmother left, and a little more by running into debt. And besides that, I had a my sister. She gave me an annuity of five hundred dollars. I've been doing, as you say, my private account. If you're not satisfied."

"You mean to say that was all you had—and that you spent it?" Berger was getting up at him in disgust.

"That was all I had," said Kenyon, "and I spent it—spent a lot of it."

"But I don't understand why you should have done that," demanded Berger. "If you had saved it all."

"Perhaps you never will understand. Mr. Berger, unless you know what it means to be old, you've got to lose the only person in the world you care about. A year ago the doctors found that my daughter had an incurable disease. It hadn't developed enough to affect her much, but they knew nothing would save her. They told me she might live a year at the very longest, but I made up my mind I'd do all I could for her that year—and I've done it. My daughter had always had unbounded faith in my ability to climb to the top. She'd always looked forward to a time when I would be rich and when she should share the luxuries of life, without having to watch her pennies. All this time I'd just got there some time, father, she would say, and I could see how that ambition had got hold of her, and worked itself into her life. It was her constant thought and hope."

"So, when the doctors told me she couldn't live more than a year, I said to myself, 'She'll have her annuity, but I'll have her money.'"

"It wasn't so much," the doctor said. "I don't care so much what happens to me now that you've got to the top."

"That's how it was, Mr. Berger—and it was worth it."

Sidewalks, curbing, sewerage and electric car line will be pushed to completion. Besides these very necessary and splendid conveniences the Southland Addition WILL PROTECT THE BUYER in his investment by placing protective restrictions on the property that will prevent lots being cut crosswise and backing outhouses up against the front of other lots; preventing the building other than residences upon the property; and placing a building restriction that will enable the buyer to build a modest home but prevent the building of shacks aside of good improvements. Prices will not be available on Southland lots in advance of the improvements being completed but the prices to be made WILL APPEAL TO THE BUYER AND WILL BE WORTH EVERY DOLLAR ASKED. At the proper time full details and plat will be published. ### CONQUERING OF DISEASE BY SCIENCE CONTINUES

London, Aug. 14.—General medical research is about to receive State assistance on a scale not hitherto contemplated, declared the Right Honorable John Burns, president of the local government board, addressing the closing session of the International Medical Congress.

The chief impediment in the way of government expenditure has been wastefulness and one source of waste expenditure—armaments—stands head and shoulders above all others," he asserted.

MONEY AND FAITH

These are two of the great essentials in buying real estate. Lots of people have the money and yet they lack faith. Others have faith and lack the money.

If you have resided here as long as six months and haven't got the confidence that this is going to make a large city, then you ought to rub up against a wide awake real estate man and come out of your trance or stupor and awaken to the great possibilities that surround you.

Don't you know that Wichita Falls is going to make a city? Can't you see its great natural advantages which are bound to make it grow to a large manufacturing, industrial and commercial center? Certainly you can see it if you will but open your eyes. We have water, gas, railroads, oil, coal, good farming lands with a large trade territory to draw from with no competitive city. We also have the largest bunch of business men that you can find anywhere. What more do we need? Why, it is a cinch that we are going to build a city here. If I didn't think so I would move out, wouldn't you?

Well, you say that you have the money and the confidence, but you are going to wait awhile to invest.

Are you waiting for a slump, cool weather or a big sensational movement in real estate? If so, learn now your mistake. There will be no slump in Wichita Falls property, and prices will never be so low again as they are today. Hot weather should not ice nor delay you, neither should you wait for some excitement, but learn to use good judgment rather than impulse.

The best time to purchase property is when the market is quiet as you will find more good bargains offered. Never wait for a big rush to buy property for it is then that every one wants to buy and no one wants to sell, consequently you don't find so many bargains offered.

Now if you have a little money and will call at my office, suite 311, Kemp & Kell building, I can soon convince you that we can make your little money grow into big money by investing it in Wichita Falls real estate.

You will note that I have changed my office but that I am still in the real estate business. While I expect to push Floral Heights as a leader for bargains, yet you can rest assured that if there are any other bargains offered in the city you will find them among my listings and I will take great pleasure in showing them to you. I have quite a few of these bargains now. Call and see me.

OUR forefather did not use their eyes as we do. There is an army of people who not only use their eyes all day in their daily work; but also outside of business hours give up their time to the reading of newspapers and books, as shown by the enormous size of the newspaper and book business. This means a great deal of close work for the eyes. In the good old days there were few books to read and little time given to read them by most of the people, and the same was true in regard to the reading of newspapers, of which there were not a great many. People in those days did not put upon their eyes the work that we do. The result was that they did not need the exactly fitting glasses that are now necessary in a great many cases. Slowly there seems to have come an age of excessive use of the eyes, and it is probably here for good, so that the wearing of glasses has come to be accepted as a normal and natural advantage by most people.

THE LAST GIFT

It is the custom to give gifts unto your children. Every year you remember your loved ones and friends. Yet many a gift before the year closed, was unremembered and unappreciated.

As a last gift that dear old FATHER and MOTHER left you a legacy of truth, honesty and fidelity, along with a handsome sum of ready cash. Next day there was a protest filed in the county courts contesting the will. What is the matter? The will calls for a $20.00 memorial head-stone to be purchased and placed at their graves as a LAST GIFT. The children in protesting say, "They do not need it.
A $10.00 tomb rock is good enough." Visit the spot and you will find they sleep in UNMARKED, UNREMEMBERED GRAVES.

The Wichita Marble & Granite Works do not erect TOMB-STONES, but instead beautiful and lasting MEMORIALS, that are appreciated by friends and loved ones. Come to see us.
