The Store for Young Men and Men Who Stay Young

When You Buy Clothes at This Great Live Store—

You'll not only find here a larger, more desirable stock to choose from, but you'll find that we safe guard your interests at every point. Complete and lasting satisfaction must be your satisfaction in style, fit, service and price, otherwise you get new goods or your money back, without quibble or question. Our store, our merchandise and our methods are so different from anything that men in Wichita Falls have been accustomed to that we could not blame some people, a year ago, for being a little skeptical, but today—if there be any doubt—let them ask those who have bought here. We feel we owe a goodly share of our striking success in Wichita to the fact that we make a specialty of the superb clothing produced by

The House of Kuppenheimer

When the men of Wichita get to know Kuppenheimer clothes for what they really are, even this great store, with its modern facilities and small army of salesman, will be totally inadequate to care for the great throngs that will fill our floors. Better fabrics, more desirable patterns and finer workmanship, these are characteristics of Kuppenheimer clothes, and instead of having a mere hand-off for advertising purposes.

"UNIVERSITY OF UNITED STATES"

EX-PRESIDENT OF COLORADO INSTITUTION OUTLINES NEW NATIONAL SCHOOL

SCIENCE AND ECONOMICS

Wants Government To Establish University Where Problems of Day Can Be Worked Out

Boulder, Colo., Jan. 13.—A great national university, to be known as "The University of the United States" maintained by the government and located at Washington, D. C., is the project towards which Dr. James H. Baker, former president of the University of Colorado will devote his energies. Dr. Baker retired from the Colorado University after twenty years of continuous service during which the school grew from an institution with 87 students to a university with 1,500.

In an article just published, the educator outlines such an institution, although he refuses to take credit for the idea. He says it is the result of conferences for several years between the members of the association of State University presidents of which Dr. Baker has been president.

Besides becoming the greatest educational center in the country, with the best facilities and a research field equal to the German universities, Dr. Baker believes such an institution would become a mammoth laboratory where the problems of the nation should be studied and where proposed reforms and new ideas should be put to the "acid test."

"A national university, which represents profound scientific knowledge, its application to the practical needs of the country, the study of economic, political and social problems, every phase of human betterment—in short, all that pertains to the welfare of a people," says Dr. Baker.

"In other words, there should be at the seat of government, complete opportunity for studying the vital problems of the nation. The plan, as it now appears, briefly is as follows: It is proposed to establish by act of Congress the University of the United States; give it a board of trustees guarded from political bias, include all the scientific agencies at hand in the federal machinery at Washington, and utilize all present resources.

Facilities are already at hand in various departments for special investigation in the natural sciences, agriculture, engineering and medicine; in history, political science, economics and law; in anthropology, education and literature.

"History does not show an exact parallel to our proposed national university, although two noted institutions are suggestive examples—the University of Berlin and the University of Paris—one the royal university of Prussia, the other the most important and prominent institution of France. It has long been a just criticism of America that we are busy doing things that we have no time to think.

GOVERNMENT EXPLAINS IDENTITY OF GREEN BUG

Insect Very Similar To Wheat Pest, But Harmless, Is Often Mistaken For It

A method of distinguishing between the green bug which is so destructively in the wheat fields and another so-called green bug, which does but little damage but is often mistaken for the bug that does damage is contained in a letter from the U. S. Department of Agriculture recently received by the Secretary of the Texas Grain Dealers' Association.

An extract from this letter is contained in a letter mailed out by the secretary a few days ago to the members of the Association. This extract follows:

In regard to the green bug, both our State and Federal experts have made investigation and the only place where any green bugs were found is amounting to anything was on the farm of Mr. Byron Byer, near Krum, but the Federal expert advised that the parasite was in operation in such abundance he thought they would soon have the green bugs destroyed. The experts have both returned home, but the following letter has just been received from the office of the Secretary of Agriculture at Washington:

"Mr. Pennington's report, substantiated by material, up to December 30, has been received. From the specimens he sends it is clear that most of the so-called green bugs are not that

BURIED CITY OF INCAS UNCOVERED

DISCOVERY OF RUINS OF MOCHU PUCHU REPORTED BY YALE EXPEDITION

CONDITION IS REMARKABLE

Location of Top of Mountain Peak Kept Away From Treasure Hunters

Washington, Jan. 13.—While probably will prove to be the largest and most important ruin discovered in South America since the days of the Spanish conquest—the discovery of the ruins of the city of Machu Picchu, the cradle of the Inca empire on the top of the Peruvian Andes, was brought about by the chance meeting of an expedition under the auspices of the National Geographic Society and Yale University with a Peruvian Indian.

the mountain trail six days out of Cuzco. Prof. Binham says that the Indian, when questioned, said he believed there were signs of ruins on the top of the high and almost inaccessible precipices near by and offered to act as guide. The professor became interested and a few hours later the ruins were discovered.

Not Torn by Hunters. While it is not only larger and contains more ruins than any other ruin discovered in Peru, except Cuzco, Machu Picchu also has the additional advantage of not having been occupied by descendants, which accounts for its not having been torn to pieces by treasure hunters.

"Machu Picchu is essentially a city of refuge. It is perched on a mountain top in the most inaccessible corner of the most inaccessible section of the Humboldt river. So far as I know, there is no part of the Andes that has been better defended by nature. Here on an arrow ridge, flanked on all sides by precipitous slopes, a highly civilized people—artistic, inventive and capable of sustained endeavor of spirit—built in the remote past built themselves a city of refuge. Since they had an iron or steel tool—only stone hammers—its construction must have cost many generations, if not centuries of effort.

"Across the ridge and defending the builders from attack on the side of the main mountain range, they constructed two walls. Within the outer wall they constructed an extensive series of agricultural terraces. Between these and the city is a steep, dry moat and the inner wall. When the members of an attacking force had safely negotiated the precipices and easily defended sides of the moat they still would find themselves outside the inner defenses of the city, which consisted of a wall from fifteen to twenty feet high composed of huge boulders, many of which weighed many tons.

Flowers of the Dark.
After the last high cloud is ashen cold,
The last bright landmark dwindled strange and far,
They bloom across the dusk in broken gold
Beneath the first faint star
Some by the river, some upon the height,
One in a little cleft 'twixt hill and hill—
Luminous, lovely, while the brooding night
Shelters them warm and still.
Homes, blessed homes! here clustered here apart,
On the gray gloom, unfurling, rose by rose;
Each with a crimson hearth fire at its heart
They tenderly unclose,
Till all the land's garden fair and still
And far, a tolling pilgrim, I can mark
One in a little cleft 'twixt hill and hill—
My flower of the Dark!

Dr. Coons' examination convinced him that a physician had not been called to render service at the birth of the child.

VERNON BUSINESS LEAGUE ENCOURAGES TREE PLANTING

Vernon Record
The movement recently inaugurated by the Young Men's Business League to stimulate the planting of trees when they offered to furnish Black Locusts in any quantity at one cent each to those who would agree to plant them along the public highway—roads and streets—has met with instant favor among the people of the town and county and if present signs do not fail, before the planting season is over several thousand trees will have been put out along the streets of Vernon and the roads of Wilbarger county. Among the first orders received and the largest one made to date was that of A. M. Bourland, one of the best known farmers of the county, living east of town, who instructed the secretary to book him for a round 1,000 which he proposes to put along his property on the road between here and Oklaunion.

The commission granted a claim for injury benefit.

RAILROADS TO INSPECT COTTON BEFORE LOADING

At Meeting of General Managers Decision Is Made To Go Back To Previous Ruling

Effective Thursday the Texas railroads will go back to the rule previously in effect and will sign bills of lading for cotton and cotton lint only after same have been compressed and can be inspected before loading onto cars.

This means that the roads will return to the recent ruling, which took from the compresses the power to agents to sign bills of lading and demanding an inspection by the railroad inspectors of all cotton at compress before bills of lading are signed. This decision was reached at a meeting of the general managers of the railroads.

Under the agreement of the restored ruling cotton must be put in condition, compressed, ready to load and inspected by railroad inspectors before bills of lading covering same will be issued.

If You Knew Seal Coffee As Well As I Do You Would Be Enthusiastic Too

PHONES 482, 232 AND 1518 710 NINTH STREET REESE BUILDING

Some people wonder why I talk so much about SEAL COFFEE. Let me tell you. Coffee is one of the staple articles used in practically 95 per cent of the homes in Wichita Falls as well as every city in the United States. Once a grocer gets hold of a real first class blend he is entitled to talk about it because people in general are looking for the best that their money can buy.

Now I have known about SEAL COFFEE for a number of years. I was fortunate enough a few months ago to secure the agency for it in this city, and if you know how many high compliments have been paid to this blend since I have been selling it I am sure that you too would be as enthusiastic as I am.

It takes usually only about one pound to make a whole family want it and nothing else in their coffee cups.

The price is 45c per pound in 1 lb sealed tins, 2 pound sealed tins 80c, 3 pound sealed tins $1.20.

Wichita Falls is the fastest growing city in the United States. It will grow to twenty-five thousand in population in 1916. Do you think you could buy a two hundred dollar lot then within eight blocks of the Court House? No! Such lots will be worth from $500.00 to $10,000. WICHITA COUNTY STUDENT AT UNIVERSITY EMBARRASSED (University of Texas, Texas)

The champion basketball student of the University of Texas has been discovered in the person of a certain Junior who registered for spring 1914, which is a new course in oral reading intended primarily for girls. The bashful one proceeded to the law building for the first time yesterday morning, only to find that he was the sole or singular boy in a class of more than twenty girls, all of whom declared to Shurter their ambition to become prominent members of the teaching profession.

Twenty girls, all of them preparing to be teachers, proved too much for the unfortunate Junior, who registered from Wichita county, so he hastened to Dean Benny and craved the dean's permission to drop the course. His application is under advisement.

WILBARGER POLL TAX PAYMENTS ARE CLIMBING.

Vernon Record)

One week ago there were 295 qualified voters in the county. Today there are 536, representing a gain of more than one hundred per cent in that length of time. The next week is expected to bring in a big crop, but the big rush will come in the last ten days before Feb. 1st, as all receipts issued on and after that date will be worthless so far as voting in this year's elections are concerned. One matter that many are apt to overlook is that of young men, becoming twenty-one years of age since Jan. 1, 1913, securing exemption certificates. These cost nothing but the same law as to limitation applies to them that governs the validity of poll tax receipts. Exemption certificates must be obtained before Feb. 1st. Property taxes are also being paid at a rapid rate. The receipts on these since Jan. 1st have been good.

ABILENE HUSBAND GETS MEALS BY PARCELS POST.

(Abilene Reporter)

In instituting the parcels post service the government entered not only heartily as a competitor with the express companies, with the delivery man in the city, but also with the waiter in the restaurant. In many respects Uncle Sammy has proved an excellent waiter, though by the nature of his delivery the food he delivers is not always warm. At least one Abilene man had Uncle Sam to deliver his meals during the recent holidays, forever putting an excuse to hubby's appeal for wife to remain at home to cook. Is it a fact that the government is assisting by the parcel post the suffragette idea? It appears that way.

This Abilene man's wife went away to spend her holidays with her people. He was left to dine at cafes and restaurants. But in a day or so a package came—and unexpected, too—from his frau. Hastily opening it as the rule of recipients of Christmas presents, he was stared in the face by six different slices of cake, many pieces of pie, a large cut of turkey and dressing and many other things too numerous to mention. In another day another box came. This continued as long as his wife was absent. It became customary for him to appear regularly for the package that always was at the office. So long as the train service was good the food came regularly.

But this fact is not told for the benefit of those who would go on a desert and expect food by parcel post at the lone store. If mail connection should be missed, some hubby might starve to death. But where connection is good, probably this is the best way in the world for hubby to get his meals when his frau is away. A few cents will carry a meal for a great distance. Uncle Sam does the waiter's duty.

Wichita Falls Traction Co.

Slow Train Through Arkansas Has Nothing On Trains In Okla.

My dear _____: I want to tell you that I thought it mighty nice in you to see me off on the train. It spoke plainer than words that you were glad to see me go. You threw some pathos in the parting when you said if we must part, let us part together. And the last thing you said when I stepped on the train was to care for the child. You have heard of a fellow missing a train by an "eye lash" or a few seconds but you knew I missed that train by a half gallon.

But I started to tell you of my itinerary (note the word); going to Tulsa by any railroad is a man's job. It is a severe strain on your nervous system and sometimes strains the erstwhile friendly relations with one's banker. It also will make a heathen out of a Bible class teacher. You know that I got off like a globe trotter, one hour late. The Rock Island was some late also; it was late enough to have the right-of-way at Bowie, a delightful place to wait. It seems very appropriate that the town was named after Bowie died. In its calmness and peacefulness it effects you as a sad occasion. I waited that day a week. I spent most of my time wondering why "Bowie" I had studied the schedule by a guide I had found at the Commercial Hotel on the connections to Tulsa.

Now if ignorance is a calamity I have Vesuvius looking like a false alarm. I had figured it out that I could get four hours sleep at Chickasha, and make Tulsa before the bank closed. I just said that about the bank closing for effect, it really is no difference to me if they are always closed. I found however, in keeping with Bowie, that the railway guide I had been studying was of the periman age (Yanely speaking) in the folds of 1908. But before I had become wise to the age of that guide I decided to stop at the Geronimo Hotel at Chickasha. The C. R. I. S. P. (I just put in that S as it meets the situation better) conductor told me that it was only three blocks from the Frisco depot. The clerk at the Geronimo Hotel did not know that the Frisco was a railroad. He thought that I was talking about a breakfast food and had never heard that a railway guide was built.

I took a chance on someone getting on the job in the hotel that had human intelligence before it was time to call me. The room they gave me was one of the most expensive that I ever slept in. It cost me six-bits an hour, that is, I paid $1.50 for two hours, but they had real nice white enamel bath fixtures and one picture, but a bath this time of the year is undreamed of by you and I. No baths earlier than July.

Just as true as I am telling you, my pants did not get cold while I slept. I simply had to call a carriage as the conductor had wrongly informed me of the distance from the hotel to the Frisco depot, instead of three blocks it was thirteen. More calamity, my carriage was sideswiped by a mule team, the driver was excited and wanted to know if I was injured. O, how beautifully and scientifically he could swear. By this time I had grown desperate and said "so far as you like it is a matter of indifference with me." But honestly, it was with some pride that when a Wichita Falls man collides with a mule team he made the mules fly back like a rubber ball. The Frisco was reported on time and no deaths from the shock. (News item) later it was reported 35 minutes late and the heart beats grew normal. I just wondered how long a merchant would stay in business that would misrepresent things as willfully and seemingly maliciously as a railroad. Yet they claim we are persecuting them, O, pshaw.

When the report came it was late I stepped up to the window; just then the agent picked up the phone and said 5 6 7 ring 6 rural. Great guns, says I to myself, that lousy Frisco has started across the prairie and he is getting his information from the farmers. If it ever comes to a choice whether to take the Frisco or to take poison, don't hesitate, take the poison. After twenty-four hours of patient effort in trying to get away and out of sight of Wichita Falls (it does beat the duce how that town of Wichita Falls grips you), I looked back at the lights of the water tower just receding from sight. Do you know that I felt like St. John on the Isle of Patmos without hydroplane, but things had been revealed to me. We were looking out of the car window and a lady said, "Do they not raise hogs in this country?" I said, "No lady, not in the fields, the hogs are all running the railroads and pipe lines in the State of Oklahoma."

If the Frisco railroad were running in the State in the early days I know why the savage was so savage. Another little spasm and the little white bed in 711 will be groaning under my willowy form. Eating on a diner is an art acquired by long practice. In fact it is a game with the stakes very high and as interesting as Monte Carlo, and fascinating to the gambler. Take for illustration a $2 meal and the chances that you will hit the hole in your face with the precious food is positively exciting on any moving train, but on the Frisco it's an even bet that you will not only miss your own face but you will feed some other face on the other side of the car. I was an experienced diner and took a chance on the Frisco. I knew at the start that my face was dirty and an additional musing up would not hurt it and my head needed a shampoo. Well sir, I had a juggler looking like an also ran, when I noticed a young lady across the aisle who from all appearances was the rankest kind of a novice at the game. She was trying to eat panned oysters. She would take a sight along her fork (one eye closed) and make a stab at the oysters sometimes missing them by a half-car-length. Of course every one would dodge.

I was an interested spectator as well as a profitable one. Our family are noted for their open countenances or for the opening in their countenances and this particular branch of the family had a skye terrier dog backed off the sidewalk in having his mouth ready for anything eatable that was in the air and would you believe it I got or caught four of her six oysters and I being a stranger dared not ask her if she liked them chewed fine or medium. The young ladies cheek called for $1.25 while I only spent two-bits; just another Wichita Falls trait of romping off with what was loose.

They called Tulsa and I am now in the hands of my friends. I sincerely thine. BILL LONG.

STORY OF HOW WALTER DAMATIZED "LONESOME PINE"

Eugene Walter, the playwright, whose fine dramatic conceptions, "The Easted Way" and "Paid in Full" brought him fame and fortune as it were in a night, finds that the dramatization of a novel is as hard or harder than writing an original play. In fact, Mr. Walter admits that the making of a play from a book is not satisfactory to a man of creative and original power, he is restricted in his work which is more a matter of knowing what not to do than of knowing what to do, for that which you know what to do comes natural, being in you and according to Mr. Walter, a sort of instinct that is felt but cannot be defined.

To an intimate friend, Mr. Walter confided the secret of how he came to dramatize John Fox Jr.'s widely read novel, "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine." He took a fancy to the character of June and conceived the great possibilities that lay in the character of this primitive girl. It was a sort of play that he liked and being clean, beautiful and permeated with wholesome sentiment, he felt it was such a play which he could carry to the people of the Southland. So he realized that there was a possibility that Mr. Fox's delightful story could be transferred to the stage.

Mr. Walter, taking his secretary and a couple of copies of Mr. Fox's book, went into the wilderness of the Cumberland Mountains. Here he met the people—the wild mountain folk; he traversed the mountain trails; he fished in the mountain brooks; he was looked upon with suspicion as a government watchdog scenting out illicit stills in spite of all obstacles Walter admits that he found the people delightful and that their real characteristics; their fearless honesty, primitiveness and clanish hate were simply concomitant with the spirit that created the everlasting hills. He realized that alone in the mountains in the primeval forest, in the cabin of the mountaineers and up on the ridge of Lonesome Gap, beneath the lonesome pine he was if the presence at all times of life's most joyous secrets—a faith which these people possess in the good of everything and an abhorrence of everything that is sham.

For six weeks Mr. Walter fished through the mountains by day and at night lay on pine boughs trying to fathom the story of June's love and to secure a dramatic foothold to start his story in which there could be clearly outlined a real motif to carry the action of the play. Nine weeks passed. He was getting impatient letters from New York, brought by the mountain mail carrier, asking how the play was progressing, but he had not started a single line. The letters became monotonous and annoying, but he pursued the even tenor of his way, waiting for that psychological moment which comes to poets and to painters alike after the mind has clearly defined the translation of the intuitive thought, in concrete form. Suddenly one morning while he was dallying over his corn pone and mountain coffee, the long wished for thought came to him and looking over at his dejected secretary who also had been nagging him, he struck the table and said, "Come on, young man, I'm ready for you now, you've had nine weeks of ease which you do not seem to have enjoyed. I will now give you the hours of the hardest work that you ever had."

The secretary set his typewriter machine in the doorway of the tent, while Walter, walking to and fro on a carpet of pine needles began the dictation of the play. For hours he kept up a steady flow of dictation and managed that day to get through the first and second acts and the beginning of the third. The following days he spent revising the dictation, sent it on to New York and started on a second spell of rest and relaxation.

Mr. Walter realized as the play grew upon him that the real cause of the feud was June's love for the engineer, who was classed by the mountaineers in Mr. Fox's story as a "furriner." Walter realized more than anyone else the mountain folk were afraid of the well dressed, smooth tongued people who came from the outside world prying into their affairs and he felt it was only natural that the feudists should attribute a wrong motive to Hale's love for June and the interest he had taken in her having her sent to school to be educated.

So for three weeks longer he slept on his bed of pine boughs by night and reveled in the delights of the mountains by day. He was there to finish a task and finish he intended before he left the environment of the hills. And so for several days the song of the typewriter was all that was heard at the top of Lonesome Cove and the mountain folk who had never seen a "contraphashun" that spelled and wrote words before, looked on in amazement at the perspiring secretary and author, the one hammering on the keys like a virtuoso on a piano, the other spouting out long sentences, then when it was all finished, Mr. Walter permitted the secretary to take the manuscript and the machine on to New York, while he went further into the hills to rest after the task.

"BEN HUR" SUCCESSFUL ON ITS EUROPEAN TOUR.

The big production of "Ben Hur" which Klaw & Erlanger will present at the Wichita Theatre Monday and Tuesday evenings and Tuesday matinee, January 26th and 27th, was planned and built with the idea of surprising English theatre-goers during the run of the elaborate spectacle at the Drury Lane Theatre last year. That the enterprise of the American managers was not in vain was amply shown by receipt records during the engagement, rising beyond anything hitherto known even in this historic playhouse, which has never been rivaled by any other theatre of the English metropolis. In fact the brilliant success of General Wallace's masterpiece in its thrilling dramatic form was the beginning of what the London critics described as "the American invasion."

It was also the cause of a change of attitude towards theatre-products of American ownership, which revolution of feeling has born good fruit for Klaw & Erlanger's musical comedy "The Pink Lady" and the lovely stage portraiture of "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm." The hearty reception of these dissimilar but excellent types of their kind caused William A. Brady to launch in London "Ready Money," a Charles Kiehl's "The Third Degree" under the title of "Find the Woman," Henry W. Savage, "Every Woman" and Selsyn & Co., "Within the Law." None of these plays failed to attract our English cousins and by their robust success faced a long standing prejudice against American amusements between the critics and producing managers of the two countries with the gratifying result that many of the London theatres are now occupied and have profited by American plays stamped with home approval.

"Ben Hur" appears to have been the pioneer in many things for the welfare of the stage. It demonstrated the fact that the general public is not averse to a spectacle of religious tone, which is to the everlasting credit of much abused human nature. While "Ben Hur" has thrilling mechanical features of novelty like the chariot race and the conflict of the galleys, its real power of appeal to the public at large is the delicate and stirring treatment of its religious theme. It was natural that General Wallace in the beginning should have grave doubts about the practicability of presenting to the public a play with the Messiah as its moving spirit and not offend the tender sensibilities of the sincerely religious and it is a fine achievement on the part of its managers, Klaw &

Erlanger, that presents to us this inspiring work without blurring card or implous suggestion. The good people of the world, whether in England or America, are still in the majority and the successful dramatization of "Ben Hur" proves that they will attend the theatre when the cause is distinctively worthy.

GERMAN OFFICER OPPOSES DUELS

RESIGNS HIS COMMISSION BECAUSE OF OBJECTION TO ANCIENT CUSTOM

FINDING CURE FOR CANCER

Marked Success Reported in Recent Experiments at Munich—Other News of Germany

By Associated Press.

Berlin, Jan. 12.—The case of Lieutenant von Brandenstein of the Second Guard Regiment, who resigned his commission because he was opposed to the principle of duelling, has brought assurance from the Minister of War that hereafter religious scruples will receive "full consideration" by military courts of honor in matters at issue between brother officers.

A bill against duelling is now before a special Reichstag committee, to which a representative of the War Department has made the following report on the unusual case of von Brandenstein:

"The officer has long been a member of a religious organization which takes the word of the Bible as its guide in all matters, even those affecting the daily life. By reason of his membership von Brandenstein's position in the army was peculiar. One day he declared in the presence of his comrades that, in consonance with the principles of his organization, he could under no circumstances issue or accept a challenge to a duel, because that would violate the sixth commandment. The matter came to the knowledge of the commanding officer, who asked von Brandenstein whether the report was true. Von Brandenstein repeated his assertion.

"The commander called the lieutenant's attention to the fact that he bore a sword, commanded men and, in certain conditions, would be obliged to make use of his weapon without waiting the order of his superior officer and without time to decide whether the employment of force was in accord with biblical law. Such conduct would betray a lack of decision, and even a short-hesitation might be full of consequences in war. No one with such views could remain an officer.

"The officer at first decided to present his resignation. Later he considered and asked that a court of honor pass upon the case. This request was denied, as no attack had been made on his honor. Thereupon he left the army.

Fined for Funeral Talk.
For a layman to make an address at the grave of a friend in Prussia without the permission of the police is a punishable offense, according to the decision of a court of appeals just rendered at Cologne. A Privy Commercial Councillor, Heidemann, a manufacturer, had died and his friend, Commercial Councillor Hagen, made some remarks at the funeral without having taken the precaution to get the consent of the police. Before the lowest court Hagen was acquitted, but the prosecuting attorney declared that the case was "one of fundamental importance," and carried it to the Court of Appeals, which fined Hagen two cents.

Successful Cancer Cures.
Such "astounding improvement" in cases of cancer treated with mesothorium has been reported to the Bavarian Gynecological Society at Munich that a petition setting forth the necessity for state aid in securing a sufficient supply of mesothorium for general use in cancer treatment has been signed by all the sixty-eight persons present at the last meeting. The signers included many of the most prominent university instructors and gynecologists of Bavaria.

Professor Doderlein presented twenty-four women, all of whom have been receiving this treatment. In the case of each one the cancerous cells had completely disappeared. He reported also the case of one woman who was so near death that it was with great misgiving that she was brought to Munich from Nuremberg. She returned some months later apparently completely ly cured. Whether cancer will return in any of these cases cannot yet be told—the time of treatment and observation has been too short—but so far as the physicians can judge from examination, the cures are complete.

Activity in Arms Trade.
A report of the leading German small arms company shows unusual activity just now in the production of military rifles and machine guns. In October, 1912, the company had only 946 men employed making rifles, but in October, 1913, there were 3,450, and the number of employees in the machine-gun department had increased from 104 to 480. Some of the activity is undoubtedly due to orders received from Mexico, some of it is facetiously attributed to the formation of the U.S. army under Sir Edward Carson, but the increase is probably very largely due to the manufacture of arms for the thousands of extra soldiers to be added to the German army under the recent legislation.

To Climb African Peaks.
German alpinists, who swarmed in Switzerland and the Tyrol every summer, and soon the services of professional guides even for such summits as the Matterhorn, Mont Blanc and the Jungfrau, are now seeking adventure farther afield. The Hanover section of the German Alpine Club has appropriated $2,000 to build a hut on Mount Kilimanjaro, the highest peak of the African continent. Kilimanjaro is located on the northeastern boundary of German East Africa and overlooks Mont Blanc by some 4,000 feet. The mountain consists of two peaks, the highest of which has an altitude of 19,710 feet. Although in the equatorial region, it has a mass of perpetual snow and gives rise to a number of large glaciers.

Germany's Population.
Germany will have eighty million inhabitants in 1930, twice its population when the empire was founded in 1871, according to an estimate based on the vital statistics for the empire for 1912. The non-Prussian states have come to the rescue with 2,000 more births than in 1911, offsetting the decrease of 3,042 in births in Prussia, on which such gloomy assumptions of Germany's stagnation in population were based when the Prussian statistics were published a few weeks ago.

The number of deaths in 1912 was the smallest ever recorded and the number of marriages the greater, so the statistics on the whole make a most satisfactory showing. The decline in the birth rate continues, but the decrease is the smallest registered in years. The rate was 29.1 births to every thousand inhabitants, as compared with 29.5 in 1911, 30.7 in 1910 and 32 in 1909.

The population of the empire was increased by 839,887 through the excess of births over deaths, the surplus being almost 100,000 greater than in 1911.

TO START NEW WELL IN VICINITY OF FREDERICK

(Frederick Leader)
The Frederick Oil Producing Company has closed a deal whereby it has sold to an eastern oil producing company 6,000 acres of oil leases, northwest of Frederick, in the neighborhood of the Burt's Switch oil well. The company is bound by the terms of the sale contract to begin the sinking of an oil well on one of the leases within 60 days, but is expected to begin much earlier than that. In fact, it is expected that operations will begin within a very short time. The Frederick men who disposed of the leases were not ready to disclose the name of the purchasing company Wednesday, but it was announced that it was one of the largest producers in the eastern Oklahoma and Texas fields.

This purchase is a most hopeful sign, indicating that practical and successful oil men have faith in the existence of oil near Frederick and the result of the company's operations will be eagerly awaited.
