FREERPORT INQUEST IS RESUMED TODAY

UNOPENED BOX OF CARTRIDGES IS FOUND IN DR. CARMAN'S HOME

SHOT FIRED AT HIS DOUBLE

Man Who Resembles Physician Is Attacked—Negro Servant Girl Testifies Today

By Associated Press. Freerport, N. Y., July 6.—The inquest into the death of Mrs. Louise Bailey, wife of a New York manufacturer who was shot and killed last Tuesday night while consulting with Dr. Edwin Carman, a prominent Freerport physician in his office, was resumed here today.

Assistant District Attorney Weeks exhibited an unopened box of 38-calibre revolver cartridges which he said he had found in the attic of the Carman home. Dr. Carman told him, said Weeks, that he did not know how the cartridges came there. A 38-calibre bullet killed Mrs. Bailey. W. J. Huff Jr., of Lynnbrook, near here who strongly resembles Dr. Carman and who drives an automobile of the same type, reported to the Freerport police that early this morning while driving his machine not far from where Dr. Carman was fired upon last night, that a man standing beside the road fired one shot at him.

Negro Maid is Witness. At the inquest today, the first witness called was Ceilia Coleman, a negro maid in the Carman home. She said Mrs. Carman complained of having a headache and said that she was going upstairs. The witness saw her leave the dining room and later heard footsteps which she believed were those of Mrs. Carman on the stairs. She admitted having talked with George Levy, Mrs. Carman's attorney the morning after the murder. She insisted that no one else was present at the conference.

"Do you know what perjury means?" asked the district attorney. The witness answered that she did. The attorney then asked if she had not told him previously that Mrs. Carman was present. The witness said she did not remember.

Attack on Dr. Carman. Last night Dr. Carman was shot three times as he sat in his automobile through the town of Baldwin, near here. None of the bullets struck him. The doctor was on his way home from Rockville Center, where he had been to attend a patient.

Dr. Carman told the police the story of the attack on him. He had been out making professional calls and passed through Rockville Center on his way home. Here he met Garland Gaden, an actor and invited him to ride home with him.

"Gaden accepted my invitation," said Dr. Carman, "and got into the car. We stopped at a store and as we again got into the car I noticed a man on a bicycle near the curb. We drove off without paying particular attention to the man.

"When about a mile and a half out of town I heard a report and thought one of my tires had exploded. My friend got out on one side of the machine and I got out on the other. As soon as I put my foot on the ground I heard another shot and when I looked around I saw the man I had been when we came out of the store standing beside his bicycle with a revolver in his hand. Gaden shouted, 'My God, Carman, he's trying to kill you.'

"We both jumped into the car, there was another report and a bullet went singing by my head. Gaden and I leaped far over in our seats to be out of range of the bullets, and I opened the throttle as far as it would go."

WHO SHOT RICH MRS. BAILEY TO DEATH IN DOCTOR'S OFFICE? WHY WAS HIS WIFE SO JEALOUS SHE USED A DICTOGRAPH?

Freeport, N. Y., July 6.—Who killed Mrs. William D. Bailey? Why was Mrs. Edwin Carman jealous of her husband, Dr. Carman in whose consulting room Mrs. Bailey was shot to death? These questions are awaiting answers in the murder mystery which has startled this quiet little Long Island town. Mrs. Bailey was apparently shot to death by a revolver aimed through the window of the doctor's office early in the evening after she left her handsome home at Hempstead to consult him about her health unknown to her husband. Dr. Carman said Mrs. Bailey was an utter stranger to him. He claimed he thought the bullet was meant for him but he escaped it, he said, because he ducked in time. Mrs. Carman admitted that she was jealous of her husband and had installed a dictograph in his office, so that she could listen to what was happening when he had women patients.

By Associated Press. St. Paul, Minn., July 6.—Given a cultivated trained teacher of sound mind and body, who goes to work at peace with God and man, the school will be the best place in the world for the growth of the child in practical religiousness and American citizenship. This assertion was made today by Joseph Swain, president of the National Educational Association at the first general session of the association's annual convention here. His session was devoted principally to a discussion of the teacher's relation to American citizenship. A telegram from President Wilson expressing regret that public duties made it impossible for him to attend the meeting, was read at the general session. The message said in part: "Thoughtful people all over the country follow the deliberations of the National Educational Association with great interest. The problem of education are really problems affecting national development and national ideas. I think that no one long associated with the profession of teaching can have failed to catch the inspiration of it or to see how great a power may be exercised through the class room in directing the thinking and the ambition of the generation coming on or can have failed to realize that nothing less than a conservation of the national life is necessary for a teacher for the great mass of preparation and adaptation for the future that education attempts."

HEAVY GRAIN SHIPMENTS KEEPING RAILROADS BUSY

Wet Weather Diminishes Wagon Receipts Giving Lines a Chance To Catch Up

The jump of a cent and an eighth in the price of wheat in Chicago at the close of the market today came too late to affect the price here today which remained at seventy-two cents but it is expected that the local price will be raised a cent a bushel tomorrow.

The rains last week and muddy roads checked the flow of grain to the shipping points and receipts fell off the latter part of the week. This has given the railroads time to get caught up in a measure in the movement of the grain, but even with this respite the yards here today were filled with grain cars. Three switching crews are working almost day and night in the local yards. If fair weather continues the latter part of the week will see the wheat movement at its height and the railroads will be hard put to it to avoid a blockade here.

So far the railroads have been able to furnish all the cars needed without much difficulty but the supply is now beginning to get short and the cars are not being unloaded and sent back from Galveston as fast as they are sent out.

The movement of the Kansas crop will begin this week and this will require many thousands of cars.

Neke's CAPUDINE Headache QUICK RESULTS TEST IT

JACK WAS SO TAME

By ELIZABETH OGILVIE

"Here's the very thing I am looking for. Ed: 'Lonely gentlemen' living in the city; forty years old; no bad habits; dark hair and eyes; good business man; wants to correspond with lady; blonde preferred; must be pretty; object, friendship and affection; will exchange photographs. Address, P. O. Box 1234, Chicago, Ill. I am going to answer this. Ed: 'The going to be the pretty blonde lady.'"

"You will never do it, Mollie; it would be scandalous. You, a married woman, too."

"I don't care if I am; I can't stay cooped up here all summer without having a little fun. I have been here a whole month now, and haven't had one letter."

"Yes, Mollie, but this is too dangerous to be funny. If Jack ever hears of it, he will be angry enough to divorce you, and I wouldn't blame him if he did. You know he has a temper."

"Pooh! Jack is a lamb; I am not a bit afraid of Jack. He is so tame that like a pussy kitten he will let me know if I have done anything wrong. I know he would be shocked and such a thing would never enter his dear, old head, but I am going to do it anyway."

"I'll sigh. Well, Mollie, remember I do not approve of this thing at all. Whose picture will you send? Not your own, of course."

"I can get one anywhere. I mean one of a beautiful young girl. That's in your room, the one Amy Brown gave you will do, don't you have it?"

"Yes, I suppose, but I do wish you would give up this crazy scheme, Mollie."

Sober, staid, quiet Jack Bates, finding it impossible to leave his business in the city, had sent his young and pretty wife out to her sister, who lived alone in a quiet little village.

Mollie snatched this opportunity of the unknown B. L. K. and anxiously awaited results, which came in a few days in the shape of an answer.

The correspondence progressed rapidly. He praised her eyes, hinted that he would be soon working living with her by his side, and urged her to meet him in the city soon.

Mollie Bates, daring of spirit, long adventure more than anything else in the world, promised to meet him sometime, but did not name a date.

His letters were warm, tender, loving. He had advanced so far as to call her pet names.

Mollie had had more amusement than she ever imagined possible in that quiet, out-of-the-way place.

"I do wish Jack wouldn't write me letters on a typewriter; it always seems like a business letter. There's no sentiment in this kind of a letter. It's been so long since I have seen his writing, I would never recognize Mollie's."

You ought to be thankful to see any kind of a letter from him; it should think your transience would give you no peace," answered Ed, the neighbor.

Mollie decided to have one last and then go home. After much thinking as to time and place, she agreed to meet the unknown B. L. K. at the Alameda cafe at 11. She scribbled a note into the city on the afternoon, she handed with him and then to her and tell Ed what a jolly time she had had.

Her car was a few minutes late. "Will he be waiting," she wondered. "Really, this is equal to a schoolgirl's romance; and dear, old Jack would be shocked at me or any other woman doing such a dreadful thing." She hastened to the meeting place. All the way to the city she had been trying to picture what he would look like and what he would say. He was to wear a white carnation on the right lapel of his coat, and she had agreed to wear a pink one on her left shoulder. How ridiculous it all seemed, and what an adventure it was, too.

MEASURING WORTH OF ONE'S ACTIVITIES

THIS IS SUBJECT OF SERMON AT FIRST M. E. CHURCH SUNDAY

WILL BE JUDGED BY RESULTS

"Is it Worth While?" Advocated as Best Test of One's Plans and Labors

"The church that serves best will survive longest," said Rev. C. C. Smith, pastor of the First M. E. Church last night in concluding a sermon on "Things Worth While." He said that the results of one cause, whether in business, social or religious activity, were a safe test of its worth. His text was from Colossians 3:23, "Whatever you do, work heartily as unto the Lord and not unto man. He said:

"In considering this subject no attempt will be made to catalog every thing in life's varied experiences that might be considered worth while. This would be an impossible task because of its vast proportions and because no man has the wisdom nor the energy to attempt such a task. Doubtless every serious minded person has some time in his life wished that Infinite Wisdom had made a catalog of all possible phases of conduct and set over against the chart from which they may choose in order that they may choose properly in all their judgments. But a moment's reflection will convince us that such a scheme would be weakening to the human mind. It is better to let us choose from the possibilities within him there is always hope. For such an individual character were miss, he could obtain a certificate of merit, which he will uphold all his conduct."

"Among other possible standards this certainly must be applied. Is it worth while? We may call it the 'worth while' standard. This implies several things. '1. What is my motive in undertaking this thing? 2. What results may I reasonably expect from my effort? 3. Will the result justify the effort? This might also be called the 'business test.' A sense of business may will make a man do things that 'What will I get out of it? Will my profits pay me for the effort? And unless he can balance the results over against the work he will not attempt the enterprise. What a difference it would make in life if all men were people who would apply this common sense principle to all conduct."

"The weakness of modern life is its lack of thoughtfulness. If we could challenge the average person regarding daily conduct and demand to know the motive for his acts, very few would be able to give definite answers. We follow in the ruts and are not conscious of any definite expectation from our effort. We do things as others have done them before and take what comes. Such ought not to be the case with mature persons. We should have a well defined motive looking to a certain outcome. Let our social life serve to illustrate. It seems obvious that our Creator designed us to gather certain enjoyment from association with others. It is plain that we need this and are not conscious of any definite quality of character. Observing this principle however, many jump to the conclusion that social life of whatever sort is necessarily beneficial. We must submit social life to our worth while test. In this particular phase of my social life worth while? What may I reasonably expect to derive from it? Will what I get out of it justify the effort?"

"Multitudes of men and women throughout our land are expending every ounce of their energy on social life and if this expenditure of time and energy were unqualifiedly good we would expect great development of character in these people. But what is the result? Their lives are a perfect round of strenuous entertaining and when the bloom and freshness of physical beauty fades they are left with a mass of wrinkles and a cast of shell by the seashore. What is wrong? The principle of social life is not wrong, but these people are abusing the principle and waste their valuable time. What they do is not worth while. It is void of intellectual and spiritual stimulus and leaves no effect except upon depleted bodies that finally break under the strain. There is plenty to do that is worth while but the drift of modern so called, 'higher social life' is not in that direction. Sometimes mere 'fun' is worth while as relaxation but too much relaxation is excess. Whatever is our social life ministers to the development of the soul within and in free from will be worth while. We need to rub off the rough places by contact with each other. That which improves mind, body or soul is worth while, provided it does not include upon that which would do still more for us. Of the possible goods we must choose the best."

"The business man can not measure his returns in dollars only. He has a return of character and in the worth while test must take that into consideration also. A certain method of money getting may enable him to become wealthy but what is that method doing for the man in the meantime? If in the end the man has deteriorated we must pronounce his business a failure no matter what wealth he may have accumulated. So in all our activities we must inquire whether the results to be obtained will justify the effort and the results will need to be measured in all their breadth in order to decide."

"The activities of religious organizations must be measured by this same rule also. What is the motive for our religious activities? It must be conceded that sometimes our religious motives are not high. Sometimes our demonstration works very strenuously with little more in view than to build up a larger congregation than a neighboring church. Sometimes a pastor is more concerned with the building up of his reputation than he is with building up his church. A pastor and a church may well afford to work earnestly if their motive is to be helpful to others, but if it is a selfish motive the church can hardly prosper under it. Inevitable rivalries may arise but when they arise they injure our worth while test will eliminate them. What results do we

SAVES DAUGHTER

Advice of Mother on Debt Prevents Daughter's Utterly End.

Ready, Ky.—"I was not able to do anything for nearly six months," writes Mrs. Laura Reicher, of this place, "and was down in bed for three months. I cannot tell you how I suffered with my back, but it was so excruciating and agonizingly troubling. Our family doctor told my husband he could not do me any good, and he had to give it up. We tried another doctor, but he did not help me. At last, my mother advised me to take Cardui, but I was nearly dead and nothing seemed to do me any good. But I took several boxes, and now I am able to do all of my work and my own washing. I think Cardui is the best medicine in the world. My weight has increased, and I look the picture of health. If you suffer from any of the ailments peculiar to women, get a bottle of Cardui. Delay is dangerous. We know it will help you, for it has helped so many thousands of other weak women in the past 50 years. At all drug stores. Write to: Chemist, Medicine Co., Ladies' Health Dept., Chicago, Ill., for full particulars. Send 10c for sample. No. 112.

The "Red Wing" Grape Juice Bottle is a New Idea

The old style of cork in grape juice bottles was a nuisance. It frequently meant a soiled suit, tie or collar, sometimes a broken bottle or a cut hand, frequently the cork went into the bottle. No matter how good the grape juice was it was hard to get at it.

In the new "RED WING" brand you can take the cork off with your finger. You will not need a cork puller. You will not cut yourself. You will not spill any of the juice.

It's a very unique, air-tight cork. It won't come off of itself but you can easily take it off. I have it in three size bottles, 25c, 50c and 90c.

HIS LONG "PULL"

STO. 3A — 2439

By H. N. ROBERT.

Nobody knew why Hawkins, the factory clerk, was a permanent with the Copperplate & Tin company, but it was vaguely surmised that he had some sort of a "pull" there. Hawkins was an unlettered man; it was said that he had been the inventor of the copperplate process, and that old Green, the millionaire bachelor who owned the factory and spent his life abroad, had jockeyed him out of it and given him a life job at a hundred a month in partial amends. But Green had not been in the factory for years. The work had automatically continued under the charge of the experienced men who operated them, and Green was satisfied to draw his hundred thousand annual profits and leave the operations alone.

The only change made within the past seven years had been the arrival of the new superintendent, Blair, and the factory which he filled had been caused by the death of his predecessor. Times were comparatively hard, and old Hawkins was certainly valuable to the firm. Blair spoke to Adkins, his assistant.

"What sort of a pull has that old dunder?" he asked. "What's this I hear about his being a friend of Mr. Green?" "I have had no instructions about him," Blair said. "Why—he's a sort of fixture," said Adkins. "A friend of the old man's once, I believe. Everybody knows that he's not to be fired."

"Well, I'm going to call that bluff," said Blair. "Out he goes at the end of the month. Besides, even if the bluff's true, I guess Mr. Green has forgotten him, and by the last reports he isn't worth enough to keep. Poor old chap, they say he can't live more than a few months."

This referred to Green, not to Hawkins. Hawkins was fifty, and hale and hearty, one of those lean men who wither up rather than die, and then not till they are advanced in years. Nobody ever spoke to Hawkins, because his "groove" was a permanent one. At least, he did have one friend—little Miss Smith, in the bookkeeping department; but by a mutual arrangement they never addressed each other in office hours. Nobody knew that for nearly ten years Hawkins had taken Miss Smith for a walk in the park every Sunday afternoon, supping with her at a cheap restaurant afterward, and bidding her good-by at the door of her fat. Miss Smith was thirty-seven and prim. She would have died with shame had anybody known that she had a "gentle-maid friend."

Hawkins had never said a word to Miss Smith about the terms of his engagement. That was part of the contract between himself and Green. "Me boy," said the genial old crowd, when Hawkins was thirty-two and was planning to fight Green for the patent rights, "me boy, don't be a dema' fool. Come in with me. I'll meet a hundred a month for you for life, and I'll raise ya."

And Hawkins, desperately poor, was forced to yield. If only Hawkins were head of the factory! He would show them how it should be run. He knew every process in every department; he had, indeed, made a study of it with a view to some day starting a rival concern with his new patent. But the years rolled by, other inventions had taken the wind out of his sail, and Hawkins was fifty.

"I'd show them a thing or two," he told Miss Smith, only the preceding Sunday. "I wouldn't spend my life abroad with this fine property running down."

"What would you do, Mr. Hawkins?" inquired Miss Smith. "She was deeply interested in Hawkins' schemes. "First thing I'd fire Blair and Adkins," answered Hawkins. "And then I'd—" be found a letter waiting for him which he read with amazement. Then he staggered by the door to his bedroom in the cheap boarding-house, which he had occupied for years. He spent that night in sleepless planning. But in the morning he was as cool as ever.

That morning there was a curious expectancy about the office. Hawkins, absorbed in his routine routine work, did not heed the remark that passed until one of the factory men touched him on the arm.

"Well?" started Hawkins, opening round on his stool. "You haven't heard the news, have you, Mr. Hawkins?" "What news?" demanded Hawkins. "Why, old man Green's died in Paris, that's all, except that we're all expecting to lose our jobs," answered the man.

Hawkins stared at him and then went on with his work. For the first time in years Miss Smith addressed him as he was passing through the business office on his way to lunch.

"O, Mr. Hawkins, isn't it terrible!" she said. "Mr. Green is dead and—"

"I'm afraid I'm going to lose my position," she said. "The poor little woman was all in a flutter. It was well known that she wanted to reduce the superfluous staff; he was a man without pity, and the other members would be the first to go."

"Miss Smith!" called out an office boy. "Mr. Blair wants to see you." "Little Miss Smith hurried into the superintendent's office, and when she waited outside her door. Everybody knew the meaning of the summons. When she came back she was wiping her eyes.

"Good-by, Mr. Hawkins," she said, extending her hand. "You know what has happened. I—"

"Wait a minute, Miss Smith," said Hawkins. "I want you to hand me a letter from Mr. Green." "There was something on my mind in his tone that Miss Smith forgot to be alarmed. She glanced round nervously. Nobody had overheard.

"All right," she whispered, and gathering up her things slipped out of the building. Hawkins was waiting. "Mr. Hawkins," called the boy automatically. "Hawkins went over to Blair's desk. "Mr. Hawkins," said Blair, "I may as well come to the point without any preliminaries. You have probably heard that Mr. Green has died in Paris. We do not know who the heir will be, but meanwhile it is up to us to curtail a lot of unnecessary expenditures, chiefly in the matter of help to watch the books. I suggest you firm. There are half, and the assistant members of the force must go. You can get your salary for the month at the cashier's desk."

Hawkins stood smiling at Blair. The heir of his triumph had come. "I see nothing to laugh at," Mr. Hawkins, said the superintendent angrily. "Thought you had some sort of pull, didn't you?" "I did see a letter from Mr. Green, putting a letter out of his pocket. "And that?"

Blair snatched up the letter and began reading impatiently. He read, however, the expression of his face changed, first to alarm and then to terror. "My dear Hawkins," he read, "I am writing this on my sick bed, and it is the last letter that I expect to write in this life. I have just signed an I stole your copperplate process from you. I had no claim whatsoever, but you had asked me to capitulate your invention, and I seeing its commercial value, promptly patented it in your name. You 'Greatest' a lawsuit. I offered you a life position of one hundred dollars a month as a compromise. I would have given you five hundred and signed a contract, but when you accepted the offer as it was made I took you at your word. Now, that I am dying, I wish to ask your forgiveness, and to make the restitution complete, let me say that I am making you my sole heir in the matter of the company, my will having been drawn to that effect, according to my copy, which I am now sending you. I am now sending you."

"Well, Mr. Blair, have you anything to add to your statement?" inquired old Hawkins blandly. "Well, Mr. Hawkins," Blair began, looking to his assistant for support. "Of course, this alters the circumstances considerably. It is rather for you to say what you are going to do with the company."

"And with my assistant, naturally. I tell you what I am going to do," said Hawkins quietly. "I am going to ask you to follow a certain plan—to continue to hold your office on the following conditions: A twenty per cent increase in salary for every member of this firm, including yourself, down to the office boys. This comes first. Second, there will be an increase, now or in future, without application to me, during the summer. Third, you will send my monthly check of income after the bill is proved to my Paris address."

"You are going to live in Paris?" inquired Blair with a sudden smile. "Why not?" demanded Hawkins. "Well, you see, of course that would simplify matters a good deal so far as we are concerned, but—"

"O, it won't be permanent," said Hawkins. "In fact, I'm just going over for a month, with—"

BUSINESS MEN OF COUNTRY VOTE ON LAWS BY MAIL

Washington, July 5.—Bullets began to pour in today at the headquarters of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States by the national vote on the proposed regulation of "business practices" in the administration antitrust bills. The vote will define the attitude of the business men of the country towards the details of the bills, which was the official announcement of the Chamber of Commerce.

That it is largely a "paper" organization, and is not really representative of business interests has frequently been charged against the organization. The results of the referendum, which are expected to be unfavorable to federal regulation of business practices will be announced within a fortnight.

AT LOCAL PLAYHOUSES

The Majestic. "Little" Mary Pickford plays the part of Tess in "Tess of the Storm Country" in a way that will not fail to please the most critical and in a way that will increase the love and admiration with which she is viewed by moving picture audiences. She has even surpassed her former efforts and to those who saw her in "Hearts Adrift" that means much. "Tess of the Storm Country" will be shown here today only.

The Victoria. "The Million Dollar Mystery" is begun today. Each installment will be shown in two parts and one a week will be shown for twenty-three consecutive weeks. Today's program is completed by a two part Broncho, "Freed of the North," a synopsis of which is as follows.

Billy Gordon and Pierre Deschamps both aspire to marry the same girl, Joan Froulard. Gordon wins out and Deschamps, in a jealous rage, slanders the girl in the community. His evil tales reach Gordon's ears. He compels "Frenchy" to apologize to Joan and to the settlers and then drives him from the town. Several years pass. Gordon and his wife, Joan, are living in a lumbering town further north. Deschamps happens to come there to work in the camp. He gets into a quarrel with his foreman whom he kills and makes his escape. The lumbermen start to track the murderer and Gordon joins them. Unconscious of the identity of the man they are seeking. Meanwhile, Deschamps has applied to Gordon's cottage for shelter. Joan fails to recognize him with the heavy growth of beard he now wears. Supporting him to be an honest lumberman worn out with travel, she welcomes him in. That night Deschamps cuts off his beard and goes into Joan's room. A fierce struggle ensues in which Joan loses consciousness. Deschamps carries her off to a high cliff and is on the point of flinging her over into the rocks below when Gordon leaps out of the ticket. The next instant Joan is in her husband's arms and Deschamps is lying senseless under the precipice.

The Lamar Air dome. After two weeks of stock the Air dome has a variety program of motion pictures and high class vaudeville. Gilbert and Brannick head the bill with a singing, talking and playing act including interesting violin numbers. Charles Mars, makes a welcome addition to the show and the pictures for today are "The Sheep Herder" and "A Mexican Warrior."

"Tricked By a Vampire," a three reel story of love, hate and political intrigue is on the program, also the current number of the Pathe Weekly. Among the events pictured in this weekly are the funeral services for the members of the Empress of Ireland crew that perished when that ship sank. These services were held at Quebec. President Wilson also takes part in the commencement exercises of the United States Naval Academy. The latest Paris fashions are reviewed and a comic supplement finishes the film.

JACK WAS SO TAME

By ELIZABETH OGILVIE.

"Here's the very thing I am looking for, Lil: 'Lonely gentleman living in the city; forty years old; no hair and eyes, good business man; wants to correspond with lady, blonde preferred; must be pretty, object, friendship and affection; will exchange photographs. Address, B. L. K., Tribune Office.' I am going to answer this, Lil; I'm going to be the pretty blonde lady."

"You will never do it, Mollie; it would be scandalous. You, a married woman, too."

"I don't care if I am; I can't stay cooped up here all summer without having a little fun. I have been here a whole month now, and haven't had one adventure."

"Yes, Mollie, but this is too dangerous to be funny. If Jack ever hears of it, he will be angry enough to divorce you, and I wouldn't blame him if he did. You know he has a temper."

"Pooh! Jack is a lamb; I am not a bit afraid of Jack; he is so tame; just like a canary bird fed on lump sugar. I know he would be shocked and such a thing would never enter his dear, old head, but I am going to do it anyway."

Lil sighed: "Well, Mollie, remember I do not approve of this thing at all. Whose picture will you send? Not your own, of course."

"I can get one somewhere. I want one of a beautiful young girl that one in your room, the one Amy Brown gave you will do; can I have it?"

"Yes, I suppose, but I do wish you would give up this crazy scheme, Mollie."

Sober, staid, quiet Jack Bates, finding it impossible to leave his business in the city had sent his young and pretty wife out to her sister, who lived alone in a quiet little village.

Mollie answered the advertisement of the unknown B. L. K. and anxiously awaited results, which came in a few days in the shape of an answer. The correspondence progressed rapidly. He praised her eyes, blazed that life would be more worth living with her by his side, and urged her to meet him in the city soon.

Mollie Bates, daring of spirit, loving adventure more than anything else in the world, promised to meet him sometime, but did not name a date.

His letters were warm, tender, loving. He had advanced so far as to call her pet names.

Mollie had had more amusement than she ever imagined possible in that quiet, out-of-the-way place.

"I do wish Jack wouldn't write me letters on a typewriter; it always seems like a business letter. There's no sentiment in this kind of a letter. It's been so long since I have seen his writing, I would never recognize it, I know."

"You ought to be thankful to get any kind of a letter from him. I should think your conscience would give you no peace," answered Lil, the righteous.

Mollie decided to have one lark and then go home. After much thinking as to time and place, she agreed to meet the unknown B. L. K. at the Allendale cafe at 11. She decided to go into the city on the interurban, take lunch with him and then go back and tell Lil what a jolly time she had had.

Her car was a few minutes late. "Will he be waiting," she wondered. "Really, this is equal to a schoolgirl romance, and dear, old Jack would be shocked at me or any other woman doing such a dreadful thing." She hastened to the trying place. All the way to the city she had been trying to picture what he would look like and what he would say. He was to wear a white carnation on the right lapel of his coat, and she had agreed to wear a pink one on her left shoulder. How ridiculous it all seemed, and what an adventure it was, too.

She walked with her head up and a firm step; only a moment now and she would reach the cafe door. She adjusted her veil, put one hand back to the meeting place of waist and skirt, gave a hitch here, a pull there, drew a deep breath, opened the door and walked into the room.

"Why, hello, Mollie, what has brought you to the city today?" anxiously asked Jack, looking steadily at the pink carnation on her shoulder. "I came—I came to see you, Jack," stammered Mollie, blushing a rosy red.

She was only sure of one thing; safely pinned to the right lapel of Jack's coat—dead, dignified, sedate, charming Jack—was a white carnation. (Copyright, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

MEASURING WORTH OF ONE'S ACTIVITIES

THIS IS SUBJECT OF SERMON AT FIRST M. E. CHURCH SUNDAY

WILL BE JUDGED BY RESULTS

"Is It Worth While" Advocated As Best Test of One's Plans and Labors

"The church that serves best will survive longest," said Rev. C. C. Smith, pastor of the First M. E. Church last night in concluding a sermon on "Things Worth While." He said that the results of one cause, whether in business, social or religious activities, were a safe test of its worth. His text was from Colossians 2:23, "Whatever ye do, work heartily as unto the Lord and not unto man. He said:

"In considering this subject no attempt will be made to catalog everything in life's varied experiences that might be considered 'worth while.' This would be an impossible task because of its giant proportions and because no man has the wisdom nor the range of experience to attempt such a task. Doubtless every serious minded person has some time in his life wished that infinite wisdom had made a catalog of all possible phases of conduct and set over against the things worth while those that are injurious and thus enable us to be positive in all our judgments. But a moment's reflection will convince us that such a scheme would be weakening to personality and would soon reduce man to the plane of the insect with little powers of discrimination above instinct. There is a better way for us than that and our highest good is attained by our exercising ourselves in the matters of choice. But in order that we may choose properly it is necessary that we have some fixed standards of judgment. We must have decided upon some determining principles. In the commercial world we have material standards according to which we measure everything. The yard stick is adequate for measuring calico and the bushel for grain and the pound for other articles. There is no commercial measuring apart from these and similar terms. So in life there are standards of measurements which we must apply to every phase of conduct. It is to be assumed that we desire to amount to something. There is no need to talk to the person who has no ambition to amount to something, but for the individual who desires to mature the possibilities within him there is always hope. For such an individual therefore there must be fixed certain standards of measurement to which he will subject all his conduct.

"Among other possible standards this certainly must be applied. 'Is it worth while?' we may call it the worth while standard. This implies several things. 1. What is my motive in undertaking this thing? 2. What results may I reasonably expect from my effort? 3. Will the result justify the effort? This might also be called the business test. A sane business man will ask, 'Why am I doing this?' 'What will I get out of it?' 'Will my profits pay me for the effort?' And unless he can balance the results over against the work he will not attempt the enterprise. What a difference it would make in life if all well meaning people would apply this common sense principle to all conduct.

"The weakness of modern life is this lack of thoughtfulness. If we should challenge the average person regarding daily conduct and demand to know the motive for his acts very few would be able to give definite motive. We follow in the fads and are creatures of circumstance largely and are not conscious of any definite purpose designed for our effort. We do things as others have done them before and take what comes. Such ought not to be the case with mature persons. We should have a well defined motive looking to a certain outcome. Let our social life serve to illustrate. It seems obvious that our Creator designed us to gather certain benefits from association with others. It is plain that we need this contact in order to develop certain qualities of character. Observing this principle however, many jump to the conclusion that social life of whatever sort is necessarily beneficial. We must submit social life to our worth while test. Is this particular phase of my social life worth while? What may I reasonably expect to derive from it? Will what I get out of it justify the effort?

"Multitudes of men and women throughout our land are expending every ounce of their energy on social life and in this expenditure of time and energy were unqualifiedly good we would expect great development of character in these people. But what is the result? Their lives are a perfect round of strenuous endeavor and when the bloom and freshness of physical beauty fades they are as empty of graces as the last of shell by the seashore. What is wrong? The principle of social life is not wrong, but these people are abusing the principle and waste their valuable time. What they do is not worth while. It is void of intellectual and spiritual stimulus and leaves no effect except upon depleted bodies that finally break under the strain. There is plenty to do that is worth while but the drift of modern life is to do that which is not worth while. Sometimes we are 'in' with relaxation but too much relaxation is excess. What ever is our social life ministers to the development of the self within and is free from evil is worth while. We need to rub off the rough places by contact with each other. That which improves mind, body or soul is worth while, provided it does not intrude upon that which would do still more for us. Of the possible goods we must choose the best.

"The business man can not measure his returns in dollars only. He has a return of character and in the worth while test must take that into consideration also. A certain method of money getting may enable him to become wealthy but what is that method doing for the man. In the meantime? If in the end the man has deteriorated we must pronounce his business a failure no matter what wealth he may have accumulated. So in all our activities we must inquire whether the results to be obtained will justify the effort and the results will need to be measured in all their breadth in order to decide.

"The activities of religious organizations must be measured by this same rule also. What is the motive for our religious activities? It must be conceded that sometimes our religious motives are not high. Sometimes one denomination works very strenuously with little more in view than to build up a larger congregation than a neighboring church. Sometimes a pastor is more concerned with the building up of his reputation than he is with building up his church. A pastor and a church may well afford to work earnestly if their motive is to be helpful to others, but if it is a selfish motive the church can hardly prosper under it. Innocent rivalries may arise but when they pass into jealousies our worth while test will eliminate them. What results do we expect from our effort? Some people delude themselves into thinking that they are working for God and the church when in reality their motive does not reach that far. They are busied with many fussy cares but are not bending their activities toward the great end for which the church exists. Some see no relation between the secular and spiritual in the church. All church work that does not look to an end in the spiritual is not worth while. If it is not calculated to minister to the higher self directly or indirectly such work may well be left to secular organizations. Accordingly, as a church let us inquire, what results may we reasonably expect from such effort as we put forth? Will the results be secular and social only or will they end in the higher and spiritual good? As individuals what results may we expect? We need to be honest in asking this question or it will do us no good. But if we are honest and weigh our motive and work we may know very nearly what to expect. Is it worth while? If we get what we may properly expect will that be worth the effort? If not what good reason is there that I should not change my method so that I may have adequate results? This certainly is a practical test. Common sense harmonizes nicely with religion and we are not to be excused if we are doing something just like it has been done for ages unless that is the best way and productive of best results. We are calling for efficiency today both from individuals and from organizations. The individual and the church that best serves will longest survive and prosper."

SAVES DAUGHTER Advice of Mother no Doubt Prevents Daughter's Untimely End.

Ready, Ky.—"I was not able to do anything for nearly six months," writes Mrs. Laura Bratcher, of this place, "and was down in bed for three months. I cannot tell you how I suffered with my head, and with nervousness and womanly troubles. Our family doctor told my husband he could not do me any good, and he had to give it up. We tried another doctor, but he did not help me. At last, my mother advised me to take Cardui, the women's tonic, thought it was no use for I was nearly dead, and nothing seemed to do me any good. But I took eleven bottles, and now I am able to do all of my work and my own washing. I think Cardui is the best medicine in the world. My weight increased, and I look the picture of health."

If you suffer from any of the ailments peculiar to women, get a bottle of Cardui today. Delay is dangerous. We know it will help you, for it has helped so many thousands of other weak women in the past 50 years. At all druggists.

The "Red Wing" Grape Juice Bottle is a New Idea

The old style of cork in grape juice bottles was a nuisance. It frequently meant a soiled suit, tie or collar, sometimes a broken bottle or a cut hand, frequently the cork went into the bottle. No matter how good the grape juice was it was hard to get at it.

In the new "RED WING" brand you can take the cork off with your finger. You will not need a cork puller. You will not cut yourself. You will not spill any of the juice.

It's a very unique, air-tight cork. It won't come off of itself but you can easily take it off.

I have it in three size bottles, 25c, 50c and 90c.

HIS LONG "PULL"

By H. M. EGBERT.

Nobody knew why Hawkins, the factory clerk, was a permanency with the Copperplate & Tin company, but it was vaguely surmised that he had some sort of a "pull" there. Hawkins was an embittered man; it was said that he had been the inventor of the copperplate process, and that old Green, the millionaire bachelor who owned the factory and spent his life abroad, had jockeyed him out of it and given him a life job at a hundred a month in partial amends. But Green had not been in the factory for years. The works had automatically continued under the charge of the experienced men who operated them, and Green was satisfied to draw his hundred thousand annual profits and leave the operations alone.

The only change made within the past seven years had been the arrival of the new superintendent, Blair, and the vacancy which he filled had been caused by the death of his predecessor.

Times were comparatively hard, and old Hawkins was certainly valueless to the firm. Blair spoke to Adkin, his assistant.

"Say, what sort of a pull has that old duffer?" he asked. "What's this I hear about his being a friend of Mr. Green? I have had no instructions about him."

"Why—he's a sort of fixture," said Adkin. "A friend of the old man's once, I believe. Everybody knows that he's not to be fired."

"Well, I'm going to call that bluff," said Blair. "Out he goes at the end of the month. Besides, even if the bluff's true, I guess Mr. Green has forgotten him, and by the last reports he isn't well enough to care. Poor old chap, they say he can't live more than a few months."

This referred to Green, not to Hawkins. Hawkins was fifty, and hale and hearty, one of those lean men who wither up rather than die, and then not till they are advanced in years. Nobody ever spoke to Hawkins, because his "grouch" was a permanent one. At least, he did have one friend—little Miss Smith, in the bookkeeping department; but by a mutual arrangement they never addressed each other in office hours. Nobody knew that for nearly ten years Hawkins had taken Miss Smith for a walk in the park every Sunday afternoon, supping with her at a cheap restaurant afterward, and bidding her good-by at the door of her flat. Miss Smith was thirty-seven and prim. She would have died with shame had anybody known that she had a "gentleman friend."

Hawkins had never said a word to Miss Smith about the terms of his engagement. That was part of the contract between himself and Green.

"Me boy," said the genial old scoundrel, when Hawkins was thirty-two and was planning to fight Green for the patent rights, "me boy, don't be a down fool. Come in with me. I'll mean a hundred a month to yes for life, and—and I'll raise ye."

And Hawkins, desperately poor, was forced to yield.

If only Hawkins were head of the factory! He would show them how it should be run. He knew every process in every department; he had, indeed, made a study of it with a view to some day starting a rival concern with his new patent. But the years rolled by, other inventions had taken the wind out of his sail, and—Hawkins was fifty.

"I'd show them a thing or two," he told Miss Smith, only the preceding Sunday. "I wouldn't spend my life abroad with this fine property running down."

"What would you do, Mr. Hawkins?" inquired Miss Smith. She was deeply interested in Hawkins' schemes.

"First thing I'd fire Blair and Adkin," answered Hawkins. "And then I'd—"

Suddenly he was conscious that he was looking at Miss Smith in a way which that lady had never experienced—at least from him, for she turned away with a blush that left her scarlet. And Hawkins, in the greatest embarrassment, bade her good-night at her door.

When he got home the Sunday after he found a letter waiting for him which he read with amazement. Then he staggered up the stairs to his little bedroom in the cheap rooming-house, which he had occupied for years. He spent that night in sleepless planning. But in the morning he was as cool as ever.

That morning there was a curious expectancy about the office. Hawkins, absorbed in his useless routine work, did not heed the remarks that passed until one of the factory men touched him on the arm.

"Well," snarled Hawkins, spinning round on his stool.

"You haven't heard the news, have you, Mr. Hawkins?"

"What news?" demanded Hawkins.

"Why, old man Green's died in Paris, that's all, except that we're all expecting to lose our jobs," answered the man.

Hawkins stared at him and then went on with his work.

For the first time in years Miss Smith addressed him as he was passing through the business office on his way to lunch.

"O, Mr. Hawkins, isn't it terrible!" she said. "Mr. Green is dead—and I'm afraid I'm going to lose my position."

The poor little woman was all in a flutter. It was well known that Blair wanted to reduce the superfluous staff; he was a man without pity, and the older members would be the first to go.

"Miss Smith!" called out an office boy, "Mr. Blair wants to see you."

Little Miss Smith hurried into the superintendent's office, and Hawkins waited beside her desk. Everybody knew the meaning of the summons. When she came back she was wiping her eyes.

"Good-bye, Mr. Hawkins," she said, extending her hand. "You know what has happened. I—"

"Wait a minute, Miss Smith," said Hawkins. "I want you to lunch with me at Fry's. Will you?"

"There was something so urgent in his tone that Miss Smith forgot to be alarmed. She glanced round nervously. Nobody had overheard.

"All right," she whispered, and, gathering up her things, slipped out of the building. Hawkins was waiting.

"Mr. Hawkins," called the boy contemptuously.

Hawkins went over to Blair's desk. "Mr. Hawkins," said Blair, "I may as well come to the point without any preliminaries. You have probably heard that Mr. Green has died in Paris. We do not know who the heirs will be, but meanwhile it is up to us to curtail a lot of unnecessary expenditure, chiefly in the matter of help, in which Mr. Green involved the firm. Times are bad, and the useless members of the force must go. You can get your salary for the month at the cashier's desk."

Hawkins stood smiling at Blair. The hour of his triumph had come.

"I see nothing to laugh at, Mr. Hawkins," said the superintendent angrily. "Thought you had some sort of pull here perhaps, didn't you?"

"I did and I do," said Hawkins, pulling a letter out of his pocket. "Read that."

Blair snatched up the letter and began reading impatiently. As he read, however, the expression on his face changed, first to alarm and then to terror.

"My dear Hawkins," he read, "I am writing this on my sick bed, and it is the last letter that I expect to write in this life. Eighteen years ago I stole your copperplate process from you. I had no claim whatever, but you had asked me to capitalize your invention, and I, seeing its commercial value, promptly patented it, which you had neglected to do in the proper manner. You threatened a lawsuit. I offered you a life position at one hundred dollars a month as a compromise. I would have given you five hundred and signed a compact, but when you accepted the offer as it was made I took you at your word."

"Now, that I am dying, I wish to ask your forgiveness, and to make the restitution complete, let me say that I am making you my sole heir in the matter of the company, my will having been drawn to that effect, according to the copy which I am now sending you."

"Well, Mr. Blair, have you anything to add to your statement?" inquired old Hawkins blandly.

"Well, Mr. Hawkins," Blair began, looking to his assistant for support, "of course, this alters the circumstances considerably. It is rather for you to say what you are going to do with the company."

"And with us," said Adkin bluntly.

"I tell you what I am going to do," said Hawkins quietly. "I am going to ask you fellows—I mean gentlemen—to continue to hold your posts on the following conditions: A twenty per cent. increase in salary for every member of this firm, including yourselves, down to the office boys. That comes first. Second, there will be no discharges, now or in future, without application to me, stating the reasons. Third, you will send my monthly check—of course, after the will is proved—to my Paris address."

"You are going to live in Paris?" inquired Blair with a curious smile.

"Why not?" demanded Hawkins.

"Well, you see, of course that would simplify matters a good deal so far as we are concerned, but—"

"O, it won't be permanent," said Hawkins. "In fact I'm just going over for a month with—I mean—see here, I'll write to you from Fry's."

"Fry's restaurant?" inquired Adkin of Blair, arching his brows. "The old fellow has gone insane with happiness at his good luck?"

But little Miss Smith knew better. (Copyright, 1914, by W. O. Chapman.)

BUSINESS MEN OF COUNTRY VOTE ON LAWS BY MAIL

Washington, July 6.—Ballots began to pour in today at the headquarters of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States in the national referendum vote on the proposed regulation of "business practices" in the administration of antitrust bills. The 568 organizations and 2,000 individual members of the organization of "big business" will cast votes. The vote will define the attitude of the business men of the country towards the details of the bill, which was the official announcement of the Chamber of Commerce.

That it is largely a "paper" organization and is not really representative of business interests has frequently been charged against the organization. The results of the referendum, which are expected to be unfavorable to federal regulation of business practices will be announced within a fortnight.

WICHITA PUBLISHING CO. ED. HOWARD, Mgr.

Begin to look at the names of Wichita county candidates for office. They are too busy crop-picking and when night comes they prefer to rest.

The press dispatches of Saturday from Mexico indicated that Huerta was just about ready to take passage for some foreign port.

The state courts have ruled that social clubs that dispense liquor must close shop on election day.

The Times has on its hands a whole lot of boiler-plate that is being sent it regularly without our solicitation.

Sara Bernhardt is about to make another farewell tour of America.

The performance today on the great political stage of the State of Texas is perhaps the most unique stunt that the leading actors in the drama of politics have ever presented to the public.

While only two issues are being agitated, that of prohibition and submission for Statewide constitutional amendment, and the grave problem involving the land tenancy solution, still the adherents of these subjects on either side are aligned upon both sides and the question the layman asks himself is "Where am I at?"

We are strongly in favor of local option and just as ardently opposed to Statewide prohibition, and yet we favor the submission of the proposition that the people as a whole may say, and then "while we are in Rome let us live as Romans do" or get out.

But many of those anti-submission advocates confess to local option views but strenuously oppose the submission of the question. For our part we are willing to treat the matter now as well as any other time.

On the other subject of the land tenancy both sides propose to solve it, and it is only a question of which one presents to the farmer the most plausible proposition that secures his vote, for neither can solve the situation.

Tenantry is a matter that depends upon the thrift and perseverance, and can not be legislated upon without encroaching dangerously near to socialism.

Mr. Robertson has withdrawn; and in our humble opinion Mr. Morris will do so. So that we have only Ball and Ferguson left, both good men, either would make a good governor, therefore the issue is more on who you will send to the legislature. The Governor does not make laws.—Rio Grande Clarion.

Whether Ball or Ferguson is to be our next governor, neither can accomplish much unless the legislature, the law-making body, is composed for the most part of men who are not of the peanut politician variety.

GOOD MEN IN HIGH PLACES. Thomas D. Jones of Chicago has been objected to for membership on the federal reserve board because he is a director in the International Harvester Company.

He has had much to do with large business concerns. He is a business lawyer. He is one of those men having a good knowledge of the law and ability to apply it along business lines.

His career shows that instead of being a destroyer he has been a conserver and a builder. He never looted any corporation or ever assisted any corporation to destroy another.

No lawyer at the Chicago bar is more highly respected, and no citizen more highly esteemed than Mr. Jones. It is fortunate that Mr. Wilson has prevailed upon to go on the reserve board.

Mr. Jones will regard the entire country as his client, and he will give the people the best that is in him. It is good that such men can be drafted for government service.

Mr. Wilson will be fortunate if he can get Mr. Jones, just as he was fortunate in securing Paul Warburg as a member of the reserve board.

Mr. Warburg is a student of finance. He was trained in a European university, and he has not been in America many years, but he is a better American than many of us who have been here all of our lives.

He has made a close study of our institutions and he understands thoroughly the main-spring of our civilization.

It is unfortunate that success in certain lines in this country discredits one before demagogic politicians and a few unthinking people.

A man who has made a success of a big bank in New York, another man who has made a success of the practice of law along legitimate lines in Chicago, and a third man who had become conspicuous as a teacher in a great university are more likely to give the government of the United States better service than an unsuccessful teacher, a man who had not shown the taste or ability for banking and a man who in the practice of the law never got beyond police courts.

We ought to draft the services of our big men. We ought to take such men as Oden-Armour of Chicago, Paul Warburg of New York, H. P. Davison of J. P. Morgan & Co., Fairfax Harrison and C. H. Markham out of regular business when they are 55 years old and make them devote 10 or 12 years of their remaining active life to government service along those lines in which they have demonstrated their ability.

This drafting of good men could go further than taking into the government service those who have made a success in a material way. An able leader like John Mitchell would make a splendid high government official.

Other men such as Dr. Hadley of Yale, and a journalist such as Melville E. Stone should all be called upon to give to the nation when the nation needs them the benefit of their experience.—Commercial Appeal.

R. B. Humphrey, of Throckmorton, has withdrawn from the race for congressman-at-large. Aside from T. J. O'Donnell of this city, he was the only candidate from this part of the state seeking one of the two positions.

Mr. Humphrey's withdrawal leaves ten in the race. Mr. O'Donnell is well and favorably known in Wichita Falls, and has just returned from a six weeks' campaign of the state. He feels confident that he will be one of the successful candidates.

Northwest Texas is entitled to and should have one of the congressmen-at-large.

PROMINENT BUSINESS MAN DEAD OF HOUSTON IS DEAD. Houston, Texas, July 6.—Charles Munder, one of the leading citizens and business men of this city, died here at his home last night. He was seventy-three years old.

Comptroller Williams' Birthday. Washington, July 6.—Comptroller John Skelton Williams is today celebrating his forty-ninth birthday anniversary. He is a Virginian. This is also the birthday anniversary of Princess Victoria, sister of King George V.

200 CADETSHIPS AT WEST POINT TO BE FILLED. Washington, July 6.—Upward of 200 cadetships at West Point Military Academy are to be filled in 1915 in response to numerous inquiries on this subject from all over the country. The war department today announced the list of cadetships for which candidates are to be appointed to the academy on the nomination of senators and representatives in Congress for entrance examinations to begin last Tuesday in March, 1915.

Appointments are to be made by senators from twenty-seven states and by representatives from thirty-one states. The districts in Texas from which appointments are to be made are the first, second, fourth, fifth, seventh, ninth, tenth, eleventh and thirteenth.

MEDICAL TRAINING BEING GIVEN CHINA

ROCKEFELLER COMMISSION IS INTRODUCING AMERICAN METHODS THERE

TO OVERCOME SUPERSTITIONS. Native Medical Practice is Largely Quackery and Surgery is Almost Unknown There

By Associated Press. Peking, July 4.—The Rockefeller Commission which is here investigating China's needs in a medical and surgical way has already found that a most important point is this: The Chinese must be taught to doctor themselves along modern lines and not rely, except for the present upon the foreign medical men.

The country is so vast and the need of the medical men so extensive that all the doctors and surgeons in America could be utilized in China. Such a great invasion, or even enough to make any wide impression, is impracticable. The solution must be the training of the Chinese doctors.

At present there are only a few score of them trained along modern lines, and these have difficulty in making a living. The Chinaman is suspicious of the second-hand training of the modernized Chinese doctor, and if he is moved to resort to foreign treatment he prefers to go direct to the foreign doctor.

The Commission, which is represented here by Dr. Hardy Pratt Judson, president of Chicago University, and Dr. Francis Peabody of Boston, has not gone far enough to commit itself to any definite plan, but its report undoubtedly will be largely concerned with the problem of making and foreign-trained native doctor respected in China.

Government is Helping. The United States Department of State has temporarily detached Roger S. Greene from his consular post at Hankow to aid the Commission as an interpreter and guide in its tour of investigation, and the Chinese government, both central and local, has furthered rather than impeded the work of the Commission.

In the medical schools, the Commission has found various men at work trying to coin medical characters and combination of characters or expressions in Chinese.

It was only three years ago that the first class of Chinese educated in China took their medical degrees from the Union College (where American and British missionary doctors work together) here in Peking. Last year the first class, a smart number, of women doctors were graduated. Because of prejudices against the treatment of women by men, women doctors will have a valuable place in medical work in China.

While the class of Chinese who prefer the old-style Chinese doctors, is still in the majority, the foreign doctors have more than what they can do.

Chinese medicine is a poor thing. The Chinese have had for centuries remedies for certain, well-known diseases, remedies which are often very effective. But they have never, apparently studied anatomy, and know little or nothing of the reasons for actions and counteractions. Much if not most of their work is quackery. They have very little knowledge of surgery. As a rule the Chinese doctor can not set a bone. Men whose broken limbs could be stuck together by an ordinary man in Europe of America become permanent cripples in China.

Such a cure has been seen even on the streets of Canton, Shanghai and Peking. They are men who have gone to their own instead of foreign doctors, and probably have received plasters, or even medicine to take internally for their broken bones.

Some of the tales that go through the country about the missionary doctors are to these people like stories of the Bible. A man learns of a sur-

INTERURBAN SURVEY TO BE CONSIDERED

MEETING OF COMMITTEE WILL BE HELD AT GAINESVILLE TOMORROW

WICHITANS ARE TO BE PRESENT

Several Will Attend From This City and Preliminary Plans Will Be Taken Up

J. A. Kemp, chairman, R. E. Huff, Frank Kell, Wiley Blair and Fred Gates will go to Gainesville tomorrow to attend a meeting of the committee which was appointed to arrange for the survey of routes for the proposed Dallas-Wichita Falls interurban.

The meeting will be held at ten o'clock tomorrow morning. Reports will be received of financial pledges for the survey and if sufficient money is pledged it is probable arrangements will be authorized for the employment of engineers and for such other arrangements as may be necessary for the work. The Dallas committee has notified Mr. Kemp that it will be represented by its full membership at Gainesville. Other towns including Henrietta, St. Jo, Montague, Nocona, Bowie, Decatur, Gainesville, Denton, Irving and Grapevine are expected to have representatives at the meeting.

Mr. Kemp said this morning that he knew of no plans for an automobile trip from Gainesville to Wichita Falls, but indicated that he believed it would be a good idea for the committee to make such a trip.

TRADE TERRITORY WILL BE EXTENDED

ONE RESULT OF PURCHASE OF C. O. & W. LINE BY MR. KELL

TO BRING TRAFFIC THIS WAY. Line Will Probably Be Extended When Trade Conditions Are More Favorable

Closer traffic relations between the Wichita Falls and Northwestern and the Clinton, Oklahoma, and Western will result from the control of the latter line by Frank Kell of this city. Heretofore the Northwestern has gotten very little business from the Clinton line. Arrangements are now being made whereby most of the business will come to the Northwestern and will be brought through Wichita Falls.

The change will mean that more territory will be made tributary to this city. Some day when legislative and other conditions become more favorable, Mr. Kell indicated several days ago he would attempt the extension of the line both eastward and westward. Oklahoma City is the logical terminal point for the line to the east. An extension westward up the Wichita River valley would serve a territory that is one of the richest and most productive in all Oklahoma but which is many miles removed from any railway connection.

FALLS IN THRESHER BLOWER AND NARROWLY ESCAPES

(Burk Burnett Star) Wallace, the 12 year old son of Will Thresher, a well known farmer residing near Clara, had an extremely narrow escape from being instantly killed Wednesday evening. J. H. Anderson's thresher was threshing wheat on Mr. Thom's farm and the boy was walking on top of the blower when he fell through a trap door into the small chute. The machinery was running full speed at the time and before it could be stopped the boy had come in contact with the rapidly revolving fan, resulting in one of his legs being broken in two places—above and below the knee and the lad was severely bruised about the body. Fortunately the machinery was instantly stopped after the boy was seen to fall into the blower, for had it continued to run a moment longer the unfortunate boy would no doubt have been instantly killed. It required an hour's hard work to get the injured youth out of the blower and strange to say he was still conscious. Dr. J. L. McGehee was summoned and he gave the boy medical and surgical aid. At last reports the boy was doing as well as could be expected under the circumstances.

CONGRESS WANTS TO BUY PRESIDENT WILSON WOULDN'T

Chicago Futures. By Associated Press. Chicago, July 6.—Unfavorable weather in the spring crop region had a bullish effect today on wheat. Fear continued as to black rust, some traces of which were suspected to have been found in South Dakota. The opening which varied from 1/2 to 3/8 off to a 3/8 advance, was followed by a material rise all around, though afterward the gain entirely disappeared and July underwent a decided rise. Heavy selling by commission houses broke the price of corn. Rates in the southwest furnished the incentive. After straggling unchanged to 3/8 lower, quotations rallied and then went sharply down. Complaints of rust held the oat market relatively steady. The close was firm in wheat and steady in corn. Prices: Wheat, July 79 3/4; September 78 1/4; corn, July 66 3/4; September 64; oats, July 26 3/8; September 25 1/4.

JOSEPH KNOWLES, "PRIMITIVE MAN," AGAIN TRIES LIFE IN THE WILDERNESS

JOSEPH KNOWLES RETURNING TO CIVILIZATION

Chicago, July 6.—Joseph Knowles has left here to live like a wild man in the Sierra Nevada mountains in California during July and August. He is the man—a man of education and wealth—who spent two months in the wilds of the Maine woods last summer to demonstrate that modern man could live like a savage and enjoy it. Entering the Maine forests naked, without weapons or implements of food, he waged a battle with the elements that made exciting reading and which he has described in his book "Alone in the Wilderness." His attempt at a repetition in the Sierras will likely be watched with keen interest by all who love outdoor life.

IRISH NATIONALIST FORCES ORGANIZING

VOLUNTEER ARMY IS STILL ON FAR FROM EFFICIENT PLANE

CLASS DISTINCTIONS VANISH

Enthusiasm and Interest Prevail, But Little Has Actually Been Accomplished

By Associated Press. Dublin, July 6.—Estimates of the number of the Irish Nationalist Volunteers vary between 80,000, which is the Dublin Castle figure compiled by the police, and a quarter of a million, which is the estimate given in the form speeches. Careful inquiry shows that there are 50,000 in Leinster which takes the lead, about 45,000 in Ulster (increasing rapidly), 35,000 in Munster and 25,000 in Connaught. The difficulty of exact estimate arises from the fact that the movement is not organized from the center. Forces have sprung up spontaneously in every parish, and so far are only loosely connected with the provisional central body. There has been a complete wiping out of all class distinctions, and the rank and file include every grade—farmers, laborers, shop assistants, clerks, doctors, lawyers and country gentlemen. There is a very strong leaven of time-expired soldiers, old Connaught Rangers, Dublin Fusiliers and their experience is proving useful in the drill.

Little Equipment or Money.

The chief military commanders are Colonel Maurice Moore, who commanded the Connaught Rangers in the Boer War, and Captain White, a son of the General White who defended Ladysmith. Recent accessions are Sir Henry Grattan Bellow, a grandson of the great Henry Grattan, who had experience in the Fifth Dragon Guards, and Captain Bellingham, brother of the Marchioness of Bute, who at present an aide-de-camp to the Lord Lieutenant. Military experiences, however, slight, is at a premium, and a medical student, with a little volunteer training, is commanding a sergeant a squad which includes among the privates a university professor and a member of the Sinn Fein party. They have few supporters in the country and the great bulk of the volunteers are supporters of Redmond. Mr. Redmond offered his cooperation to the Central body if he was allowed to nominate an equal number of men on it, pending the election of the volunteer branches of a central executive. Failing acceptance he will recommend each county to govern itself.

Redmond's Plan.

This offer was rejected on a hastily summoned meeting of the executives who proposed that each county should elect a representative to sit with them. This has produced strong protest from Professor Kerr, who says the meeting was not properly convened and asks for a full meeting when the members would accept Mr. Redmond's offer. Mr. Redmond cannot allow a movement mainly composed of his supporters to be commanded by a self-qualified body, opponents of his. One of the volunteer members can hold their convention to check an executive the matter will settle itself. Meantime there may be friction which will be obviated to a great extent by making each county govern its own volunteers.

The leaders of the Covenanters in Ulster profess to consider the Nationalist movement as something not to be taken seriously. These Nationalist bands in the Ulster counties drill spasmodically and are not connected with any central organization. All the local leaders are entirely on their own initiative. In some districts the volunteers are split into factions, one opposing those who carry on a newspaper war.

The Ulster leaders say the Nationalist volunteers must fall through the impossibility of getting arms. They claim to have many letters from America showing that the Irish here are tired of contributing to Home Rule and now that they consider an Irish parliament assured, they propose to let those in Ireland settle their internal questions without help. Even if American sympathizers should refile the war chest the present government measures to suppress gun-running in all ports, would checkmate them.

TIME BRINGS CHANGES

By ELLA CYGAN.

"Good evening," said the pretty girl in an expressionless tone as she descended the stairs and entered the room where the young man awaited her. "I thought I told you that you weren't to come again unless you were sent for?"

"So you did!" the young man exclaimed with a startled air. Now that you mention it, I recall something of the sort. But I am going to be sensible tonight—no romance nor broken hearts at all—nothing of that stuff. I am in a very serious mood. I shan't bother you by repeating my sentiments of recent date."

"Thank you," the pretty girl said. "That is very much better. I thought you would get over the idea if you took a little time."

"You wrong me," said the young man. "I haven't got over it at all. However, let us get away from this delicate subject which seems to cause you ennui. Let's talk about—well about the two-to-one proposition."

"Two-to-one," the pretty girl repeated. "Is it anything like the multiplication table?"

"Not exactly," said her caller. "It's the question as to whether two persons can live as cheaply as one."

The pretty girl frowned. "I thought," she protested, "that you just said you weren't going to bother me with foolishness about—"

The caller raised his eyebrows. "I don't see any foolishness in a scientific subject," he protested. "I didn't say that two, did I? I might mean a couple of fellows or a girl and her aged aunt. It's merely a question to which learned men have devoted thought and study."

"Then they're exceedingly foolish," said the pretty girl with spirit, "because two can't."

"But lots of people have written to the newspapers to prove that they can!" insisted the young man triumphantly.

"So You Did."

antly, pulling from his pockets a handful of printed slips. "Here's a woman who tells how they did it. They rented rooms in their flat to pay the rent and bought their groceries Saturday nights when things were marked down. They—"

"I'm not interested in that," she interrupted. "I don't believe I should like to keep a boarding house."

"Well, here's another case where they raised enough vegetables on the vacant lot next door to supply themselves with a year's potatoes and salad and green stuff and the wife got the most wonderful clothes at bargains, and—"

"That does not thrill me with excitement, either," said the pretty girl. "Marked down clothes always look it. And—"

The young man sighed. "I didn't suppose you would care about it," he said. "I don't especially take to those things myself. Only you said the other night that your chief objection to me was my lack of interest in the serious side of life, so I took up the most serious side I know—the financial side. I did it to convince you that I really thought deeply. I should not expect my wife to make an income for one cover the expenses of two. I don't need to do that!"

The pretty girl looked faintly interested. "I thought," she murmured, "when you began that you considered those economical plans splendid. You were so enthusiastic as you read them!"

"That was to convince you of my serious interest," he told her. "I've studied the subject and it can be done. Only I wouldn't ask you to do it."

"You wouldn't?" she cried. "Why not? It seems to me that in two days you can experience an awful change of heart, Mr. Hings!"

"I believe I have," sighed the young man.

The pretty girl sat bolt upright and her cheeks flamed. "Well, you needn't be so perfectly brutal about so-saying s-s-so!" she quavered and began searching for her handkerchief.

"My goodness!" said the young man with fervor. "My change of heart was merely that I saw what a fool I had been in expecting you to consent to marry me! Honest, Lillian! I'm just as crazy about you as ever! Do you mean to say you would marry me?"

"I think," sniffed the pretty girl, smiling a watery smile, "I think I've had a change of heart, too."—Chicago Daily News.

NATIONALISTS ARE LOOKING TO AMERICA FOR SUPPORT Expect Irishmen in This Country To Give Financial Aid in Ulster Trouble London, July 6.—With every week of suspense in the settlement of the future government of Ireland the measure of the military preparations by the Ulster and the Home Rule volunteers increases. The present tendency among the volunteers of the south is to accept leadership by the Nationalists, which John Redmond offered them. Thus led, there would be a clear division of Home Rulers and anti-Home Rule men into hostile armed camps. The very dangers of a bitter civil war which such a prospect presents furnishes the best safeguard for peace. Correspondents of the Associated Press at Dublin and Belfast have written of the situation from the Nationalist and Ulster points of view respectively. The most interesting development is the plan, hitherto unpublished, of the Orangemen under Sir Edward Carson for taking charge of affairs by force if a provisional government is set up, and the fact that the commercial men of Belfast have used their influence in Ulster councils to postpone radical action until a Home Rule parliament has been established in Dublin. The greatest question which confronts the National Volunteers is how far their American sympathizers are likely to come forward with funds for their arms and equipment. We are on the wire day and night. Phone 1067. Gupton, the tailor. 46 1tc

AUTOMOBILE OWNERS FAIL TO NUMBER CARS PROPERLY

Some Confusion Results—Novel Devices to Keep Police From Seeing Numbers

When you sell your automobile it will be a good idea to take off the number before you deliver over the car to the new owner so that he will take out a new number. Recently an Electra man who had sold a car and had neglected to take off the number was haled into court and given considerable trouble when the new owner violated the speed laws.

Local authorities believe that more than one car is being run here with the same number. A few nights ago Policeman Gilham saw a car burning up the wind on Indiana avenue. He got the number and a complaint was filed. This was at 10 p. m. Mr. Gilham was quite positive about the time for he looked at his watch. The owner of a car bearing the number seen by Mr. Gilham was brought into court this morning and proved conclusively that he had not been down town all evening and that his car did not tally with the description of the car seen by Mr. Gilham at all. The police are investigating the matter and propose to see to it that every car has a number of its own different from every other car in town.

Since the effort to enforce the speeding ordinance was begun and a motorcycle officer placed on duty some of the young bloods have resorted to various devices to escape arrest. One of these has been the attaching of a string to the number on their car in such a manner that the occupants of the car can pull it up when speeding it up. Another favorite method is to oil the number plate so that it will be covered up with an accumulation of dust.

FEDERATION CRITICISED BY PALESTINE LABOR COUNCIL

Action on Prohibition and Initiative Referendum and Recall is De-nounced

By Associated Press. Palestine, Texas, July 6.—The Palestine Trades and Labor Council has adopted the following resolution made public last night:

"To Organized Labor of Texas: We, a committee appointed by the Palestine Trades and Labor Council to draft a resolution protesting against the action of the seventeenth annual convention of the Texas State Federation of Labor assembled at El Paso, June 8 injecting the prohibition question into that organization, protest that this great body has always stood for salutary laws that are for the betterment and elevation of the toiler, but this body is opposed to introducing an issue into it that is sure to cause strong opposition and produce strife in the ranks of labor. "Prohibition is an issue upon which the ranks are divided, therefore it is an issue which we have always striven to avoid bringing into the labor convention meetings, believing that each individual should settle this matter for himself.

"We also protest against the manner in which political delegates defeated the initiative, referendum and recall, a method used and advocated by all unions, both state and national. We protest against the inconsistency of the 'delegate politicians' defeating this measure and then making the initiative, referendum and recall a preferred measure to be presented by our legislative board to the next legislature. This measure should have received the proper endorsement of all when it was first presented at the convention, instead of assassinating it in one instance and endorsing it in another.

"We deplore the rash, unwarranted and untimely acts which transpired at our late state convention.

GOOD MOTORCYCLE EVENTS AT LAKE WICHITA SUNDAY

Three Minor Accidents Take Place—Lambert Wins Two Out of Three Races

The crowd was small, but the races were splendid in the motorcycle meet at Lake Wichita Sunday. Three events were run, all being close enough to keep the spectators on edge and further thrills were provided by Clown Nolen, whose machine took three spills, the last of which broke his machine and forced him out of the race. The first two did little damage.

A fifteen mile, ten mile and five mile race were run and Nolen spilled himself in all three. However, he was able to win the first, having such a long lead when he upset that the others could not catch him. Each spill took place on the north curve where there is a bit of soft track. The results follow:

Fifteen mile—Nolen, first; Lambert, second; Totten, third.

Ten mile—Lambert first, Braddock second; Nolen, third.

Five mile—Lambert first, Braddock second; Rankin third.

Lambert who won two first and one second has been Nolen's chief opponent both in these races and those held earlier in the summer. Nolen's fall in the third race broke a pedal of his machine and he was unable to continue in the running.

AT THE CHAUTAUQUA THIS WEEK

MAX MAHANY.

THE CHAUTAUQUA PECULIARLY AMERICAN.

An Outgrowth of Free Thought, Free Speech and Freedom.

Roosevelt says, "The Chautauqua is the most American of all our institutions."

The Chautauqua idea grew out of a desire for larger educational privileges and the hunger of the people for the best thought, cleanest entertainment and most inspiring pleasure that could be afforded by the talent of the country. The platform of a Chautauqua affords a forum for the discussion of the most vital questions pertaining to government, reform and to the social and economic life of the people. This forum is free, untrammelled and unchecked. All sides of the questions are discussed without let or hindrance by the masters in their lines. On the platform there will appear the descendant of the Puritans, a typical New England reformer, with the blood of three generations of abolitionists in his veins, and the same day the cavalier from the south, son of a former slave owner, will bring his message, and each will present his views of the great present day problems in a masterly way and be heard with equal pleasure.

The large number of Chautauquas and the great crowds that gather year after year to hear these discussions indicate the people are wide awake and that they are broad minded, generous and sufficiently patriotic to hear the various questions discussed from every standpoint. When the people think for themselves and are directed along safe and logical channels it further guarantees the safety of our institutions and the security of the republic. The Chautauqua is run along the broadest possible lines without fear or favor of any creed, party, platform, section or race. It's an outgrowth of the broadest of American ideas, free thought, free speech and greatest freedom in hearing and discussing important questions. It has been truly said that the Chautauqua is the most American of all of our institutions.

It's a vast improvement over the old county fair, which is a thing of the past. Instead of listening to the cackle of chickens, the bray of the donkeys and passing judgment on the size of pumpkins, they now listen to the strains of great orchestras, the inspiring notes of famous bands, hear great orators and watch the great artists do their work. Rural free delivery, the telephone, the automobile and the Chautauqua represent present day achievement and progress, leaving the ox cart, the county fair and the "going after the mail once a week" to become matters of history, belonging to a ruder and less progressive age.

CHAUTAUQUA INSPIRES.

Gives the People a Broader View of Life.

The Chautauqua not only shows how big the talent is in this country and shows it to those that need most to see and hear, but it also gives the best citizens in a local community a chance to show what they can do for their own people and for the young men and women. The local committees that foster schools, churches and colleges, institute reforms and stand for the intellectual, moral and material welfare of their towns and surrounding country. The Chautauqua inspires

CHAUTAUQUA MEANS.

The word "Chautauqua" has an interesting history. Long ago, when the ancestors of the Senecas came to the margin of this (now Chautauqua) beautiful lake after a successful hunt, they camped upon its borders for the night. A sudden storm arose. The waves became so high that their camp was jeopardized, and in the unavoidable confusion a little child was swept away beyond their reach and lost in the bosom of the lake. Thereafter the lake was known as Chaudaukuwa ("the place where the child was carried away"), now anglicized into its present form, Chautauqua.

with new ideals, breathes into the country a healthy optimism and provides good for a better tomorrow. It pulls people out of the basement into the upper stories of life and gives them a broader view of the horizon of their abilities, possibilities and opportunities.

The Chautauqua is in no sense run for money making. Man building and not fortune building is its program. It brings a healthy, inspiring, restful, intellectual and tonic up vacation for mind, body and soul to the door where a man can be in touch with the whole wide world and where he can care for his business, his farm and his local interests at the same time.

Chautauqua means "where the child was carried away," and it retains the idea that not only the child, but the young person and the mature man and woman are "carried away" from the humdrum of hard, severe things into an atmosphere intellectual, social, inspiring, entertaining and uplifting. It makes life more worth the living.

CHAUTAUQUA AND THE YOUNG PEOPLE.

What could be more vigorously inspiring than six or eight days' attendance by the young people of a community upon twenty or more performances at the Chautauqua? They catch new glimpses of possibilities in life; they see the ideal men and women, either present on the platform or wrought out for their imagination. Poets, humorists, philosophers, statesmen, musicians that have thrilled vast assemblies with their marvelous gifts in the great cities come and go from the Chautauqua platform, giving the best, the very cream of their life's work to the town and country boys and girls. Young men are inspired by this to greater and better manhood, young women to a sweeter and higher type of womanhood. The cares and burdens are lifted off of hard worked men and women for awhile, causing them to live in a new world. There is limitless fun for the children, solid information for the maturer men and women, innocent amusement for all, with the privilege and opportunity of having a delightful reunion with former friends and neighbors under the most exhilarating and ideal conditions.

Tee Up! Smoke Up!

As satisfying as the sounding smack of the perfect drive, is the open-air relish of the perfect smoke—Tuxedo. Both go together, too. When you grab your bag and start for the links, grab up your tin of Tuxedo and take it along.

"Follow through" the snappy afternoon with Tuxedo. Put Tuxedo in your pipe and you will "put" the best. And at "the nineteenth hole" rest up and relax with a good, solid smoke of Tuxedo. That's the advice of good golfers everywhere.

Tuxedo
The Perfect Tobacco for Pipe and Cigarette

It's worth your while to try Tuxedo. Especially if a sensitive tongue prevents pipe smoking.

Tuxedo positively cannot bite—not even if you smoke pipeful after pipeful, as many as you can crowd into a day or a week.

Tuxedo is made of only the finest, choicest, selected leaves of perfectly aged Burley tobacco. It is made by the original "Tuxedo Process" which removes every trace of bite and sting and develops all the wonderful mildness, fragrance and flavor of the Burley Leaf in a way that no other brand of tobacco has ever successfully imitated.

NEWSPAPERS AND THE BIBLE

Magazine Cites Authorities in Defense of Grammar for Which It Was Criticized.

NEWSPAPERS AND THE BIBLE

When some of our editorial friends around the country were gunning for us, they spoke scornfully because the editor of this erudite weekly said "you are a man who do" instead of "a man who does," we came back at them with quotations from Carlyle, Longfellow and Macaulay.

NEWSPAPERS AND THE BIBLE

Probably most of them will admit that the King James version of the Bible is written in fairly good English. The Brooklyn Eagle calls our construction "Damaged Goods in English."

NEWSPAPERS AND THE BIBLE

It observes that the third person is closer to the pronoun and hence the jar to the ear when the verb comes along in the second person. However, it admits that the personal pronoun has in this instance for antecedent a choice of subjects, one in the second and one in the third person.

NEWSPAPERS AND THE BIBLE

It is upurped the principal place in the coming drama, to the exclusion of the rightful player of the part. When the eventual day arrived the family bestowed themselves within its recesses in splendid, if solemn, triumph.

NEWSPAPERS AND THE BIBLE

The vehicle moved away, and had proceeded a little distance down the road when its progress was checked by the headlong pursuit of the family servant, waving and calling incoherently. Hurrying and gasping she overtook the surprised mourners, and then her errand was revealed in the pithy sentences, "You must turn back! You've forgotten 'th' corpse!"

NEWSPAPERS AND THE BIBLE

And so, it appeared, they had—London Tit-Bits.

Could Not Enforce Uniform. In 1858 the formation was attempted in London of a league of housewives pledged to engage only servants who would undertake to wear a uniform. In the preliminary manifesto it was also proposed to prohibit servants from wearing "superfluous, such as flowers, feathers, brooches, buckles or clasps, earrings, lockets, neck ribbons, and velvets, kid gloves, sashes, jackets, Garibaldi's, trimmings on dresses, crinolines or steel of any kind."

Patrick Henry's Great Speech. Patrick Henry's immortal speech, in which he used the words "Give me liberty or give me death," was delivered not at Williamsburg, but in old St. John's church at Richmond, before the assembly of the second Virginia convention of delegates, in March, 1775. The famous speech was not written, and as shorthand reporters were somewhat scarce in those days, we have only snatches of the great oration, which immortalized Henry and set the colonies on fire.

WOMAN IS ACCIDENTALLY SHOT BY SON, MAY DIE. By Associated Press. Houston, Texas, July 6.—While Mrs. Frank Frish was alive this morning, physicians held out little hope for her recovery. She was shot through the body with a revolver by John W. Hissone, her sixteen-year-old son who promptly called the police. Mrs. Frish's husband here on the Southern Pacific, in a statement made at the hospital fully exonerated her son, saying it was an accident.

LEFT THE PRINCIPAL BEHIND. Burial Party Entirely Forgot the Most Important Part of the Funeral Cortège. To the northerner, only an embellished imagination turns in dismay from the story of the family, who having lost their nearest relative, prepared to bury him with a due accompaniment of lamentations and baked meats. All was prepared, with the certain subdued festivity that marks such occasions in the north. The churchyard was some miles away, and it was agreed that the whole family, together with the coffin, were to be conveyed to the "burying" in a large hired bus. By degrees the bus began to "play lead" in the imaginations of all concerned.

French Oyster Beds Threatened. Portuguese oysters, which, according to zoologists, do not even belong to the properly called species of oysters, but to the gryphaea species, are threatening to invade the French oyster beds, and inasmuch as they are not the edible fish which the French oyster makes there is regret at the prospect. The more robust Portuguese oysters some time ago supplanted the native oysters in the region of Arcachon and are likewise attacking the Channel oysters that are so highly appreciated. At first it was thought the danger was limited, as it was believed the southern gryphaea could not become acclimatized on the British coasts. Now, however, it has been shown that the Portuguese oys-

MEMORIES REWARD

What a great satisfaction is the thought of being loved and revered by our dear ones, even after we have passed to that "Undiscovered country from whose bourne no traveler returns." There are good and worthy citizens here in Wichita Falls whose memory will be honored and revered long after they have laid their armor down. But we have in mind just now a very worthy one whose grave and the plot on which he is buried looks as bad as the graves of a couple of notorious characters do. This same party left plenty for his loved ones. A friend of his said to me the other day: "It's a shame." We would like to see the relatives of such a worthy character place something to their memory even though they bought it from a mail order house. Of course, we could not interest such careless or indifferent classes, but we want to see all who are interested. We will make the price right.

ONCE There was a large girl of the steam-roller type of beauty who was known as a native in one of those abbreviated municipalities that boasts three bath tubs and has a City Marshal that pinches everything on wheels that exceeds four miles an hour. Samantha, whose name was wished on her when she was too young to get out an injunction, was popular with cats and bath-clovers of uncertain age, but just when she thought she had winged a sympathizer of the masculine variety he invariably got interested in the scenery and the weather and went chasing off after some ninety-pound gum-chewer who knew how to wear clothes and the pluk chamotis dipped in La Blanche, leaving Samantha on the edge of a cloud with no parachute. Samantha wound up by being president of Squashville Society for the suppression of all forms of wickedness, including chewing gum and Coca Cola. The reason Samantha did not make a home run and beat the ball to Hymen's was that she did not know the game. The reason we win nine to nothing is WE KNOW THE GAME.
