TOKIO CELEBRATES TSING TAU'S FALL

CROWDS COLLECTED EVERYWHERE IN CITY AND PROCESSIONS WERE FORMED

GERMANS FLY WHITE FLAG

Japanese Officers Pay High Tribute To Bravery of German Defenders

By Associated Press.
Tokio, Nov. 7.—Tokio today is celebrating the fall of the German fortress at Tsing Tau after an actual siege of a few days more than three weeks. It was in the middle of September that the real attack began, although preparations for the taking of the German stronghold in Asia were begun immediately after the war was declared by Japan, August 15. Crowds collected everywhere today and many processions were formed.

The final and successful attack on Tsing Tau began shortly after midnight Friday morning and the first inroad by the allied forces was the taking of the middle of the first line of defenses. This was accomplished by brilliant charges of infantry and engineers led by General Yoshimi Yamada. Simultaneously with this charge others were made. Taitungchen, the fortification on the east, fell at 5:35 a. m. Chungchiao was captured soon afterwards with its two heavy cannons. A detachment of the first line occupied the hills, Bismarck and Moltke forts at seven o'clock, and then the enemy hoisted the white flag.

The closing hours of the siege are briefly but dramatically described in official reports by Vice-Admiral Kato, commander of the Japanese naval forces, and Lieutenant General Kanio, commander of the troops operating in Klap Chow. In the two last days of the fighting, it is stated that the battleships continued a terrific rain of shells on the fortress and the city from the east and south, inflicting great damage and havoc. Taisichen, the central account says, seemed to be in flames. Vice-minister of the Navy, Saito, today said:

"With the European war continuing Tsing Tau will be administered by Japan. At the conclusion of the war, Japan will open negotiations with China."

Further details of the Tsing Tau fighting show that the Germans made desperate efforts to repair the damage in their batteries, but without success. Japanese shells killed the men at work and demolished the batteries anew. The stopping of the smuggling of provisions along the Lung-Shan was thought to have hastened the capitulation of the German stronghold.

JAPANESE ASSAULTS OF UNRIVALED BRAVERY

By Associated Press.
Tokio, Nov. 7.—After desperate assaults, in which the Japanese in the face of heroic resistance, rivaled their bravery at Port Arthur, Tsing Tau surrendered today at 9:30 a. m. At this hour Governor Meyer-Waldick sent an officer with a flag of truce to the Japanese lines. At four p. m. the Japanese and German officers opened a conference at Moltke barracks, when the formalities of capitulation were concluded.

Japanese officers paid unstinted tribute to the bravery of the Germans who fought tenaciously to the last. Official reports are that the Germans blew up what was left of their fortress before surrendering. Virtually the entire town is in ruins. A Japanese torpedo boat flotilla that entered the bay found nearly all the ships had been destroyed.

An official estimate places the Japanese killed in the final assault last night at thirty-six, with 182 wounded. The British took an important part in the victory and two British officers were wounded. No statement of the German casualties is available, but it is believed they were heavy.

Lessons of War.
The minister of war states that the lessons learned from the siege were—first, the destructiveness of the new heavy guns that the Japanese used for the first time; second, the effectiveness of the aeroplane observation service. The prisoners who will number, it is said, between 6,000 and 8,000, will be brought to Japan. The official version of the Anglo-Japanese victory, issued by the Japanese war office, and reads as follows:

"A general bombardment on October 31 permitted the occupation November 1 of 36.5-Metre hill; we entrenched and on November 4 progressed to second position at Pompuza. The heavy artillery cooperated with and protected the infantry. On the night of November 5, we occupied the third and final attacking position in front of the entanglements that screened the forts. General Yamada's command advanced from the center and forced its way through three heavily wired defenses, crossed the intervening ditches and captured the center fort. This helped General Horikuchi to occupy the northern fort. The right wing under General Yohoyi and the British right center, led by Lieutenant Colonel Berdington, jointly charged, and early on November 7 occupied forts Illis, Moltke and Bismarck, forcing the enemy to fly flags of surrender."

CONDITIONS IN CONSTANTINOPLE

ALL FOREIGNERS EXCEPTING GERMANS ARE REGARDED WITH SUSPICION

GERMAN MONEY PLENTIFUL

Despite Attempted Reorganization By Germans Is Declared Poorly Equipped

By Associated Press.
Rome, Nov. 7.—Dispatches from Constantinople describe the situation there as being outwardly much as it was during the Balkan war. Foreigners are regarded with suspicion and kept to themselves except in the case of Germans who may be seen everywhere. German money is so plentiful that it is often accepted as though it was Turkey's. The governing classes are declared as appearing solemnly confident, but the army is declared to be totally unprepared for war. The stores are said to be empty and no commissaries exist. Many soldiers are still wearing the uniforms worn in the last previous war and the army officers have not all been paid. It is asserted. There is a scarcity of ammunition according to correspondents who add that since the beginning of the present war the Germans have overcome these drawbacks to a certain extent; they have poured into Turkey, German officers, privates, sailors, arms and ammunition all above all, money. It is also said they have sent a submarine to Turkey.

Emver Pasha, the Turkish minister of war, and General Liman Von Sanders, the German commander of the Ottoman army, are the idols of the moment, says one correspondent, who adds: "They have promised the people military glory and certain conquest, followed by riches and prosperity through the spoils of war. Emver Pasha already is depicted as the Ottoman Napoleon. But assistance, notwithstanding Germany's assistance, on account of financial necessities, a new taxation has been imposed and the salaries of officials including the diplomats have been curtailed."

GUTIERREZ DON'T WANT PRESIDENCY

ANTI-VILLA BUREAU REPORTS THAT HE HAS REPUDIATED HIS ELECTION.

VILLA THREATENED LIFE

He Accepted Offer of Convention Only on Pain of Death if He Refused.

By Associated Press.
New York, Nov. 27.—Eulalio Gutierrez, recently elected provisional president of Mexico for twenty days, by the Aguas Calientes convention, has repudiated his election, the convention and all its acts according to the Mexican information bureau in this city, controlled by an anti-Villa faction, which gave out tonight what purported to be a telegram signed by Gutierrez and other prominent Mexicans. The information bureau contends Gutierrez was elected president by the convention solely to force him to declare for Villa or Carranza, and that he had sided with the latter.

REPORTED 'VILLA THREATENED TO SHOOT GUTIERREZ'

By Associated Press.
Los Angeles, Nov. 7.—Adolfo Carrillo, Carranza's representative here, said he has received from Mexico City today an official telegram stating that Eulalio Gutierrez, provisional president of Mexico, accepted offers at the hands of the Aguas Calientes convention only on pain of his life. A copy of the telegram follows:

"General Villa openly threatened to have him shot if he refused to accept offers."

ANTI TRUST LAW IS NOT VIOLATED

ATTORNEY GENERAL SUBMITS OPINION ON $135,000,000 COTTON LOAN PLAN

BANKERS WERE SQUEAMISH

President Asked Gregory To Give Opinion To Set Fear of Bankers at Rest

By Associated Press.
Washington, Nov. 7.—No violation of federal anti-trust law is threatened by the cotton loan fund plan recently perfected by bankers and members of the federal reserve board, according to an opinion handed down today by Attorney General Gregory at the request of President Wilson.

By Associated Press.
Washington, Nov. 7.—The following correspondence relative to the cotton loan fund was made public at the White House tonight. Writing Mr. Gregory the president said in part: "I am sending the enclosed papers submitted to me by the secretary of the treasury in order to ascertain whether in your opinion, the proposed 'cotton loan fund' may be lawfully formed. It occurs to me that the fund contemplated stands in a class by itself. It is hardly conceivable that such an arrangement should become a settled practice or furnish precedents which would be followed in the regular course of business under ordinary conditions. They are as exceptional in their nature as the circumstances they are meant to deal with and can hardly be looked as by precedent even, danger precedents. It is for this reason that I feel the more justified in asking for your opinion in the premises."

In reply Mr. Gregory said in part: "I have the honor to reply to your request for my opinion as to whether or not the anti-trust laws (the so-called Sherman act, the so-called Clayton act and the trade commission bill) would be violated in any respect by the carrying out of the plan which has been devised for the raising of an administrative fund of $135,000,000 to be lent on the security of the cotton crop, restriction of production, division of territory, or control of markets is involved. Loans will be made as freely to buyers of cotton as to producers. The plan merely provides the cash which is imperatively required, to liquidate the indebtedness incurred in the course of raising and marketing the cotton crop but which cannot now be obtained from the usual sources of supply because of the extraordinary conditions in the money market and the trade of the world. The amount of this fund is barely more than the amount of the total outstanding loans and discounts in the banks of the United States and is much less than the amount of cash usually employed in marketing the cotton crop; nor would even this small part of the banking capital of the United States become impounded as a result of the plan. But upon being lent would return at once to general circulation. I am unable to see how such a plan could be thought to fall within the purview of the anti-trust laws."

AUSTRO-GERMAN LOSSES ARE HEAVY

RUSSIANS IN OFFICIAL STATEMENT HAVE KILLED OR CAPTURED 30,000

RETREAT BECOMES A ROUT

Fugative Troops in Russian Poland and Galicia Spread Panic Among Reserves

By Associated Press.
Rome, Nov. 7.—Official communications received in Rome from the Russian army headquarters state that the Austro-German reverses in Galicia and Russian Poland are being augmented daily by the fugitive troops communicating panic to their reserves. The Austro-German cavalry forces are depicted in an especially pitiful condition. A part of this force, it was said, was massacred by the outnumbering Cossacks, the remainder being routed and pursued in utmost confusion. Austria and Germany have sent about 20,000 of their best cavalry, half of which force, the Russians maintain, now is lost. When the Austrian and German cavalry were disposed of, the Russians, devoted their efforts to cutting off the five armies into which the Austro-German forces were divided from their western base of operations. "The Russians forced them to the southward, at the same time inflicting heavy losses. The Austro-German casualties are said to aggregate over 30,000 men in dead and prisoners. The Russians also claim to have captured 200 cannon."

RUSSIANS DRIVE GERMANS BACK TO BANKS OF THE WARTHE RIVER

OFFICIAL BULLETINS SET FORTH OPPONENTS' CLAIMS

By Associated Press.
Amsterdam, Nov. 7.—A Reuter dispatch from Amsterdam brings the following statement from the Turkish army headquarters received from Constantinople by way of Berlin: "The Russian army showed no activity on Friday. This morning the Russian fleet bombarded the Black Sea fleet Zungulbiak and Kuzulu for two hours. At Kuzulu the Greek steamer Nikos was sunk. At Zungulbiak the French church and the French consulate were destroyed."

OTTOMAN GOVERNMENT ISSUES A STATEMENT

By Associated Press.
Paris, Nov. 7.—The French official communication issued tonight says: "The activity of the Germans has been general on the whole front, but all their attacks have been repulsed, notably those which they directed on Cambrin, Aix Noullette and La Queunoy-En-Santerre. We have taken a few trenches in the region of Thierval to the north of Albert, recaptured our former trenches at the northeast of Vailly and taken at the point of the bayonet the village of St. Remi on the heights of the Meuse."

FRENCH BULLETIN CLAIMS ALLIES' ADVANCE

By Associated Press.
Paris, Nov. 7.—The official announcement given out in Paris today says: "On our left wing, the situation is relatively quiet. On the Yser, downstream from Dixmude the Belgian troops who advanced along the right bank of the Yser from Nieuport in the direction of Landaertzyde and who had been counter-attacked by the Germans were sustained in time. The situation has been entirely re-established in this locality. At Dixmude the marine fusiliers repulsed a fresh counter-offensive movement. Further to the south the attacks of the enemy around Dixchoote also were repulsed by French troops who subsequently advanced to the east of Ypres. To the southeast of this town we have resumed the offensive in combination with the British troops operating in this region and repulsed an attack particularly violent and pronounced by detachments belonging to active army corps recently brought into this region by the Germans."

KAISER REPORTED ON BATTLEFIELD

IS SAID TO DRIVE DAILY ALONG BATTLE LINE ON BELGIAN FRONTIER

HE CHEERS HIS SOLDIERS

Personally Distributes Iron Crosses For Acts of Exceptional Bravery By Soldiers

By Associated Press.
London, Nov. 7.—The correspondent of the Express on the Belgian frontier under date of Friday telegraphs the following: "The Kaiser himself is close to the front in Flanders making efforts to inspire his troops to gain Calais. Despite the nearly successful bomb attack at Thiel Sunday the Kaiser continues to drive daily through the territory behind the Bruges and Courtrai roads. His route is always kept secret and he uses a car of different appearance each time in order to prevent detection by the allies. Daily he singles certain soldiers for acts of exceptional bravery and personally gives them the iron cross. He visits the field hospitals and talks to the wounded. He invariably says 'good day, comrade, the Kaiser wishes you a speedy recovery.' "The Kaiser dined with the staff at Ghent yesterday and returned to the staff headquarters thoroughly dissatisfied with the last few days of the campaign. A party of refugees saw the Kaiser in an automobile yesterday. One of them said, 'The Kaiser sat on the rear seat with the Duke of Wurtemberg; the front seats were occupied by infantrymen while a pilot car filled with soldiers went in front.' The Kaiser's extreme pallor and rigidity of features were very marked. He sat like a statue, wrapped in a grey coat, listening to the reports of a passing officer. At the end he saluted, but without a smile, and then nodded silently to the soldier chaffeur to go on ahead."

THE BRITISH HAVE LOST 1598 OFFICERS SO FAR

By Associated Press.
London, Nov. 7.—A tabulated list of the casualties of commissioned officers in the British expeditionary force in France between October 20 and 27 raises the total of officers killed, wounded or missing to 1598. Among the regiments to suffer heavily were the Royal Welsh Fusiliers who lost seven officers killed, eight wounded and two missing and the Royal Field Artillery, ten of whose officers were wounded.

RUSSIAN CAVALRY EVEN PURSUES GERMANS ACROSS RIVER BERLIN ADMITS

By Associated Press.
London, Nov. 7.—With the exception of the fall of Tsing Tau, the most significant report from any of the battle fields today, and the most welcome, from the allies' point of view, is that the Russian armies besides driving the Austrians back in Galicia have reached the Warthe river in East Prussian Poland and established themselves on the East Prussian frontier; in fact, the Berlin official report says some Russian cavalry crossed the Warthe but was driven back. To this the Russian report adds that the town of Warthe on the Warthe river in Poland has been occupied and that a German column has proceeded westward through Scenstochowa, which is very near the Salacian frontier.

The Russians, too, are responsible for the report that they have defeated the Germans near Mlawa, in Poland, just across the east Prussian boundary and at Lyck in East Prussia. Military observers here say the Russians have followed the retreating Germans at a much faster pace than was anticipated and that if they are in force they may be able to prevent the Germans from taking up their new positions on the Warthe and compel them to fall back to the Salacian frontier. Despite all this, reports persist that the Germans are sending large numbers of their troops, which have been fighting in Poland, westward to oppose the allies in France and Belgium. That they would do this with enormous Russian forces threatening their richest territory, military men here say, seems highly improbable, unless the Germans are satisfied that a small force can prevent the Russians from entering Salacia and East Prussia.

In the west, the same ding dong fighting which has been going on for months, continues. The Belgians who hold the lines along the coast, are being given a comparative rest. After their three months of almost continuous fighting, the Germans still are concentrating around Ypres where they are trying to hack their way through the Anglo-French forces which bar their way to the coast. Both sides claim to have made progress here; the Anglo-French forces to the southeast of the town of Ypres, and the Germans to the northwest.

Correspondents in the rear of the armies say that the fighting which has exceeded in fury any that preceded it has not appreciably lessened and that both sides are using a tremendous weight of artillery in an endeavor to clear the ground for an advance of their artillery. Both armies are being re-inforced. It seems to be realized that the Germans cannot proceed further west because of the cooperation of the warships with the land forces and that a route either here or farther south, must be found if the Germans are to attain their ambition of reaching the French coast.

Elsewhere along the battle line, the usual attacks and counter-attacks have been delivered, with success first to one and then to the other side, but without making any material change in the situation. Things are moving slowly in the near east so far as is known here. The only news from there today concerns the bombardment of the ports of Zunguldiak and Kuzulu on the Asia Minor coast of Turkey, by a Russian fleet, and the sinking of several Turkish transports. It is said also that the Russians have occupied the entire region to the northwest of Erzerun in Asia Minor. Russia is said to be finding useful allies in the Armenians who at last see a hope of being rid of Turkish rule.

Letter And Defense Of Germany From August Koch

E. Von Der Lippe has received a letter from August Koch, brother of Fritz Koch, formerly a resident of this city and employed with the R. O. Harvey Cotton Company, who is now in the German army. Mr. Koch was on a business trip to Bremen when the war broke out and volunteered. His brother who is looking after his correspondence with his American friends encloses in his letter an article from the Westzeitung written by L. Niessen, Detters of Bonn in which Germany's side of the war is set forth.

Mr. Koch's letters and the article referred to follow: "Bremen, Oct. 9, 1914. My Dear Sir: In the name of my brother, who asked me to answer all of his correspondence during his absence, I beg to thank you for your very kind lines of September 16th addressed to Fritz. I shall forward your letters as soon as we know his exact location, for you must know that as soon as war was declared he volunteered to fight for his country, was drilled for seven weeks and left for France exactly two weeks ago yesterday. Since then we have heard from him but sparingly as mail connections are poor and must wait for the enormous trainloads of food, feed, ammunition and soldiers that crowd the tracks throughout Belgium day and night not to speak of the enormous quantities of wounded soldiers and prisoners these trains have to carry back.

"Our last postal received from Fritz dates back about eight days and we don't know how he has been in a battle already or not.

"I enclose some printed matter which will be an eye opener to many of the Americans and in the interest of justice to our country I ask you to please circulate these among your friends as much as possible and if you have time to spare and want to do a good deed for this country you might send a translation to your papers, especially the larger papers like the Dallas News, etc. This will be the best means of stopping the lies that poison your newspapers still today.

"I will appreciate very much if you will send me some of these absurd news circulated over there. I shall give them to our German papers for publication, they are glad to get such material, to show the tactics of our enemies. Nobody in Germany and Austria fears that we will lose, for everybody realizes that this is a battle for existence.

"We are far from having our last sent to the front, there are millions of our men that have not received notice yet to prepare to go to war and all those not perfectly sound and able to bear the strain are not used at all or sent back home to try to get well. This they did with me after I had served for four and a half weeks and near-failure developed on account of the strain which I had to endure. This letter I will have to send through a friend in Holland to get it through for sure. I beg to remain, yours sincerely,

AUGUST KOCH."

The article referred to in the foregoing follows: (By L. Niessen Detters in Bonn) England's first war move was to cut the German cable. At last, as the news sift through the United States we find to what a low down state England, which by herself and alone could have preserved the peace, if she was so inclined, England, which figuratively speaking was the lightning conductor for the terrible catastrophe which even now is shaking the whole world. England believing herself secure on her island saying no need to a world conflagration to destroy a trade competitor, England lays the blame for beginning this war on Germany. If the matter were not so terribly serious it would be considered ridiculous.

Americans can you enlightened minds conceive that a man labors industriously for an object for forty years to wantonly destroy the same in the forty-first year? Such a man would be considered insane. Can you imagine that a people that has worked for four decades in the interest of culture, this people would voluntarily tear down their work, destroy their trade, paralyze their sciences and arts and send their youth even unto death? Do you believe a highly cultured people with an excellent school education extending to the lowest classes, with a powerful, well organized and peace loving democracy, and a strongly defined suffrage movement would willingly allow themselves to be drawn into such an adventurous policy culminating in a vortex of blood? Do you really believe that the entire German people, sixty-six million, from the emperor to the reddest socialist (Social Democrat) has suddenly gone insane?

No one in Germany, do you understand, not a single person wanted this war. On the contrary, we were forced into it in the most cowardly and treacherous manner.

The emperor and the government tried to maintain peace to the last moment. In spite of this and even during the peace negotiations, Russia mobilized against us in the face of peace assurances given by the Czar and the world of honor (?) of the Russian generalissimo. England's coming was laying ready and mobilized of our very nose. France was sending troops to the frontier and refused to give information regarding her object. Belgium, "neutral" Belgium allowed French armies to fly into the Rhine provinces over the heads of the Rhine provinces to French troops had no objection to French troops coming and children are concerned. And what about the wounded? Do we not see them in the hospitals—defenseless, wounded soldiers—with their eyes gouged out by the Belgian mob? Can we not see how they were tortured in the most outrageous manner? And what about our physicians peror and government of high treason to their country.

Thus our situation may explain the conduct of our socialists to foreign countries, as those of the party leaders which most love peace, are today fighting in the front ranks as volunteers. The socialists wanted peace and gave demonstrations of peace to the very last. But when the fog suddenly cleared and every child throughout the country recognized the terrible danger into which the Fatherland was plunged, when all could plainly see the well prepared plot, then of course the whole German people rose as one. Right then and there, the whole people from the Kaiser to the last socialist arose as a solid mass against the triple attempt to strangle Germany. Then and there, in one day, disappeared all political party lines in our country and Germans went to the front to fight for their beloved Fatherland and for their culture. We have no hatred for France in our country, not even here at the Rhine, the most exposed provinces as it may be for universal peace, has in its conception a noble and chivalrous motive and we respect every knightly nation. Nor do we hate the people of Russia. We have compassion for this people, which through the power of an incapable retrograde and vindictive government is kept in a most deplorable condition to which a nation is capable of sinking, a state of abject ignorance, poverty and superstition.

But the just indignation of our country, directs itself against the shameful race treason of England: against the cowardice of a great and free nation attacking a neighbor already fighting enemies on two of her borders; against the venal baseness by which she is filling the world with lies; against the disregard of even the most primitive laws of European culture, inciting in Asia the Yellow Race and in Africa the black race against European model colonies known to be momentarily defenseless.

Do any of you Americans believe in earnest the fiction of Belgium's neutrality which England felt moral bound to protect? Even an Englishman could hardly be found guilty of being as credulous as that. England it has been openly conceded for some time that it is simply a question of commercial war against Germany. Respect for neutrality? Can it be called respect for neutrality when England seized two Turkish battleships while Turkey was still a neutral power? When England in neutral Spanish waters sank a German vessel; this very ship, as told by the English themselves, having shortly before permitted two English vessels, that had fallen into their hands, to England under protest on account of the women and children aboard. Can the term "neutrality" be applied where Belgium demands neutral consideration solely from Germany, while she is secretly playing the part of an ally with France and England? Believe me, if in place of the Germans, the French had been the first ones to enter Liege, nobody would have given a snap about "Belgian neutrality." That the French were not the first ones to die to the efficiency of the German railway system, which enables the German army to mobilize in such an incredibly short time, and to the wonderful precision and speed of the general mobilization management. It most certainly is not due to French respect for Belgian neutrality. But when we in the Rhine provinces read about the atrocities which the Germans are said to have committed in Belgium, we may justly ask ourselves whether the world has not been turned upside down.

You people across the sea are getting English and French news only, but we here in the provinces do see with our own eyes and do hear with our own ears. Surely atrocities have been committed in Belgium—horrible atrocities—atrocities, the like of which the Belgian government had the most urgent reason to hush—atrocities which recall all the horrors of the Thirty Years War and the Indian massacres. But these atrocities had been committed before a single German soldier had an opportunity to do the slightest harm to any Belgian citizen; they were perpetrated upon the defenseless wives and children of Germans expelled from Belgian territory. In Antwerp and Brussels thousands of them owned their honesteas, having for decades resided there as peaceful and industrious citizens. They were not given time to remove their belongings or dispose of their property, the privileges of railway transportation in most instances being withheld. Hundreds and thousands of defenseless and unfortunates were left exposed to the brutality of a misguided mob; their homes were plundered and destroyed before a German soldier had set foot into a Belgian town. Ill-used, robbed, ragged, bleeding—a number of children in dying condition—they came across the border, the waters of the Rhine provinces no eyes? Have we no ears? Did we not peruse for weeks the long lists of the missing that had gone lost during that most degrading persecution of a furious mob? Did not those peaceable burghers for weeks search desperately for their wives, sisters, daughters, who with unspeakable cruelty had been hunted down and outraged before German soldiers had even met up with the Belgians? Where was the voice of culture raised at that time? Need it remain silent where German women and children are concerned? And what about the wounded? Do we not see them in the hospitals—defenseless, wounded soldiers—with their eyes gouged out by the Belgian mob? Can we not see how they were tortured in the most outrageous manner? And what about our physicians whose throats were cut from behind while bending over those struck to the ground? God knows, we admire the valor of the Belgian army, but the outrages perpetrated by the Belgian mob upon defenseless women and children and on the dying and wounded are witnesses to the most deplorable acts of perverted heroism.

I have perused articles full of moral indignation over the burning of Louvain. In regard to this it may be safely stated that the damage it has caused is far more regretted by Germany and her army than by the Belgian mob who forced our well disciplined troops to resort to such extreme measure of severity. That Louvain was doomed to this fate is deplored throughout the whole world of art, even though the reports about Louvain have been proven incredibly exaggerated. But why establish a double moral? Suppose the English-French scheme to surprise our country had carried and Germany—with art treasures of every kind had been destroyed through the allies supposed superior force? Would that have altered circumstances? Many Americans know the Rhineland as well as the wonderful churches of Cologne. Fourteen days after the declaration of war, with the people all around serenely following in the footsteps of the English newspaper bulletin: "Cologne completely destroyed! Population fleeing in wild panic to Duesseeldorf." This seems ludicrous to any one living in the town reported destroyed and in a province in which a hostile uniform is to be seen only in the long trains of unscathed captured French, Belgians, Hurcos and English. Although the burning of Louvain may, according to English views, cry out against culture, why should the supposed destruction of the old and hallowed city like Cologne—likewise according to English views—be celebrated as a glorious feat of arms? Is there any difference?

Germany knows and also loves the old homes of culture in Belgium. Germany had no intention to injure Belgium in any way, shape or manner. Belgium was not compelled to suffer any more than Luxemburg. Since the extreme necessities of war left no other course for Germany but to march through Belgium; Belgium was offered peace and sufficient indemnity for any damage or inconvenience caused by the transport of German troops through Belgian territory, which offer was refused.

When on August 7th, Liege had fallen, this offer was renewed. The honor of Belgium would, after the exceptionally brave defense of Liege, have remained intact, not only in the eyes of France and England, but in those of the entire world, since Germany was ready for any honorable mutual agreement. Belgium would listen to but England and France with which she had previous treaties in spite of her professions of neutrality. But why, when the victorious army has been so basely vilified—why had not Brussels suffered? Why not Ghent? How does it happen that everything is in first class shape today even in Liege? Is it probable for an army to be humane in one place and savagely cruel and without cause in another place? Of course, to justify England nursery tales about England taking up arms only to preserve Belgium's neutrality, sentiment has to be manufactured by reporting "German atrocities in Belgium." In justification of the triple attempt at strangulation the doleful lamentation about Belgium must cloak the excuse, which the triple entente stands so very much in need of.

Though born and raised in Germany, my mother early taught me the meaning of the word "fair." Americans, ask your common sense, which side played fair, the side which had to cut the cable in order to deny the primary cause of the bloodiest war ever caused, through trade competition to blame and accuse of this justly done a triply aggressed nation which they sought to destroy on the side on which a peaceful people is forced to a most desperate struggle to defend the results gained after forty years of arduous work in the interest of science and art? Believe me, if fortune had favored the triple entente's attacks and Germany really had been crushed, neither Frenchman, Russian or Englishman would have expressed regret about sacrificed German culture. The attack, though planned for years, miscarried. Germany guarded herself, dealing blows to East and West, totally unexpected from a people attacked on three sides. Accordingly the three powers which for years systematically had tried to surround Germany, suddenly invoke "culture" yes, all at once they call to mind treasures of culture destroyed by a wantonly conducted war. Is it possible such "culture" could influence a sober and clear thinking mind? Since like a good many of you, I too, am of German-English extraction, I hate to undervalue your judgment.

Germany asks nobody's pity. She will defend herself or die in the attempt. But as our troops ask for honorable warfare instead of guerilla war from behind ambushes under cover of darkness, so we, as a people, ask for fair play. We protest against the lying intrigues of England, against a farce, a greater or baser one, which the world has never experienced since humanity has a conception of the word "culture."

The blood spilled in this horrible war is crying to heaven. Culture mournfully visits her countenance. But Kilo, silent and austere stands erect and her stylus records in the eternal ledger of history one single name, the name of the guilty nation, the name of England.

In these days of high prices people are learning the wisdom of buying only those foods that really serve the purpose for which food is intended, namely:

to satisfy the appetite, build up muscle and strengthen brain power, and in general produce and maintain a good healthy condition of the body.

Start with the children now. Give them plenty of graham and whole wheat bread—that alone will do away with the use of injurious drugs, because of their gentle laxative qualities.

Then there is my "QUAKER" stock which is always very complete and up-to-date—Quaker oats, a most satisfying and welcome dish for both young and old—Quaker corn meal, sweet and fresh always—and in fact, all the different varieties of "Quaker" goods.

These are just some of the things that will help you to economize on your groceries.

MRS. DARWIN LEAVES FOR GAINESVILLE

WILL RETURN LATER IN MONTH WHEN SHOPS WILL BE SCORED

LOCAL FORCES ORGANIZED

Ladies of Civic League Will Continue Inspection of Shops—Good Results Expected

Friday the final inspections of Mrs. Darwin and her party of Civic Leaguers were made, the party visiting bakeries, grocery stores, meat markets and two dairies. Mrs. Darwin left Saturday for Gainesville, having accomplished the introduction of the pure food movement. However, she expects to return within the next month and on this inspection the shops and stores will be scored. The merchants have all been given score cards and have been shown on which points they are deficient and how they will be graded on this first inspection so that the next visit will find them prepared.

In the inspections made here in the past four days some very bad conditions have been found in a number of the stores, but this may be attributed in part to ignorance as no move of the sort has been made here up to this time, but with the council and mayor and the prominent women of the city interested, it is to be expected that Wichita Falls will get in line with other towns in the State.

Mrs. Darwin recently spent two weeks in Sherman and received from the Sherman Chamber of Commerce and the Grayson County Medical Association endorsements and resolutions, couched in the most flattering terms, on her work. The work, a humanitarian as well as sanitation movement, is one calculated for the protection of the public and one in which the public generally is interested. This work will be carried on by local forces with the occasional aid of Mrs. Darwin and her associates.

QUESTION LEGALITY OF COTTON POOL

ATTORNEY GENERAL CONFERS WITH PRESIDENT OVER MATTER SATURDAY

NEW ENGLAND BANKERS SHY

Make Pledges To Loan Fund Contingent On Favorable Opinion of Gregory

By Associated Press. Washington, Nov. 7.—Attorney General Gregory today conferred with President Wilson over the legality of the $135,000,000 cotton loan fund. It was understood that the attorney general was asked for a formal opinion as to whether or not the fund would violate the Sherman anti-trust act or other general statutes governing combinations which result in raising prices. The question of legality of the fund was raised by New England bankers and pledges made by them for contribution to the fund are said to be contingent upon a favorable opinion by the attorney general.

Germans Order Englishmen Into Detention Camps

By Associated Press. Berlin, Nov. 7.—The police at six o'clock Friday morning notified all Englishmen from the ages of seven to forty-five to report to the police stations for transport to Lubben near Berlin. They were advised to bring two blankets, sheets, etc. The exodus is proceeding. The order of arrest which excepts Colonialists do not interfere with the Germans states the government from the outset took the stand that the civilians ought to be left at liberty and permitted to return home. It says it is adopting the present measure reluctantly in answer to the actions of the British. All day long Englishmen made their way to the lurid detention camps. Most of them are well provided with rags, bed clothes and other necessities. The largest group numbering about 1400 men came from Hamburg. It is composed of 300 residents and 1100 non-residents, the latter mostly sailors from British ships. Among the 1000 residents are many men of wealth and important position. The English churches have not been closed.

TOO MUCH WILSON SAYS VARDEMAN

MISSISSIPPI SENATOR HERE YES, TERDAY SAYS CONGRESS NOT INDEPENDENT

PRESIDENT ALL POWERFUL

Says Progressive Demise Foreordained and That Democrats Face Hard Fight

James K. Vardemann, U. S. senator from Mississippi, "was in the city several hours yesterday between trains while en route from Oklahoma points to Corpus Christi. Senator Vardemann has been lecturing since the adjournment of Congress and spoke Friday night at Grandfield. While here he met O. E. Maer, whose brother was recently appointed collector of the Port of Mobile on the recommendation of the senator.

Mr. Vardemann viewed the slump of the Progressives in the recent election as "foreordained," but admitted that the demise of the Progressive party would make a hard fight for the Democrats in 1916. "There is no place in this country," said the senator, "for more than two strong parties. These, of course, for many years will be the Republican and the Democratic parties. The Progressive party started off all right—some of its members were filled with enthusiasm and a high resolve and they followed the most popular leader this country has ever known. But like most of us who arise in the morning with lofty resolves for the day, they grew tired and weary of the battle when the fire of enthusiasm died down, and that's where election day found them. There are many earnest patriots among the Progressives and I believe many of them will be found with the Democrats in 1916. There are many men with Democratic beliefs in the Republican party. There are just as many men imbued with the Republican ideas in the Democratic party. There are a lot of that kind here in the South especially."

Senator Vardemann believes the Democrats will have to steer the ship of state carefully if they are to win in 1916. He indicated that he believed Democratic congressmen ought to assert their independence and be less influenced by the president. He says that President Wilson is acknowledged the greatest man in the president's chair since Jefferson, and that no president has had such influence over Congress as he. "The president," he says, "doesn't hesitate to use this power. His disapproval of any proposed legislation means its defeat and his approval means its passage. If congressmen think the president is wrong the spell of his influence is such that they stand afraid to stand against him. The senator said he was much disappointed with President Wilson's attitude toward the legislation to provide a $200,000,000 loan to the cotton farmers. "I don't think he knows the situation as you and I can see it," the senator said. "Senator Vardemann was the only Democratic senator who voted against the war revenue bill on the final vote. "We could have forced some relief from Congress to the cotton farmer, if Southern senators had been courageous enough to stand up for their constituents in defiance of the White House," he said.

TWO MORE WELLS TO BE DRILLED IN QUANAH VICINITY

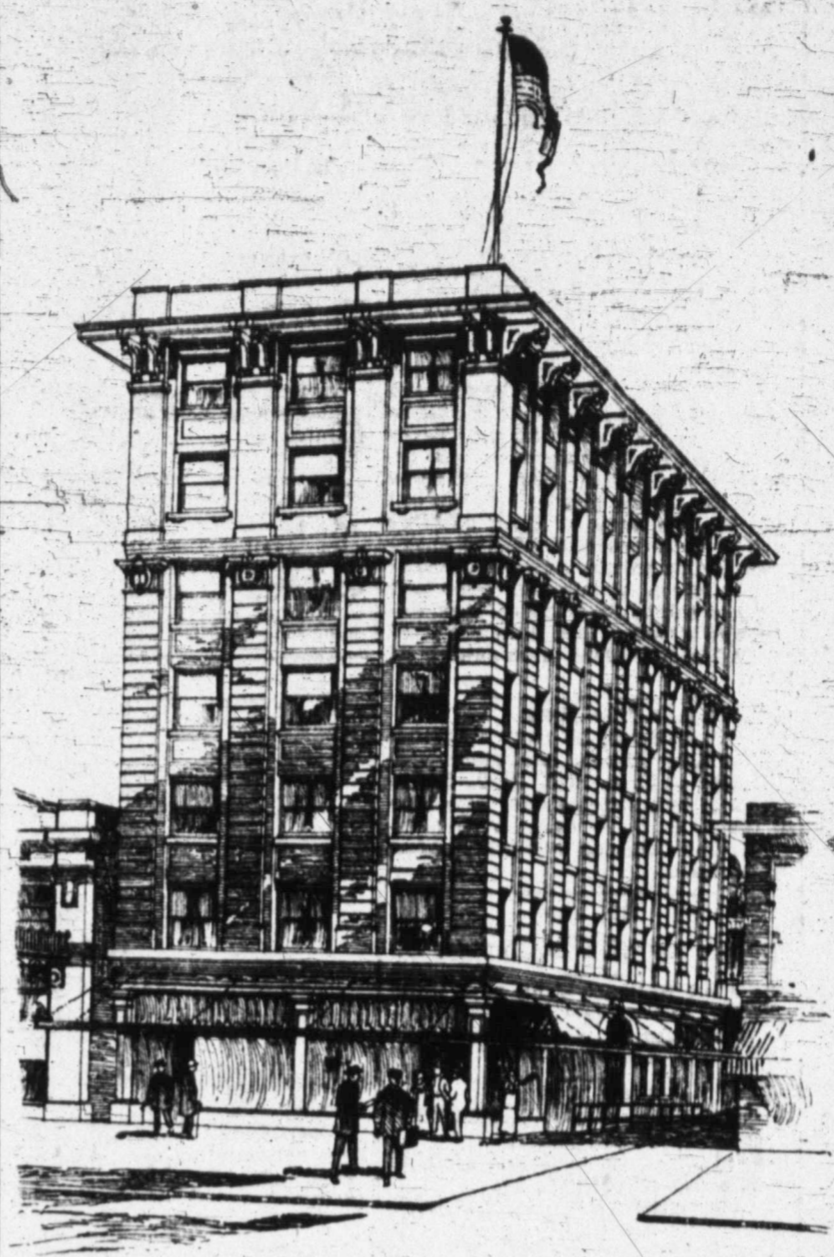

(Quanah, Tbservr)

At least two more oil wells will be drilled near Quanah in a very short time. That is the official information which the Observer was furnished yesterday, with authority to print same. The men who will back the proposition are Pacific coast mining men who have made money in the Alaska field and who are active in mining propositions today. They are of the sort who need no subsidies in such undertakings, and will bring to this field expert service and backlogs. A meeting was held in Goodlett Monday night, attended by about twenty-five property owners from that section of the county. The meeting was attended by W. A. Abernathy of Seattle, Wash. Mr. Abernathy is now well known here, and has been the chief factor in bringing about the present development. It is through his efforts that the two wells about to be started have been financed. Mr. Felch is a well known oil engineer and mineral ogist who has more than a working knowledge of the oil business. And at the Goodlett meeting a proposition was made regarding a block of land for drilling, which the property owners immediately accepted, and the leases will be made at once and placed in escrow for Mr. Felch to be turned over to him on his compliance with certain conditions which he already has arranged to meet to the letter.

How The Westland Will Look With Two Stories Added

Wiley Wyatt, owner of the Westland, has announced that as soon as business conditions improve he will add two more stories to the hotel building, making it a seven-story structure. The accompanying cut shows how the hotel would look with two more stories added. The Westland is known as the finest hotel in Northwest Texas, and its owner, Mr. Wyatt, is justly proud of it. The building was built and is owned by Mr. Wyatt individually. Mr. Wyatt has already had plans drawn and specifications made for the proposed improvement, which he says would have been started before this, but for unfavorable conditions that have resulted from the European war.

Tobacco Is Important Item In Providing Supplies For Army

The value of tobacco on active service is now so well esteemed by the military authorities that today one sees the British government doing what it had never done before, supplying free tobacco to the troops, and in France the factories of the Red Cross work at full pressure, so that the French soldier shall not lack smoking materials, says a London correspondent in the New York Sun.

Only within comparatively recent times, however, has this necessity been officially recognized. Wellington condemned the practice of smoking as being a "species of intoxication occasioned by the fumes of tobacco." And perhaps his dislike arose from an unpleasant experience of his own on one only occasion on which he attempted to smoke a pipe. The weed proved no respecter of the iron duke, and the man who ended Napoleon's career had to succumb to its disturbing properties as any soldier. Even Napoleon himself although an habitual snuff taker, was defeated by a pipe of tobacco.

Official efforts to discourage the use of tobacco were completely negative in the Crimean war. The privations suffered then by the troops resulted in officers and men taking to the panacea adopted by their French and Turkish allies, and by its aid their discomforts were so alleviated that never since the practice of smoking on active service, if not actively encouraged, has been at any rate passively countenanced by those in command both in the army and the navy.

In consequence tobacco has played a notable and beneficial part in the wars of the past century, in fact from Waterloo to South Africa. Probably its soothing and inspiring qualities were never so strongly manifested as in the Franco-German war of 1870. It might be said, indeed, that the crushing defeat inflicted on the French was due largely to the soldiers' lack of tobacco, added, as it was, to the breakdown of the commissariat, where as on the German side the authorities did all they could to insure the troops being plentifully supplied with the weed. An association, headed by the empress, raised tobacco-subscriptions in every town to enable the fighters of fatherland to keep their pipes filled. What a friend in need "sublime tobacco" proved to the fighters in the war of 1870 was indicated by the correspondent of the Daily News before Metz. In his accounts of the campaign he said:

"In every letter we read of the exhausted soldiers, prisoners and maimed victims of battle eagerly asking for the soothing narcotic, begging for it sometimes, finding it a solace under the hardships of weather, of hunger, of disease; finding it enables them even to endure the painful searches and amputations of the surgeon."

He related how the pay sergeant of one company smoked his cigar while a doctor cut the bullet out of his back, and again how a maimed soldier lying upon the battlefield with the dead and dying round him and in bodily agony asked but for one relief—a cigar. And thus it has been in every war.

The maimed and shattered on the field of battle piteously plead for tobacco, the poor wounded by the hospitals appeal not for bandages or medicine, but for tobacco; the troops in the trenches undergo any hardship if they have but the comfort of tobacco,

HENRY SIEGEL CASE TO OPEN TOMORROW

FORMER DEPARTMENT STORE HEAD TO FACE FOURTEEN INDICTMENTS

HAS HAD REMARKABLE CAREER

Rises From Prosperity To Affluence In Short Time Then Goes Down In Failure

New York, Nov. 7.—The district attorney's office was busy today with final preparations for the trial of Henry Siegel, the former department store king, whose case is scheduled to come up Monday in the supreme court at Genesee. Siegel is to be tried on fourteen indictments growing out of the failure of the Siegel department stores and banking enterprises in New York and Boston in the early part of this year. It is believed that the trial will proceed without further delay. District Attorney Whitman has practically completed all of the preliminary work and expressed himself well satisfied with the shape in which the case of the prosecution and the defendant. The plans of Stanchfield and Levy, attorneys for Mr. Siegel, have not been made public, and whether they will seek a further postponement of the trial or a change of venue will not be known until the case is called Monday.

The trial of Mr. Siegel is expected to add another sensational chapter to the life story of a man who, in a comparatively short time, rose from poverty to a place in the first rank among "merchant princes" of America, the proprietor of several of the largest retail mercantile establishments in the world, and the man who is chiefly responsible for the development of the department store idea to its present enormous proportions.

Henry Siegel came from Germany to the United States in 1867. He found employment in Washington at a wage of $3.50 per week. He was industrious, frugal, honest and enterprising, and soon grasped the essential fact that if he wanted to make money he would have to educate himself. So he set to work at night school, and at the end of four years had a fair education and a salary of $15 a week. In the meantime, an elder brother had established a store in a Pennsylvania town and Henry went to work for him. It succeeded, and the brothers were able to sell out at a good profit. Then they went to Chicago, where they repeated their success upon a larger scale.

Henry Siegel entered a new firm, manufacturers of ladies cloaks, and traveled all over the United States. Wherever he went he spent his time in studying the stores and at the end of ten years, had acquired a volume of information upon the subject of department stores. He had noted defects everywhere, and he believed that it would be possible for him to open the first perfect department store. He quit the manufacturing firm, and came the first big Siegel-Cooper store in Peoria, Ill. It prospered, but its career was interrupted by a fire. Then came the first big Siegel-Cooper store in Chicago. It was at that time the greatest store that had ever been erected, and was considered an emblem of Chicago's progress.

Within a few years Henry Siegel was reckoned one of the greatest retail merchants in the world. Soon he launched himself upon New York, and eclipsed the Chicago store with a new wonder. Other stores were put up, in New York and Boston. Private banks were established in connection with the stores, and Siegel began to sell stock in his enterprises.

A year ago Mr. Siegel was looked upon by the general public as a man of unbounded wealth and tremendous influence. Then the crash came. His stores and banks failed together. Thousands of his employees were thrown out of work without warning and other thousands had lost all or part of their money in the Siegel banking enterprises. The investigation that followed indicated that in recent years Siegel had paid more attention to selling stock in his enterprises than to selling the goods in his stores. Extravagance in his manner of living and in the conduct of his business were also given as reasons for the failure.

Misfortune and ruin have followed in the path of the Siegel failure. Many of the bank depositors were ruined by being deprived even temporarily of their small savings. Within a month after the failure of the wife of Mr. Siegel applied for divorce. Three weeks ago Frank E. Vogel, the son-in-law and partner of Mr. Siegel and co-defendant with him in the indictments growing out of the failure, died suddenly in his apartments at the Hotel Biltmore. And today Mr. Siegel himself is said to be penniless, with the possibility of being in the hands of a prison starting him in the face. But the courage and pluck that brought the young German immigrant from poverty to affluence apparently have not deserted the bankrupt merchant, for he appears confident that his trial will result favorably and that in time he will settle his obligations and begin anew.

Judge C. B. Felder, for the past four years our efficient county judge, will resume the practice of his profession just as soon as his successor qualifies, which will probably be tomorrow, and has opened offices in the Ward building on Eighth street.

Cotton farmers in this part of the State are selling but a portion of their cotton, as is evidenced by the fact that a drive through the country will show that nearly every cotton farmer has from one to a dozen bales of cotton stored on their premises. It is perhaps the best way. The price of cotton, while it has not advanced to any great extent above the price it was selling at one week ago, has not gone down, and the prospects are that it will advance a few points during the next week. At any rate, the cotton farmers feel that about it and are therefore backing their judgment by holding their cotton.

The Texas and Pacific Railway announces that it has a contract for the hauling of 3500 box cars of cotton seed cake and meal to New Orleans for export. That begins to look like business in that particular line is picking up somewhat. If other roads have business in mind, it is worth the market for this product is going to be in better demand than for the past 60 days, and perhaps the price for cotton seed will also go up three or four dollars per ton.

The mouth disease that has become an epidemic among cattle has caused the National government to declare a quarantine in six states, as a result of which the stock yards in Chicago have been closed. The disease originated in Michigan, and doubtless the measures taken by the government will confine it to the Northern and Eastern states. The states affected are thinking of asking for an appropriation from the government to fight the disease.

Applications for charters for about one dozen cotton mills have been filed down at Austin. The low price of cotton, probably, has caused this, and to that extent Texas will be benefited. There should be a cotton mill in every cotton market of any importance in the State, and if this was true now the price of cotton would not be as low as now. If anything, the construction of cotton mills is a better way in which to boost the price of cotton than the "Buy-a-Bale" movement of any other plan or scheme that has yet been suggested. If the next legislature will pass a law exempting cotton mills from taxation for twenty years, that of itself should be sufficient inducement to have a number of cotton mills constructed during the next few years.

The cotton farmers of the cotton States have in their power to make cotton worth ten cents and even twenty cents per pound. A short cotton crop sells for more money than a surplus cotton crop. That has been thoroughly demonstrated. The only trouble now is that too much cotton has been produced. They will cut the acreage next year and try diversification of crops. At least that will be the sensible and sane thing for them to do. From present indications that is what they will do. It will help them more than all the agitation that can be done to induce the government to come to their aid. It is a problem they the cotton farmers themselves, should solve.

The Republicans and most Democrats are saying since the results of Tuesday's election have become known and analyzed, that the Progressive or Bull Moose party as a political party, is no longer to be considered as one of the great political parties. In this, however, they are likely to be mistaken. While this paper has never been a political follower or adviser of Theodore Roosevelt, it does recognize the great ability of the ex-president. No other living man could have accomplished what he did in the campaign of 1912—brought his party and carry with him to the polls more than 4,000,000 voters—by far the biggest half of the Republican party, and it must be remembered he did this with only about three months in which to organize his party. In 1916 the Republican party stands no more chance of winning the presidency than it did in 1912, unless Roosevelt is permitted to dictate the policy and the platform of that party, and it begins to look now as that is the way this Republican row is going to terminate.

Four of the six states which voted on state-wide Tuesday went dry against two that went wet. This makes, we believe, fourteen of the forty-eight states which have so far voted out the saloon and the agitation is going on in a dozen more states, which will culminate in an election within the next few years. In the end, he state-wide absolute prohibition, but some sort of substitute that will result in the extirpation of the saloon as it is operated in America is bound to come, and at the rate at which states have been voting them out the past few years, that time isn't so far off, as some reformers count time.—Democrat Record and Chronicle.

DEMOCRATS INCREASE SENATE MAJORITY.

Thomas J. Pierce, secretary of the National Democratic committee, does not seem the least bit discouraged or disturbed by the results of Tuesday's election, and in answer to the claims being made by Republican newspapers of a Republican victory at the polls Tuesday, has issued the following statement: "The Republican press talks of a victory achieved at the polls. They lost three United States Senators, while the Democracy elected all its Democratic Senators and increased its majority in the Senate from ten to sixteen. In the light of the political history of the Nation, the Republicans should have carried the House, but they did not. Instead, the Democratic party smashed every political precedent established since the foundation of the government, and elected a Democratic House by the largest majority ever given a political party following a revision of the tariff laws. Only once before has a political party been given a majority in the lower branch of Congress following a revision of the tariff laws. This occurred in 1858, when, following the enactment of the Dingley tariff law, the Republican majority of forty-seven was cut to thirteen. The enactment of the McKinley, the Payne-Aldrich and all other tariff laws has sent the dominant parties to defeat.

"In analyzing the result of Tuesday last, the fact should not be overlooked that the Republican party in 1898 profited by a war with a foreign country, otherwise it could hardly have survived the ensuing congressional election. With commerce of the Nation temporarily throttled as a result of a world-wide condition, and forced to enact a war tax on the eve of the congressional elections, the administration went before the people and achieved a victory. The only approach by a dominant political party following a revision of the tariff. The result of Tuesday is nothing short of marvelous in the light of the facts. The Republicans have achieved a victory invisible. They do not control any branch of the Federal government."

CARRANZA'S ELIMINATION.

(Houston Chronicle.) Mexico appears as jubilant over Carranza's prospective elimination as it was over that of Huerta a few days ago. The only apprehensive difference being that Carranza is somewhat easier to get rid of. It is quite probable, moreover, that his exit will produce no more lasting effect on general conditions than did that of Huerta, and will be significant only in the opportunity it affords for the elevation of still another victim. Though a giant in physique, Carranza seems to have proved a midget in intellect, and has made slight impression on those with whom he has come in contact. Compared with Huerta, he amounts to little for whatever else may be said of that troublesome individual, he showed himself to be a man not lacking either in courage or political qualities.

Carranza was given every chance by a kind fate. Even the attitude of the United States unconsciously played into his hand. He was called upon to risk little in his rise to power, the bulk of hazard being constantly assumed by others. In his dealings with his associates and in his policy toward outsiders he has shown himself to be stubborn and inclined to quibble. He has quarreled with the man who made him what he is to such an extent that a genuine reconciliation is impossible, and at one time his short-sighted mulishness came near precipitating armed intervention on the part of this country.

His long-windedness lacks the vitality and poise of statesmanlike utterances, while the patronizing posture he has endeavored to assume toward those who really boosted him into power is disgusting. His elimination can produce little effect, because he has created no profound influence and surrounded himself with no great following. The revolution, which he pretends to represent finds real expression in such men as Gonzales, Villa and Angeles, while Carranza is regarded as little more than a figurehead. His present willingness to quit a post of leadership which he is supposed to have held for nearly two years argues a vacillating and timorous temperament, which, though obstinate in the face of details, becomes bewildered and distressed when stern and dangerous issues are to be faced. Events of the past few weeks have demonstrated Carranza's unfitness and incapacity to govern such a country as Mexico, even temporarily, and the sooner he is disposed of the better it will be for the country. Who will be his successor is not yet clear, for it is not certain whether the military chiefs will abide by the decision of the Aguas Calientes conference; but, whoever it is, Mexico cannot suffer, for Carranza offers the least hope of any of the leaders.

Turnip Lice—What They Are Their Habits. And How to Kill Them

The following concerning the turnip louse, its appearance, habits and the best methods of killing it, was prepared by F. B. Paddock, assistant state entomologist, who spent several days here this week inspecting louse infested fields and gardens: This is a small insect which belongs to the general class of insects as plant lice. It feeds upon turnips, mustard, radish, rape, cabbage and closely related plants. This insect is generally distributed over the State and does much injury wherever it is found. The insect does the injury by sucking the juices of the plant by inserting its beak into the tissues. The damage which is done by this pest is perhaps most noticeable upon turnips, though other of the above-named plants when grown for winter truck often suffer from its ravages. Not only does the small home garden suffer from the presence of this insect but it is almost impossible to grow turnips on an extensive scale.

Life History

The first lice occur upon the plants when they are only a few inches high, from the middle of August till October, depending upon the locality. The lice which first appear in the fall have wings and these fly from plant to plant so that the spread of the pest is very rapid at the start. The young lice which develop next upon the plants do not have wings and move about very little, even on the leaf on which they are born. As the number of lice increase and the food supply becomes short more winged lice develop. These fly to new plants and to new fields being produced in one warm autumn day and a single adult louse may produce one hundred young.

Spray Materials

As this insect inserts its beak into the tissues of plants and does not chew any, it is not possible to exterminate it by the use of poisons. Materials known as "Contacticides" must be used. As the name implies, these materials kill only when they come in contact with wings and legs of the insects. Those insects which are not actually hit with any of the materials are no in any way harmed by the application. There are several materials which may be used and all are equally effective. It is merely the choice of the operator which is to be used. These materials do not prevent one from using the leaves for greens after the application has been made.

Whale Oil Soap

Whale oil soap or fish oil soap is a very good material with which to spray for the turnip louse. This is used at the rate of 1 pound of the soap to 20 gallons of water. The soap is readily dissolved by adding it into a small quantity of boiling water. When the soap is dissolved add the required amount of water to make the formula given above.

Laundry Soap

If it is not possible to obtain the whale oil soap one may use a good grade of laundry soap which should be used in the same proportions as the whale oil soap. Usually it takes two bars of soap to weigh one pound.

Pumps

The kind of spray pump needed will depend upon the size of the infested area which is to be sprayed. For the usual home garden a good bucket spray pump will serve the purpose very well, though the process of applying the spray with such an outfit is somewhat slow. If one has a very large area of plants to spray a good barrel sprayer should be used. A good outfit of this kind should supply two lemons of hose at a pressure and the application can be made rapidly. For the extensive grower and truck gardener it is advisable to have a hand power pump. Regardless of what class of pump is deemed necessary only the best should be purchased.

Attachments

As the turnip lice feed almost entirely upon the under sides of the leaves, the secret of success in the control of the pest depends upon getting the material onto the under sides of the leaves also. To best do this the

New Process Promises To Win Place In Automobile and Vehicle Painting Industry

An invention which promises to have a decided effect upon the automobile painting industry has recently been perfected by a Wichitan, Frank H. Elliott, foreman of the painting department at the Wichita Falls motor works.

The six cylinder of Wiley Blair is being painted according to Mr. Elliott's method and the result will be watched with interest.

The system is applicable to bodies of wood, aluminum and other metals. Vibration from the motor, road oil, sand blast from wheels and oil and grease from the engine are said not to affect it.

ROUMANIAN ARMY COULD DECIDE GALICIA FIGHTING

Correspondent For English Newspaper Says Intervention By Roumania Probable

By Associated Press. London, Nov. 7.—The Sofia, Bulgaria correspondent of the Times in a survey of the positions of the Balkan countries in the European war thinks there is a prospect of the assumption of the movement in Roumania in favor of intervention and he points out that the well equipped Roumanian army of 400,000 men on Austro-Hungarian territory probably would decide the campaign in Galicia.

In regard to Bulgaria he says that should she receive a mandate for the occupation of Macedonia similarly to that apparently accorded Greece for the occupation of Epirus, he understands no difficulty would exist in mobilizing the Bulgarian army and placing it at the disposal of the entente powers.

Contact Shows Marked Improvement By Locals, But Has Many Disagreeable Features

Withdrawal from the field because of dissatisfaction over a ruling of the referee, the Vernon football eleven yesterday afternoon forfeited a game to the Wichita Falls high school team.

The game clouds Vernon's title to the championship of Northwest Texas and their record for sportsmanlike conduct are likewise clouded as a result.

Up to the beginning of yesterday's game Vernon had not been scored upon by an opponent, and had scored a total of 168 points.

Locals Much Improved The Wichita Falls team played a head, gritty game, working to their utmost every inch of the way, using the forward pass with a skill and precision that was beautiful and checking the brilliant Vernon attack by sheer pluck.

Up to the beginning of yesterday's game Vernon had not been scored upon by an opponent, and had scored a total of 168 points.

Much Wrangling The players were on the field an hour and forty minutes and during that time there was a bare half hour of actual play.

What little there was of football, however, wasn't so bad. Vernon has heavy, well-balanced team, and a line that should have done more than it did.

RUSSIANS DRIVE GERMANS BACK TO BANK OF WARTHE

There is no change in the political situation in the Balkans. Nine of the present neutral states have made any move. It is said, however, that agitation has been renewed in Roumania for participation of that country in the war on the side of the allies.

The fall of Tsing Tau naturally causes rejoicing here. It is believed that with the surrender of German forces, the Anglo-Japanese fleet which took part in the siege will be detailed to hunt down the German cruisers in the Pacific; no announcement has been made concerning the amount of booty the allies obtained through the surrender of Tsing Tau, but it is believed that the Germans destroyed everything possible before capitulating. When the siege began in port were one German cruiser, four gunboats and three destroyers, the Austrian cruiser Kaiserin Elizabeth, five German merchantmen and several prizes the Germans had taken. Of these vessels, one destroyer ran ashore and was captured, and it is believed the Austria-cruiser was blown up. It is possible that the German ships met a similar fate.

Great Britain is not yet satisfied that all has been told of the Pacific naval battle and continues to hope that the German cruisers Leipzig and Dresden which engaged the Gasgow and which have not been reported since the battle, have at least been damaged.

EARTHQUAKE SHOCKS ALARMS INHABITANTS OF MESSINA

By Associated Press.
Messina, Italy, Nov. 7.—A strong earthquake shock which has been felt in this vicinity has caused considerable alarm among the populace, especially as it follows closely the fresh activities of Mount Vesuvius. Fresh are entertained that the new shock is the forerunner of another earthquake period. According to the register at the observatory the center of today's earthquake was about seventy-seven miles from Messina, Mt. Atna is also reported to be again active in Sicily.

By Associated Press.

WAS ARMY CONTRACT CAUSE OF FIRE?

By Associated Press.
Springfield, Mo., Nov. 7.—An investigation is under way, it was announced tonight, to determine the cause of the fire which destroyed the plant of the Herman-Sanford Saddlery company here today with a loss estimated at $265,000. Police officials seem inclined to place some credence in the report that a contract by the firm to manufacture $200,000 worth of cavalry saddles and artiller harness for the British army is indirectly responsible for the conflagration.

CANNOT AGREE TO INDISCRIMINATE AMNESTY

By Associated Press.
San Antonio, Texas, Nov. 7.—R. V. Peaquera, Carranza's representative, gave out a statement tonight from the first chief, referring to the request of the United States as to the granting of amnesty to Mexicans in Vera Cruz. Carranza points out that the indiscriminate granting of amnesty resulted in the overthrow of Madero and Huerta, and says that he cannot, under the Mexican constitution, grant an amnesty until names of those for whom it is sought are provided. An indiscriminate amnesty would be most unsatisfactory, he says.

Brienne le Chateau—A bronze statue of Napoleon, at the age of 16, in this town of northern France commemorates the fact that the Emperor, when a boy, attended the famous military school there, which was suppressed in 1799. The town is 23 miles south of Vitry and 25 miles southwest of St. Diar. Thirty years after he had left school, Napoleon returned to the town at the head of an army and administered a decisive defeat to Blucher. This was in 1814. A magnificent chateau, dating from the 18th century overlooks the town.

WHO HOLDS COTTON PICKING RECORD IN THIS COUNTY?

A short time ago Sam Killian got his name in the paper as a big cotton picker, but he was not satisfied with his former record, so yesterday he got busy and picked 320 pounds just a hundred pounds more than his former record. In the same field the same day Austin Bird picked 319 pounds making a total of 1739 pounds for two pickers in one day.—Olney Enterprise.

By Associated Press.
Reno, Nev., Nov. 7.—With the Republican state capital committee claiming the election of Sam Platt, Republican, over Francis G. Newlands, by fifteen votes and the Democratic central committee claiming a lead for Newlands of 110 votes, the senatorial fight in Nevada still was in doubt today. Defective eyesight is an appalling handicap in every walk of life, yet it is a fact that an extremely large percentage of children suffer in one form or another from eye trouble, and it is a further remarkable fact that a wonderful change in the physical and mental condition of the child is effected the moment such defects are corrected. Many a "short-sighted" boy deliberately conceals his infirmity and suffers unmerited punishment and humiliation from teacher and companions alike because of it. Parents should appreciate this condition and discover for themselves whether their children's eyesight is perfect or otherwise.

THE TRUTH ABOUT CAFFEINE. That coffee is a healthful, mild stimulating and most beneficial beverage, is a fact of world-wide acceptance. And the very "soul" of coffee is caffeine. Its aromatic and tempting essence is caffeine, the essential oil which has never been discovered in the green bean, but which invariably develops in the roasting. This hidden combination of caffeine and caffeine in the great laboratory of Nature resulted in coffee. This inimitable product is unlike any and all other fruits of orchard or garden. The "only" thing in the world that smells like coffee, tastes like coffee, and is as refreshing as coffee—is coffee. It stands alone; unrivaled in excellence, unapproachable in its delicious aroma, ever comforting and satisfying. For a cup of good coffee there is no substitute; nothing that even approaches its natural and inherent virtues. As was written in ancient days—"Good wine needs no bush," surely in these modern times; for good coffee properly brewed to either serve or drink there need be no apology. The steaming and bracing cup tells its own story of matchless flavor and goodness to all the world. And yet there are those who do not interpret that interesting message to tired humanity aright. They do not perceive that for mankind in the mass, coffee is the one table beverage most widely needed. On land or at sea, at the quiet home table or on the tented field, coffee is welcomed for the comfort and benefit it confers. Coffee being one of Nature's rich and perfect gifts, those who attempt to beat Nature's creative handiwork in the beverage line, have a long and disappointing road to travel. There can be no substitute for the real thing, nor anything "just as good" to those who love and are benefited by this cheering cup. CAFFEINE IS AN ALKALOID. Caffeine is an alkaloid. Caffeine is found in coffee, tea, cocoa and "mate" (Paraguayan tea), also in the kola nut, in differing quantity. In coffee it is caffeine; in tea, theine, and in cocoa a similar element is called theobromine. From the latter is prepared both chocolate and cocoa. The world's most enjoyable and popular table beverages all contain caffeine. Caffeine is used medicinally; it is found in all drug stores and hospitals. Caffeine is the only known heart stimulant or tonic without reactory effect. It is also an antidote for opium poisoning. Caffeine is a mild, refreshing stimulant, and in no sense habit-forming. Caffeine, on distillation, crystallizes (with one molecule of water) into slender white, silky needles. Caffeine is a cardiac stimulant and a "diuretic," and this is why hot coffee is so valuable in many types of headache. Coffee is an antiseptic, an internal germicide and a most effective disinfectant in the sick room, when finely ground and sprinkled on a hot metal pan or plate. Caffeine is used, in some form, by every civilized race, because the caffeine drinks are found healthful, helpful natural stimulants, without reactory effect. Your personal experience tells you that this is true. 608-10 Ohio Avenue. Phone 35. O. W. BEAN & SON Coffee Roasters

DELEGATES FROM LOCAL CHAPTER RETURN HOME

Mrs. R. P. Watts, S. H. Burnside and J. L. Jackson returned yesterday from Houston, where they attended the state convention of the Daughters of the American Revolution as delegates from the Major Francis Grace Chapter of this city. Both Mrs. Watts and Mrs. Burnside held state offices and were re-elected for the coming year. All officers with the exception of the registrar, Mrs. J. S. Hawkins, and the chaplain, Mrs. J. H. French, who were ineligible, having served the allotted two terms, were re-elected. They are: State regent, Mrs. Andrew Rose, Texarkana; Mrs. R. P. Watts, registrar, Wichita Falls; corresponding secretary, Mrs. C. A. Callom, Texarkana; historian, Mrs. W. A. Rowan; treasurer, Mrs. S. H. Burnside and chaplain, Mrs. William Evans of Galveston.

A half dozen resolutions were adopted, a number of amendments to the by-laws discussed and voted, and the time set for the next convention which is to be held at Texarkana, sometime during the early part of November. There was little or no opposition in the selection of Texarkana, this being the home of the state regent.

Among the most important of the resolutions was one declaring war, and providing for teaching children in the schools its horrors as a means of crystallizing the sentiment against it. Another urged the use of cotton materials in all women's dress goods and in commodities for the home. A third provided for limiting the distribution of year books to the officers of each chapter. This was deemed advisable in view of the expenses of issuing 1600 to cover the entire membership of the association.

the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, officiating. Although witnessed by the immediate family alone, the wedding appointments were perfect in every detail, the stately American Beauty rose, favorite flower of the bride, being chosen to supply the decorative motif. The drawing room in which the ceremony took place, was carpeted in white and outlined by banks of ferns with roses intermingled. In one corner the bridal altar was formed of ferns banked high and an arch of American Beauties surrounding the altar. On white pedestals at either side of the arch were placed immense clusters of the favored flowers in harmony with the general effect.

As the hour approached Mrs. Ernest E. Lee, sister of the bride, at the piano played softly the Mendelssohn Wedding March and Masters Robert Ernest and William Oliver Lee, small nephews of the bride, entered carrying broad white satin streamers and with these formed an aisle to the altar. Directly preceding the bride and groom came Master Herbert Somers, also a nephew of the bride, who carried the wedding ring, an exquisite platinum flange ring, embedded with diamonds, in a half opened American Beauty rose. The bride entered on the arm of the groom and proceeded through the aisle formed by the ribbon bearers to the altar, where the simple but impressive ring ceremony, Dr. Hill spoke the words that made them man and wife.

The bride was gowned in an imported model of white-crepe de chine, in the new basque drupe, with garnitures of pearls. A white corded hat was worn with trimmings of bird of paradise. An immense arm bouquet of the same exquisite American Beauties featured in the decorations lent a charming color to her bridal array. The gift of the groom was a platinum and diamond necklace the ornament of the bride. The groom was garbed in the conventional black and the small attendants wore white suits with all accessories to match. Mrs. Ernest Lee wore a frock of black lace with a single full blown American Beauty as corsage ornament. The mother of the bride wore a white silk lace robe over black brocaded satin and Mrs. Somers, sister of the bride wore a white accordion pleated satin gown, with over drappings of black and American Beauty chiffon.

Immediately after the ceremony an elaborate wedding dinner was served, the bride and groom then leaving on their wedding trip to New York City. Mrs. Culp's traveling suit was a stunning model of tete de negre silk velvet with trimmings of fitch fur. Her hat was to match, trimmed with gold bronze ostrich. Beaded bronze shoes and other accessories to harmonize completed the toilette. There were present at the wedding ceremony Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Perham, father and mother of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Lee and children of Panama, and Mrs. Somers and son.

Mr. and Mrs. Culp will be at home after the first of January at the Torso Hotel, Muskogee, Okla. This wedding is one of more than usual interest, both bride and groom being unusually prominent and popular. The bride has been a resident of this city for several years and was one of the most popular members of the Wichita Falls society. Of striking appearance and unusual culture and charm she had a wide circle of friends who will regret her departure from this city but will be ready to congratulate Mr. Culp on his good fortune.

The groom is also well known in this city in a business way. He is one of the most prominent of the mid-continent oil producers and also is a member of the Culp Brothers Sheep Co. of Albuquerque, N. M., and ranks high in the business and financial circles of his home State.

MRS. ROBERTS ENTERTAINS AT BRIDGE FRIDAY

Mrs. T. W. Roberts was the first formal hostess of the fall season, entertaining Friday afternoon with a sweet pea bridge matinee. Social activities for the past several weeks have been confined to occasional club meetings and in between season affairs, so it was with the utmost pleasure that the devotees of the bridge table received cards announcing Mrs. Roberts as hostess. The day chosen was perfect and the beauty of the Indian summer afternoon was reflected in the decorations of the charming interior of the handsome residence. Fall flowers in the sweet pea tints were used in riotous profusion throughout the entire suite, a vase of roses in pink and white or a huge cluster of rare chrysanthemums meeting the glance on every side. The curtains were drawn the artificial light lending an added attraction to the scene. The large rooms thus decorated provided an exquisite setting for the beautifully gowned assemblage. The guests were greeted by the hostess with her house guests, Mrs. T. L. Burnett of Fort Worth and Miss Ruth Christal of Decatur at her side. The game's score was marked on dainty lined score cards in keeping with the general motif. The favor for the afternoon, an exquisite crystal toilet water bottle of the deepest cut and in a novel shape, was cut for Mrs. J. A. Fisher being fortunate. A luncheon, perfectly appointed in two courses was served, in this also the color scheme was featured wherever possible, while a fragrant corsage cluster of sweet peas formed the plate favor and a pleasing souvenir for each guest. The guests enjoying this thoroughly delightful affair included: Mesdames Cravens, Cullinan, Abe Marcus, Stanforth, Morris Marcus, Bacon, Frank Blair, Loeb, Dent, Walter Robertson, Tully, Gwynn, Wade Walker, Leicham, Huff, Carver, Mark Walker, Bruce Smith, Myles, T. MISS TRESSA LEE BECOMES THE BRIDE OF A. W. CULP

Saturday at high noon at the home of the bride's parents on Bluff street the marriage of Miss Tressa Lee and A. W. Culp of Muskogee, Okla., was solemnized, Dr. J. W. Hill of black and yellow ribbon and propé paper festooned from lights, the whole being designed to give an exceedingly unique effect. The height of decorative beauty was reached in the dining room where the same general effect was to be had. Witches and cats cut out, were artistically applied and the center of the table was marked a large pumpkin filled with fruit. Around on the table were scattered various Halloween miniature favors, cut in pumpkins, and the shaded lights threw a golden glow over all. The arrangement of the evening was exceedingly clever, the guests being given dance programs of eight dances, made out with a different partner for each dance, and as the supper progressed each course was eaten with a different partner. The first course of fruit cocktail was served in orange cups, with a pumpkin face cut out from black paper. After the first course the couples proceeded to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nat Wagner, where each dance was held. The Wagner home was also decorated in the Halloween conceits and to one side a cleverly contrived fireplace threw a yellow glow over the rooms. On the completion of the first dance, the changes were made and the party returned to the Carver home for the second course of oyster patties, served on paper plates on which pumpkin faces were passe parouted. For the remainder of the supper the same plan was carried out, each dance being followed by another course at the home of the hostess. The most course consisted of turkey with cranberry sauce and an entree of peas and potatoes, the salad course was served in orange cups to stimulate Jack-o'-lanterns. Pumpkin pie was served in paper plates with over laid Halloween motifs and with the after dinner coffee, cheese straws, tied in bundles with yellow and black ribbon were served. Two favor dances were held in addition to the dance after each of the six courses, one for the girls and one for the men. The girls' favors were pumpkin Kewpies and the men's favors cigarettes with applied Halloween stickers.

The evening was most enjoyable and progressed as planned, thanks to the ingenuity of the hostess. The guests were Misses Lillian Avis, Lillian McGregor, Eddie Carver, Ann Carrigan, Ann Freear, Kathrine Hindman, Messrs. Boyd, Griffin, Clayton, Joutte Bonner, Merrill Blair, Carter McGregor, Avis and Mr. and Mrs. Wagner.

MASQUERADE PARTY FOR BACHELOR GIRLS HALLOWE'EN

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Pressley entertained most delightfully Halloween night, the affair being a masquerade for the Bachelor Girls and their friends. The reception room was decorated in yellow and black and dark shaded globes filled the house with a dimmed light. In the parlor and dining room the usual Halloween symbols, jack o'lanterns, Chinese parasols with painted witches' heads, black cats and crepe paper in yellow and black, were used in profusion. A decidedly novel centerpiece had been arranged on the dining room table. A miniature campfire with an exceedingly realistic effect, achieved by the use of red paper and electric lights, with a witches pot occupied the center of the table, while around the fire were gathered witches and ghosts cut from apples, the whole presenting a quaint appearance. The guests were all masked and for some time after their arrival conversation was prohibited. After some little time of silence the unmasking took place, the identity of each masker being guessed as they unmasked, one at a time. The grand march was then in order, led by Miss Carrie Kerr, dressed as the Goddess of Liberty and Mr. Drake, representing Uncle Sam. One of the most successful disguises was that of Mr. Renfro, who made quite a beautiful young lady and who succeeded in keeping his identity a secret until the time for unmasking. The telling of fortunes was a feature of the evening. In a rear room a gypsy campfire was placed, with Mrs. Pitman as the gypsy genius of the place. Ghosts were stationed in the corners of the room and as each guest had his fortune told he was introduced to these spooks. The first two proved dummies and on being introduced to the third a surprise was accorded the unsuspecting guest when it unexpectedly came to life, together with the fourth one and enveloped him with a sheet. Refreshments of ginger cakes, hot chocolate and apples were served at the campfire, about thirty guests enjoying Mr. and Mrs. Pressley's hospitality.

GUILD ENTERTAINS ITS FRIENDS SATURDAY EVENING

The Young Ladies' Guild of the Episcopal church entertained Saturday evening with a Halloween party, given at the home of Miss Ethel Chamberlain. The various rooms of the house were decorated elaborately in the Halloween colors of yellow and black with witches, bats and cats and pumpkins. In the living room a huge witches' cauldron was hung from the ceiling, and from this cauldron the guests drew favors for the grand march. Partners for the march were found by matching these bats, cats and witches found in the pot. Some time was spent in dancing, after which story telling was in order. The favors for this feature were rosaries, made from popcorn and gum drops strung alternately. On the end of each chain was a heart in which a fortune was concealed. Various stunts were performed, all taking part and banishing for the evening all restraint or formality. A ghost walk then was in order, which led the masked guests through all the rooms of the house, where by peeping through a curtain various uncanny sights were observed, one being Bluebeard's wives hanging by their hair. The walk led them out on the lawn, where another ghost was encountered. After some time in this amusing pursuit the unmasking came and the remainder of the evening was spent with story telling and conversation. Tempting refreshments, carrying out the predominating idea were served to the following: Misses Jennie Roberson, Emma Childs, Zola Roberson, Florence Sammons, Rainey, Louise Kennedy, Benton, Gordon, Eugenia Staber, Ethel Chamberlain, Messrs. Arnold, Alphonse Boger, Bradbury Fletcher Childers, Chamberlainness, Mr. and Mrs. Japhet, Rev. and Mrs. Datson, Mrs. Caries, Wm. Caries and Florence and Frederick Datson. Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Culbertson and son, Wiley, returned Saturday night from Pittsburg where Ms. Culbertson and Wiley spent the summer months.

FORMAL TEA GIVEN FOR MRS. J. W. HILL TUESDAY

Tuesday afternoon Mrs. P. P. Langford accorded a most delightful party to Mrs. J. W. Hill, who with Dr. Hill will leave soon for San Antonio, where Dr. Hill will take charge of a pastorate there. So the affair was both one of pleasure and regret, regret that the departure of Mrs. Hill who has endeared herself to members of the church and all other's whose fortune it has been to know her, will come so soon and pleasure that this party compliment could be given her. The rooms were prettily decorated by Nature's choicest offering at this season, the autumn leaves of glowing tints, mingled with trailing vines, also marked by the brilliant sunset tints. Vases of roses were mingled with the leafy decorations in both the reception suite and the dining room, where the "cup that cheers" was poured. Mesdames Kearby and Norton presided at the tea service, one at each end of the table, the center piece being a large basket filled with autumn leaves and vines. Formality was dispensed with the guests lingering for a time to chat with the beloved honoree and the gracious hostess, who with the assistance of Mesdames Hill, Noble and Shelton and her sister, Mrs. Donald served a delicious chicken salad with accompanying dainties with the fragrant tea. Mrs. A. M. Hartsook read an original poem, voicing the sense of loss felt by the entire assembly on the departure of Dr. and Mrs. Hill, which was replied to in a touching little speech by Mrs. Hill. Mrs. Butler also paid a tribute to Mrs. Hill. Readings were given by Mrs. Lowenstein and music given at intervals by Mesdames Tully, Adams and the hostess was much enjoyed.

The guests on arriving at the Martin home were met at the door by Judge and Mrs. Martin and ushered into the large reception room in the meantime being admonished to remain silent on pain of severe penalty. When all had assembled the identity of each masker was guessed and a prize awarded for the best guesses and also the best disguise. This prize, a box of home made bonbons, went to Mrs. Jack Shelton, who was disguised as Martha Washington. Other disguises were the ever popular ghost and witches, clowns, negro maids, children and college students and a whole tribe of Indians who gave war dances and whoops for the company. A popular phase of the entertainment provided by the enterprising hostess was the witches tent, provided over by Miss Boone, where fortunes, made to order, were to be had on request. Instrumental music was furnished by Miss Manning of Bellevue, house guest of the hostess, and vocal music by Philet Martin was also much enjoyed. The rooms were decorated in a color scheme of yellow and black, pumpkins and black cats grined from all points of vantage and the Halloween idea was predominant. The color scheme was carried out in the refreshment course of pimento sandwiches, tied with yellow and black ribbon, hot chocolate and pumpkin pie. The refreshments were in the prevailing colors and in keeping with the Halloween motif. Prof. Solomon Wisacro was the guest of honor at the affair, his presence lending much "glinty" to the occasion. COTTON PICKING RECORDS IN BURKBURNETT COUNTRY

Burkburnett Star? Reports of big cotton picking achievements continue to come into office. It would seem hazardous to guess at the amount that a good cotton picker can pick in the Burkburnett country with the splendid yield of cotton this season. The latest record-breaker that has been reported is that of Wardie Palmer who picked 802 pounds for W. T. Jackson on the Speck ranch west of town, and Albert Jackson picked 712 pounds on the same day. Mr. Jackson has 85 acres in cultivation and expects a yield of near 50 bales.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years Dr. Pierce's Catarrh Remedy was pronounced by a local doctor and prescribed local remedies, but by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts on the blood and cleanses the system. AT THE THEATERS

"TREY O' HEARTS" AT THE MAJESTIC WEDNESDAY

The action opens on the night of the day on which the "Crack o' Doom" ends. In the day, Judith and Marrophat smugly rose into Trine's house in New York from their car. Leaving Rose with Marrophat, Judith reports to her father, who sends for Rose. Although worried over Alan, Rose is defiant towards her father. At a taunt from Judith, however, Rose accuses her of loving Alan. Trine orders Judith from the room and questions Rose. When he tells her that Alan has been assassinated, she tries to disbelieve, but finally breaks down and is led, a weeping prisoner, to her room a hundred feet above the street. Marrophat tries to make love to Judith. She ignores him, and he secretly vows vengeance. Marrophat tells Trine that Judith prevented Alan's death at the bridge. Judith accused Marrophat of lying, because she refused his advances. Trine received an unsigned note, reading: "Digby has reserved suite at Monolith Hotel to be held for Arthur Lawrence." Judith departs in anger and Marrophat tells of Judith's love for Alan. Tipping the head bellboy at the Monolith, Marrophat gives him a tray of hearts, indicating a practical joke. As they talk, Alan enters and registers as Arthur Lawrence. After he has entered the elevator, Marrophat leaves hurriedly for an East Side dive, where he pays Red November to assassinate him. From his room Alan phones Digby. Unseen, the bellboy slips the tray of hearts into the stationery and leaves. While Trine is apparently sleeping, Judith creeps into the room, reads the note, but as she leaves the room, Trine arouses and traps Judith, proving her disloyalty. Alan slips out a side door unobserved, he thinks. Marrophat sees and orders Red November to follow his taxi in another. Alan changes taxis several times, but fails to lose November. Believing himself safe, Alan arrives at Trine's house. By bribing a night watchman, he climbs to the girder of an unfinished apartment house across the street, and using a flash lamp and the Morse code, communicates with Rose. Judith, from her window, reads the message, telling Rose to be ready to leave the house by six the next morning. Alan turns and finds November edging along the girder, a knife between his teeth. After a desperate struggle, Alan gains the mastery, but as Red slips over the edge of the girder, Alan grabs him and pulls him back onto the girder, where he collapses, sick with fright. After signaling Rose "good night" Alan climbs to the street. Judith plans to outwit Rose and Alan, and enters the room, where she empties a vial of poison into a glass, and at the point of a sun forces Rose to submit to a deal of the cards to decide which shall drink it. Judith draws the tray of hearts and loses. Rose faints as Judith starts to drink. Judith, however, throws the glass aside and dresses Rose's clothes. Meantime, Alan enters the building opposite, bribes the iron workers, and they prepare a steam crane for his use. With one foot in the room, he is swung to the window, where he takes Judith from the window, thinking it is Rose and the yare lowered to the street. At this moment Marrophat, seeing Alan being lowered to Rose's room, rushes through the halls and bursts into the room, but is too late, and mistakes Rose for Judith, until, as she comes to from her faint her words show him his error. "THE PIPES OF PAN" AT LYDIA MARGARET MONDAY

Disenchantment? Overtaking man, does it necessarily mean sorrow and suffering? Or, can it sometimes be rated as an awakening and produce those effects demanded when one hopes to reach a higher plane of living, higher ideals? Edmund Saltus wrote "The Philosophy of Disenchantment," which treats with the higher philosophy, such as Schopenhauer and Nietzsche gave voice to, and in his works he points out that disenchantment was a logical condition and responsible for a great many of the hardships which human beings in this world endured. But is pessimism the sister of disenchantment? This two-reel Rex drama, "The Pipes of Pan" argues otherwise, and in a series of most delightful sentiment, it points out that disenchantment often has its reward. From time immemorial, and in the great works of Milton, such as "Paradise Lost" and "Comus" Pan has been looked upon as the evil genius of mankind. Cloven-footed, half goat, half man, he controlled his subjects and followers and enticed them to wrongdoing. When Bacchus and Aurora and Faun and wood nymphs disported themselves on the Elysian Pleads and Venus held sway over the court of love, Pan and his daughter of beautiful form led the world a merry dance. The portrayal of allegorical subjects and the treatment of ancient gods of Greece and Rome have always been a means of teaching mankind the relative values of good and evil, and from the time of Socrates and Aristotle, allegorical subjects have held sway. When it is remembered that in mediæval and ancient times the worship of elemental gods was prevalent and the Higher Deity Zeus or Jupiter were looked upon to be "De-All" and "End-All," one can see the necessity of teaching morals and controlling the baser instincts of mankind by illustrations of this variety. The word Pan has always stood for and signified joyous abandon without regard to consequence and the worship of the idol have been the carefree individuals who assume no responsibility or hardships. Pan, as a character, was a seducer of morals. In the cauldron of humanity Pan was looked upon in conjunction with the God of Liberation, Bacchus, and worked hand in hand with him. The film coloring is exquisite, many of the scenes are approached only by the hand of the skilled oil painter. It is a beautiful picture, beautifully acted.

MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY AT THE VICTORIA MONDAY

After Norton's thrilling rescue of Florence on the night of the Princess Florio's masked ball, both he and Florence are unmoistened for a time. One day he goes for a walk through the woods with his collie, Shep, while Florence is horseback riding. Both wander in the direction of a cave near the waterside where the conspirators meet. Soon afterward they find themselves in danger. While Florence is in the Countess calls at the Harzeve manor. As she leaves a stranger, taking her for Florence puts a note into her hands. "It will put an end to the persecution of your father, Sidney Harzeve," he says, and turning, vanishes into the woods. The Countess finds the note is only a blank sheet of paper. She hastens to the cave where she believes Braine and the others to be; but finds only one of the gang there, the others being engaged in repairing, under Braine's direction, a fast motor boat at a dock a short distance away. Thither she goes to convey news of her strange experience. Meanwhile Florence, riding through the woods, sees Shep, Norton's dog, jumping painfully. She dismounts and draws a sharp thorn from his foot. After putting her riding coat under the dog, she is about to look for Norton, whom she knows is not far away when through the trees she sees the Countess Olga descend from a tax and enter the woods. Florence follows her. She sees the Countess stand before a cliff beside a water. She fumbles a moment in a bunch of grass, as if seeking a hidden spring. The next instant a section of the rocks swings outward and the Countess enters the cave. Florence waits in amazement and a few moments later, when she sees the Countess and another of the gang leave, she enters the cave and finds the other, her curiosity being aroused, she finds and presses the hidden electric button which the Countess had pushed. The rock opens and she steps into the underground chamber of the Black Hundred. While she is investigating its mysteries, Norton sees her horse, it bridle held by Shep, and sets out in search of her. Shep leads him to the cave, but the rock has closed again and Norton, thinking Shep has lost the scent, being perhaps attracted by a rabbit or chipmunk, pays no attention to the dog's frantic efforts to get into the cave. Instead he follows the path down to the river, thinking Florence has gone in that direction. Florence, still in the cavern, finds a subterranean stream of considerable size runs through it, by which at certain times, when the tide is right, access may be had to the cave from the river. Hardly has she made this discovery, when she hears the rock at the entrance open, and has barely time to conceal herself in a niche in the cavern wall, when Braine, the Countess, Digby and several others of the gang enter. They seat themselves at a table and by the light of a candle examine the missive which the Countess has received. Florence hears the words of the mysterious stranger repeated: "It will put an end to the

MAKES BACKACHE QUICKLY DISAPPEAR

A Few Doses Relieves All Such Miseries, Bladder Weakness, Kidney Trouble and Rheumatism Promptly Vanish

It is no longer necessary for any one to suffer with backache, kidney trouble, have disagreeable bladder and urinary disorders to contend with, or be tortured with rheumatism, stiff joints, and its heart-wrenching pains, for the new discovery, Croxone, quickly and surely relieves all such troubles.

Croxone is the most wonderful remedy yet devised for ridding the system of uric acid and driving out all the poisonous impurities which cause such troubles. It is entirely different from all other remedies. It is not like anything else ever used for the purpose. It acts on the principle of cleaning out the poisons and removing the cause.

It soaks right in through the walls, membranes and linings, like water in a sponge, neutralizes, dissolves, and makes the kidneys sift out and filter away all the uric acid and poisons from the blood, and leaves the kidneys and urinary organs clean, strong, healthy and well.

It matters not how long you have suffered, how old you are, or what you have used, the very principle of Croxone is such, that it is practically impossible to take it into the human system without results. There is nothing else on earth like it. It starts to work the minute you take it and relieves you the first time you use it.

If you suffer with pains in your back and sides, or have any signs of kidney, bladder troubles, or rheumatism, such as puffy swellings under the eyes or in the feet and ankles, if you are nervous, tired, and run down, or bothered with urinary disorders, Croxone will quickly relieve you of your misery. You can secure an original package of Croxone at trifling cost from any first-class druggist. All druggists are authorized to personally return the purchase price if it fails in a single case.

"THE BRAND" AT THE GEM THEATRE MONDAY NIGHT

Another of the Alice Joyce features will be shown at the Gem Theatre Monday evening and night. Mary's lot, always hard, becomes doubly so upon her father's death. Yearning to re-marry, the girl's stepfather conspires to get her out of the way. Aided by Downs, the man she intends to wed, Mr. Halleck succeeds in having Mary sent to the reformatory. They seat themselves at a table and by the light of a candle examine the missive which the Countess has received. Florence hears the words of the mysterious stranger repeated: "It will put an end to the persecution of your father, Sidney Harzeve." When the conspirators have finished their consultation, one of them puts the note in his pocket and Florence quick to seize her opportunity, stealthily abstracts it. The gang have rarely left the cave, when the loss of the matter is discovered, and one of the men returns for it. Florence, realizing that discovery is certain, if she remains, discards her riding boots and plunges into the stream. A few minutes later, the conspirator having discovered her in the river, drags her into a rickety craft, and begins a battle which would hardly have ended in her favor had not Norton seen the struggle from the shore. Diving into the water and soon followed by Shep, he swims toward the rowboat. He is none too soon; for the other conspirators, seeing their companion in difficulties, come to his rescue in a fast motor boat. Norton has hardly finished with him when they are upon him. Then a terrific struggle ensues. After dragging Florence aboard the motor boat, both men are tumbled overboard. With three men striving to drown him, the odds are too great for Norton to about to give up, when they swim into the melee and soon straitens his master from danger. Jailing the motor boat, Norton drags Shep aboard and with Florence speeds away to safety, leaving the conspirators struggling in the water.

The girl informs the authorities of Rose's crime. Rose is seized but vows revenge. Mary's heroic work results in her release. The girl later secures a position as governess to Helen, daughter of wealthy Mrs. Clark. Burton, Mrs. Clark's young brother, falls in love with Mary. Because of her past, the girl refuses to marry him. Several months later, Rose escapes from the institution. The girl learns of Mary's whereabouts and blackmails her under threat of revealing her past to Mrs. Clark. When her victim's money is gone, Rose treacherously informs Mrs. Clark that she is harboring a girl who has served time. Incidentally Rose manages to steal a letter addressed to Mary, while conversing with Mrs. Clark. Horrified, Mrs. Clark orders Mary to leave the house. Burton enters and hears Rose's story. So great is his love that the boy declares he will marry Mary in spite of her past. He contemptuously orders Rose from the letter she has returned. It proves to be Mrs. Halleck's dying statement, and shows Mary to have been innocent of wrong. A commotion outside attracts the attention of Mary, her sweetheart and Mrs. Clark. They see Rose from the grasp of two detectives who have been searching for her. Thus the girl of the slums passes out of Mary's life forever. TO MAKE APPEALS TODAY FOR GIRLS TRAINING SCHOOL

Local Pulpits To Refer To Matter—Judge Quentin Corley of Dallas Issues Appeal

This is "Girls Training School Day" throughout Texas and appeals for financial support for the plan to establish such an institution will be made from some local pulpits. Judge Quentin D. Corley of Dallas, is taking an active hand in the movement and has issued the following statement of its purposes:

"Did you ever sing that good old religious song 'Throw Out the Life Line'? Of course you have, if you could sing and you felt like you would 'Throw out the life line' if the opportunity ever presented itself. That opportunity is now being presented to you by the board of control and finance committee of the Girls Training School for incorrigible and delinquent girls.

"Don't you think that Texas should be as kind to her girls as she is to her boys? I think so and I believe every thoughtful person thinks so but the truth about it is, that the good people of Texas have not been thinking much along this line because they never had the matter directly called to their attention.

"For many years Texas has thought enough of her boys who erred to provide a place for them at Gatesville. I know there are many who condemn the Gatesville school, for it has not been what it should have been in the past but the fault largely lay in the system under which it was operated and controlled. The Gatesville of today is fulfilling the purpose for which it was created and under the efficient management of its superintendent, Mr. A. W. Eddins, Texas has an institution that her people ought to be proud of. It is truly a remodeling shop for bad boys where the plastic, but mis-shaped boy is gradually shaped mentally, physically and morally until in the majority of cases he becomes practically a normal boy.

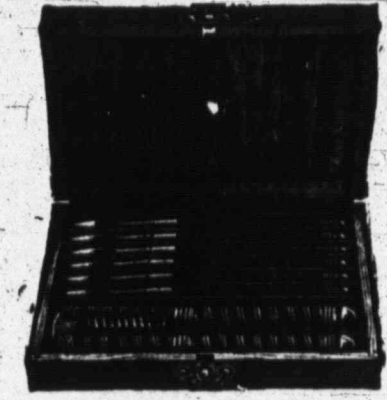

"While there are not so many bad girls as there are bad boys, yet the fact nevertheless is that there are many girls in Texas who need the guidance and protection such as would be given in a properly conducted Girls Training School. Some might ask: 'Where are these girls?' They are scattered all over the State and if you will ask your juvenile officers, they will tell you about them and show you them if necessary. They are roaming the streets of the larger cities both night and day and are the biggest problems the juvenile officers have to handle. No where to put them where they can be remodelled into good girls. They can be remodelled in other States have been doing it and they ought to have the chance—at least as much as our boys have.

"These girls are in most instances the victims of circumstances and are more to be pitied than censured. They usually range from 12 years to 18 years of age which is the juvenile limit. Just think of it! These immature girls should be protected by society for in many instances their parents won't. They need a Girls Training School.

"The bill passed by the legislature creating the State Girls Training School, appropriate $25,000 for it, provided a like sum of $25,000 is raised by private subscription. About one-half of this amount has been subscribed and we are now asking the good people who can, to give one dollar or more if possible for this school. Special efforts will be made during the week of November 8th to 14th to complete this fund.

IMITATION

(By C. Barthold Machlin) Imitation, saith the adage, is the sincerest form of flattery. It is also evidence of a lack of individuality in the character of the imitator. With the exception of personal appearance, the principal difference between a human being and a parrot is that a human being sometimes knows what he is talking about, and a parrot never does. (And that is a smaller difference than you might suppose.) Nevertheless, parrots talk, and many people talk parrot-wise. All humans can be divided into three classes: thus, (a) those whose conversation is the expression of their own thought; (b) those whose conversation is the expression of another's thought; (c) those whose conversation is instead of thought. The first are the salt of the earth, the little leaven that leaveneth the whole. The second are the parrot people above mentioned. The third, though great in numbers need not be considered here. It is of the second that I wish to speak. They repeat what they hear other people say. They have no originality. Their entire conversation is second hand. Sometimes they are sagacious enough to say their lines in the right place, and thereby achieve a wholly undeserved reputation as sages or wit. Sometimes again, they "miss their cue" so to speak, and are parrots obvious. I have made this somewhat lengthy preamble, because I wish to point very strongly an exact parallel musically. If these things are true of talking—and they are—they are even more true of playing and singing because so few people have the right conception of music. They do not recognize it as a language. They regard it merely as something to listen to; as a relaxation from thought, rather than the expression of thought—a dream, blissful, hazy sort of atmosphere condition, like Indian summer, or a moonlight night, rather than the utterance of definite ideas. Music is a language—a means of expressing thought. Now it is unwise to express, unless you have something worth expressing. It is neither interesting nor instructive, neither pleasurable nor profitable to talk, unless you have something to say. All real development must be from within, outward: if you have something within you which needs expression, you will find a medium of expression. The great thought to be grasped in all art, expression is twofold:—(First) if you have nothing to express, leave music, painting, and drama alone. You cannot buy these things as you buy canned goods. Second, if you have something to express, let your expression be sincere and emphatic. Express yourself, not someone else.

It is an established fact in pedagogy that the study and the character must be considered co-relatively, each acting upon, and moulding the other. And it will be found that there is no better way to develop absolute sincerity of character than to get people to express themselves, in some form or the other. Conversely, there are few better tests as to whether or not a person is sincere and genuine than to study his form of expression. There is nothing which is at once so pathetic and so ludicrous as to see a student aping the tricks and mannerisms of the teacher; and, to the experienced ear or eye we shall always give ourselves away if there be any insincerity in our art. The point to be deduced from this is that the student who strives merely to imitate another's expression, fails in the development of his own individuality. He may get results, of a sort; but they are not his. He is talking the easier and poorer way. To imitate is a comparatively simple matter. Real growth takes time. We must work for lasting benefits, for our study should make of us not only a better musician, but a better being—a fuller, more capable, more useful person. The imitator speaks a language he does not understand; and therefore can never bring home his message to his hearers.

INCREASE IN TRAVEL IS NOTED IN LOCAL HOTELS

Salesmen Called In On Account of War Are Back at Work in Many Cases

Traveling salesmen who were called in by their houses six weeks or more ago when the effects of the European war began to be felt keenly here, are again out. The hotels which have been almost deserted for the past month or more are again filling up and this is regarded as one of the first signs of returning prosperity.

ANOTHER SHOOTING AT TEMPLE FRIDAY NIGHT

By Associated Press. Temple, Texas, Nov. 7.—Luther Sullins, a restaurant waiter here, was shot four times last night, receiving two body wounds and a broken arm. He will recover. William Dupree was arrested and is being held at Belton to await action of the grand jury now in session. The men, it is said, had a personal difficulty earlier in the day. It is said that Sullins was unarmed.
