WICHITA RIVER, HOLIDAY CREEK AND RED RIVER ARE FALLING

HIGHEST WATER IN WICHITA FALLS SINCE YEAR 1899

BURNETT STREET BRIDGE GOES OUT

12 SPANS OF WAGON BRIDGE AT BURKURNETT ALSO SWEEP AWAY

RIVER ROSE ALL NIGHT

High Mark Reached at About 4 a. m. Back Water Now Receding—No Lives Lost

After reaching its highest stage since 1899, the Wichita River was receding slowly this afternoon. Holiday creek is falling more rapidly and there has been a partial resumption of train service. With relief-measures well under way, the situation is much more cheerful Tuesday afternoon.

Seventy-five additional families were made homeless when the Wichita River went out of its banks at the foot of Scott, Indiana and Ohio avenues Monday afternoon and the junction of the river flood with the waters of Crescent Lake and those of East Lake put several dozen more houses in an uninhabitable condition.

Two bridge have succumbed to the overflow, the Burnett street bridge in this city and the wagon bridge at Burkurnett; the former went out at midnight and the latter in the early hours of the morning.

The river is falling very slowly, while Holiday creek was going down about as rapidly as it came up. The river at its highest stage was several inches deep on Indiana avenue just below Sixth street and had come some distance up Ohio and Scott. Just below the city the water lacked up the bed of the old creek lake and the homes just off Seventh street across the lake were up to their eaves in water, while a number of homes on Adams street and in that vicinity have water four and five feet deep on their floors.

The rescue work was effected with little difficulty. Yesterday afternoon those in the district now flooded could see the water rising and all had ample time to get out. Some who doubted the wisdom with which the water was coming up, delayed matters to wade out during the late hours of the afternoon and the early hours of the night with unusual swiftness and families who at three o'clock yesterday afternoon were not dreaming of danger saw their homes flooded before midnight.

All drays and transfer wagons that could be pressed into service were employed to carry out furniture and personal effects and the only trouble in rescuing individuals was where people had delayed moving out until it was necessary to wade in after them in such cases were rare. The police arrested a man and a woman who stayed in their homes until very late and then began calling for help. They were charged with moving out until it was necessary to wade in after them in such cases were rare. They were charged with moving out until it was necessary to wade in after them in such cases were rare.

Wild Rumors Afloat. Lake Wichita was the cause of considerable concern to many people and about the likelihood of the dam breaking were in circulation throughout the day, never became dangerous, and had fallen about ten inches at noon today with prospects for a further fall from now on.

Very little additional rain fell Monday night and at night the dark clouds cleared, indicating a cessation of the rain. The skies have been almost cloudless today and without additional rain the worst of the situation may be considered past.

Reports from over the county indicate that the damage to crops is severe, although in many fields there was little harm done. It is certain, however, that a large part of the crop was destroyed by Sunday afternoon's storm.

The storm at Newcastle Sunday afternoon was quite severe, blowing down several houses and some box cars, but the damage was much less judging from reports than in this city.

Good Natured Crowds. Large crowds of people thronged the west side of the flooded areas, and the river banks all yesterday afternoon and this morning and everyone seemed quite good natured about the flood. Near the viaduct on Fourth street yesterday afternoon a boy swam his donkey through some deep water, often took a collection. One man gave him a dollar for doing it and another dollar for a promise not to do it again. An old Irishman fell into the water near the viaduct and was pulled out by bystanders. He engaged in a friendly scuffle with another man.

Late yesterday after a large opening had been made in the embankment with picks and shovels, Denver officials decided to widen with dynamite and about 40 feet of the bank was blown away, making a much wider opening.

The situation on the river front did not become serious until about four o'clock Monday when the water went over the banks. It is believed that the current has partially changed the channel of the river, cutting away a large portion of the high eastern bank of the stream.

The Burnett street suspension bridge went down about midnight, but this afternoon the wreckage was still held in place by the cables, which were groaning under the strain. Early this morning the wagon bridge across Red River at Burkurnett went out, twelve bents being gone. J. G. Hardin, who is a member of the company which built the bridge, says it will be replaced at once. It had previously been damaged by the high water and was closed to traffic some time before it went out.

The extent of the damage by the Big Wichita cannot yet be determined, but it is quite possible that a new channel which will force the abandonment of the present approaches to the lower bridge has been cut. Last night the current was swift in its old channel with the water comparatively inactive for 100 yards from the eastern edge, but this morning the current was as swift a few yards from the east side as it was in midstream, indicating that the steep banks are being very badly cut. Near where the Burnett street bridge went out large sections of the bank were caving.

Houses along the banks of Crescent lake were added to the inundated area this morning when water ate through the slip of land between the western end of the lake bed and the river and water from the river passed through the opening. The lake rose several feet in a very short time but most of the families had time to get out with their effects before their homes were inundated.

The work of rehabilitation is being done in the flooded areas. At ten o'clock this morning the situation south of Tenth street was almost exactly the same as that hour Monday morning, although the water had been a foot higher in the meantime. Holiday creek reaches its highest stage about 4 o'clock. All night long families were being moved from the flooded districts.

Present conditions in the flooded areas are rather distressing. In many of the houses the water has not reached the ground floor, but in most of them it either is or has been a foot or two deep; in others it is still deeper and there are some homes that are almost entirely submerged. In those houses where furniture and effects were not removed, the occupants will lose heavily. Many chickens have been drowned, but not much other live stock. One woman in the Holiday creek district refused to be moved from her home yesterday until she had her dog, which was swimming around the back yard.

It was reported that a hay stack apparently intact, was seen floating down the river yesterday, with a pig and two chickens safely ensconced thereon, but this is not confirmed. The present rise in the Big Wichita River is not as red in color as most Wichita River floods, indicating that its source was back near the headwaters. Rises originating in this county or in Wilbarger are of that decided red shade that gave the Red River its name.

Some striking views are to be had of the general situation from the roofs of the First National and City National buildings. Numerous buildings have been taken of various scenes in connection with the flood. Hand and gasoline pumps were in active demand today and the supply of suitable material was inadequate, these are being used to remove the water from basements and cellars where there is small chance for it to recede or evaporate.

MILITARY DISCIPLINE IN ENGLISH FACTORY

Glasgow Herald Believes This is the Only Measure That Will Be Effective

Glasgow.—Charges that the supply of war munitions is being held up by the attitude of workmen in the industrial districts are supported by the Glasgow Herald which has made an extensive investigation of the situation in the Glasgow district.

The newspaper's investigators report that in their opinion the whole cause of the war is being jeopardized by industrial inefficiency and by manipulation of work by dissatisfied workmen. The following example is given:

"One of the practices of piece workers is to drag out an operation for which they are getting what they think is a low wage and they take twice or three as long as necessary. They ask for a higher price on the strength of this and when they have got the price up to the point they consider sufficient they turn to and get the work done in a fraction of the previous time in order to earn the money."

"Such proceedings in ordinary times are part of the standing struggle between employers and employed. But in war time the result is more serious and develops into disloyalty to the state and a danger to the community."

"Nor is that all. These men not only will not work themselves, but they will not allow others to work. The restrictions with regard to unskilled labor are maintained in some of the shops with unabated rigidity, and the effect is most seriously felt in the ammunition factories where the need of increased output is most urgent."

In certain shops, it is alleged, row after row of machines may be seen idle with men idle beside them, willing to work, but forbidden by the shop rules of the engineering unions. The Herald calls for the establishment of military discipline in all establishments engaged on war material, and it suggests that the necessary authority to handle the situation might with propriety be put into the hands of the local armaments committees, which have been established by public spirited citizens in most of the industrial districts in an effort to accelerate the work of providing supplies for the front.

A constructive scheme which has been drawn up in Glasgow for the elimination of the present difficulties makes the following proposals:

"Rates of wages and standards of remuneration to remain as they are at present, and no changes to be permitted until further notice."

"The functions of trade unions in regard to the enforcement of trade rights to be suspended during the war."

INSTRUCTS GRAND JURY TO PROBE LEGISLATION

New District Judge at Austin Creates Stir as Result of Instructions to Jurors

Austin, Texas, June 8.—In the first formal charge to a grand jury in the newly created district court, Judge A. S. Fisher asked that all state departments and state institutions be investigated that the anti-trust law be given careful attention; that the anti-lobby law be given consideration and that grand jurors take into consideration that while "open bribery may not be practiced about legislation it is the duty of grand jurors to investigate the influencing of legislation such as poker games and purported sales for example. The charge was regarded as one of the most unusual ever delivered in a local court, attention being called to the peculiar jurisdiction of Travis county where the state officers are located to the fact that legislative committees often usurp the duties of grand jurors and their investigations being political while grand jury investigations are based entirely on justice.

TWO NORWEGIAN STEAMERS ARE SENT TO BOTTOM

OVERFLOW IS EXPECTED AT FT. WORTH TONIGHT

Fort Worth, June 8.—Water was flowing over Lake Worth spillway fifteen inches high this morning. This rise will reach Fort Worth tonight and another overflow of the river bottom is likely all around the city. It is believed the overflow will be as serious as that of last April.

RELATED SOUTHBOND DENVER TRAINS ARRIVE

Two southbond Denver trains reached the city at two o'clock this afternoon after being held up until the Pease river bridge was repaired. The trains which arrived were those due here Monday morning and Monday afternoon. This morning's southbond was due to arrive at 3:30 this afternoon. A train for the north was made up here and was due to leave at 3:35.

SIX FRAME BUILDINGS BURN AT BURKURNETT

All Buildings On One Side of Street in Block Destroyed By Fire Monday Night

Six frame business houses at Burkurnett were destroyed by fire about 1 o'clock last night, resulting in several thousand dollars loss. The buildings were on the south side of the principal street and included a grocery store, pool hall, two barber shops and two restaurants. The fire started in one of the restaurants and burned west until it reached Medford's grocery, a brick building where, with the aid of a bucket brigade and a gasoline pump, it was extinguished. D. P. McCracken's grocery store, Cannon's pool hall, two barber shops and two restaurants were wiped out.

The following are estimates of the losses with the amount of insurance in each case:

M. Dobson, building, restaurant and barber shop fixtures, loss $1,150. No insurance.

W. T. Schriebe et al, building and barber shop, loss $1,000. No insurance.

W. A. Cannon, building, pool room fixtures, loss $2,800. Insurance $8,900.

VILLA FORCES ARE DEFEATED AT LEON

REPORTS FROM CONSUL SILLIMAN AT VERA CRUZ CONFIRM PREVIOUS REPORTS

VILLA'S MEN TAKE TAMPIOCO

British Citizen Was Killed in Attack and Four Others Were Reported Wounded

Washington, June 8.—Advices to the state department today from Vera Cruz transmitted by wireless message from Tampico reported the capture of Tampico by Villa forces Sunday. One British citizen was killed and four were wounded during the fighting. F. C. Jones was killed. Thomas Mallard and Mrs. Mallard, their infant child and A. P. Graves were wounded while seeking cover.

Consul Silliman at Vera Cruz reported today that General Obregon's victory over the Villa forces at Leon appeared to be confirmed. He said that it was reported Obregon had lost his right arm in the fighting.

160,000 MEN ARE UNDER ARMS IN REPUBLIC MEXICO

Four Years of Revolt Have Cost More Than $304,000,000—More Than 75,000 Killed

El Paso, Texas.—During the four years of revolt that has swept over Mexico, it has cost the warring factions approximately $348,000,000 to equip and maintain the various armies in the field. Had the money been divided among the natives of the southern republic, every man, woman and child, including the Indians would receive $24, writes B. T. Caddie.

Since Francisco Madero launched his campaign against Porfirio Diaz there has been at least 250,000 men under arms. The fighting forces are ever enlisting recruits, and many of those who have seen service on the field of battle have returned to their various occupations and new men have taken their places at the front. It is estimated that at all times since the Diaz campaign there have been 150,000 men with the various fighting forces. At present there are 160,000 men under arms.

FRIAR TENT MEETING WILL START TONIGHT

The Friar meetings which were delayed in starting by the rains and floods will open tonight under the big tent at the corner of Eighth and Lamar streets. The following has been received from the committee relative to Mr. Lewis, who is to be the song leader for the meetings:

"In line with Mr. Friar's policy to give to the public the best he has gone to considerable expense to bring his already efficient corps of workers and Mr. Lewis his song leader."

"An appreciative public will not find it necessary to be notified that in the coming of Mr. Lewis to Wichita Falls, there is in our midst one of the best qualified and experienced song leaders in the evangelistic field. Mr. Lewis for several years sat at the feet of Dr. D. B. Towner of the Moody Training School, possibly the greatest teacher and song writer in America, and added to this rich experience is some fifteen years of training in the leadership of great choruses in many of the States of the nation."

"It is hoped that all of the choirs from the different churches, together with independent singers and the music loving public generally will take advantage of this man's coming to the city, and take part in the song service."

"Mr. Lewis is introducing the famous Billy Sunday song books, and desires and is desirous of introducing and trying the greatest choruses that Wichita Falls has ever known. To that end a great amphitheatre choir-stage has been erected that will seat 250 singers and will support a locomotive with train of box cars. The lighting and seating feature is a marvel and a departure."

"You are cordially urged to be present tonight at 8 o'clock under the big tent, corner Eighth and Lamar."

BRYAN RESIGNS

WASHINGTON, June 8.—William Jennings Bryan resigned as Secretary of State this afternoon. His resignation was accepted. No announcement has been made as to his successor. The news of Bryan's resignation struck Washington like a thunderbolt.

ANOTHER FACTION ARISES IN MEXICO

San Diego, Cal., June 8.—Telegrams from Lapaz to Rear Admiral Howard report the entire southern district of Lower California under the control of a neutral Mexican faction except San Jose Del Cavo, which a Villa officer holds. Lapaz is headquarters of the new neutral government which has sent emissaries to both Mexican factions asking that its neutrality be respected.

GERMAN TRANSPORTS SUNK IN THE GULF OF RIGA

Petrograd, June 8.—An official announcement says that a naval engagement in the Gulf of Riga resulted in sinking several German transports and a large ship not named. The Russians lost one auxiliary ship.

It is figured that every Mexican soldier uses at least $250 (gold) worth of ammunition each year. This figure will soon be increased because of the jump in the price of cartridges and guns since the outbreak of the European war. Prior to the European powers becoming involved in warfare ammunition could be purchased by Mexico for $22 a thousand. Since that time the price has more than doubled, it costing $45 a thousand at the present time.

Since the outbreak of the revolution four years ago more than 75,000 men have met their death on the battlefields and nearly 10,000 have become maimed for life through desperate fighting. Fully 50,000 women have been made widows by the revolts and thousands of boys and girls left orphans.

Gen. Obregon is said to have 40,000 men in his army. His supplies are shipped through the port of Vera Cruz and other points now held by the Carranza troops.

Equipped Via Juarez. The Villa army is equipped and fed through the Juarez agency. The purchasing agents for this machine do most of their buying through American manufacturers and wholesalers. The supplies are to a large extent shipped to the various distribution points through the ports of El Paso and Juarez.

GERMAN NOTE READY TO GO

DEMANDS AMERICAN PASSENGERS BE TRANSFERRED TO PLACE OF SAFETY

PUT IN FINAL FORM

Only Few Changes in Phrasing Adopted After Discussion at Cabinet Meeting

Washington, June 8.—After two hours discussion of the note to Germany at a cabinet meeting this morning Secretary Tamm at the direction of President Wilson issued this brief statement:

"The note was gone over and discussed and put in final form. It probably will go forward to Berlin tomorrow."

The cabinet members uniformly refused to discuss the note. It was learned definitely that only a few slight changes in phrasing have been made. The note was taken up in the same form in which it came after Secretary Bryan had spent several hours on it following his conference with the president yesterday. Cabinet members yesterday said that while a few words possibly might be changed the tenor of the note would be unchanged. Secretary Bryan was an hour late at the cabinet meeting. He explained that he had been detained by important business.

The president explained that there had been no delay of any kind in the preparation of the note and that he had brought only a rough draft of it to the cabinet meeting Friday and that there had been all sorts of suggestions when the cabinet last met. The general character of the document, however, he said had not been modified and he believed it had the approval of the entire cabinet. No one has held up the note, the president emphasized.

The president today gave no inkling of the content of the note believing that forecasts might set up a misconception abroad. The arrival of the German note offering to pay for the attack on the Gulf and asking further information concerning the dropping of bombs on the Cushing was referred to president as "not satisfactory." These two cases, however, do not affect the main principles for which the United States is contending—that Americans on unarmed merchant ships of every nationality should be transferred to a place of safety before any prize is destroyed.

EXTENSION OF EMPIRE GERMANY'S EXPECTATION

King Ludwig of Bavaria Sees More Favorable Communications With the Sea

Amsterdam, June 8.—Extension of the German empire beyond the old frontier "to secure it against further attacks" was predicted by King Ludwig of Bavaria in an address yesterday before the Canal League, according to telegram from Munich. The king said in his address:

"When the English declared war I said 'I am glad because now we can settle accounts with our enemies; now at last we can hope to get more favorable communications with the sea for central and south Germany.' Ten months have elapsed and much precious blood has been spent but it will not have been in vain. The proof of the war will be in the strengthening of the empire with extensions beyond the old frontier so far as is necessary to secure it against further attacks. He who marches with us (I mean Austria-Hungary and Turkey) will reduce but not so false friends, shamming friendship who strike us behind our backs."

HOLLANDER COMING TO PRESENT PEACE PLAN

Will Ask U. S. to Join Other Neutral Countries in Effort to Restore Peace

Washington, June 8.—President Wilson said that he had learned only through newspapers of Van Ghell Gedeemester, who arrived here yesterday in the interests of neutral nations in the European war. The president added, however, that individual officials might have information concerning Van Ghell Gedeemester's trip here.

Announcement was made from Amsterdam last night of the dispatch of Van Ghell Gedeemester, one of the most prominent citizens of Holland, here for a conference with American officials over plans to restore peace between the warring nations of Europe. It is understood he is coming as a representative of a conference of the neutral nations. It is reported he will lay a plan for an attempt to bring before the American government and ask this government to take the lead in the proposals.

WAR FAVORABLE TO GERMANS SO FAR

BRITISH MILITARY EXPERT ADMITS GERMANS HAVE HAD THE BEST OF IT

MUST FIGHT FIRE WITH FIRE

Urges Use of Gas Bombs and Other Weapons Not Countenanced By Hague Convention

London, June 8.—"It is no use to cry over spilled milk; let us admit frankly that our first and second campaigns against Germany have failed and start a new one," writes Major G. W. Redway, a well known British military expert, to the Daily Mail, urging the seriousness of the war situation and the necessity of a complete reconstruction of the British plan of campaign on a broader and far more intensive basis.

Major Redway puts it even stronger. "The contest, if now stopped," he declares, "would be decided in favor of the Austro-German alliance. German science has been opposed by British inertia and science has won." "It is very difficult to be precise in suggestions which may savor of criticism, because this war is not a British war primarily, and our gallant ally across the channel must always figure as the senior partner in the enterprise. That the French have upheld their old reputation as death fighters is evidenced by their losses uncompromisingly borne; but it were much to be desired that we could as easily recognize the value of General Joffre's strategy."

Joffre Criticized. Major Redway's criticism of the French campaign is the heaviest too frequently aimless and resultless. He says:

"The evasion of General Joffre last August prevented a decisive action being fought. But such evasion of course involved abandonment of territory. The French evacuation of their own northern departments enabled the Germans to extend and fortify a frontier which now seems impregnable.

"Behind this barrier German industry has assembled all manner of means and devices to prevent its recapture and to support fresh enterprises to be undertaken at leisure. Offensive strategy coupled with defensive tactics has now more justified the maxims of Napoleon and so far as the operations on land in the west are concerned the war is over in a technical sense. The decisive action that was practicable last year is no longer possible and we need not inquire into the causes of certain experiments that have cost England an army of more than 82,000 men during the winter months.

"It is now not only a question of nerves, as the Germans told us long ago, but a question of wits. We are confronted with the same kind of problem as the one that baffled us for so long in South Africa. We have to do with an enemy whose ways are not our ways, and how as our only chance consider whether it is better to be whipped for our old sporting methods or whether we will take a leaf out of the enemy's book and beat him at his own game.

"In regard to tactics it is evident that we should deprive ourselves of nothing in the shape of weapons and appliances that will injure and alarm the enemy's troops. The Hague rules may yet serve strange purposes; the code once broken may prove to be a category of delinquencies practiced on those who first resorted to savage warfare.

Major Redway would also like to see the superfluous personnel of government weeded out and sent to the front. The censors, for example, more than a thousand in number, could mostly be dispensed with, he thinks, and sent to do duty in the trenches.

"It is no longer becoming to flaunt our luxurious habits in the face of a world in arms," he urges, "of course, it would be false economy to allow our wounded to lie on straw and remain untended for weeks, as the British do from lack of means. The other nations have a census of able-bodied men who are employed in connection with hospitals, ambulances, rest camps and recreation establishments would prove a revelation. Even the occupants of the war offices and the hundreds of staff offices throughout the kingdom could be winnowed with great advantage, including such establishments as the censors' office. The personnel attached to general headquarters are always too liberally bestowed, especially in camps where operations are few and far between."

GREAT BATTLEFIELD ALONG RIVER SAN DESCRIBED

Washington, June 7.—Galicia's great battlefield along the course of the River San is described in today's war primer of the National Geographic Society:

"The broken tanks of the River San have taken their place among the world's greatest battlefields of all times through the determined Russian investment and capture of Przemysl, and, more especially, through the recent continuous days of battle between the Austro-German armies, headed toward Lemberg and the Russian armies, bound for the open plains of the Dual Monarchy beyond the Carpathians. On the banks of the San, hundreds of thousands of men have been fighting bitterly back and forth; and the little stream of such slight peace importance as to have escaped notice of all the leading works of English reference, henceforward will live in history's annals as long as the memory of the names of the fields of Waterloo and Gettysburg.

"The San, a right bank tributary of the Vistula River, is about 300 miles long. It rises in the East Beskides, flowing first through a very narrow valley, full of steepest mountain scenery. The river becomes navigable at Przemysl. From the point of this famous Austrian stronghold, shallow draft boats and poled scows carry forest and agricultural produce to the Vistula. Behind Przemysl, the river is a mountain stream and one of the most attractive in northern Europe.

"About 20 miles north of Przemysl the San at Jaroslav, reaches the open plain. From this point, the river flows more northward, joining the Vistula on the borders of Galicia and Russian Poland. Between Jaroslav, south to Przemysl, where the heaviest fighting of the past weeks has taken place, the country is rough, often sharply broken at the river and offering many opportunities for military defense. Beyond Przemysl, toward the river's source, the San zigzags from a point about 30 miles to the west, whence it comes from the south, and southward. During the spring freshets and again, during the rainy autumn seasons, lower valleys of the San often suffer from severe floods. The San is joined by a number of small mountain tributaries, which add to the furthest markings of the great battlefield."

"WE WANT CORN" CRY THOUSANDS OF MEXICANS

Mexico City, May 22.—(By mail)—The national convention chamber here has been the scene of the wildest disorder for the last three days. Hungry hordes of men, women and children have stormed the chamber crying for food. Of ten thousand persons gathered outside the chamber today asking for food, 300 had to be carried off on stretchers. Shots of "We want corn" at times drowned all other sounds in the chamber and even a show of bayonets and firing by soldiers over the heads of the mobs failed to check their vain and pitiful appeals. The American Red Cross was kept busy carrying off women, children and aged men who had fainted.

"Acting President Garza made a speech to the deputies and a portion of the mob telling them the treasury was empty and the fields laid waste by the revolution and the only hope was for all Mexicans to lay down their arms and till the field. Repeatedly the crowd shouted as he proceeded: "We are hungry, we want corn." It is estimated that unless relief comes 12,000,000 persons are in danger of starvation.

AUSTRIAN MORTARS OUTDO BIG BERTHA'S

THESE GUNS AS EFFECTIVE IF NOT MORE SO THAN BIG GERMAN GUNS

CAUSE HAVOC AT TARNOW

Demolished Houses and Huge Craters Are Ample Evidence of Their Great Power

Tarnow, Austrian Galicia.—The German forty-two centimeter mortars, with which Liege was battered into submission, are declared not to have been as effective as the Austro-Hungarian weapons of the same calibre—two of which were used against the Russian troops in Tarnow in the great May victory in West Galicia. They have left a few, but unmistakable signs of their power, in the shape of demolished houses and big craters in Tarnow, fired at range of from five to eight miles. The first shell, landing in the city at the time it was occupied as a Russian headquarters, caused the Russian general and his staff to abandon their comfortable quarters in Tarnow, the largest city in the radius of many miles, and decamp to a spot ten miles to the rear. Thereafter the Austrians fired only five shots more from their big mortars into the city, for it is, after all, an Austrian town and they had no desire to damage unnecessarily their own property.

As the advancing Austro-Hungarian army slowly pushed forward against Tarnow—the spot to which the Russians clung longest during the big May battle in an attempt to save the enormous quantity of supplies stored in this vicinity and to give other parts of their army a better chance to retreat undisturbed, the big 18½ inch twins were twice moved forward to spots from which they could drop shells into the supply trains and on the men attempting to save the stores.

The correspondent of the Associated Press, now visiting the battlefields in Western and Middle Galicia, on which the great victory of the allied, German and Austro-Hungarian armies was won, has not been permitted to see the new guns, but he has seen the sites from which they were fired and the destruction caused by the shells. At one place the big 18½ inch twins were concealed behind a village, where the glazier is now replacing window panes destroyed by the concussion of the discharge. At another place the guns were emplaced near a railroad station—this spot having been chosen for convenience in erecting the guns in their foundation of cement, and in the third site they were located in a valley.

In Tarnow one shot struck, apparently by error, a peasant's house of brick. It is now a mere mass of ground, house and all having apparently been swallowed up in the crater made by the bursting shell. Three persons were killed in this house. A block away is one of the city schools which the Austrians believed rightly was being used as quarters for Russian soldiers. A gaping cleft, thirty feet wide and extending from cellar to roof of the four story building, shows with what precision the gunners found their mark. A second school building, a half mile away, was hit squarely on the roof. The wall on the side toward the court yard is torn out bodily. On the side facing the street a hole twenty feet in diameter was carved out neatly in the thick brick and concrete wall, the aperture being as nicely rounded as if the circle had been laid out with a pair of compasses.

Wichita Falls, Texas, June 8, 1915

It is generally conceded that had there not been many obstructions on Holiday Creek the flood waters would have gone into the Wichita river more rapidly, and the back-water would not have covered so much territory, reaching a stage never before heard of—not even at the time the dam at Lake Wichita broke and let all the water in the Lake flow out. It is also remembered that the Wichita river was also about as high at that time as it was on this occasion. Though Holiday Creek did not get as high by two or three feet. It is understood, however, that steps are being taken to relieve the situation by having the outlets through which the water passes widened. And when that is done there need be little or no fear that Holiday Creek will ever again reach the high stage as it did this time.

Since the rains have ceased and the high waters are receding, the reports from the country as to damage to crops are far more encouraging than was anticipated. While it is true that some wheat and out crops have been damaged by hail and excessive rains to the extent that no attempt will be made to harvest them, those who make it their business to investigate as thoroughly as possible into such matters, place the damage to wheat and out crops the county over from too much rain at from 20 to 30 per cent, and if it is no greater than this, and the weather continues favorable for a week or ten days, the yield the county over for wheat and oats will be considerable above the average.

There should be some organized effort to relieve those who have been forced out of their homes by the high water. Many of them were compelled to leave their household effects in their homes, and in many instances the high water has made them almost worthless. Some of these people are out of work and out of funds, and need assistance. It occurs to The Times that the more fortunate people of this city should do something toward the relief of the less fortunate. For this purpose, those who have investigated think as much as $2,000 should be raised and turned over to a competent relief committee to be disbursed as the committee see proper.

The Avanti, a Socialist organ, says that the nations now at war have lost 5,950,000 men. Doubtless the figures are correct. At any rate, if it has secured its figures from the reports sent out by the different nations as to the number of the enemy killed and captured after each battle, since the war started, then the figures given are certainly very conservative. However, if we take the official reports as given out by the Germans and the allies as to their own losses, the figures given above would be much less.

A MEETING WITH A PURPOSE.

Houston Post. Houston has entertained many conventions, but rarely has she been hostess to one which plans on so large a scale, and the legislation of which affects so large a constituency as does the great convention of Baptists just closing its session in her great auditorium, especially the greatest building ever offered to the convention as a meeting place.

Such a gathering is inspiring, because its purposes are wholly unselfish. No taint of sordid commercialism is to be found anywhere in its efforts, plans or purposes. They are evident to any intelligent looker-on, and the banners on the walls and the inscriptions which fill bulletin boards and other methods of announcement, and the legislation adopted and plans mapped out, leave no doubt that this supreme dominant, controlling, exclusive purpose is in the minds of the delegates, and that is to spread the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and by service to mankind interpret and illustrate his teachings and fulfill his commands.

Whether any man does or does not profess allegiance to any religious denomination, whether or not he even believes in Christianity, he must concede that those who have gathered as members of a great religious organization have done so in obedience to profound conviction and unquestioning faith in the religion they profess.

Every work of helpful service, every sacrifice made for the good of others, is touched and tinged by heaven's impress and belongs in the realm of the spiritual, and when the motives of the thousands, who day after day and year after year toil and plan and give, is searched out and traced to its source, the search will lead back to a manger, to a cross, to a tomb, to him who taught that the noblest service that can be rendered him is to serve others.

It is to spread his Gospel that thousands of men and women are sojourning in Houston for a week. There be those who do not believe in it, but they are not among the Baptist guests of Houston. Their faith in its power is fervent and unquestioning, as is their faith in his divinity and resurrection. They have seen to change men's lives, have seen it kindle the desire for political liberty in oppressed lands, have seen it convert barbarians into civilized and useful citizens, have seen it revolutionize social, moral and spiritual conditions of millions, and they know his preached word will not return into him void.

The experience of nearly 2,000 years has proven that no faith has ever so moved men and women to reach out to help others and the devotees of no other faith can point to such achievements, and every faith must be judged by its fruits. Seed are being sown in Houston which will bring forth fruit a hundred fold, to be gathered and garnered in the day of the eternal reaping.

things draw no flies, I keep on grinning in manner winning, and find the scheme is wise. There's naught, I'm guessing, much more distressing than Grouchy Merchant's place, where clerks and bosses seem total losses, with tears on every face. SHOWING OF MIDSUMMER MILLINERY AT COLONNA'S

At the Colonna Toggery Shop last evening a bewitching display of midsummer millinery was exhibited for the admiration of the ladies and this fashion event exemplified the wisdom of the "Made in America" slogan, now heard on every hand. The most exquisite patterns shown were from the shops of American designers and the millinery confections could not have been surpassed on either side of the water. The shops of Lichenstein, Mme. Modart, Louise and Pauline yielded their treasures in the beautiful creations around which the show was built.

A Pauline model was a large sailor hat with transparent brim, made of crepe maline ornamented with pearl beads. The model was quite without any vestige of a crown, a wide silk-lined band of pink gros-grain ribbon resting on the hair in lieu of the customary crown. In another hat as well as the artistry of our American designers well exemplified. This hat was designed by Lichenstein, built on the lines of the Pauline model above described. The large transparent brim was ornamented by pink pearl beads, one-half inch in diameter, and a drape of ribbon hung to the shoulders, from the brim, being caught across the crown in the recently affected fashion.

This showing of American designs was largely attended and many comments on the lovely feminine head-gear were heard on all sides. Souvenirs were given to all attending.

Market Reports

Fort Worth Livestock. By Associated Press. Fort Worth, June 8.—Cattle receipts 1800, higher and active; calves $4.25 to $5.25. Hogs 290, higher; $7.50 to $7.90. Sheep $5.00 unchanged; lambs $5 to $9.

Chicago Grain. By Associated Press. Chicago, June 8.—Although wheat prices here suffered sharp breaks today on account of a sensational decline at Liverpool the Chicago market nevertheless was relatively steady as compared with British quotations. Oats swayed with other grains & decided further rally in wheat ensued but afterward selling increased, owing to an assumption that the government crop report would prove much in favor of the bears. Wheat closed unsettled; corn steady. Wheat, July 1.11 3/4; Sept. 1.08 3/4. Corn, July 70 7/8; Sept. 71 1/2. Oats, July 44 5/8; Sept. 40 1/2.

New York Futures. By Associated Press. New York, June 8.—Cotton opened steady at an advance of five to seven points today in response to continued firmness of Liverpool and renewed support from local buyers. Early reaction of one to five points were followed on a little spurt late in the afternoon on a little spurt of buying which seemed to come partly from southern sources. No fresh features developed in the afternoon, the market being quiet at about 7 to 4 points net higher. Cotton steady. July 9.51; Oct. 9.87; Dec. 10.13; Jan. 10.15; March 10.42.

Kansas City Cash Grain. By Associated Press. Kansas City, June 8.—Wheat No. 2 hard 1.29 to 1.32; No. 2 red 1.17 to 1.16. Corn No. 2 mixed 70. Oats No. 2 white 46 1/2 to 47 1/2.

SEVEN NEGRO FAMILIES LOST THEIR FURNITURE

Water Reached Eaves of Cabins on a Section of Adams Street

Seven negro families on Adams street lost all their furniture and personal belongings when their houses were inundated last night, and they are in need of help. The water at its highest stage was up to the eaves of the cabins. J. H. Thomas, Will Brown, Joe Avery, Adams, Foreman, Silbets and Lucas are the names of the families affected. An effort will be made to secure help from other negroes in the city.

VILLA'S AGENT SUGGESTS TRUCE WITH CARRANZA

Victory of Latter's Forces at Leon It is Expected Will Make Acceptance Unlikely

By Associated Press. The most significant feature of the Mexican situation today was the probable effect that the Carranza occupation of Leon yesterday will have on the proposal which Villa's agent made last night for a truce until Villa and Carranza can try to solve the President Wilson's suggestions. Gen. Oregon has occupied Leon. The last two months fighting has resulted in Villa retiring about 125 miles northward.

WHEAT YIELD ESTIMATE NEARLY BILLION BUSHELS

Washington, June 8.—The government's June crop report today shows the following: Spring wheat, planted 10,248,000 acres; condition 94.9; estimated total production 4,900,000 bushels. Winter wheat, condition 85.8; production 676,000,000 bushels. All wheat acreage 59,472,000 acres; condition 88.2; production 959,000,000 bushels. Oats acreage 40,992,000; condition 92.2; production 1,355,000,000 bushels.

WELL KNOWN BYERS WOMAN DIES HERE

Mrs. E. H. Byers, wife of a prominent citizen of Byers, died this morning at the home of Mrs. E. M. Ruth, 708 Travis, where she with her husband had had apartments for the past two weeks. Deceased had been here previously for a month at this time under special treatment for chronic liver trouble, from which she had been a sufferer for some time, being practically an invalid for the past two years. She was forty-eight years of age and is survived by her husband, who was with her at the time of her death, and one sister, Mrs. Page of Sioux City, Iowa. Mrs. Byers' body is being held at the Hill Undertaking Parlor pending the arrival of her sister, after which it will be shipped to Sioux City for burial.

He is suffering acutely from a nervous disorder of the left shoulder. This is affecting his right shoulder.

Regulations for Danish Millers

Under a decree just promulgated by the minister of the Interior, Danish millers must extract 64 per cent of the contents of the grain when handling rye and 68 per cent when grinding wheat, or respective recoveries of 141 and 150 pounds of flour from each 220 pounds of grain milled. All millers in the kingdom are required to make a statement of their operations every fourteen days in order that the authorities may keep in touch with the situation. Each sack of rye flour or of mixed rye and wheat flour that leaves a mill must be so marked as to indicate the amount of home-grown grain used in its manufacture and the quantity of foreign rye or wheat employed.

Soul of the Samurai.
The beautiful Japanese sword which has been presented to King Albert was forged in 1577 by the famous swordsmith, Kakagawa Shichiyemon-no-jo Yukikane, who died in the year of the great armada. To the collector it is the wonderful adornments of the hilt, guard and scabbard of the Japanese swords which appeal. But to the connoisseur it is the blade itself. For the Japanese sword excels the finest product of Damascus of Toledo, and the great smiths were a hereditary caste, who forged their blades with secret and immemorial religious rites. This blade was the living soul of the samurai. The finest blades were made of soft magnetic iron, with a hard steel edge, which was tempered in cold water while the softer backing was surrounded with fire clay.

To Speak Japanese.
Strange as it may seem, it is nevertheless a fact (which was admitted in the house of commons a short time ago) that there is not a single officer in the British army who understands the Japanese language!
Some time ago one of the assistant directors of military operations on the staff of the army council compiled a work on strategy, and the Japanese war office authorities perceiving its value, translated the work, and, as is usual in such cases, forwarded the British author some copies of the translation.

The author, not knowing the language, turned over the leaves of the army list, and found that not a single officer in the British army was qualified to act as interpreter in the language of its allies.

The Mask And The Man

By Walt Gregg.

"ESTER," said the duke, "you've been in my employ for years and yet you practically know nothing of me."

"Your grace, my fealty is to the duke," said the valet.

"Were excellent. I do not refer to that. Not my man, but the man, if you follow me, Webster, the man under the very admirable mask you present to me. You have your trials, your difficulties, your ambitions, your other emotions. At least I have been credibly informed that that is the case?" He permitted a little earnest inquiry to deepen his tone.

"Certainly, your grace," Webster was too well drilled a servant to permit anything to vary the monotony of his voice.

"And I know nothing of it. For years we have lived side by side and really, it is not straining a point to say that we are quite strangers. That is so, Webster?"

"It is, your grace."

"And it is not right. I want to know more of the life that goes on—below the hall floor, Webster."

His grace's man was so excellent a servant that one feature betrayed astonishment. "A musical evening in the servant's hall, your grace—a lecture, classes on the higher life?" he murmured.

"No, no. Superficial, Webster, misleading and superficial. That is not quite what I want. Hardly worthy of you, Webster. I am an hereditary legislator, Webster. I am conscious—despite the radical press—of my duty. I ought at least know something of the lives of those dependent upon me. I intend to apply for a situation as valet de chambre."

"Yes, your grace."

"You are not surprised, Webster?"

"I should not be so forgetful of my place as to be surprised, your grace."

"Quite so, quite so. I fear I shall not be able to attain your perfected impassivity, Webster. Possibly—I am not sure—possibly you would not make so good a duke as I. But I do not see the necessity for your making that experiment."

"When does your grace wish to commence looking for a situation?"

"As soon as possible, Webster. There are a few lessons yet. You will give me those. By the way, I need hardly entreat your patience, Webster. I have had ample proof that you possess that plebeian virtue in abundance. I shall probably be a dull pupil—generations of aristocratic lineage, regrettably rob one of the best. I dislike the word. Naturally, I do not expect to commence at the point you have achieved. Indeed, there is a reason beyond incapacity and incompetence. I dread recognition. But the middle class, I am told, do not restrict themselves to copying the vices which popular preachers declare to be ours—if they only know how very decorous and dull we are!—but reproduce as far as they are able the composition of our households." "Quite true, your grace. This barley water had a little more lemon than last night."

"Thank you. I shall seek a situation in a middle-class family—possibly a possible. Have you ever been in a middle-class household?"

"Yes, your grace. It was a long time ago."

"How hurting that must have been to you, Webster. And I never knew. You see, I was quite right when I said that I knew nothing of your trials. How do I go about it, Webster?"

"You advertise, your grace."

"Really—are you quite sure? I thought recommendations—I waited a year for you, hearing from Himmester that he could not last longer without meeting his creditors."

"The middle-class trust their own perceptions—they do not trust recommendations of their friends," Webster wheeled a little table seriously to the bedside and placed on it the barley water.

"Dear me, Webster. What quaint people! The duke of Luff carefully climbed into bed. "I really believe I am looking forward to my experiment."

In two weeks the duke of Luff announced to Webster that he felt himself to be quite proficient in the duties of a valet, and Webster was too well drilled to express a contrary opinion.

A handsome testimonial from the duke of Luff immediately procured "Mr. Richards" a berth in the family of Sir George Gubbins, a cloth manufacturer, recently knighted by the particular reason. The duke of Luff departed for America in regard to about the time that Mr. Richards entered the service of Sir George.

Sir George, a widower with one daughter, was exceedingly frank with Richards on his arrival. He had him sent for from the library, he said.

"You're the new valet," he said.

"I don't want you; but you've got to stay. My daughter says it's the thing. She probably knows. Now, I won't have you messing about after me. You understand? I'm a busy man. I'm mostly in town working. When I'm down here—in the evenings—I like quiet. I can shave myself. And put myself to bed. Been used to it all my life—I don't mean shaving. You had a good character from the duke. That fetched Ernestine. She's read a lot about books."

"There's always a lot to read about them in the halfpenny papers," said Richards; and added "Sir" was an afterthought.

"I don't exactly mean that. Society novels, I believe. But that's nothing to do with what I want to impress upon you. I won't have you messing about after me."

"But what am I to do?" demanded Richards. "I think you should consider my professional capacity, sir."

"I don't care a damn for your professional capacity. Do! Join the other men servants. They have quite a nice time, I believe—cards, the illustrated papers, chess, dominoes. You don't quite catch on, Richards."

My daughter says I must keep up a position. She has modelled our establishment on dual lines. You can read about 'em in the monthly magazines. I think myself we're over-stuffed. Ernie says no. But I find the servants get in my way a great deal. Now she insists upon you. You will receive your wages the first of every month. Otherwise I don't want to see you. And if I ever find you in my dressing room fooling about with my things, I'll break your neck!"

"But can't I tie your ties, sir?" asked Richards plaintively.

"No. I wear made-up ties."

"Or brush your clothes?"

"Good lord, no! My office boy does that. You can tie the butler's tie, if you want exercise. He's not a success at it."

"Sir, I am your valet de chambre, risen above a member of the house." "A conservative member," Mr. Binks' said Richards.

"I don't mean that, Mr. Richards," said the duke. "I mean that you are a member of the house."

"I don't know what you mean, sir," said Richards.

"I mean that you are a member of the house," said the duke.

"I don't know what you mean, sir," said Richards.

"I mean that you are a member of the house," said the duke.

"Well, I look upon him only as a protection," said Sir George.

"I am regarding him in a very similar light," answered Richards.

"I don't know what you mean, sir," said Richards.

"I mean that you are a member of the house," said the duke.

"I don't know what you mean, sir," said Richards.

"I mean that you are a member of the house," said the duke.

On the first wages day, Richards fingered in Sir George's library.

"I'm willing to do without notice, sir," he said. "I have nothing to do."

"I don't know what you mean, sir," said Richards.

"I mean that you are a member of the house," said the duke.

"I don't know what you mean, sir," said Richards.

"I mean that you are a member of the house," said the duke.

"Ah, yes. Even that fierce beast likes you," said Richards.

"She must be a while, Richards," looked startled.

"You have a peculiar fascination, Merton tells me that all the female servants can hopelessly in love with you. She is but a shadow of herself, and her placid face lacks its old inspiration." She touched her hair thoughtfully.

"I assure you, miss, I have given no one cause—I have been very careful. His protestations were ferocious. I know. Have I not cause to know? She smiled again at his soft, shy smile.

"I have frequently noticed that you lingered outside this door."

Richards started. The accusation was just. A corridor ran from that landing to the back stairs.

"It would be false modesty to pretend that I did not know the reason," she passed.

"In a lower tone, she continued, "have you another name, Richards?"

"I beg your pardon, miss?" he cried, aghast.

"A Christian name?" she said.

"O! There was visible relief in his voice. "Timothy, miss." It was his real name that occurred to him. Afterwards he often wondered why.

"Timothy—you need not be unhappy."

"But, miss—"

"My name is Ernestine."

"Consider my lowest position!" he said hoarsely.

"You have the manners and breeding of a duke," she answered.

"That may be so," he said unconvincingly. "But I refuse to be otherwise than unhappy."

"Don't, Timothy. I know your honorable motives. But I have weighed everything carefully. I have met none like you either in the society of Clapham or the circles of Bayswater."

"But I—er—an engaged, miss."

"I was prepared for that. To someone—pardon me for putting it so crudely—in your own station of life."

"Certainly—in my own station of life."

"Then she can be no mate for you."

"Just now you called me honorable, miss, which, miss, is very gratifying. My honor is sacred—well as I, that is not honor, Timothy, that is folly. Think it over, and you will see that I am right. I will expect you tomorrow."

"That night the duke of Luff returned unexpectedly from his trip to America. Webster officiated at the grace's bedroom with the solemnity of a bishop.

"Did your grace's experiment turn out to your grace's satisfaction?" he permitted himself to inquire at last.

"Don't mention it, Webster!" the duke growled. "They seem all the more they dismissed me, and they wouldn't. My poor Webster, I shall always have profound sympathy for you."

His grace the duke of Luff slept soundly that night.

MISS GUBBINS.

not the butler's." Richards was hurt. A little indignant, a little sorrowful.

"The duke of Luff—"

"See here, Richards. I am not a cook. I don't want to be a cook, and if you ever quote a duke to me again I shall probably murder you. Now go. I'm busy."

It was in this way that Richards entered upon his duties, and at the same time a very laudable experiment in sociology.

Mr. Richards was received in the servants' hall with flattering attention. The testimonials of the duke of Luff placed him upon a pedestal.

"I don't care a damn for your professional capacity. Do! Join the other men servants. They have quite a nice time, I believe—cards, the illustrated papers, chess, dominoes. You don't quite catch on, Richards."

"And goes off to Ameriky unknowns and incomprehensible. I wonder the girl is there. Mr. Richards' respect your loyalty, although between friends you might—Well, later, perhaps, when we know each other better."

Sir George happened to meet his new valet by accident a fortnight after his arrival. Richards was smoking a cigarette in a private fashion near the stables. Beside him was the stable-vagabond—a ferocious bull terrier, generally admitted as during the day, and the terror of all the female servants.

Bingo, provoked at his master, but Richards passed him.

"Making a pet of that beast, Richards."

"He's an affectional animal when you know him, sir. I advise friends with him after only two bites."

"I have encountered few dukes such as she painted, miss," Richards agreed.

"Exactly. Now I must ask you to give me a lookback. They need not interfere with your duties to my father."

"They will not. Sir George is so much occupied, miss."

"I was in the rose garden every morning. You will not, of course, bring Bingo," Richards sighed.

"I am at your orders, miss," Richards replied regretfully.

Miss Gubbins did not restrict her inquiries to the ordering of a house-keeper. The conversation gradually grew more personal in tone. She was surprised and pleased to find that the new valet was well read and that his views on art, life and Bernard Shaw were of the most elevated nature.

Two days afterwards, again stealing down the main staircase—the head housemaid had been busy on the back stairs for thirty-five minutes—Richards was on the point of passing Miss Gubbins' boudoir when the door opened. It had been on the latch. Ernestine herself looked out.

"I thought that was you, Richards," she said. She smiled at him as though to disabuse him of any idea he might have that she was rebuking him.

"Will you please come in."

"I know I am wrong in coming down this stairway, miss," he said, as humbly as he could—there was a glimmer of hope in his eyes. "I'll go without a moment, miss. I—I am ashamed of myself."

"Go? O, no, Richards. Please come in." He entered shyly, leaving the door open. She brushed against it accidentally, so that it shut. "This is not the first time you have used this staircase."

"No, miss; not by a long way," he said, almost eagerly. "You are quite justified in dismissing me at once."

"There is no thought of dismissal, Richards," she smiled again. "I'm afraid you are not happy. Sit upon the bed, yet with an odd, shy constraint."

"Not very, miss," he agreed.

"I have seen you spend hours in silent communion with yourself."

"I have had Bingo."

"I don't mean those circumstances," she explained, damping the turf with the point of her sunshade.

"What others are there?" I asked in surprise.

"Others?" cried Mollie, indignantly. "There's only one."

"Well, what is the circumstance?"

But as Bessington came up at this moment my question received and required no answer.

When Woman Answers

By Annie Eva Everett.

"ULLO," I called to Mollie, "why aren't you playing tennis?"

"The mizzies—miserables, blues. The famelish growth."

"You'll hurt those words in a minute," I warned her, "if you're not careful."

"Hug!" said Mollie, collapsing into the bottom of the hammock.

"What's really happened, I suppose," I suggested, "is that you've had your eye wiped."

"At tennis!" she cried indignantly raising herself on her elbows.

"Don't be so infantile, I protest—'as if I meant tennis!'"

"O," said Mollie, "you mean—"

"Just that," I assented.

She struggled into a sitting position.

"Do you think there's anybody in this hole who could? Honestly."

"I haven't seen all the girls here yet," I said at length.

"No," said Mollie scornfully, "because the others only come out when it's foggy."

"How depressing for them," I murmured. "Well, if it's not what I said, what is it?"

"It's something quite different."

"Who?" I said.

"Two in particular," continued Mollie. "Neither of them will leave me alone."

"With the other?" I suggested.

"You said it slow, don't you?"

"O, shut up," said Mollie; "I'm feeling rotten enough without your ly jokes. I wish they'd both leave me alone. For two pins I'd go into a convent. Don't you think it'd be nice in a convent?"

"Yes—I admit it, but I don't know that you would. I'd try a simpler means of getting rid of my admirers. At first, anyhow. Wearing that green frock of yours, for example, or doing your hair over your ears, or—"

"You needn't be horrid," said Mollie coldly; "I now everything doesn't suit me. And I only did my hair that way once."

"I said nothing. When one has nothing to say silence is not always inadvisable."

"Besides," she said, striving to look unconcerned, "it's not that which is worrying me, either."

"No?"

"No," she leaned back in the hammock and swung herself gently to and fro. It was an even chance that she pitched over on the back of her head. I told her so.

"You'd have to pick me up if I did," she said with a smile. "Would you mind?"

"I should not have warned you otherwise," I said.

"That's very rude and heartless of you," said Mollie with a moue. "And I don't believe it. You only wish you had the chance. Only you're too mean to say so."

"I refrain from comment, and presently she returned to her sheep—or lambs is, perhaps, an apter word.

"Did you ever read—I forgot the name of the book."

"Who's it by?"

"I can't remember that either," she admitted frankly. "It was only a kid when I read it."

"If you knew the color of the cover even," I murmured. "However, I may have read it. I can't say definitely. I can't remember that either," she admitted frankly. "It was only a kid when I read it."

"If you knew the color of the cover even," I murmured. "However, I may have read it. I can't say definitely. I can't remember that either," she admitted frankly. "It was only a kid when I read it."

"Who had two applicants for her favor—"

"Yes. And—and they fought it was quite a kid's book, you know," and she promised the victor, the winner you know, her—"

"Golly," I said, "because really some of those court beauties were most interesting in selecting their favors."

"It was a bunch of ribbons, as a matter of fact," said Mollie with a stare.

"It might have been worse," said I. "Well, what's the idea? Do you propose to—"

"She proposed it," interrupted Mollie in a muffled voice. Had I laughed I am convinced she would never have forgiven me.

"An excellent idea," I said therefore. "As a matter of fact I believe there are some gloves in the house."

"Stupid," said Mollie, recovering her composure. "It'll have to be my gloves."

"Boxing gloves I mean," I said mildly.

"As if they'll fight that way," said Mollie scornfully.

"You bloodthirsty little—" I began in horror.

"Don't be so absurd," she cried. "I'm going to make them play tennis. I've just made up my mind. That's what made me so wretched, worrying over what it should be."

"Tennis," I repeated; "and the winner, er, well, the winner wins, I suppose."

"No," she corrected, "the winner loses."

"You see," she explained, "they're the two best players here. And they're about the same class."

"So that the loser must try to lose. Is that the idea?"

"Of course. That'll prove he really means what he says. They're both jolly conceited about their game, so it will be a sure proof that the loser thinks more of me than—than of just winning the game, you know. Especially as I shall make them both promise not to say they've lost. Don't you think I'm clever?"

"Well, you're ingenious, anyhow," I admitted. "And when is this match coming off?"

"I haven't quite made up my mind yet," said Mollie. "I think the rector's garden party would be a good place, don't you?"

THERE IS ONLY ONE

"The rector's garden party! When is it? I haven't heard about it."

"Well, I've said you're going, anyhow. So you must. His daughter's coming home—from France or somewhere. You must have heard. Do you think it will be a good place?"

"All places," said I, "seem to be equally suitable." And the rector's presence will certainly have the additional advantage of enabling the loser to console himself."

"Console himself!" cried Mollie. "Console himself with the rector?"

"I mean," I explained, patiently, "console himself with the reflection."

"I shouldn't go on if I were you," I interposed Mollie coldly; "you're rather rude and a little silly. Besides, as if I should marry a couple of boys."

"I hope," I said severely, "that you couldn't marry a couple of anything. Or at a time, is ample."

Mollie dropped her eyelids at me of love over sport, I concluded that he had not seen fit to cancel her arrangement.

Mollie announced her intention of going in her car to the rectory, and with a not altogether disinterested kindness, offered to let me drive her. As I was anxious to meet Miss Bessington once again I firmly, and I still hold politely, declined.

About an hour after my arrival, Miss Bessington informed me that she had certain responsibilities as hostess, and further that she was anxious to see the game between our two champions.

Whether Mollie's presence would or would not have counteracted the effect of Miss Bessington and her tennis reputation I am unable to say. As, however, she wandered carelessly away with Bessington almost before the struggle between her two champions began, she missed seeing the hardest fought set in the memory of the youngest inhabitant.

She did not appear again on the scene until the conclusion of the match—in time to hear Miss Bessington enthusiastically complimenting the players.

Despite the fact that Mollie is my cousin I have somehow managed to retain some shreds of admiration for her. On this occasion she merited a whole piece. Except for the sparkle in her eyes, she appeared almost pleased, and the tone in which she added her congratulations, was, at all events, sufficiently sweet to deceive an inattentive listener.

"Well," I said, "I got her alone."

"Pis!" she said viciously.

"Apparently," I remarked pleasantly, "they love honor more."

"Honor!" said Mollie scornfully. "They don't know the meaning of the word. They both gave me their word they'd lose."

"Well, one has kept his word," I pointed out; "that's a far average, you know. He, at any rate, will get his reward."

"Certainly not," said Mollie sharply; "not under the circumstances."

"The circumstances are, however, changed," I said judiciously, "only if they had both won would they be changed."

"I don't mean those circumstances," she explained, damping the turf with the point of her sunshade.

"What others are there?" I asked in surprise.

"Others?" cried Mollie, indignantly. "There's only one."

"Well, what is the circumstance?"

But as Bessington came up at this moment my question received and required no answer.

Jingles

Rules of the House.

"What kind of a place are you running anyhow?" thundered the excited guest, as he slammed down his key upon the hotel clerk's desk. "The rain leaked through your rotten old roof last night on my bed and soaked me from head to foot!"

"I am very sorry, I assure you, sir," said the polite clerk, as he made a memorandum. "For now, according to the rules of the house, shall have to charge you for a bath."

Tactfully Included.

"Your list seems to be rather incomplete," said the smart guest at the summer hotel, as he looked through the bill of fare. "I see you serve turkey, chicken, lamb, ducks and quail, but make no mention of hogs."

"No," admitted the intelligent college student waiter, "there is no mention of hogs, but it is tacitly understood that we serve them, however. What will you have, sir?"

Supplions.

WELL LOOK WHO'S HERE! WRONG, IT'S NOT JOHN D.

No, it isn't John D. The furrowed brow of this strapping individual, the sharp, sparkling eyes, the wide mouth, the thin lips and last but not least, the almost total absence of hair where the hat is worn, are all striking characteristics of the world famed "Oil King," but it isn't he. To ease your mind, it may be stated that the accompanying photograph is that of a "medicine man," a member of the tribe of Reliance-Majestic Indians who figure prominently in the photoplay, "The Huron Converts," filmed by the Reliance studio for release in the Mutual program. Dark Cloud, a member of the tribe and well known to screen fans of Reliance releases, wrote the scenario of "The Huron Converts," basing it on a legend handed down to him by his ancestors. He also plays a prominent part in the photoplay.

NOT JOHN D.—HE'S ONLY THE MEDICINE MAN APPEARING IN THE HURON CONVERTS' RELEASE (MUTUAL)

Milton's Pastoral Critic.
Napoleon's admiration for "Paradise Lost" may not have been based upon its literary value, but it was at least more intelligent than that of the Scotsman to whom B. A. Willmott refers in his "Pleasures of Literature." "There is a story," he writes, "of a Scottish nobleman finding one of his shepherds in a field poring over 'Paradise Lost,' and asking him what book he was reading—'Please your lordship,' was the reply, 'this is a very odd sort of an author, he would fail in rhyme, but cannot 'eat at it.'"

If You Forget.

How do you expect your friends to regard you with that same degree of respect you really deserve? We don't erect MEMORIALS because of pride, or selfishness, but because of LOVE. Human love is the corner stone on which all good is builded, without it we are worse than beasts, but with it we are gods. It is the same spirit that has prompted us to remember our dead.

AFTER THE FLOOD

Every precaution should be taken against diseases that follow

We recommend a solution of Cresolite

To mop and scrub houses that have been flooded and in addition to this, as a more complete disinfectant a few Formaldehyde Fumigators should be used. This prescription might save you a spell of sickness and a big doctor bill. CRESOLITE contains a large per cent Carbolic Acid and other important disinfectants and can be made in solution strong enough by adding 50 parts water.

IF YOU ARE PARTICULAR ABOUT STATIONERY

We can suit your taste. We know the demand in Wichita Falls for high-class stationery, and cater to it by carrying the best designs of Whittings, Cranes, Pequin, etc. Some of the very newest which we are showing now are Whiting's Illuminated Initial, Whiting's Missall Initial, Steel Die Initial, Whiting's Organdie Glace, Whiting's Normandie, Whiting's French Pique, Piquin's Nouveaute Parisian, a beautiful white lawn with gold bevel edges, Ardsley, in pink and sepia, LeCurrier, a novelty blue of extraordinary beauty. These are in the higher priced grades, but we also carry some very beautiful designs at any price you wish to pay.

YOU WILL NEED SANAX NOW AS NEVER BEFORE

The overflowing of the river and creeks, as well as the terrific rains has flooded hundreds of cellars and provided thousands of breeding holes for infectious germs of all kinds. Even if you have none on your own place, your neighbor probably will have, and your protection lies in the generous application of a perfect germicide and disinfectant. Sanax has six times the germicidal efficiency of pure carbolic acid, and is a most effective, economical disinfectant for domestic and public purposes. It is put up and guaranteed by us. Price 25c

You can buy a Victrola for $1 down and $1.00 a week.
