The Wichita State Bank.
The Guaranty Fund Bank.

SOLICITS YOUR BUSINESS AND OFFERS SAFETY FIRST.

SAFETY FIRST is our principle and the GUARANTY FUND LAW your protection—it means that your money deposited in this bank is absolutely safeguarded.

It is one of the best things we have to offer together with COURTEOUS TREATMENT and every accommodation consistent with conservative banking.

Below is a newspaper clipping showing how this GUARANTY FUND LAW WORKS and how you are protected.

We will soon be the only bank in town operating under this Guaranty Fund Law.

Newspaper comment:
The Wichita Daily Times says:
A few days ago there was a bank failure at Amarillo. It was a state guarantee bank, however, and the depositors will not lose one cent. The state guaranty fund has in it $361,000 and the closing of the Amarillo bank will take from it the sum of $39,000 with which to pay the protected depositors. The more we see of this law the better we like it. Every depositor who trusts his hard-earned money to a bank should be protected to the limit, and that is what has been done in every instance where a bank operating under this law has failed or closed its doors.

And the El Paso Times says:
According to a statement made by Receiver Arnold, depositors of the defunct Arizona Bank and Trust Company will receive 75 per cent when its affairs are finally wound up. The first dividend of 50 per cent will be paid on May 4, it is said.

The patrons of the Texas bank will get their money promptly. The patrons of the Arizona bank will only get 75 per cent and will have to wait for that.

WHEN KITTEN SNEEZED
By ISOLA FORRESTER.

(Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Kitten had been put to bed. She was wide awake and fairly tingling with excitement, but officially it was understood that small persons under ten, even if they had been flower girls, should not remain up during the reception after the wedding.

And she had wanted to see all the presents laid out in the front suite upstairs, so very much. She sat up in bed and listened. Everyone was down on the first floor, in the long reception room. She slipped out into the hall, and peeped cautiously over the balustrade. The coast seemed perfectly clear. And yet she heard Aunt 'Stasia give explicit instructions to Jeanne not to leave the front suite during the entire evening.

Kitten didn't like Jeanne. She was unsmiling and cross no matter how much one smiled at her, and her eyes were gray and somber, with heavy, dark brows and lashes. Aunt 'Stasia held she was a very able and reliable maid and tried to induce Lenore to take her away on the honeymoon.

"Why, mother, darling, I'd just as soon engage the obelisk," Lenore had laughed.

Still, she had a great deal of respect for Jeanne, and tonight when she reached the front suite she was surprised to find it empty. It really was pleasant in a way to be undisturbed. She tiptoed about, admiring gift after gift until all at once she heard something strange. It sounded like somebody outside on the long roof of the stucco veranda, somebody creeping along over the tiles.

Kitten never stopped to investigate. She just flopped right down on the floor and rolled under the bed out of sight. Downstairs they were dancing now. Kitten kept still, for Jeanne had come into the room and crossed to the window, where the noise came from. She unlatched the screen noiselessly, and a man climbed in. They spoke in French, and Kitten did not understand at all what was said, but Jeanne stood by the bed, so near she might have stepped on yellow curls almost, and the man was gazing at the jewelry and silver.

Kitten held her breath as they passed into the next room, and then it just had to come. She sneezed, a funny, half-smothered sneeze.

Jeanne hurried back, alert and startled. She listened at the door, and spoke in a whisper to the man. Then she opened a closet door, and he went in as she told him to.

When Kitten stuck her head out, Aunt 'Stasia was calling Jeanne, and she hurried away to answer. So, without stopping to think much about it, Katherine—she was always Katherine on great occasions—just stepped over and turned the key in the closet door.

It was one of Jeanne's favorite punishments, this shutting persons away in closets and turning keys on them to keep them out of mischief, only she had not thought she would dare do it to a grownup. Only, of course, she had forgotten to turn the key. So Kitten did it for her. The doorknob turned cautiously, and again, and again, but the captor turned her shoulders away resolutely. Discipline had to be maintained somehow, and he certainly had been missing up Lenore's presents awfully.

And then there came the sound of feet on the stairs, and laughing girl voices. Lenore was leading, holding up her white satin skirts about her as they chatted her. It was time for the going away, and the one who unlatched the bridal veil would be the first married that year.

But when Lenore saw the dignified little figure in the white nightgown standing with her back against the closet door, she stopped short and gathered it in her arms.

"Why, blessed Kitty Katherine, whatever is the matter?" she asked.

"I've got him locked in here," said the Kitten, firmly. "Until Jeanne comes back. He was going to take all your presents, I guess, Lenore."

Lenore rose and looked about, her face paling.

"Girls, call father and Andre, please," she said. "There's a burglar here."

At the door stood Jeanne, her dark eyes glowing, her lips compressed. Without a word, she took in the whole scene, and threw herself at the closet door, striking blindly at Lenore and the others. But there was no key in it. Some of them held Jeanne, who was sobbing hysterically, and Uncle Broderick ordered sycophants downstairs. Outside the Kitten heard whistles blowing, and wondered what that was for, but perched high on Andre's shoulder, she gave up the key and allowed herself to be borne downstairs with the brides and bridesmaids and all the startled, white-faced throng of women and girls.

"However did you do it, Kitty Katherine?" asked Lenore, after it was over, and the police had taken Jeanne away, and her tall, porch-climbing sweetheart. "You've saved all of my gifts for me, you wonderful little. How did you do it?"

"I just sneezed, and scared him, so he hid in the closet, and I locked him in."

THE DEAD MAN'S WILL.
By HAROLD CARTER.

(Copyright, 1915, by W. G. Chapman.)

Seton Manning found that he had not solved the problem of death by dying, any more than he had solved that of life by living; but after the first shock of the change had passed away he was conscious that in certain ways he had acquired increased perspective.

Naturally, Manning's first thought was for his own. He projected himself by power of will to the scene of his earthly home. He saw the stately old house where he had lived so many years, the architect of the small town society, with his adopted daughter Lella. He glanced wistfully at the old place, and, though the remembrance was dim and dreamlike, he was conscious of an intense longing to be back again in the earth life.

But when he sought for Lella, he could not find her anywhere about the old place, and there were strange, unknown faces there. It was not until he had concentrated all his will in a supreme effort that he found Lella. She was dressed simply in black, for Manning had been dead only a month, and she was seated in a parlor of a second-class boarding house, listening to a fussy, elderly gentleman who addressed her.

"You see, Miss Lella, the will was invalidated by the fact that your benefactor wrote of you as 'my daughter,'" the lawyer explained. "I told Mr. Manning that he would have to draw up another will, because the phrase was incorrect, but he did not do so, and consequently the property passed to his brother."

His brother! The last person on earth whom Manning would have wished to inherit the estate. He burned with indignation—for a spirit retains all the emotions that actuated it in life. But—

He had been annoyed with Lella because she was in love with Carden Hughes, a young physician of the village, a recent graduate of a medical college. He had no objection to Hughes himself, but he was almost a pauper, and the pecuniary old man felt that the young doctor was presumptuous in raising his eyes to Lella. So a bitter quarrel had ensued, and Manning had ordered Hughes from the house.

"I shall obey you, because it is my duty, father," Lella had said. "But I shall never marry anyone but Carden."

The old man had watched her with secret remorse. He had gone quietly away and made a new will, leaving everything unconditionally to Lella. He knew that he had not long to live, and he meant her to marry her lover. He had the will witnessed at the little country hotel which he frequented, a hundred miles away in the mountains, and he left it in the drawer of an old desk there which he used.

In the astral realm matter is so plastic that there one becomes and creates anything one wants to. No sooner had Manning willed Lella to discover the will than the whole sequence of events unrolled before his eyes. The inn-keeper discovered the document, learned the identity of the signer, and hurried into the town to apprise Lella's lawyer. There followed a bitter quarrel over the validity of the will, after which Lella found herself again in possession of the estate.

Mistress of broad acres, wealthy, she was at once made the object of fervent courtship on the part of many young men. But it was Tom Stapleton who won her hand, while her lover, Hughes, afraid to put his fate to the touch until he had accomplished more in the world, stayed away, and let Lella think he had ceased to care for her. So she and Tom were married. Children were born to them. The estate, growing continually smaller, was sold at last to pay Tom's gambling debts. In their old age the poorhouse received Lella and Tom, and their children grew up ignorant of their parents' names.

That wouldn't do, Manning swept the whole cobwebby structure away. There must be a better fate for Lella. For days he haunted her, trying to tell her that the will was in the desk, but each time that he got in touch with her mind the scene arose again upon the screen of time. And then Manning realized that it was best that Lella should never know.

One evening he projected himself into the shabby parlor, to discover Lella seated tete-a-tete with a young man—Carden Hughes. Their chairs were drawn up very close, and their hands were interlinked.

"You see, Miss Lella," Carden was saying, "I do bear a good deal of ill-feeling toward Mr. Manning for leaving you in this predicament. And I feel that, under the circumstances, I can ask you to share my life. Will you, Lella, dear?"

And Manning realized the sudden blending of two spirits still bound in the idea that followed.

Mabel Trunelle and Pat O'Malley are featured in an Edison, "Out of the Ruins," a charming picturization of the story, Miss 318 and Mr. 37 by Rupert Hughes. This picture is in three parts and a synopsis follows: A fire picture, embodying some of the most spectacular and realistic fire scenes ever photographed for the screen is "Out of the Ruins," a three part subject in the regular releases. The effect at the close of the second part, when the whole wall of a building collapsed with Miss Trunelle in the middle of the raging cataclysm, has probably never been surpassed.

"Miss 318" a salesgirl in the "Mammoth," a department store, is busily waiting on customers as the local fire inspectors survey the big store. The inspectors are not favorably impressed with the conditions and inform the proprietor, Abraham Hirschberg, that unless more means of egress are provided for the building will be condemned.

"Miss 318" attends a motion picture show, and when a woman in front refuses to remove her large hat, "Miss 318" is obliged to stand in the aisle. "Mr. 37" a fireman doing duty in the theatre, informs her that she is not allowed to stand in the aisle. The next morning "Mr. 37" meets "Miss 318" and makes some purchases not forgetting the most important thing, a diamond ring. Several days later, while Miss 318 is admiring the solitaire, Mrs. Lancaster Varden, wife of a millionaire, enters the "Mammoth" with her daughter, Priscilla. In the basement, a careless porter has knocked a lighted cigarette into a basket of rubbish and soon the blaze has spread beyond control. There is a panic upstairs. The elevator is unable to carry down all the persons; and while Mrs. Varden is taken out by firemen, Priscilla is left with the less fortunate. She and Miss 318 are helpless in the raging furnace. Mr. 37 enters and offers to take his sweetheart out. She refuses and tells him to take Priscilla—first, which he does. He works his way partly across a yawning chasm of hungry flames on a rope, with Priscilla clinging to him and then the rope burns and the two swing against a building across the street and drop to the pavement. Soon after the entire wall of the store collapses, with Miss 318 a prisoner. Before she left with her rescuer, Priscilla had placed a diamond bracelet about Miss 318's arm. The parents of Priscilla are unable to find her after the fire. Miss 318 wearing the bracelet is found beneath the smoldering ruins and the firemen think it is Priscilla. Priscilla is found in the same ward as Miss 318 later and Mr. 37 bandaged from head to foot, is brought to the little salesgirl.

The Way We Treat Our Own If I had known in the morning How wearily all the day The words unkind would trouble my mind That I said when you went away, I had been more careful, darling, Nor given you needless pain and vex But—we vex our own with look and tone We might never take back again.

For though in the quiet evening You may give me the kiss of peace, Yet it will might be that never for me The pain of the heart would cease! How many come forth in the morning Who never go home at night, And hearts have been broken for harsh words spoken That sorrow can never set right.

We have careful thought for the stranger, And smiles for the sometime guest, But oft for our own the bitter tone, Though we love our own the best, Ah, lip with the curve impatient, Ah, brow with the shade of scorn, 'Twere cruel fate were the night too late To undo the work of morn. —Margaret E. Sangster.

MRS. J. W. COLBERTSON HOSTESS MUNDAY AFTERNOON An interesting meeting of the Missionary Society of the First Presbyterian Church was held Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. W. Colbertson. In spite of the rain the attendance was fairly good and a very instructive lesson was led by Mrs. E. A. Fowler, the subject being Alaska. Different topics of the lesson were discussed by Mesdames Beavers, Patterson, Carrigan and Miss Kate Haynes. Victrola music was enjoyed and delicious ice cream and cake served during a social half hour.

Announcements have been received as follows: "Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Hull announce the approaching marriage of their daughter, Mamie Frances to Mr. Welch Morgan, Sunday, June the 20th, 1915." The ceremony will be a very quiet affair with only the immediate family and relatives present.

Miss Dorothy Beavers has returned from Trinity University, Waco, Tex. Following the University commencement Miss Beavers spent several days with friends in Rockwell, Ennis, Dallas and Fort Worth.

Miss Gladys Herron has returned from Fort Worth, where she was a student in the Texas Woman's College. Mrs. Wilbur Sweeton and baby daughter of Paris are visiting Mrs. Sweeton's parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Hardy.

Mrs. Thomas J. Wintermute Jr. expects to leave Sunday for New York City, where she will attend the Holbert-Busch wedding.

Owing to the rains of yesterday afternoon the meeting of the Central Presbyterian Ladies Aid, the M. E. South Missionary Society and the Baptist Women's Alliance was postponed.

GERMAN NEWSPAPER PEOPLE AMERICANS BEHIND WILSON

Berlin, via The Hague, June 15.—A remarkable warning against a mistaken estimate of American public opinion is published in Vorwaerts by its New York correspondent. He says:

"Germany will do well to realize that at least a tenth of the American people approve the note sent to Germany and of the energetic tone of the last paragraph. (This refers to the first note.)

"There is no question of immediate war but the breaking off of diplomatic relations will be unavoidable and confiscation of German ships lying in American ports, estimated at many millions, will not be unlikely if Germany should further continue to do what is regarded here as absolutely unjustifiable murder of American citizens and infringement of American interests."

The writer further warns against placing any reliance on German-American or Irish-American opinion. Most Irish, he says, become thoroughly Americanized and are above all practical politicians. As for Germans—those who live here do not leave their own country because they had been too happy there and they remain in the United States because they are better off and find conditions here better suited to their taste."

BUY-IN-TEXAS CAMPAIGN MEETS WITH APPROVAL

Labor Commissioner Woodman Meets With Encouragement From Many Quarters

Austin, Tex., June 15.—Labor Commissioner Woodman, who for the past several days has been in North Texas in the interest of the "Buy-in-Texas" convention to be held at Fort Worth June 22-24, reports that he has met with great encouragement wherever he has been and that arrangements are well under way at Fort Worth for carrying out the meeting.

"There is one thing in particular that I wish made clear," Commissioner Woodman says, "and that is that any Texas manufacturer or jobber will be given free space for an exhibit during this convention."

"Several have written to the Chamber of Commerce at Fort Worth, asking what the space was to cost. Space both in the exhibit hall and in practically every shop window on Main and Houston streets, if requested, will be donated, the leading merchants volunteering the use of their windows. All that is necessary to obtain this space is to write the Fort Worth Chamber of Commerce, but I would like to have a copy of this letter sent my office at Austin to complete the record.

"All Fort Worth, and in fact every place I have been, is enthusiastic over the movement and a good attendance is confidently expected.

"On the second day of the convention there will be an industrial parade and in this only Fort Worth products will be displayed. It is planned to have the streets closed to traffic while the parade is in progress, the mayor having expressed himself favorably on this.

"Governor Ferguson will deliver the opening address and prominent men from all over the state will be included in the program, while entertainment features will be included a grand barbecue, an inspection of Fort Worth factories and an automobile tour of Tarrant County's good roads."

Commissioner Woodman will spend several days in south Texas before the date of the convention, in the interest of the movement.

CONCILIATORY TONE ADOPTED BY BERLIN PAPERS

Berlin, via London, June 15.—The Lokai Anzeiger, a noteworthy article on German-American relations, by its general director, Eugene Zimmerman, which, on the heels of Friday's conciliatory article, is taken to mean that influential representatives of business and industry are behind this paper exerting efforts for a German-American understanding.

"President Wilson," says Herr Zimmerman, "desires nothing more and nothing less than an understanding between Germany and England concerning the terms of maritime warfare, which at the same time will insure the safety of American passengers. The task is not light, considering the development of naval war, but it can be solved if all interests display good will."

A new form might be given to naval warfare, Herr Zimmerman continues, on the basis that passengers on ships with special marks of identification and sailing under the government guarantee that they are unarmed should receive proper consideration at the hands of submarine commanders. The compromise must also involve the withdrawal of the British admiralty's instructions to merchantmen to ram submarines on sight. The article ventures to indicate for the first time to the German public that there may be a second side to the question of arms on which the press has been for months harping.

Herr Zimmerman pays his respects to what he terms the "outstanding heroes who, in the front, are preaching war to the knife against everybody and concludes:

"We wish to act and write with blood and iron, but just because we are fearless and determined, we may look for possible ways by which to arrive at an understanding with America. We need not close up our department of incoming and outgoing declarations of war, which heretofore has worked nobly, but it seems to me that we can curtail the output somewhat at without incurring a reputation for excessive caution."

VALIDATION OF SPANISH AND MEXICAN LAND GRANTS

Austin, Tex., June 15.—Titles to thousands of acres of land situated in the western portion of Texas and added under ancient Spanish and Mexican land grants, some of which have been in litigation for years, will automatically become validated under the act passed by the recent special session of the legislature to take effect 90 days after its adjournment. Many of these titles date back to 1830. The act was especially designed to validate titles to land which has been subdivided into towns and where the owners seek to have their titles clear. There has been some discussion here, however, of an effort on the part of certain persons to seek to test in the courts the validity of the act itself.

ARROW COLLARS

MADE IN ENGLAND

MANCHESTER, ENGLAND—Owing to pressure to secure discharging facilities at Liverpool, several cotton firms have been approached by owners of shipping arriving in Liverpool to divert their boats to Manchester. A trial was made last week with the Normar Monarch from New Orleans with 5,368 bales for Liverpool and 4,773 bales for Manchester, the steamer coming up the canal direct and discharging the whole of the cargo here. Liverpool authorities now fear this arrangement will be so advantageous that other shippers will follow suit and use Manchester more freely thereby reducing Liverpool's income from dock dues, wharfage and ship stores.

Wichita Falls, Texas, June 15, 1915

The next admonition in order is "Cut the weeds."

Ex-President Roosevelt has expressed his loyalty to President Wilson in the affair with Germany.

Franklin K. Lane is being spoken of as Bryan's successor. Mr. Lane is secretary of the interior. If he is appointed, Senator Owen of Oklahoma is mentioned as his probable successor.

If the matter was put to a vote as to whether Texas shall support the President in his note to Germany, Texas will be found quite as strong for the President as she was in 1912.

Two citizens of the United States traveling in Germany have been relieved of their passports, and their offense was that of attacking the American government through the German press. All of which reminds us that there are few citizens of this country who are doing quite the same thing right here at home, and the wonder is that they can have the crust to do it.

There ought to be some way the country could free itself from such citizens. In the first place, if the government under which they live does not suit them they should be decent enough either to keep their mouths shut or get out. And if they are not, then there should be some way to get rid of them.

And we have noticed this: Those who condemn Mr. Bryan most severely for resigning as secretary of state are the very fellows who, before the President had announced his cabinet, predicted that Bryan would not be in it. Perhaps he took the job just to show them that he could get it, unsolicited. Now that he is out, they, his old-time enemies, it strikes The Times, should rather commend instead of condemn him for his action. But Bryan's critics have never yet hurt him. They have rather had a tendency to revive him after they had predicted he was dead, politically. It may be that way again.

The government report estimates Texas' 1915 wheat crop at about 20,000,000 bushels, and of this amount Wichita county will most assuredly produce at least one-twentieth of the total. If those who produce the great wheat crop will cooperate together and not sell their wheat at prices offered, the chance are very largely that every bushel of it will sell for at least $1.25 per bushel. Last year the wheat farmers of Wichita county alone lost two or three hundred thousand dollars by selling as quick as they could thresh their grain and get it on the market. Their experience of last year may prove of some benefit to them this year.

In the cotton picking season and in wheat harvest times hundreds of cotton pickers and harvest hands are recruited through Wichita Falls from points east and south for the work in the fields west and north. The cotton pickers after several months of lucrative employment come back through Wichita Falls with big rolls of money bulging in their jeans and usually stop here and buy clothes and other supplies before going on back to their homes in East and South Texas. The harvest hands however, rarely see Wichita Falls again after they beat their way out of town on a freight train for some Oklahoma point. After finishing the harvest in Texas and Oklahoma they continue northward to Kansas and Nebraska and Iowa and land up in the Dakotas in the fall and get back home for the winter over some other route.

Superintendent R. J. Sullivan of the Katy, who was injured last week in a railroad motor car accident, will be taken to Dallas tomorrow morning; a private car will be provided for him. Mr. Sullivan has been improving steadily and is anxious to return to work. It will be some time, however, before he can assume his duties again.

Marriage licenses have been issued to Stanley F. Weidman and Miss Eleanor R. Heath, at Wright and Celestine Jackson.

HEALTH SCHOOL OPENS AT UNIVERSITY OF TEXAS. Lectures will be given daily by some of the best known authorities in the state. From June 18-22 Dr. F. L. Watkins, special representative of the regional census bureau, is to lecture.

OF course the man who knows how to speak English correctly would remember Mr. Bryan's cross of gold speech in words that are properly arranged. For instance, one writer quotes: "You shall be pressed down upon the brow of labor this crown of thorns." We will venture, from memory, that the correct quotation is: "Thou shalt not press down this crown of thorns upon the brow of labor," with a long dwell on the word "labor." This is unimportant except that we do not like to see a good sentence misquoted for the purpose of using good English, if it is good English.—Temple Telegram.

Just to correct you, we will give it as the Chicago Record printed it on the day of its delivery: "Thou shalt not press upon the brow of labor a crown of thorns; thou shalt not crucify mankind upon a cross of gold."

RUSSIA BIGGEST OF NATIONS.

Russia lacks only ten longitudinal degrees of stretching half way round the earth and possesses one-sixth of the landed area of the planet. Russia's Asiatic possessions are forty times as great as those of Japan, even since the new Asiatic balance that followed the Russo-Japanese war. The variety of Russia's resources makes the empire second only to the United States as the greatest food producing country in the world. It leads all nations in mineral wealth and timber supply.—Kansas City Star.

ANOTHER DISCOURSE ON NEW TESTAMENT

Evangelist Nelson Continues Study of First Four Books of New Testament

On account of the rain the audience was much smaller last night. Evangelist J. B. Nelson showed very clearly that the first four books of the New Testament give to us a history of the birth, life, death and resurrection of Christ. He proved from Lk. 1:16-17, Mt. 3:1-3 how that a preparatory work. He came to the lost sheep of the house of Israel and not to aliens. "Go not into the way of the Gentiles and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not; but go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel." Mt. 10:5-6.

The people that Jesus preached to were already children of God. They were backsliders or lost sheep and he came preaching to his own, June 1:11-14. To find examples of conversions you must go to the Acts of the Apostles where cases are recorded.

Mr. Nelson discussed the use of the word sin in the New Testament. He said that word was often applied to physical ailments and not always to personal transgressions. When anyone would rely upon the cases of physical diseases for cases of conversion they misunderstood the teachings of Christ. Physical diseases are a result of the violation of the laws of nature will suffer in this life. The laws of nature treat all alike. The righteous man will suffer pain in the flesh as well as a wicked man. The fact that a man is a Christian does not immunize him from pain. The man that Jesus healed that had the palsy was no doubt just as pure as those who brought him to the Saviour. By this healing, or forgiving of the sin called palsy, the Christ proved his divinity. The object and purpose of this healing was to prove that he was sent of God and not to give to the world a case of conversion. At this time the people were still in the sin of unbelief. Christ's law was not in force. The power of Jesus at this time was limited Mk. 2:10; but after his resurrection from the dead he had all power in heaven and earth.—Mt. 28:18; Rom. 1:4.

Mr. Nelson will begin tonight right where he quit last night. Come and hear him. Reporter.

GERMANS HAD BIG ADVANTAGE IN MACHINE GUNS

British Headquarters, France.—It is still obvious that the extraordinary number of machine guns used by the Germans is one of the chief troubles of the allied forces. The German weapon is a very fine one and in their preparation for war the Germans have trained large numbers of men to use them. They have studied its tactics as carefully as they have those of the regular artillery.

The machine gun requires tactics of its own, and some military experts say that it takes two years to train a man thoroughly in its use.

W. O. W. 3001 WILL INITIATE CANDIDATES WEDNESDAY

The ritualistic work will be carried out in full and the officers will appear for the first time in their new regalia. The Ladies Grove 1447 will meet on the same night and there will be a surprise offered to the members at the close of the ceremonies.

There will be a special talk made by the grand arch-warden elected on last meeting's night.

HOGS ODORS, FLIES AND OTHER THINGS AT HENRIETTA.

The thorough weeding of the soil, and things, ever, under and about the city hog pens, followed by the Texas incubating sunshine, have conducted to generate odors, flies, bugs and noxious insects that are a menace to health.

They are also an infernal nuisance to those people for two blocks around who are not looking forward to December for meat. The city government a few years back, at that time in the hands of hog stockmen, legislated in a way flattering to the hog as a member of city society. They way is still left open, however, to those who find the chances of disease and death rather unbearable to make complaint and have the nuisance removed, or at least mitigated by a show of reprobation—which does not remove the hog with his own peculiar personal odor and power of renewal. Of course, many people will suffer, and even take the chances of disease and death rather than offend the hog; but in the interest of public morals and sanitation the complaints should be made.—Henrietta Review.

THAT IDIOTIC FRIEND

MOST OF US HAVE HAD EXPERIENCE WITH HIM.

Worst of it All is That the Surge of Hate in One's Heart Has to Be Suppressed, Though at Times It Almost Chokes.

Most of the annoyances of life are caused by friends. It doesn't annoy you when your enemy tries to get you in bad. You don't expect anything else from him. It's his regular business. You feel that he was a pretty mean sort of an enemy if he didn't try to puncture one of your tires! Then you can think and speak about him as a leprous horned toad. But you can't think or speak about a friend that way when he gets under your skin. He's your friend! That's all there is to it—he did it, and he's a feeble-minded antester, but he's still your friend!

Only a dear friend would greet you when you're feeling peculiarly gay and sit with, "Ba-a-ay! What's the trouble? You look positively green, old horse! Don't you feel well? You ought to take a long rest, that's right. I don't like that hollow-eyed look of yours; perhaps it's your heart."

Come up behind you when you are looking calmly at some old prints in a window on the avenue and forgetting there are such things in the world as idiotic friends, and let his enormous flat nine-pound hand down on you between your shoulders so that you think for the moment that a prehistoric mule with hoofs on him the size of the rubbish receptacles on the corners has planted them in the interior of your lungs! Only a friend could inspire such diabolical and streaming hatred that rises up in the wreck of your breast, when you manage to turn and see what hit you!

If you happen to ask certain friends to go motoring several times and have them to dinner quite often and you let two or three Sundays go by without asking them, it is only dear friends who would, on meeting you next time, greet you with a Hudson Bay expression and a bucket of sarcasm!

Speaking of the sex that is responsible for all the poets, who but a true and tried friend would put over to her friend, "Oh, Camille, you were such a pretty girl, as a young girl, and you did have the loveliest clothes!"—James Montgomery Flagg, in the American Magazine.

Known by Chipped Tooth. Down at League Island the entire marine corps is shaking with silent laughter at the dilemma of the officers of Company 17, Second regiment, for the company has as members unusual twins.

They are Leslie and Hallie Woodcock, twenty years old, from South Carolina. At enlistment they were promised they would not be placed in separate companies.

HOSTILE AVIATORS BOMBARD KARLSRUHE

By Associated Press. Karlsruhe, Baden, June 15.—Five hostile airplanes bombarded Karlsruhe for forty minutes this morning. Several persons were killed or wounded.

THEN HE WORE THE HAT

David Warfield Felt He Could Follow Style That Was Set by King of England.

David Warfield claims "the" honor of having led the styles in one particular at least. But he says it wasn't his fault. He entered a hat shop not long ago and dissatisfied turned from one shape to another until his eye fell on one that pleased him.

"What about this?" he asked. "Oh, that—" diplomatically heated the clerk, who did not wish to lose a customer, but who had fears of consequences—"why, that—do you think you would like that, Mr. Warfield?"

"I do like it," said the actor. "Why not? I like the shape. It is such a nice dull shade, too—so soft in tone." The clerk said no more, and the actor took the hat. When he looked at it the next day his teeth met in a way that boded no good for the bashful clerk. The hat was green. However, he determined to make no complaint. He recalled the hesitation of the man in the store, and so in the daytime the green hat hung in the closet. At night Mr. Warfield did not hesitate to wear it to and from the scene of his labors. His friends all asked: "Where'd you get the hat, Dave?" But "Dave" never would tell, for he knew the joke was on him.

Each morning he would gaze longingly at his favorite hat, and then with a shake of his head would hang it back on its hook. "I haven't got the nerve," he would mutter. "The shape's all right, but oh, the color!"

One day recently a member of his family, who was reading a newspaper, suddenly looked up and exclaimed: "Why, what do you suppose?" "I don't know," answered Warfield. "Somebody dead or married, I guess. I give up."

"The king of England's wearing a green hat like yours." "No, really?" said the actor. "The king can do no wrong. Hand me that hat. I'm going to wear it. Wonderful how great heads fit in the same hats—what?"

MARY ELLEN'S MAN

By HOPE AINSLEE.

(Copyright, 1914, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)
Mary Ellen did not know that the place she was entering was a pawnshop. It was tucked away in a quiet thoroughfare off Regent street and Mary Ellen just happened to be strolling through the quaint Soho district when an antique locket in the window caught her attention.

She bought the oddly beautiful locket and was persuaded to purchase, also, an equally curious old ring that the shopkeeper had in his possession. Mary Ellen was a shy, imaginative little person, whose world was peopled by fanciful characters. She was queer; she was merely different enough from the average girl to be mysterious.

Back in New York there were several suitors who wanted Mary Ellen's dainty hand for their own, it was partly owing to the persistent wooing of these admirers that Mary Ellen found herself in London. She had fled from the temptation to marry when she was not really as much in love as her fancy told her she should be. And her dream man possessed all the qualities that existed, respectively, in each of her suitors.

She held her new locket closely in her hand and looked at the face in it. She began to wish that she had lived in the age when he had lived—in the age of powder and patches.

An idea thrust itself into her dreams. She would return to America as the betrothed wife of the man in the locket. This would be a fitting way for her to avoid marrying any one of her suitors. She had long sought an excuse that would satisfy them. Her fictitious lover would be the excuse. And the antique ring would lend color to her story.

Few girls but Mary Ellen would have conceived so fanciful a plan of clearing her path of lovers. "And his name is 'Davie,'" she said to herself when she had discovered an engraved inscription inside the locket: "WILL love, Davie," the line ran.

"I shall call my fiancé David-Woodman, and say that he is an actor. My miniature of him was made in the character of Sir Charles Surface." Mary Ellen laughed at her own ingenuity. Indeed, so delighted was she with her fabric of romance that she called for home a week sooner than she had expected.

The romance woven around the man in the locket came to be acknowledged as a natural one. Mary Ellen had gone abroad and she had met her fate. One night Jimmy Vale stood in the ballroom of the Deerwent home looking at Mary Ellen as she danced with one of the men. She was as light as a zephyr, and even had Jimmy not been possessed of a hopeless love for the girl he would have enjoyed the grace of her.

Someone touched his arm. "That slim, quaint, beautiful little dancer in mauve—who is she?" David Garland asked him.

Jimmy turned to look at the man. He was the guest of the hostess, and they had merely shaken hands in being introduced.

"I'll present you—with pleasure," Jimmy hastened to say.

When Mary Ellen looked into the blue eyes of David Garland she would have turned and fled had not Jimmy restrained her. "Wait a minute, Mary Ellen. I want to present Mr. David Garland. Miss Moore," Jimmy added, with his best society bow. Then, without another word he left them.

David was so like the man in Mary Ellen's locket that the girl was stricken with amazement. She could scarcely raise her eyes to his scrutinizing gaze.

"There are two reasons for my wanting to meet you," she heard him say. "One is—that locket." He said, looking at her treasure.

"Are you in London?" Mary Ellen confessed, blushing and taking the locket in her hand. "And this ring I bought at the same time," she admitted, extending the ring for him to see.

A MATTER OF BUSINESS

By OLIVE MARIE.

(Copyright, 1914, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)
The three girls looked at the lawyer in frightened disbelief.

"It could not be possible that their father's fortune had been such a hollow mockery. How had they lived all these years in such quiet comfort?"

"It was the nature of his business," explained Mr. Ames; "a broker never really knows whether he is a rich man or a pauper. Your father was undertaking a big coup when his illness and death put a finish to everything. He was on the wrong side of the market when he was stricken. There will be nothing left for you except the place in the country—your mother's old home."

"But that is only a house and furniture. How can we earn our bread and butter?" asked Kitty.

"We might take summer boarders," suggested Dorothy gravely.

"That isn't a bad idea," said Mr. Ames. "I'll send you all the people I can. Can any of you cook?"

"I can," said Dorothy proudly. "I have taken a prize at cooking school."

June found the Henderson girls settled in the old house in which they had been born.

Old friends called upon them, and, to Cousin Kesiah's great satisfaction, several young men were attracted to the Henderson house. Tom Bixby, Walter Mott and Paul Clarkson had all been to the village school with the Henderson girls.

Lillian Henderson, the eldest sister, was ambitious. She had determined that her sisters, as well as herself, should improve their fortunes by good marriages. And with that end in view she discouraged the attentions of the village doctor and his two friends, who were law partners.

"I thought you liked Doctor Mott," observed Kitty when Lillian delivered her ultimatum.

"I do, dear, but we must think about practical matters. We should marry well," she returned decidedly.

"I wouldn't mind working hard for a man I liked," declared Kitty, stoutly; and Dorothy added, "I don't suppose a real man would mind our hands if they were tied and coarsened by honest toil!"

"I didn't mean that, dears," cried Lillian sharply, "but I am afraid you will miss all the things we have been accustomed to. You know, Dorry, dear, that since Harry Blake has followed you here—of course it would be perfectly fine if you could love him well enough to give up all his money."

"Does that mean that you are going to accept old Mr. Allison?" Lillian whitened, but she nodded. From the lawn tennis-courts came a man's jolly laugh.

Kitty looked embarrassed. She knew that her sisters wondered if she was going to accept Lester Marshall, whose sister had been their first guest.

MEYER DISCUSSES NEEDS OF THE NAVY

INVESTIGATION OF NATIONAL DEFENSE URGED BY FORMER SECRETARY

SAYS NAVY DETERIORATING

Comprehensive Plan For Future Should Be Provided For By Congress

By Associated Press.

New York, June 15.—George von L. Meyer, who was secretary of the navy in President Taft's cabinet, addressing the peace and preparation conference of the National Security League at luncheon today, asserted that the American navy is deteriorating, outlined the respects in which he believed such to be the case and urged that investigation of the national defense and a comprehensive plan for the future should be made obligatory upon the next Congress.

Lack of battle cruisers, airships, armed aeroplanes and men, lack of a naval reserve of experienced men, lack of a comprehensive policy of national defense, instead of general public knowledge in case of emergency, reduction of complements of some ships to man other and newer ships and general unpreparedness on the part of many battleships and other fighting units were enumerated as instances of naval inferiority. Mr. Meyer said, in part:

Some Deficiencies.
"Of the thirty-three battleships we have only twenty-one that are fitted for service without long delay. Furthermore, we have about seventy miscellaneous fighting ships not prepared for service in case of emergency."

"We lack battle cruisers, airships and armed aeroplanes. Our submarines are in a crippled condition."

"The complement of all torpedo destroyers has been reduced from fifteen to twenty-five per cent to get men to commission new boats. This reduction in personnel is a serious handicap, reduces the efficiency of the destroyers, affects contentment, and prevents the boat being kept in good condition."

"The Atlantic fleet alone needs 5,000 more men. The reserve fleet at Philadelphia was largely depleted in order to get a crew for the Alabama when she was ordered to Hampton Roads to enforce neutrality."

"The review in New York this year was a poor imitation of previous reviews, in that the reserve fleet was absent. It was a mere parade, not a mobilization. It did not indicate the true condition of the navy because the people did not know the whole truth."

"For lack of men, ships are laid up at navy yards, where they rapidly deteriorate, like a vacant house. All small ships and all cruisers now laid up for lack of men are needed in Mexico and elsewhere and should be ready for an emergency call to prevent the employment of battleships at gunboat duty. The complement of enlisted men at shore stations and training stations has been cut down, with a decided loss of efficiency, and greatly to the discontent and discomfort of the men."

"To enumerate the ships in the navy and make a list of new ships authorized gives no idea whatever of the true condition of the navy as to its readiness for war. Ships without men are of little use and a navy without a policy and with no well-considered organization at the navy department will only invite a condition of chaos in event of war."

Navy Deteriorating.
"The statement of Assistant Secretary Roosevelt that we need 18,000 men is undoubtedly true. The navy is deteriorating for lack of men. The target practice this last year is no better than it was ten years ago."

"Congress is negligent in not having established a national council of defense, a general staff and an organized naval reserve of 50,000 experienced men."

"In calling attention to these defects, I have not done so for the sake of criticizing the present head of the navy, for although I feel that he must be held responsible for the demoralized condition of the personnel, and the decreased efficiency of the navy at the present time, yet the lack of any definite naval policy for many years, except in the general board of the navy and the failure of the people and Congress to recognize the necessity for such a policy, has placed us in a position of inferiority, which circumstance may lead us to war, or cause us great embarrassment, as well as discredit to the country."

"The investigation of our national defense and a comprehensive plan for the future should be an obligatory matter in our next Congress, for the navy belongs to the people of the country and they have a right to know its condition and how it is being managed. The mere appropriation of vasty increased sums would not be instrumental in bringing about the necessary reforms or military efficiency of the organization, that can only be accomplished by an investigation of actual conditions, and a demand for needed changes in the way of military reforms, which would be forced upon Congress by an enlightened public sentiment."

"This investigation and knowledge has been denied to the people by the leaders of the party in power. It is deplorable that there should be an influence to deceive the people in a matter of such vital importance. We have reached a period in the world's history when it must be recognized that if we are to maintain peace and safeguard the interests of our people, we must be prepared to defend ourselves. Let us not forget—the nation is, so also are its government, its public, its army and its navy."

TAX COLLECTOR COMPILING DELINQUENT TAX RECORD

Collection of Such Tax Mandatory Delinquents Can Save Costs By Paying Now

Parties owing back taxes to the state and county will save extra costs and penalties by paying same in the next few weeks.

A law known as House Bill No. 40 enacted by the Thirty-fourth legislature goes into effect the 30th of this month. This law makes it mandatory upon the tax collector and the county attorney to enforce collection of taxes. Officers failing to comply with the provisions of this law are subject to a fine of $100 to $1000, dollars and removal from office.

The law provides for the compilation of a delinquent record of all back taxes on real property and the publication of the same in some newspaper published in the county. The work of compiling this record is now being done and will be completed in a short time. All back taxes paid before the record is finished will escape the extra costs.

They have succeeded in booking some first class vaudeville numbers for the opening. The Airdome at Lamar and Seventh streets has been repainted and otherwise brightened up for the season.

MAY SOON BE ABLE TO REMOVE INSANE FROM JAILS

By Associated Press.

Austin, Texas, June 15.—It was predicted here today that within a short time there would be room in the State insane asylums for the 1,000 or more insane persons in Texas, who now are being confined in county jails, on county poor farms and in some instances with relatives. New buildings at the Southwestern Insane Asylum in San Antonio are being rapidly completed and these will care for many of the unfortunates, who have been crowded out. A recent report of a legislative committee showed there were approximately 600 whites and 400 negroes in the State who should be confined where they could be given treatment.

2,000,000 ACRES PUBLIC SCHOOL LAND TO BE OPENED

By Associated Press.

Austin, Texas, June 15.—Approximately 2,000,000 acres of public free school land will be thrown on the market between now and June 25, to be sold on September 1 next. J. T. Robison, state land commissioner, is preparing a list showing the location, price and character of this land which will be ready for distribution within a few days. About one-third of this land must be sold with the condition of actual settlement, while the remainder has no such conditions attached. Most of the land lies in the western portion of the State, some of it being agricultural, but most of it mountainous. In Brewster county there are 469,160 acres, in Culberson county, 79,531 acres; in Presidio county, 185,725 acres; in Val Verde 22,122, all to be sold without condition.
