ALLIES PLANNING TO BUY THE ENTIRE COTTON CROP

England and France Reported to Be Arranging for Gigantic Loan For This Purpose

Washington, Aug. 10.—London dispatches that Great Britain and her allies are considering the purchase of all America's export cotton brought forth reports arising from statements of big Southern fertilizer and cotton men that England and France are also considering plans to seek a $750,000,000 bond issue in the United States, the funds from which are to be used to meet their bills for American cotton and grain this fall. If the proposed bond issue goes through, it is stated, a good price will be realized for cotton and last year's American grain prices will be maintained.

No official information in regard to this proposed bond issue can be had in Washington. In fact, those government officials asked about it declared that they had heard nothing of the plan. The purpose of the bond issue, according to reports here, is to relieve England and her allies of the necessity of shipping large amounts of gold to this country to meet the huge trade balance in favor of the United States. During the last fiscal year Uncle Sam's merchandise trade balance amounted to approximately $1,100,000,000. For English-French allies to meet another big trade balance of that dimension it will compel the French and English savings banks to unload their gilt edge American securities and right at this time the European investor realizes that the American securities are the best investments today in the world.

Believe Securities Transferred. It is also believed that the bulk of floating American securities in Europe have been transferred to this side of the Atlantic to help counterbalance what Europe owes the United States as a result of last fiscal year's commercial transactions.

From London comes the news that Great Britain is favorably considering the suggestion that England and her allies purchase all American cotton available for export. Cotton is regarded as essential to modern warfare as guns, and the allies do not want any cotton to reach Germany. Therefore, to satisfy the cotton interests of the United States, which are clamoring for an open sea to Germany, the suggestion is made that the American export crop be absorbed by anti-Toucan sources. England does not desire, it is stated, to injure any powerful neutral interests by such a step.

ALLIES GAINING AT DARDANELLES.

London, Aug. 10.—Troops of the entente allies in the Dardanelles made a gain of two hundred yards on a front of three hundred yards east of the Krithia road on the Gallipoli peninsula. It was officially announced here today. A footing also has been gained on Chukubahr and another landing effected elsewhere, the statement adds.

Da Gama Leads Mediators In Mexico Plan

Domíngos da Gama, who is Brazil's representative attending the Mexican peace conference at Washington, is regarded as the spokesman of the Pan American delegation. He was one of the mediators in the peace party which was held last year at Niagara Falls, N. Y.

Brazilian Minister Not Leaving Because Of General Carranza

Long Beach, N. J., Aug. 10.—Domíngos da Gama, the Brazilian ambassador whose summer embassy is located here authorized the statement today that Jose Cardoso, the Brazilian minister to Mexico City, was leaving there at this time chiefly to inform the Washington government and Pan American diplomats on the general situation in Mexico. The impression given at the embassy was that the Brazilian minister was not fleeing from Carranza but that his departure made several weeks ago. Senor Cardoso has left at times the pinch of hunger and his health has been impaired.

General Scott Has Accomplished Mission Of Trip to El Paso

El Paso, Texas, Aug. 10.—General Hugh L. Scott, chief of staff of the United States army, has accomplished his mission to the border. At noon the following statement was issued: "General Villa assured me during our interview that the proposed meeting of mining men will be postponed indefinitely, the foreign merchandise seized in Chihuahua will be restored. Violators of the law, however, will be prosecuted. My mission here is now accomplished."

MEXICANS WOULD TAKE SOUTHERN PART OF TEXAS FROM UNITED STATES

Political Party is Said to Exist With This Project as its Purpose and is Said to Account for the Recent Border Raids by the Lower Class.

Brownsville, Tex., Aug. 10.—County Judge H. L. Yates announced today he has information that numerous Mexicans are crossing into Texas near Mission on the border about seventy miles west of here.

Near Sebastian last night one Mexican was killed and one American named Ross wounded. They are said to have had a quarrel. Three troopers in the Mercedes fight today captured a mule loaded with ammunition.

An explanation of the purpose and extent of the Mexican raids of the past three weeks was obtained today from Jesus Garcia, a Mexican wounded and captured in the Sunday fight at Norias who is expected to die. He said many Mexicans, especially the lower classes, hope to gain possession of that part of Texas between the Rio Grande and the Neches river, or roughly, the strip bounded by Brownsville and Corpus Christi, and return it to Mexico. Garcia said a political party having this aim exists in the southern part of Texas. The recent raids were intended to equate the Mexicans for the organized conflict to conquer the lower end of Texas.

Garcia said he was forced to join the band which attacked Norias. It is claimed that for the last two years Mexicans have held weekly meetings at Garcia's home. American neighbors assert that many members of the present bandit gang were among those attending the weekly meeting. The habit of peaceful Mexicans in this section of going armed constantly has made it difficult for the authorities to distinguish between the bandits and inoffensive citizens and has made it easy for Mexicans going home from raids to pass as peaceful farmers.

EFFORTS TO EXCITE PEOPLE OF VERA CRUZ AGAINST FOREIGNERS

NAVY DEPARTMENT ISSUES ORDERS FOR MORE BATTLESHIPS TO GO TO MEXICAN WATERS IMMEDIATELY.

DEMONSTRATIONS ARE FEARED

Americans in Particular are Objects of Efforts of Agitators at Vera Cruz—All Foreigners, However, Are Subjects for Orators.

By Associated Press. Washington, Aug. 10.—Commander McNamoe, the senior American naval officer at Vera Cruz, has asked the navy department to send a battleship squadron to guard against anti-foreign demonstrations which he fears. Anti-foreign demonstrations in Vera Cruz were the subject of a long cablegram received at the navy department today. Acting Secretary Benson said he dispatch told of speeches being made in front of public buildings and in street corners in an effort to excite the people against all foreigners, especially Americans. No acts of violence were reported.

Orders for the battleships Louisiana and New Hampshire to prepare to sail at once from Newport News to Vera Cruz were issued here today. The vessels immediately began taking on coal and provisions. The submarine Marietta has been ordered to proceed from Progreso, Mexico to Vera Cruz in order to have a ship at the disposal of the Brazilian and Guatemalan ministers who are leaving Mexico.

It is assumed that the Louisiana and New Hampshire will be held at Newport News for further orders. Admiral McNamoe's report did not give details but officials here believe the anti-American feeling he reported is a direct outgrowth of the Pan-American negotiations in Washington for the adjustment of the difficulties between the factions in Mexico. Other developments such as General Carranza's expulsion of the Guatemalan minister and his differences with the Brazilian minister because their countries participated in this conference are taken as evidences of Carranza's displeasure with the United States attitude in this matter.

ONLY ONE WARSHIP TO BE SENT TO VERA CRUZ

By Associated Press. Washington, Aug. 10.—Secretary Lansing announced late today that only one warship would be sent to Vera Cruz and it was going to relieve whatever ship was used for the transportation of the Brazilian and Guatemalan ministers. Secretary Lansing denied flatly that military or naval expeditions were being prepared and declared such reports only interfered with efforts to settle Mexican affairs peacefully.

The Guatemalan minister reached Vera Cruz last night and went aboard the gunboat Sacramento. The Brazilian minister is expected to arrive tonight and the two ministers will remain there until the Marietta reaches Vera Cruz to bring them to the United States. With much speculation concerning the plan of action that may have been agreed upon by the Pan-American conference the feeling is growing among those well informed on the Mexican situation that it contemplates forceful action if Mexico does not yield to the plan for a settlement by conference of all factions.

CONFEREEES AGREE ON PROGRAM IN MEXICO LANSING ANNOUNCES

Expected That Conference of Pan-American Representatives in New York Wednesday Will Ratify Program as Outlined

Washington, Aug. 10.—Powers of North and South America already have agreed upon a definite plan for dealing with the Mexican problem and when the Pan-American conference is resumed in New York Wednesday the program will be formally ratified.

This information came from Secretary Lansing, who, though he would not discuss details, said he was decidedly encouraged over the prospect.

Only Few Fighting. The confidence expressed by officials generally here that the conferees were representing the United States, Brazil, Argentina, Bolivia, Guatemala and Uruguay will be able to shape a course likely to bring peace and restore constitutional government in Mexico, is due to the fact that all are agreed that most of the people of the revolution-torn Republic are thoroughly sick of war and with encouragement from friendly powers will promptly join in a movement to clean house. A large section of the country and a vast majority of the people have not been involved in the fighting which followed the overthrow of Huerta. Moreover, it has been reported to President Wilson and Secretary Lansing that only the fear of reprisals by the military chieftains has kept the people in subjection while the country has been impoverished by the battle of relatively small forces of armed men.

Will Notify All Elements. Reaching their conclusion on these reports the Pan-American conferees are understood to have determined to present the situation to all the various elements in Mexico, addressing directly not only Generals Carranza, Villa and Zapata, but the governors of states, all military leaders with any considerable followings and other influential men, urging them to come together for a caucus at which a substantial provisional government might be framed.

A government to set up would have the support of the United States and other American republics. Officials here believe it would be able to suppress promptly any dissident group which might continue civil strife. It is hoped that none of the important chiefs will offer opposition to the plan, but if trouble does develop and action is necessary by the American powers, the conferees believe they would have the support and approval of the civilian population of Mexico in any step which might be taken to assure the restoration of peace.

Would Support One Faction. There has been talk of joint armed intervention by the powers represented in the conference to quiet any leaders who insist upon remaining in the field with military forces. Some of the conferees, however, are said to believe that the moral support of the powers behind such elements as join in the conference for a new provisional government, together with a strict embargo against the shipment of war munitions to any one in Mexico except the government so formed, would quickly accomplish the desired result.

Secretary Lansing talked optimistically about the situation.

"When the conference adjourned here last Friday," he said, "it had reached the point where a very definite policy with regard to the situation of the Mexican problem had been agreed upon. The conference was adjourned because I wished to consult President Wilson regarding this agreement. I have consulted him through correspondence and we are now ready to resume deliberations and to proceed with the working out of the details based upon the original agreement."

WARSAW OFFICIALS ARE HELD AS HOSTAGES BY GERMAN AUTHORITIES

Citizens May Protect Lives of These Hostages by Giving Information About Hostile Plans Which Might Endanger the German Troops.

By Associated Press. Berlin, Aug. 10.—The Overseas News Agency today gave out the following: "After the army of Prince Liepold of Bavaria, occupied Warsaw a proclamation was issued announcing that the Germans would preserve order and the public peace and would conduct war only against hostile armies and not against peaceful citizens. The prince, as a matter of precaution was compelled to take as hostages the heads of the civil administrations and some other prominent citizens. The inhabitants of the city may protect the lives of these hostages by informing the German authorities of all hostile plans which might endanger the troops. These precautionary measures were taken to prevent a repetition of the unpleasant experience at Louvain and Brussels."

Remarable Cures In French Army Ascribed To New Serum

By Associated Press. Paris, Aug. 10.—What are described as remarkable cures of wounded French soldiers have been effected by the new polyvalent serum, discovery of which was announced last March. Complete recovery is announced of men who were terribly mutilated and for whom all hopes had been given up before the use of the serum, so badly infected were their wounds.

Drs. Leclainche and Vallée, discoverers of the serum, have been unable up to the present to make more than 2,000 flasks of it daily, most of which goes to the base hospitals where the worst cases are. When it can be made in large enough quantities to be sent to the firing line so it can be used preventively as anti-tetanus serum is now used, it is believed that thousands of lives can be saved. The new serum which can be roughly described as a combination of a number of serums against a number of bacilli has been put to practical use for the first time only recently.

ADJUTANT GENERAL IS NOW RECRUITING NE WRANGERS.

Austin, Tex., Aug. 10.—Acting under instructions from Governor Ferguson the adjutant general's department is recruiting new rangers for service on the border. This is in accordance with the governor's plan to increase the ranger force to fifty men. Many applications are being received from young men who desire to enter the state service. Several telegrams were received today by the executive department from citizens asking for protection at different points along the border.

ROBBERS HELD CITIZENS AT BAY WHILE COMPANIONS BLEW VAULT STATE BANK

By Associated Press. Maple Hill, Kan., Aug. 10.—Several robbers held more than a hundred citizens of Maple Hill at bay early today while companions blew the vault of the Maple Hill State bank and escaped with three thousand dollars. It is believed there were seven men in the band. The first explosion aroused the citizens, many of whom came into the streets half clad. Fog prevented the citizens giving an adequate description of any of the robbers.

GOOD CROPS IN GERMANY GIVE ABUNDANCE FOOD

Bread Portions Will Soon Be Increased and Prices of Foodstuffs Will Be Lowered

By Associated Press. Berlin, Aug. 10.—"The minister of the interior of the Grand duchy of Baden," says a message from Karlsruhe, "on conferring with three socialist deputies announced that good crops soon would permit of an increase in bread portions and of a decrease in price. The outlook of the potato crop is excellent and in the near future the price will drop to about the peace level."

I. C. C. ABROGATE RULE AFFECTING SOUTHERN TRAVEL.

By Associated Press. Washington, Aug. 10.—The Interstate Commerce Commission in a decision today affecting a great volume of passenger traffic to the South particularly in the East and North Central states abrogated the proposed rules of the railroad which would have prohibited the through checking of baggage and sale of through parlor or through sleeping car tickets on combination tickets used in connection with joint fares from junction points. Retail merchants, chambers of commerce and travelers in the South and East protested against the inconvenience of detrainings at Washington and other Southern gateway to roughen baggage and secure putmah accommodations for the remainder of their journey.

AUSTRIANS RELEASED FROM RUSSIAN CAMPAIGN

By Associated Press. Geneva, Switzerland, Aug. 10.—The appearance on the Italian front of Austrian troops released from the Russian campaign is announced by the Tribune in a dispatch from Laibach, Austria. These troops numbering 30,000 equipped with artillery attacked the Italians yesterday at Gorizia.

The Italians brought up artillery and after a fifteen hour battle forced the Austrians to retreat into Gorizia leaving two thousand dead, the dispatch says. The Italians are said to have gained an important pass between Romans and Doberdo south of Gradisca. The bombardment of Roseroto continues.

GERMAN CAMPAIGN HAS MET CHECK IN RUSSIAN COURLAND

GREAT ASSEMBLAGE OF GERMAN WARCRRAFT MOVING AGAINST RIGA DISPERSED AND SOME OF THEM WERE DAMAGED.

BIGGEST FLEET IN ACTION

Apparent That Russians Will Make Desperate Resistance to German Advance in the Northeastern Theater of War Operations.

By Associated Press. London, Aug. 10.—Although military operations in Russian Courland have hardly reached the decisive stage the Germans who have been smashing their way to Riga have been checked almost simultaneously. German warships which attempted to seize the Gulf of Riga and obtain a strategic position to assist the troops ashore were dispersed and damaged. The assemblage of German craft was the largest of any engaged in naval operations of the war thus far, with the exception of the allied squadron at the Dardanelles. It made its way towards Riga much after the manner of the British ships which ranged off the Belgian coast last fall. The fact that the German warships were forced to retire is a source of satisfaction to the British press which finds encouragement in the resistance of the Russians in this northeastern theatre in contrast to their retirement elsewhere.

The Balkan situation is still chaotic. It is said that 100,000 men have been massed near Orzogh, Hungary which may be the forerunner of the predicted campaign through Serbia for the relief of Turkey. Italy has as yet not declared war on Turkey but Athens reports that Italian consuls are leaving the Ottoman empire entrusting their affairs to their American colleagues. If this is true it probably means that impending developments in the Balkans indicate that Italy will be forced to enter the war. For Germany's reported peace overtures to Russia the British press finds only sarcasm. It is believed in England that Germany is quite ready for peace negotiations.

Three Men Stole $200,000 From Wells Fargo Express Co.

By Associated Press. Chicago, Aug. 10.—With three men under arrest here today detectives for the Wells Fargo Express Company claim to have discovered a system of theft through which the company has been robbed of merchandise totaling nearly $200,000 within the last twelve years. The prisoners are Frank Wilson, alleged to have disposed of the stolen goods, Ben Watkins, an employe of the express company and a third known only as "The Mysterious Man." Packages containing valuables would be wrapped in one large parcel by Watkins and addressed to "The Mysterious Man" at some suburb in Chicago where it would be claimed by him under the alias on the package.

ONE MEXICAN KILLED IN FIGHT WITH CAVALRYMEN

Party of Six United States Cavalrymen Attacked by Mexicans Near Mercedes in Hidalgo County.

By Associated Press. Brownsville, Texas, Aug. 10.—United States cavalrymen and Mexicans fought again today this time near Mercedes, Texas. One Mexican was killed but none of the troopers was reported injured. Today's fight was somewhat to the west of the scene of the previous Mexican raids and closer to the border, occurring about 25 miles north of the Rio Grande. It was in Hidalgo county while the previous fighting has been in Cameron. Six United States cavalrymen were on border patrol duty near Mercedes when the Mexicans attacked them. The soldiers captured horses from the attacking party. Parties of armed farmers and merchants have gone from Mercedes and other nearby towns to try to capture some of the Mexicans.

Cornish, N. H., Aug. 10.—President Wilson was in communication today with Secretary Lansing regarding a request from Commander McKeon to be sent to Vera Cruz to protect Americans and was understood to be inclined to grant their request.

HOSPITAL MATTERS
OCCUPY COUNCIL
COMMISSIONERS

CONTRACT AWARDED FOR TWO
COTTAGES AT COUNTY FARM
AND PURCHASE OF HOSPITAL
EQUIPMENT TAKEN UP.

ROOM FOR A DENTAL CLINIC

Dr. Brown Urged the Need of Such Department in the New Hospital at Joint Meeting of the City Council and the County Commissioners.

Joint hospital matters occupied the attention of the city council and county commissioners last night and this morning. The contract was awarded for the two frame buildings to be erected at the county farm, and this morning the equipment question was being considered. It was found that all the equipment that was planned cannot be purchased with the remaining funds available and some items that were much desired may have to be left out.

An advisory committee of physicians, Doctors Wade Walker, Everett Jones, M. A. Beckman and C. R.
Hartsook met with the aldermen and commissioners today. The X-ray apparatus may not be installed at first,
as the funds are insufficient, and some other equipment will probably not be purchased. If, however, private organizations and individuals provide beds and other furniture in the wards and rooms, as some of them are understood to contemplate, this may reduce the expense sufficiently to permit getting the needed apparatus.

A room for a dental clinic is desired by local dentists as part of the hospital, the matter being brought before the council by Dr. F. F.
Brown, who urged the need of such department.

Nine bids were submitted for the county farm buildings, the lowest being J. W. Marble, with $2950. He will be awarded the contract as soon as his bond is approved.

At another joint meeting of the commissioners and the city council held this morning the advisory board of physicians was given authority to purchase $2000 worth of equipment for the hospital and an order was passed for making the necessary changes in the plumbing to provide for a dental clinic room in the hospital. As funds are lacking to equip this at present only the plumbing will be changed. The changing of the plumbing to meet the needs for such a room can be made much more economically now than later. County Commissioner Jackson, City Councilman Bradley and Architect Fields were appointed a committee to consult with the advisory committee in reference to the purchase of equipment and furniture. The advisory committee is comprised of Doctors Hartsook, Wade Walker, Everett

Jones and M. A. Beckman.

ASSOCIATED PRESS
MAN DESCRIBES THE
GALLIPOLI PENINSULA

NEARLY EVERY FOOT OF LAND
SCARRED BY SHELLS
FROM THE ALLIED WARSHIPS
AND AEROPLANES.

ONLY SOLDIERS ARE SEEN

Not a House on the Peninsula Inhabited and the Town and Country R-Shelting Commences at 5:15 a. m.

Gallipoli, Peninsula, Aug. 10.—There are few houses on the Gallipoli peninsula that have not been wrecked by the severe bombardment incident to the landing of the Allied troops last April and there are no houses that are now inhabited.

There are wheat fields waiting for the reaper and vineyards and olive groves where work might be done. In the villages the few remaining shops stand idle. From the harbors along the Dardanelles and Gulf of Saros the boats have vanished, and the nets of the fishermen have dried in the hot sun a long time.

Only in the fields the crude plow and harrows lack oxen. The windmill are ruins or have had their canvas sails striped by shot and shell.

Towns, villages and countryside have been deserted by their populations.
The picturesque civilian garb of Turk and Greek has disappeared and instead everywhere the dull olive drab and sandy brighter khaki uniform of the Turkish soldier.

This is the Gallipoli peninsula today.
The British and French ships have thrown tens of thousands of heavy shells on the narrow strip of land.
Maiden and Noulain have been razed.
Kirithia is a heap of ruins and Gall-ipoli stands as a monument to what modern artillery may do. To any of these must be added every other town,
village, and hamlet on the peninsula,
and they are by no means few in number.

Wasteful Expenditure.
The expenditure of artillery and aeroplane ammunition of the British and French has been enormous, and wasteful. This morning a British cruiser threw into the town of Gall-ipoli, exactly 101 shells—a sort of salute to Caesar Mars, because there is nothing in Gallipoli to call for such an extravagance with the taxpayer's money. At another point, nearby, 98 shells were hurled. Both bombardments resulted in a bag of one shepherd wound ed.

But the bombardment was a fine exhibition. For the greater part of an hour it kept the echoes of the Gallipoli hills busy. Then the cruiser began to treat parts—one of the islands in the Aegean, where its crew may be enjoying a good rest at this moment.

Not a square foot of ground on the peninsula is safe against the British ship artillery fire, though dugouts help. The British gunners start early—about 5:15 o'clock in the morning.
Why nobody knows. Light conditions for them would be best in the late afternoon, when the sun illuminates the hills of the peninsula from the southwest, when, in other words, it is behind, instead of before, the gunner. But modern gunnery is not hampered much by such trifles as light conditions, especially when indirect fire, or "map" bombardments make the eye of the cannoner superior to the eye of the soldier.

In the conning tower of the bombarding vessel stands an officer with a map and a few other accessories, and puts the higher mathematics, astronomy, and the reports of the aeroplane scouts and observers to good use. Astronomy and artillery may seem unrelated, but at the pinch the artillery officer of the bombardment ship can make splendid use of it. If the land mark on the coast do not suit his purposes well enough, he can establish to a fraction of a geographical second just where he is, measure distance between gun and target on his map, shoot certain numbers to his crews in the turret and—bang!

Like a Bad Rash.
The proceeding is simple enough and the landscape of the peninsula, were it a sentient being, would know it. The peninsula gives the impression of a pest of very large and exceedingly active moles having visited it—together with a violent earthquake. Seen from an elevation, located anywhere, the hills, slope and narrow valleys appear to have broken out in a sort of bad rash.

Daily the rash increases. A few days ago The Associated correspondent was washed at 5:15 a. m. by having a shell explode inconveniently close—through the canvas wall of the tent in which he slept, or had slept until that moment. Other shells came and before the British cruiser dared to be silent over 30 shots had landed both far from and near to, the tent. But by that time the correspondent lay snug in a bomb-proof.

If it isn't artillery that spoils the Gallipoli landscape it is the busy aeroplane's bomb. The Allies have many fliers and all of them are bent upon making life on the peninsula as precarious as possible. Every day these birds of ill-omen come, and they all throw bombs, some explode with one bang, others do the trick in three installments—in a sort of ripping crash that makes the sound of striking lightning
a poor imitation of what man can do in that line.

The hole left by the aerial bomb is not large. But the landscape suffers nevertheless. Everything within a generous radius of the explosion goes down. The grass vanishes under the hot withering breath, and bush and tree are snapped like so many dry twigs.

Ships Beyond Range.
To the British bombardment ships the Turks pay no heed—for good reasons.
The bombardments are carried on from so long a range that the Turkish batteries cannot reach these disturbance of the idyllic peace, but the aeroplane can be given at least a little attention. The hum of its motor is hardly heard when certain batteries get ready. But to get an aeroplane down in largely accident, and the aviator knows it. So on he sails and just to return compliments he drops a bomb when he imagines he is over the offending battery—which he hardly ever is, according to two weeks experience of the Associated Press correspondent.

What goes in the air must come down again. The law of gravity makes no exception, even in the case of a shipboard. So if the bomb of the aviator has missed you, the fragments of the aéroplane may not. It takes Turkish nerves to stand a so-loun on the peninsula for any length of time.

The Turks do not seem to mind the bombardment in reality do not mind it at all. Their fatalism is a splendid thing under such conditions. If "Kader" the supreme fate, wills death by any means enumerated, then, "Kader" willed it thus, so they reason hereabout. Of course, a bomb-proof is a good thing they admit. But fate may catch anywhere, even in a bomb-proof.
So what is the use of a bomb-proof?
Lately, however, the men have been considerate enough of their fortune of war to observe the progress of the yellow birds from under the trees.

Splendid summer weather prevails on the peninsula. The sun is hot enough but the proximity of two large bodies of water keeps the breeze stirring. There are alternate spalls of wind to the Black Sea and wind to the Mediterranean. It is cool even in the middle of the day under the pines and cypresses, through the shade of the atter is a cool thing and to keep in it one must keep shifting every few minutes. The slender cypress of these parts serves better as the column of a sundial than a parasol. The pine is better, and in addition has the admirable quality of permitting the person resting under its fragrant roof to watch the aeroplanes properly, as at least make sure that the huming noise is not merely that of an indefinite, little bumble bee instead of an aeroplane—all of which tends to make life on the peninsula less unattractive.

Nature Unchanged.
But nature does not mind a few scars. In the pine brakes the aero-plane rosin floors and the needles emit their pungent fragrance at the cooking of a warm sun. On the crest of the hills, against the gentler slopes yellow wheatfields imitate the blue waters of the Dardanelles and the Aegean is showing waves under the impulse of the breeze. Cypresses away and sigh as heretofore, the birds sing and the grasshoppers chirp—all oaks that nature at least is in status quo.

There are many nightingales on the peninsula—when the sun has set they begin their songs generally cut short by a renewal of the fighting. Every night there is fighting with machine guns, rifle, bayonet, knife, and grenade and life destroying chemicals. Now and then somebody springs a mine besides. The noise of this sort of battle is not particularly great even at short distances from the two arenas. If moves over the ancient hills softly—as spasmodically. The tull and equidistant raps of the machine guns are followed by the sharp and regular cracks of the rifles, while exploding hand grenades punctuate as it were, the sentences of the paragraph of history that is being written.

Thus passes the night and at cock crow peace comes and lingers until the sun in the conning tower can read a manual of the fighting angles and degrees for his large calibre.

ANOTHER BATTERY FIELD
ARTILLERY AT DALLAS

Dallas, Texas, Aug. 10.—Plans to organize another battery of field artillery in Dallas to be attached to the Texas National Guard are now under way. Nothing definite has been decided yet, but the matter is being pushed and is backed by Capt.
Fred A. Logan of Battery A. Captain Logan said the plan is to have a battalion, three batteries of field artillery in this State.

In case of mobilization for active service this would be required of Texas, and Captain Logan said that it will be best to organize now and train the men for the service if needed. To facilitate matters the other mobilization of the battalion simple in case of necessity.

Plans for the stables, which will be erected on the battery's site in Oak Cliff to house the horses, which will be furnished by the government are about completed and contract for the buildings will be let next week.
Captain Logan said he hoped to have the horses here by the middle of October.

The horses will be sent here as soon as the inspection of the regular army batteries is completed. They will be sent here and maintained with no expense to the State of Texas.
The National government is furnishing the animals to militia organizations so the national guardmen can receive the best training.

Captain Logan has received a report from the government on the Dallas battery's tour of duty at Fort Sill in July, which he said is most gratifying. He said the report shows the battery to have improved greatly in the last year and shows marked progress over all preceding years.

RAISING MONEY TO REBUILD
DAM AT ARCHER CITY

(Archer City Dispatch)
We were informed this week by Councilman Stanford Wilson and Mayor Singleton that the council had decided to borrow the money and rebuild the city dam where it was washed out by the heavy rains last May. The council realizes, as does our entire citizenship, that to continue longer with our water system in its present condition would be the worst thing the city could do.

Messrs. Wilson and Singleton say that it will take at least $1000 to complete the work and they are having little trouble raising the money.
A petition asking for loans is being circulated and over 3500 has already been subscribed.

The council is very anxious to get the work started and pushed to completion before the fall rains set in,
so it may have ample time to settle and season. It is very gratifying to the Dispatch to see this spirit of enterprise manifested by our people. It is the duty of every good citizen to do what he can when these necessities come up.

When the Deep Snow Came

By Walt Gregg.

DURING the first week in March the grass on Lawrence came green, and one day Johnnie brought in a dandelion that he had found near the fence. The February cold snap had been followed by a mild spell that caused the children much joy, because they could go without their wraps; but older persons shook their heads and said they did not like such unseasonable weather. Farmers spoke of winter wheat that was growing too fast, and peach trees that were too far advanced. Like buds were swelling and occasionally one saw a bird that should have been much further south so early in the year.

At daybreak Monday the clouds hung low and heavy, and a fog had settled down over the city. Toward noon a gust of wind came from the northwest and swept this mist away. Then the temperature commenced to drop and persons going home to luncheon were seen to turn up their coat collars, and the men thrust their hands into their pockets. Other gusts of wind brought dashes of rain. By one o'clock occasional flakes of snow were seen.

Telephone poles soon began to glisten in coats of ice, pavements became slippery and branches were bowed by the weight of sleet. Now and then a flash of light struck through the murky air as a trolley wheel slipped from its bearings. Old-time motorists told their conductors that there was a nasty night ahead, and at the car sheds the foreman gave orders to have the rotary sweepers overhauled.

By two o'clock the rain had changed to snow and the wind furries became more frequent.

"I do hope the children will hurry home," said mother, as she stepped to the library window.

Grandmother joined her there. "You made them take their wraps, didn't you?"

"Yes," said Johnnie. "I believe he would go without his overcoat in zero weather if I should let him. Look how the snow is coming down. I can hardly see the front gate. Aren't those lilac bushes beautiful, draped in white?"

"Yes," said grandmother; "but with this rising wind and the wet snow I'm afraid there will be damage to the fruit, Johnnie."

A deep roar was followed by a rattle of window frames; outside the snow was whirled and piled in drifts.

By three o'clock a half gale was blowing and so thick was the snow in air that a twilight darkness formed. Grandmother put more wood in the old-fashioned fireplace, then joined mother at the window.

This roomy house, built many years before, had been erected without what are known as modern conveniences, and although running water and electric lights had been installed, no attempt had been made to put in a furnace.

"I like to see the blazing logs, and hear the draught roar in a stove," said grandmother.

Situated on a knoll, a mile from a town that was suburban to a large city, with five acres of land for trees, kitchen garden and pasture, the place was an idyl of country life in America.

After twenty minutes the watch kept at the window by these two women of the first and second generation, was rewarded by the sight of two little forms that came slowly along the path from town.

"It is all they can do to make their way," said Johnnie. "See, the wind is so strong they have to turn their backs, and the snow is nearly to their knees." She went to the door, after stopping at a closet for a whisk broom.

Mother stood still while I brush you off," she said when the children came in. "Aren't you nearly frozen?"

"No, indeed; it's lots of fun," said Bess. A snow flake had caught in an eye-lash and others were smushed in her front curls. "It's going to be fine sleighing tomorrow. May we go?"

"We can tell better in the morning, dear. Now run into the library and warm yourselves. Where is Johnnie?"

"We didn't see him anywhere," replied Annette. "I suppose he's out snowballing with the other boys."

"He shouldn't stay out such an afternoon as this. Besides, I have repeatedly told him to come straight home from school."

"The sisters went to their trunk and took out their dolls, then drew their little red chairs close to the roaring fire.

The mantle clock struck four and mother went to the window again. "Just look at the snow now! Why, that cleaner tub near the front walk is nearly covered, and it is coming down faster than ever. I suppose all the trains will be late tonight."

"You should punish that boy for not minding you," said grandmother. "This is no day for him to be out."

Mother made no reply. She remained standing at the window with the curtain drawn back. A quarter of an hour passed, and then they saw her rub the moisture of the pane and bend closer. "There is somebody at the corner, but I can't make out who it is," she said. "Come here children; your eyes are sharper than mine."

Annette and Bess climbed on a chair by their mother's side and peered over her shoulder.

"Why, it's two or three people; and it's children," said Annette. "But I can't make out what they are doing."

"Oh, I know," said Bess. "It's Johnnie's friends, Danny Day and his cousin, Tommy, and their goat. See, the goat is bawling, and Tommy is pulling it by the horns."

"And the goat is hitched to a box-stead," added Annette; "and they are bringing something in the sled; that's what makes the goat act up, for it's hungry."

"I don't believe that Mrs. Day can know they are so far from home," said mother. "I think that I had better call them in to get warm, and she started to raise the window.

"What have they got in the sled?" cried Bess. "Now I see. It's a person. Look at those feet sticking out behind!"

At this moment the goat plunged forward and the group came more plainly into view. Mother gave a cry. "Fleece him!" she exclaimed; and she started for the front door. Bess and Annette followed, but stopped on the threshold, while mother ran bareheaded down the steps.

"What is the matter?" asked grandmother, coming into the hall.

"Something has happened to Johnnie," sobbed Annette; "and they're bringing him home."

Then the elder woman followed her daughter into the storm.

A fierce gust of wind carried a cloud of snow into the hall and the children were covered with the fluffy flakes. But they kept the door open, and in a few minutes mother came staggering up the steps, carrying Johnnie in her arms. Grandmother was helping and behind them came Danny and Tommy. They all went straight into the library and mother placed her boy on the couch. He was groaning and evidently was in great pain.

"What is the matter, Johnnie? Can't you tell mother what has happened to you?"

"His foot's twisted," said Danny. "We found him all doubled up down at the bottom of Allison's hill."

"In the snow!" exclaimed mother. "It's a wonder he isn't frozen," and she felt of his hands.

"No, he isn't frozen anywhere," said Danny. "We found him so quick after it happened and we covered him up. But we were a long time getting here, and that's what made us so late. I never saw such a goat!"

"Ouch! Oh, don't! It hurts!" cried Johnnie and tears started from his eyes.

"I must get your shoe off," said grandmother; "so we can see what the trouble is."

As gently as possible she loosened the last buttons, and having drawn it off she pulled down the stocking.

"That's a sprained ankle," she said. "How did it happen, Johnnie?"

"I was sliding down Allison's hill on my feet," he answered, between groans. "My shoe caught in something and I tumbled over."

"Louise, pour a cup of vinegar in to a pan filled with boiling water, and I'll find some cloths," said grandmother.

Mother, who had been kneeling and held Johnnie's hand, rose and went to the kitchen.

The children crowded near. "Whew! but that's a big bump!" said Danny. The pan was soon placed on the floor near the couch; steam rose from the water, and the odor of vinegar filled the air.

"Not too hot!" said Johnnie.

"As hot as you can stand it," said grandmother. "We must reduce that swelling and ease your pain."

She wrung out one of the cloths and put it on.

"Ouch!" cried Johnnie.

"You can stand it if I can," said grandmother.

For five minutes she changed the cloths every few seconds, then asked mother to bring in more water, and when it had been added, Johnnie was told to sit up and place his foot in the pan; then mother poured water over his leg from the knee down.

Grandmother now turned to Danny Day and his cousin. "You are splendid boys," she said. "Johnnie might not have been found for a long time if it had not been for you, and he might have been frozen. But how do you happen to be without your overcoats on such a day?"

"They are in the sled," said Danny.

Mother turned around. "Why, you dear boys!" she exclaimed. "I believe you wrapped them around Johnnie. I remember how that they dropped off when I lifted him up. Run and bring them in and hang them near the fire."

"It wasn't anything," said Danny. "We kept warm most of the way pushing Buttons up hill. But I guess we'd better be going, or our folks will wonder where we are."

"You must forgive me for not thanking you before," said mother; "but I have been so worried about Johnnie. I will call your mother up and tell her that you are on the way, and I'll also tell her what fine boys you and Tommy have been."

The cousins told Johnnie they hoped he would soon be better and started for the hall with Annette and Bess. Grandmother opened the front door and a great swirl of snow came in. She quickly closed it and bade the children wait there a minute.

"Louise," she said, returning to the library, "we cannot permit these children to go out in this storm. It seems to be growing worse every minute, and besides it is nearly as dark as night. You had better telephone Mrs. Day that they are here and after supper Henry or Dick can drive them home."

"I seem to have lost my wits," said mother. "I should have thought of that before. Where are they now?"

"In the hall, with Annette and Bess."

"I will send them back here, and speak to Mrs. Day at once."

Ten minutes later the cousins were that they were to remain until after supper.

"Your mother said that she felt very proud, Danny. She is going to tell Tommy's mother right off, and she will feel proud also."

"Please, ma'm, may I put Buttons back?" asked Danny.

"That's the goat," explained Annette.

"Gracious!" said mother; "has that poor animal been standing in the snow all this time and after having helped bring Johnnie home. Annette, light a lantern; then you and Bess go on your wraps and show the boys the way to the woodshed. If you will tell me what a goat likes to eat I'll fix something for him. Don't forget to shake the snow off your overcoats and bring them in here to dry."

In a few minutes laughter and shouts came from the rear of the house, then there was the stamping of feet on the back porch, and the children came in.

"Poor Buttons!" said Bess. "He was almost covered with snow. It was up to his back."

"Why, is it as deep as that?" asked mother.

"Yes," said Annette. "It comes to Danny's waist, and in the drifts it is much deeper. And it is blowing ever so much harder."

"I suppose all the trains will be late," said mother. "It's a good thing that Dick has Dolly in town, so he can drive her home."

The father applications had made weather bureau records will show anything to equal it. Dolly was stuck several times and Dick and I had to jump out and help drag the carriage through drifts."

He then told of the experiences on the train coming from the city and of the sights in town, and when he had warmed his hands he went into the library to see Johnnie.

"You are a fortunate boy," he said after he had heard the details of the accident on Allison's hill. Then, turning to Danny and Tommy, he drew them close to him and said to mother:

"Louise, if you had been out in this blizzard as I have been, and had seen the rapidly with which objects are being covered with snow, you would agree with me that we owe these lads more than we can ever repay. I think they saved Johnnie's life. Allison's hill is an out-of-the-way place; on an afternoon like this has been, an hour might pass without any one going that way, and our boy would have been numbed with cold before he could have crawled to the nearest house."

Mother placed her arms around the cousins and drew them towards her. Danny stood still a few seconds, then squirmed away. "We didn't do much," he said. "Buttons did the most."

Bess laughed at this and recalled mother that she hadn't given Buttons the promised feast.

"Immediately after supper I'll give Buttons as he deserves, and a warm place for him to sleep in the father. Come, Dick, help me to carry Johnnie in."

Everybody was so hungry that it was well that father had brought another steak from town.

"It is after 8 o'clock!" exclaimed grandmother when they had finished. "Bedtime!" said mother; "but first you can help father care for the goat."

Buttons was led from the woodshed, through the kitchen to the cellar stairs. He did not seem to fancy the idea of going down the steps, so father and Dick helped him along. A pan heaped with scraps was placed on the floor, a bed of straw was arranged in a corner for him to sleep on, and then the children bade him good night.

Bess was the first to awaken in the morning. "Oh!" she called; "there's nothing but snow everywhere!"

"And it is still falling," said father. "It must be fully four feet deep," he added. "Look, it has covered the fence. It will be impossible to go to town today."

Danny and Tommy were heard shouting with glee in the guest chamber. Dick carried Johnnie to a window, so that he could see out.

While they were at breakfast father took the telephone receiver from the book and waited for central to answer. Then he moved the lever several times. After a few minutes he hung up. "The wires are down," he said. "We are cut off from the rest of the world."

"Goodie!" exclaimed Bess. "We're just like the Swiss Family Robinson."

After breakfast the sisters put on their wraps and went into the woodshed with Danny and Tommy. A wall of snow, higher than their heads, prevented their going further.

"I wish that snow had got stuck somewhere. Tommy and I were going to dig out another room in the 'save house.'"

"Well, you can come tomorrow," answered Bess. "Father says this snow will last all the week."

It was Danny's birthday, and of course his cousin Tommy came over bright and early to see the presents. When the boys had examined a new fishing rod, a pair of roller skates and a catcher's mask, father gave Danny an envelope. The boy opened it and took out a sheet of paper. "Please read what it says," he asked; "it's writing."

Father read very slowly: "This present is for Danny Day and his cousin Tommy, and is from the mother and father of the little boy whom they rescued two weeks ago."

The children looked up in amazement. "But where is the present, father?" asked Danny.

"Open the front door and look out," he replied.

They did so, then stood perfectly still; for once in their lives they were too surprised to even speak.

Tied to the hitching-post stood a Shetland pony; and it was harnessed to a little red cart.

The Girl Who Figured in a Bet and the Outcome of It All.

One Hundred Enclosed

Making Good Before the Footlights Sometimes Spells Matrimony.

By Will Seaton

GRAVES turned to Lee at his side. Graves, being a candidate for his chorus in the musical show, for which Lee had written the music, and so thought he had a right to his opinion.

"Yes, sir; I don't need to hear a girl sing to tell whether or not she will sing, and I don't need any more than a glance to tell whether they can throw their feet a little."

Lee smiled. "Your cockiness always gets my nerve; but take this as it just coming in—what do you say?"

"I asked."

Coming in from the wings, where no anxious candidates were kept in suspense, was a slim girl dressed in brown; her eyes to the two men sitting at the side of the stage seemed abnormally big. She gave her music to the pianist and stood ready to sing.

"She'll never do; her voice will be as thin as a watered beer, and her figure—thinner than that," Graves announced briskly.

Lee leaned back and watched her. In his mind a slow decision formed—if he could only put one over on Graves; the girl looked to him as if she had possibilities.

The girl began to sing; Graves frowned and looked at Lee with a wide grin. Her voice was thin, Lee admitted to himself, but something in it attracted him.

When the song was finished Graves asked her to dance a few steps. She danced a few steps, lithely, gracefully, but Graves frowned again.

While the girl was waiting for their decision Graves leaned over. "My boy, you're a mighty good music blinger, but you can't judge girls!"

He turned to her and waved her away. She seemed to sway and shiver a little, then started for the wings, her face white.

Lee said sharply: "Call her back. Graves, I want to talk with her; and I'll bet you $100 that the next time she comes to you you'll be anxious to take her!"

Graves stared at him. "Son, you're crazy; I could cheat you easy of that hundred—"

"But I know you won't; so how is it?"

Graves face softened. "Bill, it's a go!"

Graves had halted her with a sharp call near the wings, and he now called her back. "Miss Reddon, this is Billy Lee, who wrote the shouting for the show. He wants to talk with you a moment."

She drew her a little aside. "I have a sort of proposition—" He looked in to her face, and what he saw there made him jump—staring, she surely looked—perhaps, if you are willing, we'll go to the restaurant below. We can talk better there, and I'm decidedly hungry."

She did not demur, and soon they were hidden from eyes and out of the reach of tongues in one of the booths.

Lee sent in an order that made the waiter, who knew him, look startled for a moment.

"I'm somewhat of a hearty eater, Miss Reddon," he said, smiling, "and so one is a friend of mine who doesn't keep up with me."

"I think I can," she answered, smiling for the first time.

The smile seemed to go over her thin but girlish face like a ray of sunshine; and a thrill went through Lee, for it showed that there was beauty in the lines of her face.

When the food was spread before them he began to talk and eat, and she followed his example as far as the eating was concerned.

"My proposition is this, Miss Reddon, and I hope, too, you will favor it; I am interested in another musical show in which there is need of a girl like you—somebody with brown hair, brown eyes, and—well, you'll do, and I can give you the position; the wages will be the regular; you'll play once in the evening only. How about it?"

She was listening as if her whole heart and soul were in the words he was saying. "Will I accept it—O—I do—I do—"

She stopped as if seeking to master her feelings. Lee watched the conversation on other things; for he understood. She had been near the borderland, and was struggling to keep respectable, yet starting in the attempt.

So it came about that Billy Lee had a talk with the manager of the show. "I want her to be put on anyway, and I'll pay right on the dot, and Fred, sort of hint to her that she is a little under weight and that she better rest for a week under full pay—I'll pay you; I've got a bet on, and if I win you're in fifty."

A week later a note came to him from Fred. "Come over, presto, change—whoopee!"

He waited for Fred's reasons, and he got them. "There's a whacking big change, Billy—you wouldn't know her—guess she must have been starving. But she's bucked up a little. She went into the skirt chorus all right, but when I wanted her to go into tight—well, not that she's made a hit right off the reel."

"Seeing she seemed to be a favorite of yours, I gave her a little tune and she made good all right. One of those swell college chaps with the big choo! choo! wanted to meet her—nothing out of it. Here she is now—good-bye, those eyes—I'll bet it!"

Lee turned to see a girl in brown coming up to him. His quick eye told him that he had guessed right. Her cheeks still had the girlish oval that belonged there; the lines of her form had curved out—she was not only pretty, but beautiful, and a few weeks more would make her more beautiful.

She told him with shining eyes of her enjoyment of her work, and explained that she had gone into the country for a big rest, and had done nothing but eat and sleep.

Lee watched her that night and he saw that Fred's words were not overdrawn. She danced with the lightness of a nymph; her trim foot and ankle seemed hardly to touch the floor, and her song was startlingly clear and sweet. Lee tried to pat himself.

Then came the Butterfly chorus, and she did not go on. He found her standing a little way in the wings, looking very uncomfortable. "You don't dance this, Miss Reddon?"

The color came slowly into her face. "No—I don't want to wear lights—well, all over; but—if you say so—Latsen said you decided it—I will."

Lee watched the shifting forms of the girls on the stage, and something rose in him that he had never felt before; he looked down into the upturned face of the girl beside him and realized that he did not want her to go. "No, I don't think it necessary," he said quietly.

He saw the great relief on her face. "Now, after the show, will you stop with me in one of my haunts?"

She looked up smilingly. "I have made it a practice to go straight home, but I will—with you." And she was gone.

It was a happy hour they spent together in the secluded corner of the restaurant where Lee made it his custom to linger after the plays. He could hardly believe that the girl whose gentle brown eyes looked so winsomely and frankly into his was the girl he had sided such a short time before.

When they left the restaurant he suggested a cab, and she added, "with a horse, not a motor," and so they were soon rolling away over the smooth pavements.

"Miss Reddon, there has been a wonderful change in you," he said almost before he thought, his mind led by the picture she made in the soft dusk of the cab.

Her voice was tender with something that stirred him.

"Yes, I know, and hoped there would be. When a girl here in this big city that isn't so half bad as some of the girls in the country—there are noble men in it—but when she is lonely for a good friend, hungry—yes, hungry, without a cent, and—and is fighting to save her—her self-respect, and some one comes who asking nothing, gives her opportunity and help—she had reason to change," she said, turning her face to the window.

"So gently, so gravely did she say it, that for the moment Lee wondered if there was a hidden meaning that could answer the question in his heart. For his part, he knew he loved her—for that he had come to know there was no doubt.

"I do not dare to take what you say as mine—"

"But it is—"

she turned sharply. He reached over and put one hand on her slight gloved one. "I have wondered what it was, Dorothy, if he felt her start—that drew me to you that first time; I had faith in you, something in your face, your voice—well, you have made good, and the future is bright before you, if you want to keep on—but I have been dreaming tonight, wondering if you would take another position if I offered it?"

His voice wavered in spite of himself, and he paused, knowing that here she could by silence or word give her decision.

"What?" she asked so softly he could hardly hear.

"I am hungry for a home, and hungry for some one to care for me and for whom I can care—that means love. I can't offer you very much; Latsen says in time you will starve for me, for you to say," he said tensely.

"It is you I want—not money or fame, or anything else; something in the very gentleness of your eyes that day when you saw I was starving—made me love you, and it has been growing since—dear!"

When Lee, sometime later, turned over the mail on his table he found a letter from Graves:

"Dear Billy—I enclose $100. I went over one night to see, and there she was, she was about to sing, and ought to be in our show; bring her over. Lee growled and threw the letter into the basket. Sitting down he wrote an answer:

"Dear Graves—I am returning the check; the bet's off. She'll never star for you; she's going to play with me the greatest play in the world. "The Rhb. returned. Then you come again—regularly, you know, through the front door and all that. I'll fix it up. Good night." He ended abruptly without looking at her.

She stood hesitating, fingering the bills, then she moved toward the door. "Goodby; I—I moved toward the door."

Roger removed the slouch hat and with deft fingers unfastened the stub horn knot, pulling as he did so the mark of the hands that strove to hold it. Then he stood staring at the wealth of towed hair that the hat concealed.

"Now," he said, "tell me why."

"I suppose I might as well tell you," he said, "it's my stories—they won't sell. I used up all my money and didn't know what to do. Then I read about the philanthropic old lady and determined to throw myself on her mercy."

"But," interrupted Roger, "was it necessary to—"

WHEN THE BURGLAR CAME.

ROGER CARTRIGHT, returning from the club at 2:15 a. m., saw a light flash in his aunt's parlor as he went up the drive. He stepped lightly across the grass to a spot opposite the windows and stood watching.

The light flashed again.

"Burglars!" he ejaculated, and sprinted around the corner of the house to the back entrance. Cautiously he made his way through the rooms until he reached the heavy portieres of the drawing room door. The intruder was moving about the room, flashing his light with incautious frequency. One of these flashes revealed the burglar's revolver lying on a side table.

A green hand, thought Roger, "and a mighty curious one, at that!" Making a quick spring he grasped the burglar in his right hand and turned his pocket light full on the intruder.

The burglar whirled about and stood motionless.

"Well, my friend," commenced Roger pleasantly; "I might care to leave your revolver so near the door."

"I must trouble you to walk this way," Roger continued. "The telephone is in the hall and I would not be so rude as to leave you here alone. I say, light the gas first, will you? The matches are on the mantel."

At this threat the burglar tossed his head defiantly, then suddenly sank into a chair and burst into tears. Roger dropped the revolver in a panic and before he realized what he was doing found himself leaning over the chair and patting the weeping figure on the shoulder.

"Oh, come now, I can't stand that," he repeated.

"Have you got a handkerchief?" sobbed the burglar.

"You bet!" Roger cried drawing one from his pocket. "Cheer up! Take off that black thing before it gets your face all stained."

This wily remark caused the burglar to tug hastily at the strings of the mask. "Oh, in a submissive tone; 'his caught in my hair!'"

Roger removed the slouch hat and with deft fingers unfastened the stub horn knot, pulling as he did so the mark of the hands that strove to hold it. Then he stood staring at the wealth of towed hair that the hat concealed.

"Now," he said, "tell me why."

"I suppose I might as well tell you," he said, "it's my stories—they won't sell. I used up all my money and didn't know what to do. Then I read about the philanthropic old lady and determined to throw myself on her mercy."

"But," interrupted Roger, "was it necessary to—"

NORA FINNERTY'S SIN

By GEORGE MUNSON.

(Copyright, 1915, by W. G. Chapman.)

Paddy Sheehan looked at Tim Murphy with withering scorn.

"You want to marry my Kathleen?" roared the ex-elderman. "Who are you? A penniless pup, is it?"

"To quote your own words, Mr. Sheehan, were you not a penniless canine yourself once?" inquired Tim.

"I was, so. And proud of it," answered the old man, relapsing into his native dialect. "And I made a million for myself by honest labor. When you've got started on the same way you can show your face here again—not till then. Will you get out or will I throw you out?"

That terminated the interview. But in justice to Paddy it must be said he secretly admired the young man and did not bear him any malice on account of his lack of means. He knew that Tim had the makings of a successful man, even though he was at present struggling along as a clerk in an insurance office. The fact was, he treasured his only child so much that he could not bear the thought of losing her.

This possibility so preyed upon his mind that he resolved to put into execution a plan he had long projected.

"Kathleen, girl," he said to his daughter, "you may as well put the idea of that young pup out of your head. We're going to Ireland, which I haven't seen since I was a boy. We'll see the old home, and—and Nora Finnerty. Maybe she's married now, and maybe she ain't."

Kathleen knew all about her father's boyish sweetheart, whom he had promised to marry when he sailed for America, years before. He had married another woman, but the memory of his first love had always been green with him.

It is probable that, in spite of her father's injunctions, Kathleen did contrive to see Tim before sailing. Anyway, hardly had the ship passed Sandy Hook than Mr. Sheehan, strolling upon the deck, came face to face with the young man.

"What are you doing here, you scoundrel?" he shouted.

"Pardon me, Mr. Sheehan," replied the young fellow blandly, "but I think I am entitled to take passage aboard this ship."

"You're following me and Kathleen," roared the exasperated father.

"No, sir. I am on my way home to Ireland to visit my mother."

"If I see you speaking to Kathleen I'll throw you into the engine room," warned Paddy, shaking his fist. Despite the most careful observation on his part, it was clear that the would-be son-in-law did not attempt to speak to Kathleen during the voyage.

He lost sight of him at Queenstown, but when he came upon him at Kerry, standing, spike and span, with a shamrock in his buttonhole, at the railroad station, his anger burst out against him.

"You're following me," he shouted, shaking his fist under the young man's nose.

"Mr. Sheehan, I'll have you know once for all that I have no intention of following you," responded Tim. "I have come to Kerry to visit my old mother."

"If you cross my path again I'll eat you!" shouted the ex-elderman.

All the way to Nora Finnerty's cottage he pointed out the old landmarks. By the time the little thatched building arrived in sight he was as enthusiastic as a boy. He drew up the car, leaped down and stared into the wrinkled face of the old woman knitting at the door. Then he flung his arms about her.

"Paddy! Paddy! by all that's sacred!" he shouted. "Don't you know me, Nora? I'm Paddy Sheehan—Paddy that used to be your sweetheart in the long ago!"

The old woman arose, beaming.

"Paddy!" she cried. "Back from Chicago, where it's the great things I'm hearing of you all these years. But you must come in and have a bite. Only you mustn't kiss me, Paddy, because my husband's away and he wouldn't like it."

"Your husband?" echoed Paddy.

"Michael O'Rourke, who's at the fair today leaving me the sweetest boy—but come in—here's my son Tim, Mr. Sheehan."

The ex-elderman looked speechlessly at Tim Murphy. Then, whether or not the occasion overcame him, he grasped him by the hand and instantly his daughter's arms were round his neck.

"Father, we love each other," she pleaded. "Father, you won't keep us apart!"

"If I'd have known—" began Sheehan, growling, and then he elapped the young fellow upon the back.

"Take her, Tim O'Rourke," he said. "I give up. You've won her. I didn't dream you were the son of—oh!—oh! it is O'Rourke or is it Murphy they're after calling you?"

"Sure, he's my stepson," exclaimed the old lady. "He was my first husband's son."

"You've been married twice, then?" inquired Paddy.

"Three times," said the old lady.

"And," she added wistfully, as the car drove off, half an hour later, with a happy couple upon one seat and a joyous old man on the other, "I think I'll be off to Father Flynn and ask him if it's a mortal sin to have taken three husbands when I never had one, and a fine young man like that—me that never bore any children."

A marriage license was issued today to J. D. Moore and Mrs. Ella Moore.

SKULL FOUND IN AUSTRALIA BELIEVED 25,000 YEARS OLD

Sydney, Australia.—The first truly fossil skull discovered in Australia was recently handed over as a gift to the University of Sydney by Joynton Smith of the state legislative council. This is the skull which caused such a sensation at the congress of the British association of science last September. It is believed to be 25,000 years old. Since the British association's convention the petrified cranium inside and outside the skull has been removed by Professors David and Smith of the University.

At the formalities attending the receipt of the skull from the donor, Prof. David explained that it belonged to the Pleistocene period and was found after a flood 21 years ago in the bed of a creek near Taigal ranch on the Darling Downs in the state of Queensland by a stockman.

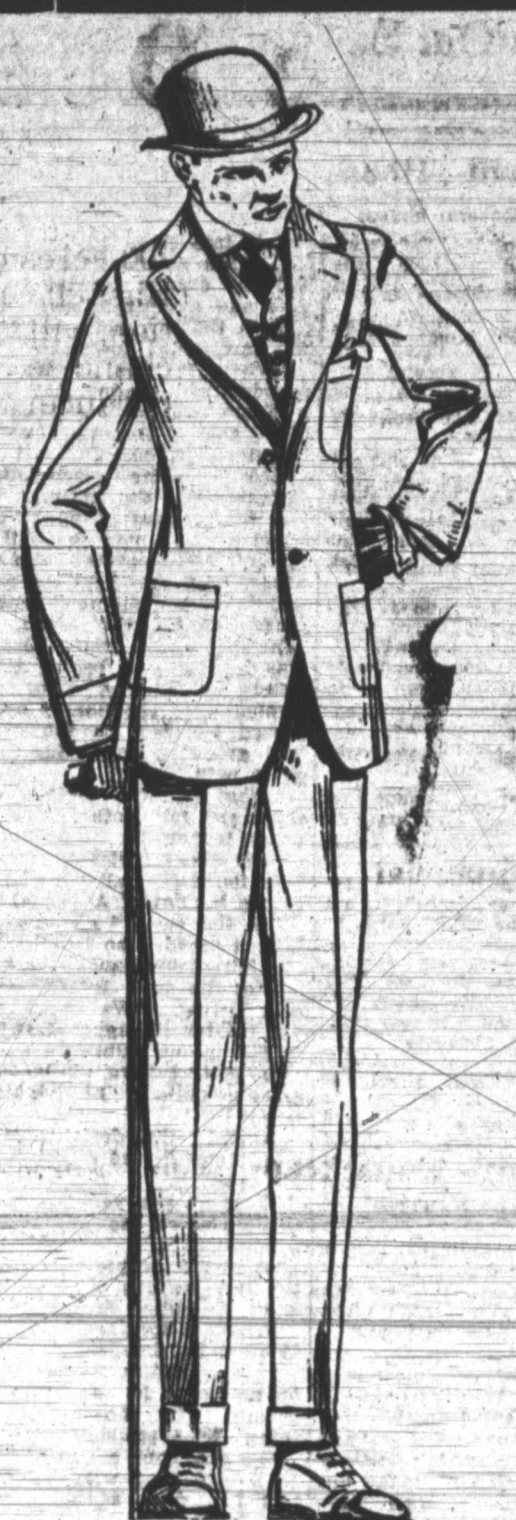

Prof. Smith said that the sequence of teeth in the skull was such as to show that it was that of a youth about 15, yet one of the teeth was the largest human tooth yet discovered.

POSTMASTER BACON HAS BEEN HERE 32 YEARS TODAY

Today marks the 32nd anniversary of the arrival in Wichita Falls of Otis T. Bacon, postmaster, he coming to this city in 1883. Not many of those who were here then are still on the scene of action, he says, but he is not by any means the holder of the record. J. A. Kemp, R. E. Huff, J. H. Barwise, J. G. Hardin, T. W. Roberts and several others who are still very much alive preceded him in this section, but he feels that he is safely out of the new comer class.

Dr. J. W. DuVal of this city received the appointment of deputy Grand Chancellor of Knights of Pythias for the fifth Pythian district which includes the counties of Wichita, Clay, B. Throckmorton, Young and Mont. This is quite an honor and the lodge should be proud to know one of its members stands so before the grand lodge of Texas. Duties are to officially visit lodge in his district at least during his term, for the purpose inspecting its books, instructing examining members in the work, usages and laws of the and to inquire generally into the condition of the lodge.

At The Theaters

The Lamar Airdome. The violinist Banconi appearing last night at the Lamar Airdome for the first time scored a remarkable hit with the audience. The entire vaudeville bill is a good one. Dero and Dayton having a clever singing and talking novelty. Today's picture bill is composed of a three part feature, "The Great Cheval Mystery."

The Majestic. "St. Elmo" a dramatization for the film of Augusta Evans famous novel is today's program.

The Empress. Charles Chaplin in "Film Johnnie" a Keystone comedy, said to be one of his best is showing today. A two part Kay Bee, "The Secret of the Lost Rings" and a two part Thanhouser, "Which Shall It Be" complete the program. All of the Thanhouser children are included in the cast of the latter named picture, an appealing story of parent devotion.

A wealthy, childless old couple, living on a fine country estate, envy Farmer Selden, their neighbor, his big family. As the farmer is poor, they do not doubt but that they can induce him to let them have one of the children in return for money and land. "It isn't as though we were asking the Seldens to give up their favorite child," said Mrs. Kenniston, "any one of the seven will do." So Mr. Kenniston writes to his neighbor stating the case and making him a handsome offer. Poverty is pressing hard upon the farmer and his family. He and his wife sadly agree, that perhaps the best thing they can do is to let the rich Kennistons take one of the children. That night they tip toe upstairs to the children's bedrooms, to decide which one of the seven they will let go. Of course they cannot give up Baby Lillian, and to separate their twin girls is out of the question. Jamie, next to Lillian in age, is still too young to be sent to strangers. Donald, crippled since babyhood, they cannot think of sparing. Strangers could never understand how uncomplainingly he bore pain. Dick is a little terror, always in hot water. "Only a mother's heart could be patient enough for such a she," whispers Martha Selden and they move on to the side of the eldest son. But John least of all can they do without. "He is so like his father," weeps his mother. The rich old couple are very much surprised when they receive the farmer's courteous answer to the farmer's courtship. Selden tells them that he cannot give away even one child. What queer ideas poor people have to be sure.

The Gem.

Gladys Huette and Edward Barry are featured in a three part Edison, "The Working of a Miracle." A synopsis is given. Roy Conover has just returned to his village home from college. At church the villagers wonder why Roy does not accompany his mother into the edifice. He smilingly declines to enter, and as he walks off, meets Mary Turner, a school teacher, and ward of Jason Kent, a religious fanatic. Roy is subsequently introduced to her and they soon become friends. Kent is very jealous and reproaches Mary for keeping company with an infidel. He spends most of his time reading religious books and pamphlets.

"WHITE SLAVE" TRAFFIC IN CENTRAL AMERICA

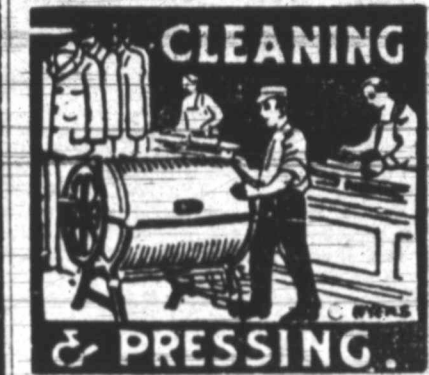

Panama, Aug. 10.—Extraordinary efforts are being made by the American authorities on the isthmus to break up the increasing "white-slave" trade in Central America.

The traffic has increased because of the war in Europe and the fact that a large number of American soldiers are being stationed on the Canal Zone within a short distance from each of the two Panaman towns of Colon and Panama. Both of the night life districts in these cities have been greatly extended until now they cover very large restricted areas.

It is difficult for the traffickers to bring girls into the Canal Zone because of the strict laws and the vigilance of the Canal Zone police. This, however, is not the case in the republic.

It has been learned that a central agency has been established in San Jose, Costa Rica. The girls come into Panama by way of the Island city of David in the province of Chiriqui which borders on Costa Rica.
