GOVERNMENT WILL ACT IN COTTON SITUATION

President Assures Congressman Levy That Definite Steps Will Soon Be Taken by Government.

Washington, Aug. 18.—President Wilson Tuesday assured Chairman Levy of the house agricultural committee that definite steps soon would be taken to better the cotton situation in the south. The first step will be forthcoming, note to Great Britain protesting against interference with neutral commerce. The president also is considering whether to support the movement to send an unofficial committee of cotton growers to England to discuss the situation with the British government and with the cotton spinners. Mr. Levy favored that step in his talk with the president. An arrangement had been made to have President Wilson meet a committee of cotton growers Monday, but after his visit to the White House Mr. Levy said he was so well satisfied with the president's plan that he would recommend that the engagement be canceled.

Contraband Notice Expected any Time. Washington, Aug. 18.—Official announcement of the decision of the allies to put cotton on the contraband list is expected here at any time. The state department has been advised officially but authoritatively of the coming action, and such information as officials have received, coupled with the latest advice from London, indicates that development of a plan for uniform treatment of the subject by all the belligerent powers is all that is delaying a formal announcement.

American officials have been assured that Great Britain and her allies will take every action to minimize the embarrassment to the American market. The allies claim American precedent in the civil war for their action and contend it will substantially make effective the order in council and accomplish by strictly legal means what has been attempted under the orders.

It is generally understood that the move will be protested by the United States government.

FORD REFUND HERE IS MORE THAN $17,000

Total of 350 Cars Sold Here on Which Fifty Dollar Rebate Will Apply

More than seventeen thousand dollars is being refunded to the purchasers of Ford cars in Wichita county in accordance with the profit-sharing plan inaugurated by the Ford Motor Co., about a year ago which was effective on cars sold before August 1 of this year. There are 350 cars here to which this refund applies making a total of $17,500 that will be refunded. Some have already received their refund checks. An announcement elsewhere in today's paper asks all who have not done so to send in their coupons to the Ford Motor Co., at Detroit, Mich.

During the year ending July 31, 1915, 208,215 Ford cars were made and sold. The total amount to be refunded is more than $15,000,000. It is estimated that there are now more than 900,000 Ford cars in daily use in the United States.

Mrs. R. W. Riddle returned this afternoon to her home in Electra after a visit to Mrs. George Thornburn.

IT'S NIX ON THE SLANG STUFF FOR GEORGE ADE

Main Piazaz of Quick and Ready Chatter Holds up Wind and Warbles Never Again.

(From San Francisco Bulletin) "How do you do, Mr. Ade. How are all the Little Fables in Slang?" George Ade regarded his questioner gravely, almost severely. Something very like a shudder passed over his classic Indian features and up to the roots of his iron gray hair. He moaned rather sternly toward a chair. "You are having beautiful weather out here," he observed in pure Shakespearean English. Rebuffed, but not squeaked, the interviewer began to rack his brains for quotations from Ade's masterpieces in the vernacular.

Interviewer Boldly Plunges. "Could you Spiel me a few Stanzas about our Little Side Show out where the Bronze Plaques and the Silk Hats flourish?" was the next courageous query.

Again that expression of suppressed anguish, and once more the Elizabethan diction. "I have only had a glimpse of the Exposition, but it is very wonderful," he said.

Still the questioner was not to be discouraged. "Tear of a Yard or so of your Old-time Stuff about the Expo, you know. Something with a Dash of the Old Jazz in it to catch the Wise Guys."

This time Ade merely looked pityingly and said nothing.

Quite Seating Around Bush. It was time to get down to cases. "The Bulletin would like to get an interview in slang about the Exposition?"

There was more of sorrow than of anger in the tone of his weary reply. "I want to get away from the slang," he said.

At last the interviewer was "wiced up." George Ade had reformed. He refused to talk except according to Webster. The realization was stunning.

"But you still write it, don't you?"

It was thought for a time that Johnson would recover, as his condition showed considerable improvement Tuesday, but he took a turn for the worse yesterday and infection set in. ### PLACES GALVESTON DAMAGE AT $3,000,000

Captain of Tug Gertrude Made Way Up Channel to Houston Yesterday

Houston, Tex., Aug. 19.—Three million dollars is the storm's toll in loss of property at Galveston, according to Captain D. E. Dujay of the tug Gertrude, under government charter, which arrived here late today direct from Galveston. The death list he placed at fourteen. On board the tug were Captain F. N. Nelson of the United States engineering service and several other persons. They left Galveston at 8 o'clock this morning. According to Captain Dujay and Captain Nelson, many of the smaller houses in the East and West End of Galveston were demolished, many buildings damaged and almost all the windows in business houses broken. About 300 large and small craft of all descriptions including big steamers, schooners, dredges, barges and launches were in the harbor when the storm struck Galveston Monday. Practically all the smaller vessels were wrecked, beached or damaged and many of the larger craft beached and damaged.

Captain Dujay said the death list might be increased by the drowning of crews of some of these ships. Mayor Louis Fischer proclaimed martial law at 9 o'clock Monday night because looting had started, mostly by negroes. Four regiments of the United States Army, the Fourth, Seventh, Nineteenth and Twenty-Eighth, are patrolling the city, which has been divided into four districts.

Passengers on the Gertrude said it was reported that twenty negroes were caught while looting stores, were shot and killed by soldiers Monday night, but this could not be confirmed.

Fire broke out in the Armour packing plant Tuesday and the establishment was destroyed. Fire also destroyed Pier 21, a large cotton warehouse, and when the Gertrude left another fire was raging in a printing house at Mechanic and Twenty-Fourth streets.

City water, gas and electric power plants were all shut off while repairs were being made in damaged buildings and stores. The United States transport McClelland was aground on the "dike." Two barges had been blown into Galveston causeway. Wreckage of all

Hotel Galvez Band Played On While Storm At Height

Houston, Tex., Aug. 19.—The orchestra in the Hotel Galvez played during the height of the storm to keep up the spirits of the people marooned there," said John Green, U. S. district attorney, who was marooned in the hotel during the entire storm. "We reached the hotel Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock," he continued. "at 5 o'clock the water commenced spraying over the seawall. The work of bringing women and children to places of safety was then undertaken hotel and we all passed through the kitchen for tree bread and coffee. As the water was scarce and had to be economized we all washed in the rain-water. The water soon began to recede and is now all out of the city."

Bryan No Longer An Idol "Peerless" Fails To Thrill

(Kansas City Star)
It was an old Bryan, and a very, very tired Bryan, that spoke last night in the chautauqua tent in Independence. The work he is doing would wear down any man. He is making a flying trip around the chautauqua circuit, speaking at one place in the afternoon, catching a train and making a jump of a hundred miles or so to get to another town and another chautauqua at night. Thus, he spoke yesterday afternoon in Osawatomie, Kan., arrived in Kansas City at 7:30 and reached the tent in Independence at 8:45 o'clock, spoke for an hour and a half in a hot tent, returned to Kansas City and was off again this morning to Princeton, Mo. So he keeps going and he shows the strain, plainly.

The manager of the chautauqua said there were twelve hundred persons in the tent last night. The last time Bryan spoke in Independence a much greater crowd gathered to hear him, committees were there to greet him, all the leading Democratic politicians were out to shake hands. He was flattered.

There was none of that last night. Bryan came into the dressing tent behind stage while the Klucies' band was playing a piece. There were only two persons there waiting for him. One was a newspaper reporter. The other was the daughter of a Nebraska congressman, who is in a hospital here.

Only those two. Not one politician, there to meet him. Not a city nor a county official, nor a state nor government official, nor a candidate for office. No one to welcome him.

There was something pathetic in the sight of William Jennings Bryan standing there alone in the semi-darkness of the dressing tent, the hot air heavy with the scent of tramped dog fennel, on one side a bandman in his underclothing changing from his kilties. Bryan waited there for his cue to go on.

A Christian Gentleman. The audience had listened for an hour to indifferent music by a band that played last winter in a restaurant in this city. There was a short intermission and Bryan was introduced by the Rev. A. G. Pearson, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Independence, who spoke highly of Mr. Bryan as a Christian gentleman.

That pleased Bryan. His face glowed with pleasure as he shook Mr. Pearson's hand and thanked him and then he began his speech.

He wore the same sort of a wrinkled, black alpaca coat that he has worn on all his speaking tours since he began in 1896 as the free silver candidate for the presidency. But the long, black, wavy hair that covered his head in abundance, there is almost gone—just a fringe of it behind his ears—the whole dome of his head bald. The ever present smile, the sunny eyes, were gone, too. He was no longer as corpulent as he used to be. There was the beginning of a hump appearing between his shoulders. Bryan is showing his age.

His voice was hoarse and he saved it all he could. He gave one the impression of an exceedingly tired man who was working when he ought to have been asleep and resting; but who was bound to go through with it. He held a palm leaf fan and occasionally he waved it in front of his face with one quick gesture. As he spoke under a row of hot electric bulbs perspiration gathered in beads on his bald head, face and neck and trickled down in tiny streams that glistened in the electric light. In the middle of his lecture he stopped, leaned over and spoke in an undertone to a man on the front seat. The man went out and returned with a bowl of cracked ice, which he placed on the stand.

Bryan thrust his right hand eagerly into it, as an overheated horse plunges its nostrils beneath the cooling water in a tank. He clasped a chunk of the ice and held it until his hand was cold; then he put the chilled palm of his hand to his forehead and slid it up and back over the bald place. This he did over and over again throughout the balance of the speech. If he took his hand from the cracked ice to make a gesture with it, he quickly returned it again to the bowl. Then he kept on rubbing and rubbing his head with his cold palm.

Without out was decidedly cool. The majority there were holders of season tickets in the chautauqua and there were more women than men in the audience. It might have been that Bryan was no more to them than any other attraction of the week. At any rate he did not get as much applause as was given the band that preceded him, and not nearly so much as was given a member of the band who gave imitations of Harry Lauder and sang "Tipperary."

There was scarcely a ripple of applause until Bryan was almost half through his speech. Then he mentioned the name of President Wilson and the audience broke loose and showed Mr. Bryan, in most emphatic manner what its opinion was of the president. After that it sort of warmed up to Bryan, probably on account of his approval of the president and his work.

Preparedness for war was a provocation to war, he said, and as no nation was seeking war with us there was no need of preparing for war. If some nation should challenge us to war we would answer, no, that we had the welfare of 100 million people to look after and the high ideals of this nation to live up to, and that we would not get down and wallow in the bloody mire.

The jingoes wanted 450 million dollars a year with which to prepare for war, he said, but that sum in eleven years would build one hundred rock roads across the country one way and one hundred the other way so, that the whole country would be bridged with roads twelve miles apart and every man in this country would live within six miles of a rock road.

"If we want to prepare for war, let's build those roads and then the farmers can take the jingoes in their Ford cars to the scene of war quickly," he said.

People Should Vote on War. He said he believed in letting the people vote on whether they wanted war or not and those who voted for it ought to go first with all the jingo editors on the firing line.

Speaking of the sinking of the Lusitania he said the Americans who were sunk with that ship never should have gone aboard. Those citizens who sailed on her were doing what they had a right to do under international law, but they were not doing their duty as citizens of this country when they sailed on her and thus dragged this country into a controversy with one of the belligerents.

He closed by describing that the treaties he and President Wilson had negotiated would make permanent peace for this country when all of them had been signed up.

A Cool Reception. At first Bryan had little applause. The first greeting of the audience as

New York Harbor Has Real Police Navy Equipped With Up To Date Machine Guns

NEW YORK POLICE BOAT WITH RAPID FIRING GUN
New York harbor is going to be protected in the future by city police men, who will go zigzagging all over the surrounding waters in patrol boats that will carry rapid fire machine guns, by golly! If you don't believe, look at the picture; that's one of those nice new guns mounted on the pilot house of harbor police boat V. D. 8. Let foreign invasion come. When Police Commissioner Woods gets all his boats fitted with machine guns New York will be protected by a fleet of ten "battle cruisers." True of course, these are not 42 centimeter guns, and they won't shoot twenty miles, but they'll fire 400 shots a minute and can become extremely annoying pests. However, the police commissioner is not worrying about foreign invasion; he wants this little navy in order to make a

The Three Blind Men and the Elephant

They were taken to "see" the elephant. The first one touched the trunk and said that the elephant was like a snake. The second one grasped a leg and said, "How like a tree!" The third passed his hand along the side of the huge beast and said, "Just like a wall." As is frequently the case, they didn't combine their knowledge.

Take three engineers and their lubricating problems. One has achieved perfect valve lubrication. Another has reduced wear and trouble on his guides. The third knows how to make gears last longer.

The combined knowledge of the three would increase the value of each one to himself, and to his employer. How can they exchange experiences?

By getting in touch with an organization which has worked out thousands of these lubricating problems. Such an organization is back of Texaco Lubricants. On this basis we have built up an extensive, growing business in all classes of lubricants.
