Raising Death Trap Eastland; May Again Be Put In Active Service

RAISING THE EASTLAND PHOTO © 1915 BY AMERICAN PRESSES ASSOCIATION

Plans for an impartial inquiry into the administration of the steamboat inspection service by representatives of the navy department and the public are announced by Sec. William C. Redfield of the department of commerce in a report to President Wilson on the Eastland steamship disaster, made public here. In his letter Redfield reviews the investigation made under his personal direction at Chicago immediately after the disaster and transmits the recommendations made by the board of inquiry which he organized. Raising the Eastland has been completed. Several engineers selected by federal authorities are ready to go aboard the ship to begin a thorough examination of the interior. They will especially examine the water ballast system. The Eastland has been formally released from the custody of the United States government and turned over to its owners. What disposition they will make of the "death ship" further than to remove it from the Chicago river to South Chicago has not been determined. W. C. Steele, a large stockholder in the company owning the Eastland, intimated that an inspection would be made of the boat to ascertain whether it can be overhauled and made safe. If the inspection shows that the boat can be fitted up to carry passengers safely it is probable it will be taken to some other port and used in the excursion business.

CAPTAIN GRANT FIRST U. S. SUBMARINE ADMIRAL

Leaves Quarter Deck of Super Dreadnaught to Take Command of Undersea Craft

(From New York Evening Post.) The feeling among naval officers must now have a tremendously increased share in the ranks of the United States Navy, in the readiness of Captain Albert Weston Grant to step from the quarter deck of the super-dreadnaught Texas, one of the finest above water war vessels in the world, to the conning tower of a submarine. Of course, Captain Grant did more than that, because he is in supreme command of the submarine flotilla of the navy; but when it is recalled that up to a year ago naval officers generally vied with each other in seeking command of the imposing dreadnaughts, the fact remains that men of the service must foresee the vast possibilities of the submarine. If one of Captain Grant's character will leave the Texas for the undersea flotilla. Secretary Daniels set about to find a man qualified to bring the United States submarine to the highest standard of construction and efficiency and to do it quickest. The combination was found in Captain Grant, who has a peculiar genius for mechanics in general, electrical mechanics in particular, and torpedo work, and is now known throughout the navy as the "greatest horse for work in it."

one of Grant's endurance," said an officer, "I recall an incident in Rome. Grant was chief of staff to Admiral Sperry on the trip of the fleet around the world and whenever we reached an important port his duties were many and various. On this occasion he had worked virtually all day and all night, and on the second day in Rome he had stood for an hour and a half in full dress uniform before the King of Italy, along with the rest of us, with perspiration rolling off his face in streams, for it was extremely warm. This reception was followed by a dinner and other festivities, which tired us all out. As soon as we could, the bulk of us prepared to return to the ship, but Grant calmly announced that he had been too busy up to that time to go sightseeing, and intended to have a look at the town before retiring." Captain Grant is a native of Norfolk, Va. Across the river from his home town lies the Portsmouth, Virginia yard and a few miles up the James river is the shipbuilding plant, which turns out battle ships of all descriptions, as well as merchantmen. From early boyhood he had a liking for water and for the navy. He grew up to be a muscular giant, which probably accounts for his extraordinary ability to work. At the naval academy he was captain of the crew, and has never relinquished his love for the air, despite his long association with mechanical propulsion. His enthusiasm for outdoor sports is said by his colleagues to be equaled only by his enthusiasm for the serious work he has performed in the navy. Expert on Electricity. In the navy Captain Grant has done well every job assigned to him. He made a specialty of electricity, with especial reference to its various applications aboard modern battle ships. He became an expert on dynamos, and then turned his attention to all kinds of mechanical appliances, and finally he became as well posted as any of his colleagues on torpedoes. In placing him at the head of the submarine branch of the navy, Secretary Daniels has given Captain Grant an opportunity to develop to the highest possible state of efficiency his many valuable qualifications for the post. In addition to these qualifications, Captain Grant has a fondness for detail and for organization, more than ordinary executive ability, and is known as a model disciplinarian. While his record in the latter particular shows him to be a man of firmness in his decisions, he knows how to temper justice with mercy, "has a heart as big as a barrel," as one of his colleagues put it, is considerate of his subordinates, but expects them to do their work. Training Men for Undersea Service. At the present time Captain Grant is maintaining his headquarters aboard the old cruiser Columbia, which is now the "mother ship" of the submarines at the Philadelphia navy yard. His principal job there consists in training new men for the submarine service, in order that the boats may be placed in commission as rapidly as they are turned out by the shipbuilders. A number of vessels of this type are completed each year and Captain Grant is determined to see to it that none of them shall be tied up to a dock for lack of an efficient crew. At the same time he is directing the submarine work on the Pacific Coast and as soon as possible will make a personal inspection of the progress there. FARMERS BUILDING SILOS IN BURKBURNETT COUNTY (Burkburnett Star) During the past weeks a number of farmers in this vicinity who have silos have been filling them with such feed crops as maize, sorghum and kafir corn. A new silo has lately been erected on the Maxey farm northwest of town. A number of other farmers had already invested in these big feed barrels among them being S. L. Fowler, W. H. Kline and Ed Foster, the latter having two silos on his farm near Clara. The silo is no experiment in the older sections of the county. They have been successfully used in Illinois, Iowa, Kansas and many other States for many years, and they will eventually be used very extensively in this county. Many West Texas counties have many more silos than Wichita county has at this time. During years when great feed crops are raised as there has been this year and last year, there does not seem so great need for saving all the feed that is raised, consequently not many silos are erected, but during dry years it has become necessary to save all feed possible, and farmers are naturally more inclined to build silos. Those who have been using silos in this county are well pleased with them so far as we have been informed. Washington Bartlett pears usually sell for $3.50 per box. We have a car load of them and our price is $2.50. Trevathan's, 514 E. 11th.

ALLEGED THAT GERMANS ARE INCITING STRIKES

Wealthy New York Germans Are Said to Be Backing the Plot to Tie Up Munitions.

New York, August 17.—Positive proof of German efforts to promote strikes in industries involved in the shipment of war munitions from the American ports is in possession of the United States secret service. A high member of the service, the International News Service, was informed tonight, attended a conference of labor leaders with the representative of the German interest at which the entire scheme was outlined. This conference occurred two months ago. "The plan was," said the International News Service informant, "to start strikes among longshoremen in all the ports along the Atlantic coast from which war munitions were being shipped. The 'fixer' for the Germans arranged a meeting with several leaders of the labor union. Fortunately these leaders were loyal. They informed the United States Government officials of pending conference and when it was held a representative of the secret service was present. After the preliminaries had been disposed of these concrete propositions were laid down: "Each longshoreman going on a strike was to be assured a weekly allowance of $10 for so long as he remained on strike. "As a guarantee of good faith, the 'fixer' agreed that a fund of $1,300,000 should be deposited by the persons who he represented, from which the weekly allowances were to be drawn. "The labor leaders promised to take the matter under consideration. From the conference the 'fixer' was trailed by the secret service representative to the office of George Sylvester Viereck, editor of the Fatherland Magazine, and from that point he was further traced to a group of wealthy German citizens of New York, who out of their own private fortunes are financing to a considerable extent the pro-German propaganda in New York. According to this informant, a special squad of secret service men picked for the duty, has been at work on the alleged violation of the United States neutrality laws for the past four months. William J. Flynn, chief of the secret service, is personally directing the efforts of this squad. A great mass of information as to the movements of prominent Germans, in both private and official capacities, has been collected and it was declared tonight that while no actual violation of law have been found, there is ample evidence on which to base diplomatic action, if President Wilson desires to act. "The trouble is," said the informant, "our neutrality laws are insufficient."

HOLLANDERS CAN FLOOD TRENCHES TAKEN BY ENEMY

The Hague, July 19.—The war department of the Netherlands has developed a new sort of trench for use in the low and marshy parts of the country where, in case of an invasion the chief battles might be expected. Fighting along the Yser has taught the strength of a water defense abhor all others. For this purpose, as is well known, the so-called "waterline" has been brought into readiness. But a great deal of fighting might take place upon the endless tracts of meadows which lie all around the capital of the kingdom. The trenches, which will here be constructed will be arranged in such a way that at a moment's notice they can be turned into flooded ditches. In the warfare in France and Russia a conquered trench means an added strength for the enemies, who immediately turn the trench into a fortress of their own. The Dutch trenches, when it is necessary to abandon them, will almost automatically become a deep flooded ditch which will be no use to any one and will merely form another obstacle on the way forward.

CONFISCATION OF BEER POSSIBLE IN GERMANY

Semi-Official Announcement Declares Beer Indispensable to the Soldiers. Berlin, Aug. 19.—Confiscation of a part of the German beer production is a possible though not probable step to be expected because of the abnormal state of affairs existing in Germany today. Confiscation will be resorted to by the government only in case the breweries fail to set aside a certain percentage of their normal production—20 per cent—for the use of the army. Even the contemplation of such a step indicates the importance which beer has in Germany and puts it into exactly the same category with bread and meat. In the semi-official announcement denying that any confiscation is contemplated immediately, it is definitely stated that this step will become necessary only if the breweries, contrary to expectation, fail to supply voluntarily that amount of the brew which is regarded as "indispensable." "With the strongly patriotic feelings that inspire all branches of our people," continues the announcement, "it is assumed without question that the breweries will bear present conditions in mind and will be willing to do their share toward the well-being of our troops." The report adds that the soldiers have to buy the "beer which is indispensable to their strengthening and well-being," out of their own pockets, a circumstance which of necessity dictates to the army authorities of their establishment of prices paid or to be paid.

SARAH BERNHARDT WALKS WITHOUT CRUTCH OR CANE. Paris, Aug. 19.—Sarah Bernhardt made on Sunday her first public appearance since her right leg was amputated, and the audience, which greeted her in the open air theater at Andernos, near Bordeaux, where she has her residence, went little short of mad in the ovation they tendered the great actress. She appeared at a charitable matinee, the proceeds of which went for the benefit of wounded French soldiers. The perfect introduced Mme. Bernhardt and other dignitaries of the department of Gironde escorted her. When she was seen walking across the stage without crutch or cane or giving any evidence of fault in her gait because of her artificial leg, men, women and children mounted the chairs in the open air auditorium and cheered. Mme. Bernhardt seated herself in a big chair in the center of the stage and recited patriotic poems, arousing enthusiasm with every phrase. But the great moment came when she recited the final poem entitled "A Prayer for Our Enemies." Then she stood up. She walked down to the very front of the stage and stood as well as aroused the audience to the highest pitch by her great dramatic fervor of her reading of the lines. MOLLIE BAILEY'S SHOW NOW RUN BY HER SONS

Strenuous Life on Road Now Too Much For Aunt Mollie, Who Remains at Home.

Mollie Bailey's show is here today, en route to Burkburnett, but Mollie herself is not with it. The strain of the continuous life on the road became too much for one of Mrs. Bailey's years, so she is staying in Houston while her four sons keep the show going.

The Mollie Bailey show is one of the oldest circus organizations in the country and has a unique history. It was started in 1848 by James A. Bailey of Tennessee, and his son J. A. Bailey Jr. succeeded to the proprietorship of it.

There is probably not a town of less than 5,000 population in Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana or New Mexico that has not been visited by the Mollie Bailey show.

That the show has been a profitable one is indicated by Mrs. Bailey's wealthy retirement in very comfortable circumstances.

3 MORE DAMAGE SUITS RESULT FROM OVERFLOW

Plaintiffs are Joe Kalineck, V. M. Clopton and the Farmers Supply Company.

Three more damage suits against the Fort Worth and Denver as results of the overflow of last June, have been filed. The plaintiffs allege that their property was damaged by the overflow and that the overflow was due to the manner of construction of the Denver's bridge across Holliday creek.

Another suit resulting from the flood is that of J. E. Frazier who asks $1,500 damages for the alleged failure of the Denver to transport him to Fort Worth during the flood period, after he had purchased a ticket.

The tax payers in precincts 1 and 3 had opportunity to vote a similar tax but they voted it down, and the town of Henrietta helped to defeat it.
