Capture Summit Which in Hands of Austrians Was Menace to Italian Positions on Mount Salibo—Rome Balkan Reports Favorable to Allies.

By Associated Press. London, Aug. 31.—The Russian armies along the line of the upper Bug and Zlota-Lipa are being withdrawn rapidly and apparently without great loss as neither the Vienna nor the Berlin officials claim any extensive capture of prisoners or booty in this region.

On the western front the usual hand grenade and artillery warfare is in progress. According to French reports this has resulted in destruction of several German trenches.

Constantinople again reports heavy fighting at the Dardanelles but the entente powers in the diplomatic situation in the near east. It is said Serbia's position is satisfactory as far as the Balkan political circles express confidence that the Turco-Bulgarian agreement does not affect Bulgaria's neutrality.

THE GERMAN PLAN.

Both Berlin and Vienna lay emphasis on the statement that Field Marshal Von Hindenburg's forces along the Divna River in Courland have renewed their activities, which were brought to a sudden halt recently with the success of the Russians in holding Riga as a menace to Von Hindenburg's rear.

To the northwest, in the sector lying only a short distance to the east of the East Prussian frontier, Berlin reports an advance of Teutons and the capture of the town of Lipsk, lying just to the west of the fortress of Grodno, upon which the aims of the Germans are now evidently centered.

With the opening of the autumn months, the military observers are directing attention to the fact that the Russian equinoctial storms are due to begin about September 21. They assert that they are the danger limit to military operations in the eastern field.

GERMANS BUYING WAR MUNITIONS IN UNITED STATES.

Chicago, Aug. 31.—George M. Gotschow, secretary of Phillips, Gotschow & Co., is quoted in the Daily News today as stating that he is a stockholder in a firm which is making 100,000 six-inch shells for the United States Army, and that the German government, like the allies, is purchasing munitions of war in the American market.

"I have seen some of the German contracts," continued Mr. Gotschow. "That Germany is a buyer is common knowledge among manufacturers. And most of the shipments to Germany are made in Norwegian and Danish steamers."

NINE INDICTED FOR THE KILLING OF JON SLOVAK

Bonds Given For Defendants Charged With Murder of Bohemian Farmer at Shiner

By Associated Press. Houston, Tex., Aug. 31.—Bonds ranging from $100 to $2,000 were given at Shiner yesterday to nine persons arraigned in connection with the recent killing of John Slovak, Bohemian farmer. The defendants are Joe Kuestka, who admits holding the gun that killed Slovak, Frank Chronchak, Joe Mikha, Charles Mack, L. Trautwein, P. Spitznberger, George Herder, Tom Bailey and R. S. McKinnon. Joe Mikha was released.

Witnesses insisted the killing was accidental. The investigation centered on the ownership of a key with which a safe belonging to the Slovaks who were held on a minor charge was opened the night he was shot. One witness said it was found on the gatepost at the home of a deputy sheriff.

NINE TEXAS POSTOFFICES DESTROYED IN STORM

By Associated Press. Austin, Texas, Aug. 31.—Nine post offices were destroyed in Texas with their contents in the storm stricken coast country, according to Charles B. Anderson, inspector in charge of postoffice territory embracing Texas and Louisiana, whose headquarters are in Austin. These offices were located at Gies, Winfree, Lynchburg, Kemah, Wallisville, Tom Ball, Chocolata Bayou, Sabine and Quintana. Mr. Anderson says he is at present unable to give the exact loss, but it probably will be considerable and many postage and other stamps were lost.

Attorneys for Mrs. Swain said today that the shooting was a "clear case of self defense," details of which will be made clear at the preliminary hearing tomorrow.

Navy Gives Big Show To Impress Governors With Its Great Importance

SECRETARY AND MRS. DANIELS. DANIELS AND FLETCHER WITH GOVERNORS ON WYOMING

Boston, Aug. 31.—The governors of states in conference here saw a review of a United States battle fleet, saw the ships maneuver and repel an attack by a flotilla of torpedo boat destroyers. The governors and their parties left Boston at 12 o'clock for the navy yard, and at 12:45 the Wyoming, carrying the state executives, sailed. Secretary Daniels was aboard also, as was the ship steamed away the yard battery fired a salute of nineteen guns. The Wyoming stopped off Boston light. Meantime the destroyers and battleships were under way, the twenty-five destroyers passing in double column 300 yards east of the Wyoming. The lead-destroyer steamed by at ten knots, each ship firing its nineteen gun salute to the secretary and as the Arkansas came abreast the reviewing ship the turned column right, heading east. The Wyoming then proceeded east at fifteen knots, coming abreast of the center of the squadron and then maneuvered the line of battleships gradually eastward and northward. It was while these maneuvers were holding the attention of the secretary and the governors and their friends that the destroyer flotilla suddenly shot into view at full speed in an attack on the east side of the battleship line from ahead. Theoretically the big ships countered the attack, and as a result the destroyers drew off to the south, keeping the Wyoming between the battleship squadron and the destroyers. All the destroyers were emitting huge volumes of black smoke from their funnels, furnishing an effective screen behind which a battle fleet could successfully pull up on a foe.

STATE BOARD OF HEALTH TO CO-OPERATE WITH CITIES

Austin, Tex., Aug. 31.—The state board of health announces it will co-operate with authorities in every city and town in Texas in carrying out the provisions of the anti-stream pollution law, enacted at the Thirty-third legislature, and which becomes effective on January 1, 1917. Under this law, cities and towns must establish sewage disposal plants and mayors of the various cities are being advised by the board of the necessity of taking up the question of construction of such plants at once. The act originally was to have become effective last July, but the Thirty-fourth legislature extended the time to January 1, 1917, so ample time could be given for compliance with the provisions of the act. Considerable data has been collected by the state board of health, bearing upon the cost of construction, etc., and this information will be supplied to cities requesting it.

ANOTHER THREATENED STRIKE OF SOUTH WALES COAL MINERS AVERTED

Owners Undertake to Conclude Supplemental Agreement With Surface Workers and Previous Award of Walter Runciman Stands

By Associated Press. London, Aug. 31.—Official announcement was made today the dispute which threatened another extensive strike in the Welsh coal field had been settled. The agreement provides that the award by Walter Runciman, president of the board of trade, after the previous strike shall stand. The mine owners, however, undertake to conclude a supplemental agreement which will give the engineers and other surface workers not included in Mr. Runciman's award the same bonus as that granted to the miners. The exclusion of the surface workers was the chief source of dissatisfaction and consequently under today's agreement that has been accomplished without the necessity of upsetting the ministerial award so that ostensibly Mr. Runciman has not been reversed.

No concrete proposition for relaxation of interference with shipping has reached the state department, it was said, and such general discussion of the subject as has taken place will not affect this government's note to Great Britain now in preparation.

SOARING EXCHANGE RATE THREATENS TO LOSE TRADE FOR U.S.

VALUE OF ENGLISH POUND DROPS 2 1/2 CENTS BELOW PAR AND SERIOUS SITUATION DEVELOPS

SELL AMERICAN STOCK

English Holders More Than Make Up For Depreciation Through Profits on Exchange—Condition Will Force Europe to Place Orders Elsewhere

By Associated Press. New York, Aug. 31.—Foreign exchange rates reached their most serious phase today with an average break of 2 1/2 cents on sterling, the English pound selling in this market at 43 1/2, close to the mark where curtailment of big orders to the United States would follow, in the opinion of bankers here.

Nothing like the violent break in quotations had ever been recorded in foreign exchange markets here before. The low level reached today was 1 and 1/2 cents below the mark set weeks ago by financiers as the so-called irreducible minimum which, when reached, would cause credit buyers to seek other markets in which to place their orders for such imports as could be obtained elsewhere than in America. Food stuffs, manufactured goods and many other products and in fact almost everything except actual necessities of war were embraced within this category.

Condition is Chaotic. The demoralization in the foreign exchange markets was succeeded by almost chaotic conditions as the result of the break. Traders in foreign exchange were virtually at a stand still. Rates varying as much as a cent were quoted by different houses but in almost every case they were purely nominal and there was no business worthy of the name done in English money today.

The big break means that English buyers in addition to the top of the market prices already paid by them in this country for American products are called upon to pay a premium of twenty-eight and one half cents on every pound's worth of purchases. With such a situation purchasers in other markets it was thought, undoubtedly would follow if exchange rates should go lower. This would result in lessening to an extent which can not be estimated the amount of goods which American sellers are sending abroad now, the greatest in volume in the history of the country.

No Contracts Cancelled Yet. No American contracts have been cancelled as yet, it was said, but the heavy premium that British buyers must pay is every indication that cancellation will follow unless rates are rectified very soon, and that there will be a decided drop in new orders. What this would mean to American industries could not be foreseen.

AMERICAN SECURITIES ARE BEING UNLOADED

London, Aug. 31.—The American exchange problem is becoming more serious, notwithstanding recent shipments of gold to New York. Cable transfers were traded in to a considerable amount this morning at $4.60 1/4, the quotation declined later to $4.60 1/4, but trading was quiet. Insurance houses and other financial institutions are taking advantage of the low rates to sell American stocks and bonds, as depreciation in these securities is more than balanced by the profits on exchange even considering the cost of insuring and shipping bonds.

COTTON NOW OPENING ALONG WICHITA VALLEY

"First Bales" Have Appeared in Some Towns—Cotton There in Excellent Condition

"First bales" are making their appearance in the Wichita Valley counties and it will not be long before cotton begins to move in that section. Usually the movement is under way by the last of August, but the crop is about two weeks behind this year. Cotton is in excellent condition in that section, the plants being large and well fruited, and with a few days of warm weather the yield will be large. Cotton conditions along the Fort Worth & Denver to the north of here are also excellent, according to Division Superintendent Fitzpatrick of the Fort Worth & Denver. In Wichita county the crop is decidedly late, but blooms are now in evidence in many fields and the general condition of the crop is good, especially since the recent rains.

BODIES ARE MISSING FROM THE ILL FATED SUBMARINE F-4

BELIEVED THEY HAVE BEEN DEVOURED BY MARINE CREATURES WITH WHICH HONOLULU HARBOR SWARMS

DIG HOLE IN FORWARD PART

Examining Board Has Not Determined Whether This Caused Loss of Craft or Was Made During the Lifting Operations

By Associated Press. Honolulu, Aug. 31.—The bulk of the submarine F-4 lost in Honolulu Harbor March 25 with her crew of twenty-two men and raised in place in dry dock yesterday today lies exposed to view, the work of pumping out the dry dock and raising the shattered and torn submarine from the waters of the harbor having been completed during the night.

No trace of the bodies of the crew has been discovered nor has the examination made yet shown any light on the cause of the accident. The F-4 lies on her starboard side in dry dock. When the examining board composed of Rear Admiral C. J. Doush, Lieut. Julius A. Furor and Lieut. Kirby D. Crittendon entered the vessel they found the starboard side and bottom filled with battery plates and some sand and mud. If any bodies remain in the F-4 they are underneath the debris.

Doubt is expressed, however, if any will be found for the great holes torn in the submarine, only part of which were protected during the months of raising, allowed the marine creatures with which the waters of Honolulu harbor swarm to enter and it is believed the bodies of the crew have been devoured.

In addition to the gaping hole in the stem a big hole has been torn in the forward part. The investigating board has not yet definitely ascertained whether it was this that occasioned the loss of the submarine or whether the hole was torn during the lifting operations.

FEAT WAS ONE HITHERTO UNKNOWN IN MARINE ANNALES

By Associated Press. Washington, Aug. 31.—A feat unknown in marine annals was accomplished in raising from a depth of 300 feet the submarine F-4, which sank in Honolulu harbor, according to a statement issued by the navy department, which said so far as it could be discovered no vessel ever before had been raised from such a depth. The department praised the navy officers engaged in the salvage operations and said it was due to their untiring efforts that the vessel was successfully floated.

DIRECTORS OF CHAMBER COMMERCE MET TUESDAY

Trade Excursion Dallas Fair Not Action Taken—Dallas Ex-hibit Discussed

The directors of the Chamber of Commerce held their first session in several weeks Tuesday morning, considering a number of pending matters. The Wichita Southern Life Insurance Company was given 3000 copies of the latest advertising folder, agreeing to mail same to its policy holders and 500 were allowed the Wichita Mill & Elevator Company. It was stated that anyone wishing to have these booklets mailed out can do so by furnishing the secretary with the names and addresses.

Mr. Liepold brought up the question of a trade excursion, which was discussed at some length. Some of the directors, Mr. Blair in particular did not feel that the returns from such excursions justified the expense; no action was taken upon the suggestion.

The question of a Wichita county exhibit at the fair was brought up but final action was postponed until next week. It is stated that considerable difficulty is being experienced in securing suitable agricultural exhibits, but a manufacturing display may be sent. Directors present today were Messrs. Smith, Hardy, Liepold, J. C. Ward, O'Reilly, Hines, Kemp, Reid, Kell and Blair.

Liquid Overcoats Bring Many Into The Police Court

The cool weather of the past two days caused quite a few folks to seek liquid overcoats as protection against the chilly blasts, and as a result there were eighteen cases docketed in corporation court this morning. Most of them plead guilty to being drunk and were fined five dollars; this was the heaviest docket in some time. A negro woman who was charged with vagrancy protested vehemently that she was not a vagrant but quite willingly agreed to plead guilty to being drunk.

Province Of Minsk Which Germans Are Approaching

Washington, Aug. 31.—The government of Minsk, whose borders German armies are approaching on three sides, north from Kovel, east from Brest-Litovsk, and south from Vlnia, forms the heart of White Russia and one of the most desolate regions in the European division of the Tsar's empire," says a war primer issued today by the National Geographic Society.

"The government of Vlnia, half over run by Teutonic invaders, bounds Minsk in the north; Grodno government bounds it in the west and the government of Volynia in the south. With the fall of Brest-Litovsk there is no other powerful fortress on the western line until Bobruisk, a first class fortress 250 miles northeast of Minsk or 240 miles northwest of Brest-Litovsk. This fortress lies behind the great White Russian swamps.

"Somewhat rolling and hilly in the northwest, by far the greatest part of the government, however, is taken up by lowlands and marshes. These dreary marsh stretches reach far to the north beyond the borders of the government, and in the south almost to the fortress of Kovno, which lies west of Galician Lemberg. In the west, these marsh lands reach to Brest-Litovsk and to the east, they spread into the governments of Vitebsk, Mogilef, Smolensk, Chernigof and Kiev. Drainage of these fever swamps and useless sponge lands has been effected to a small extent by a system of canals and other works. There still remain, however, great areas where the floating land lies altogether waste and quite impassable.

"Minsk has an area of 35,283 square miles. The highest point in the government, in the northwest, is found in a narrow range of hills which rise between 800 to 1,000 feet from the divide between the Black Sea and Baltic waters.

"The Pripiet River crosses the government from west to east, draining its swamps to the Dniester, while the Beresina crosses it from north to south, passing before the fortress, Bobruisk, which with the swamp land before, forms the central link in the Russians' new line of defense. The Beresina now takes the place of the Bug and Bobruisk that of Brest-Litovsk.

"The marshes often cover hundreds of square miles of cheerless country, with lakes and muddy ponds interspersed. There are many areas of treacherous sands that go to make the region an unusually dangerous one for those unacquainted with the paths that thread its labyrinth. Joint

$50,000,000 NECESSARY TO FINANCE TEXAS COTTON CROP

By Associated Press. Austin, Texas, Aug. 31.—It will require $50,000,000 to finance the Texas cotton crop, according to F. C. Welner, state warehouse commissioner, and in his opinion the $20,000,000 to be deposited in the federal reserve bank of the government to loan cotton on farmers who have little if any effect on Texas. He figures that only $2 a bale could be loaned to the farmer with this fund, but with a $50,000,000 fund the Texas farmer would be able to hold his cotton and borrow sufficient money, when it has been properly stored, to hold it over for favorable markets. Mr. Welner says the farmers of the state are relying on Texas bankers to finance this year's crop and that while the resolutions adopted by the bankers are "all right," it is money at a low interest rate that is desired.

MIGHT BE "SPOTLESS TOWN"

Willemstad, Port of Dutch Island of Curacao, One of the World's Most Delightful Spots.

Willemstad, the port of the Dutch island of Curacao, is a quaint little town, and with its rows of brightly colored tiled houses of Dutch construction reminds one very forcibly of the pictures of "Spotless Town." The Dutch government maintains a garrison of home troops there and the island is under the management of a governor sent from Holland.

The natives speak hardly a word of Dutch, but employ a patois composed of nearly all languages, with Spanish predominating. This patois is called "papiamentu."

The harbor of Willemstad is very beautiful, with a depth of water sufficient to accommodate the largest ships. Steamers enter the harbor through a picturesque pontoon bridge constructed by an American consul who was stationed there for some years.

The water in the harbor is a clear bottle green color and the masts of a vessel that was sunk at the dock years ago can be plainly seen. A quaint tramway line with almost toy cars drawn by one mule serves as a carrier for the population.

From Curacao the American steamers with transhipped cargoes run across the very important town of Maracaibo, in the Gulf of Maracaibo. Maracaibo is one of the most important commercial ports of Venezuela, serving as an outlet for all the coffee and other valuable products of eastern Colombia.

A city of wonderful art works, of weather-stained white marble palaces, often richly sculptured and sometimes showing the worn evidences of sumptuous paintings, with impressive, well-preserved ruins from the days of before the Christian era. Verona has somewhat the appearance of luxurious decay, with which a confident, pushing, success-breathing spirit of the last few years has contrasted sharply.

The museums, picture galleries, libraries and ancient churches of Verona team with treasures. Verona was the birthplace of the famous Romans, Catullus, Cornelius Nepos, Pliny the Younger and Virgilius.—National Geographic Society Bulletin.

U. S. SOON TO TEST ITS FIRST DIRIGIBLE CRAFT

Balloon Has Been Built in Secret—May Mean Beginning of Zepelin Navy For U. S.

Some time soon the first dirigible war balloon to be acquired by the United States government will poke its huge black nose out of its hangar in Pensacola, Fla., and mount rapidly to the sky—or perchance, dive, a shapeless, twisted mass, into the waters of the bay. At any rate, the navy department will learn the result of a year's effort to produce the variety of aircraft which has kept England and Belgium in terror since the outbreak of the war.

The intention of the navy to build a dirigible balloon was announced last October. For years the government had consistently refused to experiment with the lighter-than-air type of machine, and the news came as a surprise to airplane experts. In the first place, it was not believed that such a craft could be built by American manufacturers and from American materials.

But it has been accomplished, and the next few weeks will see the finishing touches to the new venture. The great gas envelope, 115 feet long, is being sewed together in a loft at Naugatuck, Conn. The gondola, or car, is built to carry eight officers.

So secretly has the work of construction been carried on that even the inhabitants of the towns where the various parts have been built have been unaware of what was happening. The Connecticut Aircraft Company of New Haven, holder of the contract, has been extremely reticent as to its plans, and up to the present time has refused any information as to the progress of the work.

Apparently the company saw the handwriting on the wall more than a year ago. At that time Capt. Thomas S. Baldwin, famous dirigible expert, was engaged as chief constructor and sent abroad to study dirigibles in England, France, Germany, Austria and Italy. He brought back a fund of information as to new methods of construction, as well as the American rights to a number of valuable patents.

It was recognized that the building of a dirigible on this side of the Atlantic would be a grave experiment, and the designs for trial dirigibles in England, France, Germany, Austria and Italy. He brought back a fund of information as to new methods of construction, as well as the American rights to a number of valuable patents.

I once in a while find some one who has never tasted a ripe olive and once they see them and see how different they look from the green olive, they always ask "are they really good?"

Most people like the ripe olive taste better than the green olives. The smoother and more delicate flavor seems to take better.

FORTRESS AND CHURCH

WHEN the very capital cities of civilization lie in peril of warfare, not many folk will spare another thought for Dinant on the Meuse; indeed, one of the least among cities, says a writer in Country Life. Yet one may believe that among the wandering folk, the tourists, the idle travelers, there must have been grief for Dinant when the ill news of its fate came in. Who that knows that little town between the limestone cliff and the water of the Meuse but will mourn that history should so terribly repeat itself at Dinant? The warlike days of Dinant had long gone by. In her hour of pride she had been cast down. She lived humbly. You would have wondered her that history should make no more troubles for Dinant. Yet now her name is the last chapter as a city sharing the terrible fame which has come upon Louvain and Namur and Malines. Once again Dinant has ceased to be.

It was in the year 1466 that the fates last meddled with Dinant. Then she was a bonne ville, rich and prosperous, a fief of the bishop of Liege. Sixty thousand hot-blooded, hard-working Walloons were within her armed walls. Brasswork was her craft; more than half her citizens plied that changing trade. Read what the Sire Philippe de Commines wrote of Dinant: "A mighty strong town it was," said he, "and rich withal, by reason of its traffic in those works of brass that men call dinanders, which are pots and pans and the like matters." He goes on to tell you how Dinant had quarreled with Bouvignes, her neighboring town on the other bank of the Meuse, carrying unselfishness to the point of firing upon Bouvignes with two bombardments and other pieces of artillery until they of Bouvignes were constrained to work and eat their dinners in the cellars of their houses. The Sire de Commines tells you that you will hardly believe what hatred these two towns had for one another; they were, I think, two of a trade. Bouvignes had its own brass-works.

But the brasswork of Dinant was famous through Europe. To this day the museums label their best brass candlesticks of the antique fashion, their two-spouted brass pots with the handle that swings from two little brazen heads of ladies, as dinanders of Dinant on the Meuse. The wicked forger of antiquities imitates lovingly the works of Dinant. If our Shakspeare writes of the Agincourt army whose horsemen sat "like fixed candlesticks," we may guess that he had in his mind some old piece of dinander seen in his childhood on a Warwickshire dresser, one of those brass candlesticks in the fashion of a knight on horseback, that are now only for the luckiest collector. Your true dinanderist must be dated before 1466, for in 1466 the doom came on Dinant, Dinant's Former Destruction.

When King Louis of France fled up the hill from the field of Montlhery, leaving Charles the Bold to claim a victory among those of his Burgundians who had not fled on the other side, somebody brought false news to Dinant. Now Dinant hated the count of Charolais almost as much as he hated Bouvignes, a town which was held by Namur and was loyal to Burgundy. Therefore, hearing of the count's death, it seemed good to the rabble of Dinant that they should march gaily towards the walls of Bouvignes, carrying with them the stuffed shape of a man. This dishonored puppet had a cow-bell clinking at its neck. It wore a coat of many colors. Bouvignes, looking down from its walls, saw with horror the coat-armor of the heir of Burgundy, saw the shape tucked up to a galloway and shot full of arrows by the popiniky shooters of Dinant. But Charles Count of Charolais was not dead. He was alive and vengeful when Bouvignes sent him its tidings. Dinant knew that soon and quaked. A humble letter beseeching pardon was written out by two elders of the town. Another letter prayed King Louis that for pity's sake and charity he would intercede for them with his terrible cousin. No answer came. In fear Dinant heard that Charles had struck out the name of Dinant from the list of rebel towns to whom he would give his peace. For a year Dinant waited unpardon. On an August day of 1466 the good Duke Philippe was carried into Bouvignes on a litter. Old and feeble, he was to see from the cliff at Bouvignes the knightly vengeance that his son would take upon these vile brass-workers who had langed the stuffed image of a count, who had defamed a duchess of Burgundy by calling her a bishop's sweetheart.

Then came the count himself under a banner of St. George and the dragon, with knights of the Fleece, with the constable of France, with many lords of Hainaut and Hainaut, with horse and foot and heavy artillery. The Dinant men, at bay behind their wall, raged at the sight of him; it had come to war at last, and they were Walloons with arms in their hands. Dinant was sieged on all sides; the master of the artillery brought his bombardments up against the gates at full moon, scattering such shot from his small pieces that not a head might peep over the wall. The captain of the brassworkers' guild would have fought to the end, and his valiant smiths with him. But the magistrates were giving up the key, while the captain was carrying the city banner to the broken wall, and the Bastard of Burgundy came in and the court after him, magnificent, pitiless, to sit in judgment upon themselves dearly. But there was much hanging and beheading. At Bouvignes they will show you the cliff from which Dinant citizens, tied neck and heels, were dropped into the Meuse. There was pillage from house to house; merchants from Brussels had come with carts to carry away brassworks and household goods bought cheap of the plunderers. Last ran the fire from end to end of the town. Dinant was "burned in such fashion," says Olivier de la Marche, "that it seemed as though it had been a ruin for a hundred years." For six years it lay in its ashes, and then, little by little, the life came back to it, though never again came back the pride and the wealth. Its rock was crowned by a citadel, and the citadel brought it storm and trouble in the French wars.

But the town lived meekly in the sight of Bouvignes; it never prepared. In July of 1914 it was selling gingerbread to peasants, and portraits of its pretty old houses to the tourists from the Namur boat, showing strangers the way up the cliff by the 400 steps in the rock and serving dinners to holiday folk. In August, a fatal month for Dinant, the Germans came upon it with mightier bombardments than those toys with which Messire Pierre de Haequeubain had made ready to blow in the gates. Dinant once again is a ruin from end to end. Once again the chronicler may write "Cy rust Dinant."

Even as Rachel mourned for her children and would not be comforted, because they were not, so may this forlorn Belgium mourn for her perished cities. Noble Louvain, very old and wise, lies slain outright; Malines, that was wonderful for beauty among all towns, has her death wound; the black sockets that were the houses of Termonde gaze horribly to the sky. Yet Belgium will remember the little Dinant in her prayer for vengeance.

There was little here for the over-curious antiquary. Those same architects who would call the church of Dinant notable among all Belgian churches had played here industriously those perverse tricks that they name restoration.

The new bridge was such a bridge as cunning engineers will throw you over any river of Europe. Not thus was the old bridge built that carried a castle upon its arches. For the rest you had the lines of high-gabled houses whose windows looked on the water. There, again, you will not compare with houses on the Gravel at Ghent, with the houses that line the quays of Bruges. Yet the loss of them is lamentable, irreparable. We cannot rebuild antiquity, even though it be but the last antiquity, the latest hand's turn of work done before the world fell into obedience of the machine and learned to rule its straight lines exactly. Of Dinant you may at least say that was what the old-fashioned landscape-man would frankly call "picturesque;" he must have called it so many a time when he took his sketch book to the western bank and set to work upon it with a soft-leaded pencil.

A friendly little town it was, one of the decayed nobility among the cities, yet affable and welcoming to strangers.

We Grind Our Own Lenses!

That means they are ground to fit the eyesight that they are intended for—that there is no guess work about it, and no make shift statement of "that's near enough" to save sending them back to some factory that may be down east somewhere.

In Charge of Experts

Our optical department is in charge of Mr. T. H. Benninger, optician, and Mrs. Ashley Allord, optometrist formerly with A. S. Fonville, both experts in fitting glasses, and in grinding lenses that will fit the sight. Added to their ability we have placed at their disposal the very latest machinery and every appliance necessary for complete fitting.

We Will Not Urge You To Wear Glasses

Our opticians have positive orders not to force glasses onto any customer in order to make a sale. They will examine your eyes free of charge, and if there is just some little defect in the eyesight that can be cured without the use of glasses, the ywill tell you so. If, in their judgment, you should have glasses, they will also tell you that, and then you are at liberty to go anywhere you wish to buy them, without feeling under the least obligation to us.

Our Prices Are Low

Operated in connection with our other business, we are able to furnish glasses at much lower prices than so called specialists ask for the same work, and much lower than firms who are forced to send out of town for the grinding. On account of the nature of the business we are unable to quote prices, but will gladly do so at the time we examine your eyes.

MIRACULOUS SURGERY IN FRENCH HOSPITAL

New Face Grown For Soldier Who Had Lost Cheek, Jaw, Chin, Lips and Nose.

London, Aug. 31.—Some remarkable instances of surgical science have been brought to light during the present war, but the following story-telling how a horribly mutilated soldier was "reconstructed" from his own ruins adds one more miracle to the list. A French newspaper correspondent was admitted to the Rothschild Hospital to see for himself the miracle in question after the surgeon had completed his work. The correspondent was shown a photograph of a man wounded in the French trenches. It was a terrible picture. The face lacked the lower portion of the left cheek, the chin had gone and also the lips and nose.

While the correspondent was looking at this appalling picture one of the hospital assistants made a sign to one of the patients who was just going out to spend an afternoon at a picture show.

"Here is our man," said the assistant. The correspondent stared uncomprehending, but the assistant added with a smile, "Yes, I assure you, this is the patient whose photograph you have in your hand; the man who was brought into the hospital without his cheek, jaw, lips, chin and nose."

The correspondent at first thought the assistant was fooling him, but the patient who was just going out bore few signs of the dreadful wounds depicted in the photograph. His right cheek was the true brother of his left cheek; he had an excellent chin; lips that opened in a genial smile; and a nose of perfect contour. His face only bore the rapidly vanishing traces of some cuts and a few white marks occasioned by surgical sewing. The patient himself proceeded to confirm the assistant's assertions, talking in the slang of the French infantryman: "Yes, it is myself, wasn't any good for the Germans to spoil my portrait; the doctors tricked them after all. As you see, he has manufactured for me a very decent face. For myself, I think he has improved it, and I believe they'll find me more of a knut when I get back into the country." Then he lit a cigarette and went off to see the show.

The surgeon had taken a portion of the patient's back and used it to replace the cheek. With the skin of the back he had fashioned the lips. Then he took a portion of the man's short ribs to make the nose and the substance of the chin. From the forehead he took the skin for the nose and from the stomach the skin for the chin. Finally when the man was practically re-fashioned and could be permitted to look at his new face, the doctor asked him if there was anything he regretted. The soldier replied: "Yes, my moustache." "Oh don't you worry about that," said the doctor and without even applying an anesthetic he took from the hairy nape of the neck a small strip of skin and grafted it on the upper lip. "I can't promise you," said the doctor, "that you will have as vigorous a moustache as that which you left in the trenches, but in any case you won't be hairless."

LIGNITE HAS BEEN BURNING ONE HUNDRED YEARS

Parko, N. D., Aug. 31.—The "mouth of hell" mystery, which has puzzled Indians and white men in the Northwest for more than fifty years, has been solved by a professor at the University of North Dakota.

On the William Gatsch farm, 12 miles southeast of Velva, N. D., is a tract of land, 85 acres in extent, which is so hot that snow never rests there, although the temperature outside may be 40 below zero. Vegetation will not grow on the land.

Prior to the coming of white men to the Northwest the spot was a favorite halting place for migratory Indians, who found it warm there in winter. Many traces of Indians have been found in the form of arrow and spearheads, hatchets and bones. John Mariner, pioneer resident of Velva, says his family camped on this ground on their journey from Western Wisconsin to California in 1849. The place was famous then among the Indians. University geologists say the explanation of the mystery lies in the fact that extensive veins of lignite coal underlying the spot were set afire in some manner, possibly a hundred years ago, and have been burning ever since. Escaping gas from the combustion accounts for occasional coyotes and grouse which are found asphyxiated on the ground. The coal will continue to burn indefinitely, the geologists say.

For the information of those who contend that there is no fund with which to fight prohibition in Texas The Times desires to call attention to the testimony as given by S. T. Morgan, president of the Dallas brewery, in the hearing at Austin, who said that Texas brewers contributed 20 cents per barrel on their total sales toward an anti-prohibition fund and that the wholesalers paid 2 per cent of their gross receipts for the same purpose.

Cole Blaise, former governor of South Carolina who last year was defeated for the United States Senate, now announces that he will again be a candidate for governor of that state. He is the governor that came near capturing the state prison of South Carolina by virtue of the pardoning power, and has just recently made a speech in which he took occasion to defend mob law.

Harry Thaw says that he paid his entire fortune to the lawyers. But then he ought to remember that it took them nine long years to get it, and instead of complaining he ought to be thankful that he did not have more to give up. Had he been a man of only moderate means, he would have been out of his trouble a long time ago. It was the fact that he had money and a great deal of it that made it hard for him. At least, that is about the way most people size up his case.

The United States submarine that went down in Honolulu harbor several months ago with her crew of twenty-one men has finally been raised to within six feet of the top of the water, but nothing so far has been learned as to the cause of the disaster, except that two large holes were found in the side of the vessel and not one of the bodies of the twenty-one men have been discovered as yet.

From now on all women in the employ of the State of Illinois will receive the same pay as men who perform similar service. This is the result of a law passed by the legislature of that State last winter, and it is a good law—one that should be enacted by every state in the union. In Texas women can hold certain county offices, having been elected to these offices, and in every instance they are making efficient officials.

It is claimed by the English that if American cotton had been kept out of Germany the war would have been over by this time, and rather than argue the matter with the English let's admit that that would have been the case. But, on the other hand, the Germans say that had it not been for the United States supplying England and the allies with food-stuffs and munitions of war they (the Germans) would have won the fight before it had lasted a year. Either way you view the matter, it looks like Uncle Sam has held the whip handle all the while, and could have stopped the war early in the game with a liberal use of it. But to have done so would have been at the expense of violating our neutrality say our American statesmen.

THAT DALLAS BANQUET. A friend of The Times writes to criticize it for what it had to say of the banquet tendered ex-Senator Bailey on the night of the 27th. In that little editorial The Times said that there were many of the opinion that the meaning of it was an invitation, a very pressing invitation to ex-Senator Bailey to again enter Texas politics, and also that it might terminate into an anti-Wilson movement in Texas next year with ex-Senator Bailey as a candidate for delegate-at-large to the Democratic National convention. Perhaps The Times has sized that meeting up wrong, but here is what the Houston Post has to say about it and ex-Senator Bailey, and The Times would ask its critic to read it carefully and then perhaps he will not be quite so severe in his criticism of what he terms "country editors."

"The remarkable tribute paid to former Senator Bailey on the occasion of night demonstrated so many things that have been demonstrated so many times, that no citizen of this State ever had such faithful and devoted friends. As Mr. Beall so happily observed, these friends, who but represented the absent hundreds of thousands, have followed him with an affection that rarely exists among men, and they will follow him as long as he lives."

It often happens that a public man's friends lose interest in him after he has retired from public station, but not so in Senator Bailey's case. That shows the deeper attachment for him, that he has bound men to him by ties that do not break, and that his place in the affections of the people does not depend upon political prestige.

We think it will be agreed, too, that Senator Bailey has grown steadily in public regard and that his retirement has impaired neither his popularity nor his influence. Every friend who followed him through the fires that tested his soul has remained steadfast and true, and thousands who fought him have, in the years of calm which followed, been won to his standard.

There are thousands who would have resented his candidacy for reelection in 1912 now hoping that he may consent to re-enter public life. There is a general sense, too, that the State sustained as a result of his retirement. His figure looms greater by the contrast that is presented when the puerile blazes of small men gleam dimly in the forum where his irresistible intellect once flashed. There is no "left" to be succeeded in.

There is no mystery about Bailey. Jack Beall stated the case when he said: "The greatest scourge today is cowardice on the part of public officials; there is no cowardice in Senator Bailey. Friend and foe alike can testify that he was never timid to his conviction. They know that he would not have the greatest honor of the world if to obtain it necessitated the slightest compromise of his sense of right and duty, and they knew that he would stand by his convictions if he had to stand alone."

"He speaks the truth when he tells the people that he prefers to serve them in private station. "But people of vision can very well see the trend of events in Texas. There are conditions forming in this State as well as in the country at large that will have to be met before long. There are problems and perils ahead, because small men and dreamers who know nothing about the principles upon which this Republic is founded are playing fast and loose with government."

"It is going to require great men, true men and wise leaders to save the ark of the covenant of republican institutions in the United States, and they will have to sacrifice self and do the work of wise men and patriots just as the fathers did in the beginning."

It is the contemplation of these conditions that makes irresistible the conclusion that the day is approaching when the people of Texas are going to call upon their Beau Sabreur Democracy to lead them, and it will be a summons that he must obey."

TEMPERATURE DROPPED NEARLY TO 50 MARK

Few Overcoats Appeared Monday Night Making Palm Beach Appear Still Chilly

More cool weather was experienced by Wichitans Monday, the maximum temperature being about the same as that of Sunday, while last night the mercury dropped slightly lower than on Sunday night, going down almost to the 50 degree mark. Some autoists Monday still were observed wearing overcoats, but the Palm Beach suit and straw hat were still in evidence among those who arrange their attire more according to the calendar than the thermometer. The weather this morning was more August like with the temperature steadily rising during the morning hours.

TOMMY IN THE TRENCHES AND IN HOSPITAL IS FOND OF MUSIC

PLAYING FOR HIS WOUNDED COMRADES. London, Aug. 30.—While not as musical, according to all accounts, as his German foe, Tommy in the trenches has in his ranks a fair share of men gifted in the art of making musical noises. One of them carried his mandolin several months in the trench warfare in France, the instrument remaining unscathed when its owner stopped a German bullet. Then he took his mandolin with him to a hospital. It is pleasant to note that he recovered sufficient to entertain his wounded comrades with his playing.

SCIENTIFIC METHODS IN DETECTION OF CRIME

By Making Blood Tests Detectives Are Able to Tell Whether Smears Are Human Blood

Detection of crime by scientific methods has recently been tried with success in Chicago. A criminal research laboratory has been established in connection with the office of the coroner of Cook county. G. F. Paul predicts in an article in the "Policeman's Monthly" that the other American cities are or will be following the lead of Chicago. The laboratory of the Cook County coroner's office is similar to that adopted long ago by many German cities in connection with their police and detection bureaus. He says in part: "The day is rapidly disappearing when the hardened criminal can sprinkle his clothes with blood of a chicken or some domestic animal to hide the dark spots that might betray him as a murderer. If the very hairs of his head are numbered, so are the infinitely small corpuscles that course through his veins."

NOT ENOUGH OFFICERS FOR AUSTRALIAN TROOPS

Youngsters From the Australian West Point are Being Placed in Active Command

Sydney, Australia.—On account of the death of officers for the 100,000 troops which Australia expects to maintain at the front, youngsters at Duntroon, the West Point of Australia, are being commissioned for military training, being established on the lines of the famous institution on the Hudson, and the era of activity through which it is now passing is not altogether unlike the era through which West Point passed during the Civil War. In the present European struggle, Major-General Sir John Bull, who was fatally wounded by a Turkish sniper, and whose body is to be removed from Alexandria to Canberra, the site of the new Australian federal capital. In addition to this loss, eleven officers from the Duntroon school have been killed at the Dardanelles and twenty have been wounded.

Normally Duntroon turns out forty officers each year, but this number proved too small in the stress of war. To meet the acute demand for competent officers the four years curriculum has had to be readjusted. When the war broke out there were at the academy twenty-seven Australians and eight New Zealanders who were within five months of graduation. These youngsters were graduated forthwith and in December last year they were graduated. A further batch of cadets are leaving for the front this month—making a total of 105.

LIQUOR LICENSE PAYMENTS DEFER TREASURY DEFICIT

By Associated Press. Austin, Texas, Aug. 31.—A deficit in the state treasury has been deferred for nearly one month by liquor license tax collections, remitted by collectors to State Treasurer Edwards, aggregating upwards of $600,000. It had been expected the cash would become exhausted by the end of this month. Mr. Edwards, however, says the license tax came in time to avoid the state going on a deficiency basis. Mr. Edwards now believes the state will be able to remain on a cash basis for a month or possibly longer, although there will be heavy drains on the funds after September 1, the beginning of the new fiscal year. This will be the last year the state will go on a deficit, it is said, because with the increased ad valorem tax rate, from 12 to 20 the state will be enabled to keep on a strict cash basis.

BRITISH CARRY COMMERCIAL WAR TO THE FAR EAST

Hankow, China.—The first result of the British anti-enemy trading bill, which is being put into effect in China, is a panic among the Germans in the British concession. In fear of being cut off from business by the British action, the Germans have moved all their stocks of goods to Chinese territory and placed the large part of it under Chinese protection. The British banks have requested the Germans to withdraw all their deposits. Hitherto trading between German and British subjects has continued in China, but the war is now to be carried into commerce even in the Far East.

BAILEY MAKES ATTACK UPON WOMAN SUFFRAGE

Women Might Help Purify Politics But Politics Won't Help Purify Women, He Declares

Houston, Tex., Aug. 31.—A vigorous assault upon woman suffrage was the feature of a talk made last night by former United States Senator Joseph Weldon Bailey at a reception given in his honor in the ballroom of the Rice Hotel. Many men and women of prominence in South Texas were present and his bitter attack on suffrage was applauded, particularly by the men. Some of the women did not applaud and some of them did not wear pleated looks as they heard his arguments against equal suffrage.

Mr. Bailey paid his respects to "male suffragettes" and said he would like to see them in frocks. He declared that female suffrage was the mother of all the "isms." He regretted, he said, to observe that efforts were being made to foist this "ism" upon some communities in Texas and particularly upon the Houston community. He was opposed to what is known as paternal government, but said he opposed more vigorously the idea of a maternal government.

"Women are too good to do the rough work of politics," he said. "If our politics is as bad as represented to be by some of the agitators, the hem on no woman's garment should touch American politics. Women might help to purify politics, but politics will not help to purify women."

Holding a glass of clear water up before the audience, he drove home an interesting illustration. "You cannot mix the good with the bad without damaging the good, even though you do help the bad some," he said. "Take some ink and drop it into this water and you spoil the ink for writing and you spoil the water for drinking."

"The three principal duties of citizenship are military service, sheriff service and jury service. Good women would not make good soldiers. The woman who is capable of being a soldier is incapable of being a mother. Ask a good woman to fix a bayonet and charge the enemy, and she would throw down the weapon and start crying."

Mr. Bailey was presented to his audience by Colonel Thomas H. Ball, who said, "I want to introduce my friend, your friend, the friend of Texas and constitutional government, Senator Joseph Weldon Bailey."

Chicago Grain Futures. By Associated Press. Chicago, Aug. 31.—Wheat dropped today on large supplies and improved weather conditions in the northwest. Light frosts in Illinois and Indiana are reported to have done no harm. At the opening wheat was 14 to 15 cent net lower with September at 94 1/2 to 95, December at 92 1/2 to 93 1/4. The easy wheat market seemed to be the chief factor in a bearish corn situation, weather and good supply of cash grain helped in depressing values at a net rate of 1-3 to 1/4 to 5-8 pct at the opening. Oats followed other grain, opening unchanged to 1-4 cent lower and ending off a little further almost immediately. Wheat, Sept. 93 3-4; Dec. 92 5-8; May 97 1-4. New York Cotton Futures. By Associated Press. New York, Aug. 31.—The cotton market opened steady today at an advance of 3 to 5 points in response to relatively steady Liverpool cables and reports of low temperatures in the belt. There was some selling for a reaction on scattering liquidation which caused some irregularity but the decline of from 30 points from the high level of yesterday affected buying from Wall Street sources and the market was soon settling from 7 to 7 1/2 points net higher or around 9.75 for October and 10.17 for January. Trading became more active as the market was higher with many of yesterday's sellers rebuying while outside demand seemed to be broadening and prices were about 19 to 20 points net higher shortly after midday. The close was firm. October 9.85; December 10.18; January 10.20; March 10.57; May 10.79.

CONSTANTINOPLE BRIDGE IS AGAIN REPORTED BLOWN UP

London, Aug. 31.—An Athens dispatch says a submarine of the allies has blown up a portion of the bridge between Constantinople and the suburb of Galata. It is not apparent whether this is merely an echo of a similar report of several weeks ago which brought forth a denial from Constantinople.

WHOLESALE ARRESTS OF SAN ANTONIO MEXICANS

Believed Plan to incite Ignorant to Violence in Alamo City Was Nipped by Officers. San Antonio, Tex., Aug. 31.—With the arrest of twenty-six Mexicans, twenty-three of whom were detained this afternoon, Chief of Police Lancaster and Federal authorities believe a plan to incite the Mexican population of San Antonio to deeds of violence has been nipped. The prisoners, according to Chief Lancaster, are all followers of the plan of San Diego, an extravagant manifesto which proclaims the Republic of Texas for Mexicans. The uprisings in the Lower Rio Grande Valley caused the program to go amiss, and at the same time Federal officials were put on their guard. Three of the leaders were arrested Sunday night while addressing a crowd of 1,000 Mexicans on the market plaza. Their remarks were of an inflammatory nature and were calculated to arouse the poorer class of Mexicans to deeds of violence. Since the disturbances in the Brownsville territory special agents of the United States Department of Justice and police officials have been keeping close watch to prevent a possible uprising in San Antonio. They have learned that agitators were here in great strength. But until Sunday night there had been no open attempt to encourage disorders. Then three speakers gathered about 1,000 Mexicans and in passionate bursts of oratory pictured to them a tale of persecution of their fellows. Chief Lancaster, Police Inspector Mussey and Captain Welch heard the speakers. "One speaker," Chief Lancaster said, "after abusing the President of the United States, the government of this country and the white race generally, openly declared: 'It is no harm to kill a Gringo and an Aleman,' meaning Americans and Germans. It was at this point the police charged the crowd, arresting the leaders, but it was not without a fight. As the officers were withdrawing one of the Mexicans shouted: 'Now is the time to rise. Let us rise and kill the Gringos.'" The arrival of the police for the time being ended all martial spirit. Following the arrest of the leaders the police instituted a dragnet which resulted in the arrest of twenty-three others. They will be immediately placed in the custody of Federal officials, who probably will file charges against them of treason, alleging an effort to set on foot an armed expedition against the United States authorities.

"KER-CHOO!" Bethlehem, N. H., Aug. 31.—This town in the White mountains, sometimes called "the mecca of the sneezers" will be the scene of the annual convention of the United States Hay Fever Association, beginning Sept. 2. Although those who do not know from individual experience or from contact with sufferers the woes of hay fever sometimes scoff at the disease, it is not regarded lightly by its victims. Physicians, many of whom suffer from the sneezing, asthmatic malady, assemble here to discuss the latest forms of treatment.

MINNESOTA STUDENTS ON 10,000 MILE AUTO TOUR

Represent Automobile Company, Deliver Lectures and Make Enough Money To Pay Expenses. On a ten thousand-mile automobile tour by which they enjoyed their summer vacation and at the same time made enough money to carry them through another term of college four students of the University of Minnesota arrived here last night. After spending the night here they left this morning for Oklahoma City. They were traveling in a Packard. At points over the country members of their party deliver a lecture on "Industrial America," illustrated with motion pictures. From the proceeds of the lectures they not only are earning enough money to defray the expenses of the trip but are also getting enough money to put them through another term of college. They are also representing the Packard automobile company. They changed their route from El Paso to Kansas City and are making no lectures between these points. They made the trip from Abilene here yesterday. They left Minneapolis June 22nd, going through Grand Forks, Glacier National Park, Seattle, San Francisco, Yuma, El Paso, Odessa and here. They have never made an adjustment on their automobile but were delayed at Sweetwater where they broke the crank case of their automobile in crossing the railroad track. They have averaged more than 200 miles every day since they have been on the road. Included in the party were: E. O. Doyle, J. C. Fabbrini, E. A. Borg and W. J. Kahbert.

IT IS NOW WELL TO HEED LAW IN LAND OF SULTAN

Europeans and Natives Alike Are Subject to Severe Punishment Under Martial Law. Constantinople.—It is well these days in Turkey to heed the law, especially military law. Europeans who have lived in Turkey long either fear or respect Turkish law and court procedure. Most of them feared it in the past, and fear it today, because the abolition of the capitulations has made foreigners measurable to the Turkish law and courts, and neither of them are things to be trifled with. As an example of what Turkish military law is, the following should suffice: The Histat of the 19th Inst., contains this laconic account: "Sentence of the commandant of Constantinople. The condemned: 'Person named Seriz, censor in the postoffice of Galata, to three years imprisonment and removal from office, for having abstracted bank notes from letters given him to censor.' 'Mechamed Iszet, tailor at Kara Glumuck, to one month imprisonment; Terese, employe of the Vidies-Hospital, to two months imprisonment.' 'Christo, boatman at Pinkipo and Panayi son of Christo, of Marmaris, to eight months and 20 days imprisonment; for having thrown anchor in a proscribed zone without a special permit.' 'Hassan, son of Hannein, employe of a factory at Abati, to three years imprisonment; Sava, a merchant of leather at Okdiller Bachi, to two years imprisonment, and Spiro of Yalova, hair dresser, to six months imprisonment and fifty pounds fine for having alarmed public opinion with unfounded news.' 'Aris, son of Karabet, a restaurant keeper at Cesaree, to eight months and twenty days imprisonment, for having entered upon a proscribed zone.' 'Harver, of Belchitche, a painter, to six months imprisonment and Nesmie, daughter of Mehend Ali to three months imprisonment, for having outraged public morals. Fines were also imposed.' 'Onnik, a fireman at Kadikuey, to two years imprisonment, Panayot a shoemaker to 45 days, for having insulted police while drunk.' While some of the sentences seem unduly severe—Turk and non-Turk suffer alike.

GOVERNMENT EXPERT TO INVESTIGATE GAS SUPPLY

Dallas, Tex., Aug. 31.—David White, chief geologist for the United States government, will be in Dallas next week to make a preliminary survey of the gas fields supplying this city, and his visit here will be sent here by the United States bureau of Geology and the United States bureau of mines, Mayor Henry D. Lindsay announced yesterday. Arrangements for the visit of the experts were made through Franklin P. Lane, Secretary of Interior in President Wilson's Cabinet. This is the first time on record that experts have been sent by the Department of the Interior to make surveys at the request of any city. The matter was taken up directly with the heads of the two bureaus by Mayor Lindsay and with Secretary Lane by Edward W. Demie, selected by the City Commission to investigate the affairs of public service utilities serving Dallas. The only cost to the city will be the actual expenses of the men while they are engaged in the survey. Salaries will cost nothing, and the expert knowledge which is secured will be tabulated by the Interior Department and kept on record.

BESSEY FURNITURE COMPANY, NEXT TO THE MAJESTIC THEATRE

A LOON LAKE GUIDE

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

A light breeze ruffled the lake, and from the topmost twig of a tall tree a red-winged blackbird sent out his cheery morning call.

Isabel Orth came down the path among the pines, a fresh young form garbed in crisp white linen. She paused for an instant and peered through the straight pine-trunks and caught a glimpse of the canoe with her guide waiting patiently beside it.

Her guide, John Dunston, was unlike any other guide who had served the Orths on Loon lake. Young and straight-limbed, with brown hair, eyes and skin, and a closed-mouthed smile, he might be mistaken for the typical woodsman, only that when his lips parted in speech his voice lacked the rough intonation of the natives, and his words were carefully chosen. The Orths and their friends acknowledged that John Dunston was quite "superior" to his station in life.

Isabel admitted it, she gave no utterance to her thoughts. Her attitude toward Dunston was as coolly impersonal as it was toward Trapper Joe or Hank Pike. If anything, it was a little more pronounced in that, perhaps, to herself she looked for a secret interest in the young man.

"Good morning, Miss Orth," Dunston lifted his hat as he arose from the pebbly beach.

"Good morning, Dunston," returned Isabel. "Do tell me what that bird is—that little black mite, with touches of red and the peary breast—hear him?"

"Chee-chee-chee-chee!" Dunston looked up into the thick tangle of a tall elderberry bush.

"That's a redstart. Cheery little beggars, aren't they?" he asked as he bent to the canoe and arranged the cushions.

"Yes," said Isabel. "Are you ready for me?"

"Just a moment—there!" Presently, Isabel was leaning among crimson cushions while Dunston's strong arms were sending the paddle in flashing arcs from side to side. The water fell from the blades in silvery drops.

Isabel watched the rhythmic movement of the paddles and frowned a little when she discovered that she had forgotten the beauty of the morning, the song of birds, the ripple of the lake, everything in the fascination of watching Dunston's strong arms as they rose and fell with each dip of the paddle.

"Turn your head to the left—don't move suddenly—you will glimpse a deer," whispered Dunston.

Isabel obeyed. For an instant she saw the beautiful brown head with soft-starched ossicles on the canoe and the deer's eye, which vanished and there was a crashing of underbrush along the shore.

Isabel laughed in sheer delight. "Wasn't it lovely?" she asked impulsively.

Dunston's reply was amusing. "Why, you are a real girl after all!" he exclaimed, and immediately bit his lip with annoyance.

Isabel blushed to her fair hair. In her astonishment at the guide's outburst she forgot their relative positions and spoke quite naturally.

"Of course I am a real girl. Don't I always act like one?" she questioned curiously.

"In your garden, Miss Orth," he said contentedly, "but somehow, it seems to me that you take your pleasures rather seriously for a young girl."

"I am twenty-four," admitted Isabel frankly, "and I am never so stiff and disagreeable as I am when in your company, Dunston!"

Dunston concealed a smile. Miss Orth's haughty demeanor masked a very agreeable simplicity.

"I am sorry," he said humbly. "Perhaps I could change places with Hank. Mr. Luttrell has asked me if I could not break my contract with your father. Hank is considered the best guide in the Loon district, and I know he would be glad to come back to your father."

"No!" cried Isabel sharply. "You cannot go, Dunston; my father would not like it. You are bound to Orth cottage until November."

Dunston bowed his head in acknowledgment, but his brown eyes showed golden sparks as if some flame burned within.

As was customary on pleasant days, the guide took Isabel to a certain tiny island in the lake, where a hammock swung under a tree. At sundown he would come after her and their silent trips to and from the camp and the island held a growing significance because of the girl's quite unnecessary aloofness and the man's cool indifference beyond the mere performance of his duty.

Isabel never forgot that she was Henry Orth's daughter, and John Dunston never failed to remember that she had relegated him to his place and he never presumed.

The canoe bumped against the moss-grown logs that served as a landing place and Isabel, disdaining assistance, stepped ashore and received her books and little lunch basket from the guide.

"You will come for me at sunset, Dunston?" she asked.

"Yes, Miss Orth," was his terse reply as he paddled away.

Isabel went up the path to the hammock and fell to day dreaming. Strange to say, her thoughts had nothing to do with her host of friends, her devoted family circle, or several in-voluntarily suitors. They persisted in dwelling upon John Dunston's handsome eyes, his well-knit form and his rather grim young face.

"Of all the idiots!" Isabel's eyes flashed at her own weakness. "What does it matter who he is—it cannot possibly interest me. I am going to marry Freddy Moore—I've quite decided to answer his letter this evening. Let me see, a honeymoon yachting in the West Indies. How I shall adore it—and Freddy is a perfect dear!"

A vision of Mr. Freddy Moore, plump, fair, pink-cheeked and blue-eyed, panting breathlessly in her wake as she explored the unknown delights of foreign countries, had rather a dampening effect on Isabel's enthusiasm. She frowned and picked up a book.

Noon came and went. The dainty lunch was disposed of. The book was nearly finished. She closed her eyes and fell asleep. Almost immediately she awoke to the low rumble of thunder. The sky had darkened and from the northwest black clouds had piled to the zenith, obscuring the sun. The air was heavy with portent of the coming storm and birds flew to cover, uttering sharp, uneasy cries.

Isabel sprang to the ground and pushed back the locks from her hot cheeks. What should she do? There was no shelter on the island and she was afraid of thunderstorms.

What was Dunston? He might have been miles away with her father and, although recognizing the approaching storm, he might not have time to reach the island.

She felt a vague resentment that he had not remembered her there alone on the island. Not the displeasure of the mistress for a neglectful servant, but a woman's jealousy because she had been forgotten by one whose regard she valued.

There was a flash of lightning, and then another long roll of thunder. With her hands on her quivering throat, Isabel looked down and saw Dunston's form on the little landing. He was bending over the canoe. His head was bare and his white shirt was wet with perspiration. He had evidently hurried to rescue her, and yet he seemed to be in no great haste now. And the storm was almost ready to burst over their heads.

Suddenly he turned and came up the path.

"Oh, Dunston," she quavered, "do you think it's going to be a very bad storm?"

"Oh, no, Miss Orth," he said cheerfully, although his eyes evaded hers. "We saw it coming up and so I came after you. The wind is east and the storm is shifting to the southwest. See, it is quite clear overhead now."

"It is," agreed Isabel. Then, with a change of tone, she said, timidly: "It was very good of you to race over here after me. I just thought you had forgotten me, Mr. Dunston."

He reddened. It was the first time she had ever called him that. The golden sparks came into his eyes as they fell on her lovely flushed face, with its new look of shyness that was quite adorable.

"I could never forget you," he said grimly. "I wish to heaven I could!"

There was a long, palpitating silence.

Isabel's proud head drooped before his bold gaze.

"I hope you—never will, Mr. Dunston," she whispered.

He sprang to her side. "Just what do you mean by that?" he demanded fiercely.

Isabel lifted her eyes for an instant before the thick lashes veiled them. Dunston regarded her dizzily, his hands clenched.

"Do you remember that I am only a guide?" he asked sharply.

She nodded. "You are a man—such as I have never known before."

"You know nothing about me—you—Isabel, I love you. Will you marry me?"

Again she nodded.

"Unknown as I am?"

"Yes," she whispered.

"I have a confession to make," he murmured when his arms had enfolded her yielding form. "Two years ago I came to the woods dying from consumption. I lived like a primitive man in the open, earning my own living—and I have carried my life and splendid health. Now I am going back to my family and friends—oh, I am not a momentary darling. I belong to the Philadelphia Dunstons and my father is Seth Dunston of the Iron Works!"

"I don't care about that—it's you I love!" protested Isabel.

"And another confession," he whispered. "I arrived at the island while you were asleep in the hammock and I could not resist kissing you. I was going to tell you and take my discharge, for it was a cowardly thing to do! Tell me, sweetheart, that you forgive me!"

Isabel smiled adorably.

"I should never have forgiven you if you had not!" she said.

Giving an illustration. A newly enrolled volunteer was rather alarmed during his first experience of a sham battle, especially as he heard the colonel in command say that everything was to be done as in actual warfare. No sooner was the first blank cartridge fired than the frightened soldier dropped his gun and took to his heels.

"Hey! where are you running to?" shouted the captain, as he fled past.

"Oh," said the man, "it's all right, sir. I am just doing the same as I would do in actual war."

STATE RAILROAD NOW ALMOST SELF SUPPORTING

Austin, Texas, Aug. 31.—The state railroad, after having been a losing proposition since its construction six years ago, is now practically on a self supporting basis, according to C. H. Huddleston, general manager of the road. The line extends from Palestine to Rusk, 33 miles and has never made operating expenses. Mr. Huddleston believes the road within one year will be making money. One year ago it was losing $1,000 monthly in operation, but for the same month this year, the loss was approximately $100, despite the adverse business conditions. The road is now getting more inbound tonnage and reaching out for more. The employees wages also have been increased, Mr. Huddleston says, to conform with those paid by the big railroads of Texas.

SEVERAL CASES HEARD IN THE COUNTY COURT.

J. L. Trullinger, charged with theft, was acquitted by a jury in the county court Monday. He was alleged to have taken three loads of hay from the J. J. Perkins farm east of the city. Ed Junston plead guilty to a vagrancy charge and was fined five dollars. Monday afternoon a lunacy hearing was held, resulting in the defendant being declared sane.

There Are Others.

Tho' you feel that Fate has swatted you Right squarely in the face, And you're sure your trouble happens to but few, If you'll cast your eye around, I am sure there can be found. There are others who are lots worse off than you.

When you think that Life holds nothing, You decide that all is lost, And the outlook for you seems a murky blue, If you've time just for a minute To quit thinking of yourself, There are others who are lots worse off than you.

Somebody someone else had borne the Very trouble you own, And from such brave hearts you may well take your cue, For tho' they don't advertise them, For the world don't sympathize, There are folks who are lots worse off than you.

So my friend, buck up and meet it, And it won't be near so worse, Do your duty and to your better self be true, For self pity always weakens, Hide your troubles with a smile, For somewhere there's someone else who is lots worse off than you. -MRS. WILL GILBERT.

graphy and wonderful scenic effects than in the actual acting.

The Gen. The Exploits of Elaine will henceforth be shown on Tuesday, commencing today. The new exploits are said to be even more interesting than the first adventures. A four part Edison "Eugene Aram" an adaptation of Lord Dunsany's story is on the program. A story is given.

Eugene Aram, devoid of opportunity as far as scholasticism is concerned, is ambitious to learn, and his laborious course of study is a source of merit to Housman, a degenerated distant relation. Housman, chances to read a letter written by a man known as Clark to his son, Walter at Grassdale, England, to the effect that he is about to return to him with a quantity of jewels and sundry valuables, given him as a reward for saving a person's life in India. Housman sees many of the jewels and rarities and determines to rob Clark. He persuades Eugene to go in on the job with him. Clark is attacked by Housman and killed by a blow, as Eugene comes up. Clark seizes the latter's hand as Eugene prevents another blow from being struck. Clark is killed, however, and Eugene, refusing to accept any of the money, dismisses Housman after the body has been covered up with leaves.

At Grassdale, Walter is in love with Madeline, who treats him with pronounced sympathy in consideration of her sister, Eleanor, who loves Walter extremely. Five years pass and Eugene is a schoolmaster in Grassdale. His mind is tortured by the vision of Clark which he continues to have. Even his pupils, with the aid of significant poems and verses, seem to be conspiring to add to his discomfort. Eugene has met Madeline and they are enamored of each other, their association bringing the jealousy of Walter, who warns Madeline against Eugene. Housman and his associates force entrance into the Lester home and Eugene, who happens to be there at the time, shoots Housman, but not fatally. They recognize each other, and Eugene promises to meet Housman at the sign the next day. At the meeting Housman demands a large sum to keep from Eugene's friends the particulars of Clark's death. Subsequently Eugene goes to Housman's hotel in London and gives him the money and receives the assurance that Housman will leave the country. Walter continues to disparage Eugene in Madeline's eyes.

At The Theaters

The Lamar Airplane. The vaudeville program customary to the Airplane will consist instead of a musical comedietta by the Dely Tabloid Musical Stock Company. Tonight's pictures include a L-Ko comedy "The Curse of a Name" with Harry Gribbon and Alice Howell featured. The other picture is a two part drama, "The Weird Nemesis," tells a powerful, psychological story of hypnotism and its influence on the human mind. Written by G. E. Jenks, scenarized and produced by Jacques Jaccard from Mr. Jenks' story, the play holds the attention in gripping fashion in its entirety. Miss Hazel Buckham and Alan Forest enact the leading roles, supported by C. William Bachmann, Helen Leslie, Antrim Short and Fred Wilson.

The Empress. The comedian Charlie Chaplin is on today's bill in "His Favorite Pastime." A two part Domino, "Her Alibi" and a one part Reliance drama, "Griddle's Wife" with a two part Kay Bee, "The Hammer" makes up today's interesting program. Frank Rogers, Margaret Gibson and Leona Hutton are in the leads in the latter named picture, a synopsis of which is given.

Donald Barstow, an illustrator, is invited by Millie Blakely, a young married woman with whom he is fastidiously to spend the week end next at Simon Barstow's, who in turn, to collect the rent. Donald cannot pay and a heated argument ensues which is overheard by Gustave Schmitz, a chemist, living on the floor above. Donald leaves the studio building and borrows one hundred dollars. He returns to his room to pack. Meanwhile a stenographer, who has been tacking up a sign, in the hall, has carelessly left a hammer on the stair railing. An explosion in the chemist's quarters dislodges a vial of blood. It breaks and leaks through the ceiling on to Donald's coat, which he has thrown down on rushing for the train. The explosion also jars the hammer on the banisters. It falls, landing on the head of old Simon, who is leaning over the balcony on the floor below. His pocketbook falls from his hand, and with the hammer, drops beside a garbage can in the basement. Before Barstow leaves the building he has killed a rat with a piece of water pipe. The blood stained pipe is in his room, but Simon's niece, Molly has seen him carry the rat down to the garbage can, and the rat and water pipe in one hundred dollars are discovered upon Barstow. The mass of circumstantial evidence is used against him, and it is only through Molly's untiring efforts and the clever detective work of Dunbar, that the mystery at last is cleared up. The young illustrator's gratitude to Molly turns into love.

The Majestic. Today's feature at the Majestic is a Fox feature, "The Girl I Left Behind Me" with Robert Edison and Claire Whitney. David Belasco, master craftsman of all playwrights, had just witnessed, at a private view, in the Little Green Theatre, at the main office of the William Fox, productions extraordinary, a "run" of the screen version of his greatest success the glowing military drama "The Girl I Left Behind Me" a play of army life and Indian warfare as blood stirring as a trumpet call. He drew a long breath and settled back in his chair as the last stirring scenes in the relief of the beleaguered garrison were flashed.

"Wonderful," he exclaimed, "and not the least extraordinary part of it all is that when I wrote 'The Girl I Left Behind Me' which has always been and still is my favorite bit of work, the cinema had never been thought of. It would have been a wild dream indeed if I had ever thought for an instant that some day my play would be presented not on the boards or a theatre, with artificial lights and painted scenery, but on the actual ground where its action takes place, with a living background and every device possible to bring out its life and color."

The wizard of the theatre, who has accomplished more than any single man in the world in the art of bringing realism to the stage, was genuinely amazed at the wonderful settings and scenes in "The Girl I Left Behind Me" as produced by William Fox. Naturally the acting being in the hands of such artists as Robert Edison, in the leading part, Walter Hitchcock, Claire Whitney, Stuart Holmes and a host of players just as well known, supported by a company numbering more than three hundred people, is impressive. But Mr. Belasco appeared more struck by the photo-
