City council says no to budget plan

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

The Big Spring City Council tried and failed to approve the 1995-96 budget for the Howard County Appraisal District during a Tuesday meeting.

The preliminary budget is $449,931, which represents a 2.73 percent increase over the 1994-95 budget.

The first motion to approve the budget failed; a second vote on the Appraisal District's was tabled so the council could look further into some of the increases in the budget, including a 3.5 percent increase in salaries.

Other action taken by the council included:

- Approving a resolution authorizing the mayor to execute an agreement with Howard County for building rental for the Senior Citizens' Center.
- Approving a resolution

Budget put off until next meeting authorizing the mayor to execute an agreement with Rape Crisis/Victim Services for building rental.

- Approving a resolution authorizing and directing the mayor to execute an agreement, on behalf of the city, with the Howard County Water Control and Improvement District No. 1 for the sale of water.

- Approving a resolution authorizing expenditures from the capital revolving fund for ambulance service.

- Approving a resolution requesting the Texas Department of Transportation to prohibit left turns from the inside southbound lane of Gregg Street (U.S. 87) at its intersection with West First Street.

- Approving a resolution designating Settles Street as a four-way stop intersection.

In a 5-2 vote, the council also approved a resolution authorizing and directing the mayor to execute a quit-claim deed conveying a 0.178 acre tract of land to Carla Bauer.

The land Bauer petitioned the city for is next to land she already owns near the Pennsylvania/Lancaster area. According to the resolution, the city has no further use for the tract.

The Pennsylvania/Lancaster area, where the canyon is located, was the focus of the June 13 council meeting because of the inmate cleanup of the canyon area owned mostly by the First Church of the Nazarene and the city.

Fire department plans to produce 21 paramedics

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

The Big Spring Fire Department's paramedic training is on schedule to produce 21 certified paramedics by the time they take over the city's ambulance service.

Fire Chief Frank Anderson said fire suppression training will fall short by about six weeks, meaning there will have to be some changes in rotating of personnel until rookies complete their fire suppression training.

Anderson told the Big Spring City Council this would not create a problem, and the ambulance service will be ready Oct. 1.

The FD paramedic class has 21 members (14 rookies and seven firefighters), and Anderson said medical training should be completed in August.

"Things are looking very good, and trainer Charla Lewis said we're one of the best classes s.e.'s ever had," Anderson said.

A drawback Anderson said he doesn't want to dwell on is that adding a special skill or special training, such as EMT/paramedic training, increases the chance of losing employees.

The FD class has lost one member of the class to the Midland Fire Department, according to Anderson. He also informed the council the Abilene Fire Department is recruiting local firefighters as well.

Anderson said he does not anticipate any major problems because of outside recruitment.

The paramedic class completed EMT training and took the state exam on May 18, but results have not been received yet.

According to FD officials, training classes are already up and running as far as rotations (clinical situations and ambulance runs).

The FD is using Odessa, San Angelo, Colorado City, Snyder, and Lamesa ambulance services, as well as the emergency room at Scenic Mountain Medical Center, for rotations.

Officials said by using the Odessa and San Angelo services for rotations, the BSFD also gets a chance to see city-run operations first hand, which is valuable experience for the people in training because they see both ambulance and firefighting

ACCIDENT AT 18TH AND GOLIAD

A 16-year-old girl from Tarzan talks with a Big Spring firefighter after she and Boyce Patton, 68, of 1303 East 18th, were in an accident Wednesday. Both drivers say they had the green light at the intersection of 18th and Goliad when the accident occurred. However, witnesses say Patton reportedly ran the red light. No citations have been issued and the teen-ager and her passenger, Samore Morales, 48, of Tarzan, were treated and released from the hospital.

DARE rodeo coming to Colorado City

By MARY McATEER
Staff Writer

COLORADO CITY - DARE to have fun. DARE to rodeo.

The Colorado City DARE program and Chamber of Commerce invite you to the High Plains Junior Rodeo Association Junior Rodeo Thursday through Saturday.

The rodeo, a fund-raiser for the DARE program, will attract area competitors age 19 and younger. The seven age groups, each with separate divisions for boys and girls, are 8-and-under, 9-12, 13-15 and 16-19.

Participants will compete in barrels, poles, goat tying, break-away roping, ribbon roping, chute dogging, team roping, calf roping, calf and steer riding, steer stopping, and bull, bareback and saddlebronc riding.

DARE and Chamber members will be selling chances on a 1995 Ford Ranger pickup for $20 a chance. The drawing for the pickup will be Saturday during the rodeo, and you need not be present to win. All donations are tax-deductible.

Admission to the rodeo is $2, with all profits going to the Colorado City DARE program. Performances begin each evening at 7 p.m. at the Colorado City Rodeo Arena.

For more information, call the High Plains Junior Rodeo Association at (806) 763-8432.

Stanton will enter '95-96 with new superintendent

By MARY McATEER
Staff Writer

STANTON - Stanton ISD board members welcomed new Superintendent of Schools Jim White at their meeting June 22. White, who was the principal of Stanton High School, officially takes over as Superintendent from Johnny McGregor July 1.

The TAAS report shows, overall, significant gains in 1994-95, White says. Preliminary reports show increases of 12 to 15 percent in most areas of testing, with few drops. The board accepted the resignations of Jill Miller, William Miller, Ciltrisa Tucker, Robert Tucker, and Robbie Tollison, and approved the employment of four new teachers: Nanci Saenz, Michele Kriley, Karen White, and Joe Alexander.

An update to the student handbook was required to ensure eighth graders taking high school classes would get the same grade points for them as high school students taking honors classes.

The board opened and reviewed bids on construction of the new Middle School Band hall. DSA Construction will be the general contractor on the project.

Roof repairs will be required for leaks in both the high school and middle school roofs. The inside lanes of the track are wearing out. The two inside lanes will be re-laid, and a new surface will be applied to bring the inside and outside lanes to

Juror no-shows become an increasing problem in Texas

By KELLIE JONES
Staff Writer

Now that prospective jurors can be summoned from licensed drivers, the number of those who do not report has grown across Texas.

A criminal trial in McLennan County was declared a mistrial because so many potential jurors were absent. Only 110 out of the 250 to 300 that were summoned appeared.

Part of this is because of people moving out of the district or state and their new addresses not being updated to the computer files. During the last trial in the 118th District Court, 140 jury summons were sent out with only 46 appearing. District Clerk Glenda Brasel says most of those who did not show had moved. In another trial, 36 out of the 75 people summoned showed up for jury duty.

Brasel says the law does allow judges to assess a fine for those who do not show up. It is considered a contempt action or failure to appear and can cost anywhere from $100 to $1,000. If a person makes a false claim on their jury summons, they can be fined $10 to $100.

According to county records, 125 notices were sent out for an April trial with only 48 showing up. Wanda Anderson, county clerk employee, says 54 of the notices were considered excused or the person had An amendment to the 1994-95 budget was requested to cover salary for the new high school principal, since he took over the job early. The 1995-96 budget is still in the very early stages of preparation.

Mr. MacGregor provided the board with information about registration for the TASB convention in September.

GARDEN CITY - End of year procedures were a major item on the agenda at the Glasscock County Independent School District board meeting June 19.

The preliminary report on 1994-95 TAAS testing is favorable, according to Superintendent Charles Zachry, but officials are reserving final judgment until all the state results are in.

Karla Atkinson was employed as an English as a Second Language teacher in the elementary school.

In other action, the board approved updates to the elementary and secondary handbooks and minor revisions to testing criteria in the Gifted and Talented program, and extended the district's agreement with the Region 18 Educational Service Center's Math and Science

FORSAN - Forsan ISD added three waiver days for staff development to the 1995-96 calendar in school board action June 22. The three additional days mean teachers will return to school August 14, while students return August 18.

The 1995-96 schedule has not been resolved, according to Superintendent George White. Forsan officials had considered an eight period block schedule, but its adoption will be too costly. A seven-period schedule with a modified block two days a week is under consideration. No new positions have been proposed for 1995-96.

The district has received a grant of $11,500 from the Texas Education Agency for installation of a T-Star satellite system. District officials are investigating options to allow purchase and installation of equipment in the greatest number of classrooms possible.

The 1994-95 budget was amended to shift $2,000 into the co-curricular function.

Sheila Stockwell has been employed as a fifth-grade teacher.

The board discussed the 1995-96 budget, including revisions to the district's schedule of teachers' salaries necessitated by SBI, but no decision was made. A budget workshop will be scheduled during the summer.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Groups still angry over veto of guardian bill

AUSTIN (AP) — Supporters of a bill that would have created a state coordinating board for guardianship services continue to urge Gov. George W. Bush to reconsider his veto of the measure.

Bush has explained his veto by saying that instead of improving the guardianship process, the bill would only create another level of bureaucracy and complicate the existing system.

The bill would have created the Guardianship Resource Board, a nonprofit corporation charged with helping urban and rural communities organize and find funding for guardianship services for the elderly and incapacitated.

Austin funnels extra cash into lawsuit

AUSTIN (AP) — A protracted legal battle over the South Texas Project nuclear power plant is about to get more expensive for Austin.

The Austin City Council is expected to approve another $5 million today for the city's lawsuit against Houston Lighting & Power Co., the majority owner of the Matagorda County plant.

The increase would bring the city's investment in the lawsuit to $10 million.

City Manager Jesus Garza said the city must spend the money or risk future problems with the plant.

Court upholds death sentence

AUSTIN (AP) — Twenty years after the murder of their son along the embankment of a Dallas river, Bennie and Mabry McMahan still wait for justice.

Their wait coincides with that of their son's killer, who has been on death row for 19 years while his case winds through state and federal courts.

Ronald J. Curtis, "Buffalo" Chambers has been tried three times for the murder of Mike McMahan, a 22-year-old Texas Tech engineering student. All three times Chambers was convicted and sentenced to die, but his conviction was overturned twice on technicalities.

On Wednesday, the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals upheld his third conviction, and the McMahans are hoping this one will stick.

"It's been a long 20 years," Mrs. McMahan, 71, said in an interview from her home in Kennewick, Wash. "We haven't been able to let Mike go in peace."

Exxon sued over substance-abuse policy

DALLAS (AP) — Exxon Corp. has said it will "vigorously defend" a policy that has landed the company in federal court for excluding all employees with a record of past substance abuse from some safety-sensitive jobs.

The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission filed suit against Exxon Wednesday in Dallas, accusing the company of violating the Americans with Disabilities Act.

Exxon's "nationwide, blanket policy" violates the law, which says employers must assess individually whether workers can safely do their jobs, the agency said.

Two tickets win for Wednesday's Lotto

AUSTIN (AP) — Two tickets, bought in Weslaco and Anthony, correctly matched all six numbers drawn Wednesday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said.

The jackpot was worth $4 million.

The numbers drawn from a field of 50 were: 26, 28, 30, 33, 35 and 39.

Two die in San Angelo crash

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Two pilots from Pflugerville have died following a plane crash in a remote field during a severe thunderstorm.

The pair took off Wednesday night from Mathis Field, on their way to Austin. The plane attempted to return to the airfield, but crashed, said Tom Green County Justice of the Peace Eddie Howard.

The bodies were found in the wreckage early Thursday, said Howard.

The victims were Dave Jayesh Shantilal, 33, and Rajil Narendra Mehta, 23, according to Howard. They reportedly tried to take off from San Angelo's Mathis Field, on their way to Austin,

When they realized the weather was too dangerous for flying, they tried to return to the airfield.

The plane crashed before it reached the airfield, sliding about 90 yards through the remote pasture.

Emergency crews had to either be flown in by helicopter or hike in about by foot late Wednesday night due to the storm. A U.S. Customs helicopter was recruited to find the crash site and possible survivors. The wreckage was spotted just after midnight.

One of the men was thrown about 50 feet from the plane and the other was found still belted to his seat under the plane.

Pieces of the plane were scattered all over the field. Several minor fires were quickly extinguished.

Laughlin asked to resign after switch of parties

WASHINGTON (AP) — Now that Texas Congressman Greg Laughlin has jumped to the Republican Party, the chairman of the Democratic House campaign committee is formally calling on him to resign and run in a special election.

In a letter Wednesday to Laughlin, Rep. Martin Frost wrote: "To deny the residents of the 14th Congressional District the opportunity to decide for themselves how they want to be represented in Congress is irresponsible and an abuse of their trust."

Laughlin announced Monday that he was switching parties, becoming the second House Democrat to defect since Republicans regained control of Congress last November. He pegged his action in part on the declining influence of conservatives on the Democratic agenda.

Alluding to Republicans' promise of a coveted House Ways and Means Committee seat, Frost wrote: "You may like the deal you cut, but the residents of Texas' 14th Congressional District should also have their say — and a special election is the only way to make sure their voices are heard."

Laughlin rejected his fellow Texan's call to resign.

"If Martin Frost understood my district, he'd understand why I did it," Laughlin said, attributing his last re-election not to the Democratic label but his conservative values and voting record.

"They're going to take shots at me for a while," the West Columbia lawmaker said. "I expect it."

Laughlin said the positive response from his district has been "overwhelming" since his announcement. "All I can say is my longtime friend Martin Frost would be sick to his stomach if he'd heard the comments I've been receiving from the 14th Congressional District."

He also rejected the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee's call to return some $79,000 in party contributions received over the years, saying he's raised far more money for Democrats than he's received.

"If they want to be fair, they'd return the money I have raised," he said.

Texas Republicans were planning to celebrate Laughlin's entry into the fold during their regular Thursday luncheon. With his shift, Texas' House contingent now has an 18-12 Democratic-Republican split.

While Ways and Means Chairman Bill Archer of Houston has paved the way for Laughlin to get a seat on the powerful committee, a date hasn't been set for the appointment.

Defendant in KFC case still fighting over his bond

HENDERSON (AP) — James Earl Mankins Jr., capital murder defendant in the Kentucky Fried Chicken slayings, has filed written notice that he will appeal a June 16 order denying him another chance to reduce his bond.

Unhappy with repeated bond reduction denials by 4th District Judge Donald Ross, 42-year-old Mankins Jr. sought relief Tuesday from the 12th Court of Appeals in Tyler.

Mankins Jr., of Kilgore, was indicted April 27 on five charges of capital murder in connection with the Sept. 23, 1983, slayings of five people abducted from the now-defunct chicken restaurant.

The son of former state Rep. James Earl Mankins Sr., Mankins Jr. remains in the Rusk County Jail on $2.5 million bond, $500,000 on each charge.

Following a May 11 hearing, Judge Ross denied Mankins' request for bond reduction and rejected the defendant's claims his bond was excessive and intentionally punitive.

He also denied additional bond reduction requests June 16 and June 23, citing failure by Mankins to fully exhaust all possible resources for making bail.

Stay away from strays; rabies threat still exists

Perhaps signs on fences in Big Spring and Howard County should read, "Beware of Cat." Sure, that stray kitty that prowls round your house looking for food may be cute. Or the kittens that live under your house may be so adorable, you'll get them the second they come near enough. But underneath those furry coats may lurk something sinister: rabies. This disease is still a problem throughout the entire state, and local animal control officers warn cats seem to be the domestic animal in this area most likely to have the disease. Be aware of stray animals around your house and neighborhood. If you have children, warn them to be careful where they play and not to get near any stray animals they spot. If you want to shelter a homeless critter, pick one from the Humane Society, where they have been spayed or neutered and received all vaccinations. It's difficult to turn away from feeding or helping a stray animal that doesn't seem to have a home. However, the risk of being bitten just isn't worth it, especially when that bite may require more treatment than just an antibiotic and tetanus shot.

'50s 'cool' lost in PC of the 90s

It was the kind of invitation that should be promptly tossed away. A party with a theme. Even worse, a theme that required wearing a costume. I haven't worn a costume since a painful evening visiting friends in Florida. One friend, who worked in real estate development, urged me to join him at a costume party being given by a big developer. "You can wear something I brought back from the Middle East," he said, producing a caftan, the flowing robe worn by many Arab men. And the head wear, known in some quarters as a kaffiyeh. So I slipped into the outfit. With dark glasses, a deep vacation tan and aquiline features (a kindly way of describing an eagle beak), I made a passable Arab sheik. My friend took the easy route, slipping on a dark business suit and a fez. When we walked into the cocktail party, it was obvious by the way the other guests stared and whispered that they weren't impressed. "You said this was a costume party," I hissed at my friend. "I (ital) thought (end ital) it was a costume party," he said, whipping off his fez. "But I guess I was wrong." I spent the rest of the evening mumbling to investor-seeking real estate hustlers: "No, I am not in oil, since my poor country has none. Sand, I export our excellent desert sand to your beaches. Want to buy a ton or two?" That was when I vowed to never again put on a costume. But the blond accepted the recent invitation before I could express my revulsion. "It's a 1950s theme," she said, "so that shouldn't be difficult." She was right. I could wear my everyday clothes, which are timeless. "No," she said, "your clothes are just old and baggy. You have to do better than that." That's why I found myself in a men's clothing store, shopping for the first pair of jeans I have owned or worn since the late 1950s. I'm aware that some men wear jeans into their middle years. But I assume that they are making a personal statement. The only statement I make with clothing is that I am not naked. The youthful salesperson said: "You'll want the loose cut, I suppose. It gives you more room in the ... uh ..."

Mike Royko
Columnist

"Nonsense. I happen to be blessed with the white European male's inconspicuous bottom and will wear the traditional lean cut." The night of the party, I pulled on the jeans (the more costly kind that are faded, frayed and old when they are new), and an entire era in America began coming back. I got a sudden urge to go swaggering through the parking lot of the Super Dawg at Milwaukee and Devon. Then I slipped into white socks and old loafers. And a simple cotton T-shirt. Plain white with no pictures or lettering. In the '50s, nobody wore T-shirts that gave a shirt maker free advertising or expressed undying love for a particular rock band. Only bowling shirts and softball jerseys had lettering. And if your shirt expressed a philosophy, such as "Life Sucks," the cops might have grabbed you. Nor were jeans worn with button-down shirts, ties and blue blazers. This would have been a sign of schizophrenia. Jeans and a white T-shirt. It shows what a practical generation we were. You could wear it on a movie date, while hanging out at the Good Guys Social Athletic Club, or when heading way out west on North Avenue for Saturday night drag racing. Really getting into it, I slipped on a Timex with a metal stretch band and scowled at myself through faintly ominous dark glasses. Then came the final touch. A pack of smokes folded into the left sleeve of the T-shirt and a Zippo folded into the right sleeve. Almost perfect. But something was lacking. What was it? Of course. The hair should have been slicked back and held in place with several squirts of Brilliantine or Wildroot Cream Oil. Oh, well, without the help of Hairline Creations, some things are no longer possible. In my full '50s splendor, I said to the blond: "What do you think? Kind of remind you of James Dean?" She thought for a moment and said: "Maybe Jimmy Dean. What's wrong with your upper arms? Those lumps?" "Those aren't lumps. That's the way we used to carry our smokes and Zippo." "There's no smoking at this party." "You said it was a '50s party.'" "It is, but this is the '90s." "Then I'll change shirts." "Into what?" "Something that says: 'Life Sucks.'" WORLD

No trade war - U.S., Japan make a deal

GENEVA (AP) — Dodging imminent American sanctions, Japan promised on Wednesday to open its long-shielded auto market to the United States in a sudden agreement that staved off an outright trade war between the world's two largest economies.

The real effects of the agreement could take years to determine. But President Clinton hailed it as a breakthrough that will give the United States access to Japan's mammoth auto market and create thousands of American jobs. The pact that culminated two years of negotiations came hours before Washington's deadline to impose 100 percent tariffs on 13 Japanese luxury car models, including Toyota's Lexus and Honda's Acura lines. The talks had long appeared doomed.

"We all went from pessimism to the agreement without stopping at optimism," said U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor. Aware of the high domestic political stakes, both sides claimed victory. Clinton said the agreement would lead to a major increase in sales of U.S. automobiles and spare parts to Japanese companies. The United States dropped its threat to impose the sanctions against $5.9 billion worth of luxury Japanese automobiles, due to take effect at midnight Wednesday.

What may have clinched the governmental accord was the United States' dropping its insistence on numerical targets to measure increasing sales.

Japanese Prime Minister Tomiichi Murayama, above, hailed the U.S.-Japan trade agreement, saying it could maintain the free-trade system.

Japanese Trade Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto said the accord excluded targets. Instead, Washington accepted "voluntary" plans by top Japanese car companies to boost purchases. "This agreement is specific. It is measurable. It will achieve real, concrete results," Clinton said in Washington. "I have insisted on it from the start."

Hashimoto said Tokyo had withdrawn its complaint against the United States before the World Trade Organization — the global trade police officer — in return for Washington dropping the sanctions threat. "This successful agreement is a victory not just for the United States and Japan, but also for the newly created WTO and its member countries," Hashimoto said.

Some had feared unilateral U.S. action would undermine the authority of the new international body, which is meant to help settle disputes.

A trade war would have undermined global business confidence and soured political relations. There had been indications that Japan would have retaliated against American products.

The dollar surged in morning trading in New York on news of the agreement. It rose to 85.40 Japanese yen, up from 84.35 yen before the accord was reached. It rose to 1.4065 German marks, from 1.385 marks.

At the heart of the auto dispute was the U.S. trade deficit with Japan, which reached $66 billion last year, more than half in the automotive sector.

"This agreement helps to close the gap," Clinton said. "This commitment means thousands of new jobs for American workers — jobs for Americans making parts sold in Japan, jobs for Americans making parts for Japanese cars sold in the United States."

Hashimoto said benefits of the deal would be extended to other trading partners. He said Tokyo had achieved its goals because the deal between the two governments excluded American demands to measure increases in sales of spare parts and in the numbers of dealerships.

"With regard to numerical targets, the Japanese stance that this is outside the scope of the government is maintained and we are able to maintain the principles of free trade and economy," Hashimoto said.

Explosion shocks S. Korea

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — A posh five-story department store in Seoul, crowded with evening shoppers, collapsed after an explosion today. Hundreds of people were reported hurt or trapped.

The injured, bloodied and crying for help, were taken to hospitals in ambulances and helicopters.

"It's like a war-devastated zone," one witness, Park Donyoung, told SBS TV. "Most parts of the building are gone. You can see right into the basement." A gas explosion was suspected, the station said.

Hundreds, perhaps more than 1,000, people were believed inside the Sampoong Department Store at the time, shortly before 6 p.m., the station said.

Park, who works at a gas station across from the department store, told SBS that one of the two department store buildings caved in after a loud boom.

Another witness told Yonhap TV that the building collapsed in "a few seconds."

"The whole building is gone, it just disappeared," said the woman, Lee Hyun-suk, who lives in an apartment near the store.

Rubble is scattered after Seoul's Sampoong Department Store collapsed Thursday. The collapse left dozens of people dead and at least 175 people were seriously injured. The cause was believed to be shoddy construction, although a gas explosion was not ruled out.

Farmers, police shoot it out in Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Farmers on their way to a protest rally engaged in a fierce gun battle with police who had stopped their truck at a roadblock in rugged mountains overlooking Acapulco. The hourlong clash left 14 people dead and 18 wounded.

Police decided to search the truck filled with about 30 people and ordered the passengers out. One man on the truck took a machete and slashed the arm of an officer, said Gustavo Lea Godoy, a Guerrero state judicial police officer.

The passengers were armed and shooting broke out, Olea Godoy said. Four police officers were among the 14 people killed in the Wednesday morning firefight, he said.

Red Cross workers dragged bodies off muddy roads in a drenching rain, and tensions lingered in and around Coyuca de Benitez, a mountain town about 15 miles northwest of the beach resort.

At nightfall, about 100 people invaded the Coyuca de Benitez town hall and threatened to set fire to the building to protest the police action.

News reports said the protesters were mostly members of a local chapter of the opposition Democratic Revolutionary Party, and were holding eight municipal employees hostage inside the building.

All those on the truck were farmers from the area, on their way to Coyuca de Benitez for a protest rally to demand that the mayor resign because of bad government, according to news reports.

Olea Godoy told reporters that police were stopping vehicles at random in the area to check for weapons and drugs.

He said the shootout started around 10:35 a.m. and lasted almost one hour.

Some villagers complained they were protesting peacefully despite official claims they were armed.

Television reports showed angry villagers attacking police with sticks and rocks for several hours and also blocking Red Cross volunteers from picking up the dead and wounded.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Clinton feeling pressure over base closings

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton is under pressure from California legislators who say recommended military base closings could devastate their state. Others, however, are cautioning him against politicizing the process just to secure California's votes in next year's election.

"What we're talking about is fairness here and this is not a fair round," Sen. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif., said Wednesday in urging Clinton to reject recommendations from an independent commission that nine California bases be closed or realigned.

The Pentagon has voiced concerns about the recommendations by the eight-member, non-partisan commission, and the White House has indicated that it is seriously considering rejecting the list. Clinton must make a decision by July 15.

Clinton orders changes for federal buildings

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton is ordering immediate improvements in security at federal office buildings following a Justice Department finding that most facilities fail to meet new standards adopted after the Oklahoma City bombing.

Under the new standards, the devastated Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City would have had shatterproof exterior glass and security for adjacent street parking.

Of 347 large federal office buildings that were part of the study, just 15 percent X-ray incoming packages and mail; less than half have parking controls that meet the new standards; and only a quarter have visitor and employee identification and control systems, the Justice Department reported.

Group tries to fight Internet smut

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hoping to shield children from sexually explicit communications — and head off congressional intervention — an industry group wants to place the equivalent of an electronic fig leaf over certain parts of Internet.

The Information Technology Association of America announced Wednesday it is crafting a plan for a voluntary system to let people identify and block offensive materials that come into their homes from the global computer network. Association members include IBM, AT&T and Microsoft.

The association's move toward self-regulation comes weeks after the Senate adopted a plan that would ban materials and communications deemed indecent from being transmitted over the Internet and other computer services.

Welfare legislation moving slowly

WASHINGTON (AP) — The GOP drive to give states responsibility for the poor is stalled in the Senate, caught in a tug-of-war over federal money that pits North against South and tied up in a fight over mothers who can't afford to support their kids.

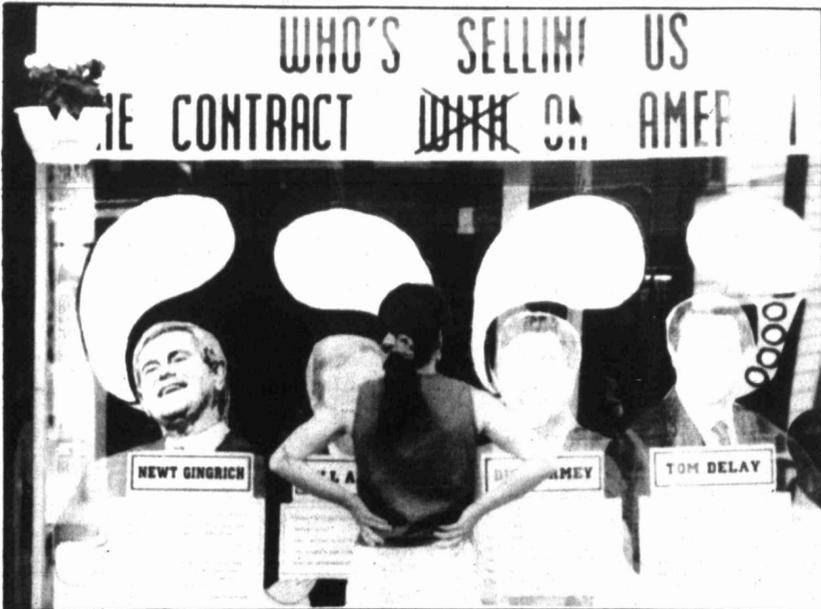

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., had hoped to open debate this month on legislation to overhaul the welfare system. But he was forced to postpone voting until mid-July or even later when Republican differences began to surface along ideological and regional lines.

"Everything is at a dead stop," says Robert Rector, a welfare expert with the conservative Heritage Foundation who was influential in shaping welfare legislation that passed the House in March.

Conservatives say the Senate bill, written by Finance Committee Chairman Bob Packwood, R-Ore., is a disgrace and does not deserve to be called reform because it fails to address rising rates of out-of-wedlock births.

Southerners complain the legislation locks in a funding formula that punishes fast-growing states. Southern lawmakers are pushing an alternative that would take money from the North and spread it across the Sunbelt.

STATING THEIR CASE

A pedestrian reads a political window display in the Buch Spieler music shop in Montpelier, Vt., Wednesday. Store owner Fred Wilbur has had only one complaint about the display, which criticizes the Republican Contract with America.

Packwood escapes charges over ex-wife's job offers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Bob Packwood's political career remains in the hands of the Senate Ethics Committee, but he no longer faces the possibility of criminal prosecution over job offers lobbyists made to his ex-wife.

The Justice Department announced Wednesday it decided against prosecuting Packwood and closed its investigation of allegations the Oregon Republican had solicited the offers in an attempt to reduce his alimony payments.

He still faces Ethics Committee charges concerning the job offers and complaints that he engaged in sexual misconduct and altered his diaries to obstruct the panel's probe.

He was to appear before the committee today for the third day in a row, said Sen. Richard Bryan of Nevada, the panel's senior Democrat.

In addition, the Justice Department could again become involved if the ethics panel comes across any other potential criminal violations — such as obstruction of justice — as it works toward completion of its investigation.

"The lifting of the potential criminal charges is certainly very helpful for him," said Bill Lurch, a political science professor at Oregon State University.

"But the fact there is no criminal indictment forthcoming ought not tell us that Packwood is necessarily out of the woods regarding the ethical probe," Lurch said in a telephone interview from Corvallis, Ore.

Flag-burning law not a sure thing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite overwhelming support in the House, a constitutional amendment to curtail flag desecration faces a tough struggle in the Senate, with one key Democrat opposed and the leading sponsor conceding the measure is shy of the two-thirds majority needed for passage.

"Right now, we are very close to the 67 votes we need in the Senate," Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, said shortly after the House approved the measure Wednesday.

At the same time, Sen. Joseph Biden of Delaware, the senior Democrat on the committee, said he would oppose the measure as drafted. "I'm not going to vote for that amendment," which would permit each state to write its own flag-protection laws, he said. Two other lawmakers, Democratic Sen. Bob Kerrey of Nebraska and Republican Sen. John Chafee of Rhode Island, circulated a letter outlining their opposition. "We would be carving out an exception, small though it may be, to our constitutional guarantee of free speech," they wrote.

In addition, they said "community opposition and disdain" is deterrent enough to flag desecration, and only seven incidents of flag burning have occurred in the past year.

No date has been set for a Senate vote on the measure, which cleared the House on a lopsided vote of 312-120, 24 more than the two-thirds majority necessary.

The measure permits Congress and the states to enact laws to prohibit flag desecration. The bill is a reaction to recent Supreme Court rulings that threw out such laws as a violation of constitutional protections of free speech.

A cheer went up from lawmakers on the House floor as the measure climbed past the 290 votes needed for passage. Spectators in the gallery overlooking the chamber joined in the celebration.

Burn your bra, burn your pantyhose, burn your BVDs. But don't burn the flag.

Rep. James Traficant D-Ohio

While majority Republicans supplied the impetus, the leadership seemed to attach less importance to the measure than to other key bills that have cleared this year. House Speaker Newt Gingrich, who frequently holds the gavel on important votes, was not presiding when roll was called.

Supporters said the measure was necessary to reverse the Supreme Court's rulings and to "protect Old Glory," as Rep. Gerald Solomon, R-N.Y., said.

"As tombstones are not for toppling, as churches and synagogues and places of worship are not for vandalizing, flags are not for burning," House Judiciary Committee Chairman Henry Hyde, R-Ill., said.

Added Rep. James Traficant, D-Ohio, "Burn your bra, burn your pantyhose, burn your BVDs. But don't burn the flag."

Unabomber puts entire nation on defensive

California airports up their security

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Security was tightened at airports across California today after a threat purportedly by the elusive terrorist Unabomber to blow up an airliner at Los Angeles International Airport.

"We treat these things as being very serious," San Francisco International Airport spokesman Ron Wilson said.

Unabomber task force sources in San Francisco who spoke on condition of anonymity said there are questions about the letter's authenticity. It did not include the entire nine-digit code number used by the Unabomber in the past, and the serial bomber has never before directed threats at specific targets.

The Federal Aviation Administration warned passengers traveling from airports in California to be alert for suspicious baggage and to expect delays because of security. Los Angeles police put more officers at the airport, and passengers at the San Francisco airport were asked to show picture identification at baggage check-ins.

The threat appeared in a short letter received Tuesday by the San Francisco Chronicle and published in its entirety today.

It read: "WARNING. The terrorist group FC, called Unabomber by the FBI, is planning to blow up an airliner out of Los Angeles International Airport some time during the next six days. To prove that the writer of this letter knows something about FC, the first two digits of their identifying number are 55."

The FBI did not confirm that the letter was from the unidentified person who has killed three people and injured 23 with 16 package bombs since 1978.

An FBI statement said the letter had similar "language, content and other characteristics of previous letters known to have originated from the Unabomber suspect."

The "55" portion of the number is not a secret. The FBI has previously acknowledged that the full identifying number is in the form of a genuine Social Security number assigned to Northern California, although the person holding that card has been cleared. Many Northern California numbers start with the numbers 55.

The FBI says the Unabomber probably lives near Sacramento.

The Unabomber has used the nine-digit number to identify himself in letters to The New York Times.

"FC" refers to a group that the Unabomber has cited in previous letters. The suspect claims to be a member of the group, an anti-technology anarchist organization. The FBI says the Unabomber works alone.

The letter to the Chronicle reflected the Unabomber's apparent fascination with wood, giving a return address of "Fredrick Benjamin Issac Wood, 549 Wood Street, Woodlake, CA, 93286." There is a Woodlake, in central California's Tulare County, but apparently nobody there by that name.

The Unabomber has used wood references before in targets, and often encases his bombs in wooden boxes.

A 1979 Unabomber attack involved an altitude-triggered mail bomb that partially detonated in the cargo hold of an American Airlines flight; 12 people were treated for smoke inhalation.

The most recent victim of the Unabomber, so named because nine of his explosive devices were aimed at universities, was timber industry lobbyist Gilbert Murray, killed in his Sacramento office on April 24.

The bomb was mailed from Oakland on April 20, along with four letters. In one of the letters, to The New York Times, he railed against industrial society and the scientists who support it. He also offered to stop the bombing if major media outlets published a lengthy manifesto.

Only Penthouse magazine publisher Bob Guccione has offered to comply.

U.S., Russia write space history

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — An American shuttle docked with a Russian space station floating 245 miles above Earth today in an extraordinary display of scientific cooperation between two former rivals.

It was only the second time ships from two countries linked up in space: The first was 20 years ago between an American Apollo capsule and a Soviet Soyuz.

They were 245 miles over Central Asia near the Russian-Mongolian border when shuttle commander Robert "Hoot" Gibson eased the Atlantis to first contact of mating rings on the shuttle and the Russian space station Mir.

"We have capture," said Gibson, precisely on time, at 9 a.m. EDT. The Mir commander gave a similar message to his home base.

With crews of both countries on each of the ships, the space-to-ground loops to flight controllers in Houston and Kaliningrad crackled in English and Russian.

The Mir was the passive partner in the union; its only task was to stay at the proper attitude, and it did.

The entire final sequence was visible to ground controllers. One screen showed the view of the approaching shuttle from the Mir. The other displayed what Gibson was seeing, a greenish target coming closer, slowly, slowly.

Cameras from Mir captured images of astronauts and cosmonauts waving and smiling from the Atlantis windows.

Atlantis was ferrying a fresh pair of cosmonauts to Mir for the next two months; the Mir crew — two Russians and American Norman Thagard — looked forward to returning to Earth next week aboard the shuttle.

Gibson had the demanding task of steering the 100-ton Atlantis to within three inches of the 123-ton Mir, at a closing rate no faster than one foot in 10 seconds, while the two ships sped in tandem around the Earth at 17,500 mph.

He had only two minutes to do this, so that Mir could maintain contact with a Russian ground station. The shuttle had no such constraints; it is in near-constant contact with Mission Control via satellite.

The danger was that the two behemoths would bump with too much force.

"It's not an easy thing to do, but ... it's the kind of thing you can train to do," Gibson, a former fighter and test pilot, said before the flight. "It's kind of along the lines of some of the stuff I used to do, air-to-air refueling and any of those precision tasks."

The docking tested a technique needed for building an international space station beginning in 1997. It was the first of seven dockings planned before construction starts.

San Antonio man earns national heroism award

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Harry M. Rakosky Jr. hadn't even planned to visit the White House the day shots were fired. He was just walking along Pennsylvania Avenue, "kind of daydreaming," when he happened upon the frantic scene.

He heard bangs that sounded like firecrackers, then saw a crowd fleeing and a man with a gun slung over his shoulder.

"I told my foot to move," said Rakosky, a former security officer who used to guard embassies under construction. He grabbed the man from behind and landed on top of him, then restrained him until help arrived.

For his bravery and quickness in tackling Francisco Martin Duran on Oct. 29, Rakosky was being honored today by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission. The ceremony comes the same day Duran was to be sentenced for attempting to assassinate the president.

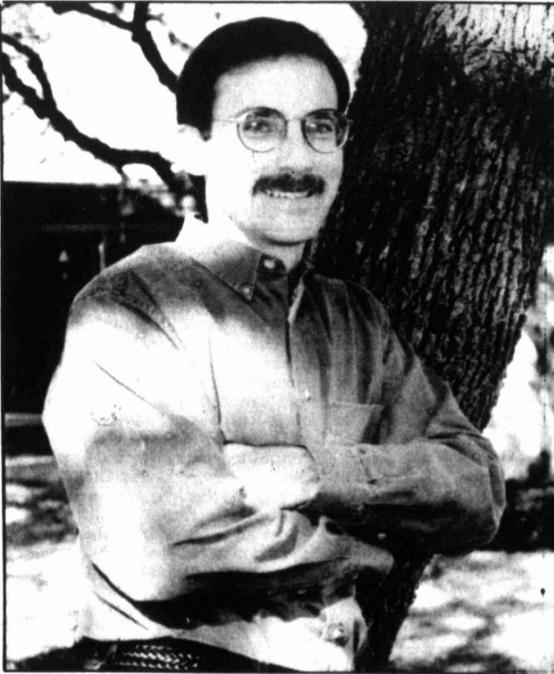

Rakosky, 34, of San Antonio, was one of 15 people to be commended by the Pittsburgh organization, founded in 1904 by industrialist Andrew Carnegie to honor those who risk or lose their lives trying to save others. Heroes or their survivors receive $2,500 and a medal.

Among the other winners, five saved or tried to save others from burning vehicles or homes, and six stepped in while people were about to drown. Another helped save a man from an attacking bull. Two others stepped in as people were being assaulted.

Three of the 15 died during rescue attempts. No one was injured when Duran peppered the White House with 29 rounds.

Authorities believe Duran was about to load a new magazine into his semiautomatic assault rifle when Rakosky grabbed him. Rakosky, in Washington for a workplace violence seminar, first took cover behind a concrete barrier when he heard the shots. When he saw Duran looking down at his gun, though, he decided to go after him.

Harry Rakosky, 34, of San Antonio will be honored today by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission. Rakosky tackled the man who fired shots at the White House last October.

Man accused in bizarre sex case

DENVER (AP) — A man accused of pouring varnish on his wife during sex instead of the honey and chocolate syrup she was expecting has pleaded guilty to assault and disturbing the peace.

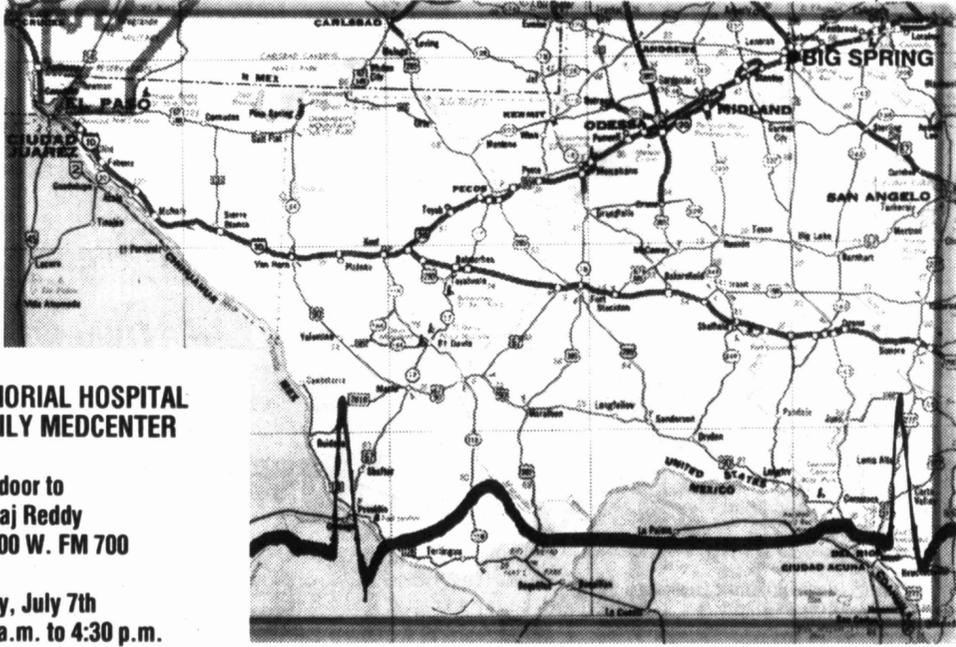

David Joseph Zaba's wife, Angela, claimed that the varnish made her hair fall out.

Under a plea bargain, the case will be dismissed if Zaba stays out of trouble for a year. He could have gotten two years in jail and nearly $2,000 in fines.

"The allegations were unusual even for the wide range of cases we see in Denver County Court. I guess the city attorney wanted to take a bite out of crime," said Judge Larry Bohning, who accepted the plea bargain Tuesday. "Many city attorneys and public defenders seemed to be following the case."

Zaba, 32, and his wife have been using food as part of their sex life for six or seven years, according to a police report on the March 18 incident. The report said Ms. Zaba "stated that this is not the first time that he has used varnish, but she has had enough."

Local golf pro honored

By STEVE REAGAN
Sportswriter

Al Patterson helped give golf a boost in Fort Myers, Fla. almost 30 years ago. Now, Fort Myers wants to pay him back.

Patterson, the golf pro at Comanche Trail Park in Big Spring, will be honored with a hall of fame induction in Fort Myers this weekend - but they had to work at it to get him to accept the honor.

Patterson's son-in-law originally told him about the plans a few weeks ago, but the pro declined the invitation.

"This is kind of the peak season for golf around here," he said, "and when you have bent-grass greens like we have here, you have to check on them all the time to make sure the heat doesn't kill them."

The Fort Myers group was insistent, however, shipping him tickets to the event. Patterson finally relented.

As assistant golf pro in the Fort Myers area in 1957, Patterson helped the town's junior golf program get off the ground. It soon grew to more than 100 golfers, and the town's high school golf team won a state title in 1961. Among the program's graduates is current PGA pro Nolan Henke.

Patterson leaves today for Fort Myers, where he and others instrumental in establishing and maintaining the program will be feted with a reception Saturday before the hall of fame induction Sunday.

"It will be interesting to see some of the folks," Patterson said. "I guess I haven't changed much, but I'm sure they have."

It will be fun to see some of those kids."

NBA Commissioner David Stern, right, congratulates Cherokee Parks of Duke after the Dallas Mavericks selected him with the 12th overall pick of the NBA draft Wednesday.

Underclassmen highlight annual basketball draft

TORONTO (AP) - No one made a big deal about Joe Smith when he first got to Maryland in 1993.

Sure, he had good size and an impressive physique, but the top prep player that year from his home state of Virginia was a guy named Jerry Stackhouse, who went to play for Dean Smith along with a highly touted big man, Rasheed Wallace.

In two seasons with the Terrapins, Smith blossomed, and on Wednesday night he became the top pick in the NBA draft, ahead of the two Tar Heel sophomores.

"When I got to Maryland, no one expected me to have as successful a season as I had," Smith said after the Warriors made him only the third sophomore ever selected first. "I came out and surprised everybody, even myself. My confidence just skyrocketed from Game 1, and it never went down."

Smith, who at 6-foot-10 played center in college, but will be a power forward in the pros, led a crop of 19- and 20-year-olds at the top of the draft. One, fifth pick Kevin Garnett, is just out of high school.

Alabama's Antonio McDyess was taken second by the Los Angeles Clippers, then traded along with Randy Woods to Denver for Brent Barry, the 15th pick, and forward Rodney Rogers.

Stackhouse was selected next, by Philadelphia, followed by Wallace, chosen fourth by Washington. McDyess, Stackhouse and Wallace all left school after two seasons.

Minnesota went fifth, producing the biggest question mark of the draft, Chicago high schooler Kevin Garnett. The rail-thin 6-10 forward is only the fourth high school player ever selected in the NBA draft.

"I've seen a lot in my 19 years," Garnett said. "I do not think I'm the average 19-year-old. Given the chance, I'm going to prove to all of you that I am man enough to take what is given and mature enough to give it out."

McDyess, Stackhouse and Wallace are 20, and Smith will be 20 next month.

Not until the expansion Vancouver Grizzlies took Bryant Reeves, the best true center of the draft, at No. 6 was a four-year player selected.

The NBA's other new franchise, the Toronto Raptors, made Arizona point guard Damon Stoudamire a surprise seventh choice. The Raptors already had a point guard, former Chicago Bull B.J. Armstrong, from the expansion draft, but general manager Isiah Thomas said Armstrong would be traded.

The selection of Stoudamire drew a mixed reaction from the crowd of 21,268 fans in the SkyDome, where the NBA conducted its first draft outside the United States.

Smith's selection by the Warriors was received enthusiastically by about 2,000 fans in Oakland Coliseum Arena.

"You will love this guy," new Warriors general manager Dave Twardzik told the fans.

Ready to 'spread his wings,' Mantle goes home

DALLAS (AP) - An upbeat Mickey Mantle is home and "ready to spread his wings" after being cooped up for a month in Baylor University Medical Center, where he received a lifesaving liver transplant.

"I'm sure right now he's happier than he has been in the last month or two," Dr. Daniel DeMarco, a gastroenterologist, said Wednesday. "He's very happy to be alive, and he's happy to be at home."

Hospital officials said the 63-year-old baseball great was released about Wednesday after continuing to show significant improvement from liver transplant surgery three weeks ago.

"He was doing very, very well," said Dr. Robert Goldstein, Mantle's surgeon. "We had a long talk and made the decision to release him. He was very anxious to get out of the hospital."

"Because of his notoriety, he's been rather isolated," the transplant surgeon said. "He's ready to spread his wings."

Mantle was hospitalized May 28. He received a new liver on June 8, two days after he was placed on the list of patients in need of an organ donor.

"He has been a little disappointed in that people thought he got preferential treatment because he received a new liver only two days after his name went on the list," Goldstein said. "From the first day, he and his family said they wanted no preferential treatment, and we gave them none."

At Mantle's request, the hospital withheld advance knowledge of his release. But doctors said Mantle hopes to make himself available for interviews soon.

"He has some weakness and tiredness, but at some time he says he would like to talk to you, when he feels better," DeMarco said.

The doctors were joined at the news conference by three of the six patients who received organs from the same donor as Mantle. Darwin Hamrick, 58, of Comanche, Texas, received a left lung; Jack White, 50, of White Rock, Ark., was given a right lung; and a heart was transplanted into Dillard Worthey, 57, of Pittsburg, Texas.

None has met Mantle.

Goldstein said Mantle has been spending 15 to 20 minutes a day on an exercise bicycle and managed to walk out of the hospital Wednesday. Mantle indicated he was looking forward to playing golf again, the surgeon added.

"I would imagine in two to four weeks, if he continues to improve, he could at least get out on the putting green. As far as the woods or irons go, it may take a few more days."

Mantle's doctors have said the former New York Yankee's outlook for recovery is good, despite signs that his body has been slightly rejecting his transplanted liver.

AGAIN?? Rangers rally; Astros club Cards

ARLINGTON (AP) - Will Clark and Lee Smith had their share of confrontations in the National League.

Clark and Smith now do business in the American League and on Wednesday night it was Clark's turn to come out on top.

Clark produced the tying runs with a two-run ninth inning double and Ivan Rodriguez drove in Clark with third later in the ninth with a one-out single as the Rangers rallied from an 8-2 deficit to pull out a 9-8 decision.

Smith (0-1) had a spotless bullpen record prior to Wednesday. He had broken his own single-season major league record with 19 consecutive saves and hadn't given up a run in 20 appearances.

Clark ran the count to 3-2 against Smith (0-1), then fouled off three pitches before lining a shot off the wall in center, scoring Otis Nixon, who led off the ninth with a walk, and Mark McLemore, who singled Nixon to third.

"That's when you like to be

in the middle of those situations," Clark said. "It's no secret that Lee Smith hadn't blown a save or allowed a run all year. I like facing Lee Smith. He goes right at you and you have to battle him."

Smith saluted Clark for the extended at bat.

"I'm man enough to give the old boy credit for getting a hit off me," Smith said. "The man hit the best I had. I could have thrown him the nastiest slider and he still could have hit it out of the park."

Astros 6 Cardinals 0

HOUSTON (AP) - The Houston Astros have the look of a contender lately. Just ask St. Louis Cardinals manager Mike Jorgensen.

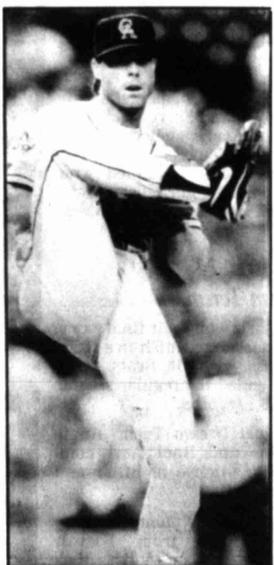

"If they keep playing this way they're definitely going to be in the mix (in the Central Division race)," Jorgensen said following the Astros' 9-0 victory Wednesday that gave Houston a sweep of the three-game series. "Their starting pitching is outstanding, they've got speed and their hitting, well, if you saw these three games you know about Houston's hitting."

Tony Eusebio hit his second career grand slam and Jeff Bagwell drove in two runs with three hits while Mike Hampton (2-3) and Pedro Martinez combined on a five-hitter as the Astros won their 10th in 13 games.

The Astros outscored St. Louis 26-2 in the series while hitting .340 (34-for-100). The Cardinals hit only .202 (19-for-94) and never led.

"Houston is an impressive team," Jorgensen said. "It seemed like every time we made a mistake they capitalized on it. It seems like everybody in their lineup is hitting line drives, and every time I looked up it seemed like we were down 5-0. They are a very hot team right now."

Grand jury clears Williams of sexual-assault charges

MCKINNEY (AP) - Dallas Cowboys offensive tackle Erik Williams was free to continue rehabilitating his injured knee after a Collin County grand jury declined to indict him on sexual assault allegations.

On Wednesday, the grand jury reported that it had found insufficient evidence to indict the former All-Pro and a friend in the alleged sexual assault of a 17-year-old girl at Williams' home.

The grand jury's decision came after the teen-ager reached a civil settlement with Williams and asked that Williams and Roderick Carson, both 27, not be prosecuted. Details of the settlement have not been disclosed.

Williams declined to speak to reporters after the action was announced, but his attorney, Dan Godwin of Dallas, said he "was very, very relieved."

"Erik has contended at all times that he was not guilty of the charge that was brought against him, and he continues to assert that position today," Godwin told a news conference at his Dallas law office Wednesday.

Although he did not speak, a tearful Williams appeared with his mother at the news conference.

The girl's attorney, Charles Caperton of Dallas, said he and his client were satisfied with the outcome.

"I guess, since we are not privy to what happens in the secret grand jury testimony, is that they honored her request ...," Caperton said, adding that his client had wanted the case to be dropped.

Rodman: Suit nothing new

ATLANTA (AP) - A former Atlanta Hawks cheerleader who claims that Dennis Rodman gave her herpes is just the latest woman to try to take advantage of his fame and fortune, the NBA player has testified.

Three or four women a year falsely claim that Rodman fathered their children, hoping to get money, he told a federal jury Wednesday. He said some women, like ex-cheerleader Lisa Beth Judd, exaggerate their romances with him.

"I think it goes along with the image" of a basketball star, he said.

Judd, of Orange County, Calif., is suing Rodman for unspecified damages. She claims he infected her with genital herpes when they had sex on Jan. 14, 1993.

Herpes is an incurable disease that is transmitted by sexual contact.

NBA players file suit

NEW YORK (AP) - In an effort to overturn the NBA's salary cap and prevent a possible lockout, Michael Jordan, Patrick Ewing and five other players filed an antitrust suit against the league in federal court in Minneapolis.

NEW YORK (AP) - Dwight Gooden, who said he would like to join the New York Yankees after his drug suspension ends, will not be reinstated this season, The New York Times reported Thursday.

The newspaper quoted a source close to major league baseball's ruling executive council as saying, "He has no chance of coming back this year."

Time - and Angels - will tell how far McGuire progresses

Brandon McGuire made probably the toughest decision of his life Tuesday.

If only we could have such decisions.

McGuire, the pitcher from Coahoma who set the West Texas baseball world on its ear this past season, chose the professional ranks over collegiate baseball. McGuire turned down a football scholarship to Rice University and the chance to be a two-sport star at that school, plus a chance for a free college education.

Dave Hargrave Sports Editor

But he receives a valuable commodity for his sacrifice - peace of mind.

He can concentrate on baseball, and he'll be allowed to progress at his own speed. In high school and college, reaching the state finals or winning that conference title is so important that coaches sometimes throw their ace pitchers until their arms fell off. That paradox of success engulfed McGuire at Coahoma, where he threw an 11-inning and a 12-inning complete game without showing ill effects, and it likely would have been the same situation at Rice or any Southwest Conference school.

In the minor leagues of professional baseball, however, pennants or league titles mean absolutely nothing. Like it or not, minor-league teams exist only to feed players to the major-league club, so no minor-league coach should feel the need to push McGuire's arm to the edge.

Quick - can you name the Texas League champions from last season?

You get the point. That's plus No. 1 - plus No. 2 is money. McGuire declined to say how much the California Angels paid him to sign Tuesday, but he did say he received a bonus of "about what we expected." Considering he's a 10th-round draft choice, McGuire could use the money to pay for a decent college education ... if his baseball career suddenly goes sour.

The other plus, perhaps for McGuire but definitely for his Coahoma fans, is McGuire signed with the Angels, who have a Double-A affiliate just down the pike in Midland. Most people know how well McGuire pitched at Midland's Christensen Stadium in a Coahoma Bulldog uniform - maybe some of that magic would hold if he eventually dons Midland Angel threads.

That's the toughest jump - from A to AA. McGuire is leaving today for Mesa, Ariz., home of the Mesa Angels, a rookie league A team. Major league teams have four A teams - two rookie league franchises (for the Angels they are Mesa Angels and the Boise Hawks) and two short-season squads (the Lake Elsinore Storm and the Cedar Rapids Kernels). McGuire may have to play for all four teams before he makes it to Midland.

If he reaches Midland, however, his chances to make the big leagues increase dramatically. The Midland Angels say, in their game program, that 33 of every 100 Double-A players reach the major leagues. If McGuire can climb the ladder to Triple-A, his chances balloon to 73 percent.

Only time will tell if McGuire has what it takes to reach 'The Show.' Don't forget, though - McGuire is only 17.

Time is something he has plenty of.

Da Gurlz 11 Hot Steppers 9

Da Gurlz broke a tight game with six runs in the third inning to take their Div. III matchup with Hot Steppers.

Melisa Martinez had a pair of hits, while Kaci Aciri doubled for Da Gurlz. Monica Rubio and Alma Gonzales each had a pair of hits for Hot Steppers.

Da Gurlz 15 Mambas 2

Da Gurlz broke out the bats in a big way, paced by a 4-for-4 performance by Melisa Martinez as they clubbed the Mambas in Div. III action.

Martinez had two singles, a double and a three-RBI triple, while Jessica Cobos had a pair of doubles and Farrah Schooler and Kaci Aciri each had a pair of hits for Da Gurlz.

Amy Gurlz tripled and Brooke Reed and Lindsey Marino each had hits for the Mambas.

Da Gurlz 14 Dream Team 1

Da Gurlz won their final game of the season to finish in a first-place tie with Da Brats. Both teams ended the regular season with 13-2 records.

Against Dream Team, Angie Phillips and Kaci Aciri combined to pitch a no-hitter and strike out five.

They received plenty of offensive support from Farrah Schooler (triple), Melisa Martinez and Jessica Cobos (doubles) and Somer Luebner (single).

Northside to help students who need new school clothes

By KELLIE JONES
Staff Writer

The first day of school may be nearly two months away, but it is not too early for the Northside Community Center to begin distributing applications for its back-to-school program.

The center sponsors the clothing purchases for students in kindergarten through 12th grade. The program is open to those who could not otherwise afford new clothes for school.

Executive Director Max Webb says he will hand out about 200 applications July 5-7 or until the supply is exhausted. All applications must be turned in by 5 p.m. July 24.

Webb and the board of directors will make their selections based on income or lack of income, single parent status, number of children and employment status.

Those who are selected will notified and must pick up their purchase vouchers between July 25 and Aug. 1. The vouchers are good for school clothes only at the Wal-Mart Supercenter from Aug. 1 to Sept. 30. No toys or school supplies may be purchased.

The center seeks donations to make this year's program a success. Webb says the amount available to each child will depend on the number of donations received.

Anyone wanting to participate by taking a child or children on a shopping trip and paying for the items may do so by contacting Webb.

Donations can be sent to Webb's attention at Northside Community Center, 110 N.E. Eighth Street, Big Spring, Texas, 79720.

In this file photo, Northside Community Center Executive Director Max Webb hands a bag of clothes to Andrena and Juliana Juarez as part of the center's back to school program. Webb will begin distributing 200 applications July 5-7 to those who qualify.

Dustin + Justin = 4-H success

By MARY McATEER
Staff Writer

Two Howard County 4-H students received the reward for hard work and high standards at the Texas 4-H Roundup in College Station.

Dustin Gaskins of Ackerly and Justin Wood of Coahoma were recipients of the Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo Scholarship.

Dustin, the son of Kelly and Teresa Gaskins of Knott and a recent graduate of Sands High School in Ackerly, has been active in 4-H for 10 years.

He has been a winner of the Texas 4-H Gold Star Award, the San Antonio Rural Youth Award, a first place in state competition for a natural resource record book, and fifth place in state round-up in natural resource demonstration.

His major projects in 4-H have been in conservation of natural resources, food and nutrition, shooting sports, swine, consumer education, safety, sheep, clothing and textiles.

Dustin has been Future Farmers of America area vice president, a member of National Honor Society, a member of the Superintendent Advisory Committee, and a delegate to the County Area and State Conventions and the National FFA Leadership Conference.

He plans to apply his $10,000 scholarship to attendance at Texas A&M University, where he will major in agricultural economics. He plans to pursue a career in either banking or farm management.

Justin, the son of Ronnie and Diane Wood of Coahoma and a recent graduate of Coahoma High School, has been a 4-H member for nine years.

He has been Howard County Gold Star Boy and presented the state-winning meat science demonstration in 1993, the state winning beef cattle junior symposium demonstration in 1994 and was the state runner-up in meat science demonstration in 1992.

Justin's major projects in 4-H have been in beef cattle, swine, and leadership method demonstrations and illustrated talks.

He was class president four years, and was the highest ranking graduating male at Coahoma High School in 1995. He was voted most likely to succeed, and was a recipient of the Hugh O'Brien Youth Leadership Seminar.

Justin plans to use his $10,000 scholarship at Texas A & M University, where he will major in agriscience.

His career plan is to work in national and international sales of agriculture products.

— Long, narrow face: Frames should cover as much of the center of the face as possible without overpowering it.

— Round face: Select frames with straight or angular lines. Color also minimizes fullness.

— Oval face: More frames look good with this face shape than any other, as long as the size of the sunglass is in proportion to the face.

— Triangular face (defined by a broad forehead and a narrow mouth and chin): Frames with a thin rim and vertical lines will help balance the bottom of the face.

— Square face: Complement it with slightly rounded or curved frames.

The top of the frames should sit high enough on the face to downplay the jawline.

Frames should not sit too high on the face or they will emphasize the shape. Avoid large frames, heavy nose bridges, bold colors and square shapes.

Kids fight summer boredom by publishing papers

By JACK HICKS
Scripps Howard News Service

LAKESIDE PARK, Ky. — When lightning struck a tree in Lakeside Park recently, reporters were quickly on the scene.

"Lightning strikes again! House on West Lakeside gets a shocker! Hits tree by house and goes underground. Hits dryer. Makes smoke. The firemen take care of it," said the story in The Lakeside Park News.

Short, to the point and just about all you would want to know. And the reporters are 10 years old.

"We've been riding our bikes a lot, and we see things," said Meredith Jones, who along with her neighbor, Bobby Martin, has been turning out The News.

Bobby is also the paper's artist, drawing cartoons and comics that often have a message, such as don't stand under a tree when it's storming.

In Crescent Springs, editor Angela Accardi, 13, is reviving the Crescent Pointe Kids News, a paper directed toward her peers in the subdivision where they live.

Angela puts out her paper on a computer, while Bobby and Meredith write theirs in long-hand. Either way, these kids are having great fun beginning their summer with something more constructive than sitting in front of a TV.

"You should see them, going around with their back packs, note pads and a butterfly net," said Bobby's mother, Linda Martin.

Meredith and Bobby, both fifth-graders, started The News last summer. "We do it in the summer because there's not much else to do," said Meredith, daughter of David Jones and Janie Ratliff.

The paper includes informative articles and features as well as opinion. "They probably go 90 to 100 mph down our street. The teenagers flat fly in their cars," said a recent piece about drivers.

Another story, with drawing, reported on great blue herons that visit Lakeside Park's lakes: "They have been seen at almost every lake. They are very huge and graceful birds. Their necks are two foot long."

People who trash the lakes are the paper's pet editorial peeve. "I hope the city people come and clean the lakes. Because there are dead fish in the lakes and there was a dead possum," declares a piece under Bobby's byline.

A joke feature, which Meredith claims, includes a whimsical list of paperback book titles, "Mexican Cooking," by N. Chilada, and "I Hate People," by Leif Mia Lone, among them.

The children write and draw on paper, and Bobby's father, Bob Martin, makes copies at his work. "I guess that makes me a publisher," he said.

Inflation being what it is, Meredith and Bobby have increased the price of The News from 20 to 25 cents a copy. They sell a dozen copies or more of each edition to neighbors, joggers or anyone who comes through the neighborhood.

Angela's paper is free. She began a year and a half ago, with her neighbor, Holly Kearl, who has since moved to California. Ironically, Angela moved to Crescent Springs from California five years ago with her parents, Phil and Vicki Accardi, and brother, Joe. She will be in the eighth grade at Villa Madonna Academy.

When Angela decided to resurrect the paper, she told readers: "Well the paper has been gone for a while but it's back and better than ever. Check the new features, cool jokes and neat games."

Angela promotes reader participation, asking others to relate family traditions or submit ideas about the likes of dream vacation spots. "Your fantasy vacation spot could be hanging out with aliens on Mars, or living in an enchanted village under the sea," she suggests. She prints ads, for free and slips in her own: "Angie Accardi babysits. 13 yrs. four years experience. loves kids!!! $2 an hour."

With such enthusiasm, you might think journalism's future is secure. Alas, Angela wants to be a special education teacher while Bobby has been talking about being a movie studio illustrator. He also sees University of Kentucky basketball and the pro league in his life.

"I like soccer," Meredith said, leaving it at that.

Conservation officer protects wildlife

By JOHN McCOY
Thomson News Service

MARLINTON, W.Va. — On an average summer day, Doshia Webb might pedal a mountain bike deep into the Cranberry Backcountry to check fishing licenses.

In the fall, she might don camouflage clothing and spend hours waiting for a poacher to claim the deer he killed.

"That's what I like most about this job," says West Virginia's only female conservation officer. "I get to spend most of my time outside."

And, as she readily acknowledges, she gets to feel as if she's making a difference — a feeling she didn't often have when she worked as an aquatic biologist.

"I worked out of the (Department of Natural Resources) St. Albans office," says Webb, 31. "I saw things going on, things that I wasn't empowered to do anything about. I wanted to do something, so I took the training to become a conservation officer." That was four years ago.

Since then, the former Marshall University basketball player has earned respect from colleagues and outdoorsmen alike.

Fellow officers say they admire her devotion to duty. Representatives of state Trout Unlimited chapters praise her for keeping the Cranberry, Elk, Williams and Shavers Fork rivers relatively free of poachers.

Webb admits, though, that any respect she enjoys today had to be earned the hard way.

"Anytime a new conservation officer comes to an area, the local folks put them through a series of breaking-in' exercises," she says, smiling.

"I think that after my first deer season, people realized I could do the job."

On one occasion, Webb drove for miles over a nearly impassable road to raid a deer camp. "They thought they were safe back in there, but I went in and wrote them up," she says.

Then she and a handful of colleagues rode four-wheelers into a remote roadless area and discovered a small-scale deer-processing operation.

"They had bucks and does alike," she says.

"Some of the animals had been checked at a checking station, and some of them hadn't. We wrote about $1,500 worth of tickets on that one."

Word really got out about "the lady game warden," though, the first time Webb ran down a fleeing suspect.

"This guy saw me coming across the ice at Watoga Lake, and he took off. I think it surprised everyone when I ran him down and arrested him."

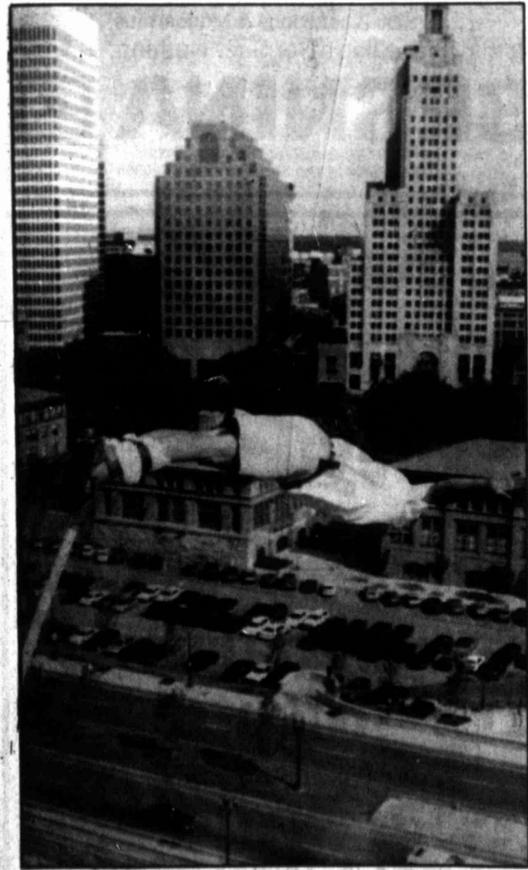

So far, Webb has yet to experience a face-off with an armed, angry hunter.

Such encounters happen occasionally to the 116 male officers in the DNR force, but so far not to her.

She believes her gender helps to defuse volatile situations. She says some of the men she's arrested have become verbally abusive.

"I just let them talk," she says. "But I let them know that they're only digging themselves deeper and deeper into trouble."

BUNGEE MASTER

Chris Allum of Wellington, New Zealand, dives off the bungee tower in Providence, R.I. Allum, 46, has been jumping for 10 years and also holds the world record bungee jump at more than 822 feet. The tower is being used for the ESPN Extreme Games.

Pick the right sunglasses to flatter your face

Cindy Piccoli, a former model and now a spokeswoman for Ray-Ban sunglasses, offers these tips on how to be framed in style:

— Square face: Complement it with slightly rounded or curved frames.

The top of the frames should sit high enough on the face to downplay the jawline. — Triangular face (defined by a broad forehead and a narrow mouth and chin): Frames with a thin rim and vertical lines will help balance the bottom of the face.

Frames should not sit too high on the face or they will emphasize the shape. Avoid large frames, heavy nose bridges, bold colors and square shapes.

— Oval face: More frames look good with this face shape than any other, as long as the size of the sunglass is in proportion to the face.

San Antonio's kiddie park still a family favorite

By LESLI HICKS
San Antonio Express-News

SAN ANTONIO — Customers largely less than 12 years old have propelled Kiddie Park into its 70th year.

The milestone is notable because the park on the northwest corner of Broadway and Mulberry Avenue has helped tens of thousands celebrate their birthdays, yet is a tourist attraction from days gone by.

And despite its position as one of the Alamo City's oldest attractions, the park's arcades and 10 rides including a carousel, Ferris wheel, boat ride, and Little Dipper roller-coaster are situated on less than an acre.

Unlike Fiesta Texas or Sea World of Texas, this park easily could go unnoticed by passers-by.

But when Austinite P.W. Curry opened it in 1925, it was the first of its kind. Today, it is one of only a handful nationally to prevail in the face of high-tech competition.

In fact, only three more amusement parks are older, but they weren't established to cater to kids, according to Jim Futrell, a historian at the National Amusement Park Historical Association in Mount Prospect, Ill.

"The significance of being America's original kiddie amusement park is similar to the significance of Disneyland," said Futrell, whose research revealed the San Antonio park's ranking in 1992.

"The growth of the amusement-park industry following World War II was concentrated in two areas: large theme parks, of which Disneyland was the original, and the kiddie park," of which the Alamo City is a part, Futrell said.

He said Baby Boom-era affluence spawned hundreds of kiddie park's next to shopping centers, drive-in theaters and Dairy Queens during that time.

The growth, however, later was curbed by rising property values and America's burgeoning highway system, which gave middle-class, car-owning Americans wider destination options.

"The kiddieland boom was short-lived and today only a few remain," Futrell said.

Bob Aston bought San Antonio's Kiddie Park in 1978 for an undisclosed amount from Currie, who has since died.

"I thought this would be a whole lot of fun," said Aston, 44, a 1968 graduate of Alamo Heights High School who previously had helped his family operate four hotels along Broadway: The Broadway Inn, The Ranch Motel, Casa Linda and Park Plaza, which is now a Taco Cabana.

"And it is a lot of fun. If you were raised in San Antonio, your first roller-coaster ride was here," he said. "I'm able to give a lot back to the community."

That his park has survived when others have not suggests a yearning for simpler times in South Texas, he said, adding that his wife, son and daughter each have helped run the park over the last 17 years.

"We provide a good service to our customer and a good value."

Value indeed. Park customers pay $2.25 for five rides, $4.95 for unlimited rides, and $1 for four on "Bargain Wednesday."

"So many of the new places that have opened in the last five or 10 years have all the high-tech stuff, but we keep hanging in there, even with 1950s prices," he said.

Aston's profits come from volume. Annually, Kiddie Park logs about 100,000 visitors.

Despite that head count, competition is ample. Among Kiddie Park's New Age rivals are pizza places with video games and animated characters, or outlets such as Discovery Zone with inside-play facilities and state-of-the-art "activity" equipment.

Ken McCleary, professor of hospitality and tourism management at Virginia Tech in Blacksburg, Va., was surprised to learn about Kiddie Park's success.

After all, the modern incarnation of the kiddie park largely is mobile and sets up temporarily in U.S. malls, he said.

"You know how a mall will rotate its display from time to time? Well sometimes they will put a kiddie park in place," McCleary said. Often those, however, have rides with catchy names such as "Back to the future," he said a nod to 1990s' values.

Aston isn't ready to take his show on the road.

In recent months, he has been surveying visitors to gauge his market, tracking their responses on a map inside the on-site mobile home that serves as his office.

"We've had people from Austin, Floresville, Dallas, Victoria, Fort Worth, New Mexico, California, La Vernia and McAllen just this week," he said.

Among them were Temple residents Herlinda and Dave Benavidez who arrived with their three daughters, ages five months, five years and seven, on a lark.

"We saw it when we were driving by and they love it," Herlinda Benavidez said. "We'd come back."

But most of Kiddie Park's visitors about 95 percent are from San Antonio proper.

Interestingly, the park could have become a more popular regional attraction had "The Little Rascals" creator Hal Roach, the late Hollywood director, gotten his way.

In the late 1970s, he was scouting the site for a "Rascals" movie. He never got the financing, and by the time Steven Spielberg did in this decade, Kiddie Park wasn't picked as the location.

That doesn't matter to Bertha Gonzalez, who said she and her husband, U.S. Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-San Antonio, have taken three generations of children to Kiddie Park and likely will take more.

The couple has four daughters and four sons ranging in age from 27 to 50, 21 grandchildren, one great grandchild, and one more on the way.

"From the time our son was 1, we've celebrated birthdays there," Bertha Gonzalez said.

That's good news for Aston whose privately held company has yet to post a loss.

"This business has been very, very good to me," he said.

Evidence of detective up for sale

By PETER WATSON
London Observer Service

LONDON — Baker Street Irregulars will soon receive invitations to one of the greatest gatherings that Sherlock Holmes buffs have ever known.

The July 24 jamboree isn't at 221B Baker Street, mythical home of the great pipe-smoking detective, but around the corner on Bond Street, where the world's largest and most important collection of Arthur Conan Doyle and Sherlock Holmes memorabilia is about to go under the hammer at Sotheby's.

The collection of Stanley MacKenzie, actor and deputy stage manager of the Royal Shakespeare Company — who died in February at the age of 82 — probably contains not just everything Conan Doyle wrote on, Holmes, but everything written about Holmes, together with memorabilia from every play, film and television adaptation.

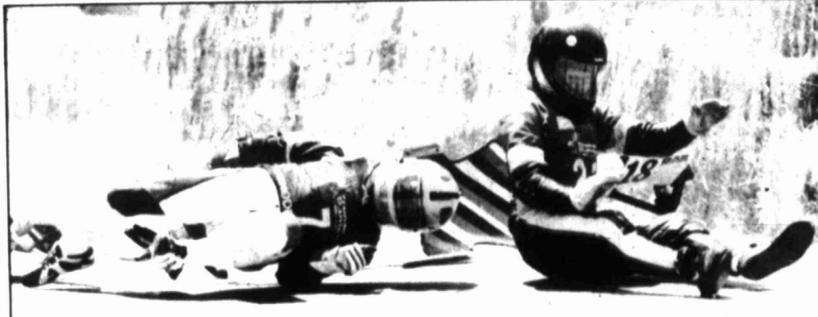

There are first editions of "The Sign of Four," "The Hound of the Baskervilles," "The Valley of Fear," "A Study in Scarlet" and "The Return of Sherlock Holmes," the last written by Conan Doyle after an offer of $45,000 ($850,000 now) by an American publisher to resurrect the detective after his "death" at the Reichenbach Falls.

A first edition of "A Study in Scarlet" is among the rarest books in modern times, and the estimate of $15,000-$24,000 reflects that.

The collection, which is expected to fetch about $105,000, includes a number of pastiches and parodies of Holmes, some by authors such as Mark Twain and Raymond Chandler, along with theater programs and posters, scripts and a range of Meerschaum pipes.

OUCH!

Roger Rodgers, left, of Soledad, Calif., tumbles over after Tav Niche, of Silmar, Calif., collided with him during the mass luge event at the Extreme Games in Providence, R.I., on Wednesday. Rodgers suffered bruised ribs from the accident while Niche was able to continue through the course.

Here she comes...the next Miss Texas?

Special to the Herald

Jennifer Marquez, daughter of Benito and Connie Marquez Jr. of DeSoto and granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benito Marquez and Connie Torres of Big Spring, will compete in the Miss Texas pageant in Fort Worth July 5-8.

In February, Marquez won the title of Miss Grand Prairie. She also won the swimsuit competition. She has entertained at fundraisers, participated in parades and spoken at schools and libraries in the Grand Prairie area.

For the talent competition of the pageant, Marquez will sing the classical piece "Granada." She will compete against more than 60 women. The Miss Texas pageant is an official state pageant of Miss America.

Marquez is a 1994 graduate of Sweetwater High School. While at SHS, she was a New Year Girl and a winner at the Kiwanis Club's talent competition. She won several choir awards as well. She now attends University of North Texas and is involved in the women's chorus.

Advice for cellular users

Milwaukee Journal Sentinel
Features Editor

If you have a cellular phone, here's some advice from Ameritech:

Shhhh.

Sounds pretty basic, but someone had to say it, especially the way cellular phones are popping up everywhere.

"Ringing phones in restaurants and the need to make or receive calls during business meetings or social gatherings have created a need for definitive advice," according to Ameritech officials.

So here it is — "the basic rules of cellular phone etiqquette":

— Cellular phones increase efficiency and help people communicate, but like anything else, there is a time and place for them.

— Keep it down. When using your cellular phone in public places, respect those around you and speak quietly.

— Quiet that ringing. When in quiet settings with other people present, such as restaurants, meetings or classrooms, keep your ringer on low.

— Don't interrupt. If your cellular phone rings during a meeting, lunch or discussion, don't interrupt the flow of conversation around you.

Kids' stress addressed in class

By JOEL DRESANG
The Milwaukee Journal Sentinel

FORT ATKINSON, Wis. — It's 8 o'clock on a sunny summer morning as 11 children, some still rubbing sleep from their eyes, drag their sandals and name-brand sneakers into Purdy Elementary School. "Good morning," Jerry Searing greets each of them. If that doesn't wake them, the glaring yellow smiley face with "SMILE!" boldly printed on his T-shirt should jolt them to attention.

While other kids are still lingering over bowls of cereal and the Cartoon Channel or planning a day of outdoor frolics with friends, these 11 preteens have come to school. The class: Stress Management in Learning Experiences — abbreviated S.M.I.L.E.

The purpose, according to Searing, who devised the course five summer schools ago, is to help children identify the sources of stress in their lives and teach them how to cope.

"My bottom-line goal is to have a smile on their face by the time they're done," Searing says. The notion that children ages 10 to 12 can experience stress — even in a place as placid as Fort Atkinson — is gaining momentum among psychologists and educators.

Russ Stevens, an elementary school principal and summer school director in Fort Atkinson, said he was taken aback at first when Searing proposed the class. The more he thought about it, though, the more it made sense.

"I think we all should have had this when we were 10, 12 years old," Stevens says. Searing — a 20-year teaching veteran — hopes to help kids anticipate potentially disturbing experiences and plan how they'll handle them.

"I'm trying to get them to stop and think and look at their choices," says Searing. Searing's three-week course includes visits from a funeral director talking about death, a police officer discussing crime and a model builder demonstrating the therapy of hobbies. Searing uses videotapes, books, deep-breathing exercises and the kids' own art to point out sources of stress and ways of handling them.

Dangling alongside a dozen pizza-size smiley faces strung from the ceiling in Searing's classroom are "love mobiles" his students made. Fastened together with pipe cleaners, yarn and drinking straws, the mobiles contain the children's lists of people who love them.

Students also decorated a potted tree with star-shaped ornaments on which they spelled out their greatest wishes for themselves, their schools, their families, the country and the world.

Some of the wishes are what you'd expect from children — a dog, a go-cart, to be Richie Rich. Others include to behave, to be pretty, to "feel good about myself." For their families, one student wished for money, another a better house; a couple wished for no more fighting.

One boy in particular gets antsy. Almost inaudibly, Searing tells the boy to come to him. He whispers something to the boy while gently holding each of the lad's arms so he can't face away. Then the boy kneels beside Searing, who reassuringly pats him on the back, calming him down.

At the end of the 50-minute class, Searing's students snatch up their book bags and rush off. "Have a nice day," says Mr. Smile.

READ ALL ABOUT IT

Test your reading comprehension by reading the story below and answering the questions that follow.

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union developed industry with little regard for the environment, and now all of Russia's big cities have unhealthy air and half its people drink unsafe water, according to a new report.

Of Russia's 148 million people, 40 million to 50 million are exposed to air pollution 10 times higher than normal, the report said.

Car exhaust accounts for almost 44 percent of urban pollution. The worst exhaust-choked cities are Moscow and St. Petersburg.

The Soviet government paid little attention to environmental protection, developing huge industrial centers that polluted as they produced.

The industrial slump that began with the Soviet collapse has led to some decrease in waste, and environmental awareness has grown, but the government still lacks funds to adequately protect the environment.

"Sometimes, it leads to sad consequences," said Viktor Danilov-Danilyan, minister of environmental protection. "We spotted the oil spill in Komi republic only three weeks after it occurred."

That spill last year sprang from a series of leaks on an aging pipeline. Greenpeace and the World Bank say at least 30 million gallons of oil spilled, making it one of the largest spills ever.

The spill polluted the rivers and streams around Usinsk, home to 70,000 people, and has reportedly reached the salmon-rich Pechora River downstream.

In fact, most Russian rivers are highly polluted, the report said, especially near industrial cities.

The quality of drinking water has deteriorated as protection zones around rivers and lakes have shrunk, giving way to rapidly expanding construction and farming.

The environment ministry report also warned that virtually all of Russia's radioactive waste storage facilities are overfilled and fail to comply with modern standards.

Use information from the story to answer the following questions:

1. Why is the former Soviet Union responsible for Russia's pollution problems?
2. Name two environmental problems found in Russia's big cities.
3. How many Russian citizens are exposed to air pollution 10 times higher than normal?
4. What causes nearly 44 percent of urban (city) pollution?
5. According to Greenpeace and the World Bank, where did one of the world's largest oil spills occur?
6. Why do you think it took so long for the oil spill to be discovered? Explain.

Answer key: (Wording may vary)

1. The Soviet Union developed large industrial centers with factories that polluted the environment.

2. Russia's big cities have unhealthy air and unsafe water.

3. About 40 million to 50 million Russian people are exposed to air pollution 10 times higher than normal.

4. Car exhaust causes nearly 44 percent of urban pollution.

5. One of the world's largest oil spills occurred around Usinsk in the Komi republic.

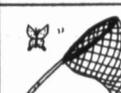

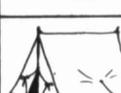

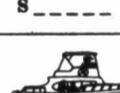

6. Answers will vary.

For use by teachers and parents at home and at school.
For use with issue: Beach Quiz From A to Z

Main idea: This issue is about beaches. The following is a list of activities to be used with this issue. They are listed in order of difficulty. Ask the children to do the following:

1. Draw a picture of you and your family at the beach.
2. Get another copy of this issue. Cut apart the A to Z squares. Mix them up, then find their matching squares in the other issue.
3. Look through the ads in your newspaper for things you would like to take on a trip to the beach.
4. Discuss the following: Have you ever been to the beach? If so, which ocean did you go to? What do you like best about going to the beach? If you were to help plan a vacation to the beach, what activities would you include?
5. Answer the following questions: Which coastline has mountains that come down to the shore? Which coastline is rocky along the far northern coast? Where are sea otters found?
6. Look in the weather section of your newspaper for the forecast for several places along the Pacific and Atlantic coasts. Which has the hottest temperature? Which has the coolest?
7. Look on a map to find which ocean is closest to where you live. If you were to drive there, which states would you pass through?

Rookie Cookie's Recipe
Seashell Pasta

You'll need:

- 1 16-ounce box shell pasta
- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 3/4 cup peanut butter
- 4 tablespoons soy sauce
- 1 tablespoon honey
- 1 teaspoon ground ginger

What to do:

1. Cook pasta following directions on box.
2. Drain and rinse under cold water until cool.
3. In a large bowl, combine pasta and oil. Toss until well-coated.
4. In a medium bowl, combine remaining ingredients. Mix until smooth.
5. Add peanut mixture to pasta. Mix well.
6. Keep cool until ready to serve. Serves 4.

From Sea to Sea
The Atlantic and Pacific

The Pacific Ocean:

- is the largest body of water in the world (64 million square miles).
- is, on the average, colder than the Atlantic.
- Its coast has mountains that come down to the shore and keep on going. You can find deep-water fish here, while you would have to go hundreds of miles to find them off the Atlantic Coast.

The Atlantic Ocean:

- is the world's second-largest ocean (31.8 million square miles).
- has a broad coastal shelf. The southeastern coast has barrier islands that constantly move and shift.
- is widening an inch every year — while the Pacific is shrinking.
- is slightly saltier than the Pacific.

Some coastlines along the Pacific have cliffs or sandy beaches with mountain ranges nearby. This photo is of Olympic National Park in Washington state.

The Atlantic coastline is sandy along much of its coast. Millions of dollars are spent each year to put sand back on Atlantic coastal beaches. Sometimes hurricanes hit and blow the sand away. Also, sand can't return naturally when people build right on the beach.

Pacific Coast

Sea otters live in the kelp forests of the Pacific Coast. The otter swims on its back, holding a stone on its stomach. It smashes an abalone shell against the stone. Then it gobbles the meat. It usually comes ashore during storms.

Sea lion colonies like to sun themselves on the rocks in California. They like to play on the waves. The circus "sea" you see doing tricks is probably a sea lion. Sea lions have ear flaps you can see. Seals do not.

Dear Jax,
What is an ellipse?
Jim Andrea
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Jim,
An ellipse (ee-LIPZ) is kind of like a circle with two centers. Making an ellipse is simple and a lot of fun. It also seems to be the favorite shape of car designers these days. I guess they think an ellipse looks sleek. It can also make all the cars look a lot alike — like jelly beans beaming down a jetway somewhere.

Jax Place
Jax Place

Lots of times people get these 2 shapes confused. An ellipse is not an oval. Compare the two against each other. An ellipse has no straight lines. An oval can have them.

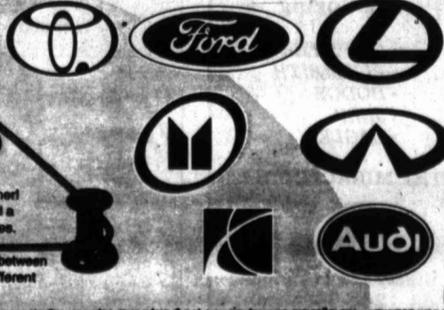

ellipse
oval

(ab)•(bc)•(ca) = (ab)•(bd)•(da)

ellipse Logo Love

Car companies love the ellipse. All of these ellipses are car company trademarks. Look for more ellipses as the shapes of car door handles, radiator vent openings, knobs, lights and even whole cars!

Become a car designer! Use tacks, string and a pencil to make ellipses.

Change the distances between the tacks and use different lengths of string.

Camels find home on North Texas range

By HOLLACE WEINER
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

HENRIETTA — A cluster of camels has found a home on the range in the cattle country of North Texas, working full-time as organic weed eaters. The nine dromedaries, who munch thistles, briar, mesquite and other pesky plants, moved two years ago to the Howard Ranch south of Henrietta in Clay County to thin out an overgrown pasture along U.S. 287.

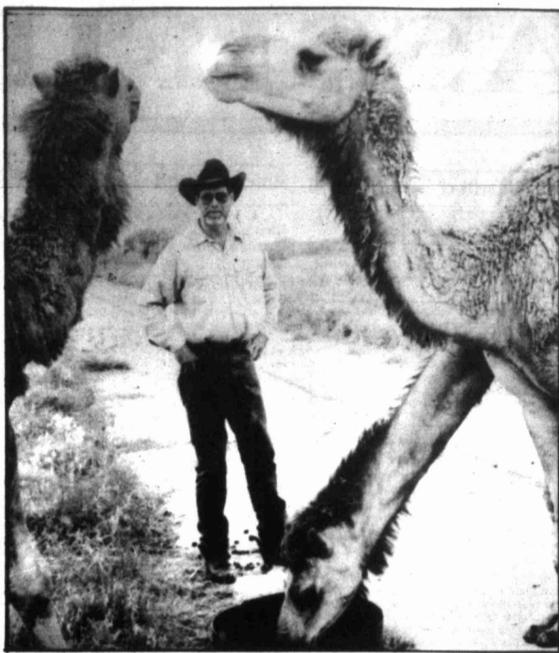

"I think the brush is ahead of our camels," said ranch manager Bill Hammack, who rides to the pasture by pickup because the camels spook his horses. "It's not the big answer. It sure is interesting."

At sunrise, grazing deer sometimes mingle with the towering camels. Throughout the day, rubbernecking motorists pull off the road, gazing in disbelief.

During winter and spring, the camels' coats are scruffy and matted, a rusty mix of mud and soft wool. When temperatures hit 100, the hair on their humps and heads sheds. Their hides turn sleek.

"They are low-maintenance. No more work than a big cow," said Keith Meyer, executive manager of Hudson Ranches, which owns the Texas spread.

Camels arrived on the Howard Ranch in 1993 after it was purchased by Hudson Ranches, a division of Highway Oil Co. of Topeka, Kan. The oil company has small herds of camels clearing underbrush at seven ranches in three states, including spreads near Henrietta and Electra, Meyer said. The ranch division began adding camels to its inventory about seven years ago when Kansas developed a wild thistle problem. Company president A.B. Hudson became intrigued when he learned that camels had been part of a brief 1980s experiment at sagebrush control. So, rather than rid the range of brittle thistles with chemicals, he brought in camels.

Bill Hammack, manager of the Hudson Ranch, south of Henrietta, stands with some of the camels the ranch is using for brush control.

"Camels have a lining in their mouth that's extremely tough," Hammack said. "Their food supply in the desert's pretty bad, just any kind of junky plants."

In America's farm-and-ranch country, camels overlook lush Bermuda grass and go straight for briar vines, plum thicket leaves and ragweed.

"They eat the stems," Hammack said.

Joe Haid, publisher of Wings & Hooves, a livestock monthly published in neighboring Montague County, said that when he visited the pasture in April, he watched a 1,200-pound camel named John — the only bull in the herd — devour a sprouting mesquite tree.

Among the camels, John is leader of the pack. The animals stick close together. When the ranch manager fills feeding buckets with cracked corn and dehydrated alfalfa pellets, the 7-foot camels stampede toward the food, kicking up a 20-foot swirl of dust.

When a pregnant camel needed a trip to the vet, the ranch manager had to take along a companion. An isolated camel just won't move, he said.

Couple doesn't let HIV get in their way

By STEVE KENNY
The Dallas Morning News

DALLAS — When Suzanne Wilson placed her first personal ad last year, she figured she had a pretty good chance of meeting someone.

She was the only heterosexual woman listed in the Positive Personals. That's "positive" in two senses of the word — confident and assured and HIV-positive. Suzanne is both — an active, optimistic and happy 33-year-old who also happens to be infected with the virus that causes AIDS.

So is Billy Keefe, 36, a Houston accountant who saw Suzanne's ad last July in Positive Personals, a bimonthly newsletter that circulates throughout Texas. He was struck by the ad's description of "a real woman of substance."

And Billy was not disappointed when he met Suzanne, who recently retired as an educator at the AIDS Resource Center. "She's such a loving and caring person, I just ate all that up," he says.

Their courtship has been quick. Billy replied to Suzanne's ad with a letter in July. They first talked on the phone — long-distance, for two hours — in August; met October; were engaged in November; moved in together in January after Billy moved to Dallas; and were married June 10 at the Dallas Arboretum.

For such an untraditional couple, they had a very traditional ceremony — 160 guests, six bridesmaids, 12 attendants and ushers, a stretch limousine, a full complement of flowers and a string quartet.

The best man was Billy's 7-year-old son, Jonathan, who is living with them this summer.

"This has been the most positive relationship of my life, no pun intended," Billy says.

They do not dwell on the unusual life circumstances that brought them together. "One of the things that's really neat is that AIDS is not the focus," says Suzanne, whose previous husband, Cragg, died of AIDS in 1992. "We don't focus on the disease; we focus on the person."

It took them almost two months to hook up after the ad appeared because Suzanne was still working — traveling the state lecturing about AIDS.

(She says she was goaded into running the ad by the newsletter's editor, Dwayne Barnett, who also wrote the ad copy.)

Their first date, in October, was like all first dates. Billy had driven up from Houston to take her to dinner, and Suzanne was a nervous wreck. "I didn't show it," she says, "but I wanted to puke." They went to Campisi's.

"He proceeded to pig out," Suzanne says, "and I couldn't eat ... There were just all these sparks. I just knew he was the one."

Billy was thinking the same thing. "I kissed her, and that's when I knew," he says. "I felt so comfortable in her presence."

They've had to stare down challenges that most couples never face. Shortly after they met, Suzanne got sick. Billy has known he's HIV-positive since 1990 and is well-versed in facts about the disease, but he didn't know how to react. "I wasn't ready for sick"; he was mad, he says. "It was like, 'God, this isn't fair!' And I kinda backed off a little."

Suzanne, with her years of experience as an AIDS educator, never worried that Billy would give up on the relationship.

"I think Billy and my story can be a real inspiration to people with HIV," Suzanne says. "I think a lot of people who find out they're HIV-positive feel like a diseased pariah."

Suzanne and Billy want to help. In Houston, Billy belonged to a social group called B-HIV (pronounced "Beehive") for heterosexuals infected with HIV. He and Suzanne plan to start a similar group in Dallas.

"Heterosexuals with HIV are usually so closeted," Suzanne says. "We're going to live life to the fullest."

HOROSCOPE

FOR FRIDAY JUNE 30, 1995

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your creative insight is instrumental in resolving problems. You see issues in a much more positive way. You are feeling upbeat, but you have a tendency, nonetheless, to get depressed. Touch base with someone, and use your potential. Tonight: Be naughty. ****

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Family matters dominate. You have many decisions to make, which forces you in a new direction and makes you happy. But then a friend disappoints you. Make choices that are good for you. Give yourself time to gain perspective. Tonight: Entertain at home. ***

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your talkative side emerges, and you feel very good about situations that are coming up. A creative endeavor is important. Know your choices. A playful attitude helps you deal with a boss's grumpiness. Tonight: Pick your favorite spot. ****

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You have many choices, and you might be surprised by what they offer. Stunning news from a distance may make you rethink a choice. You might feel depressed or sad about what you see going on with a friend. Tonight: Be careful with spending. ****

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You are personality-plus. Your biggest problem may be a lack of finances or a feeling that you need to have more money. Stay upbeat; be sensitive as you deal with someone. Examine your alternatives, and make strong, positive choices. Tonight: Take off. ****

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Use discretion in a situation. You have many options. You are far more tuned into your feelings than you know. Listen to what others say, and know which way you want to go. A friendly attitude works for you and allows many opportunities. Tonight: Get a good night's sleep. ***

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Push come to shove with your energy level as you deal with a demanding loved one. Communications flourish. You can make points by expressing what you need. Focus on friendship, expanded horizons and new opportunities. Tonight: Say yes to an offer. ****

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You are on top of the world. Finances improve because of your responsibility and wise choices. This is not a period to take a risk, but stay upbeat. Understand your limitations. You have many choices that you hadn't thought possible. Tonight: Go out on the town. ****

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): It's important to understand your choices. You don't have all the answers, but you are considering alternatives that are quite different. A loved one wants to talk a problem through. Communications could get rough when you least expect it. Tonight: Be out and about. ****

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You must detach so you can face problems. Explore a problem in a novel way. You might want to discuss someone's wishes from a new perspective. Don't get stuck in negative thinking; your attitude could affect a primary relationship in your life. Tonight: Try a new restaurant. ****

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): One-to-one relating is highlighted. Intimacy comes naturally, and you have reason to celebrate. Take a needed risk to overcome a problem. Others help you get more of what you need out of life. You have may exciting options. Tonight: Refrain from overspending. ****

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Knowing your choices could make a big difference in how a problem is resolved. Your feelings are quite sincere; this sincerity will make a difference to someone. Review and understand what's going on, and overcome limitations. Tonight: Say yes to an offer. ****

IF JUNE 30 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: This year offers you many opportunities. Chances to make money and get past limitations are highlighted. Your biggest liability will be a tendency not to detach enough, which could limit your perspective. If you are single, you might have many romantic opportunities. Nevertheless, be careful; you might want to consider what is happening. Relationships flourish after January. If attached, this year is important to you. The two of you have many opportunities to go in new direction. Working together or being more nurturing will build this relationship. LEO helps you spend money.

Couple must tell adult son it's time to leave the den

DEAR ABBY: My wife has a 30-year-old son from a former marriage. I'll call him "Jerry." For the last three years, we have been raising Jerry's 10-year-old daughter with little or no help from him.

Jerry is now in the process of divorce, and he's moved into our den.

He is bright, intelligent and artistically gifted, but he suffers from low self-esteem and sees no reason to look for a full-time job. When he does work, it's a part-time job and he's paid under the table. Our garage is so full of his personal belongings, we can't park our car inside.

Jerry has been jailed twice, and I have reason to believe he is using drugs. I empathize with my wife when she says she feels a strong obligation to help her son. She says she loves him, and he's welcome to stay as long as he wants.

I say Jerry is old enough to get out and fend for himself. He will never learn responsibility and self-reliance if he doesn't have to.

I am more than willing to continue taking care of his daughter, since my wife and I are in a better position to provide a safe and caring environment for her.

What do you think? We will abide by your decision. — FRUSTRATED IN SANTA BARBARA

DEAR FRUSTRATED: Give this talented, bright artist one month to get a job and remove his belongings from your garage, or prepare to support him for the rest of his life. You do him no favor by crippling him with kindness. Trust me.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter, who is a college sophomore, has introduced her father and me to a very nice young man who just graduated from college. "Dave" has spent quite a bit of time with us, and we expect to see him often in the future.

The problem is he hardly ever removes his baseball cap. I was raised to believe that a gentleman always removes his hat inside the house. I am a schoolteacher, and still insist that boys take off their caps in the classroom.

I have not said anything to Dave because I don't want to make a big deal out of it, but it grates on my nerves. As a compromise, I will tolerate the cap being worn in the house, but not at the dinner table.

Abby, how should I handle this sticky situation? I realize that males are wearing baseball caps all over the place these days, but I find it tacky — especially at the dinner table.

Should I say something to this young man? — AN OHIO MOM

DEAR MOM: Say nothing to the young man; he's not one of your students. And if he graduated from college, it's safe to assume he has plenty besides hair under that baseball cap. However, if you prefer he not wear it at the table, mention it to your daughter.

Good advice for everyone — teens to seniors — is in "The Anger in All of Us and How to Deal With It." To order, send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Anger Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. THIS DATE IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, June 29, the 180th day of 1995. There are 185 days left in the year. Today's Highlight in History: On June 29, 1767, the British Parliament approved the Townshend Revenue Acts...

In Palestine in an attempt to stamp out alleged terrorism. In 1949, the government of South Africa enacted a ban against racially mixed marriages. In 1954, the Atomic Energy Commission voted against reinstating Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer's access to classified information. In 1966, the United States bombed fuel storage facilities near the North Vietnamese cities of Hanoi and Haiphong. In 1967, Jerusalem was reunified as Israel removed barricades separating the Old City from the Israeli sector. In 1970, the United States ended a two-month military offensive into Cambodia. In 1972, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled the death penalty, as it was being meted out, could constitute "cruel and unusual punishment."

capital punishment laws.) In 1992, a divided Supreme Court ruled that women have a constitutional right to abortion, but the justices also weakened the right as defined by the Roe vs. Wade decision. Ten years ago: The release of hostages from the hijacking of TWA Flight 847 was delayed, with Shiite Muslim leaders calling for guarantees from the U.S. and Israel that there would be no retaliation. Five years ago: Fernando Valenzuela of the Los Angeles Dodgers and Dave Stewart of the Oakland A's became the first pitchers to hurl no-hitters in both the National and American Leagues on the same day. (Oakland shut out the Blue Jays in Toronto, 5-0, while Los Angeles blanked the St. Louis Cardinals 6-0 at Dodger Stadium.) One year ago: Japan's parliament chose Tomichi Murayama to be the new prime minister, succeeding Tsutomu Hata. In a British TV documentary, Prince Charles said he'd been faithful in his marriage to Princess Diana "until it became irretrievably broken down." Today's Birthdays: Actress Ruth Warrick is 80. Actor Gary Busey is 51. Former U.S. Representative Fred Grandy, R-Iowa, is 47.
