unusual because of the legal exemptions allowing some people called for jury service to be automatically excused by appearing in person with their excuse prior to jury selection.

Some of the exemptions noted include people who are full-time students, people with a child or children under 10-years-old that require their supervision, and people over 65-years-old. Some of the jury summons were returned to the courthouse because people have moved.

According to the District Clerk's office, Monday's sessions were to qualify jurors to sit on the jury during the Edmondson trial. This process includes filling out an 11-page jury questionnaire and then going one-on-one with attorneys as they ask questions of potential jurors.

Questionnaires include questions pertaining to each juror's background, marital status, beliefs on capital punishment, religious and political beliefs, shows they may watch on television, as well as books, movies and magazines that may interest them. The questionnaires are expected to be dominated most of today's session and jurors will be back in the courtroom at 9 a.m. Wednesday.

No indication has been given as to how long the jury selection process will take.

One source indicated it could take weeks before jurors begin hearing testimony in the trial and that attorneys for the prosecution may call as many as 100 witnesses.

Detector

wrapping in a package of chewing tobacco.

One potential juror had to go through the detector several times because the army fatigues he was wearing had several items in the pockets. The very last time the detector beeped at him it was because he has a foil-lined package of chewing tobacco in the bottom pocket on one of the legs.

Howard County Sheriff's Deputy Sgt. Barney Edens said the detector works like a charm and can detect almost anything.

The county has been waiting for this metal detector for almost two years and Edens added there is also a similar detector in place for Howard County Jail, which is required by the state's Jail Standards Commission.

Edens added the detector will be permanent and is not necessarily for the Edmondson trial, but the timing of its arrival worked so the county could have it for the trial.

Because Howard County is one of the last counties to receive the metal detector, Edens said it was just manufactured and is one of the best in the business.

He added many district and federal courts are installing the equipment because of recent incidents of courthouse violence, such as the shooting a few months ago of a Fort Worth woman by her ex-husband following a divorce hearing.

The metal detector is made of several magnetic coils and adapts to its surroundings, meaning the metal in the courthouse floor will not set it off, but it will pick up items on humans from head to toe, including coins, eyeglasses, and even artificial limbs with pins in them.

Hungry but docile, cougar caught taking a nap in backyard

LUBBOCK (AP) — An adult cougar, described as hungry but docile, was captured in a Lubbock back yard on Monday night.

An expert on big cats said the cougar appeared to be a mistreated, nearly starved pet. "He has either been out for several days or neglected for a long period of time," said Richard Whittenburg, who tranquilized the cat and helped load it into a crate for its ride to a veterinarian's office.

The cat was removed without incident. "He's a sweet boy," Whittenburg said. "He was very calm when he was darted (tranquilized). He could have gotten me, but he didn't."

Andra Ford said she discovered the cougar asleep between a storage shed and a fence while she taking out the trash. Her dog went to the animal's protruding tail and stood quietly, she said. Mrs. Ford said she thought the tail was a snake, until she looked more closely.

During a call to police, a dispatcher asked if it appeared the cougar would stay in the yard, Mrs. Ford said. "I said, 'Lady, I don't intend to ask it,'" she said. Officials had no clues as to the cat's home.

"I just really don't believe this was a legal cat," said Lt. John Rische of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

The animal, estimated to be 3 or 4 years old, is a Western Cougar, a species that inhabits the Caprock as near as 30 miles from Lubbock, Rische said.

It will be turned over to the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department for placement in a zoo or another controlled environment.

PUT UP OR SHUT UP

Board of inquiry examines Rangers 1994 outing

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — With critics challenged to show up, put up or shut up, an unusual "board of inquiry" is dealing with a conflict within the state's premier crime-fighting agency.

About two dozen Texas Rangers and their superior officers were asked to testify under oath today at a hearing pertaining to an overnight Ranger outing in March 1994.

Former Ranger Cheryl Steadman, whose complaints of sexual harassment is at the heart of the controversy, accepted an invitation to attend, but said she might not testify, calling it a "no-win situation" designed to discredit her.

The Public Safety Commission arranged the hearing, labeling it a board of inquiry.

"If you have something to say, show up and say it," declared Ronald Krist, one of three members on the policy-making board appointed by the governor. "The flip side of that is if you don't have the guts to show up, keep your mouth shut."

Ms. Steadman, 34, one of the first female members of the renowned law enforcement agency, left the Rangers last year and filed a human rights complaint alleging sexual harassment. She is now assigned to a Department of Public Safety unit in Houston.

A 1994 gathering in southeast Texas was cited by Ms. Steadman as evidence of a pattern of harassment while she was a Texas Ranger.

Ms. Steadman said most of the Rangers at a privately owned lodge near Spurger, about 90 miles northeast of Houston, were drinking and using coarse language. She was told to prepare salad and potatoes and to wash dishes and mix drinks, she said.

"I was insulted and humiliated," she said in a 23-page complaint that led to an internal inquiry by DPS investigators.

Rangers officials acknowledged in a report obtained by The Associated Press June 3 that there was drinking, small-stakes gambling and off-color language at the retreat.

But they said no one was intoxicated, the poker game was legal and the "harsh, profane language" was not directed at Ms. Steadman.

"There is no evidence Steadman was treated inappropriately," the report concluded.

Asked if the commission's inquiry renders the DPS report meaningless or suspect, Krist, a Houston attorney, replied: "I don't think it does anything with reference to that report other than to be totally open. ... There's been people suggesting that the internal affairs report was slanted and biased. ... I'm not saying that internal investigation wasn't thorough. I think it was."

He said the inquiry would simply supplement the report.

"I don't know of it's ever happening before," Krist said of today's hearing. Mike Cox, a DPS public information officer, said he knew of no precedent. Ms. Steadman agreed.

"There's nothing fair could come out of this ... but I'm going," she said. "It's a complete no-win situation for me. I have no expectations of gaining any ground here."

"I have never from day one thought this was a good idea, or even right."

She described the inquiry as a form of sexual harassment and said, "To my way of thinking, this is just prolonging it and continuing it."

Ms. Steadman asked DPS investigator Lisa Sheppard of Corpus Christi to join her at the Austin meeting.

"I wouldn't miss it for the world," said Ms. Sheppard, 34, who spurned a coveted Rangers' job last year and since has filed a sex discrimination lawsuit against the agency.

Conservancy finally gets island, what else, a stolen car

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — After a decade of trying, Nature Conservancy Inc. has finally secured a nesting haven on San Jose Christi Bay.

"You can look at it two ways: Either it took a ridiculously long amount of time, or it was too complicated to do quickly," said James E. Ziegler, director of land protection for the nonprofit environmental group.

"This deal had a lot of moving parts. It was hard to get all the parties to agree."

The purchase assures that the area will not be developed commercially.

The land purchase involved the nonprofit Nature Conservancy preservation organization, four state agencies, three oil companies and the island's owner.

Accused car thief escapes lockup, what else, a stolen car

WOOD COUNTY (AP) — Wood County jail inmates don't know how a stolen car thief escaped their facility, but they are sure about how he got out.

The escape occurred Monday night, when a jailer contending with a riot, led them to the jail's back door. He evaded them late in the night. He was still at large.

The escape was a source of mystery for jailers. A Wood County Sheriff's Department dispatcher Bobby Cummings said.

from the downtown Quitman lockup just before midnight Sunday without damaging any doors or windows.

Gann originally was detained June 11 on charges of car theft, felony possession of marijuana with intent to deliver and misdemeanor theft. He's also wanted in McKinney on another charge of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle, Wood County Sheriff's Department dispatcher Bobby Cummings said.

Bennett to address DARE conference

HOUSTON (AP) — A former drug czar will join the president and an address of drug abuse and educators at the National Drug Abuse Resistance Education Officers Conference, which begins today.

Speakers include the former Houston police chief and current drug czar, and former Education Secretary William Bennett will speak at the conference, which lasts through Saturday and is expected to draw between 2,500 and 2,800 officers from all 50 states and 14 countries.

"The conference goal is to ensure that D.A.R.E. instructors go back to their communities excited about the job they're doing, have the tools they need and know the program is growing," said Sgt. Nathan McDuell of the Houston Police Department's D.A.R.E. program.

Brown and Bennett will speak Thursday.

Courthouse metal detector increases safety, security

It's scary to think that a metal detector now in place at the Howard County Courthouse might someday locate a weapon.

However, it's comforting to know that the device is in place and security is that much greater at the courthouse.

Once upon a time, the idea of violence breaking out in our courthouse might have seemed silly. However, these days it is no longer safe to leave houses unlocked or to leave purses in cars. Sad as it seems, we can't just completely trust everyone any more.

With the high emotions surrounding jury selection for the upcoming Levy Lee Edmondson trial, the metal detector has arrived not a moment too soon. Deputy Sgt. Barney Edens refers to increasing nationwide episodes of courtroom violence as a reason to have the detector.

And he's right. Why wait until somebody is shot or stabbed to install a detector? Reacting to such incidents doesn't bring back the life that has already been taken, or heal the injuries already inflicted. Prevention is the best way to lower the risk of these frightening incidents ever happening.

County officials have demonstrated proactive concern for people's safety. It's a smart move. Officials in similar positions across the country, even those in seemingly safe areas such as ours, would be smart to duplicate it.

Other Views

Here is a sampling of editorial opinion from Texas newspapers: July 9

San Antonio Express-News on flag protection:

"The flag has been altered any number of times," then-U.S. Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo., told his colleagues in 1989 as they debated a constitutional amendment banning flag burning.

"But in the 200-year history of our Constitution, the Bill of Rights has never been altered."

Today, the crowning glory of the Bill of Rights is once again under assault as congressional flag wavers renew their push to limit the First Amendment to outlaw flag burning as a peaceful form of political protest.

Desecrating the Bill of Rights under the cloak of flag waving is more reprehensible than burning Old Glory.

And by threatening the constitutional protection afforded unpopular minority opinion, it is immeasurably more dangerous to the fabric of liberty that makes this country both unique and great.

July 8

Fort Worth Star-Telegram on truth in advertising:

How about a big vote of thanks to the Democrats and the Bill Clinton presidential campaign for finally making it brutally clear that those who fork over $50,000 or $100,000 for a political dinner are buying access and favoritism?

It is true, but no defense, that everybody does and has been doing it for years. The Reagan-Bush campaigns had the "Eagle Club" for $100,000 donors. The contribution bought dinner invitations at the White House and private briefings.

Never, however, has a campaign so frankly spelled out exactly what is being ordered from the menu: $100,000 gets you two dinners with Clinton, two with Vice President Gore, the chance to accompany party leaders on a foreign trade mission, daily faxes, two policy retreats with administration officials and your own "contact person" at the Democratic National Committee to handle personal requests.

We hope that the Clinton folks' candor about the access being purchased will shame politicians of both parties into doing something more than blushing and pointing partisan fingers at these practices. Former Reagan and Bush press secretary Marlin Fitzwater says there is a line — promising government favors — that mustn't be crossed. Yet special access to leaders has long carried with it that very promise, however it is phrased.

The lesson is that this is going to continue, or get worse, until Congress goes after the expense of running for office and the free-wheeling approach to raising money from those seeking influence.

July 10

Pecos Enterprise on military bases as pork:

The base closure commission has reached its decision on what military bases are to be closed, scaled back or kept open and in some cases expanded.

President Clinton can accept the entire recommendation or throw it all out. We hope that he will accept the whole thing, and let's get on with trimming the federal budget.

Many bases were started as pork barrel projects, efforts by influential members in Congress to get a federal payroll in their district.

Now the time has come — as the expression goes — to pay the fiddler. In other words, we've lived off the fat of the land, and some of the fat didn't exist, so now we need to go on a diet.

Sure, some communities will suffer for a time, but in all aspects of government, cutbacks are needed. Our country has got to get to a balanced budget or it will, in the end, hurt our children and generations to come. Excessive spending has already damaged our economy and the ability of people to take part in the American Dream.

July 10

The Dallas Morning News on turtle-safe shrimp:

Remember the scene in the movie "Forrest Gump"? The one in which Forrest dumps his first shrimp catch onto the deck of his boat? It was a merry sight: the successful fisherman, his deck squirming with shrimp, nothing but shrimp.

But Hollywood's image varied with real life in a key respect. Shrimp nets usually don't capture shrimp alone, but other wildlife too, including endangered sea turtles.

Indeed, marine experts estimate that the world's shrimpers trap, kill and discard up to 10 pounds of "incidental catch," or "trash fish," for every one pound of shrimp they catch.

Concerned Texans should know what really happens because Texas shrimp season resumes July 15 after a two-month hiatus, and there are reasons to believe it will be hard on Gulf of Mexico sea turtles, especially the most endangered one of all, the Kemp's ridley.

So far this year, 179 sea turtles have washed up dead on Texas beaches, including 77 Kemp's ridleys. (Last year, 526 turtles washed up, including 254 Kemp's ridleys.) Marine experts ruefully expect this year's toll to jump once Texas shrimping resumes.

The simplest way to stop this senseless slaughter would be for shrimpers to obey the federal law requiring them to equip their nets with turtle escape devices. But, judging by the steady drumbeat of turtle deaths, all do not obey. In fact, some dead turtles show signs of deliberate mutilation — a sign of defiance by a misguided and, we hope, unrepresentative minority.

Obviously, shrimpers must police themselves better so that the illegal actions of a few resisters do not tarnish the entire industry.

The National Marine Fisheries Service should improve its enforcement of turtle protection laws. It announced a new turtle protection plan in March. However, environmental groups sued it Thursday, charging it continued to neglect turtle safety.

Finally, consumers should shun shrimp they know to be illegally caught. The San Francisco-based Earth Island Institute Wednesday unveiled its plan to certify "Turtle-safe shrimp" — that is, shrimp caught in nets having turtle escape devices. Consumers should begin to look for the turtle-safe label in stores and restaurants.

The Texas State Aquarium in Corpus Christi opened its sea turtle exhibit Thursday. It goes without saying that sea turtles should be able to survive in the wild as well as in a 40,000-gallon man-made tank.

The meeting was on the ambulance service.

Two from the fire department was there, no one from AMT was there, because they got a letter stating a different time period, which wasn't 10 a.m.

I sat there and heard a lot of ridiculous statements of promises, that they will be better, better timing and more sufficient; also the city will be saving money. The amount stated in the meeting was $10,000 (stated on the radio was $8,000 yearly) which amount is correct or is either one. The amount of money saved is very small compared to the sufficient care, knowledge and dependable we are getting now. I wish everyone would realize that the fire department is not going to have complete training in just five SHORT months. Even doctors and nurses don't have complete training in five short months.

The training they need is 18 months to two years. I would like to say I pray to the Lord God almighty that these people will have the timing and knowledge to respond to the person in need.

Heart problems sideline Yeltsin

MOSCOW (AP) — Boris Yeltsin, long beset by rumors of poor health, was hospitalized today with heart problems described as "acute." Doctors said the 64-year-old Russian president was conscious and that his prognosis was good.

Yeltsin's press service issued a terse, two-sentence announcement: "Today, in connection with acute ischemia heart disease, the president of the Russian Federation, B.N. Yeltsin was hospitalized in the Central Clinical Hospital (in Moscow).

Tests and treatment are being carried out at the present time."

The Interfax news agency said Yeltsin remained "fully conscious" and that doctors have a "sufficiently optimistic prognosis."

"Judging by the first data from Boris Yeltsin's examination, nothing serious has happened to him," a presidential spokesman, Sergei Medvedev, told the ITAR-Tass news agency. He said doctors believed Yeltsin would not be hospitalized long.

Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin, Yeltsin's No. 2, was at work in Moscow, his spokesman said. Under the Russian constitution, Chernomyrdin would replace Yeltsin if the president were unable to serve.

A Chernomyrdin spokesman, Viktor Konnov, told ITAR-Tass Yeltsin was able to discharge his duties.

The heart disease described by the Kremlin is a condition that restricts the supply of blood to the heart.

Babies among dead when church, school bombed

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — At least 13 babies were among 65 civilians killed when a military warplane bombed a Roman Catholic church and an attached school in northern Sri Lanka, the Red Cross said today.

In addition to those killed at the church, 55 other civilians died and 250 were injured in the military's biggest offensive against Tamil rebels in eight years, the International Committee of the Red Cross said. President Chandrika Kumaratunga ordered the military to investigate the bombing of the church, but said she did not think the military carried out Sunday's attack.

"The distance and the direction of firing make it unlikely that any action by the security forces would have affected the church," she said in a statement from Colombo, the capital.

A government source on Monday confirmed the attack and said it occurred while civilians were taking shelter in the church. He said more than 65 people died.

The military launched the offensive Sunday on the Jaffna Peninsula, a northern stronghold of the rebels, who have been fighting for a homeland since 1983. Military sources have said they will not target the town of Jaffna itself.

The rebels said Monday that more than 160 civilians had been killed.

Burmese dissident released after six years in prison

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — Freed after six years of detention, dissident leader Aung San Suu Kyi said today that her democracy movement remains strong and urged the military government to negotiate peace in Burma.

"We have to choose between dialogue and utter devastation," she said.

Mrs. Suu Kyi, a Nobel laureate, was freed Monday by the government that seized power after crushing huge pro-democracy rallies that she had led in 1988.

She met reporters at her residence, where she had been held under house arrest.

Woman found alive in mall's rubble

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Pronouncing herself "all right but hungry," a young woman emerged alive from the debris of a crumpled shopping mall today after surviving nearly 12 days on rainwater that soaked into a blanket.

"She even joked that she could stay there several more days," said Cho Won-bum, one of the first rescuers to spot Yoo Ji-hwan, 19, in the wreckage.

With her body wrapped in a pink blanket and her face covered with a yellow towel, Yoo was carried on a stretcher to an ambulance. She gently lifted the towel to see her first daylight in 286 hours.

"I am all right but hungry," Yoo told rescuers shortly before she was pulled out at 3:30 p.m., nearly two hours after she had been discovered by sound detectors.

Doctors said Yoo, a sales clerk at the Sampoong Department Store, which collapsed June 29, was "in relatively good health." "She is dehydrated and has a scratch in her leg. Other than that, she is OK," said Kim In-chul, a doctor at St. Mary's Hospital.

Workers found her in a pocket of air too small for her to sit up in. They said she handed up her sales-uniform nameplate through a hole. Television footage showed one of Yoo's feet, with manicured toenails, through the gap.

Yoo's mother, watching the rescue work, screamed: "She is alive! She is alive!" and broke into tears. Yoo's father, Yoo Gon-chang, bedridden for three years, watched the rescue on television.

She is dehydrated and has a scratch in her leg. Other than that, she is OK.

Kim In-chul

The jubilation was tempered when earlier reports of three more survivors proved wrong. Officials said rescuers misunderstood Yoo when she mentioned three people who had been alive near her. The three were believed dead.

Yoo was the 26th survivor found since the collapse, one of Korea's worst peacetime disasters. Two days afterward, 24 cleaners were pulled alive from an intact third-basement room.

Yoo was found near where a 21-year-old man was pulled out alive Sunday — a location officials believed held virtually no possibility of containing survivors.

All work using cranes and other heavy equipment immediately stopped while Yoo was dug out with hand tools. Television stations all broadcast the rescue live.

Two more bodies were recovered after Yoo's rescue, pushing the death toll to 209. About 220 people were still listed as missing. More than 900 have been reported hurt.

Earlier today, President Kim Young-sam declared a stepped-up war against corruption, calling it the root cause of the collapse.

Since Kim took office in early 1993 as the country's first president in 32 years with no military background, more than 3,000 government officials, generals, educators and politicians have been arrested or reprimanded for corruption.

But Kim said corruption remains pervasive in Korean society, as shown in the probe of the collapse.

His government has been criticized for failing to prevent a series of public-works accidents. A major bridge in Seoul collapsed last October, killing 32 people. Two gas explosions earlier this year killed more than 140.

Shoddy construction and disregard of safety standards were blamed for the store's cave-in.

Only two of the 10 city officials sought by police in connection with the case have been arrested.

Four Sampoong executives were arrested last week on charges of bribing city officials. They also were charged with knowing the building was shaky and not warning that its top floor was crumbling.

Companies line up for trade as U.S., Vietnam open doors

WASHINGTON (AP) — Could it be that the country that bombed Vietnam's harbors, bridges and roads will get the contracts to rebuild them? American businesses fervently hope so.

U.S. companies are lining up not only to bid for big construction projects but also to sell everything from airliners to soft drinks two decades after the end of the Vietnam War.

Executives expressed optimism about their prospects as they looked toward today's scheduled announcement by President Clinton of the resumption of full diplomatic relations with Vietnam.

Such big names as AT&T, Caterpillar, Coca-Cola and Citicorp are already in the country, taking advantage of Clinton's decision in February 1994 to lift the U.S. trade embargo on Vietnam.

But officials say they have been severely handicapped against such formidable business rivals as the Japanese.

Last January, 112 U.S. companies formed the Coalition for U.S.-Vietnam Trade to lobby Washington to take the next step and re-establish full diplomatic relations.

Normalization will allow the administration to authorize several government agencies to support American corporations as they compete for Vietnamese business.

Primary among these agencies is the U.S. Export-Import Bank, which provides loans and loan guarantees to finance sale of U.S.-manufactured goods overseas.

Government-subsidized loans are one of the key incentives that other countries, particularly Japan and France, hold out to win big contracts for their companies.

"Since the trade embargo ended last year, we have been aggressively pursuing business in Vietnam, but the cold reality is that until relations were normalized, most of that business was going to the Japanese," said William C. Lane, director of government affairs for Caterpillar.

The economic prizes are sizable. With 73 million people, Vietnam is the 13th largest country in the world, with a pressing need for what by one estimate could total $7 billion in investment over the next seven years in roads, ports and a modern telecommunications system.

"The country was blown to bits and it has no infrastructure. Roads, ports and telecommunications systems all have to be built from scratch," said Daniel O'Flaherty, chairman of the Vietnam trade coalition.

In addition to construction giants such as Brown & Root Inc. and the Bechtel Group Inc., the list of companies involved in the trade coalition is a who's who of U.S. corporations, from AT&T and American Express to United Airlines and Chrysler.

Low wage workers likely to remain poor

WASHINGTON (AP) — Low-wage workers with children are more likely to be poor today than in the 1970s, and a study predicts they will be worse off if Congress pares spending on tax relief, Medicaid, food stamps and child care subsidies.

The Republican-majority Congress is considering cuts in programs that aid the working poor as part of efforts to overhaul welfare, balance the budget, rein in Medicaid costs and curb fraud in the Earned Income Tax Credit for low-wage workers.

The proposals signal an unraveling of political support for workers at the bottom rung of the economic ladder, after years of congressional efforts to improve their fortunes, according to a report Monday by the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, a liberal advocacy group.

The research group said the turnaround comes at a time when the share of working families with children who are in poverty has risen by nearly half since 1977.

At that time, 7.7 percent of families with children in which the head of the household worked were poor. By 1993, the poverty rate among these families had risen to 11.4 percent, the center said.

According to the group's analysis, just over half of all poor Americans, about 22 million people, live in households in which someone works full or part time.

The erosion in the value of the minimum wage is to blame for some of the decline in the fortunes of these workers, the center said, but other factors include a rising proportion of working poor families that are headed by a single mother.

Minty-fresh escape nets inmate 30 years

HUNTINGTON, W. Va. (AP) — An inmate who escaped from prison using a rope fashioned out of minty-fresh dental floss drew 30 years behind bars Monday.

"Sounds good to me," said Robert Shepard, 35, of Parkersburg told U.S. District Judge Robert Staker.

Shepard pleaded guilty in May to breaking out of a year-old jail in Charleston and committing other crimes before and after the 1994 escape.

He received five years for the escape and additional time for the other offenses.

Shepard, who is about 5-foot-9 and 150 pounds, braided a rope as thick as a telephone cord out of floss bought at the jail commissary, and used it to scale an 18-foot recreation yard wall. He then cut through a fence with a 3-inch hacksaw blade.

An unidentified man and woman, said to be employees on the fifth floor of the BTI Building in Raleigh, N.C., console one another Monday after another employee opened a package that contained a bomb. The resulting explosion caused the evacuation of the building shortly before noon. The woman the package was addressed to was taken to Wake Medical Center with multiple injuries and is listed in serious condition. One other person was also injured in the blast.

Psychiatrist: Susan Smith sane but is her own worst enemy

UNION, S.C. (AP) — The judge presiding over Susan Smith's trial faces a difficult choice: Declare her insane against the advice of the state's chief psychiatrist, or proceed with the trial of a woman who may sabotage her own defense.

Jury selection was to resume today with Circuit Judge William Howard pondering this crucial question for Ms. Smith, who could get the death penalty if convicted of two murder charges. After claiming a car-jacker kidnapped her young sons, she confessed Nov. 3 to drowning them in a lake.

Dr. Donald Morgan, the state psychiatrist, said during a hearing Monday that Ms. Smith is legally competent to stand trial. But the doctor warned the judge that if Ms. Smith takes the stand in her own defense, her growing suicidal tendencies may take over.

"She feels she deserves punishment and her desire would be not to continue living in prison," Morgan said. "If she got out of prison, she said she would take her life as rapidly as possible."

She also has crying spells and nausea and takes anti-depressants to combat intense feelings of hopelessness, sleepless and worthlessness, he said.

Howard, who received a copy of Ms. Smith's evaluation in May, seemed surprised when Morgan said Ms. Smith could only be considered competent if she doesn't testify.

"Your concern is that if she takes the stand she will say she's guilty and wants to be punished?" Howard asked. "That's correct," he replied. "She wishes that it will turn out that she will die."

If Howard declares Ms. Smith incompetent to stand trial, she would be sent to a psychiatric hospital until she is declared sane. She would then face the same charges again.

Her attorney, David Bruck, has said his defense will be based on her mental state.

If Ms. Smith pleads guilty but mentally ill, she could be sentenced to death. A verdict of innocent by reason of insanity, which means she didn't understand that what she was doing was wrong, would send her to a mental hospital. If she were later declared sane, she could be released.

Ms. Smith showed no emotion during Morgan's hour of testimony. He was the prosecution's sole witness, and Ms. Smith's lawyers did not put on any experts of their own.

Asked at an impromptu news conference if a person is competent to stand trial while incompetent to address the jury and testify, Bruck said simply, "No."

The longtime death penalty opponent said trying to save the life of a client who wanted to die did not trouble him. "When you see someone on the edge of a building, you don't let them jump," Bruck said.

Prosecutor Tommy Pope acknowledged the trial would be delayed if Ms. Smith is found incompetent, but insisted that Morgan's testimony supported a key state claim.

Package bomb explodes, seriously injuring one

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A mail bomb that injured two employees of a long-distance telephone company probably was not from the Unabomber, whose targets have included high-tech companies, authorities said.

"At this point it does not appear to be the work of the Unabomber," said George Grotz, spokesman for the FBI and the Unabomber task force in San Francisco. He said the FBI is investigating along with the local bomb squad.

Tracy Bullis, 35, described as a manager in a technical field, was in serious condition early today after undergoing surgery for hand and torso injuries at Wake Medical Center.

Bullis opened a mail bomb Monday in her office at BTI, a long-distance telephone company with 30 offices across the Southeast. Authorities said the package containing the bomb was addressed to her.

Co-worker Judith Collins Harrison, 38, of Wake Forest, was in Bullis' office at the time of the blast. She was treated and released from the hospital after complaining of hearing loss.

The blast shook the fifth floor of the nine-story office building that is headquarters for BTI.

About 300 people work in the building, which was quickly evacuated and searched for more bombs. None was found.

The Unabomber, so code-named by the FBI because many of his victims are connected to universities, has killed three people and wounded 23 in 16 package bombings since 1978. He has also targeted high-tech companies.

BTI officials said they did not know why anyone would send a bomb to Bullis, who managed a department that coordinated the lease or purchase of telephone lines from local or other long-distance telephone companies. She has worked for the company for seven years and is married with two children, company officials said.

BTI vice president Tony Copeland described Bullis and Harrison as "icons" in the company. "They know everything. I have to go to them to find out things," he said.

The blast damaged Bullis' office and tore a hole in the wall of an adjoining office in the glass-and-stone building, Copeland said.

BTI planned to open for business today but will leave the fifth floor to bomb investigators, Copeland said.

International stars bow out of district tourney

By DAVE HARGRAVE
Sports Editor

ODESSA - The Big Spring Little League banner flies no more, at least for the 11- and 12-year-olds.

The last remaining Big Spring team in the District 3 tournament, the International League All-Stars, lost a 6-5 heartbreaker to Odessa Jim Parker Monday at Odessa's Sherwood Park. The Big Springers bounced back from 1-0, 4-1 and 6-3 deficits to make a game of it, but they bowed out of the double-elimination tournament with a 1-2 record.

The game opened as a pitching duel between Big Spring's Jason Martinez and Odessa's Cade Greaves. Martinez retired the first two batters he faced, but Odessa's Brian Williams struck out Martinez and eventually scored on Jack Finley's RBI single. Martinez answered in the third inning, but third when Martinez's pitch was caught, smashing a no-doubt, opposite-field homer well over the fence in right-center.

Odessa quickly built another lead as the advantage shifted to the hitters. In the fourth, three straight Odessa singles from Chris Mineo, Theo Navarrette and Dustin Pool plated one run. One out later, Odessa's Taylor Warren grounded a ball to Big Spring shortstop Clarence Wilkins, who didn't look the runner at third back long enough to keep him from scoring. Another run scored on a fielder's choice, and Odessa led 4-1.

Big Spring cut its deficit to 4-3 in the fourth. Willie Bravo singled, Luis Diaz walked and Michael Solis doubled to score Bravo. Big Spring made a critical error when Diaz was caught for the first out of inning when he tried to score on a wild pitch, but Anthony Hernandez did hit an RBI single to plate a second run.

Big Spring chased Gregory in the fourth, but Navarrette pitched out of further damage. Big Spring got to Navarrette in the fifth, however, when Wilkins hit an RBI double and scored on a two-out error, but Odessa had scored two in the top of the inning. Big Spring still trailed 6-5.

That's where it ended, but not without some drama in the bottom of the sixth. Odessa brought Mineo to the mound to clinch the victory, but Mineo showed some wildness in walking two hitters. With two out and runners on first and second, Mineo got the out he and Odessa needed when Steven Franco hit into a forceout.

Big Spring received superb defensive play in center field from Luis Diaz, and Bravo was the leading hitter with his 2-for-3 night.

Haley signs 4-year deal

IRVING (AP) - Carmen Policy was right. When Charles Haley retires, it just means he wants a better deal.

HALEY

The prophecy of the San Francisco 49ers club president came true Monday when the Dallas Cowboys announced All-Pro defensive end Haley had gone from retirement talk to a commitment to play until 1999. All it took was $12 million.

"I want to play every year with everything I've got," Haley said. "I want to retire a Cowboy."

That's what most people suspected after the Cowboys' loss to San Francisco in the NFC championship game, when Haley announced he was retiring. In March, Haley said he didn't mean it.

Policy, who had dealt with Haley in the past, had this on-target reaction to Haley's premature retirement: "When Charles Haley says he is retiring, it just means he wants to renegotiate."

Cowboys owner Jerry Jones said the deal, reached Sunday, includes a $3 million signing bonus and counts $2 million against this year's salary cap. Haley was to earn $1.95 million this season in the final year of his previous contract.

"When we didn't have him, we couldn't spell Super Bowl. This is a major signing for our future," Jones said.

It makes Haley the Cowboys' highest paid defensive player.

Said Haley: "This is the first franchise that has treated Charles Haley as a man. This is the happiest moment in my life. I want to thank God and Jerry Jones."

Haley, 31, retired immediately after the Cowboys' 38-28 loss to San Francisco in the NFL title game, but returned to the team March 8.

Baseball knows it needs to put on good show tonight

ALL-STARS

ARLINGTON (AP) - The heat is on at this year's All-Star game, and we're not just talking about the weather.

After the beating baseball has taken in the public's eye over the last 11 months, the exhibition game that was once a meaningless and leisurely nine innings of diversion has turned into something much, much bigger.

This year, it's almost expected to be a remedy for everything that's gone wrong - if not a panacea, then maybe a shot in the arm that leads to a lasting cure.

Make this one special, the thinking goes, and the national pastime may once again become a national treasure instead of a national laughing-stock.

It may be the game's best chance to recapture the public's fancy or doom itself to further dog days of discontent, disillusionment and disinterest.

"I try not to think of it in those terms, but I do know baseball needs a boost. It's a great town here, a great showcase. And if you turn your attention toward the game, it will come around," Cal Ripken said.

"I think it will take more than this game tomorrow to bring the fans back, but it is a good way to get the game back in the spotlight. We still have a lot of work to do with the fans, but this may help get them back," Fred McGriff said.

Baseball has so much riding on tonight's game because of the self-inflicted damage it incurred with the strike that canceled the expanded playoffs and World Series, delayed a real spring training and nearly brought about a travesty called replacement baseball.

Fans feel as though they've been treated shabbily, taken for granted and had their intelligence insulted. It has brought about a drop in paid attendance of 20 percent, a drop in real attendance that's even larger and a drop in interest that no one anticipated.

"In San Diego, we haven't been able to draw 14,000 until this past homestand. We'd have 7,000 or 8,000. We're not talking about 35,000 or 40,000 anymore," the Padres' Tony Gwynn said.

Tonight, however, the stands will be full with 43,000-plus fans and a television audience that hasn't seen a baseball game on a national broadcast network since last August. ABC will show the game at 7:29 p.m.

Japanese fans going crazy about native son Nomo

TOKYO - Japanese fans went wild Monday for the All-Star game - a pep rally by fax.

"We Japanese people are proud of your splendid achievement of your splendid achievement," Prime Minister Tomiichi Murayama wrote, according to the Foreign Ministry.

"Nomo, hang in there!" For the tiny number of Japanese who won't be watching the game live or rebroadcast portions later, other media are sure to continue comprehensive coverage.

The game will be carried live at 9 a.m. Japan time Wednesday on satellite television and on dozens of outdoor screens throughout the country. The timing will be a welcome relief to diehard Nomo fans, who have been known to stay up until the early hours of the morning to watch live coverage of his regular games.

In Tokyo's hip Shibuya shopping district, the "Nomo Corner" at the U.S. major leagues' official store has been selling out of Nomo paraphernalia, including Dodgers caps for $45, uniform shirts for $450 and signed baseballs for $150.

Nomo fever suits store manager Naoki Igarashi just fine.

"People who normally don't pay attention to (U.S. baseball) have been coming in here because of Nomo," Igarashi said. "People were waiting for a hero to come along." For those fans for whom daily media coverage, Nomo goods and swapping Nomo data in offices and computer on-line services is not enough, a travel company has been offering tours to Los Angeles just to watch Nomo play.

Amid all the excitement over Nomo's success, however, has been the less cheerful realization that in order to reach his full potential the 26-year-old pitcher had to leave the confines of Japanese baseball, where emphasis is placed more on team spirit than on raw talent.

Now that Nomo has done so well in the majors - long considered beyond the reach of Japanese players - some are wondering whether the Japanese model of the sport, with its militaristic overtones, grinding practices and emphasis on self-sacrifice, isn't due for a reconsideration.

The normally staid Asahi newspaper, pulling out all the stops in an editorial titled "Nomo The Hero," also pondered the ramifications of Nomo's success for Japanese baseball, or "yakyu."

"Japanese ... teams have often been likened to corporations," Asahi said. Nomo's tonic effect on Japan comes on the heels of six straight months of mood-souring news, including a devastating earthquake, poison gas attacks on subways, a plane hijacking and a letter bombing on the mayor of Tokyo.

Back to the point. The Midland Angels announced Monday they'll be hosting another Howard County Community Night. This year's event at Midland's Christensen Stadium is Aug. 20.

Surely you can rearrange your schedule. After all, the game is...say it with me, children: FREE.

The Angels and the sponsors of the event are distributing free tickets to the 6 p.m. Sunday game between Midland and the El Paso Diablos. It's the last home game of the season for the Angels, who have already qualified for the playoffs by winning the first-half title in the Texas League's Western Division. You can grab your tickets at the Herald - just stop by the front desk - or you can visit the other sponsors in town. Tickets aren't available yet, but we'll let you know when they are.

The Angels have added a bonus this season - Howard County Community Night happens to coincide with Fan Appreciation Night. Prizes will be added to the Angels' already large gift-giving setup, and prizes will be slashed throughout the park.

Of course, if you need a special gimmick to pull you to the game even after someone has handed you a free ticket, stay home and save a seat for a more worthy fan. Baseball is back, and for the minor-league fan the game never left. Strikes or no strikes in the major-league world don't matter in the minors. The minor-leaguers play regardless, and they play their butts off because they want a slice of the green money pie "The Show" offers.

Forget what's on the field, though, and realize the Angels put on one of the best shows you'll see in baseball. The Angels keep the fans hopping with never-ending contests, entertainment and music. Have you seen the Dizzy Bat Race? The Frisbee Toss? Dash For Cash? The Best Seat in the House?

The Angels let kids race remote-control cars across the field during one of the between-inning breaks, and then the kids get to run the bases after the game. There are 12 contests fans can enter, not to mention the more than 20 lucky-number prizes given away each night to those that buy the game program. By the way, the stadium is easy to find - take Exit 144 off I-20, then take the exit leading to Loop 250 North. You'll see the stadium on your left after a few miles, where Loop 250 meets N. Lamesa Road.

If you love baseball, you'll love seeing an Angels game, and if you don't like baseball you still could enjoy all the entertaining sideshows. Children love the mascot, Juice the Moose, and parents might love the fact you can take a family of four to a game for less than $25 if you use the concession stand wisely.

Your wallet won't feel any hit thanks to the free tickets. Give minor-league baseball a try. We're so sure you'll love every minute of it, the Herald is offering a money-back guarantee on all tickets it hands out!
