Indictments detail bombing plot

By FRED BAYLES
AP National Writer

The investigation into the Oklahoma City federal building bombing originally cast a wide net that considered international terrorists, foreign drug traffickers and home-grown militias as possible culprits.

In the end, 700 federal agents who pursued thousands of leads constructed a much punier conspiracy: three men linked by an Army barracks friendships, a hatred of federal authority and a love of weapons.

The indictments brought Thursday against Timothy McVeigh, Terry Nichols and Michael Fortier offered more details on how robbery, a string of aliases and scattered storage lockers were used to assemble the bomb that destroyed the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building.

The April 19 explosion killed 168 people and injured 500.

The indictments don't mark an end to the probe of the worst act of terrorism on American soil. Leads are still being checked and officials talk of other conspirators.

"The grand jury found probable cause to believe that there are others involved," said lead prosecutor Joseph Hartzler. "We will continue the investigation."

Oliver Revell, a former FBI associate deputy director for investigations, said the indictments show authorities believe they have the main players. However, after months of speculation about darker forces at work behind the bombing, including a noisy debate about government-hating militias, Revell said the public may find it hard to believe a pair of malcontents with few resources could carry out an act of such terrible magnitude.

"People try to match the enormity of the crime with the number of offenders, but there's no balance in these cases," he said. McVeigh, 27, and Nichols, 40, were charged with 11 counts, including use of weapons of mass destruction, destruction of federal property and killing of federal law enforcement officers. They could get the death penalty if convicted.

Accidents injure several residents

By KELLIE JONES
Staff Writer

Several Big Spring residents received minor injuries after being involved in two separate accidents on Thursday.

The first accident happened around 3:30 p.m. on Centerpoint Road, also known as County Road 28. The driver, Mark Roberts, 30, of Big Spring, was eastbound when he veered onto the north side of the road, overcorrected and rolled his 1979 Buick Le Sabre landing on its roof.

Roberts apparently had some sort of spasm due to an illness he suffers, according to Depart-

Big Spring Independent School District board of trustees voted to designate KBST radio as the flagship station for the 1995 football season.

During the budget workshop last month, members decided in order to be fair to both radio stations, they should rotate which station carried the status each year. For the last five years,

Major Marydell Tolcher, along with several others at the Salvation Army, put school supplies into bags Wednesday evening that will be given to needy area children. Over 200 kits will be made for kindergarten through eighth grade students.

Local businesses help 200 students through Salvation Army program

By KELLIE JONES

Some 200 students will be heading to class Aug. 17 with new school supplies thanks to the Salvation Army and several local businesses.

Earlier this week volunteers were at the Army's headquarters stuffing grocery bags from Big Spring IGA full of supplies both donated and bought locally.

Salvation Army Social Worker Danelle Castillo says T&P Credit Union, First National Bank and Bluebonnet Savings donated pens, pencils and rulers for the back-to-school kits.

"Officials with First National

Volunteers will hand out the kits to children Sunday afternoon.

Bank helped out a lot. They donated 100 pens, 100 pencils, all the map colors, boxes of tissues for first and second graders and all the red grading pens we needed," said Castillo.

"East Fourth Street Baptist Church gave us a monetary donation to help purchase additional supplies. Bob's Custom Woodwork donated pencils as well. The IGA store donated brown grocery bags for us to put the supplies in and HEB helped us to get the supplies too."

Volunteers will hand out the kits to children Sunday afternoon. Castillo adds they have a waiting list of an additional 100 students who need supplies. She says whatever kits are not picked up this weekend will be given to those on the list.

Castillo continued, "The concept of the kits is a lot different from our other projects. Many people think they do not qualify but we base the need on income and what kinds of expenses the family has. People who are our clients and work can qualify to get kits for their children."

Mullins named president of First National

By KELLIE JONES
Staff Writer

First National Bank has a new president.

R. Curtis Mullins has been promoted to the position, announced chairman and chief executive officer Jimmy Taylor Thursday afternoon.

Mullins has been with the bank since 1976. When he was first hired, Mullins was a vice president in the commercial loan department. He was promoted to executive vice president in 1981.

"I was pleased to be appointed and to be able to take on the responsibility of continuing a relationship with the community and our bank customers that has been a long-standing one for years and years," said Mullins.

"First National has been a leader in banking for a long time and I hope to continue that same leadership. I look forward to the challenges of the future and to continue serving the Howard County area in addition to our trade territory in Glasscock, Martin, Borden and Mitchell counties."

He adds one of his goals is to make the bank's relationship with the agriculture industry even stronger than in years past. Mullins says he plans to implement a number of new services to customers that were not available in the past.

The new bank president graduated from George Williams College in 1957 with a master of science degree in institutional business management. He has done post graduate work at Sul Ross University and graduated from the University of Colorado Graduate School of Banking in 1981.

Mullins has served in many public and civic organizations including being president or chairman of the Howard County Junior College District board of trustees, Big Spring Rotary Club, Big Spring State Hospital Advisory Committee and Heritage Museum board of trustees.

He has also served on the

Budget good news, bad news hits Coahoma ISD

By MARY McATEER

COAHOMA - Coahoma Independent School Board received the proverbial good news and bad news.

The bad news is the district's certified value has decreased from $158,339,906 to $145,797,436 for 1995-96 - a loss of $12,542,470.

The good news is cuts in the rest of the budget will allow the district to offset the state's new salary schedule for teachers and keep the maintenance and operations budget the same as last year's.

Members of Coahoma ISD's board of trustees discussed the 1995-96 budget at their regular meeting Monday.

Major budget cuts include elimination of the tax collector's office, not replacing the business manager who resigned. The business office was reorganized and Gina McKendrie named business manager at the last board meeting.

The board also agreed to purchase an energy management system and lighting retrofit from Honeywell. The energy management system is expected to save the district as much as $50,000 per year.

The price of school lunches went up by about 25 cents, bringing across the board lunch prices to approximately the same as Big Spring ISD's in most cases.

The board accepted Coahoma

State Bank's bid to be the district's depository for the 1995-97 biennium, and accepted line-item bids on janitorial supplies for the coming school year.

A public hearing on the 1995-96 budget is on the agenda for the next regular meeting 7 p.m. Aug. 21.

Tables turning on Serbs Drop in salmon could spell disaster for Canadian fishiers

Losses destroy dream of a 'Greater Serbia'

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — A miserable band of Croatian Serb refugees followed a trail of sorrow and despair to the Serb heartland, a place more humble and distant than the "Greater Serbia" nationalists promised them.

For many of the thousands of refugees crossing the border from Croatia on Thursday, Serb-led Yugoslavia will be their new home.

When the old Yugoslavia disintegrated, Serb nationalists proclaimed that Serb lands would be wherever Serbs lived. They seized control of one-third of Croatia in a 1991 war and 70 percent of Bosnia in fighting that began in 1992, forcibly evicting tens of thousands of Croats and Bosnian Muslims.

But now the tables are turned. Serbs lost a piece of western Bosnia and most of what they held in Croatia following last weekend's Croatian army offensive, and evicted Serbs have been pouring out by the thousands into Serbia, which along with Montenegro is all that is left of Yugoslavia.

"We won't be welcome anywhere," said 30-year-old Branko Vukotic, one of about 5,000 Croatian Serbs who arrived Thursday in Serbia.

Serbian police, sweating through their fatigues in the hot Balkan sun, banged on manual typewriters to register the refugees and the weapons they were ordered to turn over.

Red Cross workers handed out food, drinks and diapers. One woman threw herself under a stream of water, gushing from a tank at the roadside, as the heat shimmered off the highway. "I dreamed of this," she said.

Only hours before, many refugees were subjected to humiliating attacks by angry Croat civilians who threw stones, bricks and curses at passing convoys of Serb cars. An uncertain future lay in store.

A couple of elderly Croatian Serb refugees sit on top of a tractor in the Bosnian-Serb stronghold of Banja Luka, some 100 miles northwest of Sarajavo Thursday. More than 200,000 Serbs have fled their homeland in Croatia.

"Lost things should be returned to their owners," said 31-year-old Nada Bobic, turning in her hand a stone that was thrown through her car window. "I am going to send this back one day."

One soldier, Stevan Pavlovic, asked about the rapid fall of the Serb resistance in Croatia, said Serbs had to blame themselves.

"Crime, smuggling, that's what ruined us," he said. "The army was decaying day after day in the last couple of years. There was virtually no leadership, and then everything goes to hell."

Serbia was scrambling to accommodate the new arrivals. Authorities were directing refugees to hastily erected centers in southern and western Serbia.

But exits to Belgrade, the Serbian and Yugoslav capital, were blocked.

Authorities apparently feared trouble. The refugees feel betrayed by Serbia's President Slobodan Milosevic, whose nationalist rhetoric fueled the Serb rebellions in Croatia and Bosnia. He didn't send the Yugoslav army to help defend the Serbs against the Croatian army, which routed them in just three days.

Croatia's offensive set in motion the largest exodus of refugees in four years of war in former Yugoslavia. Up to 200,000 Serbs could be on the move.

Bosnia's Muslim-led government army, allied with the Croats, took part in the offensive, which freed the Muslim border enclave of Bihac, in northwest Bosnia, from a three-year siege.

TORONTO (AP) — Pacific Coast fishermen say they face disaster after the government halted commercial fishing on British Columbia's Fraser River because of a drastic drop in the number of sockeye salmon spawning there.

"It's like a farmer losing his crop," fisherman Edgar Birch told reporters after a crisis meeting with colleagues in Vancouver.

The Fraser is considered the most important salmon run on the Pacific Coast.

The federal Fisheries Department said Wednesday that only 3.3 million sockeye salmon are expected to return to the Fraser watershed to spawn this season, down from the pre-season estimate of 10.7 million.

As a result, the department postponed this week's scheduled start of commercial fishing on the Fraser and canceled two salmon fishing operations by Indians in the region.

A fishermen's union official said he will ask Fisheries Minister Brian Tobin for financial aid.

"I think we're no different from Prairie wheat farmers and the collapse of a crop," said Dennis Brown, vice president of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union.

"We're going to need help, we're going to need support during this time of trouble."

Mike Rekis, a director of the Pacific Gillnetters Association, said some fishermen are likely to lose their houses or boats because of financial problems.

"This year is basically a disaster," he said.

Experts have been unable to pinpoint the reason for the decrease in sockeye salmon, also known as red salmon. One theory is that they increasingly have become prey to mackerel.

If the pre-season estimate of 10.7 million sockeye had held true, the commercial fleet would have been allowed a catch of 6.7 million salmon.

With the lower estimate of 3.3 million, the industry is left with an allowable catch of only 1.1 million sockeye. Authorities said 1.7 million fish must be allowed to reach the spawning grounds to ensure viable future stocks, and 500,000 fish are allocated to the Indians.

The new figures mean an estimated loss to the British Columbia fishing industry of about $60 million.

The depletion of sockeye stocks is the second major blow to Canada's salmon fishermen this year. The government has lowered the allowable catch of chinook salmon in Pacific coastal waters as a conservation measure.

No survivors found yet from plane crash

TEPETITAN, El Salvador (AP) — Hampered by heavy fog and bad roads, rescuers scoured a jungle-covered mountainside for victims of El Salvador's deadliest air disaster — a plane crash that killed 65 people and left human remains scattered in trees.

Two ambassadors and at least five Americans died in the crash of Aviateca Flight 901 in heavy rain Wednesday evening. The search for bodies, suspended by darkness, was to resume this morning.

The plane took off from Miami, stopped in Guatemala City and was approaching Comalapa Airport near San Salvador at about 7:30 p.m. Wednesday when it went down near the top of the 7,000-foot Chichontepec volcano, also known as San Vicente, about 37 miles east of San Salvador.

Aviateca did not immediately release the names of the 58 passengers, though it identified the seven Guatemalan crew members. The Boeing 737 was to have gone on to Nicaragua, and Costa Rica.

Fog prevented helicopters from reaching the crash site Thursday, and bad roads stopped rescue vehicles miles from the wreckage. At six miles away, the village of Tepetitán is the closest settlement to the crash site.

About 600 people — police, military and volunteers flown in from neighboring Guatemala — participated in the search.

Sixty bodies had been found by Thursday afternoon, Eduardo Mirroquin, Aviateca's reservations supervisor, said in San Vicente, 37 miles east of San Salvador.

Asked about the possibility of survivors, Enrique Beltranena, Aviateca's general manager, said: "We have found none up to now, and we don't believe there are any."

Some remains, scattered over a 500-square-yard area, were caught in trees. Many were burned beyond recognition, and only 18 had been identified by Thursday evening. Workers were putting bodies and body parts in clear plastic bags. Five doctors helped with identifications.

The cause of the crash was not known. Gladys Miranda de Valencia, the sister of pilot Axel Byron Miranda Herrera, said Aviateca told her he had reported unspecified mechanical problems minutes before the crash.

Aviateca spokesman Mauricio Rodriguez said it was raining "very, very hard" when the plane crashed.

Quote of the Day
'Freedom without thought is confusion.'
Kahlil Gibran, writer, 1923

Being symbol of a cause is never an easy role

For many years, Norma McCorvey - Jane Roe in the landmark Roe vs. Wade ruling - stood as the symbol of a woman's right to an abortion.

Now, McCorvey has joined forces with an anti-abortion group, Operation Rescue, after being baptized.

McCorvey said, while she has regrets about her role in Roe vs. Wade, she still believes in a woman's right to a safe, legal abortion in the first trimester.

It is never easy being a symbol. Some are thrust into it and used. Others take to it with ease because it is something they truly believe in.

Symbols are made to be larger than life and too often lose their humanity. Too many people do not see them as people making a hard choice, but as superhumans who had no doubts or fears about what they were doing.

Opinions expressed on this page are those of the Editorial Board of the Big Spring Herald unless otherwise indicated.

They do. Most often, they are not completely sure about the road they have chosen, only know that the choice is one they have to make.

In McCorvey's case, let's hope it isn't exchanging pedestals only to be used again, this time in the name of pro-life.

Pro-life or pro-choice, McCorvey is simply a human being with all that implies. She may not realize it, but once again she has become a symbol for the issue underlying Roe vs. Wade - a woman's right to choose.

Letters to the Editor

Bottom line' is to fix course

Editor's note: This letter was written and received by the Herald prior to council actions Tuesday.

Human Nature is so prone to criticize, it seldom takes time to say thanks. I would like to take this opportunity to extend praise and thanks where indeed praise and thanks are due.

Comanche Trail Golf Club - the very name itself generates more disagreement than any name the heavenly fathers on the Big Spring City Council have gambled with this year. Coming from nearby Midland, twice a week for the past several years, I have braved the 19th Hole and listened to every condemnation of the course and its management from A to Z and back again.

The personnel that govern CTGC have been the target of more incrimination than the prosecution at the Simpson trial has launched O.J.' way; I find myself guilty as charged as I too convinced myself, who's in charge here?

"Lazy, I-could-care-less attitude, incapable of running a golf course, only in it for the paycheck" - on and on the invendos persist. (Perhaps there is merit to some of these indictments) But once again, it doesn't end there.

CTGC could very well be the only public golf facility on planet earth that does not have a suitable mower to maintain its browning fairways. There is no other golfing establishment this side of mars where a perfectly well stricken ball suddenly turns up lost right in the heart of the fairway! Must Al Patterson, resident professional at Comanche Trail, take full censure for such a conundrum? I think not. Is there an intelligent argument as to why funds cannot be appropriated for such a compulsory necessity for the golfing taxpayers of Howard County?

Propitiously of late, CTGC and its clubhouse area have taken on a much needed, and long overdue, purification. True, the Texas Department of Corrections and its unwilling 'guests' have in part been responsible for the aforementioned facelift.

Be assured however, Patterson and his organizational team are the driving force behind this most welcomed advancement. To see our pro, mower in hand, directing betterment of the entire sphere of operation is most worthy of praise and he is to be commended for his exertion. People of his caliber, as well as his staff, are in part responsible for the good name Comanche Trail enjoys - or rather is starting to enjoy.

So...are you out there city council? Of course you are! Stop the denouncement of CTGC and its staff and take a long hard look. The 'bottom line' is to bring our course up to handsome standards so it will become a showplace for surrounding communities. The City of Big Spring cannot help but benefit all the way around as golfers from all over will seek out 'the trail' and leave the infamous 19th hole vaunting, 'Great Course - we'll see you next weekend.'

Judging from when he was governor

Clinton not trusting state governors to handle their own affairs is because he is judging from when he was governor. He used Arkansas retirement money in a high investment and lost it. He was cheating the elderly out of their money on the Whitewater deal. One of my sons went and looked at the land they were investing in for retirement and he said that even if they got the land it was swamp land and they wouldn't be able to build houses on it.

The he makes the elderly and minority groups promises to get elected president then forgot them.

Now it is campaign time again so he is thinking about promises to get re-elected. He lied to people in Arkansas every campaign to get elected but now they would believe him again. I came from Arkansas and my family still lives there.

It is hard to find people that voted for him for governor or president in the area I'm from. But he got elected anyway. He can always find someone else to base his campaigns on.

Sincerely, Thomas Covington Coahoma

How serious are they about jobs?

I have lived in Big Spring for many years and have grown to love our small town and am very proud to call it home.

However, I recently had an experience which made me very angry. I took my two children to the city pool and was very shocked when, during my two hour stay, I counted three times there was no lifeguard to be found around the pool. Instead, they were all gathered around the desk, hurling insults at one another over the loudspeaker.

I am in no way doubting their ability to do their job, however, I have many concerns about how seriously they take their job of ensuring the safety of the patrons. I was horrified to see so many children left unattended and shudder to think of a tragedy which possibly could have been prevented had someone needed help.

Please, parents of Big Spring, do not just drop your children off at the pool. Do not entrust their precious lives to someone, who made it very obvious to me, they do not care about their safety half as much as you do!

KBST was declared the official station but KBYG continued to broadcast the games as well.

The reason it is important to designate one station as the official one is because some press boxes at out-of-town games do not have room for two visiting stations to be there.

Some opposing schools would not allow two stations even if there was room saying they would only let the flagship station in the booth. The other station would have to broadcast from the stands.

At Thursday night's regular meeting, officials from KBST requested they continue to be the official station and not to have a rotation. Sales Manager John Weeks said KBST offers a better quality sports broadcast with a number of special programs and they cover other events for the district as well.

He added if they were not the flagship station they could broadcast from the stands at out-of-town games but the quality would not be as good as what the community is getting now.

Officials from KBYG say they will broadcast the games rain or shine, from the press box or from the stands. They requested

Plot

Tigar, said he will try to have the trial moved out of Oklahoma and have Nichols tried separately from McVeigh.

Fortier, 26, was charged with conspiracy to transport stolen firearms, interstate transport of stolen firearms, lying to FBI agents about prior knowledge of the plot and failing to notify authorities of a crime. He faces up to 23 years in prison.

Fortier has admitted casing the federal building with McVeigh. He pleaded guilty to the lesser charges in exchange for his testimony against the friends he made while serving at Fort Riley, Kan.

He was taken into custody after appearing before U.S. District Judge David Russell, dressed in jeans and a light blue shirt. Asked by the judge if he had prior knowledge of the bombing, he said, "Yes sir, I did."

The indictment does not specify a motive, but prosecutors have alleged that McVeigh was angry at the government over the 1993 Branch Davidson disaster at Waco, Texas. The bombing took place on the two-year anniversary of the assault and fire that ended in the deaths of at least 85 cult members.

The bomb's raw material, 4,000 pounds of ammonium nitrate fertilizer, was purchased under the alias of Mike Havens in McPherson, Kan., on Sept. 30 and Oct. 18, 1994, the indictment said.

McVeigh and Nichols allegedly stole explosives needed to detonate the fertilizer-and-fuel oil bomb from a locker in Marion, Kan., on Oct. 1. Nichols worked at a nearby ranch around the time of the robbery.

The explosives were stashed in a locker in Fortier's hometown of Kingman, Ariz., where McVeigh lived for a time. Other lockers were rented in Las Vegas, Council Grove, Kan., and Herington, Kan., where Nichols lived.

The indictment said the two constructed the bomb the day before the explosion at Geary State Park near Herington. McVeigh allegedly parked outside the federal building during the busy morning hours and "caused the truck bomb to explode."

Aliases were used to rent lockers, purchase a phone card and rent the bomb truck, the indictment said. Nichols allegedly registered in motels as Terry Havens, and rented lockers as Joe Kyle and Ted Parker.

The indictment said McVeigh used the name Shawn Rivers when he rented the Herington locker, and the name Robert Kling on a driver's license used to rent the truck. The license listed his birthday as April 19 - the date of the Waco assault.

The indictment said money to finance their efforts came from the November 1994 robbery of an Arkansas firearms dealer. It also charged McVeigh "attempted to recruit others to assist in the act of violence."

McVeigh's attorney, Stephen Jones, warned against a "rush to judgment." "For political reasons, the indictments and prosecutions of a limited number of 'drifters' will be passed off to the public as a completely successful investigation resulting in the arrest of all concerned," he said.

But Revell, who as an FBI agent checked tips on the assassination of President John Kennedy decades after the shooting, said the investigation is far from over.

"This will progress," he said. "I'm not saying others will be indicted, but the Bureau isn't going to close the books on it."

Redistricting battles proving costly for the state of Texas

By CARLTON JOHNSON Staff Writer

For the last five years, the state of Texas has been involved in legal battles concerning redistricting of congressional and legislative districts.

Texas Attorney General Dan Morales said legal battles over redistricting has been very costly for taxpayers.

According to Morales, when and if the current litigation is resolved, the next census will force the legislature to redraw districts.

Morales said, "Our founding fathers decreed that at the beginning of every decade, a census would be conducted to ensure that each congressional and legislative district would have roughly the same number of residents, ensuring equal representation."

He added the current redistricting process is politics at its worst. "Neighborhoods are fought over block by block on the basis of income, political affiliation, and a range of other factors," Morales said. "District boundaries, which are supposed to be reasonably compact and maintain a community of interest, are twisted like pretzels to accommodate the self-interest of elected officials and to preserve the status quo."

The issue of race and the ethnic make-up of several districts is another complicated part redistricting. Morales referred to the 1965 Voting Rights Act, which was used by the Justice Department to challenge many states' redistricting plans that discriminated against minority voters.

Separating redistricting decisions from the officials who represent those districts is one of the most basic, most important, and most overdue reforms we could ever make.

According to Morales, despite ongoing legal battles, minorities remain underrepresented.

He said, "Blacks comprise 12 percent of the population but hold only 7 percent of the seats in Congress. Hispanics account for 10 percent of the population but comprise only 3 percent of Congress."

In June, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled in Miller v. Johnson, a Georgia case, states can consider race and ethnic make-up of districts, but such considerations must not predominate.

Texas is currently awaiting its own hearing before the high court in a similar suit. A federal district court has ruled three congressional districts, two in Houston and one in Dallas, are unconstitutional because they were drawn primarily to create minority districts.

Morales said, "We are arguing that incumbency, politics and race were factors considered equally in designing the districts to comply with the Voting Rights Act.

If the Supreme Court invalidates our current congressional districts, Gov. Bush must choose between calling a special legislative session to redraw the districts, or let the courts impose a plan.

He added any legislative plan would likely face a challenge in court.

A third option, according to Morales, free of politics and self-interests, would be to institute an independent, nonpartisan commission to draw new congressional districts.

Morales said, "Regardless of the outcome of this case, such nonpartisan commission should be developed as a permanent method of our state's redistricting process."

"In my view, it's time to abandon politics as usual and try a new approach. Separating redistricting decisions from the officials who represent those districts is one of the most basic, most important, and most overdue reforms we could ever make."

Gabrielle's rain may not reach drought areas

HARLINGEN (AP) — Tropical Storm Gabrielle sent bands of showers into northeastern Mexico and South Texas today, but forecasters doubted significant rainfall would reach drought-depleted reservoirs of the Rio Grande.

"Once it does get on shore, they do expect it to dissipate fairly quickly," Denver Ingram, a National Weather Service meteorologist, said late Thursday.

But Gabrielle stalled off the coast of northeastern Mexico for several hours Thursday, mustering sustained winds near 60 mph. The storm, centered near latitude 23.4 north, longitude 97.3 west, was nearly stationary about 85 miles north-northeast of Tampico, Mexico, at 7 a.m. CDT.

Forecasters expected landfall by tonight between the Texas border and Tuxpan, Mexico. Tropical storm warnings were up along that stretch of coastline.

The National Hurricane Center in Florida said that rainfall totals of 5 to 10 inches were possible over portions of northeastern Mexico with somewhat lesser amounts over extreme southeastern Texas.

Any tropical storm that hits the low-lying Rio Grande delta can cause flooding in communities with poor drainage.

Some Rio Grande Valley communities distributed sandbags to vulnerable residents.

Richard Hagan, top meteorologist at the weather service station in Brownsville, said not enough of the rain bands were expected to make a significant impact on Falcon Lake and Amistad Reservoir.

Drinking water and irrigation reserves are stored on those reservoirs for more than 2 million people on both sides of the Rio Grande.

"We could be getting an awful lot of rain on the ground before this thing is over. It just won't be getting into the lakes," Hagan said.

The worst drought in decades has dried the reservoirs to record lows, jeopardizing next year's irrigation supplies for Texas farmers. Mexico's allotment from the shared reservoirs is already so low that international water officials had to cut off irrigation to Mexican farmers this spring.

PERSONAL CHOICE

'Jane Roe' baptized, joins forces with abortion foes

By STEFANI G. KOPENEC
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — The woman known as "Jane Roe" in the landmark abortion decision said she now has some regrets about her role in the case and, after months of soul-searching, has joined forces with an anti-abortion group.

Norma McCorvey, whose demand for the procedure led to the 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision that legalized abortion nationwide, said in an interview Thursday she still believes "a woman has a right to have an abortion, a safe and legal abortion, in the first trimester."

However, "I will not support a woman's right to choose a safe and legal abortion in the second trimester," she said.

McCorvey said she resigned her marketing director's job on Saturday at A Choice For Women, a North Dallas women's clinic that has been the repeated target of demonstrations by abortion protesters.

She said she works at Operation Rescue as a filing clerk, but "I won't be doing any rescues at all."

The Rev. Phillip "Flip" Benham, the fundamentalist preacher who leads the group, said he baptized McCorvey in the company of about 35 of her close friends Tuesday night at a Garland couple's home.

"It was a small little service ... and there was weeping and there was great joy and praising," he said.

"This whole issue has now come back to Dallas, and Jesus Christ has reached through the abortion mill wall and touched the heart of Norma McCorvey."

McCorvey said she has some regrets about her role in the landmark decision although they are hard to define.

"That's the question I've been asking myself all day and I really haven't come up with a concrete answer," she said.

Rev. Flip Benham, national leader of Dallas-based Operation Rescue, raises his hand in praise in a Garland swimming pool after baptizing Norma McCorvey, the woman known as "Jane Doe."

McCorvey's change of heart was of her own volition and a gradual one, she said.

"I didn't get up this morning and say, 'Oh, well I'm just going to be pro-life today and not be Jane Roe anymore. I've been thinking about this for months now,'" McCorvey said.

She said she had become increasingly dissatisfied with what she felt was an undue emphasis on abortion at the North Dallas clinic.

"The key issue here is better education for younger women. We've had two generations of women — well, almost three generations now — of women who have grown up with Roe vs. Wade.

"They have literally been handed the right to slaughter their own children," she said.

Clinic officials did not immediately return telephone calls Thursday.

Operation Rescue moved its national headquarters into an office adjoining the abortion clinic on March 31. At the time, McCorvey said she was "horrificed" and concerned about possible violence.

Regulators might split Dallas into two area codes

DALLAS (AP) — A call from the northern reaches of Dallas to downtown will still cost the same next year, but it could require more effort in dialing.

State regulators might force Southwestern Bell to add a new area code to the Dallas area the old-fashioned way — geographically — rather than overlay it on the existing 214 area that now includes Dallas and its immediate neighbors.

Southwestern Bell has drawn fire for its plan to overlay the new 972 code onto the 214 area, which would let current customers keep their 214 area codes. The 972 code would be given to new telephone lines early next year.

But a geographic split means Southwestern Bell would limit the 214 area code mostly to lines within the Dallas city limits.

The Texas Public Utility Commission, in response to criticism of the overlay plan, is holding hearings on the dispute next month and has asked Southwestern Bell to justify the overlay plan.

Long-distance giant MCI Telecommunications Corp., which wants to enter local-service telephone markets, contends that the 214 overlay plan would be an obstacle.

Almost all the homes and businesses in suburbs and outlying areas would get the new 972 area code, as would a few parts of Dallas, including the heavily populated far north Dallas area.

Poll: Tough time for Clinton in Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — President Clinton would not only be vulnerable to a Republican challenger in Texas if the election were held today, he'd also have an uphill battle against a Democratic contender, a new statewide survey indicates.

The latest Texas Poll also shows a pair of U.S. senators running neck and neck for the GOP presidential nomination. Thirty-five percent said they'd vote for Bob Dole of Kansas in the 1996 Republican primary, while 33 percent prefer Phil Gramm of Texas.

Voters who said they'd likely vote Democratic in '96 weren't prepared to cast their ballot for the incumbent automatically.

Sixty-three percent said they'd consider another Democrat for president.

Among all voters, Dole would draw 46 percent and Clinton 33 percent if they faced each other in the general election. In a Gramm-Clinton contest, 43 percent said they would back Gramm and 39 percent said they would vote for the president.

The results are in line with other recent independent surveys that indicate that the Democratic president faces trouble in Texas next year and that Dole remains competitive with Gramm on his home turf.

The new survey comes as leaders from both political parties — including almost every candidate who wants to be president — converge on Dallas today for a conference hosted by Ross Perot's national organization.

Although Clinton declined an invitation to appear at the Perot forum, White House adviser Mack McLarty was sent as a last-minute addition to the conference speaker's list.

Among fellow Texans, Perot is viewed favorably by almost half of those surveyed. But a clear majority — 61 percent — said the billionaire businessman should not make another run for the White House as he did in 1992.

Paroled bank robber shot during traffic stop

TYLER (AP) — The paroled bank robber accused of drawing a gun at a traffic stop was a former jailhouse chaplain who preached at two different Henderson churches, a television station reported Thursday.

Bobby Joe Reickenbacker, 45, came from a family of outlaws to Henderson after serving 17 years in prison, Rusk County Sheriff Cecil West told KETK-TV of Tyler. For the next 10 years, he had been a model citizen, West said.

He was "to me a very genuine love-the-Lord type man that was really on fire for God," said Anita Eason, a member of First Baptist Church, where Reickenbacker was a lay preacher.

Today, he is now at the Medical Center of Louisiana in New Orleans, recovering from a bullet wound to the chest. Hospital spokesman Jerry Ronig did not immediately return telephone calls Thursday.

Louisiana State Police said Reickenbacker was shot after drawing a handgun after a trooper stopped him for tailgating late Sunday on Interstate 12.

He was shot in the chest after first flashing his chaplain's badge and then pointing a double-barreled derringer at the trooper who stopped him, Trooper Jennifer Mistretta, a state police spokeswoman, said Thursday.

"He did have a commission and a badge from a sheriff's office in Texas, saying he was a chaplain with them," Mistretta said. "...He had pulled the commission. So much can happen in a split second. We're not sure if he was trying to get out of it, or to distract the officer, or what happened."

Police found a wig, a camouflage face shield and a 9mm assault weapon with a 100-round clip in Reickenbacker's car, she said.

Upon his release, Reickenbacker will be booked on charges of attempted murder of a police officer, possession of a firearm by a felon and resisting arrest, police said.

His father and uncle were tried on aggravated robbery charges in Houston when Reickenbacker was 8 years old. When Reickenbacker and his brother grew up, both also wound up behind bars.

How IRONIC!

Prisoner revived from suicide attempt to be executed by state

McALESTER, Okla. (AP) — Only hours before his execution, convicted killer Robert Brecheen was found in his holding cell, groggy and breathing heavily from an overdose of sedatives.

Doctors rushed him to a hospital and worked feverishly to pump his stomach and declare him mentally fit before the state executed him by injection early today.

"Certainly, there's irony," said Larry Field, director of Oklahoma's corrections department. "But we're bound by the law, the same law that he violated."

Brecheen, condemned for the 1983 shooting death of Marie Stubbs, whose husband had refused him a $400 loan, looked tired and pale as he was led to the death chamber two hours late for the midnight execution.

Before three drugs were pumped into his arm, Brecheen, 40, made a brief final statement, but it wasn't audible because of problems with a microphone. Guards later said he thanked his parents and made no mention of the overdose.

State police began an investigation into how Brecheen obtained the sedatives.

He had been strip-searched when he was placed in the holding cell next to the execution chamber Thursday morning, and his belongings were searched. Later, he declined a special last meal and passed up the stew-and-noodle dinner served to other inmates.

He appeared to be asleep in his holding cell at 7:43 p.m., only minutes after meeting with his attorneys, said corrections spokesman Jerry Massie.

Prison staff tried unsuccessfully to awaken him at 9 p.m.

The overdose was not life-threatening, said Assistant Attorney General Diane Blalock. Officials said they could not determine the exact drug he took or if the overdose was indeed a suicide attempt.

Outside the prison gates, about 20 death penalty opponents mocked the irony.

"What should we pray for? That he be unsuccessful and live so that he can be brought back and executed?" said the Rev. Don Wolfe of Sacred Heart Parish in Oklahoma City.

Hilton Stubbs, the clothing store owner whose 59-year-old wife was killed by Brecheen, had a different view. "It wasn't his job to take his life," he said.

Stubbs said he had sold Brecheen a hat on credit, never got his money back and refused Brecheen a $400 loan about a month before the murder.

Gingrich not very happy with Schroeder's reception for him

DENVER (AP) — Rep. Patricia Schroeder helped organize a reception for House Speaker Newt Gingrich's book-signing tour when it hit Denver, and Gingrich didn't like it.

Several hundred protesters shouted and waved placards outside Tattered Cover bookstore Thursday while the Georgia Republican was inside signing copies of his book, "To Renew America."

Schroeder, a Colorado Democrat who has staunchly opposed many of Congress' budget cuts, initially denied a part in orchestrating the demonstration, then later owned up to it.

"I am proud to have helped organize the protests, and if Mr. Gingrich does not like it, that's tough," Schroeder said in a statement. "If he can't stand the heat, he should cancel his book tour."

Gingrich, who has made headlines this week after a woman's published claim that they had an affair 19 years ago, criticized Schroeder's involvement in the protest.

"I have no problem with Pat being maniacally negative," Gingrich said. "If she is using her office staff and her office, it's a violation of the House rules."

"The last time I checked it was still a free country, and if people, including members of Congress, want to get involved in protesting policies they disagree with, they have every right to do so," Schroeder said in the statement. "If Mr. Gingrich believes that is illegal, he's even more delusional than I think he is."

Schroeder's behind-the-scenes telephone work from her Washington, D.C., office sowed confusion with her Denver staff, which at first denied her involvement.

Bill would require salary disclosure by reporters

WASHINGTON (AP) — A resolution requiring journalists who cover the Senate to disclose their incomes was introduced Thursday by a senator who says he wants to restore trust in America's traditional institutions.

"Some members of the media will certainly object to any outside attempt to encourage even a limited code of ethical standards," said Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va.

Polls show "alarming losses of public faith in our traditional institutions," said Byrd. "I believe that it is time to take serious steps to restore public credibility..."

He noted the Senate prohibits its members and staff from receiving payments for public appearances. He also got a 75-23 vote of approval on a recent Senate resolution to encourage judges to take another look at their regulations on gifts.

Whitewater: No gold, no significant discrepancies?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Completing two sets of congressional Whitewater hearings, Republicans say important witnesses are contradicting each other's stories, while Democrats say the intense scrutiny of the President Clinton and his wife's real estate venture produced no new information.

"We've dug long and hard ... but no new nugget worth the cost of digging this worn-out pit we call Whitewater has been found," said Rep. Henry Gonzalez of Texas, ranking Democrat on the House Banking Committee.

Committee Chairman Jim Leach, R-Iowa, says Democrats are ignoring "a story of conflicts of interest and professional misconduct. Whitewater is about "a personable, ambitious politician and ... his use of power in two cities: the capital of his home state, then the capital of democracy," said Leach.

On Thursday, Republicans detailed Hillary Rodham Clinton's work at the Rose Law Firm in Little Rock, Ark., for the falling savings and loan owned by her Whitewater partner, James McDougal.

Mrs. Clinton says her work for Madison Guaranty S&L was minimal. However, House Republicans released some 30 pieces of Rose correspondence and other documents naming Mrs. Clinton, many of them indicating her heavy involvement over a three-month span in 1986 in Madison's dispute with another S&L on loans that had gone bad.

She also did work while at Rose on a brewery project promoted by McDougal, and on a proposed public sale of Madison securities. Both matters required action by state regulators appointed by her husband, who was the governor of Arkansas.

Federal regulators noted Rose provided legal services to Madison when it financed a $1.7 million land transaction that the government has concluded was "fictitious" and contributed to the S&L's collapse.

Several years later, Rose collected $300,000 from the government when the law firm did S&L cleanup work on Madison, whose failure cost taxpayers $65 million.

"This could be described as an insider firm reaping profits from the public after insiders had defrauded ... the public," said Leach. His committee brought in for testimony the Rose firm's now-imprisoned former managing partner, former Associate Attorney General Webster Hubbell.

In the Senate, Republicans focused on former White House Counsel Bernard Nussbaum, who first refused to let police search Vincent Foster's White House office after Foster's suicide, then failed to discover a torn-up note.

Free Press's editorial staff refuses to return to the newsroom

DETROIT (AP) — More than half the striking Detroit Free Press editorial employees failed to return to the newsroom by a back-to-work deadline Thursday, risking a management threat that they would be permanently replaced.

Nearly 35 workers enduring shouts of "go home, scabs" arrived through a back door Thursday, bringing to 84 the number who have returned, management said. About 170 workers remained on strike.

"Patty, how could you?" one striker shouted as food writer Patty LaNoue Stearns walked in, head down, carrying a box of papers.

Political columnist Hugh McDermid made a fist and said, "Good luck guys" as he entered the Free Press building. A picket shouted an obscenity in reply.

The strike by 2,500 workers at the Free Press and The Detroit News began July 13. The Free Press issued warnings Tuesday to more than 200 newsroom employees that they would be replaced permanently if they didn't return.

"A couple of people I'm very disappointed in," Free Press reporter Martin F. Kohn said of his co-workers who returned to work. "We all have reasons to cross. My wife has MS (multiple sclerosis). She requires $900 a month in prescriptions. I'm not crossing."

"Each day as we make hires, they risk being replaced," said Heath Meriwether, the executive editor.

Bulldogs know what to expect this season

By STEVE REAGAN
Sports Editor

COAHOMA - If familiarity breeds success, 1995 should be quite a year for the Coahoma Bulldogs.

The Bulldogs, who went to the brink of the state football playoffs despite having a new coach and new offensive and defensive schemes, have now had a year to become more comfortable with both Eddie McHugh and his systems.

That alone is reason for optimism, McHugh said.

"Our first workout this year was so much better than it was last year. The kids are just so much more familiar with what they need to do," McHugh said.

Last year's squad went into its final game needing a win over Stanton to qualify for the playoffs for the first time since 1972. The 35-15 loss squelched those hopes, but didn't dampen McHugh's satisfaction over the season.

"Last year was close but no cigar," he said. "We were in

Crossroads Country
Preseason Tour

Coahoma Bulldogs

the hunt until the very end, but things just didn't go our way. But as a team, you want to be in the hunt at the very end, and we were. We just hope to improve on that this season."

There are some roadblocks in the Bulldogs' path, most particularly in the offensive line, which is hampered by youth and inexperience. On the plus side for the offense is quality at the skill positions. Senior quarterback Adam Tindol, who saw a lot of playing time backing up Brandon McGuire last year, returns, as does starting halfback Kelby Bailey. Returning lettermen Mike McMillan and Freddie Olivias bolster the Bulldogs' running game.

With Tindol's strong arm as the trigger, McHugh plans to pass the ball more this year, and returning starter Michael Cobb and fellow wide receivers Matt Hamilton and Chris Arguello plan to give Tindol plenty of targets. Tight end Marshall Williams rounds out the receiver corps.

Marion lone question mark on Cowboys' defense

AUSTIN (AP) - A quick study of the Dallas Cowboys' top-ranked defense shows proven experience back at every position except one: free safety.

Gone to the Redskins is James Washington, a bandana-wearing, sledgehammer-hitting trash talker who wasn't afraid to disgrace his own teammates if he didn't think they were measuring up.

Like him or not - and many Cowboys coaches and players didn't - Washington was a big-game player who helped win Super Bowl XXVIII with two key interceptions in a 30-13 defeat of Buffalo.

But the Cowboys didn't panic after his departure. They hardily looked at a list of free agents. They simply went to their special teams unit and promoted Brock Marion, a third-year player known for running wildly downfield and leveling kick and punt returners. Sure, Marion's $178,000, league-minimum salary is a benefit to the Cowboys, who are less than half a million dollars away from busting their $37.1 million salary cap.

But what about his skills? Most of his defensive backfield experience last year came at the strong safety position when All-Pro Darren Woodson moved to linebacker in the 45 and nickel defense.

No one with the Cowboys seems worried. Coach Barry Switzer, an obvious non-fan of Washington, says the backfield may be even better with Marion.

"We don't need a riverboat gambler back there," Switzer said, referring to Washington's penchant for ignoring schemes and freelancing. "I told Brock I would rather have him be passive than a missile. Missiles get out of position."

Golfers slaughter course

LOS ANGELES (AP) - It was supposed to be a test of wills matching the best players in the world against proud old Riviera Country Club, where wet kikuyu rough devours stray shots and spiked-up greens make every putt perilous.

It was no contest, though, on an opening day that saw the PGA Championship come under a bombardment unprecedented in its 77-year history. The onslaught left players gaping in amazement at what it might take to win the final major championship of the year.

"You're going to have to make a lot of birdies out here to give yourself a chance on Sunday in this tournament," Greg Norman said.

Michael Bradley came out of nowhere Thursday with a 8-under-par 63 that tied the lowest round ever shot in a major, but others also plundered Riviera's soft greens on a day that saw 57 players break par.

Forty-three of those shot rounds in the 60s, including such notables as Norman, Lee

Rangers complete sweep of Detroit; Montreal does same with Houston

BASEBALL

ARLINGTON (AP) - Texan Danny Darwin hopes he has come home to stay.

"I've always wanted to finish my career here," Darwin said. "I don't throw the ball in the mid-90s anymore. But maybe I'm learning how to pitch."

It was a sweet homecoming for Darwin as he beat the Detroit Tigers 7-2 on Thursday night.

Pitching a home game for the first time in 11 years as a member of the Rangers, Darwin allowed just two hits in six innings.

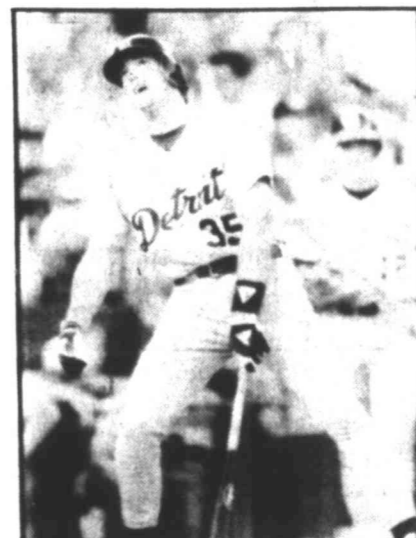

Darwin hadn't won a home game for Texas since Aug. 28, 1984.

"I was nervous, I can't say I wasn't," Darwin said. "I had a lot of people in the stands who came up from Bonham, Texas. There was a little league group and a lot of friends and family. But after awhile I forgot about all that. I had job to do."

Benji Gil broke an 0-for-18 slump with a grand slam in the eighth off Joe Boever. It was Gil's first career grand slam and his first homer in 31 games.

"It was a great feeling," Gil said, "considering the way I was going lately."

him up off the waiver wire, struck out five and walked two. He retired the last nine hitters he faced and at one point struck out four batters in a row. It snapped a nine-game losing streak.

"I was getting in a rut in Toronto," he said. "I was just looking for bad things to happen. I was in a rut and couldn't get out of it."

Darwin lost 5-3 to California on Aug. 5 in his return to the Rangers when he gave up 10 hits in five innings. He pitched 218 games for Texas and was 53-51 from 1978-84.

Detroit manager Spai...

Anderson said: "Darwin had to be pitching good because we didn't do nothing. We haven't hit anybody in at least 30 games. But I'd say he is back. His velocity was good."

Henry shuts down former teammates

HOUSTON (AP) - The Montreal Expos have the same bullpen problems but it didn't cost them this time against the Houston Astros.

Butch Henry allowed 31 hits in his previous three starts but he held his former teammates to five hits over eight strong innings, as the Expos beat Houston 6-2 Thursday night, extending the Astros losing streak to five games.

"It was the same stuff I've been throwing," Henry said. "I'd throw the fastball, change-up and mix in a curve and our defense was great."

It took three Expos relievers in the ninth inning to put away the Astros, causing Expos manager Felipe Alou to recall the Expos' last visit to the Astrodom.

"The last time we came here we lost three in the eighth inning," Alou said. "We found some things out about our team here. Some of the things we found out are some of the things that still bothered us

Pepsi deal draws fire from NFL head honcho

DALLAS (AP) — NFL Commissioner Paul Tagliabue has rebuked Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones for the 10-year, $40 million deal with Pepsi-Cola that Jones announced last week.

The arrangement circumvented the spirit of a league contract with Coca-Cola for exclusive marketing and promotional rights.

"That is what distinguishes us from baseball and some of the other leagues. Once people start doing things that are self-serving and short-sighted, you have some serious problems," Tagliabue said.

"Concerning Pepsi, obviously a club can have pouring rights in a stadium for cola or beer. If that's what the Pepsi deal is, it's not a problem. But if it becomes knock-off or ambush marketing of a league sponsor, that's a different kettle of fish."

Tagliabue was disturbed more by Jones' threat to withdraw the Cowboys from affiliation with NFL Properties.

"Ultimately, all logos, the helmet and star associated with the Cowboys, will be handled by the Dallas Cowboys and not the marketing arm of the NFL," Jones promised last week.

Aboard in Japan for a preseason game last week, the commissioner hasn't spoken with Jones, he said. But Tagliabue said he had heard from other owners, unhappy with Jones' stance.

"The key thing is not so much the pouring rights, but some of the rhetoric attacking NFL Properties and 'Don't go to the league, come to the Cowboys.' At best, something like this is short-sighted and self-serving. At worst, it's very unfair and destructive."

"We have some good skill position people back, we have some quickness and we've got more speed than last year," McHugh said. "Our weakness will be a lack of depth. We've got a young, inexperienced offensive line, and we'll probably have to play a lot of juniors there."

The 'Dogs' defense, the team's strength last season, returns only three starters, but McHugh has plenty of potential replacements to choose from.

Tindol, Hamilton, Olivas and Chris Arguello give Coahoma a definite speed line in the defensive backfield, while Wright, Cobb, Heath Blair and Joel Hernandez are likely to see plenty of action at linebacker. McHugh has Eugene Vasquez, Mick Weatherman, Kevin Olson and Jaime Urias penciled in on the defensive line.

"We won these three but we saw some of the same things."

Jeff Shaw replaced Henry to start the ninth, leading 6-1. He gave up a solo homer to Craig Biggio, the first batter he faced and left the game with two outs and two runners on base. Tim Scott came on and walked pinchhitter Derrick May to load the bases.

Finally, Dave Leiper struck out pinchhitter John Cangalosi to end it and give the Expos a sweep of the series. The Expos out-hit the Astros 40-25 and outscored them 18-7 in the three games.

It preserved the victory for Henry, who allowed five hits and walked one over eight innings.

"We scored some runs but we knew we could hit," Alou said. "But we're still having problems trying to close some games. Our late inning relief has struggles. It's not a consistent type of performance that we're getting."

This time, it was good enough against the slumping Astros, who have been among the best hitting teams in the NL most of the season. But Henry, who pitched for the Astros in 1992, pinned them down.

"Early in the game, he stayed out of trouble," Astros manager Terry Collins said. "He pitched a good game."

a 20-foot putt on the 18th hole before only a few hundred fans who stayed around to watch as the last few players in the 150-man field finished in lengthening shadows.

"There is no pressure on me," said Bradley, who had never finished better than third in a PGA Tour event. "If I play bad tomorrow, come Sunday no one is going to remember my name."

Bradley's round was a shot better than the 64s posted earlier by Mark O'Meara and Jim Gallagher Jr. and three shots ahead of Norman and five others at 66. John Adams tied a record with a 6-under 29 on the front side and was alone at 65.

What was meant to be an exhibition of shotmaking looked more like a regular tour stop putting contest as the leaders had little trouble negotiating the course packed tightly into a canyon near the Pacific Ocean.

"Seven-under is an exceptional score under any circumstance, let alone the first round of a major championship," Norman said before Bradley shot a round unequaled even by the 59 he shot in a Canadian tour pro-am a few years back.

Bradley didn't know he had a chance to set a major tournament record until he overheard a fan's remark as he walked to the 18th tee.

Bookstores balance ministry, market

By DAVID IVANOVICH
Houston Chronicle

HOUSTON — John and Mary Foust ponder whether to sell the music of the grunge group Mortification. Brian Roddy tries to deal with bad check writers, while Carolyn Hassell decides to open for business on Sundays. Such are the dilemmas faced by today's religious bookstore owners. While many Christian bookstore owners enter the industry with a missionary's zeal to spread the Gospel, they soon realize they must face the realities of retailing. "Their motive is ministry, but their method is retail," says Bill Anderson, president of the Colorado Springs-based Christian Booksellers Association. "No amount of passion for people, no amount of commitment to Christian literature or products will exempt them from the normal demands of good business."

Christian bookselling is big business. American consumers purchase an estimated $3 billion worth of Christian-oriented products annually, Anderson says. Industry experts figure there are more than 4,000 Christian bookstores nationwide, including about three dozen in Houston.

Last year, sales at Christian bookstores rose a healthy 10.4 percent over 1993. For years, Houston's independent religious bookstore owners have faced competition from Christian bookstore chains such as Joshua's Christian Stores, Family Bookstores and Baptist Book Store. Now they are feeling increased pressure from national, more general book chains, such as Barnes & Noble Bookstores, as well as discounters such as Wal-Mart and Target, which recently have beefed up stocks of Bibles and other religious materials. At the same time, they must deal with the economic pressures affecting other retailers.

In the early 1980s, for instance, Houston counted had 106 Christian bookstores, says John Foust, owner of Theophilus Bible Store. The collapse of oil prices and the local depression that followed took its toll. Rocky Vaccaro, owner of the Catholic bookstore Mary Regina, said his sales closely track those of Houston's major retailers. When Foley's sales are up, Mary Regina's revenues are, too. "This industry competes for the discretionary dollar," Anderson said. "It's a nonbudgeted item. It's not like gasoline or groceries. We're competing for the expendable, discretionary dollar with everyone from restaurants to water parks to movie theaters to ski resorts."

Often, new store owners have little or no retail experience when they get into the busi-

7th Level has done it again. August 19 will mark an important day for the gurus of Windows game programming, with the release of Battle Beast. Built in the same genre as Mortal Kombat and other fight games, Battle Beast takes the evolution of graphics, sound and other aspects one step further.

The premise of Battle Beast is rather simple — the evil Toadman, in search of world domination, is using poisonous toads as a tool toward his goal.

The player "purchases" Battle Beasts, created by the General, to stop the sinister Toadman and his army of toads. However, the Battle Beasts can be reprogrammed to fight against each other, so danger can even lurk from within. To achieve victory, there are nine separate levels to conquer. There are six individual characters the player can control, ranging from dogs to turtles to fish. These Battle Beasts are actually cute animals that appear harmless one moment, but morph into scary-looking monsters, hell-bent on busting some heads.

Armadillos aggravate gardeners

By HEATH GRINER
Thomson News Service

THOMASVILLE, Ga. — Property owners with holes in their yards probably feel the same way Wade Chastain does about armadillos burrowing. He wants an end to it. Chastain, a partner in Oak Grove Nursery, has talked to game wardens and state forestry officials about ways to stop armadillo visits. "No one knows anything you can do," he said. "If anyone knows a way to get rid of them, I'd like to hear it."

The hard-scaled mammals, originally from South and Central America, daily dig their way under his skin. "They turn over my plants out there while hunting earthworms," he said. Armadillos' nightly visits force Chastain to turn hundreds of nursery plant containers upright each morning.

"I have had a serious increase lately, but it might be attributable to land clearing around me," he said. Because armadillos are nearly blind, they prefer brush to open areas. They also rely on a strong sense of smell.

"They can smell an earthworm two or three feet down," Chastain said. Armadillos like to burrow in and around Chastain's nursery, because the area is an earthworm gold mine.

"I tell people I have the fattest armadillos around," Chastain said. Besides automobiles, Chastain said, they have no real natural enemies.

Baptists' AIDS fight shows faith in action

By JIM JONES
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

FORT WORTH — When Baptists have a hard job to do, they can always count on women to be in the forefront. So it is not surprising that the 1.2 million members of the Woman's Missionary Union are beginning a nationwide AIDS education program. The program, Dare to Care, doesn't officially begin until October, but churches from Texas to Maine are already receiving educational materials on how to help those suffering from acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

The AIDS education program of the women's group does promote traditional morality — including sexual abstinence — as a way of preventing the disease.

Training materials from the women's group and other Baptist agencies emphasize that sexual contact and blood transfusions are the major ways of contracting AIDS.

Worshipping or praying with a person with AIDS won't give you the disease, the materials state.

Cards asking for prayers for specific persons who have AIDS also are included. Information is given on setting up care teams and church education programs.

Baptists got a wake-up call about the AIDS pandemic four years ago when the Rev. Jimmy Allen, a former president of the Southern Baptist Convention, revealed the tragedy that had happened to his family.

His daughter-in-law, Lydia Allen, became infected with human immunodeficiency virus through a blood transfusion. She and her youngest son, Bryan, died of AIDS and her oldest son, Matt, now 12, is critically ill with the virus.

During the ordeal, Jimmy Allen's son, Scott Allen, was fired from his ministerial position with a Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) congregation in Colorado. Scott Allen returned to Texas where his father was then president of the Baptist Radio and Television Commission in Fort Worth.

One of the source materials offered by the women's group's AIDS program is a video, Valley of the Shadow, distributed by the Texas Baptist Christian Life Commission, which tells the story of the Allen family and includes videos of physicians and others talking about the disease.

For his part, Allen commends the WMU for its efforts, noting that it is a "network of women who historically have been involved in the cutting edge of caring."

"There has been a counter-tide, sort of hardening of the heart of the nation against those who need help," Allen said. "Compassion is evaporating in this country."

Don't let a hardened heart block out God's love for us

QUESTION: I grew up in a religious home and I suppose I believed all the things about God you are supposed to believe, but gradually I grew away from it.

Now I hardly ever think about God or what is right and wrong. If God is actually real, how do you explain this? Shouldn't He be trying to get through to me

Billy Graham
Columnist

instead of ignoring me? — T.M.

ANSWER: The problem is that the more we turn our backs to God, the harder it becomes for us to hear Him speaking to us. What happens is that our hearts and consciences become toughened and hardened — and what once made an impression on us no longer does so.

If you have had a callus on your hand or foot, you know that as it grows you gradually become less sensitive to touch. Or perhaps you have seen people gradually lose their hearing as the years go by.

The same sort of thing happens to our hearts if we repeatedly rebuff God's attempts to speak to us.

The Bible says, "Blessed is the man who always fears the Lord, but he who hardens his heart falls into trouble" (Proverbs 28:14).

The most serious spiritual condition a person can have is a heart so hardened that he or she can no longer hear God's call.

Has that happened to you? The fact that you are even asking this question gives me hope, for it suggests that down inside you know you need God, even if you have ignored Him all these years.

But God still loves you, and the proof is that Christ died on the cross for you.

United Methodist conference draws more than 4,000 youth

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — When the United Methodist Church held its first youth conference in 1947, portable showers and double-decker Army cots had to be set up in the halls to accommodate the 10,000 teen-agers it drew.

In the years that followed, many teens gradually lost interest in anything religious, finding it boring or thinking it offered them little, and the conferences were discontinued.

That became a pressing problem for United Methodist Church leaders, whose Sunday school rolls dropped dramatically over several decades.

By the late 1980s, leaders set out to make church fun again and brought back the conferences that had united teens in the 1940s and '50s.

This year's four-day "Let's Rock! Building Up the People of God" conference, held earlier this month in downtown Salt Lake City, drew more than 4,000 youths from every state, and countries including the Philippines, Germany, Angola, Burundi, India and Brazil.

Many teens raised the $150 fee to attend the conference, while some churches sponsored youths from their states.

Attendance was less than half that of the first conference in 1947.

Part of the problem, organizers said, is that youths do not feel their own beliefs and efforts are taken seriously.

"Children and youth are devalued in society, and I think that churches tend to mirror that," said Cindy Davenport, director of youth and young adult ministries for the United Methodist Church's General Board of Discipleship.

"Young people do not have the opportunity to lead," she said. "They need to know they can make an impact."

Church leaders hope the youth conferences every three or four years in various cities will make the difference. The meetings were discontinued following the 1968 merger between the Evangelical United Brethren and Methodist churches.

They resumed in 1988 after church leadership recognized the important role the conferences played in bolstering teenagers and their dwindling church membership.

According to church figures, there were more than 1 million youth members in Sunday school in 1947, compared to just 515,800 in 1993.

"It's important, as with any institution that wants growth, that it be in tune and attuned to the people who are a part of it," said Jerry Scott, national coordinator of the church's Special Program on Substance Abuse and Related Violence.

"As far as our youth are very important because they are the future of our church," he said.

To attract today's teens, church and youth leaders knew they had to make the conference modern. The result was hard-hitting workshops with speakers on such topics as racism, AIDS, substance abuse, sex and violence.

A sea of teen-agers from all over the world bowed their heads in prayer as they gathered for the United Methodist Church youth conference Aug. 4. The four-day conference, "Let's Rock! Building Up the People of God," drew more than 4,000 youths.

Learning the art of haggling

By CHRISTINE ARPE GANG
Scripps Howard News Service

Car dealers aren't doing it as much as they used to. Neither are some antique dealers.

But if you like to wheel and deal for better prices, there is still plenty of opportunity at flea markets, garage sales and any other place that sells second-hand goods.

Just like real courtship, buyers and sellers engage in a ritual filled with unwritten etiquette and potential pitfalls before consummating their deals.

Knowing the "rules" can make it easier to play the game.

If you want to buy an antique toy from Tom Linton, for example, don't tell him "I'll give you $30" for an item priced at $100. That makes him mad.

"It would be ridiculous for me to price something at $100 that I'd be willing to take $30 for," says Linton, a flea-market dealer.

Linton and his fellow dealers have a sarcastic answer to such offers: "You couldn't buy the dust on it for that."

Like others who love trading and bargaining, Linton isn't opposed to coming down on his prices. But how a buyer approaches him can mean the difference in each going away happy or insulted.

"I hate it when someone tells they'll 'give me' so much for something," says Sam Simmons, a Memphis flea market owner who also deals in antique pedal cars and motor scooters. "They won't 'give' me anything."

So how should the game be played?

First of all, understand that most dealers expect to come down a little on their prices. It also helps to remember that every dealer is also a buyer looking for a bargain, so they know you are, too.

"You have to get over being afraid to ask for a lower price," says Simmons. The dealer asked for a lower price when he bought the item you want, and he expects you will, too.

"Everyone and their mother asks for a discount," says Paul Meek, manager of the Pinch Antique Mall in Memphis.

Collection commemorates John Wayne

By SCOTT REESE WILLEY
Mount Pleasant Daily Tribune

MOUNT PLEASANT — Mount Pleasant seems an unlikely spot to build a museum containing what may be one of the largest collections of John Wayne memorabilia on the side of the Pecos.

After all, the Duke was born here, and never made a movie here.

He didn't look like his next-door neighbor in the movie "The Searchers," camp here on his way to "The Alamo" or drive cattle through here during the shooting of "Red River," which winds its way through two nearby counties.

So why build the unofficial, unsanctioned and unbelievably quaint John Wayne museum here?

Because this is where Harry R. Brown lives, pilgrim.

"I've been collecting John Wayne memorabilia now for 20 years," says Brown, a retired maintenance foreman for Texas

Electric, who has a hobby of collecting items that have shaped his life.

For example, he has the John Wayne hat that the movie "The Searchers" north of Moccasin, N.M., and a letterless "No Trespassing" sign.

"We have a lot of John Wayne memorabilia," says Brown. "I have a lot of people who come to see it."

John Wayne memorabilia, from movie posters, shotguns and hats to what some of the larger memorabilia of the Duke in existence, line the walls of the pie-shaped museum.

Items of a few issues of Time magazine on which John Wayne graced the front cover are also available for viewing as are John Wayne books, John Wayne pocket knives, John Wayne deerskins and a box of John Wayne rifle cartridges.

Naturally, John Wayne paintings, sketches and movie posters are abundant.

Brown opened the museum in July 1994 at the insistence of his wife, Nancy.

"I had John Wayne stuff all over the house...in closets, under beds — everywhere," he recalled. "One day my wife said why don't you take this stuff outside and do something with it. So I did."

Brown said he originally planned to build a tourist attraction on the pie-shaped lot but couldn't because of local zoning laws that prohibit commercial construction.

So he made it a museum.

He has no complaints. "I love doing this," he says. "I love talking about this stuff, telling people the stories behind it all."

And can he ever talk.

"Sometimes I can spend hours talking to people, if they're really interested," he adds. "For most people, 30 minutes is enough."

John Foust, for instance, delivered potato chips. Vaccaro drilled oil wells in Libya, while Hassell — who took over The Christian Bookstore in January — worked as a broker.

Religious bookstore owners, who often choose their business out of religious conviction, are held accountable by their customers for the content of their books and music.

For example, Theophilus at 5410 Bissonnet, which targets the evangelical market, sells the works of Chuck Swindoll, but not Pope John Paul II's.

Most stores that label themselves as "Christian bookstores" sell materials designed primarily for the Protestant evangelical community.

Roddy, who owns four Giving Tree locations, won't sell the new Catechism of the Catholic Church, portions of which he objects to as "contrary to Scripture."

Mary Regina, with books by Fulton Sheen and Teresa of Avila and a collection of rosaries, crucifixes and religious artworks, caters to a Catholic clientele, although Vaccaro says his store attracts customers from other "liturgical" churches, such as Episcopalians and Lutherans.

"We don't carry anything in here that would be offensive to our Protestant brothers," Vaccaro says. Hassell's The Christian Bookstore at 5201 Palmer is a smaller, neighborhood store catering to the needs of the African American community.

Hassell also stocks classic works of literature by more secular black writers, such as Langston Hughes and Chester Himes.

Hassell says customers often seek her guidance — everything from which books might be controversial to which translation of the Bible would best fit their needs.

"If you don't understand poetry, then you really don't need the King James," Hassell says.

At the average Christian bookstore, Bibles represent about 14 percent of sales, Anderson says. Sales of other books are twice that, while music represents another 15 percent and gifts 13 percent.

Theophilus, for instance, sells T-shirts, greeting cards — even David and Goliath action figures. And Christian music now accounts for more sales per square foot than books.

The name is Greek for "Friend of God" and refers to the disciple to whom Luke addressed both his Gospel and the Acts of the Apostles. "People spell it wrong, but the bank doesn't care," John Foust said.

HOROSCOPE

FOR SATURDAY, AUG. 12, 1995

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Keep your own counsel, and break free from a self-imposed restriction that is causing a problem. Follow your instincts, and you will make a solid choice. You might be more in tune than you know. Pull back to gain a level on understanding. Tonight: Cocoon. ***

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Let your upbeat side emerge, and you'll handle situations with ease. Focus on friendship, long-term goals and achievements. Get together with friends. Celebrate the weekend. If you have been putting off making an overture, do it now. Tonight: Be out and about. *****

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You might need to assume responsibility, even if you don't want to. Creatively handling your time will help you deal with scheduling hassles. Stay tuned in to what you want. Plan on visiting with family member who means a lot to you. Tonight: You are a force to be dealt with. ***

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A discussion that could involve a foreigner, travel and a special offer brings out your delightful side. Your instincts are to say yes to an offer, and by all means roll with the moment. Go for adventure and excitement. Be more in sync with your choices. Tonight: Be eccentric. ****

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Make plenty of time for a loved one. Tackle issues, and understand what is happening with a loved one. Plan on togetherness, rather than being a social butterfly. Realize your limits, and recognize what is important to you. Tonight: The theme is togetherness. *****

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be ready to make a change where it counts. A loose, easy approach with a flamboyant partner can make a difference in the relationship. Defer to others for the day. You are on a roll. Your sensitivity to others and their problems guarantees your popularity. Tonight: Go out. *****

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Stay tuned to new possibilities, and be sure of yourself. Consider ways to eliminate the red tape in your life so that you can be more in control of your time. Finish a project. Do something just for yourself, and relax in your favorite way. Tonight: Stay low-key. ****

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be creative with loved ones. Brainstorming brings a new dimension to a relationship and gives both of you more freedom to relate to each other. Express your enthusiasm, and overcome self-imposed restrictions. Spontaneity and love mix. Tonight: Be wild. *****

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Figure out what you want; stay in touch with your desires. Make time for family members. A domestic change may be in the offing. Consider freshening up a room or perhaps purchasing a new item. Tonight: Entertain at home. ****

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be willing to do something differently. You might want to make a call, get together with a friend or enjoy yourself by exploring new areas. Touch base with friends to plan a group get-together. Catch up on news and recent gossip. Tonight: Go to a favorite spot. *****

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Money matters dominate. Make appropriate decisions for yourself, even though you might be tempted to indulge someone else. Be in touch with what you want, yet handle your budget calmly. Price an item carefully before purchasing it. Tonight: Go to the movies. ***

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You are personality-plus as you handle a loved one. If you are single, make sure you are available for a fun gathering. You are very appealing at this time. Zero in on what you want; be open to what is being offered. Tonight: As you like it. *****

IF AUG. 12 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: This is a relatively calm year when you focus on work, health and improving the quality of your life. Your creativity is unusually high, as is your capacity to enjoy life and have fun. Work demands will be heavier in 1996 but you will be unusually successful. If you are single, a romantic opportunity is a strong possibility in 1995. If attached, you might be looking at a baby, a new grandchild or possible a long-desired goal coming to fruition. PISCES is a stabilizer.

Age no obstacle for twin writers or their readers

DEAR ABBY: I have been reading your column for 50 years. I love you and your sister and have learned a lot from you.

I'm 81 years old, and I happen to know you are both close to my age. I'm curious: Are you still writing your answers or is someone else writing them for you?

I don't see how you could still be doing it. Most of my friends my age are in wheelchairs or using walkers or canes. That's normal at our ages, since we are at the end of the line.

I read the death notices every night to see who has just died, and the majority of the notices show people 10 years younger than I am. I guess I'm lucky. -- JANE IN BLOOMFIELD HILLS, MICH.

DEAR JANE: You say you've been reading my column for 50 years? That's quite remarkable, since I've been writing it for only 39!

Also, congratulations on reaching 81. My twin sister and I were born in 1918, but we don't count our years; we count our blessings.

P.S. Both Eppie and I write our own columns, and we wouldn't have it any other way.

DEAR ABBY: My 17-year-old son (I'll call him Bill) has a friend at school who confides in him. "Meg" is 15, and has been sneaking out of her parents' house in the middle of the night to have sex with several different older boys. Her parents don't have a clue about this. Meg uses no birth control or protection for herself or her partners.

I want to alert her parents, but Bill has sworn me to secrecy. Meg was recently tested for syphilis and pregnancy, and while waiting for the results, she continued to sneak out and have sex with different boys. (She said if she got pregnant, she wouldn't know who the father is.)

I can't tell Meg's parents without getting my son in trouble with her for having told me. Bill refuses to tell her parents, but continues to warn Meg about her promiscuous behavior. What should I do? -- CONCERNED AND FEARFUL

DEAR CONCERNED: If your child were behaving promiscuously, wouldn't you want to be told? Explain to Bill that because health and possibly lives are at stake, you cannot remain silent. This is not some petty piece of gossip. Neither you nor your son is doing anyone any favors by withholding this information from those who can help Meg.

Tell Meg's parents what you have told me.

Abby shares some of her favorite, easy-to-prepare recipes. To order, send a business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.95 outside the U.S.) to: Dear Abby, c/o King Features, P.O. Box 477, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0477. (Postage is included.)

Much like Mortal Kombat, the players have different fight moves in their arsenal, like roundhouse kicks, blocks, shields and more.

Along the way, there are bonus rooms that let you smash more toads (and rack up more points) and secret room, where weapons like freeze rays and plasma bursts await your use.

But what makes this game stand out from anything else on the market is the meticulous detail that has gone into creating Battle Beast.

Instead of using pixels and bitmapped sprites, the characters have been created with over 8,000 frames of hand-drawn, movie quality animation. The background is also of cartoon-esque quality.

And, of course, there is the awesome artificial intelligence engine that drives the computer brain (and can drive the player crazy). The computer "learns" your favorite moves over time, and will defend against those moves.

I did subtract a couple of points for keyboard control. Not that it's sluggish to operate, but there are nearly dozens of keyboard combinations one must know to fully appreciate the game.

Where I have have serious problems with Battle Beast is, on one hand, you have a cuddly black and white animated puppy named Sparky bouncing around the screen. On the other hand, it IS a fight game (and Sparky morphs into Spartacus). Who is the target audience?

I can picture younger children getting hooked on Battle Beast because of its cartoonish aspects. Okay, there is no blood flying about as in the arcade games of today, and it is metal beasts bashing each other in the head.

I do not find the violence bad at all compared to the Mortal Kombats and Doooms out there. But I still would not want my 8-year-old daughter playing with it.

On Aug. 19, Battle Beast will hit the shelves, and to mark the event, major software retailers will give away 10,000 free copies of the full-blown game.

and 100,000 interactive demo discs with a $5 discount check toward the game's purchase.

Ah yes, the 70's are back. Radio stations around the country are turning to an all-70's format. I understand platform shoes and bell-bottom jeans have come back into vogue.

And the best part of all - the classic games I grew up with are hitting the market again. And I do mean "classic."

Activision has come out with several action packs of Atari 2600 games for Windows. Games like Pitfall!, Kaboom! and Chopper Command.

The Microsoft Arcade collection has six of the old arcade games, complete with exact sound and graphics, available also for Windows. These include Centipede, Missile Command and, one of my all-time favorites, Battle Zone.

But the arcade game I probably spent more time on, more quarters into, and skipped more college classes for, is now available on CD-ROM. I am, of course, talking about Dragon's Lair (okay, so it came out in the early 80s).

Yes, this is the original game, taken directly off the arcade CD and put onto today's smaller CD disc.

The good news is, remember those annoying pauses that sometimes occurred during moments of decision? With today's faster computers and CD-ROM drives, those blank periods are history. And the game is a little more forgiving about the exact timing of your moves.

The bad news is that not all of the levels are here. For instance, the falling floor, a favorite of mine, is missing. However, most of the other levels are here, in all its glory.

The aggravation? The solution to most of the levels are exactly as they were in the arcade game. But not for ALL the levels, so beware.

Despite these little quirks, Dragon's Lair is a great game, even by today's standards. It will make you appreciate how ahead of its time Dragon's Lair really was.

The next time you down a glass of orange juice, think about this: It contains as much or more sugar than a can of cola.

A University of Alabama professor said that's OK, though; just drink the orange juice, or the cola, in moderation. "After a couple of glasses of orange juice, you've met your vitamin C requirement," says Ralph Lane, a food scientist and professor of nutrition. "Don't overdo it."

Lane and his students, using an instrument called a hand refractometer, measured popular summer drinks to learn how much sugar is in a 12-ounce glass.

Grape juice led the group, with 54 grams of sugar, followed by apple juice. Orange juice, a citrus soft drink and natural-flavored drinks all had 38 grams of sugar. Sports drinks were lower in sugar; diet drinks had none. The brands were not identified.

Most soft drinks contain "empty" calories, while the juices have vitamins such as vitamin C and minerals such as potassium, says Renee Tucker, a clinical dietetic manager.
