

Christopher's sentencing date expected to be delayed

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

An Oct. 24 sentencing date for convicted Big Spring resident and businessman Charles "Chris" Christopher will more than likely be delayed because of a hitch in the retrial of business partner G. Wayne Reeder, according to U.S. District Court Clerk Laurie Kizior.

Reeder's second trial was set to begin in Providence, R.I., today, but was delayed because of a serious knee injury suffered by the prosecutor in the case.

In June the Providence court said Christopher would probably not be sentenced until late September or early October because of a mistrial resulting from a hung jury in the first trial of his business partner, Reeder, a California real estate developer.

Christopher has been waiting for more than a year to be sentenced on a July 1995 conviction on 11 counts of wire fraud and 10 counts of interstate transfer of stolen goods.

He still faces a possible 155 years in prison and $60 million in fines for defrauding two insurance companies of more than $30 million, but the mistrial of his partner and subsequent retrial has put his sentencing on hold for an eighth time.

Reeder's first trial began May 21 and lasted almost two weeks before a hung jury failed to determine his guilt or innocence for his part in helping Christopher defraud American Universal Insurance Co. of Providence and Diamond Benefits Life Insurance Co. of Arizona.

What finally happens to Christopher and Reeder probably won't be known for at least a couple of weeks, Kizior said, because of an injury to the prosecutor in the Reeder case.

Kizior, who clerks in U.S. District Judge Frances Boyles' office, said, "We had a mistrial and now we have to start all over. Reeder's new trial was set to begin today, but the prosecutor will probably be laid up for at least a week or two."

Kizior added the Christopher sentencing will more than likely have to wait until the conclusion of the second Reeder trial, and Boyles still has to rule on a motion for a new trial which Christopher's attorneys filed almost immediately after his conviction.

"Everything is up in the air right now and it will depend on how fast the prosecutor recovers as to when Reeder's second trial begins," Kizior said.

Reeder was separated from being tried with Christopher in July 1995 when he was diagnosed with cancer.

Because of several developments leading up to the start of Reeder's first trial in May, five counts of interstate transfer of stolen goods and five counts of wire fraud against Reeder were dropped.

The transactions Reeder is charged with total about $16 million.

Reeder was originally charged with the same 10 counts of interstate transfer of stolen goods and the same 11 counts of wire fraud on which Christopher was convicted, but now faces only five counts of interstate transfer of stolen goods and six counts of wire fraud.

United Way kicks off campaign

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

The 51st campaign of the United Way of Big Spring and Howard County kicked off Tuesday at First United Methodist Church's Garrett Hall with a set goal of raising $210,000 and a campaign chairman who thinks he has the team to meet that goal.

One goal of this year's campaign team is to continue the tradition that has raised more than $6 million in its previous 50 years of existence.

The 1996-97 team has adopted the slogan, "Just Do It!"

Tuesday's luncheon also featured comments from campaign chairman Bob Scott who said the United Way came within a hair of meeting last year's goal of $210,000.

This year's Pacesetters division team has already begun its assault on the $210,000 goal by raising $22,200, which is $2,200 more than its goal of $20,000.

Scott said this year's team is well organized and ready to do its share to meet their goal. "It's great to be able to make a call and touch several organizations at once."

Cabinet members for the 1996-97 campaign include Rich Anderson, Pacesetter Division; Archie Kountz and Betty Kelly, Commercial Division; Kevin Freeman and Richard Steel, Loaned Executive Division; Cheryl and R.G. Click, Community Division; and Dr. Deborah Hajovsky and Glynn Mouton, Professional Division.

Scott said several things will be a little different this year, including posting the United Way's campaign progress at several locations throughout the city instead of at the Howard County Courthouse.

Local residents will be able to follow the campaign's progress every Thursday by checking the marquee at the Rip Griffin Truck Travel Center, Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce, Howard College and Golden Corral.

The 3-month campaign will end Dec. 18 and will attempt to improve on last year's campaign contribution total of $206,700, 98.4 percent of last year's goal.

Agencies assisted by the United Way of Big Spring and Howard County include:

- American Red Cross - Provides disaster relief services; assistance to military personnel and their families; and offers first aid instruction.

- Boys Club - Offers guidance, instruction, recreation and leadership to boys ages six to 17. Programs include athletics, camping, shop, tutoring and special events.

- Buffalo Trail Council Boy Scouts of America - Offers educational and character building programs for boys and young adults, as well as training in citizenship, personal fitness, meaningful skills and responsibility.

- Dora Roberts Rehabilitation Center - Administers programs that improve the health and welfare of disabled children and adults. DRRC also offers employment.

Cashion says local team ready for championship run

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

Comparing the United Way and its teamwork with that of the teams and athletes of National Football League is how veteran NFL referee Red Cashion of College Station summed up the United Way's campaign at Tuesday's kickoff luncheon of the 51st year of the United Way in Big Spring.

Cashion, also a veteran of Super Bowls XX and XXX, was the guest speaker at the United Way's kickoff luncheon and addressed the capacity crowd at First United Methodist Church's Garrett Hall on the subject of "The Challenge of Being a Pro."

"The cooperation between the NFL and the United Way goes back a long way," Cashion said. The United Way, he said, is one of the largest organizations receiving funds from NFL charities, which has a $13 million budget for advertising alone.

"Football is a team sport, not an individual sport, which makes it difficult to officiate. It involves a lot of hours, hard work and cooperation. The United Way has that same sort of cooperation," Cashion said.

The one thing critical to the success of any organization, according to Cashion, is that everyone participate.

Cashion suggested that anyone interested in helping an organization such as United Way, go by and visit two or three of the agencies assisted by United Way funds.

"It's not only worthwhile, but a real bargain. I don't know of anywhere else you can get the same results for your contribution like you can from these agencies," Cashion said.

According to Cashion, giving his best everyday is what has kept the United Way so successful.

"Most people are good enough to get by without doing their best. The pro football player practices hard and works hard, but lives under one constant condition: the day someone can do the job better than he can, he's out of a job," Cashion said.

"I've often wondered what kind of world we'd have if everyone did their best everyday," he added.

Saying the local United Way has the players and attitude for a "championship season," Cashion stressed the preseason and warmups are over for the United Way and now it's time to make the championship run.

Logan named new president at Norwest Bank Big Spring

By JOHN H. WALKER
Managing Editor

Richard Logan, a Big Lake native with 18 years banking experience with Victoria Bank and Trust and Norwest Bank Victoria, has been named president of Norwest Bank Big Spring.

"Richard was elected as president and as a director Monday and will be relocating to Big Spring as soon as possible," said Curt Mullins, Norwest Big Spring chairman of the board. Logan replaces O.L. Cooper, who recently left the bank to join State National Bank of West Texas, a bank in organization based in Lubbock. Logan graduated from Big Lake High School and the University of Texas. He is a fourth-generation West Texan and his great-grandmother was one of the original settlers in the Big Lake-Reagan County area. His wife, Mary, is a San Angelo native.

RICHARD LOGAN

Victoria Bank and Trust was a $1.8 billion bank group comprised of 52 community banks when Norwest purchased it, Logan explained.

Even though Norwest Big Spring has no branches in area communities, Logan drew an analogy between the Victoria and Big Spring markets in that both communities were the largest in the respective markets and that both communities served a number of smaller towns.

"Norwest seems to understand community banking," Logan said. "I think there's a better fit between Norwest in communities like Big Spring."

Logan said that as changes continue to move through the banking industry, he thinks continued consolidation will become more and more evident. "The (operating) margins are so close, you see consolidation (of departments) to get the effi-

Roy Holland thinks he has a good idea how to get the biggest bang out of his cotton crop, and he wanted to tell about 200 of his closest friends about his ideas.

Holland Cottonseed hosted its third annual field day Tuesday morning, and almost 200 area agriculture producers saw firsthand what Holland and other agriculture officials are doing to try to improve cotton production.

The unofficial theme of the day was "not new, but improved," as farmers viewed experimental strains of cotton and received a demonstration on drip irrigation, a method that's been around since before Woodstock but is now coming into popular acceptance.

The drip irrigation demonstration, handled by Duncan Hamlin and Tim Newton, sparked the most attention from the crowd Tuesday. Hamlin and Newton said the system is an efficient, cost-effective method of watering crops, something many of the drought-pinched farmers wanted to hear.

In a drip irrigation system, water and fertilizer are delivered to the field by computer-driven pumps, then released into the soil at preprogrammed intervals by emitters buried about a foot under the ground. Not only is this a dependable method of irrigation, Hamlin said, but it's also cost-effective: A typical electric bill for powering the system during the growing season is usually less than $50, he said.

There are other benefits, Hamlin added.

"It will do nothing but improve the quality of your land, because you're putting organic material back into the ground," he said.

The biggest drawback to the system is its up-front costs. Hamlin said installation costs vary depending on the type of farm, but admitted the price tag might scare some farmers away.

Also, the system will not work unless a farmer has ready access to a water supply, something a lot of area farmers don't

Asian cotton farmers studying U.S. methods

If the Holland Cottonseed Field Day organizers had given a prize to the cotton producers traveling the greatest distance to attend, Hayrullo Madzhitov and his cohorts would have won easily.

Madzhitov headed a group of cotton producers from Tajikistan - a former Soviet republic located in central Asia - that participated in the field day as part of their tour of various U.S. agricultural sites.

The Tajikistani group is touring this country to learn more about the good old American capitalistic method of cotton production.

Pam Alspaugh of the Texas Tech University International Textile Center - which is sponsoring Madzhitov's group during its swing through West Texas - said the Tajikistanis are busily switching from communal to private cotton production.

"As they are privatizing their farms, they're looking at the U.S. system, because it's considered the model system in the world," Alspaugh said. "They're just trying to look at and learn from our cotton and textile system."

Cotton is the major cash crop of Tajikistani farmers, and a major export for the country. About 90 percent of the country's cotton is exported to 67 other lands.

"Their crop is primarily hand-harvested by specialized teams," said Howard County extension agent Don Richardson, who helped usher the group during the field day.

At least one farmer in the crowd was wary.

"The initial costs are the biggest drawback to me," said Garden City farmer John Phillips. "Even with drip irrigation, you'll probably need some help to get a real high yield. Until the drought is over, I won't even consider it... but I'm always looking for something -- a different option -- to make money."

Another farmer in the crowd, however, was so sold of the system that he now installs it elsewhere. Hobert Freick first began using the system about 20 years ago, and said it was just the thing to help a farmer survive a drought.

"It'll definitely see you through a drought," Freick said. "I've had some farmers tell me that if they didn't have drip irrigation, they'd be losing money just like everybody else."

Elsewhere on the tour, farmers got a close look at research done to produce stronger, more productive strains of cotton. Holland Cottonseed's research fields north of Big Spring have been the testing ground for several varieties of cotton plants. The goal, researcher Dave Bush said, is to find a variety of cotton that will be both weather resistant -- something vital in West Texas -- and produces relatively early in the growing season.

Part of the reason for the heavy export ratio is necessity: Much of the existing textile infrastructure in Tajikistan is in a state of disrepair.

"The textile mills in Russia are old and falling apart, so they have to sell the majority of their product abroad," Alspaugh said.

During their stay in the United States, Madzhitov's group hopes to soak up as much information as possible about the world's most efficient and profitable cotton producing system.

"Our main goal is to establish cooperation between the United States and Tajikistan," Madzhitov said through an interpreter. "Another of our goals is to exchange experiences. We're interested in studying how cotton is grown, produced and distributed in this country. Basically, we're interested in the complete process."

Astronauts excited to see Lucid as docking nears

SPACE CENTER — Atlantis closed in on the Russian space station Mir today as the shuttle's crew prepared to pick up colleague Shannon Lucid and drop off another astronaut for a four-month stay.

Atlantis was to dock tonight with the orbiting outpost, where Lucid has lived for a record six months.

"We're sure anxious to see Shannon looking out the window in Mir," crew member Tom Akers told NBC late Tuesday night.

For his part, astronaut John Blaha said he was looking forward to replacing Lucid.

"I think she's ready to leave," Blaha said as Atlantis circled Earth at 17,500 mph. "I'm ready to get there and get on to working with the Russians."

Corporate, government leaders hold technology summit

AUSTIN — Texas has the potential to become the place people think of when they think of technology, Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry says.

Perry made the remark Tuesday at the first-ever Texas Technology Summit, held to allow technology and business leaders to talk about partnerships that will push the state to the forefront of the technological revolution.

The purpose of the summit, initiated by Gov. George W. Bush, is to create a blueprint that can take Texas into the 21st century and make it the leading location for technology in the world, conference leaders said.

"This should be the catalyst that makes the public aware of how important this is, not only from an economic standpoint, but because of how much technological innovation can improve the quality of people's lives," Perry said.

The agriculture commissioner stressed that boosting the state's economy cannot outweigh the importance of improving people's lives.

Woman in hiding amid accusations of bilking investors

DALLAS — A Dallas woman accused of conning 34 people out of $3 million in an investment scheme is on the run from authorities.

The Securities and Exchange Commission investigators and debt collectors in Alabama have filed a civil suit against Kathy S. Kingsmore, according to court records.

The SEC civil suit filed Monday in Dallas against Ms. Kingsmore alleges that she has taken more than $3 million from about 34 people used it for personal purchases.

Kingsmore allegedly used part of the funds for the construction of a Florida beach house on an estate valued at more than $800,000.

In Birmingham, Ala., a car dealer said Ms. Kingsmore bought a 1996 Suburban and drove it off the lot after paying for the vehicle with a check that later bounced.

Abrego 'knelt at altar of greed' in leading cartel

HOUSTON — Accused drug baron Juan Garcia Abrego was a ruthless leader who "knelt at the altar of greed," cutting deals with the Cali drug cartel while lining his pockets with laundered proceeds from Los Angeles to New York, a federal prosecutor says.

"What this case is about is drugs. Drugs, drugs and more drugs," Assistant U.S. Attorney Melissa Annis said in her opening statement late Tuesday. "This man sitting in the courtroom was ultimately responsible."

The case began after attorneys trimmed a pool of 99 jurors to 16 individuals — 12 jurors plus four alternates — who will hear the case tried before U.S. District Judge Ewing Werlein Jr.

A stone-faced Garcia Abrego showed no reaction Tuesday as Ms. Annis outlined to jurors how she planned to prove the 52-year-old guilty of distributing 13 tons of cocaine into the United States and illegally laundering or transferring some $8.6 million.

Ratliff says tax relief a thorny problem

AUSTIN (AP) — There's a "good chance" the 1997 Legislature will seek to provide relief from local school property taxes. But replacing the $10 billion a year they now raise will be tough, a top lawmaker says.

"I don't know what the odds are that we can totally replace the local school property tax. I think that is a huge undertaking," said Sen. Bill Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant.

Ratliff, the newly appointed chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said Tuesday that there's no simple answer to Gov. George W. Bush's call for replacing school property taxes.

"When you shift a tax burden from one set of payers to another, you can call it reform. The people whose taxes go up don't consider that reform," he said. The Republican governor has said he believes property taxes have reached a crisis. A Bush-appointed study committee this week will wrap up a series of statewide public hearings on possible alternatives.

Ratliff said those hearings had "generated more heat than light" because "we're not getting a lot of truly constructive suggestions, other than a few people who are brave enough to suggest an income tax."

Bush already has ruled out creating a personal income tax. An earlier group of gubernatorial and legislative experts suggested three possible options:

- Widening or raising the state's 6.25 percent sales tax.
- Implementing a gross receipts tax that would require businesses to pay a tax on all the money they take in.

— Creating a business activity tax, which would be levied on the difference between a business's sales and its costs.

Each option creates problems, Ratliff said.

While businesses so far have favored raising the sales tax, the senator said that's "not a good prospect." With local sales taxes added on, some Texans already pay 8.25 percent, among the nation's highest sales tax rates.

To replace local school property taxes, the sales tax rate would have to go up to 14.5 percent, Ratliff said in a speech to the Austin Rotary Club.

Do that, he said, and many

Texas businesses would fail because "anybody within 100 miles of a border ... would be driving 100 miles to buy durable goods or anything that costs anything."

Some suggest expanding the sales levy, but Ratliff said that's not very practical, either. Items not now taxed include groceries, medicine, medical services and agricultural products.

"While Texas is not quite as agrarian a state as it once was, when we start talking about a sales tax when a person sells a bull ... Texas is still a pretty agrarian state."

Ratliff said the trouble with the proposed business taxes is that each would fall too heavily on some businesses while letting others off the hook.

Money on mind of new Texas Tech president

LUBBOCK (AP) — Texas Tech President Donald R. Haragan has turned an eye toward the future now that the "interim" part of his title is a thing of the past.

"Our No. 1 priority has to be the capital campaign and getting it off to a good start," said Haragan, whose expected appointment as 12th president of the 24,000-student university came Monday.

Chancellor John T. Montford also tapped Dr. David R. Smith, the state's health commissioner, as the president of Tech's medical school.

Haragan stressed that university officials, particularly Montford, are concerned with stimulating the school's endowment fund. For Texas Tech to continue to compete, he said, the school roughly needs to quadruple its current $125 million fund by the turn of the century.

Endowment money would pay for new academic chairs and professorships, but Haragan said his focus will be on scholarship gifts.

"We've done a really good job for scholarships for the very highest level," he said. "We haven't done as good a job for the group right below that."

Sentiment for a plump endowment appears universally favorable on the Lubbock campus.

"Obviously, the faculty is hopeful and cautiously optimistic," said Faculty Senate President John Howe said, adding that he and other professors supported hiring Haragan from within after regents hired an outsider as chancellor.

Haragan came to Tech in 1969 as an assistant professor of geosciences. He had held a number of posts, including executive vice president and provost of Texas Tech since 1988. He was named interim president after his predecessor, Robert W.

Lawless, became president of the University of Tulsa in February.

"My wife and I made a decision a long time ago that this was the place we wanted to be," Haragan said. "Many academics' loyalties lie with their disciplines rather than their university, but that's not the case with me."

The Texas Tech board of regents created the chancellorship in April in a rearrangement of the school's hierarchy. Haragan and Smith will handle the day-to-day operations of their schools and report to Montford.

Solon who killed bill resurrects another version

AUSTIN (AP) — An array of new local taxes could be used to build sports facilities, subject to voter approval and a review to ensure state finances aren't affected, under a proposal being considered by a House committee.

The proposed measure was discussed Tuesday by the Business and Industry Committee, which is headed by Rep. Kim Brimer, R-Arlington.

Brimer in the 1995 legislative session derailed a bill that would have allowed tax dollars to be used for professional sports facilities, citing its projected cost to state taxpayers of up to $180 million over five years. "Since I killed it, I thought I ought to come back and try to clean it up and see if I can do something with it," he said.

Brimer, who had called the 1995 measure "corporate welfare," said sports facilities are regional projects and so they should be financed regionally. "We don't want to impact the people of San Angelo on something Houston's going to do," he said.

The proposal in Brimer's committee would allow a city, county or group of counties to put a resolution before local voters to acquire, build or renovate a sports venue with specific taxes. Bonds could be issued to pay for the sports facility and be paid off with the taxes.

The state comptroller would review the resolution to ensure its passage wouldn't cost the state money.

Local taxing options for the facilities would include:

- An increase of up to one-half of 1 percent in the sales and use tax. The current state sales tax rate is 6.25 percent, and local entities currently may add another 2 percent.
- A tax on short-term car rentals of up to 5 percent. There currently is a state tax of 10 percent on gross receipts on such rentals. — An admissions tax of up to $2 per person.

— A parking tax at the sports facility of up to $1 per vehicle. The tax could be imposed beginning not more than two hours before and ending not more than two hours after the time a sports event is scheduled to begin.

— An increase in the hotel occupancy tax of up to 2 percent of the room price. A combination of state and local levies currently could bring the hotel tax up to 20 percent in some areas.

— The proposal could take the hotel tax up to 17 percent in Houston and San Antonio.

El Paso's mayor asking for probe of bribery claims

EL PASO (AP) — Although it uncovered no evidence of wrongdoing, an audit suggesting some people believe city employees have accepted bribes has prompted the mayor to call for a police investigation.

The audit was sharply critical of three key city departments — planning, public inspection and engineering — that regulate land development and construction.

But the city engineer's office was singled out for more serious charges. The audit said there is a perception that some employees there have accepted gratuities from customers wanting quick approval of construction plans.

The firm got reports of favoritism from people interviewed inside and outside of City Hall, said Mayor Larry Francis, who ordered the audit.

"I have had a number of people from the private sector since I took office make allegations of that type ... but up to this point we have not been able to get people to testify to that effect," said Francis.

Roy Holland's business takes Big Spring to the rest of the ag world

Tuesday was the annual cottonseed field day at Holland Cottonseed in Big Spring.

For those involved in the agribusiness industry it is a day to look at new varieties, to re-visit application methods and to discover more about what is going on in the world of agriculture.

In addition to our West Texas producers, there was a group from the Republic of Tajikistan in the former Soviet Union in attendance.

The group, led by Hayrullo Madzhitov, a manager of contracts, deliveries and transportation in the city of Glavhlopkoprom, is involved in cotton production.

While Madzhitov is involved in transportation, others were farmers who, just like our West Texas farmers, hope that the latest in technology helps them overcome the setbacks of nature.

Their presence in Big Spring was brought about because of the international reputation of Roy Holland and his business.

Research conducted at Holland Cottonseed allows producers worldwide to have a better chance of making a better group ... of paying their bills ... and of helping clothe the peoples of the world.

We've driven past Holland Cottonseed many times. There were times we thought that the Dutch windmill-type signage was a cute play off of the name while at other times we simply drove by.

The reality is that for many years the research conducted by Holland Cottonseed and the high quality products resulting from that work has taken the name of Big Spring, Texas, USA around the world.

We can't buy that type of positive advertising at any price - and Roy Holland is providing it to us free of charge.

Technology challenges even the most technical of us

Things have been in a bit of mechanical - or at least technical flux - at the Herald for the past few weeks.

First, after dealing with what seemed to be cans and strings for so many years, we've moved into the 20th Century with a new telephone system.

And let me tell you that when you go from trying to find a telephone set that even worked to trying to decipher voice mail, you've taken one of those giant mankind-type leaps they talked about on the moon a few years back.

But the interesting process has been the installation of a new computer system in the news room.

Not only has it been interesting, it has been lengthy. Keep in mind, however, that a newspaper computer system is as unique to our industry as is a banking system to that. And as we have moved through the process - which has actually taken just 11 days or - it really hasn't been bad.

John H. Walker

Steve Reagan, the senior employee in the newsroom and one of the more veteran of Herald employees, has worked the ins and outs of our new system with Jack Barton on Midland.

It was Jack, of Geomacs, who helped us out beginning in the spring when we started to have problems. And because Jack would drop what he was doing whenever we called and high-tail it to Big Spring to help us out, we wanted to do business with him if we could.

We've learned a lot about our system and the software, as has Jack. Actually, Steve has learned a lot about our system. Next on the computer learning curve, in regards to our particular Macintosh system, is Kellie Jones.

Kellie has cut through the maze of software mumbo-jumbo - see, that explains my level of expertise - and found the solutions to problems that Jack and Steve couldn't.

The nice thing about our installation has been the teamwork factor that has helped get us to the point that we're just tweaking here and fine-tuning there.

By the way, thanks for all of those kind words of sympathy from those who've found out we're going through the computer system upgrade.

Incidentally, the new system - once all aspects are tested and known to be working - will allow the Herald to receive news releases and columns electronically.

Howard County Commissioner Sonny Choate and wife Eunice have a most unusual vacation planned.

They are going to Louisiana for election day.

"We had always heard about Louisiana politics, so we started talking about that," Sonny explained.

The couple has been subscribing to newspapers in the south Louisiana area, particularly Houma, so that they will have some knowledge of the races they will be reading about when they get down there.

"There's been some pretty wild stuff that we've read about," Sonny said. "You wouldn't believe some of the things they say about each other in their campaigns."

We spent some time around Houma years ago, when we pulled a brief stint working offshore one December and January.

About the only things I remember are how sick I got going out to Block 98 in a crew boat in high seas, trying to climb onto the basket from the deck of a boat rising and falling 10 to 12 feet in heavy seas and being warned to not eat hamburgers at roadside hamburger stands.

It seems as if many of the mom and pop outfits seek to save money by using nutria meat instead of ground beef.

Nutria, for those of you who don't know, is a large aquatic South American rodent (Myocastor coypus) having webbed feet and a long tail. They weigh up to about 30 pounds and are bank dwellers ... eating roots and the like ... and winding up between an occasional hamburger bun.

Ummm, yummy.

The candid congressman on the Clinton surge

By CHARLES McDOWELL
Media General Newspapers

WASHINGTON - I had not talked to the Candid Congressman for so long that when he called last week and identified himself with the anonymous monicker, I assumed he was a congressman who took pictures.

Almost immediately I was apologizing for my memory and he was apologizing for quitting giving me inside dope on Congress when the Republicans took over after the 1994 election. Now he was rising above the unease of the minority and was ready again to help the press interpret what's going on in American politics.

"President Clinton's doing so well that the November election could be the most historic upheaval since two years ago," the Candid Congressman said.

"What's the main factor in the surge?"

"Dick Morris, a consultant mostly to Republicans, is the most obvious, pumped-up, self-important and really outrageous factor," he said. "We all have seen that Morris brought to his work for the president not just minimal conscience and maximum vanity but an attractive prostitute for a press agent."

"But what exactly did he do, congressman?" I asked.

"He counseled the president to edge up very close to the Republicans on many of the big social issues. This included actually abandoning the federal welfare entitlement established in the Roosevelt administration six decades ago.

"That was, well, a questionable Democratic tactic. But, even before Morris arrived, Clinton was beginning to be seen as a self-hedged president who did not panic middle-of-the-road voters.

Check the poll in Louisiana last week - Clinton 45 percent, Dole 32 percent."

"But what's going to happen if Dole gets some good TV ads and decent speech lines to push the pledge of a big tax cut?" I asked.

"The Republicans underestimated the savvy of their own voters," said the expert. "They should have polled - at least consulted - their friends. Check out the poll in Illinois last week in which four out of five voters said balancing the budget ought to come before cutting taxes. Clinton gets it. He relentlessly reminds us that he's reducing the deficit."

"Members of both parties have joined in that," I said.

"But not all the ones in either party who talk the most about balancing the budget," the congressional pundit said.

"And how about protecting Medicare from its obvious crisis and the collapse that's coming just a decade or so into the new century?" I asked.

"The Republicans are more realistic than the Democrats on that," he said. "And it really is hurting Dole that Clinton and his party are bashing their efforts. Truth is, both parties have to do better and move us into means-testing. Meanwhile, it's really embarrassing if temporarily helpful for Democrats. And doing it kind of half-right clearly hurts the Republicans."

"Well, how's Dole doing personally in the campaign?"

"He's being himself."

"What's that mean exactly?"

"One thing it means is being 73 years old," said the Candid Congressman. "People who watch Dole on television see it a lot of ways: cranky and wise; cranky and funny but maybe not quite wise; tired but also experienced in the hard life and still bravely hopeful; but, whatever, even with all the energy left in him, 73 years old."

"Dole speaks up about being old, about remembering better times in some ways, about going back to some of the good things," I said. "And Clinton says Dole is talking about a bridge to the past when a younger generation's bridge to the future is what we need. Any comment?"

"As a member of Congress, and quite apart from this choice between great Americans, I must confess that I am in my soul a two-bridge man..." he said candidly.

Landmark bill stalls as Republicans split over education issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — Far-reaching legislation to stem illegal immigration stalled Tuesday as Republicans split over a provision that would allow states to deny public education to children who are in the country illegally.

GOP leaders in Congress disagreed sharply over the prospects for the legislation, which the Republicans have been pushing for months as a way to tap into the politically popular issue. California, which bears the biggest financial burden from illegal immigration, is a key prize in the presidential campaign.

With GOP nominee Bob Dole lagging in the polls in California, Republicans have been eager for an issue to use against President Clinton, who has promised to veto any immigration bill that includes the public schools provision.

"The fact is, Clinton disagrees with the majority in California," Haley Barbour, chairman of the Republican National Committee, said in an interview.

But the disagreement over the schools amendment proposed by Rep. Elton Gallegly, R-Calif., appeared deepest within Republican ranks.

"Do you want children on street corners and in street gangs or do you want them in school?" said Rep. Tom Campbell, R-Calif.

A meeting of House and Senate negotiators seeking to craft a legislative package was abruptly canceled just before it was to begin Tuesday. It was tentatively rescheduled for Wednesday but no time was set. With Congress rushing toward adjournment for the year, only a few weeks remain for the House and Senate to pass the final immigration bill and send it to Clinton.

Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., author of the Senate bill, said as many as 12 GOP senators are opposed to the Gallegly amendment, and that Republicans wouldn't be able to blame the Democrats for killing the immigration bill. He accused his fellow Republicans of playing a game in which legislation was crafted "only to fail" and score political points from a Clinton veto.

If the schools amendment is removed, "We'll pass a very strong, tough, firm, sweeping bill," Simpson told reporters. "That's the only option I see. ... It's dead as a wedge if it's in this form."

Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott insisted, however, that "It's not dead. It's very much alive."

Lott, R-Miss., said Republicans were trying to craft a new version of Gallegly's amendment that would be more acceptable to the Senate.

"The goal is to come up with something that will move through the House and through the Senate and onto the president's desk, and we're still confident that's an achievable goal," said Jim Maiella, a spokesman for Gallegly.

The original bill approved overwhelmingly by the Senate in May didn't include the Gallegly amendment.

Clinton renews warnings for Saddam

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States will have nearly 5,000 troops in Kuwait by week's end and will respond "very sharply" if Iraq threatens American forces or its allies in the region, Defense Secretary William Perry says.

Perry, just back Tuesday from a weekend spurt of diplomacy in Europe and the Persian Gulf, said Washington was still keeping a close watch on Saddam Hussein even though he has been moderating his behavior.

"The bottom line is, we will not tolerate any threatening activities against our air crews," Perry said at a Pentagon briefing, speaking of the allied aircraft patrolling no-fly zones in northern and southern Iraq.

Should any be taken, he pledged, "we will respond very sharply."

In the past, administration officials have said Iraq must not fire missiles at U.S. aircraft, rebuild its air defense sites destroyed by the U.S. cruise missiles, move mobile surface-to-air missile units into the no-fly zones, illuminate allied aircraft or drive armored units into the southern zone and threaten Kuwait with them.

U.S. troops were sent to Kuwait because Iraq's threats against Kuwait were "completely unacceptable," Perry said. "We're doing it because the Kuwaiti government feels threatened."

Some 3,500 soldiers from Fort Hood, Texas, will join 1,200 others conducting exercises in Kuwait by the end of the week, he said.

Perry rejected speculation that the Kuwaiti government initially was unwilling to accept additional U.S. forces or that the U.S.-led coalition that mounted the 1991 war against Iraq had been fractured during the past two weeks of confrontation with Saddam.

"The bottom line is, the coalition is alive and well," said Perry.

Meanwhile, the administration dispatched a new diplomatic note to Baghdad's U.N. mission, warning Iraq not to threaten U.S. forces or its neighbors.

It was the second such warning in the past 10 days.

The note was "to put Iraq on notice," and would remain in effect "indefinitely," said State Department spokesman Nicholas Burns.

At the White House, President Clinton sought to dispel criticism of his recent steps against Iraq.

"It's obvious that he's always pushing the envelope," Clinton told reporters Tuesday. "We didn't want to create a precedent that would lead him to believe he could take further action. We didn't want there to be any ambiguity at all."

The first contingent of soldiers from Fort Hood could be dispatched as early as today.

Nation's trade deficit hits 8-year high of $11.7 billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The trade deficit swelled to $11.7 billion in July as a surge in Japanese auto imports, Chinese toys and foreign oil pushed the U.S. trade imbalance to its highest level in more than eight years.

The Commerce Department said Wednesday the July deficit was a sharp 43 percent higher than the June imbalance of $8.2 billion.

It left the trade deficit running at an annual rate of $109.6 billion, higher than last year's deficit of $105.1 billion.

President Clinton has based much of his re-election campaign on an improving U.S. economy. But opponents Bob Dole and Ross Perot have targeted the rising trade deficit as a Clinton policy failure.

Bob Lighthizer, Dole's trade adviser, said the trade deficits were a "glaring deficiency in Clinton's record that goes to the heart of middle class anxiety in this country."

The worsening deficit for July reflected a sharp 33 percent jump in the politically sensitive trade deficit with Japan, which rose to $4.3 billion, the highest level since last October. Imports of Japanese cars and parts climbed $294 million to $2.9 billion, up 11 percent.

Negotiators from the United States and Japan were scheduled to meet today and Thursday in San Francisco to review progress under a controversial 1995 auto agreement that the administration has hailed as a major success in narrowing the automotive trade gap between the two countries. The auto sector accounts for about two-thirds of the total trade deficit with Japan.

America's deficit with China rose as well.

Dole, Clinton haggle while Perot sues over debates

WASHINGTON (AP) — With Ross Perot suing for an invitation to the presidential debates, Bob Dole and Bill Clinton remain deadlocked over dates and details — including the president's insistence that Perot be included.

Debate talks between Clinton and Dole negotiators were to resume this afternoon. But after three hours of meetings Tuesday, lead GOP representative Carroll Campbell warned they were still "a few days away from agreeing."

Given the gulf between the camps, it appeared certain the first debate would not occur next week as proposed by the nonpartisan Commission on Presidential Debates.

Negotiators met Tuesday in the wake of the commission's recommendation that Perot and Reform Party running mate Pat Choate be excluded because they have no "realistic" chance of winning the election.

The Clinton campaign, which believes Perot's participation helps the president, called the ruling regrettable and pushed Republicans to accept the Reform ticket in debates despite the commission's non-binding decision.

"I enjoyed having him in there in '92," Clinton, campaigning in Michigan, said of Perot. "I thought he made a valuable contribution. I'm not afraid of any debate."

The Clinton campaign proposed: —Two presidential debates, two hours each. The first, on Oct. 6, would include Perot; the other would be a town-hall style session with just Dole and Clinton on Oct. 13.

—One two-hour debate on Oct. 9 between Vice President Al Gore, GOP vice presidential nominee Jack Kemp and the Reform Party's Choate.

The Dole campaign, which had proposed four hour-long debates between Dole and Clinton and two vice presidential forums, said it preferred a schedule spread out through the end of September and October. Everything but Perot's participation was negotiable.

"If too many people participate, you don't have a debate, you have a cattle show," said Campbell, the former South Carolina governor. "Perot is not something we're discussing."

A CNN poll Tuesday night of 600 likely voters showed that 52 percent think Perot should be allowed to participate and 37 percent say he should not. Still, only 9 percent said he has a realistic chance of winning the election.

Reform leaders, meanwhile, said they would file suit in U.S. District Court in Washington by Friday seeking "more objective criteria" in deciding debate participants.

With Clinton scheduled to address the United Nations on Sept. 24, Dole offered to let the first proposed debate slide to the 26th. But Campbell admitted Tuesday that those dates were unlikely as talks dragged.

Documents: Eisenhower White House worried over POWs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Information about hundreds of POWs possibly left behind in North Korea surfaced in Washington just after President Eisenhower had concluded an armistice ending the Korean War.

Had the president known about the unaccounted-for prisoners sooner, he might have refused to reach an armistice, according to documents made public Tuesday.

The documents, discussed in a House hearing, show intense concern within the Eisenhower administration over secret reports that hundreds of prisoners of war had been left behind. The documents include intelligence reports, classified policy statements and memoranda of conversations among top government officials. They disagree widely on estimates of unaccounted-for POWs.

One document, dated Dec. 22, 1953, recounts a conversation between Eisenhower and Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens about internal reports that more than 900 POWs were left behind.

"The president made the statement that he was not sure that if he had fully appreciated the situation he would have felt it wise to go into the forthcoming conference," the memo says, apparently referring to peace talks over ending the Korean War. "Perhaps we should have insisted on their return as a precondition to the conference."

Peace talks with North Korea had ended with an armistice earlier that year at Panmunjom.

When Eisenhower asked Stevens what evidence the military had, Stevens reported that the Army had the names of "610 Army people that have just disappeared from the camps. The Air Force has over 300."

These prisoners were apparently not part of the POWs returned to the United States in what the memo refers to as the "Big Switch" of prisoners that marked the end of the conflict.

Although it kept the issue quiet, the Eisenhower administration appears to have taken the reports seriously. A memo from Deputy Defense Secretary Reuben B. Robertson Jr. dated Oct. 27, 1956, asks the military service secretaries to improve the information they have on unaccounted-for cases to help in negotiations with China and North Korea.

The Robertson memo describes a presidential order signed the previous year that "committed all facilities of our government to establish contact with, support and obtain the release of all our prisoners of war."

Rep. Robert Dornan, R-Calif., chairman of the subcommittee, said the latest Pentagon list of unaccounted-for numbers 389.

Muslim leader wins most votes in Bosnian presidential election

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Muslim leader Alija Izetbegovic won the most votes in Bosnia's presidential election, sparking street celebrations in Sarajevo today for the first chairman of the new three-man presidency.

Second to Izetbegovic in the election was Serb nationalist Momcilo Krajisnik, who campaigned for the Serb half of the country to secede from Bosnia, and Croat Kresimir Zubak, who wants Bosnia's minority Croats to join up with Croatia.

While Izetbegovic's powers as presidential chairman are mostly symbolic, he will be the man international officials turn to as they try to make Bosnia's post-war reconstruction and new government work. He is the only one of the three forming the presidency who favors a unified Bosnian federation.

Whether the presidency, created by international negotiators who stitched together the 1995 Dayton peace accord, succeeds will help determine how many foreign peace troops remain in Bosnia, and for how long. Thousands of American troops, mostly in the north, make up the international force.

"This is a great day for us," said Mirza Hajric, an aide to Izetbegovic. "Today, for the first time after four years Bosnia-Herzegovina is reunited."

Television footage showed jubilant Muslims driving through the streets of Sarajevo, beeping car horns, leaning out windows and waving green and white Muslim flags.

Robert Frowick of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe said complete returns from Saturday's vote gave Izetbegovic 729,034 votes to Krajisnik's 690,373. Zubak was a distant third with 342,007 votes.

Frowick said the results would become official at the end of a 72-hour appeal period. Only minor adjustments in the vote were expected.

The election was the first since the December signing of the peace agreement that ended 3 years of Balkan war.

Even before final results were in, foreign envoys were pressing Izetbegovic to start working on the institutions meant to preserve peace and to keep the country intact.

The peace plan for Bosnia calls for a three-way presidency shared by a Muslim, a Serb and a Croat. The one with the highest number of votes is chairman for two years but has no specific duties or veto power.

Under the Dayton accord, Bosnia's two halves — the Muslim-Croat federation and a Serb republic — will enjoy a high degree of autonomy. The key to holding Bosnia together will be avoiding a political stalemate, not only among the three presidents but also within the ethnically mixed parliament.

During the election campaign, Izetbegovic's party warned that if Muslims did not vote — or if they split their vote between competing Muslim-led parties — the Serb candidate could be the country's next leader.

Krajisnik was a senior deputy to Radovan Karadzic, the Bosnian Serb leader who has been indicted by the U.N. war crimes tribunal for complicity in ethnic fighting and atrocities that left about 250,000 people dead.

Members of the presidency can make decisions by a two-thirds vote. But a dissenting member can refer them to members of his ethnic group in parliament, which can veto such decisions by a two-thirds vote.

In addition to electing the three presidents, voters cast ballots Saturday for a national parliament and for regional parliaments, for the Muslim-Croat and Serb halves of the country. Those results are expected later this week.

Iraqi Kurdish leader in Turkey for talks; Kuwait explaining ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — An Iraqi Kurdish leader who teamed with Saddam Hussein to defeat a rival Kurdish group crossed into Turkey today for talks with U.S. and Turkish officials.

Patriot anti-missile units moved into the Kuwaiti desert as Washington girded for possible action against Iraq, and Kuwait launched a diplomatic offensive to explain its acceptance of U.S. warplanes and troops.

Massoud Barzani, leader of the Kurdistan Democratic Party, has declared that his deal with Saddam was temporary and that it was now over. He said he was forced to turn to Baghdad after his rival, Jalal Talabani, allied with Iran in a power struggle for control of Kurdish northern Iraq.

Barzani crossed through the border gate at Habur en route to the southeastern Turkish city of Diyarbakir, his spokesman Falk Merweyi told The Associated Press.

Merweyi said Barzani would meet with Turkish Foreign Minister Tansu Ciller and Robert Pelletreau, a U.S. undersecretary of state.

Iraqi Kurds had a de facto state in northern Iraq after the 1991 Persian Gulf War under the protection of a U.S.-led allied coalition force.

Washington withdrew a military coordination center for the coalition force after the Kurdish infighting that began Aug. 31. Most official and private aid groups also left the region.

Turkey, fearful the power vacuum in northern Iraq will help its own autonomy-seeking Kurdish rebels, declared a security zone inside neighboring northern Iraq.

U.S. authorities are expected to try to persuade Barzani to reach peace with Talabani and share power in the region, while the Turks will explain why they feel they need the security zone.

In Kuwait, two new Patriot missile batteries were uncrated Tuesday. Kuwait's defense minister was trying to justify their presence to the leaders of Saudi Arabia and Bahrain, while its information minister was explaining to Egypt and Syria the need for the growing U.S. force on Kuwaiti soil.

The Patriots were sent by the Pentagon to guard the oil-rich state, invaded in 1990 by Saddam's troops, against possible Iraqi Scud missile attacks.

President Clinton has also dispatched 3,500 more Army troops to Kuwait to join 1,200 others already conducting war games there.

France, finally closing ranks with the United States and Britain against Saddam, said Tuesday it would let U.S. planes fly over French territory.

Several Arab and Western countries that were part of the first Gulf War coalition against Iraq have been less supportive this time.

On Tuesday, France even the fly-over concession even though it still opposes an immediate strike.

French officials left open the possibility of hitting back if Baghdad fired again on U.S., French or British planes enforcing "no-fly" zones over northern and southern Iraq.

The zones were created after the Gulf War to protect Kurdish minorities in the north and Shiite Muslims in the south from Saddam's military.

Also Tuesday, British Foreign Secretary Malcolm Rifkind said Britain was ready to send troops to defend Kuwait against Iraq.

The latest crisis in Iraq began Aug. 31, when Saddam sent troops to help Barzani rout Talabani's Patriotic Union of Kurdistan. Washington responded by firing cruise missiles on military targets in southern Iraq on Sept. 3 and 4.

North Koreans infiltrate into South Korea

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — After abandoning their submarine on South Korea's east coast, 11 North Koreans apparently committed suicide today and a 12th was captured in an extensive manhunt near the rugged, mountainous shore.

Thousands of South Korean soldiers and police scoured a thickly wooded mountain that rises from the shore for eight more North Koreans believed to have come ashore, South Korean officials said. The active search was halted at nightfall, with soldiers ordered to lie in ambush until dawn.

The captured North Korean said the submarine carried 20 men when it ran aground on a reef off Kangnung, 90 miles northeast of Seoul, according to Brig. Gen. Shin Sang-gil.

Gen. Chung Hwa-un said it was unclear whether the submarine was trying to land spies in South Korea or had become stranded during a training exercise. The North Koreans found all wore civilian clothes and white sneakers.

There was no immediate

North Korean reaction to the apparent infiltration, certain to strain already tense relations between the Koreans.

Shin said the 11 dead intruders were found on shore about five miles southwest of the stranded sub at 5 p.m., about 15 hours after the craft was spotted in the surf just yards off the coast.

Shin said 10 of the bodies were together, and the eleventh a short distance away. He speculated that the eleventh intruder killed his companions then shot himself in a mass suicide. A handgun was found on his body.

Associated Press Television reported that 10 bodies were lying in a row, each shot in the face.

Police captured the North Korean in a village about two miles inland. He was carrying a loaded pistol, but offered no resistance.

SBS-TV, a private South Korean network, said the captured intruder told police the submarine developed engine trouble shortly after leaving its home port of Wonsan on the North's east coast Monday. It drifted across the border, the intruder, identified as Li Gwang Sup, 31, reportedly said.

Gen. Chung said soldiers searching the submarine found a piece of paper that read: "We accomplish (the) mission without fail." They also found a Czech-made machine gun, a North Korean-made automatic rifle, 175 rounds of ammunition and 100 hand grenades.

The 60-foot submarine, made mostly of plastic to evade radar detection, weighs about 70 tons, the Defense Ministry said.

It was the first reported North Korean infiltration since October, when a Communist agent was shot to death and another captured in a gunfight near Puyo in central South Korea. Three South Korean policemen also were killed.

The area where the submarine was found today, 60 miles south of the border, is near the spot where 1,000 North Korean troops landed at the start of the 1950-53 Korean War.

It also is near where more than 100 armed North Korean guerrillas infiltrated in 1968. In a weeklong manhunt, five intruders were captured, two turned themselves in and the remainder were killed. Some 70 South Korean soldiers and civilians also were killed.

The Koreans never signed a peace treaty after the Korean War ended, and their border remains the most heavily guarded in the world. Nearly 2 million troops are deployed on both sides.

"This is a clear violation of the armistice," said Lt. Gen. Kim Dong-sin, who directed the search.

Helicopters flew overhead earlier today, directing soldiers searching the area. Out at sea, about a dozen navy ships guarded against a possible North Korean attempt to assist the fleeing intruders.

Defense Ministry officials said air force jets were standing by. All roads leading to the mountains were cut off, and citizens were ordered to report all strangers. Area residents were placed under a curfew.

If you are living in an apartment or duplex, this may be the first opportunity you've had to experience the terrific benefits of having natural gas in your home. You will find that for heating your home during cold weather, for hot water, or for cooking, nothing beats natural gas for convenience, economy, and efficiency.

With cooler temperatures just around the corner, here are a few reminders from your friends at Energas Company on the safe and responsible use of natural gas where you live.

Your furnace needs an annual check-up.

Your natural gas furnace has been sitting quietly all summer, waiting for the time it's really needed. And like anything that's been idle a while, your furnace needs a check-up before it starts back to work. You may want to check with your landlord or apartment manager about arranging for an annual inspection by a qualified professional heating contractor. Once it's been inspected, your furnace should require very little attention the rest of the winter.

A closet isn't always a closet.

Your water heater or furnace is probably in a closet all by itself. And that's the way it should stay. As tempting as it may be, don't use the space around a water heater or furnace for storage. Even if these major appliances sit in the open, the space around them should be kept clear to insure adequate air circulation.

If you smell gas.

We hope that you will never have to deal with a gas leak. If you do smell gas, day or night, exit the building then call your local Energas office immediately. Do not flip light switches or use any other electrical equipment. Do not light a match or a candle. Do not try to find the leak yourself.

Natural gas is the best energy you can have in West Texas for any home heating job. Just set your thermostat, and have a great winter!

We're proud to be your gas company

Rick Cunningham is new preacher at 14th and Main Church of Christ

By KELLIE JONES
Features Editor

The congregation at 14th and Main Church of Christ has welcomed a new minister, Rick Cunningham. Cunningham is replacing Royce Clay who accepted a minister position at the Ackerly Church of Christ.

Cunningham, 45, is a U.S. Army Vietnam Veteran and moved to Big Spring from Clyde where he had been minister for seven years and seven months. He has also preached in Snyder, two years; Sterling City, six and half years and his first job was in Clinton, Mo. for two years.

After he was discharged from the Army, he attended the Sunset School of Preaching (now known as the Sunset International Bible Institute) in Lubbock then earned his bachelor's degree from Abilene Christian University. He and his wife, Donna, have two sons and a daughter. Christa is attending ACU and Matt also lives in Abilene while David attends Howard College.

Cunningham is originally from the Fort Worth area and says he is familiar with West Texas because he has preached in the area for many years. He has also been a guest speaker in Big Spring churches on occasion. "My older kids have joked that I'll always be in the 915 area code," Cunningham said.

His first Sunday to preach was Sept. 1 and is still getting his feet wet. "As far as changes, I'm new and we're still talking about them. I want to really emphasize revival, instruction and following God's word."

"I want to recreate the first century church. I think we can do that and the congregation can make that their goal to model after the first church in Jerusalem."

"Church of Christ is non-denominational. We speak when the Bible says to speak and we are silent when the Bible says to be silent."

Cunningham explained there are no headquarters or overseers of the church and their book is the Holy Bible. There isn't an outside body that chooses who the minister of the church is.

"My job is to preach and teach God's word and to help everyone understand God's word. The elders make the decisions in the church. The deacons are servants of the church and they are called upon to provide whatever the church needs. It's not just a one-man job."

Why did he decide to become a preacher? "When I came back from the service, veterans got a bad rap and many had lost their way in the world. I wanted to do something different and positive. I've striven for that. I needed to do something good because Vietnam was not a good experience."

He added his family is glad to be in Big Spring and likes the friendliness of West Texas.

4-H Food and Nutrition project about to begin

While proving "you are what you eat" may be difficult, 4-H members in the food and nutrition project can certainly gain a better understanding of nutritious foods that can contribute to healthful living.

Dana Tarter
Extension Agent

The food and nutrition project is one of the more popular 4-H projects and youngsters can develop lifelong skills while participating in fun and educational activities.

The objectives of the 4-H Foods and Nutrition project are to:

- learn the importance of including foods from each of the basic food groups in the daily diet
- understand the principles of nutrition as they relate to health, physical fitness and appearance
- learn about the wide variety of foods which may be included in the diet
- understand the scientific principles of nutrition
- acquire and demonstrate skills in planning, purchasing, preparing and serving tasty, attractive and nutritious meals and snacks

With the fast-paced lifestyle we lead today, youngsters learning about good nutrition, menu planning and meal preparation can be a great asset to busy families.

Two Food and Nutrition workshops have been planned to kick off the 1997 4-H Foods and Nutrition program:

- A Food and Fun workshop will be at the St. Paul Lutheran Church Saturday beginning at 9:30 a.m. The cost is $7 and please preregister by calling the Howard County Extension Office at 264-2236.
- Kids in the Kitchen will be at the Midland County

Extension Office Oct. 19 beginning at 9:30 a.m. The cost is $5 and preregistration is required by Oct. 11. Forms are available at the Howard County Extension Office on the first floor of the Howard County Courthouse.

4-H is the youth development program of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Programs are open to all youth ages third grade of nine years old to 19 years of age.

The Howard County 4-H Club meets on the third Thursday of each month.

If you would like to find out more about the Howard County 4-H program, please contact the extension office.

Parents can work to help Mother Earth

Scripps Howard News Service

Working couples are caught in a double bind between the need to preserve the environment and the need to save time.

Modern conveniences certainly do save time. Disposable diapers free working parents from the messy and time-consuming chore of washing cloth diapers. Yet there is no doubt that they pollute the environment and are responsible for the destruction of trees.

It's a hard choice to have to make, and each of us has to make it for himself or herself. You can't rely on manufacturers, merchandisers, government or other people to go to bat for you. Expecting someone else to take care of your environment is abdicating your personal power. What are you going to tell your children when they grow up? "Sorry you have to wade knee deep in garbage, but I was too tired trying to make a living to fight big government, big business and little minds."

It does take time to protect your personal assets and national resources. That's the price you pay for freedom. But time, well directed, can save you energy and money as well as helping the environment. And you can make a difference.

Environmentalist Lynne Frazer, communications manager of the Conservancy, a 32-year-old, not-for-profit environmental organization, suggests the following actions:

- Reuse everything until it falls apart: Of course, this suggestion won't work for baby diapers, but it will certainly cut down on the use of paper napkins, facial tissues, paper towels and plates. If you have just used a paper plate to eat a piece of bread, wipe it off and use it later to feed the kids an after-school snack. That facial tissue you just used to wipe off a lip stick mistake can be used later to clean off your mascara brush.

COUPLES

• Don't use two products when one will do: When you are preparing the dishes for the washer, don't use liquid dish detergent to wash them first. Use plain water and a washable dish cloth to rinse them off. This saves soap, which saves you money, while helping the environment. The more money you save the less you may have to work.

• Don't use the dishwasher, washing machine or dryer for half loads: Rinse and store daily dishes in the dishwasher and wait to turn it on until it is so full you can't get anything else in it. The same is true of the washer and dryer. When you do use these conveniences, conserve on soap. It isn't necessary to see a lot of foam. Cut the manufacturers' recommendations in half. Keep in mind that they want you to use a lot of the product, so you'll have to buy more of it.

• Buy only what you know you can use up before it spoils: When you are on a busy schedule, it is easy to forget you have hamburger meat that is about to expire. Throwing food away is like throwing money down the toilet. And it presents one more piece of styrofoam that ends up in a garbage dump.

• Stop purchasing products packaged in styrofoam: When we all do this the manufacturers will get the picture and discover something better for the environment.

• Be cheap: Make it a practice not to buy things you don't absolutely need.

Please see COUPLES, page 8A

You'll pardon me if I don't shake your hand: Many of us aren't washing

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Millions of Americans routinely ignore one of Mom's most important pieces of advice: Wash your hands after you go to the bathroom.

This unsettling item of news was gathered in the only way possible — by actually watching what people do (or don't do) in public restrooms.

The researchers — if that's what they should be called — hid in stalls or pretended to comb their hair while observing 6,333 men and women do their business in five cities last month.

"Hand washing in this country has become all but a lost art," said Dr. Michael T. Osterholm, the Minnesota state epidemiologist.

Osterholm heads the public health committee of the American Society for Microbiology, which sponsored the survey with Bayer Corp., the aspirin maker.

The figures were gathered by Wirthlin Worldwide, a survey firm, and released at the society's annual infectious-disease conference.

Among the results:
• The country's dirtiest hands may be in New York City. Just 60 percent of those using restrooms in Penn Station washed up afterward.

• Chicago hands, relatively speaking, are reasonably clean. The watchers saw 78 percent take the time to wash after using the bathroom at the Navy Pier.

• Seventy-one percent washed up at a casino in New Orleans, 69 percent at Golden Gate Park in San Francisco and 64 percent at a Braves game in Atlanta.

• Women are cleaner than men. The survey found 74 percent wash after using the toilet, compared with 61 percent of men. Only in New York and New Orleans did men use soap and water slightly more often than women.

• The most slovenly men observed were at the Braves game. Just 46 percent of the guys stopped to wash, compared with 89 percent of female ball fans.

Dirty hands are an extremely common means of spreading diseases, ranging from colds to illnesses that cause diarrhea and other intestinal problems. In restaurants, one food handler with dirty hands can make dozens of patrons sick.

People probably know better. Wirthlin also did a telephone survey last month of what people had to say about their hand-washing habits. Of 1,004 adults, 94 percent claimed they always wash up after using public restrooms.

For some reason, college graduates were slightly less likely than were less educated people to say they wash up.

Actually, Mother's advice may be part of the problem.

"Moms often today are not telling their kids to wash their hands," said Dr. Gail Cassell of the University of Alabama. "Schools aren't telling children about it. We need to be reminded this is important."

IN THE BAG

Scripps Howard News Service

Parents who aren't at home to supply nutritious after-school snacks to ravenous students should be sure the cupboards are bare when it comes to junk food. Stock the kitchen with nothing but good stuff you want kids to eat after school.

Some suggestions: bagels and various low-fat spreads, flour tortillas for spreading with jam and peanut butter (older kids can roll these up and microwave briefly), apples (with low-fat caramel dip), plums, grapes, stuffed celery sticks and cherry tomatoes.

When autumn apples are in, make a big batch of chunky applesauce to keep in the fridge for snacking. Offer graham crackers to go with it, or vanilla wafers sandwiched together with a skiff of peanut butter and a thick banana slice. This is Mother Nature's sandwich-cookie filling, more nutritious than the white stuff of Oreos (basically sugar and shortening).

Two tasty shrimp dishes quickly made in microwave

Scripps Howard News Service

It's easier to shell raw shrimp before zapping, as in Garlic-Buttered Shrimp on Pasta, or to zap them in liquid, as in the Shrimp in Beer recipe. Then the shells pull right off.

Notice that Garlic-Buttered Shrimp need an hour or more of marinating before zapping. Toward the end of that hour, cook the pasta on the stove top, timing it so the pasta is ready to drain while the shrimp are in the microwave. The shrimp cook so quickly you'll want to have the table set and the salad made before you put them in the microwave.

GARLIC-BUTTERED SHRIMP ON PASTA

- 1 pound unpeeled large fresh shrimp
- 1/4 cup butter or margarine
- 1/4 cup olive oil
- 2 T. minced fresh parsley
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1/2 green onion, minced
- 1 large clove garlic, minced
- Salt and pepper to taste
- 4 ounces linguine

Peel and devein shrimp, leaving tails intact if you prefer. Set aside.

Place butter in large shallow baking dish. Microwave, uncovered, 30 seconds, or until melted.

Stir in olive oil, parsley, lemon juice, onion, garlic and salt and pepper. Arrange shrimp in one layer in dish, tails toward the center. Cover with heavy-duty plastic wrap, and marinate in refrigerator at least one hour.

Remove from refrigerator and microwave, covered, on high for 2 minutes. Rearrange shrimp and continue to zap until shrimp are pink and firm, checking at 30-second intervals.

Cook linguine according to package directions.

Drain, place on platter and top with shrimp mixture. Serve immediately. Serves three.

This dish can be a lot of fun. Forget a tablecloth and spread some butcher paper or newspapers on the table for easy cleanup.

SHRIMP IN BEER

- 1/2 cup room-temperature beer
- 1/4 tsp. salt
- 1 large garlic clove, crushed
- 1 pound fresh or frozen (thawed) raw large shrimp in shells
- 1/2 cup margarine or butter
- Juice of 1/2 lemon

Mix beer, salt and garlic in large, round, shallow microwave-safe dish. Arrange shrimp, with tails to center, spoke-fashion in dish. Cover tightly, place on turntable and microwave on high two minutes. Check to see if shrimp are pink and firm. Continue checking at 30 second intervals, until shrimp are pink. Remove and let stand while preparing butter.

Cut margarine or butter into four pieces, place in two-cup glass measure, cover with paper towel and zap on high one minute, or until melted. Stir in lemon juice. Serve as dip with shrimp. Serves four.

• Every little bit helps: If you must use disposable diapers, flush the contents before tossing them. Sure it's unpleasant, but these contents leach into the environment and pollute your water supply. Think about that the next time you drink a glass of water, or give one to your child.

• There is power in numbers: If the 32 million married working couples in American were to use just one less disposable baby diaper today, there would Juanita Valdez of the Big Spring Lady Steers returns a serve during Tuesday night's match against Lubbock powerhouse Coronado.

Lady Steers can't stop Coronado super soph

By CLIFF NEWELL
Sports Editor

You have to see Lubbock Coronado's Lily Kahumoku to believe her.

The tall (6-3), gifted sophomore was definitely the difference as Coronado defeated the Big Spring Lady Steers volleyball team 15-5, 15-12 on Tuesday night in Steer Gym.

"If you want to see how it's done, you ought to come see her," said Lady Steer head coach Traci Pierce. "She's a great player with a great attitude, and she's only 15."

Not to mention a truly sonic spiker. But Pierce thought her team played well against a Coronado club that ranks with the state's best.

"I thought we rose to the occasion. We weren't afraid," she said. "We knew how tough they would be, but we didn't back down. We played with them."

"We knew what to expect. We were ready for her (Kahumoku). She outshines everyone."

The Lady Steers surprised the Mustangs by jumping to a 5-0 lead in the first game. Juanita Valdez served five straight points, and Tosha Wilbert sparked the rally with two kill shots and a dink.

But the bottom fell out quickly as Coronado scored the next 15 points. Kahumoku began to get more and more kill shots as the game proceeded, and a couple timeouts called by Big Spring couldn't slow down Coronado's momentum.

Big Spring bounced back to play extremely well in the second game. The Lady Steers were able to slow down Kahumoku a bit as Wilbert scored several blocks. A five-point serving run by Wilbert briefly put Big Spring in command, and the game was knotted at 12-12 when Kahumoku recorded a terrific block.

That play seemed to turn the momentum in Coronado's favor. The Mustangs took the match by scoring the next three points.

NFL still Cashion's passion after 25 years

By CLIFF NEWELL
Sports Editor

After 25 years in the NFL, referee Red Cashion still likes a good football game.

The veteran official, who was the speaker for the Big Spring United Way Kickoff Luncheon on Tuesday, can't think of anything he doesn't like about his job.

"There is no tough part. It's all fun," Cashion said at a pre-luncheon reception at First United Methodist Church. "I enjoy the travel. It's exciting just to walk out on the field. You don't have to worry about tickets."

"There is a lot of pressure. But that goes with the game."

Cashion expects the pro game to be at its peak this season. "I think it's going to be a very exciting year," he said. "The parity from the draft is making it very interesting. The last three weeks will probably determine all the winners."

Cashion's main job is watching the backs, and he has certainly seen his share of great ones.

"The great quarterbacks have included Marino, Montana, Aikman, and you certainly have to include Bob Griese," he said. "As for the running backs, there's been O.J. and Walter Payton as far as being outstanding and fun to watch."

"Emmitt Smith is up there with them. That guy with Detroit, Barry Sanders, every time he gets the ball you suck your breath in."

Cashion officiated in last year's Super Bowl, and he and the other officials deserved to be there as much as the two teams. NFL referees are graded on a point system throughout the season, and only the best make it to the big numeral.

"I always say there are three teams on the field," Cashion said. "No one pays attention to one of the teams, but I think it's as big a part of the game as the other two teams. It's just as important that they do their jobs."

Cashion has worked the Super Bowl XX, Super Bowl XXX and was an alternate for the 25th Super Bowl. (He always seems to make it to the big anniversary games). He has also officiated in 15 to 18 playoff games ("I've lost count."). As far as excitement goes, Cashion said, "Those have been the highlight of my career."

But Cashion adds, "I'm not waiting around for Super Bowl XXXX."

That's because the venerable referee is hanging up his striped shirt, whistle and flag at the end of this season. He is still at the top of his form, as indicated by his selection to work the last Super Bowl. But after a quarter century, he thinks now is the time to leave.

"This is my last year," he said. "It's a combination of age and everything else. I hate to quit. I'm having more fun than I ever had. There haven't been any physical constraints, but I don't want there to be any."

"I'd rather go out while I'm still doing what I want to do."

Veteran NFL official Red Cashion makes a point during his appearance in Big Spring on Tuesday.

Mariners putting heat on Rangers

SEATTLE (AP) — Here come the Seattle Mariners charging down to the wire in the AL West again.

They overcame a 12-game deficit in the final six weeks to catch the California Angels last year. And they're trying to come from nine games back to overhaul the Texas Rangers this season.

"Our starting pitching has sharpened up," Mariners manager Lou Piniella said after a 5-2 victory over Texas on Tuesday night cut the Rangers' lead to four.

That's sharp as in holding Texas to two runs on 10 hits in winning the first two games of a crucial four-game series in the Kingdom.

"They're a great ball club," Rangers' Kevin Elster said. "They are the champions. We're not and we know it right now."

The Mariners hope to tighten up the division race by sweeping the final two games of the series tonight and Thursday afternoon. If they did that, they'd be two back with 11 to go.

"We can't worry about the other team," Seattle's Edgar Martinez said.

Terry Mulholland (5-2) and relievers Norm Charlton, Mike Jackson and Bobby Ayala allowed the Rangers six hits after Jamie Moyer and Ayala combined to shut them out 6-0 Monday night.

STACY MARTIN

Big Spring's Martin wins Sul Ross honor

Stacy Martin, a junior from Big Spring, has been honored as a Top Lobo for Sul Ross State University for his performance in Sul Ross' 43-26 win over Panhandle State University last Saturday in Alpine.

Martin, a strong safety, had 11 tackles and one assist to go along with 2.5 sacks as he spent most of the game harassing Panhandle State quarterbacks. He also had three pass deflections and forced a fumble when he blindsided the PSU quarterback on a safety blitz.

Sul Ross hosts Mississippi College on Saturday at Jackson Field at 2 p.m.

Nomo throws unlikely no-no in Colorado homer haven

DENVER (AP) — Hideo Nomo fashioned a pitching gem in the most improbable of places.

The Los Angeles Dodgers right-hander threw a no-hitter Tuesday night in Coors Field, a pitcher's graveyard where the resident Colorado Rockies have averaged 8.3 runs and 12.6 hits per game.

Nomo, mixing fastballs and split-fingered fastballs, baffled the National League's top hitting team. He walked four and struck out eight, capping his performance by fanning Ellis Burks, the NL's player of the week, as the Dodgers posted a 9-0 victory.

Because of a slippery mound, Nomo (16-10) pitched from the stretch from the fourth inning on, even with the bases empty.

With San Diego losing, the Dodgers increased their NL West lead to 1 1/2 games with 11 to play. The loss dropped the Rockies 7 games off the pace and virtually ended their faint postseason hopes.

"Only in the ninth inning did I think I had a chance," Nomo, the sensation from Japan, said through an interpreter.

Asked if he thought a no-hitter would ever be thrown at Coors Field, Nomo replied: "I cannot say it was impossible. It was never concerned about it."

Others, however, found the feat unfathomable.

"That was huge," Dodgers manager Bill Russell said, "especially to do it in Colorado. With the hitters they have over there and for Nomo to throw a no-hitter against them and to strike out Ellis Burks is a tremendous effort."

Dodgers first baseman Eric Karros added: "He probably doesn't realize how unbelievable that accomplishment is. People in Japan probably don't know Coors Field, but I'm betting it won't be done again."

Rockies manager Don Baylor agreed. "In this ballpark, that was an incredible feat," he said.

Added Dodgers pitching coach Dave Wallace: "Colorado is a heck of a hitting ballclub, and Coors Field is just a hitter's paradise. To go through their lineup the way he did is just incredible."

HIDEO NOMO - his feat was nearly unbelievable

Nomo, seemingly unaffected by his accomplishment, insisted the win was more important than the no-hitter.

"You may not believe me, but I'm glad we picked up the win at this time rather than I accomplished a no-hitter," Nomo said. "We're battling for the division title, so this is a big win."

Nomo said he went without a windup in the later innings "because of the dirt on the mound. It was loose and I was afraid I would slip."

He walked three batters in the first four innings, including the leadoff men in the second and fourth, but walked just one the rest of the way. He had five strikeouts through five innings.

The Rockies hit the ball hard several times. Vinny Castilla sent Raul Mondesi to the base of the right-field wall on a long fly ball in the fourth, and Mondesi hauled in Steve Decker's slicing liner in the fifth. Nomo reached high to snag Burks' hot bouncer to end the sixth.

Andres Galarraga lined a pitch to right in the seventh — but directly at Mondesi. In the fourth, Galarraga hit a grounder into the hole between short and third which Greg Gagne stabbed and got a force play at second.

"He would throw his fastball and then a split-finger in the dirt, and we couldn't hold up," Baylor said. "The hardest ball we hit, he fielded it. The one ball that Gagne backhanded was about as close as we came."

Nomo, who struck out Dante Bichette three times, also contributed at the plate, slapping an RBI single in the eighth.

With fans back home in Japan watching live on television, Nomo had an easy ninth. Young and Quinton McCracken both grounded to second, and Burks struck out swinging.

Nomo then punched the air and a smile spread across his face as his teammates came out of the dugout to mob him. The fans in Coors Field gave him a standing ovation.

"His demeanor never changed," Russell said. "We finally got a smile out of him after the last out. He was always focused. He was serious on every pitch to every hitter."

Ironically, the last game Nomo started at Coors Field, on June 30, he was battered for nine runs.

Smoltz wins 22nd against Astros

ATLANTA (AP) — It turned into the kind of game one might expect from two playoff hopeful teams struggling in September.

"It's a funny game," Atlanta Braves manager Bobby Cox said. "Tonight I thought the game went our way."

It did indeed.

The Braves built a 4-1 lead on Ryan Klesko's three-run double in the fifth inning Tuesday night to help John Smoltz become the majors' first 22-game winner. But the 5-4 victory over Houston wasn't secured until Craig Biggio bounced into a double play with the bases loaded to end the game.

It was Atlanta's third straight victory, but only the fifth in 16 games, a stretch that has seen a 12-game lead over Montreal in the NL East dwindle to six. It trimmed the magic number for winning the division to seven.

Houston, now 0-8 on the road this month, lost their fourth in a row and seventh in nine games, falling 3 1/2 games behind St. Louis in the NL Central.

The scary ninth saw relief ace Mark Wohlers struggle to his 36th save. He struck out the first batter, then gave up three consecutive singles, the last a run-scoring hit by Brian Hunter.

Others playing well included Jessica Cobos, Dee Hill and Melissa Martinez. Pierce said the match was "a real team effort." Pierce felt the match was a good tuneup for Saturday's district opener at Fort Stockton.

other day they're not. They have a couple of big hitters in Granado and Valeriano.
The match starts at 3 p.m. Big Spring will take a 6-11 mark into the match.
In jayvee action, Big Spring rallied in the third game to take a 15-6, 14-16, 15-12 win over Coronado. The comeback was especially gratifying, since it came against such a strong team and the Lady Steers had blown their lead in the second game.

Astros

After walking John Cangelosi to load the bases, he got Biggio to ground sharply to third baseman Terry Pendleton, who went around the horn for the double play that ended the game.
"I know if the ball's in Terry's hands, he's going to make the right decision," Wohlers said. "I was thinking the game wasn't ending in the ninth. But we got the break we needed."
Smoltz (22-8) moved into the club's record book with seven strikeouts, lifting his NL-leading total to 262, a figure that ties the Braves' modern record set by Phil Niekro in 1977. Smoltz gave up three runs and eight hits in eight innings. He walked one and hit a batter. "The first three innings I didn't have anything going for me," Smoltz said. "Then I kicked it in and Klesko gave me a vitamin B shot." Klesko's key hit off Darryl Kile (12-9) came after Mark Lemke's single, a sacrifice by Smoltz, an RBI single by Marquis Grissom and consecutive walks to Pendleton and Chipper Jones.

Sean Berry provided the early offense for the Astros, getting a run-scoring single in the first inning and a two-run homer — his 17th — off Smoltz in the eighth to cut the lead to 4-3.
Andrew Jones drove in what proved to be the deciding run for the Braves in the eighth with a pinch-double, and Houston rallied again in the ninth before Wohlers finally got the last out.
"The way things have been going, I thought the effort was outstanding," Astros manager Terry Collins said of his team's comeback attempt. "There have been a lot of games in the last week as tough as this one. They're all crucial now."
Notes: Chipper Jones, who had a career-best 18-game hitting streak last month, extended his current streak to 10 games with a first-inning single. ... Houston's Jeff Bagwell, who doubled in the first, has reached base in 141 of 152 games. ... Atlanta's David Justice, who underwent surgery on his right shoulder on May 23, won't be activated this year. ... Berry increased his career-best RBI total to 94, hit grounded into an inning-ending double play with the bases loaded in the third. ... It was the Braves' first win this month over a team other than the Mets. Since beating Chicago 6-5 on Aug. 30, the Braves are 5-11, with four of the wins coming against New York.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY FOR THURSDAY, SEPT. 19:

Expect a mixed bag this year. You tend to worry much more than you need to. Be clear about your choices. If feeling confused, detach until you find an answer or the right path appears. An inner caring comes through when you begin to draw others. Though socially in demand, you will need time to yourself to relax and recharge your batteries. Professional life becomes demanding after January. If you are single, an important relationship appears on the horizon, probably around year's end. If attached, you grow as a couple. Make a point of planning time alone together. SAGITTARIUS can be aggravating.

Rangers

"We've hit guys like (David) Cone, (Kevin) Appier and (Juan) Guzman, and they're pretty good pitchers," Texas manager Johnny Oates said. "We have the type of ballclub that can score more than two runs in 18 innings."

Winning their sixth game in a row and handing Texas its sixth loss in seven games, the Mariners overcame a 2-0 deficit with a four-run sixth. Seattle, which trailed by nine games last Wednesday, has gained five games in the standings in six days.

By beating the Rangers for the eighth time in 11 games this season, the Mariners also moved past Chicago into second place in the AL wild-card race, three games behind Baltimore.

Texas, trying for its first postseason appearance, is now 1-4 in the Kingdom this year.

"This Seattle club is a club that you can't give them a crack," Oates said. "You leave the door open and they will come rushing in."

After Texas scored two runs on its first three hits in the top of the sixth, the Mariners rallied in the bottom half as Elster made an error at shortstop that led to two runs.

"I just screwed up, plain and simple," Elster said.

In Texas' 6-0 loss Monday night, third baseman Dean Palmer made a throwing error that led to Seattle's first two runs. So the AL's top fielding club continued its problems with three unearned runs in two games.

"We've had a couple of chances to make defensive plays that we haven't made," Oates said. "That's opened the door for them."

Martinez doubled with one out in the sixth and Elster dropped Jay Buhner's grounder. Ken Hill (15-10) walked Mark Whiten, loading the bases, and forced in a run when he hit Paul Sorrento in the left foot with a pitch.

Dave Hollins' two-run single to right made it 3-2 and Dan Wilson followed with a sacrifice fly. Joey Cora added an RBI double in the eighth off Jeff Russell.

Hollins, acquired Aug. 29 in a trade with Minnesota, had a two-run single to give Seattle a 5-0 lead Monday night.

"Dave Hollins has been our MVP for the last week or so," Seattle shortstop Alex Rodriguez said.

Mark McLemore's leadoff single in the top of the sixth was the Rangers' first hit. Darryl Hamilton tripled with two outs and scored on a single by Ivan Rodriguez. The Rangers had been shut out in 29 consecutive innings before Hamilton's hit.

After replacing Mulholland following a double by Palmer with one out in the seventh, Charlton loaded the bases with two walks, but got Hamilton to fly out to end the inning.

Ayala relieved with two on in the ninth and got two outs for his third save, striking out Lee Stevens and retiring Hamilton on a flyout.

Hill allowed four runs and five hits in seven innings. Notes: Seattle hadn't been this close to first since Aug. 10, when it trailed Texas by 3 games. ... Texas has 11 games remaining. ... The Mariners' winning streak is their longest since they won eight straight from April 11-18. ... Seattle's pitchers had 29 consecutive scoreless innings, two short of the team record set from July 7-13, 1991. ... Buhner struck out for the 150th time this season, the most in the majors. ... Elster's error was only his fourth in 71 games. ... In the first two games of the series, Texas is hitting only .164 (10-for-61).

Straightforward declaration helps teens say no to sex

DEAR READERS: Last Wednesday I devoted my column to the third in a series of letters from readers when I asked them to tell me how they successfully say no to sex. Today we'll hear from the teen-agers:

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 13-year-old girl, and I, too, am being pressured to have sex. The boy has been my best friend for as long as I can remember. I know I should wait, but it's hard to say no. I tell him, "Being a teen-ager is tough enough. I don't want to risk STDs or getting pregnant." Girls shouldn't have sex until they're ready to commit. It makes life too complicated. I'm signing my name, but please don't print it. — WANTS TO WAIT, PUYALLUP, WASH.

DEAR ABBY: I'm only 13, and I said no before the guy even asked me. I told him, "I'm too young and I'm not planning on having sex until I'm married." With AIDS out there, that's a good plan to me, and I encourage other teen-agers to wait. — 13-YEAR-OLD IN MILWAUKEE

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 16-year-old virgin. I have been asked several times if I would have sex. I asked each boy, "If I was to get pregnant, how would you deal with it?" Would you drop everything to support the baby?"

A lot of girls I know think they'll lose their guy if they say no. I say, if that's how it is, what do they think he'll do when he hears they're pregnant or have a disease? My position is: When I know my baby will be brought up in a loving home with the help of a good father, that's the day I'll take that leap — and not before. — CARRIE FROM KNOXVILLE, TENN.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a teen-ager girl getting ready to enter college, and I've had plenty of experience saying no. The most important thing to remember when you say no is to really mean it. Be completely serious, and if you have to, leave the location. You'd be surprised how many guys understand when you say no.

This is probably what your parents and teachers have already told you. It's all true; it really works. But only if you speak plainly. At the risk of sounding like a mother: If a guy doesn't stick around after you say no, he was probably only after sex in the first place. — SAYING NO IN HAMPTON, VA.

DEAR ABBY: My ex-boyfriend asked me for sex on many occasions, and every time I had the same answer: "No." How did I do it? By sticking up for myself and what I believe in; by knowing I didn't have to if I didn't want to; by realizing I was not prepared for such an intimate relationship; and by asking myself, "Do I really want this?"

Some advice for other teens like me: If you're doing it for him, because he supposedly wants to show his love for you, don't even think about it. Don't sacrifice yourself for his satisfaction. It's not worth it.

Now some advice for parents: Please, talk to your daughters about sex. Tell them they don't need to do it with a guy to prove their love. We need your assurance more than anything. You may use my name. — DAISY YOKLEY

DEAR ABBY: I'm a rare jewel among today's teen-age girls. I'm a 19-year-old virgin, and plan to remain one until I'm married.

When my boyfriend and I began dating, I told him up front my views on premarital sex. He didn't take me seriously at first and tested me, which led to a big fight. He now understands that I don't believe in sex before marriage and he respects me for it.

My advice: Be honest, open and straightforward about your views in the beginning, so there will be no misunderstanding. And if he can't accept it — drop him! — A PROUD VIRGIN

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday my boss showed me a picture of an elegant sofa in a current magazine, and said if I could guess the price of it within $200 he would give me the $200. (He had seen this sofa in a Beverly Hills store.)

When I guessed $2,800, he looked as though he'd been shot. He said the price of the sofa was $3,000, but he refused to give me the $200, saying my guess was just $1 low!

According to my calculation, $2,800 is within $200 of $3,000. Please answer in your column. If I am wrong, I will throw in the towel and be a good sport.

I have been my boss's faithful Girl Friday for four years. Please don't mention his name or mine. — LAKEWOOD, CALIF.

DEAR LAKEWOOD: I don't know how your boss figures, but I figure he owes you $200. (P.S. And he should throw in a $50 bonus for protecting his identity.)

DEAR ABBY: My sister-in-law and her husband celebrated their 49th wedding anniversary last August. Because of my sister-in-law's poor health, her daughter is planning a party to celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary next month, which is premature by nearly a whole year.

I am reluctant to accept the invitation because I don't think it's proper to celebrate an occasion that has not yet occurred.

I grew up under the old moral code and still believe in it. Right or wrong? — PUZZLED IN ELMHURST, ILL.

DEAR PUZZLED: Wrong! I think it's more "moral" to be kind and prematurely generous than to go by the book and risk being too late.

DEAR READERS: If you would like your letter considered for publication, please include your name, area code and telephone number.

Discouraged Leyland quits as Pirates skipper

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Jim Leyland, one of baseball's best managers but unhappy running one of its worst teams, spent 2 weeks trying to convince himself the Pittsburgh Pirates could win again soon.

He couldn't do it. So Leyland walked into owner Kevin McClatchy's office Tuesday and did what he long said he would never do: He quit, effective at the end of the season.

McClatchy agreed to release the two-time National League manager of the year from the final four years of his $4 million contract, and Leyland will be free to sign elsewhere.

The contenders already are lining up, too. The Florida Marlins, whose general manager Dave Dombrowski is a longtime Leyland friend, seem eager to talk to him as soon as possible. Others will likely follow.

"I believe in my heart it's time for the Pirates to have a new manager and it's time for Jim Leyland to move on," said Leyland, who is discouraged by ownership-ordered trades and salary cutting. "It wasn't a tough decision, but it was a sad decision."

Leyland has only one criteria for his new club: The chance to win. Interestingly, his decision came hours before the Pirates extended a six-game winning streak — their longest all season — by beating Cincinnati 5-3.

"If I have to sit out a year, I'll sit out a year to get the right situation," he said. "If it doesn't happen, I'll fire the lawn man and do it myself (next summer)."

Dombrowski can't talk to Leyland until the Marlins decide if manager John Boles, who replaced Rene Lachemann at midseason, will return in 1997.

"I don't know," Dombrowski said when asked if he would contact Leyland. "I'll have to wait and see what I read and what is said. ... I won't see John until Friday. I'm sure we'll visit and start talking."

Leyland on Aug. 29 said he would honor his Pirates contract. But it was evident he wasn't buying into the McClatchy-ordered trades — Denny Neagle was the first to go, and others will follow this winter — or payroll-slashing. The Pirates will cut their payroll from $21 million to $18 million next season.

"That was kind of a shock," Leyland said. "I expected us to sign some free agents. After he explained the situation, I didn't go along with it, but I understood it."

Leyland built the Pirates from 98-game losers as a rookie manager in 1986 to three-time NL East champions in 1990-92. But the heart of that club — Barry Bonds, Bobby Bonilla, Doug Drabek — was gutted in the initial round of ownership-ordered salary slashing, and the Pirates haven't been above .500 since.

Leyland remained one of baseball's best game managers, but it was clear four years of consistent losing were taking a toll. With an ever-changing roster, the manager who once spoke of the necessity of communicating with each player every day sometimes went long stretches without talking.

The players noticed the gradual changes in Leyland, too. "You hear things and see things. You sense that things are going to happen," left fielder Al Martin said. "I can't say this came out of the clear blue sky."

Leyland made up his mind to quit during the Pirates' 11-game West Coast road trip, but was tired Monday after a late-night flight and waited until Tuesday to tell McClatchy.

The Pirates' new owner wanted him to stay, but also didn't want a dissatisfied manager on his bench.

"Last year in Oakland, they had new ownership that was going in a different direction," McClatchy said. "Tony La Russa decided he didn't want to stay on, and they hired Art Howe and he's had a good year. And Tony's done well in St. Louis."

During the West Coast trip, pitching coach Ray Miller was told by management he was free to leave. And none of Leyland's five coaches — Gene Lamont, Rich Donnelly, Tommy Sandt, Milt May or Spin Williams — have been rehired.

Lamont, a former AL manager of the year with the White Sox, is a contender to replace Leyland. But McClatchy may prefer that general manager Cam Bonifay hire a younger, more vibrant manager under the challenge of managing a team that might not win for years.
