Man gets 40 years for sexually assaulting child

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

A 118th District Court jury sentenced a Big Spring man to 40 years in state prison Tuesday after finding him guilty of sexual assault of a child charges. Phillip Trammell, 49, was found guilty of sexually assaulting a minor female earlier this year, according to district attorney records. The penalty assessed to Trammell was just about at the midpoint of possible sentences. He could have received as little as two years or as much as life in prison. Parole was not an option in sentencing, District Attorney Hardy Wilkerson said. According to a spokesman at the district attorney's office, Trammell must serve at least half of his sentence before he is eligible for parole. Another district jury convenes today to consider the state's case against Jonathan Shane Allen of Big Spring, who is charged with robbery in connection with the Jan. 22 break-in at the home of Wanda Mize.

Authorities allege that Allen and two other individuals broke into Mize's home, accosted and threatened her, then robbed her house and stole her car. Danny Roberts and David Summers, Allen's alleged cohorts, were later caught in Mobile, Ala. with Mize's automobile and have since pleaded guilty to robbery charges. Allen was apprehended after allegedly trying to use Mize's credit cards in an Abilene shopping center. Allen was expected to plead guilty to robbery charges.

Sentencing date nears for Christopher's partner

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

The sentencing merry-go-round that kept Big Spring resident Charles "Chris" Christopher out of prison for more than 17 months may have spilled over to the sentencing phase of his convicted business partner, G. Wayne Reeder, who is scheduled to be sentenced June 25 for his part in defrauding two insurance companies. Reeder was convicted last November on five counts of interstate transfer of stolen goods and six counts of wire fraud. He faces up to five years in prison for each of the interstate transfer counts and 10 years on each of the wire fraud counts in the looting of Diamond Benefits Insurance Co. of Arizona and American Universal Insurance Co. In December, Reeder's partner, Christopher, was finally sentenced for his part in looting the two companies. Together the two looted more than $30 million from the two companies, making American the largest insurance company to fail in Rhode Island history. For his part, Christopher was convicted in July 1995 on 11 counts of wire fraud and 10 counts of interstate transfer of stolen goods and received 121 months in federal prison on the 11 counts of wire fraud and 120 months in federal prison on the 10 counts of interstate transfer of stolen goods. He was also ordered to pay $18 million to Diamond Benefits and $8.7 million to American Universal Insurance Co. He remains in jail on a $500,000 full-surety bond.

Weekend rains continue to fill lakes ...

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

Last weekend's heavy rains boosted area lake levels to the highest they've been in three years. Colorado River Municipal Water District (CRMWD) officials said Tuesday. The rains, which dumped more than four inches of water in parts of Howard County and more than six inches in parts of Borden and Scurry counties, also deposited much-needed water into the district's three main reservoirs. The best news for CRMWD officials came at Lake Thomas, located southwest of Snyder. As this morning, 23,440 acre-feet of water had been captured at the lake, bringing it up to an elevation of 2,218 feet (above mean sea level), a rise of more than four feet from last week. The influx of water brings the lake to 11.49 percent of capacity. The really good news,

CRMWD Assistant General Manager Chris Wingert said, was that water was still pouring in at the rate of 400 acre-feet an hour Tuesday. An acre-foot is the amount of water it takes to cover one acre of land to a depth of one foot — or about 326,000 gallons of water. Lake Thomas has captured more than 2 billion gallons of water since Friday. The water inflow, the most Lake Thomas has experienced since December 1994, has given the beleaguered lake — which has been at dangerously low levels for the past year — some much-needed breathing room. For the past 18 months, Lake Thomas has supplied water only to the town of Snyder and had fallen so low that water from Lake Ivie was back-flowed into the lake. If lake levels continue to rise, however, CRMWD may soon start pumping water west

... and leave smiles on farmers' faces

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

After the past few years of drought, area farmers are not about to start complaining about rain — even after last weekend's deluge forced a few of them to replant. Heavy rains Friday and Sunday peppered the area with much-needed moisture, but for some area producers, it was almost too much of a good thing. Farmers and ranchers reported rainfall totals ranging from 2-5 inches in various parts of the county. For a few area farmers, especially those with fields in northeastern Howard County, the precipitation proved to be too much of a good thing, as the heavy rains strangled newly planted cotton seedlings. Howard County farmers with washed-fields now must replant their cotton by June 20 to qualify for crop insurance, a spokesperson for the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation office said. For the most part, however, the weekend's precipitation brought nothing but glee to rain-starved farmers and ranchers. "The frogs are hollering and the grass is growing, so everything's great right now," said Horace Tubb, who farms and ranches south of Big Spring. Tubb, who planted his cotton crop around May 16, said his 5-inch tall plants easily withstood the four inches of rain received last weekend. Further south, near Garden City, the news also was good, according to Delmer Batla, who operates the St. Lawrence Gin. Glascock County farmers received between 1-3 inches of rain over the weekend, an amount Batla said was "just right" to sustain crops.

To the west, Martin County farmer Lanny Fryar also was in a celebratory mood following rains of around two inches over the weekend. "It was just right," Fryar said of the rainfall. "We're in good shape, probably the best shape we've ever been in, as far as rain is concerned." Coahoma-area farmers received up to four inches of rain over the weekend, which came close to washing out some crops. For the most part, however, agriculture producers in the area were pleased to get the precipitation. "It was wonderful," Coahoma farmer John Wayne Metcalf said. "I would have liked it to be a little less (rain) ... It washed some of the crop around, but overall, it was great." As much as he appreciated the rain,

Darden's duties made permanent

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

An interim position created for Chief Building Official Todd Darden in February, when City Engineer Ralph Truskowski left the city, was made permanent by City Manager Gary Fuqua at Tuesday's city council meeting. Darden, who had been serving as interim Community Development and Utilities Director, was made director of those departments and will also maintain his status as chief building official. Fuqua had said in February that he hoped to have a plan in place as to what to do about replacing Truskowski as city engineer. Tuesday, Fuqua announced the city will not fill that position and has delegated several of the duties Truskowski handled to Darden and other mid-management personnel who also received promotions. According to Fuqua, these changes will be in place for at least a year and then will be reevaluated. What the city has done in the absence of a city engineer is look at other cities comparable to Big Spring's size to see how they handle their engineering needs, and whether they contract those services out. Fuqua told the council that promoting Darden and delegating several duties to other positions will save the city more than $12,000 this year and approximately $28,000 in 1998. Truskowski's departure in February means three upper-level management positions within the city have been eliminated in the last two years. "The staff member being given promotions and additional duties will receive some training and be required to update their education where necessary," Fuqua said. In a move to help save revenue, Fuqua also announced that all open positions within the city are being frozen. Fuqua said he is doing this in order to ways to give raises to city employees.

City's EMS applies for grant for training

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

Big Spring's Emergency Medical Services (EMS) Department was granted approval Tuesday by the city council to apply for a $7,845 grant under the 1997 Texas Department of Health Local Projects Grant Program. "This grant is a straight, non-matching grant that we will use for training aids and certification for our EMS personnel," EMS Director Brian Jensen said. If the grant application is approved by the EMS department, $1,845 would be used for a manikin or Difficult Airway Management Trainer, an IV arm to help train personnel how to administer IVs and an arrhythmia trainer for Advanced Cardiac Life Support training; and $6,000 would be used to cover the cost of tuition and books for certification of five Emergency Medical Technicians or EMTs (basic), five EMTs-intermediate and 10 EMT-paramedics. The council also gave its approval for the EMS Department to join South Plains Emergency Medical Service (SPEMS). Annual membership will cost the department $3,250. "This will also be a saving factor for us as well," Jensen said. SPEMS Regional Coordinator Charla Mitchell, told the council that SPEMS serves 23 counties in the West Texas area, including Borden, Dawson, Lubbock, Mitchell and Scurry Counties. "We're a 20-year old volunteer organization with a 42-member executive board and have only two paid staff members," Mitchell said. "We provide medical direction and try to help rural providers keep up with their certification," Mitchell added. "We're not a policing agency, but we provide services rural agencies may not have or have budgeted funds for." Big Spring Fire Chief Frank Anderson said one reason for the move is quality control. "We're looking at this agency as an outside agency to help us with out quality control, one that can tell us yes you're doing this right or no you're not doing this right," Anderson said.

Increase in predatory wildlife prompts court action

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

An unfortunate byproduct of recent rains has caused Howard County commissioners to renew their contract with a Monahans animal trapper.

An unusually wet spring has been a boon for area agriculture producers, the local water district and almost everyone else who enjoys greenery. But there has been a down side to the equation — an increase in predatory wildlife.

And that increase led commissioners to approve a temporary contract with Monahans trapper Tommy King during their regular meeting Monday morning.

Precinct 4 Commissioner Sonny Choate said he has received several calls from constituents lately complaining about an influx of bobcats to this area, and fears more predators may be on the way.

Choate said the equation is simple: More rain brings more vegetation, which brings more rabbits, which means more food for predators.

"You wouldn't believe the number of rabbits we've seen," Choate said. "We already have a problem with bobcats, and at night, it sounds like the coyotes are warning up, too."

"I've lived out (east of Big Spring) for 17 years, and this is the first time we've had problems with bobcats," Choate added. "From the amount of rabbits we're getting ... it's like water running downhill — we're going to get coyotes."

Some of Choate's constituents have already lost pets and small livestock to the predators, and he said they are hopping mad about the situation.

"You ought to listen to someone who's just lost a $200 peacock," he said. "They get real mad."

To head off the problem before it reaches a critical juncture, commissioners unanimously voted to extend a 3 1/2-month contract worth $3,500 to King, who has done trapping work for the county in the past. King is expected to begin work here around June 15.

Writings, videotapes used to trace McVeigh's rage over Waco

DENVER (AP) — Using images of fire and the deaths of children, Timothy McVeigh's lawyers tried to show jurors how the videotapes he watched and the magazines he read fed his rage against the government over the deadly 1993 Waco siege.

Testimony in the penalty phase of the Oklahoma City bombing trial was expected to end today without the defendant taking the stand.

"Mr. McVeigh will not testify," defense attorney Stephen Jones said as he left the courthouse Tuesday.

The defense played part of a tape McVeigh had created by splicing together scenes from two videos about the government's raid on the Branch Davidian compound near Waco, Texas.

The excerpt was a musical tribute to the children who died there, with a man singing a song called "Seventeen Little Children" over scenes of the burning compound.

Using the Waco material puts the defense in the unusual position of trying to prove the motive the prosecution offered for the crime. Prosecutors contended McVeigh bombed the federal building to avenge the deadly fire.

"We're not using Waco as an excuse," defense attorney Richard Burr said. "Waco is an event that happened that many people felt impassioned about. One of them was Tim McVeigh."

Many people who travel the gun-show circuit, like McVeigh, believe Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agents planned their attack on the Branch Davidians and "recklessly endangered the lives of women and children," Soldier of Fortune magazine writer James Pate testified.

The jury, which must decide whether to sentence McVeigh to death by injection or life behind bars, also watched "Day 51: The True Story of Waco," a videotape that McVeigh sold at gun shows. It portrays federal agents as the aggressors who fired first, triggering a gun battle that led to the siege.

McVeigh watched the tape intently. Most of the jurors watched closely at first, but began shifting as it went on for an hour.

About 80 people died in the fire that destroyed the Branch Davidian compound near Waco on April 19, 1993, exactly two years before the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building blast killed 168 people.

In a Soldier of Fortune article the first week of April 1995, Pate wrote that ATF agents planned the attack on the Branch Davidians. He said the article was based on confidential documents obtained from military sources.

Pate acknowledged under cross-examination that Soldier of Fortune did not advocate violence to answer concerns about government abuses. He also noted some in the militia movement have overstated government wrongdoing at Waco.

As Pate faced the barrage of questions from prosecutor Patrick Ryan, McVeigh leaned back in his chair and watched with a slight half-grin.

That smile remained frozen on his face even as Ryan pointed out that courts have determined the Davidians fired the first shots of the raid, a conclusion Pate disputed.

The jurors, who will decide whether McVeigh will be executed or sentenced to life in prison, appeared bored by much of the testimony, often squirming in their chairs and looking at the clock.

McVeigh's sister, Jennifer, won't be called to testify, but sat in the courtroom audience to show her support.

"I love him," she said. "I don't want him to die."

Parents to serve minimum 2 1/2 years for faith healing death of daughter

HOLLIDAYSBURG, Pa. (AP) — Despite a plea for leniency, the parents of a girl who died from diabetes while being treated with prayer were sentenced to at least 2 1/2 years in prison.

A lawyer for Dennis and Lorrie Nixon, whose daughter was their second child to die during faith healing, had asked that they be given probation to avoid tearing apart a family that will soon have an 11th child.

But the judge refused during sentencing Tuesday.

"The irony of using their family as justification for probation is not lost on this court," Blair County Judge Norman Callan said in imposing a sentence of 2 1/2 to five years.

"If they wanted to keep their family intact, there are two more people in that family who should be alive today," he said.

The Nixons were released on bail pending an appeal, which their lawyer said could take two years. Meanwhile, Mrs. Nixon, 44, is due to give birth next month.

The Nixons were convicted of involuntary manslaughter and child endangerment in April for the death of 16-year-old daughter, Shannon, who succumbed to treatable complications from diabetes last June.

Another child, 8-year-old Clayton, died of an untreated ear infection in 1991. The Nixons pleaded no contest and were given probation that time.

The couple and their eight surviving children, all neatly dressed, wept quietly at times during sentencing.

According to prosecutors, Dennis Nixon's father, Charles Nixon, pastor of the Faith Tabernacle Congregation in Altoona, prayed over Shannon and anointed her with oil when she fell sick.

Defense lawyer Steven Passarello had argued the couple did not intend for the girl to die but were only following their religious beliefs.

But Judge Callan said the couple showed "no contrition, no remorse, no understanding that they have violated the law," following the death of Clayton.

To protect the Nixons' remaining children, Callan ordered social workers to visit the Nixons' home monthly.

Report says Medicare made $23 billion in improper payments

NEW YORK (AP) — A government audit found that the federal Medicare program made an estimated $23 billion in improper payments to health care providers last year, The Wall Street Journal reported today.

The figure, calculated by the inspector general's office of the Department of Health and Human Services, suggests that fraud, abuse, and bookkeeping lapses eat up more of the program's budget than previously thought, the newspaper said.

The improper payments made to hospitals, nursing homes, doctors and laboratories represent about 12 percent of Medicare's $194 billion budget. In the past, policy analysts have estimated abuse represents about 3 percent to 10 percent of total health spending.

People familiar with the audit said investigators found problems with 30 percent of 5,000 claims from fiscal 1996.

The Department declined to comment on the audit.

The audit found billing problems common throughout, especially in home-health services and nursing homes.

Medicare relies on private insurance companies to handle much of its claims-processing. Critics say these companies focus on making sure claims are submitted in a standard format, rather than checking whether Medicare is paying for appropriate care.

The audit "verifies what a lot of people at the grass roots have been saying," Charles Grassley, chairman of the Senate Special Committee on Aging, said.

Teens convicted of capital murder

HOUSTON — A 16-year-old girl and her 18-year-old boyfriend have been convicted of capital murder for the robbery and murder of a man the girl lured into her bedroom with promises of sex.

Shonda Swarthout and Charles Mayle were sentenced Tuesday to life in prison and must serve 40 years before becoming eligible for parole. Her brother, James Swarthout, 18, pleaded guilty to capital murder earlier and is serving the same sentence.

The Swarthouts and Mayle needed rent money for the apartment they shared last summer, so they decided to lure Freddy Perla, 21, into Swarthout's bedroom by promising him sex, they said.

Kerrie Cross, a friend of the teens, testified that Swarthout was persistent and Perla finally agreed to go to her apartment last June. Perla followed Swarthout into the master bedroom where the two boys were hiding in the closet with a tire tool, Cross said.

When Perla took off his clothes, the two boys attacked him and beat him in the head with the tool, Cross said, adding that she heard Perla pleading for his life.

'Net plea for money draws authorities' interest

AUSTIN — Be careful about responding to cyberspace pleas for cash to help tornado victims in Jarrell unless you're sure the request is legitimate, the Better Business Bureau suggests.

The agency's Austin office noted that someone posted a solicitation to newsgroups all over the Internet asking "for just one dollar — cash or money order" to be sent to him to aid victims of the May 27 tornado that killed 27.

The plea urged anyone sending a check to make it out to cash.

"Obviously the web is a powerful tool now, and he's not just reaching people in Central Texas, but around the nation and around the world," BBB spokeswoman Carrie Hurt said Tuesday.

Court reverses Bunton in Edwards Aquifer case

SAN ANTONIO — A federal appeals court has reversed a decision by U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton III that had kept the state of Texas from helping defend San Antonio and other major Edwards Aquifer pumpers in a lawsuit brought by the Sierra Club.

Texas Attorney Gen. Dan Morales had petitioned Bunton last August to allow the state to join San Antonio and four agencies that regulate water and wildlife rights.

Bunton granted the state's motion to intervene in its capacity as an aquifer pumper through a prison in Hondo, but denied it permission to intervene on behalf of the four agencies.

But the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans disagreed on Tuesday, saying Texas' interests in the matter are "several and important."

The Sierra Club filed its lawsuit a year ago, alleging that aquifer pumping by San Antonio was reducing aquifer springflows that sustain five federally protected species. The club asked for Bunton to order outbacks in water usage.

Big schools give VIPs special consideration

DALLAS — Some applicants trying to get into the state's biggest universities are getting second looks from the institutions if they have VIP connections, even if they fall short of academic requirements, The Dallas Morning News reported.

Officials at Texas A&M University, the University of Texas and Texas Tech University said they often give applicants a second look if a "very important person" requests it.

In one case, Texas A&M gave preference in 1996 to two students who did not meet admissions standards but had ties to state House Speaker Pete Laney and former A&M regent Mary Nan West, the newspaper reported, citing documents and interviews with officials.

Laney, D-Hale Center, wrote a January 1996 letter to A&M in support of a "neighbor and close friend" for the engineering school. The student had been on a waiting list because he did not meet all qualifications for regular admission, but was accepted after Laney's intervention.

Laney spokeswoman Janet Warren said the student, who was not identified, was a "young man the speaker has known all of his life" and the son of a family friend.

Dying man evicted

DALLAS — A man dying of pulmonary disease thought he would spend his last days in the apartment he's been living in for a decade, but his landlord has evicted him, saying he poses a risk because he smokes while using oxygen tanks.

John D. Womack, 67, is suffering from end-stage chronic obstructive pulmonary disease, causing him to be on oxygen and bedridden all day.

In February, he was told he had six months to live.

Taste secret
New flavor study may help develop salt substitutes

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Every good chef knows that salt makes things taste better — but until now, science hasn't shaken out the reason why.

A new study shows that salt suppresses bitter tastes, bringing sweet and sour flavors to the fore.

That may not sound like a big revelation. But it could help food designers concoct more effective salt substitutes for people with high blood pressure.

It was a simple experiment by Paul Breslin of the Monell Chemical Senses Center in Philadelphia that cracked the salt nut. Breslin offered people tastes of sugar, the salt relative sodium acetate and urea, a bitter substance, in every possible combination.

He used sodium acetate instead of sodium chloride because it enhances flavor like table salt without delivering its powerful salty taste.

With each flavor combination, the researchers asked their subjects to rate how much sweetness, saltiness or bitterness they tasted.

It turned out that when all three were served together, the result was sweet compared with the urea-sugar combination.

"Everything suppresses everything else, but the sodium is special for the bitter," Breslin said.

In the real culinary world, the finding suggests that in baking, for example, salt masks the compounds that give unsalted bread the flavor of cardboard.

Foster parents have raised 60 kids

By JOHN HENRICHS
Houston Chronicle

HOUSTON — Over the past 30 years, Mable and Ivory Brumley have taken dozens of foster children into their home. Last month, they were honored by Children's Protective Services as the city's oldest foster parents. She is 84 and he is 93.

Mrs. Brumley has 60 kids, living from Alaska to Texas.

She has been raising foster children with the help of her husband and her daughter for decades and says she is not about to quit.

"It's just my calling," Mrs. Brumley said. "I like to teach them really."

Mrs. Brumley and her husband were honored last month by Children's Protective Services as Houston's oldest foster parents.

Ivory has retired from the day-to-day care of the children, but still likes to help.

"He spends a lot of time spoiling the children," she said.

Mable Brumley, retired from a 35-year elementary-school teaching career, says the most important thing foster parents can give their children is a good education. She said she tries to encourage her foster children to do well in school and continues their education at home.

The children spend much of their time after school reading, working on math skills and practicing extracurricular activities like music.

Mrs. Brumley said many of her children can read before they start school. She keeps an extensive collection of reading books and old textbooks for practice at home.

"Any child can learn something; it's just a matter of patience," she said. "You have to find out what will work for the individual child."

Treating each child as an individual is difficult in a foster setting, but important, said Carol Gooden, a recruiter for CPS.

"Mrs. Brumley focuses on strengthening individual needs, especially educational needs," Ms. Gooden said.

Mrs. Brumley usually has three foster children at a time, many only a few months or a year old. Although infants are often adopted quickly, many of the older children stay for five years or more.

Former foster children often return for Thanksgiving, and many, from as far away as Alaska, keep in touch with the Brumleys.

"I try to treat them all like part of the family," Mrs. Brumley said. "Once they're here, they stay. It's hard to jump around a lot (from foster family to foster family). If you're moved around so often, it's hard to feel wanted."

"Sometimes, the hardest part of foster-parenting," she added, "is letting them go."

Because the children are often very young, foster parents make a huge impact on their life. The secret, Mrs. Brumley said, is to be stern but positive when dealing with the child.

"We never had a (behavior) problem with a child," Mrs. Brumley said. "All they usually need is some attention."

The formula of firm but loving attention works, said Allison Booker, a CPS case worker.

"When you bring a child (to the Brumleys)," she said, "you know they're going to succeed."

Women's Care Update

By Michael S. Phillips, M.D.
Diplomate, American Board Obstetrics & Gynecology

OVERNIGHT DELIVERIES

New research, reported in American Scientist, sheds some light on why nighttime seems to be the right time for pregnant women to begin labor. According to studies, it is the fetus who gets the process started. Until the very end of pregnancy, a woman's supply of the hormone progesterone prevents her uterus from contracting. As the fetus nears maturity, its brain stimulates the production of the hormone cortisol, which works to override the mother-to-be's progesterone production and boosts her estrogen levels. All this has the effect of readying the mother for birth. The last prebirth hormonal signal comes from the mother's oxytocin, which reaches a daily nocturnal peak, making it likely that contractions will begin after dark.

While this research may be valid, don't ignore daytime labor symptoms just because of this column... labors can and do start during daylight hours, too! Hospital admissions desks and emergency room personnel also insist that more women go into labor during the full moon; however, when your labor begins, you may not be thinking about the phase of the moon. Day or night, crescent or full moon, you will want the services of a Board Certified OB/GYN. Call (915) 522-2222 for an appointment. We're located at the Medical Care Plaza, 1300 Gregg Street, every Tuesday, here in Big Spring.

Summer youth league report

The National League Cardinals are just one game away from the championship in this year's Major League City Tournament, but they'll have to wait until Friday to determine who they'll pay in the finals.

The Cardinals advanced to the final with a 6-5 win over the American League Colts Tuesday night and will play the elimination bracket's survivor at 7:30 p.m. Friday at the National League park.

Should the Cardinals lose Friday's game, another would game would be required Saturday to determine the champion.

In the elimination bracket, Tuesday was a night for the underdogs, as Coahoma's top teams — the Angels and Reds — were knocked out of the tournament.

The Cardinals and Rangers will play tonight at 7:30 at either the American League park or at Coahoma to determine which team will face the Colts in Thursday's elimination final.

That elimination bracket final will be played at 7:30 Thursday in the American League park.

The tournament will begin with an 8 a.m. shotgun start and also feature a fish fry by Mel's Catch of the Day immediately following the presentation of awards.

For more information, call David "Shorty" Barr at (915) 965-3382, O.L. Cooper at 267-1651 or Jack Birdwell at 264-2366.

The $35 entry fee includes a catered meal for all fishermen on Friday at the Railroad Building in downtown Colorado City.

COLUMN

Continued from page 1B that have this course looking the way it does," Birdwell said, crediting a mild winter and above average rainfall for making maintenance of the course a little easier than it had to have been during last summer's drought.

However, abundant rainfall is a two edged sword for golf professionals — they need the rain to keep the course at top condition, but rainy weather cuts down on the number of rounds played, especially when those rains arrive on weekends.

"We've had a lot of 'bad weather,'" Birdwell said. "It's good weather in that we're always going to need the rain, but when it hits on a 'big' day like it did Sunday, it keeps people off the course and cuts down on how much income the course makes for the city."

Birdwell says the course is currently on pace to have around 30,000 rounds of golf played this year — a sizeable increase from the use the course had last year, he's been told.

And the nice thing about the Comanche Trail course, he notes, is that it doesn't suffer from the same problem the new resort courses pose for most golfers.

"There are a couple of things that have really changed the game in recent years," he said. "Technology has manufacturers producing balls and clubs that allow people to hit the ball longer and with more accuracy."

"In response, golf course architects are letting their egos get away with them and building courses the average golfer simply can't play," he continued.

"That's not a problem here ... this is a fun course to play and I think you'll continue to see more rounds played here every year and more and more interest in our tournaments, too."

person that he is."

Over a broader stretch, Molitor, who will turn 41 on Aug. 22, is hitting .465 with 16 RBIs in his last 18 games and leads the Twins with 34 RBIs on the season. He is recovering from an abdominal strain that put him on the disabled list from April 17 through May 1. The best evidence of that was the full-throttle way he ran the bases on his first-inning triple off Texas starter Bobby Witt (7-3), who lost his third straight decision.
