Search continues for missing daughter of Big Spring native

By DEBBIE L. JENSEN
Features Editor

It is two weeks today since Kelli Cox disappeared from a Denton convenience store, and her local relatives said they still hope, and pray, for her safe return.

"They've followed several leads, but we just don't have anything to report," said Ann Campbell of Sand Springs, Cox's grandmother. Cox's mother is Jan Bynum, a Big Spring High School graduate who now lives in Farmer's Branch.

"A taxi driver finally came forward," Campbell said. "He said he had seen her talking with a man, he was letting her use his cellular phone."

Cox was stranded at a parking lot when she locked her keys in her car after a college field trip. She had used a pay phone to call her boyfriend for help, but when he arrived about an hour later, she was gone.

"Jan still has a very deep feeling that Kelli is alive," Campbell said. "I guess you could call it a mother's sense."

Bynum has appeared on Dallas area newscasts, morning news programs and in area newspaper articles seeking leads. There have also been candlelight vigils.

Cox's daughter, Alexis, 19 months old, has seemed not to understand what is happening, Campbell said.

"She hasn't said much."

Meanwhile, more than 30,000 fliers with Cox's picture and description have been distributed, even in the local area, by friends, and supporters of the family as well as church groups.

"We just feel like every day we're going to get a call, saying they found her," said Tasha Campbell of Big Spring, Kelli's aunt. She said family and friends had put fliers at Rip Griffin Truck Travel Center.

"Maybe with the interstate right here," she said, "maybe somebody saw her."

"So many people have been so kind," Ann Campbell said. "And we've received so much help."

"We'll just keep hoping, praying and looking."

Judge tosses out lawsuit against HC

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

Howard College trustees learned Monday that a wrongful termination lawsuit filed against them has been tossed out of court.

The lawsuit, filed last year by former fitness center employee Janie Hernandez also charged the college with sex discrimination and sexual harassment, according to attorney Trey Dolezal, who represented the college in the matter.

Last Wednesday, however, a federal district judge in Abilene granted the college's motion for a summary judgment of dismissal, stopping the lawsuit.

"The court found no claims against the college that had merit," Dolezal, of Austin, said.

The college had resisted earlier attempts by Hernandez's attorney for a settlement.

"We had been in the negotiation process to get the claim dismissed by agreement," Dolezal said. "But we were never going to make a monetary settlement with them ... we stuck by our guns on that one."

In other business, trustees emerged from a two-hour executive session without taking any action on the vacant vice president for instruction position. The post, which

Burrito shop closes

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

One of the businesses that opened in the summer of 1994, amid the city of Big Spring seeing a substantial increase in its appraised value, closed its doors permanently in Big Spring last Friday — Jumburrito.

Jumburrito was among businesses such as the Wal-Mart Supercenter, Family Medical Center, Little Caesar's Pizza and Taco Bell which were on the city's tax rolls for the first time, helping expand the city's tax base to $349.7 million in 1995, up from $327.5 million in 1994.

During that year, the Big Spring City Council was also able to drop the city's tax rate from 65.5 cents per $100 valuation to 65 cents per $100 valuation partly because the new businesses that moved into Big Spring.

The 13 employees of Jumburrito were notified late last week of the move and will be given the opportunity to relocate to one of the company's other locations in Midland or Odessa.

Jumburrito currently has three stores in Midland and one in Odessa.

According to the company's main office, Jumburrito will more than likely open another location in Odessa.

States push tougher standards, but results mixed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most states wrote or revised standards for public school academics in the past year, but less than half the states have clearly defined what public school children should know in four key subjects, a teachers union said today.

The annual report by the American Federation of Teachers said only 17 states now have standards in math, science, social studies and English that give a clear picture of what children should know and when.

However, the union said 29 states have clear, specific standards in at least three of the core subjects, up from 21 a year earlier.

The third report from the 900,000-member union, which is trying to make public education more challenging and assure that students in poor areas get the same chance at learning, found that of the 39 states that produced new or revised standards last year, 14 toughened their standards.

The report offered encouragement to President Clinton by calculating that state support for voluntary national tests of fourth-grade reading and eighth-grade math was widespread. The AFT supports Clinton's national standards proposal.

Clinton, who was attending a governors' meeting in Las Vegas on Monday, again urged the state executives to lend their support to his push for national standards. Last week he had accused them of dragging their feet on the issue.

The AFT report said all the states except Iowa were working on common academic standards for their students. Although Iowa has standardized tests, local districts carefully guard their control of education.

The study paid close attention to the focus of standards on specific, or core, content that children should be expected to master. Critics such as E.D. Hirsch Jr. at the University of Virginia say schools, teachers and colleges of education have shunned content. By focusing on such vague goals as teaching "critical thinking," they avoid accountability, critics argue.

Underprivileged children with poorly financed schools have suffered the most from a lack of standards, especially when combined with low expectations and a lack of money for teaching, the report said. One student in five changes schools in a year, the report said, and those students suffer from a lack of consistent standards.

"Some students don't have access to a rich and demanding curriculum," said the report's author, Matt Gandal.

A weak standard, according to the report, would say this about history, "Students should be able to identify and explain how events and changes occurred in significant historical periods."

A strong standard would say: "Students should be able to describe how United States federalism was transformed during the Great Depression by the policies of the New Deal and how that transformation continues to affect United States society today."

States as diverse as California, Massachusetts and West Virginia were cited as making dramatic improvements.

The report had some news to cheer Clinton. It found that nine states planned to administer voluntary national tests for fourth-grade reading and eighth-grade math.

Bullock calls for non-partisan elections of SBOE members

AUSTIN (AP) — State Board of Education meetings have become so rancorous that Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock once suggested members should be appointed instead of elected. Now he's suggesting non-partisan board elections instead.

"I really think elected's OK, but to run on non-partisan ballots," Bullock, a Democrat, said in an interview with The Associated Press. "There are certain things in Texas that are just flat non-partisan" — such as education.

Some, however, question how non-partisan elections would improve matters.

The 15-member board currently includes nine Republicans and six Democrats, but the battles haven't been between parties. Rather, they have been between a bloc of six Republican board members backed by religious conservatives and the rest.

Some board members backed by religious conservatives have objected to a state law curtailing their authority in such areas as textbook content and waged a strong fight on the state curriculum rewrite, contending that the process had been intruded on by a national group and the federal government and that the rewrite wasn't rigorous enough.

In this year's legislative session, Bullock suggested changing to an appointed board, saying the current panel had "gone a little far to the right."

Bills also were filed to abolish the board or drastically curtail its powers. But the measures didn't pass.

State Board of Education Chairman Jack Christie of Houston, a Republican who's not aligned with the social conservatives, said Bullock's proposal "is not a bad idea. It's something I would not object to."

But Christie said his first choice would be to ensure voters are educated on board candidates.

"I think it would be OK to maintain partisan elections under those circumstances."

Board member Donna Ballard of The Woodlands, labeled a leader of the social conservative bloc, said it would be difficult to run a campaign in a district that accounts for one-fifteenth of the state without a political party structure.

Firm to terminate nursing service with county

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

After Monday's meeting of the Howard County Commissioners' Court, County Judge Ben Lockhart appointed a committee made up of Commissioners Sonny Choate and Emma Brown to look into the nursing service being provided to the county by Nursefinders of Big Spring.

According to Nursefinders, it maintains a log of time spent serving the Howard County Jail and since the beginning of the year has seen a dramatic increase in the number of nursing visits the service has had to make to the jail.

Nursefinders had made about four dozen visits to the county jail during this time period.

The firm also is concerned about the amount of time it has had to spend on the phone with county officials resolving jail issues.

In a recent letter to Sheriff Bill Jennings, Danny Boggs, chief executive officer of Nursefinders, stated it is no longer cost effective for Nursefinders to service the contract at the present rate of reimbursement.

The purpose of Boggs' letter was also to inform the county that Nursefinders was exercising its 30-day option of written notification of its intent to terminate its contract with the county.

According to Boggs' notification, the county was advised to look into hiring a full-time county nurse as Aug. 23 will be the last day Nursefinders will provide nursing service to the Howard County Jail.

"Basically, they think they're putting in too much time for what we're paying them," Lockhart said.

According to Lockhart, the committee he has appointed will report back to the commissioners' court with a recommendation as to what direction the county should take.

Options could include hiring a full-time registered nurse or renegotiating the county's contract with Nursefinders.

Brown and Choate should report back within a month.

HOWARD

Continued from page 1 became vacant when Dusty Johnston resigned earlier this year, has attracted almost 50 applicants, college president Cheri Sparks said.

Sparks noted that trustees have narrowed the search down to six finalists, who she declined to identify. Further interviews will be conducted before any further action is taken, she said.

Named Norwest Bank as the district's depository for the next two years. The decision to switch from Security State Bank to Norwest was a difficult one to make, college vice president for business Terry Hansen said.

"As competitive as the bids were, this was not an easy decision to make," Hansen said. "I know it is difficult to change banks, but I feel like that, in the long run, Norwest's bid will be best for us. At the same time, Security State has been our bank for a long time, and they've been very good to us."

Decided to hold a public hearing on the 1997-98 budget at 12:30 p.m. Aug. 11 at the board room. After that public hearing, the board will formally adopt a budget for the coming fiscal year.

The district's new tax rate will be set at a meeting scheduled for 12:30 p.m. Aug. 25.

Reappointed the firm of Lee Reynolds & Welch as the district's auditors.

Clinton, Congress shake hands on budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans and the Clinton administration united today in hailing a landmark deal to remake the face of government by cutting taxes and balancing the budget. "This is a very strong program for the country," Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin said.

"It's a very, very proud moment," Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici, R-N.M., said. "It's not everything Republicans wanted ... it's not everything the president or Democrats want."

"But it does a lot of good things for the American people," Domenici said in an early morning appearance with Rubin on NBC's "Today" show. "Both of us thought this was better than having seven years of war."

The tax breaks would principally benefit families with children, students and investors.

The agreement also establishes a new program of coverage for children currently without health care. Tobacco taxes would rise to help finance the program.

All sides described the agreement as tentative, subject to the drafting of official legislation.

Republicans expressed confidence the package would be on the floor of the House and Senate and passed by the GOP-controlled Congress by Friday at the latest.

"We gave ground. The administration gave ground. And we found common ground," a happy Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott said Monday night as the two sides announced a tentative accord.

"We couldn't be more pleased with the outcome," said White House Chief of Staff Erskine Bowles, the administration's point man during a secretive final few days of bargaining.

President Clinton, who was out of town when the agreement was announced, was flying back to Washington overnight and expected to bestow his blessing today.

"I think it will sell itself," House Speaker Newt Gingrich predicted.

The agreement stood in contrast to more than two years of political combat between the White House and Republican congressional leaders that led to twin government shutdowns two winters ago.

Both Clinton and the GOP majorities were returned to office in last fall's election.

OUR VIEWS

Center serving community needs

At the Northside Community Center, a growing need and shrinking funds are nothing new. This service agency has supported the needy of our community since 1983, with programs such as food and clothing, utility assistance and help for the homeless.

Under its current director, Max Webb, the center is a model for others, using a "help yourself" philosophy. Those who receive help from the center give back with service there.

Webb's programs serve a variety of needs, such as school fees for a single mother who needs help getting on her feet. Then the center follows up with recipients of its funds, keeping in touch to see the results.

As we talk about welfare reform, limits and restrictions, we could use the center as a guide for the "new" welfare: A hand up, not just a hand out.

Webb took over the center in 1994, and added his own ideas to the already-established programs. He added needed stability to the center, one of our United Way agencies.

An example of money well spent through the Northside Center is financial support for those who want to earn a GED through Howard College. What better way to help get someone back on the right track than a diploma that can lead to work or college?

But the center is often serving behind the scenes. It helps many of the "invisible" of our community, serving bag lunches to the homeless and transients who pass through town.

Many community service agencies have a need for funds, but right now seems to be an especially crucial time for the Northside Community Center. Without support, there may be needed projects that cannot be completed.

Visit the center and talk with Max Webb, or talk with someone from his board of directors. We think you will like what you hear.

Find out what they are doing at this nondescript house on NE 8th. Find out how it serves the community.

Then ask what can you do to help.

LETTERS

To the Editor:

I would like to say just a word regarding the boll weevil program which is to be voted on Aug. 1.

The $5 per harvested land acre plus two cents per pound of harvested cotton is pushing the farmers who work to make a good crop. The bad farmers' weeds have to be sprayed just like the good farmers' cotton does. The $5 per acre is enough and let every farmer pay it.

To the Editor:

I would like to ask your readers for help in locating a possible Big Spring resident. I am doing research on the Americanization School for Mexican children which was in Abilene in the 1930's. The first Mexican-American teacher was Miss Carmen Arroyo. Some of the former students believe she may be living in Big Spring, although she may have a different married name.

If anyone knows her or possible information on how I might find her, please call me at 915-677-6856 or write to me at P.O. Box 955, Abilene, Texas, 79604. If there are any former students of the Americanization School in Big Spring, please contact me also. Thanks for your help.

To the Editor:

My, how time flies. Seems only yesterday when school let out for the summer. Now it's almost time to start a new school year. And as your editorial of 14 July said, it is also budget time for schools. First they must receive the certified appraisal values. Then take into account the results of the election for or against the constitutional amendment allowing an additional $10,000 exemption. Coahoma probably will make some adjustments if the amendment passes, as will Forsan. But Big Spring will naturally be disqualified because of the debt service for the new school building -- unless their values of mineral and homestead increased enough to offset the exemption.

At first glance, HJR 4 offers tax relief to home owners. Senior citizens who sell their property can by law take the exemption to their new home. HB-4 allows for a 10 percent increase in property values per year, possibly doubling appraisal values every 10 years. It also allows an eight cent increase in the per student tax rate on their property, with rollback provisions for all schools. SB-7 mandates property tax value increases to maintain sufficient funds in the permanent school fund. The big print giveth, the fine print taketh away!

When will we say enough is enough and demand a stable school funding structure? Senators did nothing toward tax reform because there was no emergency. Yet mineral values continue to decline by 9 percent per year, while single residence new construction increased about 5.5 percent per year. This certainly doesn't keep pace with the enrollment explosion in our public schools. Therefore, the taxable value of your property must increase accordingly. Is this constitutional? Must we have an emergency before taking corrective steps?

Please vote your yes or no in August 1997. Your vote does count.
Roy Simmons, Big Spring

SPIN TIME

'Not much happening' can be awfully nice

WATERLOO, Ala. -- There's a sign in the city hall window advertising the clerk's job. Must be willing to attend council meetings and work for a few hours each Tuesday. I consider applying.

Some places are too beautiful to believe. This is one of them.

Not only does the isolated town have a prime perch over the Tennessee River, it has a history to inspire a screenwriter. Several screenwriters.

"I wouldn't live anywhere else," Mayor Sharon Barron says. That might sound like typical boosterism from a typical politician. Only Mayor Sharon is an accidental politician, not a typical one. She looks more like the town's den mother than its mayor.

Besides, this place doesn't need boosting. Its 296 residents are content for the rest of the world to visit, then move on.

Rheta Johnson
Syndicated
Columnist

And you can't blame them. Most of Waterloo used to be down the hill from where it sits now. The Flood of 1847 convinced residents to move the town to higher ground. It's just as well they moved it then. In 1938 the Tennessee Valley Authority flooded the bottom land that once was Waterloo to make Pickwick Lake.

Waterloo was established in 1819, four years after the famous battle in Belgium. Local historian William McDonald figures that's probably why founding fathers chose the name.

"Or they could have looked at the flowing waters of the mighty Tennessee and the nearby creeks, streams and springs as a poetic source for its name," he writes.

Mayor Sharon has a more whimsical story that she heard as a child. She takes a break from her column of figures and tells it with a sly smile on her friendly face, as if repeating playground gossip.

"They say there was an old man who used to sit out all day in front of the store that was right across the street from where we are sitting now. He kept a mule across the bridge. The mule's name was Lu.

Every evening about dark he'd tell the others, 'I've got to go water Lu.'"

I like her story the best.

During steamboat days Waterloo was an important port, just below dangerous shoals. Waterloo then was at the end of navigable waters, therefore an essential gateway to New Orleans and St. Louis. The town was alive with transport boats and wagon trains and all their attendant commerce.

Its strategic place on the river was responsible, too, for a sadder episode in the town's history. During the Trail of Tears thousands of Indians were collected here in camps until they could be placed on deep-water boats and sent farther west. Conditions were harsh, to say the least; many Indians died, while some escaped into the surrounding hills.

With Mayor Sharon as my escort I explore the town, and she offers details about houses, churches, the old hotel, even the bricks in city hall. On one corner is an imposing but empty home where General Sherman squatted for a while on his way to Chattanooga. There is, of course, the usual complement of nasty Sherman stories. He supposedly threw a grand piano out into the yard to make room for his war party.

The mayor eventually has to go back to work, but I'm in no hurry to leave Waterloo. A summer storm has washed the heat away, and the thrum of distant fishing boats is like a baby's snore. I stand beneath a glistening mimosa tree on the shores of the Tennessee and think about things.

This is a town that grew in reverse, from bustling port to peaceful village, not a bad way to age.

"Not much goes up for sale here, or changes hands," the mayor had told me. "You almost have to inherit to get a place in Waterloo."

It's as if the town climbed a hill until it got the perfect view, then dug in for the duration. Important things once happened here, but nothing much happens now. Which makes it awfully nice.

Palmeiro adds another reminder of Rangers folly in 7-2 Orioles win

The ASSOCIATED PRESS
BALTIMORE — Rafael Palmeiro keeps reminding the Texas Rangers just how foolish they were not to offer him a contract when they had the chance.

has been outstanding for Baltimore since agreeing to a five-year contract in December 1993. Palmeiro has been particularly productive against the Rangers, going 42-for-125 (.336) with 13 homers and 36 RBIs.

23rd home run of the season and fourth in his last four games against the Rangers. "I don't know what we're going to do, but we're going to try something different to stop him."

with a two-run homer as the Orioles won their sixth game in the last seven to remain 5 games ahead of the second-place New York Yankees in the AL East.

won, but it's not as if I pitched terribly," he said. "Remember, we were in a bad slump during that time."

All-stars fall in state title games

Both Big Spring teams put three on honor squads
HERALD Staff Report

South Abilene teams proved to be too much for Big Spring's Division I and Division IV all-star squads in their respective bids for state championships during United States Girls' Softball Association state tournaments in Abilene.

Courtney Rodriguez, Shannon Higgins, Nelsha Hienis, Audom Johnson and Maria Carrillo provided key hits during the tournament. Another pitching duel was on tap in the Division IV championship, as Big Spring ace Jessica Canales and Abilene South Red's Andi Ledbetter squared off against one another.

Abilene South Red was 7-0 in tournament play. Abilene, the defending Class AAA champion — all of last year's three classes were combined for this year's Division IV tourney — posted a 4-1 win.

In the second, center fielder Heather James gathered in a fly and fired a throw to Sherry Burdette at first to double off another Abilene runner.

But a big fourth inning proved to be the difference, as a usually stingy Big Spring defense committed two errors that combined with two Abilene hits provided three runs that broke open a 1-1 deadlock.

A day of sweeps in the AL; Dodgers back in race

The American League is cornering the market on sweeps. Monday was another broum day as Milwaukee swept a doubleheader from Toronto, Anaheim won two games against Cleveland and Kansas City took two from Minnesota.

MAJOR LEAGUES

Toronto last week. Woodard allowed a double to Otis Nixon, the first batter he faced, and a walk to Alex Gonzalez in the third.

The Angels have won 16 of 21 and have 29 comeback victories. Cleveland's lead over idle Chicago in the AL Central slipped to 4 1/2 games.

In other AL games Monday, the Yankees edged Oakland 4-3 and Baltimore swamped Texas 7-2.

THIS DATE IN HISTORY

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Tuesday, July 29, the 210th day of 1997. There are 155 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On July 29, 1981, Britain's Prince Charles married Lady Diana Spencer at St. Paul's Cathedral in London.
On this date:
In 1588, the English soundly defeated the Spanish Armada in the Battle of Gravelines.
In 1890, artist Vincent van Gogh died of a self-inflicted gunshot wound in Auvers, France.

In 1914, transcontinental telephone service began with the first phone conversation between New York and San Francisco.
In 1948, Britain's King George VI opened the Olympic Games in London.
In 1957, the International Atomic Energy Agency was established.
In 1957, Jack Paar made his debut as host of NBC's "Tonight" show.
In 1958, President Eisenhower signed the National Aeronautics and Space Act, which created NASA.
In 1967, fire swept the USS Forrestal in the Gulf of Tonkin, killing 134 servicemen.
In 1975, President Ford became the first U.S. president to visit the site of the Nazi concentration camp Auschwitz in Poland as he paid tribute to the camp's victims.
Ten years ago: Testifying for a second day before the Iran-Contra congressional committees, Attorney General Edwin Meese strongly defended his inquiry into the affair.
Five years ago: Former East German leader Erich Honecker was arrested on his return to his homeland and charged with manslaughter; he was later permitted to leave after he was diagnosed with terminal cancer. The U.S. 400-meter freestyle relay team won the gold medal at the Barcelona Summer Olympics.
One year ago: China held a nuclear test explosion that it promised would be its last, just hours before international negotiators in Geneva began discussing a global ban on such testing. At the Atlanta Olympics, Carl Lewis won the gold medal in the long jump, becoming only the fifth Olympian to win gold medals in four straight games. Michael Johnson won the 400-meter dash, Allen Johnson the 110-meter hurdles.
